Thousands of synonyms defined, discriminated and illustrated with quotations. Plus antonyms, analogous words and contrasting words.

To help you use the right word in the right place.
Webster’s New Dictionary of Synonyms

“A must for every writer’s library.”—THE BOSTON GLOBE

“An easy-to-use aid to precise word use.”—THE WRITER

This 942-page volume shows you how to use the right word in the right place, quickly and clearly.

The alphabetical arrangement saves hunting through an index and its easy-to-use cross-reference system pinpoints related words.

Webster’s New Dictionary of Synonyms contains synonymies in which words of similar meaning are defined and discriminated and illustrated with thousands of pertinent quotations from both classic and contemporary writers, showing the language in actual precise use.

Antonyms, analogous words, and contrasted words provide additional information on word relationships.

And the introduction presents an informative and helpful survey of the history of synonomy.
FROM MERRIAM-WEBSTER

• THE UNABRIDGED DICTIONARY
Webster’s Third New International—A masterpiece of modern defining—more than 460,000 entries, with 200,000 usage examples and 1,000 synonym articles. 3,000 terms illustrated. Simplified pronunciation key and clear, informative etymologies. The standard authority.

• DESK SIZE DICTIONARY
Webster’s Ninth New Collegiate—The newest in the famous Collegiate series. Almost 160,000 entries and 200,000 definitions. Entries for words often misused and confused include a clear, authoritative guide to good usage. For an exclusive feature—entries are dated. How old is a word? When was it first used? The answer is here, but in no other American dictionary.

• GEOGRAPHY
Webster’s New Geographical Dictionary—World facts at your finger tips! More than 47,000 entries and 217 maps provide basic information on the world’s countries, regions, cities, and natural features. A convenient source of detailed information about the world you live in.

• BIOGRAPHY
Webster’s New Biographical Dictionary—A unique one-volume reference work providing essential information on more than 30,000 men and women—of all eras, all parts of the world, and from all fields of endeavor. Pronunciation is given for each name and end-of-line division is clearly indicated.

• SPORTS
Webster’s Sports Dictionary—The only book of its kind, it explains and defines the equipment, signals, and language used in over 100 sports—from airplane racing to yachting. Filled with actual quotations from athletes and sportwriters, original drawings, and diagrams.

• THE OFFICIAL CROSSWORD PUZZLE DICTIONARY
Webster’s Official Crossword Puzzle Dictionary—Over 120 specialized lists that will bring the puzzle solver and the answer word together quickly and easily. Three column format.
These special features make Webster’s New Dictionary of Synonyms easier to use, more precise and complete than any reference of its kind:

1. Each discrimination begins with a brief common definition.

2. Special applications and shades of meaning are given for each discriminated word in an article.

3. For quicker reference every discriminated word is listed in alphabetical order.

4. Antonyms and contrasted words are also listed.

5. Quotations from outstanding writers illustrate how a word is and has been used.

6. Convenient cross-reference system aids in locating related words.

7. Detailed discussions of each word in a group show how to use exactly the right word in the right place.

8. Analogous words with closely similar meaning are grouped together.

persevere

persevere, persist are both used in reference to persons in the sense of to continue in a given course in the face of difficulty or opposition. Persevere nearly always implies an admirable quality; it suggests both refusal to be discouraged by failure, doubts, or difficulties, and a steadfast or dogged pursuit of an end or an undertaking (I will persevere in my course of loyalty, though the conflict be sore between that and my blood—Shak.) (for, strength to persevere and to support, and energy to conquer and repel—these elements of virtue, that declare the native grandeur of the human soul—Wordsworth) (I do not intend to take that cowardly course, but, on the contrary, to stand to my post and persevere in accordance with my duty—Sir Winston Churchill) Persist (see also continue) may imply a virtue (this is the poetry within history, this is what causes mankind to persist beyond every defeat—J. S. Untermeyer) but it more often suggests a disagreeable or annoying quality, for it stresses stubbornness or obstinacy more than courage or patience and frequently implies opposition to advice, remonstrance, disapproval, or one’s own conscience (persist in working when ill) (it is hard to see how they can have persisted so long in inflicting useless misery—Russell)

Ana *continue, abide, endure, last

Con vary, *change, alter: waver, vacillate, falter, *hesitate persiflage *badinage, raillery

Ana bantering or banter, chaffing or chaff (see BANTER): ridiculing or ridicule, twitting, deriding or derision (see corresponding verbs at RIDICULE)

persist 1 *persevere

Ant desist —Con discontinue, cease, *stop, quit

2 *continue, last, endure, abide

Ant desist —Con *stop, cease, discontinue

A Genuine MERRIAM-WEBSTER®
More people take our word for it.
A GENUINE MERRIAM-WEBSTER

The name Webster alone is no guarantee of excellence. It is used by a number of publishers and may serve mainly to mislead an unwary buyer.

A Merriam-Webster® is the registered trademark you should look for when you consider the purchase of dictionaries or other fine reference books. It carries the reputation of a company that has been publishing since 1831 and is your assurance of quality and authority.
CONTENTS

Preface .................................................. 4a

Introductory Matter

Survey of the History of English Synonymy ................. 5a Synonym: Analysis and Definition ....................... 23a Antonym: Analysis and Definition ...................... 26a Analogous and Contrasted Words ......................... 30a

Explanatory Notes ........................................ 32a

A Dictionary of Discriminated Synonyms .................. 1

Appendix: List of Authors Quoted ......................... 887
WEBSTER'S NEW DICTIONARY OF SYNONYMS is newly edited and entirely reset but based upon Webster's Dictionary of Synonyms, which rapidly became a favorite book among readers and writers who wish to understand, appreciate, and make nice discriminations in English words that are similar in meaning. The earlier book filled a widespread need for a work devoted to synonymy with accessory material in the form of word lists of various kinds. The editors of this new and revised edition have rewritten and sharpened the discriminations, have increased the number of articles, and have more than doubled the number of authors quoted. Particular attention has been given to updating the quotations so that they accurately reflect today's English.

The core of this book is the discriminating articles. It is not its purpose to assemble mere word-finding lists for consultants with but a vague notion of the sort of word they seek, but rather to provide them with the means of making clear comparisons between words of a common denotation and to enable them to distinguish the differences in implications, connotations, and applications among such words and to choose for their purposes the precisely suitable words. (Compare the discussion of Roget's aims beginning on page 14a following.) In addition to the central core of discriminations this book provides auxiliary information of three types, in the form of analogous words, antonyms, and contrasted words. These three types are explained on pages 26a–31a.

Every word discussed in an article of synonymy is entered in its own alphabetical place and is followed by a list of its synonyms, with a reference (by means of an asterisk or a direction introduced by "see") to the entry where the discussion of these listed words is to be found. The words listed as analogous and those listed as contrasted are always displayed in groups, each group having a clear reference (asterisk or "see") to the term under which an article of synonymy is to be found.

The writing of the articles has been done chiefly by two associate editors of the Merriam-Webster editorial staff: Dr. Philip H. Goepp and Dr. Mairé Weir Kay. Their principal assistants were Miss Ervina E. Foss, in charge of cross-referencing, and Mr. E. Ward Gilman, in charge of proofreading, both assistant editors. Mrs. Betty Meltzer was the principal editorial assistant. Some of the articles on scientific terms were written by Mr. Hubert P. Kelsey, associate editor. All of these editors took part in the editing of Webster's Third New International Dictionary. The historical survey and the introductory analysis of the problems and issues in the field of English synonymy are largely the work of the late Rose F. Egan, sometime assistant editor, and have been taken over from the first edition with only minor changes. To her clear analysis and understanding this book still owes much of its quality although all of her discriminations have been revised in varying degrees.

PHILIP B. GOVE
Editor in Chief
INTRODUCTORY MATTER

SURVEY OF THE HISTORY OF ENGLISH SYNONYM

Consultation of a work on synonyms is made easier if the consultant has a reasonable background of the theory and of the technique that have developed since the first English synonymy was published. The following essay [first published in 1942] is, so far as we know, the first attempt to survey broadly the course of that development from its beginnings to the present. It is not intended to be exhaustive. Some good books have been published which have not been specifically discussed because they have played no essential part in this development or have advanced no new ideas which, by challenging attention or debate, have led to further clarification of the problems involved. The purpose of this article has been primarily not to praise or to denounce but to lead up to the exposition of principles which have dominated the writing of this book. These principles, we believe, are founded upon the practice of those who have seen and known clearly what could be accomplished by a book of synonyms: there are others who disagree, but we have tried to present their case fairly.

It was not until the second half of the eighteenth century that the first book on synonyms appeared in English. The Rev. John Trusler (1735–1820) was its author, The Difference between Words Esteemed Synonymous its title, and 1766 its date. Its source is definitely established. In 1718, the Abbé Gabriel Girard (1677–1748) had published in France La Justesse de la langue francçoise ou les Différentes significations des mots qui passent pour être synonymes, a work which had great vogue not only in France but also abroad, especially in England. That Trusler's book was based upon it is evidenced not only by the likeness of the titles but also (in the first edition) by an English version of Girard's preface and by the admission in the author's preface that he had translated as much of the articles as was in keeping with the peculiar genius of the English language. The second edition of 1783, however, increases the divergence between the two books: the prefaces are consolidated and the result is given as the work of the author, although many passages from Girard are included without being quoted. There are, too, many new articles dealing with peculiarly British terms, such as those which concern the church and daily life in England; but these, although they represent an enrichment of vocabulary, add little to the originality of the work, which still remains an imitation. A clear-cut distinction which sharply reveals the meanings of synonymous French terms often becomes a forced distinction when applied to English. In fact, Trusler never knew whether it was his aim to point out the “delicate differences between words reputed synonymous” or to give the particular idea of each word “which constitutes its proper and particular character.” He claims both aims as one, not realizing that often they are divergent.

The next significant work was the British Synonymy of Hester Lynch Piozzi (1741–1821), better known as Mrs. Thrale, the close friend of Dr. Johnson. It first appeared in 1794 and was succeeded by at least two editions, the best known of which was published in Paris in 1804. That it was immediately popular is evident from the testimony of its 1804 editors, who asserted its merits on the ground of “the successive editions it has passed through being the best proof of the estimation in which it is held.” That it was not written without a knowledge of Girard's work we know on the authority of these same editors.

The editors imply, however, that Mrs. Piozzi's work is something better than had yet been given to the public. “But it was only in the year 1794,” they continue, in a tone that implies contempt for the “imitation,” “that Mrs. Piozzi (formerly Mrs. Thrale) so well known in the literary world for her different publications, and her intimacy with the learned Dr. Johnson, brought out the work we have now the pleasure of presenting to our Readers, and which is totally grounded on the structure of the English language.” There is no reason to suppose, however, that she depended much on the influence of Dr. Johnson, who had died in 1784.

Mrs. Piozzi's book reveals an independence of spirit and a feminine disregard of advice. It is, in fact, never profound: it is full of errors or dubious assertions, and it is often absurdly naive. More than this, it frequently takes issue with Dr. Johnson or, in a sprightly manner, casts doubt on his judgments. There is the story of the milliner’s apprentice who saved her chicken bones to feed a horse. Johnson contended that such an action showed that she was ignorant, but Mrs. Piozzi maintained that it proved her senseless. “I thought her an id\textit{e}ot [sic]” was, for her, the last word on the matter.

1 Mrs. Piozzi in her own preface (p. vii) mentions Girard and says, “I should be too happy, could I imitate his delicacy of discrimination, and felicity of expression.”

Great as was her respect for Dr. Johnson in his own field, she believed that she also had her field and that it was incumbent on her to remain within the limits she had set for herself. Her object is very clear. Like Girard and Trusler, she was distinguishing not synonyms (that is, words identical in meaning) but words so similar in meaning as to be “apparently synonymous.” The subtitle of her book announces her aim and reveals a further limitation of purpose: “An attempt at regulating the choice of words in familiar conversation.” Her preface to the 1794 edition develops these ideas:

If then to the selection of words in conversation and elegant colloquial language a book may give assistance, the Author . . . modestly offers her’s; persuaded that, while men teach to write with propriety, a woman may at worst be qualified—through long practice—to direct the choice of phrases in familiar talk.

Her book, she modestly claimed, is “intended chiefly for a parlour window” and is “unworthy of a place upon a library shelf,” but it may be of help to others “till a more complicated and valuable piece of workmanship be found to further their research.” She wished in particular to help those who desired to converse elegantly and to save foreigners from ridiculous mistakes in speech. “If I can in the course of this little work dispel a doubt, or clear up a difficulty to foreigners . . . I shall have an honour to boast.”

For this reason she could not see that her method of discrimination had much in common with that of the lexicographer and the logician. Theirs was to define: hers was to indicate propriety in the use of words. It was not her intent to establish differences in meaning but to indicate the fitness of words for use, often depending on “the place in which they should stand” but sometimes depending on their relative fineness, strength, force, or the like. She makes a distinction between the methods of the definer and the methods of the synonymist by giving, first, two definitions of the word \textit{fondness}, one from “an eminent logician” and one from Dr. Johnson, and, secondly, by an ideal synonymy in which she reveals the same word’s meaning by showing it in use along with similar words. This was not invariably her method, but it illustrates what in the main she was trying to achieve.

. . . I have before me the definition of \textit{fondness}, given into my hands many years ago by a most eminent logician. . . .

“\textit{Fondness},” says the Definer, “is the hasty and injudicious determination of the will towards promoting the present gratification of some particular object.”

“\textit{Fondness},” said Dr. Johnson, “is rather the hasty and injudicious attribution of excellence, somewhat beyond the power of attainment, to the object of our affection.”

Both these definitions may possibly be included in \textit{fondness}; my own idea of the whole may be found in the following example:

Amintor and Aspasia are models of true love: ‘tis now seven years since their mutual passion was sanctified by marriage; and so little is the lady’s affection diminished, that she sate up nine nights successively last winter by her husband’s bed-side, when he had on him a malignant fever that frighted relations, friends, servants, all away. Nor can any one allege that her tenderness is ill repaid, while we see him gaze upon her features with that \textit{fondness} which is capable of creating charms for itself to admire, and listen to her talk with a fervour of admiration scarce due to the most brilliant genius.

For the rest, ‘tis my opinion that men love for the most part with warmer \textit{passion} than women do—at least than English women, and with more transitory \textit{fondness} mingled with that passion. . . .

It was in her simpler versions of this method that she developed a formula that has been followed by many of her successors in the discriminated synonymy—not always felicitously. We will have opportunity to return to this method later when it becomes an object of attack and will call it for the sake of convenience the Piozzi method. At present let examples of her usage suffice:

\textbf{TO ABANDON, FORSAKE, RELINQUISH, GIVE UP, DESERT, QUIT, LEAVE . . .} though at first sight apparently synonymous, conversing does certainly better shew the peculiar appropriation, than books, however learned; for . . . familiar talk tells us in half an hour—That a man forsakes his mistress, abandons all hope of regaining her lost esteem, relinquishes his pretensions in favour of another . . . we say a lad of an active and diligent spirit, or else of an assiduous temper, or sedulous disposition . . . we say that reports are confirmed, treaties ratified, and affairs settled.

a hard question puzzles a man, and a variety of choice perplexes him: one is confounded by a loud and sudden dissonance of sounds or voices in a still night; embarrassed by a weight of clothes or valuables, if making escape from fire, thieves, or pursuit.

The gentleman who discharges a gaming debt in preference to that of a tradesman, apparently prefers \textit{honour} to another virtue, \textit{justice}. . . .
It seems a fair statement of her aim to say that she was attempting to indicate and establish idiomatic English. However, in determining such English, she had only two tests to apply: the drawing-room usage of her time and her own instinct. To literary use in general she was indifferent. Therefore her judgments are nearly always subjective and sometimes arbitrary. Moreover, she discounted the great help that discrimination of meanings is to the synonymist. "We must not meantime retard our own progress," she wrote in her preface, "with studied definitions of every quality coming under consideration... although the final cause of definition is to fix the true and adequate meaning of words or terms, without knowledge of which we stir not a step in logic; yet here we must not suffer ourselves to be so detained, as synonymy has more to do with elegance than truth..."

Her judgments are often limited or partial, for they represent her personal feelings or the predilections of her age. Yet, within those limits, she frequently hit upon an exact meaning of a word in a particular sense and gave it life and color. What she seldom saw was that a word might have more meanings than the one which was illustrated (as honor in her example of the tradesman) or that a good but narrow instance of use might be taken as idiomatic by her readers (as when by implication puzzle suggests a question or problem needing determination and perplex a variety of choices). The danger of her work is not in the falsity of the example, for it is usually true or just, but in its inadequacy in suggesting other instances of good use.

Yet in her refusal to accept her age's theory of definition and in her approach to a concept of good usage we must recognize an independent spirit. The time was not ripe for a fully developed conception of the differences between logic and lexicography, yet she was somewhat nearer the present conception than some later and cleverer persons, and she had at least a feeling of rightness in the use of language that suggested, even if it did not consciously approach, the later theory of good usage as a test of such rightness. Besides, her book has an engaging quality, often lacking in books of this character, which is not necessarily a sign of the levity with which critics have charged this book, but rather of a spirited challenge to the ideals of a hidebound age.

Mrs. Piozzi's book was followed by William Perry's Synonymous, Etymological, and Pronouncing English Dictionary, published in 1805. On its title page and in its preface the editor explicitly offers his work as derived from The Dictionary of Samuel Johnson. Perry was the compiler of the better known Royal Standard English Dictionary brought out in England in 1775 and in America in 1788.

The Synonymous Dictionary, as we will call the 1805 book, evidently did not achieve the fame or popularity of the Royal Standard. Chauncey Goodrich, Noah Webster's son-in-law, referred to it in 1847 in his preface to the royal octavo volume of Webster as "entirely out of print." There is no evidence to show that it passed beyond the first edition. On its title page it is described as "an attempt to Synonymise his [Johnson's] Folio Dictionary of the English Language." In its preface Perry claims that it contains "the only synonymous vocabulary ever offered to the public" and that "To the philological, critical, and other interesting observations of the above learned author [Dr. Johnson], we have superadded two exclusive advantages to our publication; the one—as a synonymous, the other—as a pronouncing nomenclature. The former is new and unique..."

The work, he informs us, was begun in 1797, three years, therefore, after the publication of the first edition of Mrs. Piozzi's British Synonymy. Yet there is no indication of knowledge of that work or of the work of Girard; in fact, Perry recognized no predecessor save Johnson. From Johnson, by explicit credit, he extracted his vocabulary and his explanations of meanings. Not so openly, however, did he extract the synonyms themselves: for example, his entry good is followed by Johnson's definition of sense 1, but the synonyms are taken from all of Johnson's succeeding twenty-nine senses. Nor does he provide many citations, and these are chiefly in entries at the end of the book; elsewhere, at the end of an entry or in parentheses, he cites the authors Johnson quoted but not the passages.

In addition he adopted an original method of presenting his material. There were two types of entries, one in lowercase and one in capitals. The latter, which he called "radicals," were followed by an exhaustive list; the former were succeeded by a much shorter list, but one word was printed in small capitals to indicate it was the radical. Thus "marches," a lowercase entry, has "borders, limits, confines, BOUNDARIES" as its synonyms: "BOUNDARY," an entry in capitals, has a much longer list which includes "limit, bound, bourn, term, mere, but, abuttal, border, barrier, marches, confines, precinct, line of demarcation, utmost reach or verge of a territory; a landmark, a mere-stone." If, then, one wished all the synonyms of a lowercase entry such as marches or abbreviation, one must turn to BOUNDARY or ABRIDGMENT, the word entered as the radical.

There are two things to notice here that are important. Perry was not merely greatly extending the traditional definition of synonym (as one of two or more words of identical meaning or of apparently identical meaning) and broadening it to include a group of words which have resemblances in meaning, but was doing so in what seems to be a misunderstanding of Dr. Johnson's purposes in adding such words to his definitions and in ignoring of what he supplied as a corrective. The fact
The work is, as a whole, uneven, but a few articles in it are not only better than any others written up to this conviction that no English work the equal of certain foreign treatises on synonyms had as yet been written. Discriminated is the result of his studies in German, French, Italian, and other languages and of his con-

That was the difficulty. Synonyms would not perfectly satisfy the need either when the word defined had many meanings or when the word defining had more significations than the one intended, for in either case one must be too broad and the other too narrow. They were needed. Usually, also, he knew when his etymology was grounded on fact and when it was merely by no means contend, that the whole of the explanations collected under such initial words as...we call RADICALS, are all strictly synonymous; neither, on the other hand, can we agree with those who roundly assert, that there are not two words in the whole English language of precisely the same signification; but this we take upon us to say, that we have no less than Dr. Johnson's authority for their selection and dis-

Dr. Johnson's example, great as was its authority and prestige at that time, was an unstable prop when his statements were misunderstood. Perry perhaps indirectly rendered a service by raising the issue as to whether the term "synonym" needed redefinition, since it was being broadened in its extension: he may also have done a service in showing to others the values implicit in word-finding lists. But he did not see that he had raised those issues, and what purports to be a dictionary succeeds chiefly in being a word finder.

Between 1805 and 1852 (the latter the date of publication of Roget's Thesaurus of English Words and Phrases) several works on synonyms appeared. Some were of the word-finding list type, and among these there was nothing of particular importance. On the other hand, there were as many as five works discriminating synonyms of which at least four stand out for one reason or another: English Synonymes Discriminated by William Taylor (1813), English Synonymes Explained by George Crabb (1816), English Synonymes Classified and Explained by George F. Graham (1846), and A Selection of English Synonymes by Miss Elizabeth Jane Whately (1851). Both Crabb's and Whately's books are still influential and have been re-

William Taylor (1765–1836), the author of the first of these books, is better known as the translator of Burger's Lenore, Lessing's Nathan the Wise, and Goethe's Iphigenia in Tauris and as one of the leading promoters of knowledge of contemporary German literature during the romantic era. His English Synonymes Discriminated is the result of his studies in German, French, Italian, and other languages and of his conviction that no English work the equal of certain foreign treatises on synonyms had as yet been written. The work is, as a whole, uneven, but a few articles in it are not only better than any others written up to that time but the equal of any that were to be written for over ninety years. A favorite theory of his was that if one is thoroughly grounded in the original meaning of a term, one "can never be at a loss how to employ it in metaphor." Consequently, etymologies became for him an important means of showing this original meaning. They formed not an invariable part of his discrimination but a very useful part when they were needed. Usually, also, he knew when his etymology was grounded on fact and when it was merely hypothetical. His method at its best is exemplified in the article covering austere, severe, and rigid, which we give here in abridged form:
Austerity (says Blair^2) relates to the manner of living: severity, of thinking, rigour, of punishing. To austerity is opposed effeminacy: to severity, relaxation; to rigour, clemency. A hermit is austere in his life; a casuist, severe in his decision; a judge, rigorous in his sentence.

In this discrimination there is little exactness. Austerity is applied not only to habit, but to doctrine, and to infliction. Solitary confinement is a severe form of life, and a severe punishment. Rigid observances, rigid opinions, are oftener spoken of than rigid sentences.

A hermit is austere, who lives harshly; is severe who lives solitarily; is rigid who lives unwaveringly. A casuist is austere who commands mortification, severe, who forbids conviviality, rigid, whose enactions are unqualified. A judge is austere, who punishes slight transgressions; severe, who punishes to the utmost; rigid, who punishes without respect of persons and circumstances.

Why this? Austerity is an idea of the palate; it means crabbedness. . . . These modes of life which are painful to the moral taste, are called austere. . . . Austerity is opposed to suavity.

Severity is not traced back to the sensible idea in which the word originates. Se and verceor, to bend down apart, are perhaps the component ideas. The lying prostrate apart is not only characteristic of the praying anchoret, and of public penance, but of cruel infliction: and to all these cases severity is accordingly applied.

To severity is opposed remissness.

Rigour is stiffness: rigid means frozen; stiff with cold. . . . To rigour is opposed pliancy.

Religious competition renders sects austere, priests severe, and establishments rigid.

With the exception of severe (the ultimate origin of which is still doubtful) the words, in the main, conform to their etymology. Austere does originally mean something like “bitter-tasting” and rigid means “stiff,” though not necessarily “stiff with cold”; also, something that is austere is not sweet or suave, and something that is rigid is not pliant or flexible. He has caught the essential difference here, and the proper application follows. If Taylor had been able to maintain this method and the penetration it involved, he might have changed the course of synonymizing. But three years later English Synonymes Explained, by George Crabb (1778–1851), appeared and caught the public favor. For thirty-seven years Taylor’s book remained unreprinted: then between 1850 and 1876 there were three new editions. For a few years it attracted some attention and then disappeared from favor.

Crabb’s book, while still highly regarded by some, meets much adverse criticism from others. In his own day it was thought of generally as the best work available, although Crabb complicated matters somewhat by frequent revisions which changed its character. In his introduction to the first edition he complained of the lack of a work on English synonyms in which the subject is treated “in a scientifick manner adequate to its importance.” Englishmen though great in literature and philology had in this field fallen short of the French and Germans, who “have had several considerable works on the subject.” He did not wish “to depreciate the labours of those who have preceded” him; rather he claimed to “have profited by every thing which has been written in any language upon the subject; and although I always pursued my own train of thought, yet whenever I met with any thing deserving of notice, I adopted it, and referred it to the author in a note.”

Crabb’s English Synonymes Explained is both the most laborious and the most ambitious work of its kind. In spirit and objective it is a far remove from Mrs. Piozzi’s British Synonymy, few as are the years which intervened between their publication. For Mrs. Piozzi represented the old temper where sprightliness, elegance, and ease were paramount and Crabb the new temper in which the world had grown solemn and serious under the influence of many currents, such as the pressure of momentous events, the influence of Continental (especially German) thinkers, and the spread of all the new ideas spoken of collectively as romanticism. When the best philosophers and philosophic poets of the age were seeking to answer the questions what is beauty, what is poetry, what is art, what is genius and were discriminating the beautiful and the sublime, the naïve and the sentimental, imagination and fancy, the ugly and the grotesque, what synonymist could in conscience say that “synonymy has more to do with elegance than truth”? Crabb was undoubtedly concerned with truth rather than elegance. He was stimulated by the thinking of his age and, like many persons of his time, responded with joy to the new philosophy that deepened and enriched the concepts of beauty, poetry, and truth. Although he was in no sense a philosopher, he had a smattering of philosophical knowledge, a small philosophical vocabulary, and a deep love of philosophical distinctions. He was also interested in philology as it was understood in his time. In the study of synonyms he found satisfaction of all these interests, all the more so since he had come to regard synonyms not as words of the same meaning but as “closely allied” words between which there are “nice shades of distinction.” Discrimination not only gave him profound intellectual satisfaction: it also afforded him great opportunities. In his introduction he wrote:

My first object certainly has been to assist the philological inquirer in ascertaining the force and comprehension of the English language; yet I should have thought my work but half completed had I made it a milk. While others seize every opportunity unblushingly to avow and zealously to propagate opinions destructive of good order, it would ill become any individual of contrary sentiments to shrink from stating his convictions, when called upon as he seems to be by an occasion like that which has now offered itself.

^2 Hugh Blair, rhetorician, 1718–1800.

His justification for "the introduction of morality in a work of science" is very ingenious. In answer to anticipated objections he wrote, "a writer, whose business it was to mark the nice shades of distinction between words closely allied, could not do justice to his subject without entering into all the relations of society, and showing, from the acknowledged sense of many moral and religious terms, what has been the general sense of mankind on many of the most important questions which have agitated the world."

It is not easy to find in Crabb proofs that he was discriminating historical meanings (the interpretation that may be given to his "acknowledged sense"), but one can readily discover evidence that often he was supporting an older conception he favored rather than a new conception he heartily disliked. A good example of this is found in his discrimination of SOUL and MIND.

There are minute philosophers, who... deny that we possess any thing more than what this poor composition of flesh and blood can give us; and yet, methinks, sound philosophy would teach us that we ought to prove the truth of one position, before we assert the falsehood of its opposite; and consequently that if we deny that we have any thing but what is material in us, we ought first to prove that the material is sufficient to produce the reasoning faculty of man. ... (He continued this line of argument through several sentences.)

But not to lose sight of the distinction drawn between the words soul and mind, I simply wish to show that the vulgar and the philosophical use of these terms altogether accord, and are both founded on the true nature of things.

Poets and philosophers speak of the soul in the same strain, as the active and living principle.3

Arguments of this character were mostly occasional with Crabb, but the method of discriminating things which the words named or to which they were applied was characteristically infixed. He could not, for instance, mark the distinctions between finical and foppish but between a finical gentleman and a foppish gentleman.

A finical gentleman clips his words and screws his body into as small a compass as possible to give himself the air of a delicate person...: a foppish gentleman seeks by extravagance in the cut of his clothes, and by the tawdriness in their ornaments, to render himself distinguished for finery.

He could not discriminate beautiful, fine, handsome without determining what is the beautiful, the fine, the handsome.

The beautiful is determined by fixed rules; it admits of no excess or defect; it comprehends regularity, proportion, and a due distribution of colour, and every particular which can engage the attention: the fine must be coupled with grandeur, majesty, and strength of figure; it is incompatible with that which is small; a little woman can never be fine: the handsome is a general assemblage of what is agreeable; it is marked by no particular characteristic, but the absence of all deformity. . . .

Even simple words were so discriminated; each one had an abstract reference which was the test of its right use no matter how little cultivated writers and speakers respected that test.

The gift is an act of generosity or condescension; it contributes to the benefit of the receiver: the present is an act of kindness, courtesy, or respect; it contributes to the pleasure of the receiver.

What we abhor is repugnant to our moral feelings; what we detest contradicts our moral principle: what we abominate does equal violence to our religious and moral sentiments. . . . Inhumanity and cruelty are objects of abhorrence; crimes and injustice of detestation; impiety and profanity of abomination. . . .

Crabb's habitual attitude to words as names of things, or for what he might have called "true concepts of things," vitiates his entire work. It has made it of negligible value in our time when lexicography has become an independent science with clearly defined objectives and functions, the chief of which is to respect the meanings men have agreed to give words rather than the notions individuals have concerning the things named or described by those words. His concepts, however interesting, are still subjective and have not been tested to any extent by actual written or spoken language. There are many citations in his work, but the sensitive reader often finds little relevancy between the word as used there and the sense defined. For example, in illustrating the meaning of the "soul" as "the active and living principle" he cites Thomson:

"In bashful coyness or in maiden pride,
The soft return conceal'd, save when it stole In side-long glances from her downcast eyes, Or from her swelling soul in stifled sighs"

3 This paragraph did not appear in the first edition.
Introduction

But here soul as cited means simply and narrowly the rising emotions and not "the active and living principle."

His synonymies are, on the whole, hard reading because confused and inconsistent. As a rule they attempt too much yet do not fully apprehend the greatness of the task and leave the reader without any clear or definite impression or without any remembered distinctions. Also, they excite rebellion in a reader who can give any number of citations to show that Crabb's dogmatic assertions are not justified by usage. Despite these fundamental defects which, with the passage of time and changes in the basic conceptions, have come to be more and more striking, Crabb deserves recognition for some additions to the art of synonymizing. Even these, however, may not be entirely his contributions: a bit here and a bit there may have been done by others. Taylor, for example, gave etymologies when they served his purpose. Moreover, after Crabb the work of perfecting often remained to be done and many others are responsible for deeper insight into the possibilities of the method or the extent to which each possibility is serviceable. The chief contributions are three:

1. The addition of an etymology to the article. Much more, however, needed to be known before certain words could be correctly etymologized and before they could be related to the sense to be defined. In some cases Crabb's etymologies are "learned" additions to the article, in no way reflecting the words' semantic development.

2. The addition of a statement (usually introductory) as to how far the words are equivalent in meaning. There was an approach to this in the work of Mrs. Piozzi, but it was hardly of the same character. Crabb's method was not only clearer and firmer but was much less subject to idiosyncrasies. Since this was his most enduring contribution, a few examples may be given to illustrate his method.

   INGENUITY, WIT. . . . Both these terms imply acuteness of understanding, and differ mostly in the mode of displaying themselves. . . .

   TO DISPARAGE, DETRACT, TRADUCE, DEPRECIATE, DEGRADE, DECRY. . . . The idea of lowering the value of an object is common to all these words, which differ in the circumstances and object of the action. . . .

   DISCERNMENT, PENETRATION, DISCRIMINATION, JUDGMENT. . . . The first three of these terms do not express different powers, but different modes of the same power; namely the power of seeing intellectually, or exerting the intellectual sight. . . .

   In clearness of statement, in pointedness, in "hitting the nail on the head" nearly all of these introductions leave something to be desired. Nevertheless, they are historically important because they represent the first tentative formulation of what has proved to be an important and essential part of the discriminated synonymy at its best.

3. In the arrangement of his word lists Crabb claims to have moved from the most comprehensive to the less comprehensive. In such articles as those discussing form, ceremony, rite, observance; and short, brief, concise, succinct, summary the principle is clear, but in others, such as those for apparel, attire, array; and belief, credit, trust, faith; and execute, fulfill, perform, the procedure is not perfectly clear. In general, however, he seems to have had a plan and to have stuck to it when he could.

   There are other devices used by Crabb which in later and defter hands proved valuable, but these three are the ones on which he has exerted his powers and with which he had greatest success. That the success was not complete is not entirely his fault. The English language is not a symmetrical language: it was never execute, fulfill, perform, belief, credit, trust, faith; the procedure is not perfectly clear. In general, however, he seems to have had a plan and to have stuck to it when he could.

   His book continued to be held in high regard for many decades. In fact, a centennial edition in honor of the first (1816) was published in 1917 in the United States. Its editors' names are not given, but it contains an eloquent introduction by John H. Finley, then commissioner of education in New York state, which ends with the sentence: "Long life to Crabb and to that for which his name is as a synonym!"

   By this time—that is, particularly between the first edition of Crabb's work and the first edition of Whately's book—keen interest was being displayed in the use of synonyms in education. Several texts suitable for use in the schools were prepared. Not necessarily the best of these but the most thoughtful and suggestive was English Synonymes Classified and Explained with Practical Exercises Designed for School and Private Tuition by George F. Graham. The emphasis in the book is entirely upon discrimination. Since there is no attempt to supply as many synonyms as possible and every effort to make differences clear, two words only are given in each article. Although this has the effect of making the book seem purely pedagogical, it admits employment of a method of classification which would break down if more words were to be added. It is, therefore, only by courtesy that Graham's book can be called a synonymy.

   The study of synonymy ought, according to Graham, to begin in the elementary schools. In the hope of making this possible, he divides all pairs of synonyms into five classes marking the relationships of these words. He calls his classes General and Specific, Active and Passive, Intensity, Positive and Negative, and Miscellaneous. The classification is obviously not clean-cut and the classes are not necessarily mutually exclusive. As illustrations of General and Specific relationships he compares answer and reply, bravery and courage; as instances of Active and Passive relationships he discriminates burden and load, and actual and real; and as examples of Intensity in relationships he considers agony and anguish, and intention and purpose.

It is needless to say that a rigid classification begets a rigid method of discrimination. Sometimes, it serves to bring out a real distinction between the words, but more often it serves to confuse them by bending them to suit a set purpose. It is the best example we have had so far of the futility of applying a rigid method to the direct study of anything so nonrigid and living as a language.

Crabb's supremacy as a synonymist seems not to have been seriously threatened by a slight book which appeared in 1851, won general praise, and has been listed in practically every bibliography since that time. This book, usually called "Whately's book on synonyms," has never, so far as we know, been properly esteemed for its own values, nor has its true author ever been adequately recognized. Credit for its authorship is often given to the famous logician Richard Whately (1787–1863), Anglican archbishop of Dublin; rightly, it belongs to his daughter, Elizabeth Jane Whately. A modern but undated edition (before 1928) from the Boston house of Lothrop, Lee, and Shepard confuses both details of title and authorship by calling it on the title page "English Synonyms Discriminated, by Richard Whately, D.D." It has two prefaces, one the editor's preface signed, in the characteristic fashion of Anglican bishops, "Richard Dublin"; the other the preface by the author, which is unsigned.

The editor's preface is very short and abstruse but pregnant with meaning. The archbishop took occasion to say that "this little work has been carefully revised by me, throughout" and that though "far from presuming to call it perfect, it is, I am confident, very much the best that has appeared on the subject." Some of its readers will acknowledge its value in the "cultivation of correctness and precision in our expressions." There will be those, however [we are paraphrasing, amplifying, and interpreting his very cryptic statements], who are so blinded by their adoption of "the metaphysical theory of ideas" that they will regard words as of little importance in themselves, and the ideas named as of great significance. There are others, such as himself, who regard words as "an indispensable instrument of thought, in all cases, where a process of reasoning takes place." Words are the symbols which men use in discourse. For the most part they do not name real things, for abstractions, such as the one called "beauty," or the generalized notion, such as the one called "tree," exist nowhere except in the mind and have not reality. Only in particular things can beauty be found: only particular objects which are classed together under the name "tree" exist. Therefore, if words are to serve as convenient instruments of discourse, they must often be regarded as signs not of real things but of notions of things and must have a fixed and generally accepted content. Otherwise human minds could never come together in discourse. Moreover, actual discourse is often futile because words are loosely or incorrectly used.

The preface by the author, though it avoids all references to philosophy, is in general based on the same premises. The author, as has been said, is the archbishop's daughter, and the proper title of the book is A Selection of Synonyms. To her, as well as to her father, words are, for the most part, the names for human ideas or concepts of things. There may be words which name approximately the same thing but which, because of differences in human points of view, are distinguishable by slight differences in meaning. Synonyms, or as she preferred to call them "pseudo-synonyms," have "sufficient resemblance of meaning to make them liable to be confounded together. And it is in the number and variety of these that...the richness of a language consists. To have two or more words with exactly the same sense, is no proof of copiousness, but simply an inconvenience." A language, in her estimation, should have no more words than it needs, just as a house should have no more chairs or tables than required for convenience.

Differences in meaning she found even in words which denote exactly the same object, act, process, quality, emotion, and the like. Such words often have different connotations. "Swine's flesh," she says, is prohibited by the Mosaic Law, for "it is plain that it presents to the mind a gross idea, which does not." Some words may denote the same thing but their different origins or their varying historical associations give them a distinct character which better fits one than the other for use in certain contexts. In polite phrases such as "May I take the liberty?" the Latin derivative liberty is more suitable than the Saxon freedom. A heathen or an atheist may be called just but not righteous because Biblical use of the latter word has narrowed its application. Much more acute is her observation that two words may name the same thing but differ because they regard that thing from opposite points of view. She instances inference and proof.

Whoever justly infers, proves; and whoever proves, infers; but the word 'inference' leads the mind from the premises which have been assumed, to the conclusion which follows from them: while the word 'proof' follows a reverse process, and leads the mind from the conclusion to the premises.

In a footnote she refers to Aristotle's admirable parallel between anger and hatred, but after summing up his distinctions, she adds significantly:

His [Aristotle's] example...has not been followed in this work...because, though the two passions may often be confounded together, and mistaken one for the other, the two words are not liable to be mistaken; and it is with words that we have now to do.

There, one is forced to comment, is the lexicographer speaking and not the would-be philosopher who would use definition or discrimination of words as an instrument for the expression of his own ideas.

Here and there in her preface and in her synonymies, without evident plan or intention, Miss Whately advanced ideas which when brought together indicate a conception of the synonymist's function and equipment far beyond any yet presented. Not only was she, in effect if not by design, distinguishing lexicography from philosophy but she was defining and enriching the concept of the ideal synonymy and the ideal synonymist. And she did so by flying in the face of all Crabb's admirers and imitators.

Although she realized the importance per se of the "history of the derivation of words," she omitted etymologies "which are generally appended to every group of synonyms as an almost essential part of it." She questioned the value of "this procedure" because it tends "to confuse the subject it was intended to clear," for "in inquiring into the actual and present meaning of a word, the consideration of what it originally meant may frequently tend to lead us astray." Nevertheless, she made good use of her knowledge of etymology when it helped in the discrimination of words.

'Contentment' may be classed among those words in the English language which adhere strictly to their etymology. Its root was undoubtedly the verb 'to contain,' and the substantive and its adjective have not departed from this meaning. A contented person does not indulge in fruitless wishes for what is beyond his reach; his desires are limited by what he possesses.

'Satisfaction' implies more: this word has likewise retained the signification of its root, and means that we have obtained all we want; not that our desires are limited, but that they have been gratified. A poor and needy man may be 'contented,' but he cannot feel 'satisfaction' with his condition.

Her illustrations are many and reveal wide reading, a broad linguistic background, and a deep interest in developments of meaning, in differences in meaning between words of the same origin in different languages (e.g., between the English defend and the French défendre which means not only to defend but also to forbid), and in English words which have "corresponding origins" yet are "widely different in their significations," such as substance (printed as substantia in her book), understanding, and hypostasis. She was interested also in the notions which gave names to things, as "'Heaven'...conveyed with it the idea of something heaved or lifted up. . . . 'Coelum'...referred to something hollowed out or vaulted."

All these variations of meaning...are valuable and curious; but though they may occasionally help us, they must not be allowed to influence our decisions with respect to the significations of words. Our question is, not what ought to be, or formerly was, the meaning of a word, but what it now is; nor can we be completely guided by quotations from Shakespeare or Milton, or even from Addison or Johnson. Language has undergone such changes, even within the last sixty or seventy years, that many words at that time considered pure, are now obsolete; while others...formerly slang, are now used by our best writers. . . .The standard we shall refer to in the present work, is the sense in which a word is used by the purest writers and most correct speakers of our own days.

Although Miss Whately cannot be said to be the first to discriminate meanings of synonyms, she was, so far as we know, the first in England to make that the avowed aim of a book of synonyms and to realize clearly the distinction between the meaning of a word and the thing or idea for which it stood.

Unfortunately, Miss Whately was not so successful in finding a method of synonymizing as she was in expounding its principles. She had, in theory, thrown off the yoke of Crabb, but in practice she occasionally submitted to it. Nor had she, any more than Crabb, been able to discard completely or to transform to her own use what has been called the Piozzi method of illustration. Some of the difficulty arises from her use of other writers and from the reviser (her father) who, though sympathetic in principle, did not always agree with the exposition in detail and made many heavy-handed changes. But these sources of difficulty are superficial: the real but unassignable reason probably has its roots in something that lies in temper and lack of experience. Yet, in spite of everything, she made several significant advances not only in the theory but in the art of synonymizing. Summed up, they are:

1. The principle that knowledge of meanings and all the background that such knowledge implies (derivations, historical development of senses, usage of purest writers and speakers, especially of one's own period, the associations that affect connotations, etc.) are indispensable elements of the synonymist's equipment, to be used or discarded as the occasion warrants.

2. The principle that the synonymist goes beyond the definer, in a difference of purpose. It is the function of the one who would define a word to estimate truly the meanings men have agreed should be given to it: it is the function of the synonymist to point out the differences between words with meanings so nearly alike.
that he not only gives help in their correct use but promotes precision of expression so necessary to the thinker and writer.

3. A clearer conception of the ways in which synonyms differ:
(a) Because of differences in implications.

"Both obstinacy and stubbornness imply an excessive and vicious perseverance in pursuing our own judgment in opposition to that of others; but to be obstinate implies the doing what we ourselves chose. To be stubborn denotes rather, not to do what others advise or desire." (Quoted from Sir James Mackintosh.)

A trifling matter is one merely of small importance; a trivial matter is a small matter made too much of. The word 'trivial' implies contempt, which 'trifling' does not. By saying, 'He never neglects a trifling matter,' we are rather supposed to praise; but in blaming a person for frivolity, we often say, 'He is always engrossed with trivial concerns.'

(b) Because of differences in applications.

"Obstinacy is generally applied to the superior; stubbornness to the inferior...Obstinacy refers more to outward acts, and stubbornness to disposition." (Quoted from Sir James Mackintosh.)

Strictly speaking, 'expense' should be applied to the purchaser, and 'cost' to the thing purchased....Many persons are tempted to buy articles...because they are not costly, forgetting that...these purchases may still be too expensive.

'Delightful' is applied both to the pleasures of the mind and those of the senses: 'delicious' only to those of the senses. An excursion, a social circle, a place of abode, may be 'delightful'; a perfume, or a fruit, 'delicious.'

(c) Because of differences in extension, or range of meaning.

'Timid' is applied both to the state of mind...in which a person may happen to be at the moment, and to the habitual disposition; 'timorous,' only to the disposition. 'Timid' is therefore, the more extensive term, and comprehends the meanings of 'timorous.'...

TO UNDERSTAND, TO COMPREHEND. The former of these verbs is used in a much more extended sense than the latter. Whatever we comprehend, we understand; but 'to understand' is used on many occasions in which to comprehend would be inadmissible....It would be quite correct to say, 'I did not comprehend his exposition, or his arguments, although I understood the language, and the grammatical import of each sentence.'

(d) Because of differences in association or origin and, therefore, in connotations.

FATHERLY, PATERNAL; MOTHERLY, MATERNAL...are formed from corresponding roots in Latin and Saxon....the Latin word being the more polite and cold, the Saxon the more hearty and cordial....We speak of 'a paternal government'—'maternal duties'; but of 'a fatherly kindness of manner'—'a motherly tenderness.'

RIGHTIOUS, JUST...a Saxon and a Latin term, whose roots exactly correspond in meaning; but they have even more curiously diverged than many other pairs of words. 'Righteous' is now exclusively applied to rectitude of conduct drawn from religious principle, while 'just' is simply used for moral uprightness. A heathen or atheist may be called just, but not righteous.

(e) Because of the difference in the point of view from which the same thing is regarded.

'Anger' is more correctly applied to the inward feeling: 'wrath' to the outward manifestation....We should not speak of the 'anger,' but of the 'wrath' of the elements. We therefore speak of the 'wrath of God,' more correctly than of his anger. We cannot attribute to Him passions like those of men: we can only describe the external effects which in man would be produced by those passions.

In 1852, the year after Whately's Selection of Synonyms was published, appeared the first edition of the Thesaurus of English Words and Phrases, by Peter Mark Roget (1779–1869), a book that was to exert very great influence on the development of interest in synonyms and to provoke a new interest in opposite or contrasted terms. The modern consultant of the Thesaurus, accustomed to depend on the elaborate index (provided in 1879 by the compiler's son John L. Roget), has little knowledge of the original plan of the book, though it has in no way been disturbed by revisers of the Roget family. But this plan is obviously hard to use and few consultants of the Thesaurus, if any, now avail themselves of it. It depends upon a classification of all words into six main categories, those dealing with Abstract Relations, Space, Matter, Intellect, Volition, and Affections, each of which is divided into smaller and appropriate subdivisions until an appropriate heading, such as Interpretation or Lending, gives the clue for the left-hand column of nouns, verbs, adjectives, and adverbs gathered under it and an appropriate heading, such as Misinterpretation or Borrowing, gives the clue for the right-hand column of nouns, verbs, adjectives, and adverbs that are theoretically opposed or in contrast. But Roget did not call these word lists Synonyms and Antonyms (the latter word indeed had not yet been coined): his usual name was "Analogous Words" for those in the left-hand column and "Correlative Words" for those in the right-hand column. Despite this, other revisers than those of the Roget family have consistently misinterpreted this volume as a book of synonyms and antonyms and have rearranged it or alphabetized it in the hope of making this clear.
It is, therefore, merely because of its historical connections with the treatment of synonyms and antonyms that this book is of immediate significance to us. Only when it is clear that the book purports to be a supplier of words—technically, a “word finder”—and nothing else, are we able to estimate correctly the heresy that has arisen out of its misunderstanding. To reach this end we must know very clearly just what Roget tried to accomplish by this book and just what he ruled out as extraneous to his purpose.

As early as 1805 Roget realized that what he needed for his own writing was a classified list of words in which he might find not only the right words to express his ideas but words that would help him in clarifying or formulating confused or vague ideas. He found the lists he made so useful to himself that he came to believe that they would prove, if amplified, of great value to others. For nearly fifty years he had this project in mind, but only at the age of seventy, after his retirement in 1849 from his position as secretary of the Royal Society of London for the Advancement of Science, was he able to realize it.

He held from the start that what was needed was not a dictionary of synonyms. Roget had in mind a consultant who not only did not know a near word but could not even recall a word somewhat similar in meaning to the word desired or only vaguely apprehended an idea because of the want of the right word or words to help him in formulating it. For example, a geologist who has found a rock, probably hitherto undiscovered, because it fitted into no known classification might be at a loss for the exact terms to describe its peculiar texture. Such a person could hope to find in the section headed “Matter” the concrete adjective he needed (such as fissile, friable, splintery). No word, no phrase, was too narrow in its meaning to serve Roget’s purpose, or too archaic, or too slangy, or too erudite. Whether one was writing a technical treatise or a witty essay, a historical novel or a definition for a dictionary, one might hope to discover in this Thesaurus the expressions “which are best suited to his purpose, and which might not have occurred to him without such assistance.” For words, “like ‘spirits from the vasty deep’ . . . come not when we call”; “appropriate terms, as fissile, friable, splintery).

No word, no phrase, was too narrow in its meaning to serve Roget’s chief object in phrasing his definition of antonym, synonym which he disregarded in favor of the Alphabetical Index.” Yet, brief as is that statement, it reveals that he thought word-finding lists of synonyms and of “apparently synonymous” terms would be too meager to suit the purposes he had in mind.

As for the discrimination of synonyms, that was entirely foreign to the purpose of his book. He was very explicit about that:

The investigation of the distinctions to be drawn between words apparently synonymous, forms a separate branch of inquiry, which I have not presumed here to enter upon; for the subject has already occupied the attention of much abler critics than myself, and its complete exhaustion would require the devotion of a whole life. The purpose of this Work, it must be borne in mind, is not to explain the signification of words, but simply to classify and arrange them according to the sense in which they are now used, and which I presume to be already known to the reader. I enter into no inquiry into the changes of meaning they may have undergone in the course of time. I am content to accept them at the value of their present currency, and have no concern with their etymologies, or with the history of their transformations; far less do I venture to thrid [thread] the mazes of the vast labyrinth into which I should be led by any attempt at a general discrimination of synonyms.

It is also important to notice that Roget believed himself without a precursor “in any language.” He may have known Perry and many others who worked in the word-finding field before 1852: like other cultivated men he probably knew Crabb and others working on the discrimination of synonyms; but he always thought of himself as doing something quite distinct from both. In fact, he gave his successors many reasons for refusing to believe that his two series of word-supplying lists were synonyms or antonyms or were capable of discrimination as synonyms or of opposition as antonyms.

Despite that, his purpose was misunderstood and his book misinterpreted. In 1867 appeared a small book called A Complete Collection of Synonyms and Antonyms, by the Rev. Charles J. Smith, which gave evidence that here and there men were quietly substituting their judgment of Roget’s work for his own. It is true that there is only one sentence in the preface of Smith’s book to support this inference, and that concerns the reason why its author has chosen the dictionary method of presenting his material, “from finding that the abstract classifications of words, under certain broad ideas, according to the plan of Dr. Roget, seems invalidated by the necessity, in his well-known Thesaurus, of numberless cross-divisions, and is practically disregarded in favor of the Alphabetical Index.” Yet, brief as is that statement, it reveals that he thought his work and Roget’s had a common purpose—to give synonyms and their opposites or, to use the word which he now coined, their “antonyms”—and that the difference between the two books was merely a matter of method.

There is no evidence that Smith realized that he was changing the time-honored definition of synonym. His chief object in phrasing his definition of synonym was to set that term in opposition to antonym, which he regarded as its antithesis. Nevertheless, in so doing, he introduced a subtle and important change in the Words which agree in expressing one or more characteristic ideas in common [with the entry word] he [i.e., Smith himself] has regarded as Synonyms, those which negative one or more such ideas he has called Antonyms.

The inference that he changed the traditional definition of synonym is supported not only by this statement but also by his method of selecting synonyms. One example must suffice:

ACCELERATE, v.t. Ad and celer, quick. To quicken the speed or process of events, objects, or transactions.

The important thing to notice about these lists is not their parallelism, nor even how good or bad the synonyms or antonyms are, but their selection according to a new principle. The synonyms are not all closely allied words differing only in minor ways or words which are essentially alike in meaning, but some, such as urge and promote, are words which come together only in some part of their meaning and that not necessarily their essential meaning. Nor are the antonyms necessarily opposed to the essential meaning of accelerate. It is quite possible that neither Smith nor anyone else at the time fully realized what a radical change in definition he had made. In his Synonyms Discriminated, the work with which four years later (1871) he followed his Synonyms and Antonyms, he adhered to the orthodox definition of synonym. The later work proved the more popular, and it is probable that the inconspicuousness of Synonyms and Antonyms helped to obscure its definition of synonym, buried as it was in the preface.

Moreover, in the same year as Synonyms Discriminated appeared another book of indiscriminated synonyms, Richard Soule's A Dictionary of English Synonymes and Synonymous or Parallel Expressions (1871), which attracted far more attention than had Smith's Synonyms and Antonyms. New editions appeared in rapid succession, and it was revised in 1891 by Professor George H. Howison and in 1937 by Professor Alfred D. Sheffield.

Although Soule acknowledged help from Roget's Thesaurus and a number of other works such as the dictionaries of Webster and Worcester and the books by Crabb, Whately, and others discriminating synonyms, he claims in no particular instance to have followed them strictly or to have been influenced by them in any way. If we judge from the words of Professor Howison, who, nearly twenty years after the first edition, undertook revision at the request of Soule's family, he "found little more to do than to carry out to a greater completeness the lines of Mr. Soule's original design." That Soule's original design was clear and definite and that he saw himself as doing something quite different from Roget, on the one hand, and from Crabb and Whately, on the other, is obvious from what Professor Howison has further to say:

A perfect manual of that sort is impossible within the compass of a single work of convenient size and arrangement. . . . A work on Synonymes may thus have for its purpose either an alphabetic list of all the more important words in the language, with their various meanings or shades of meaning set down under them, each followed by its appropriate synonymes; or a list of general notions, duly named and properly divided and subdivided, with the words and phrases that belong to the expression of each collected under them as fully as possible; or, again, the collocation of words allied in meaning with subjoined disquisitions on the shades of difference between them. The latter conception has been the prevailing one among English makers of synonymic dictionaries, and is represented by the well-known work of Crabb, as well as by any; the second is that of Roget's Thesaurus; while the first is that of Soule.

Consequently, we are not surprised to find that Soule's definition of synonym approaches the orthodox one. True, he gives us no detailed definition, but he does say enough to show that he does not mistake the relation between words of the same part of speech in the left-hand or the right-hand column of Roget (he is obviously not interested in their cross relation), and he does not show any knowledge—much less any interest—in Smith's definition of a synonym as a word which agrees in expressing one or more characteristic ideas in common with a given word. A synonym, he says, has "the same meaning as" the entry word under which it is listed "or a meaning very nearly the same." Within limits his lists of synonyms are about as good as is possible when they are not submitted to the test of discrimination.

Even though Soule's Dictionary of Synonyms has been the model for a great many works issued in imitation of it, some claiming to have improved upon it, it still remains, in both its original and its revised forms, the best dictionary of synonyms that does not provide discriminations. Like Roget's work, within its own limits it has not yet been bettered.

But beyond those limits, both in the realm of books providing discriminating synonymies and in the realm of books providing synonyms and antonyms without discriminations, there has arisen a state of affairs which makes us believe that we are at a point where a stand must be taken if we are to avert chaos in the field.
In the forefront of this battle are the American general dictionaries and certain manuals written by men who have been at one time or another members of their staffs.

The general dictionaries have so far been omitted from this survey. Not that they were inactive—for, almost from the start, they were not. A few ventures were merely tentative, such as that in James Barclay's Complete and Universal Dictionary issued in England in 1774. This work Chauncey Goodrich (in his preface to Webster's A Pronouncing and Defining Dictionary, 1856, an abridgment of the 1828 Webster) notices with the observation that discriminations of "synonymous words" were "first introduced into a general dictionary by Barclay, though in a very imperfect manner." Goodrich also calls attention to the fact that Noah Webster had often successfully used the method of discrimination as part of his definitions. But these attempts do not merit the honor of being the first discriminating synonymies in the general dictionary. No one in fact laid serious claim to their introduction before Joseph Worcester who, in 1855, issued his Pronouncing, Explanatory, and Synonymous Dictionary. The slight foundation for the claim is evident from the following typical examples:

DEFEND. . . Syn.—Defend the innocent; protect the weak; vindicate those who are unjustly accused; repel aggression.

FIGURE. . . Syn.—A fine figure; regular shape; circular form; a carved statue; a graven image.—A metaphor is a figure of speech; a lamb is an emblem of innocence; the paschal lamb was a type of Christ.

One year later (1856) William G. Webster and Chauncey A. Goodrich, the son and son-in-law of Noah Webster, brought out abridged editions of his American Dictionary for school, business, and family use. Short discriminating synonymies were introduced, all of them written by Chauncey Goodrich. A few typical illustrations will indicate how much better a title he had than had Worcester to the claim of having introduced such synonymies into a dictionary:

Things are adjacent when they lie near to each other without touching, as adjacent fields; adjoining when they meet or join at some point, as adjoining farms; contiguous when they are brought more continuously in contact, as contiguous buildings.

Liveliness is an habitual feeling of life and interest; gayety refers more to a temporary excitement of the animal spirits; animation implies a warmth of emotion and a corresponding vividness of expressing it; vivacity is a feeling between liveliness and animation, having the permanency of the one, and, to some extent, the warmth of the other.

The first serious attempt in a general dictionary at discriminating synonymies on a par with those published by Piozzi, Crabb, Whately, and others, came in 1859 with the publication by G. & C. Merriam Co. of a "provisional edition"4 of Webster as a preparation for the first complete revision (issued in 1864) of the American Dictionary. These also were written by Chauncey A. Goodrich (1790-1860), whose articles in the smaller dictionaries of 1856 had been, according to the publishers' preface of 1859, "so highly appreciated by distinguished scholars" that they had prevailed upon him in his capacity as editor of the 1859 edition to add a treatment of synonyms to this book. For some years Goodrich had been engaged on "a distinct work on this subject" and it was the material gathered for this project that was developed and presented in the table of synonyms as part of the "front matter" of the 1859 edition.

These synonymies, with slight changes in phrasing and many additions, served for the two ensuing complete revisions of Merriam-Webster dictionaries, Webster's Unabridged Dictionary of 1864 and Webster's International Dictionary of 1890, both under the editorship of Noah Porter. In these books the articles on synonymy, instead of being grouped in the front matter, were distributed through the main vocabulary.

In the publishers' statement in the 1859 edition of the American Dictionary, note was made of the great advance in Goodrich's synonymies over those of preceding writers:

This is only an application on a broad scale of one mode adopted by Dr. Webster, for giving clearness and precision to his definitions. It is also peculiarly appropriate in a work like this, which aims at great exactness as a defining dictionary; since it affords an opportunity of giving in connection with the leading terms of our language, those nicer discriminations and shades of thought which it is impossible to reach in the way of ordinary definitions. . . . Unless the distinctive meaning of the several words is previously given, little or no aid is afforded as to their proper use and application, by adding such passages. This will be seen by turning to such a work as Platt's Dictionary of English Synonyms,5 which is framed chiefly upon this plan. On the first page, we find under the words abandon, desert, leave &c., such examples as these: "Men are abandoned by their friends; we desert a post or station; leave the country," &c. But these words may be 4 As stated in the preface to Webster's Unabridged Dictionary (1864).

---

5 A small work for use in schools, published 1825.
equally well interchanged. Men may be deserted by their friends; we may abandon a post or station, &c. Such examples, therefore, afford no light or guidance as to the proper use of these words. So, if the phrase be given "the officer abandoned his post," the question may arise whether he really abandoned, or deserted, or surrendered, or left it. He may have abandoned it on the approach of an enemy, or as no longer important to maintain; he may have deserted it unworthily or treacherously; he may have surrendered it to a superior force; he may have left it temporarily.

The criticism clearly shows that the chief defect of the current discriminating synonymy was a defect in method: it was not a defect in the definition of synonym or in the selection of synonyms. But in the thirty years following there were signs that Perry's vague conceptions of a synonym, and Smith's freer definition were beginning to enter the minds of synonymists. Neither Perry nor Smith was largely responsible for this change in definition. Roget, because of the enormous popularity of his work, or rather those who misinterpreted Roget's aim, must be considered as originating the trend and be blamed for it. By 1889 the first evidence of its more general acceptance had made its appearance.

In that year was published the first edition of the Century Dictionary, and in 1894 followed Funk and Wagnalls' Standard Dictionary. Both were new ventures in dictionary making and had the advantage of being in the limelight. Both followed the initiative of the Merriam-Webster dictionaries and introduced discriminating synonymies as an essential part of their contribution. But neither followed Webster in its adhesion to the traditional definition of synonym.

Although the Century Dictionary attempted many new things in the way of dictionary making, such as an encyclopedic character and a format of several volumes, it placed little stress on its treatment of synonymies. The writer of these articles, Henry Mitchell Whitney, was the brother of the editor in chief, William Dwight Whitney (1827-1894): his work was given only a four-line notice in the editorial preface:

Discussions of synonymies treating of about 7000 words. . .will be found convenient as bringing together statements made in the definitions in various parts of the dictionary, and also as touching in a free way upon many literary aspects of words.

It was probably because of the division of the Century Dictionary into several volumes that its editors could entertain the idea that the function of a discriminating synonymy is to assemble definitions of comparable terms from various parts of the dictionary, but such a function, because of its accidental character, has no inherent value. As a matter of fact, the synonymist of the Century often depended on cross reference to definitions for support or amplification of his statements and, therefore, invalidated the description (quoted above) by William Dwight Whitney in the editorial preface. Nor do his synonymies "touch in a free way upon many literary aspects of words." In the first place, it is not quite clear what is meant by that statement, and, in the second, there is no consistent proof of anything like it in the articles themselves. As a general rule, with the possible exception of Whately, synonymists had not yet felt strongly any difference between the literary and colloquial use of words.

There is not only the lack of a clearly defined policy in the preface, but there is also the lack of one in the synonymies themselves. Yet Henry M. Whitney seems to have had in him the makings of a good synonymist but to have been suffering from conditions over which he had no control. It may be that his job was too big for one man or for the time set for its completion and that he had little leisure to think through its problems: it may be that what he considered a good synonymy was not in accord with the opinion of the editor in chief. At any rate, his synonymies vary greatly in method, aim, and accomplishment. The most that can be said is that he was experimenting with different methods and aims and that he never reached definite conclusions as to the superiority of one over the other.

The most vital problem which concerned him was the selection of synonymy. Sometimes he provides a very limited selection, as at the noun adept, where he gives only expert, leaving out such words as master, proficient, and specialist, which might well have been treated as synonyms. In other places he gives a much longer and more heterogeneous list, as at ample: ample, copious, plenteous, spacious, roomy, extensive, extended, wide, capacious, abundant, sufficient, full, enough, unrestricted, plenary, unstinted. Only the italicized words are discriminated, it is true, but the others are given as synonyms. The average reader may doubt the justification of many of these words as synonyms, though he will readily find a relationship in meaning.

There was good reason for H. M. Whitney's uncertainty, in that around the eighteen-seventies and eighties synonymists were confronted with a problem that had not particularly concerned their predecessors. The demand then was not only for discriminating synonymies but for word-finding lists more or less in the manner of Roget and Soule. Crabb's work was still influential, but was not satisfying those who wanted more words synonymized and more synonymy for each word. Roget was immensely popular but extremely difficult to use, not only because of his classificatory method but because he supplied no definitions. In 1879 a "new and elaborate Index, much more complete than that which was appended to the previous editions" had been added by Roget's son, in the belief that "almost every one who uses the book finds it more convenient to have recourse to the Index first." In this way the major difficulty, the classificatory system which the elder Roget had pertinaciously believed in, became no longer an obstacle. The other difficulty, the lack of discrimination, was not touched and, in view of Roget's primary purpose, was not likely to be.

As a result there followed an attempt to provide synonyms which would combine the virtues and value of the discriminating synonymies and yet would deal with word lists that approached in number and variety those of Roget. Henry M. Whitney more or less played with the problem, but James C. Fernald (1838-1918), the editor of synonyms for Funk and Wagnalls' Standard Dictionary (1894) and author of a manual, English Synonyms and Antonyms (1896), attacked it with vigor and offered what seemed to him a solution. Fernald and the editors of the Standard Dictionary set out to increase markedly the number of synonyms and antonyms at each entry. Hitherto, from two to eight words represented the norm in each of these lists; in the Standard Dictionary the average number lies between ten and twenty. First of all, they believed that they were justified in extending the definition of synonym to include both words of identical or closely allied meaning (the time-honored definition) and words which agree in some part of their meaning. The definition of synonym in the 1894 edition of the Standard Dictionary (slightly changed in later editions) reads:

A word having the same or almost the same meaning as some other; oftener, one of a number of words that have one or more meanings in common, but that differ either in the range of application of those meanings or in having other senses not held in common; opposed to antonym. . . Words of this class may often be used interchangeably, but discrimination in their choice is one of the most important characteristics of a good writer.

The discriminating synonymy given at the entry of synonymous in the main vocabulary reads:

Synonyms: alike, correspondent, corresponding, equivalent, identical, interchangeable, like, same, similar, synomymic. In the strictest sense, synonymous words scarcely exist; rarely, if ever, are any two words in any language equivalent or identical in meaning; where a difference in meaning can not easily be shown, a difference in usage commonly exists, so that the words are not interchangeable. By synonymous words we usually understand words that coincide or nearly coincide in some part of their meaning, and may hence within certain limits be used interchangeably, while outside of those limits they may differ very greatly in meaning and use. It is the office of a work on synonyms to point out these correspondences and differences, that language may have the flexibility that comes from freedom of selection within the common limits, with the perspicuity and precision that result from exact choice of the fittest word to express each shade of meaning outside of the common limits. To consider synonymous words identical is fatal to accuracy; to forget that they are similar, to some extent equivalent, and sometimes interchangeable, is destructive of freedom and variety.

It is possible that definition and synonymy were designed to avoid provoking criticism from those who adhered to the commonly accepted definition of synonym yet at the same time to extend the sense to accord with what was believed to be Roget's practice and to satisfy the demands of those who urged more words. It may be granted that this is a legitimate practice, provided it does not force the issue, but represents a genuine change in conception among a large or even a small class of those who use the term synonym. That the growing demand was for more synonyms cannot be questioned but that a change in the conception of synonym had occurred, from the one that had been in vogue since Crabb's time, may justly be disputed. At any rate, let us see how it affected the Standard Dictionary's choice of synonyms. Two lists will illustrate its practice:

| ADEQUATE    | able, adapted, capable, commensurate, competent, equal, fit, fitted, fitting, qualified, satisfactory, sufficient, suitable. |
| HARMONY     | accord, accordance, agreement, amity, concord, concurrence, conformity, congruity, consent, consistency, consonance, symmetry, unanimity, uniformity, union, unison, unity. |

The Standard Dictionary's definition justifies the selection of such lists of "synonyms." Each is a word which has one or more meanings in common with the introductory word (adequate or harmony). But if adequate means exactly commensurate with the requirements, only sufficient and competent (in one of its senses) with the addition of enough approach it in content. A person may be adequate if he is able, capable, competent (in another sense), or qualified; a person or thing may be adequate if he or it is adapted, fitted, or suitable; a thing may be adequate if it is equal to the requirement by being fit or satisfactory: but in all these cases, he or it may also be more than adequate or less than adequate, in some way, or the question of adequacy may never arise. Harmony in its musical sense may be related to accord, concord, consonance, in its aesthetic sense to symmetry and other terms not in this list; but what relation there is between it and amity, uniformity, unanimity, agreement, concurrence, congruity, etc., except as a cause or result or concomitant, needs to be proved. A word-finding list may consist of terms which, by agreeing in some implications and connotations, overlap, for those lists serve their purpose in helping the user to locate his word. But when the object is discrimination, only those words serve the purpose whose basic likeness can be proved by showing that they have a common denotation as well as not readily discerned differences.
20a

Introduction

It is true that Fernald found no difficulty here. His clearest expression of the method of discrimination is found in the preface to his English Synonyms, Antonyms, and Prepositions:

The great source of vagueness, error, and perplexity in many discussions of synonyms is, that the writer merely associates stray ideas loosely connected with the different words, sliding from synonym to synonym with no definite point of departure or return, so that a smooth and at first sight pleasing statement really gives the mind no definite resting-place and no sure conclusion. A true discussion of synonyms is definition by comparison, and for this there must be something definite with which to compare. When the standard is settled, approximation or differentiation can be determined with clearness and certainty.

What type of synonymy Fernald was criticizing is not clear. It was probably what may be called "the chain-formula type." When a synonymist had made so poor a selection of synonyms that there could be no common ground and his list presented an array of associated rather than synonymous terms, he often fell into the habit of giving a series of definitions with a factitious relation. A repetition of a previous word was usually enough to make a connection. This was the defect of certain synonymies into which all writers of articles, good as well as bad, fell at one time or another and is probably the type to which Fernald referred when he described the "easy sliding from synonym to synonym." Yet it is not always bad: when one word carries a general meaning which serves as a substitute for the common denotation, it is possible to use it with good effect. A short example from The New Century Dictionary (1927) must suffice for the good use:

BANTER is good-humored jesting. . . .RAILLERY is often sharp, sarcastic banter; PLEASANTRY, delicate and pleasant banter; BADINAGE, diverting and purposeless banter; PERSIFLAGE, light, frivolous, or flippant banter.

With lists such as Fernald's own it would be impossible to avoid this formula, unchanged. It was necessary for him to find some way of varying "the chain formula" so that he could secure the desired qualities, "unity of the group" and "some point of departure and return." Therefore, he devised the method whereby one word would be selected as the key word and all the other words should be compared or contrasted with it. A good example is afforded by his article at money:

MONEY. SYN.: bills, bullion, capital, cash, coin, currency, funds, gold, notes, property, silver, specie. Money is the authorized medium of exchange; coined money is called coin or specie. What are termed in England bank-notes are in the United States commonly called bills; as, five-dollar bill. The notes of responsible men are readily transferable in commercial circles, but they are not money; as, the stock was sold for $500 in money and the balance in merchantable paper. Cash is specie or money in hand, or paid in hand; as, the cash account; the cash price. In the legal sense, property is not money, and money is not property; for property is that which has inherent value, while money, as such, has but representative value, and may or may not have intrinsic value. Bullion is either gold or silver uncoined, or the coined metal considered without reference to its coinage, but simply as merchandise, when its value as bullion may be very different from its value as money. The word capital is used chiefly of accumulated property or money invested in productive enterprises or available for such investment. Compare PROPERTY; WEALTH.

Nothing could be clearer than that these words are not synonyms in the generally accepted sense. They include names of kinds of money (coin, specie, bills), names of material used for money or, in figurative language, meaning money or wealth (gold, silver), and words denoting things that have some intimate association with money (bullion, property, capital). The article keeps more or less consistently before the reader the relation of these to the key word money. The reader is bound to see and understand the distinctions and carry away a unified impression. There can be no quarrel with such articles on the ground of their not giving useful information. It may even be argued that a discrimination of terms that coincide in some part of their meaning may be in itself a valuable thing. But neither justification touches the issue raised by the Fernald synonymies. The ground of valid objection to them is that they offer as synonyms many words which even by the loosest of definitions cannot be accepted as such. The point of absurdity is reached at spontaneous, where the key word is so important that voluntary and involuntary, free and instinctive, automatic and impulsive are included.

By 1909, the date of publication of the next complete revision of the Merriam-Webster® dictionaries (the first edition of Webster's New International Dictionary), there had been time for consideration of these matters and for a more sober judgment. The Goodrich synonymies clearly needed revision on account of the growth of the language and, partly, because the synonym lists could be enriched. The work was entrusted to John Livingston Lowes (1867–1945; then at Washington University, St. Louis, but later at Harvard University) under the advisory supervision of George Lyman Kittredge (1860–1941) of Harvard. They were to deal only with general senses, but a few technical articles written by specialists were to be submitted to them, so as to insure uniformity in manner and method. The articles thus prepared were included in Certain points of agreement were established by Lowes and Kittredge early in the course of their partnership. Very early in the writing of these articles Lowes called Kittredge's attention to the Fernald list at adequate and the Century list, adequate, sufficient, enough. "Is not the Century's list adequate?" he wrote. "I did not notice the test my question affords, but none of the other words in the Standard's list can be substituted for 'adequate.' Are they not better distributed among other articles? The longer I study the material, the more strongly I feel that more articles, each discriminating fewer words, are advisable. The longer articles are, as a matter of fact, confusing, and seem to have led often to strained attempts to find a single common factor for words which fall more naturally into several groups." Kittredge agreed fully. Thus, the Webster tradition of discriminating synonyms that are synonyms in the accepted sense was followed. Looser synonyms or closely related words were still given in the word-finding lists, and these also were revised by Lowes, whose interests, however, were concentrated on the articles discriminating synonyms.

By temperament and training Professor Lowes was especially fitted for the task assigned him. He excels all his predecessors in philosophic grasp and powers of analysis, yet he never confuses synonymizing with philosophizing or moralizing; he outstrips them all in the range of his knowledge of literature and of his contacts with language as the medium of expressing ideas and emotions; great scholar though he was, his work is utterly free of the pedantry, dogmatism, and heaviness that so often mar the work of lesser men. Though not a lexicographer by training or experience, he almost perfectly adapted the art of synonymizing to the methods of lexicography, so that whatever can contribute in either to the advantage of the other was brought out in his articles.

It is in the clarification of the differences between terms that are to a large extent equivalent in denotation that Lowes made the greatest advances in the art of synonymizing. Practically every synonymist before him had inklings of the kinds of differences that he saw clearly; many of them, such as Miss Whately, had used the language adopted by him, but no one so fully realized its possibilities. Rambling, persistent missing of the real differences and constant confusion of the content of the word itself with the concept for which that word stood were characteristic and prevalent faults of many earlier writers of synonymies. With Lowes, direct attack at each problem became possible and, with it, swift, sure shafts that rarely fail to make the desired cleavage.

It may be said that as a rule he was careful in his synonymies to state the ground of agreement; but sometimes he neglected to do so when the likeness was obvious. But in regard to differences he was extremely particular and rarely departed from the aim he held before him. His most frequently used method may be illustrated by an excerpt from the article at foretell in Webster's New International Dictionary (1909):

FORETELL (Saxon) and predict (Latin) are frequently interchangeable; but predict is now commonly used when inference from facts (rather than occult processes) is involved; as, "Some sorcerer... had foretold, dying, that none of all our blood should know the shadow from the substance" (Tennyson); "Mr. Brooke's conclusions were as difficult to predict as the weather" (G. Eliot); an astronomer predicts the return of a comet. Prophecy connotes inspired or mysterious knowledge, or great assurance of prediction; as, "ancestral voices prophesying war" (Coleridge); "Wrinkled benchers often talked of him approvingly, and prophesied his rise" (Tennyson). Forecast connotes conjecture rather than inference; presage implies shrewd forecast, sometimes presentiment or warning; as, "Who shall so forecast the years?" (Tennyson); "I presage, unless the country make an alarm, the cause is lost" (Scott). Portend... implies obscure prescience or premonition (esp. of evil); portend... threaten or ominous foretokening; as, "His heart forebodes a mystery" (Tennyson); "My father put on the countenance which always portends a gathering storm" (Richardson).

If we supply the common denotation of all these words—"to indicate what will happen"—the difference lies in other ideas involved in their meaning. In each case this difference forms part of the word's definition, the other part of which will be the common denotation. Indeed, although the dictionary definition may be presented from another point of view, a good and fair definition may be made according to this method. The synonymist, however, should find it the best method when his job is merely to show how far words agree and then to point out their individual differences. Other methods are conceivable, indeed some are necessary in special cases, but as yet no better method has been devised for the general run of synonyms. Miss Whately is largely responsible for it, but Lowes has greatly improved it.

It was (and is), however, impossible always to be equally exact, clear, and direct. This is especially true when the differences are less a matter of meaning than of coloring, as by historical and literary associations, or a matter of idiomatic usage. The difference in coloring or, in other terms, the difference in connotations—is especially difficult, requiring not only great knowledge but fine perceptions, imagination, and taste. Few would dare to attempt to distinguish connotations, but Lowes, whose feeling for these differences is not equaled by any synonymist, is especially successful in their handling. Many of these could not be incorporated in a dictionary definition, but they must be felt if the word is to be used with the accumulated power that has been stored in it. A particularly effective synonym of this type is to be found at idiot.

From manuscript notes in the editorial files of G. & C. Merriam Company.

Idiot, imbecile, fool, simpleton are here compared esp. in their connotations; for technical distinctions, see defs. Idiot (a learned word become popular) implies absence, commonly congenital, of intellectual or reasoning powers; it is often less strictly used to characterize one who is felt to have acted with utter stupidity; imbecile (less common as a popular term) implies great mental feebleness or (in its looser derogatory sense) entire fatuity; fool, the more vigorous word, is wholly popular, and frequently suggests lack of sense or wisdom rather than of brains; from its Biblical use, it still connotes, in elevated style, grave, pitying, or scathing condemnation; in colloquial usage, as a term of contempt, it is strongly offensive; simpleton (also wholly popular) implies silliness or (sometimes) unsophisticatedness; it is often used lightly as a term of indulgent contempt; as, “He said you were...a senseless, drivelng idiot” (Wycherley); “What an idiot am I, to wait here for a fellow who probably takes a delight in mortifying me” (Goldsmith); “custom’s idiot sway” (Cowper); cf. an idiotic grin; “The petty passions, the imbecile desires...daily moving her contempt” (G. Eliot); “She’s a fool to stay behind her father” (Shak.); “Fools rush in where angels fear to tread” (Pope); “They look upon persons employing their time in making verses...as simpletons easily to be deceived” (V. Knox); poor, innocent little simpleton! “The ‘Great simpleton!’...of Mr. Newman, and the ‘Thou fool!’ of the Bible, are something alike; but ‘Thou fool!’ is very grand, and ‘Great simpleton!’ is an atrocity. So too...Shakespeare’s ‘Poor venomous fool, be angry and dispatch!’ is in the grand style” (M. Arnold). ... .

Differences in idiomatic usage are oftentimes not a matter that can easily be presented by definition. Many terms in a dictionary are defined almost in the same words, though written by various editors, the only clue to difference consisting in the illustrations. The consultant is often at a loss, because he does not see that these examples may constitute the only uses of the term, or a few such uses, and are not representative of a large number of uses. It was in such cases that the method which we have called the Piozzi method was first used, but without a full understanding of its dangers and limitations. Lowes avoided this method except where he was dealing with fixed idioms. Then he safeguarded his statement with a parenthetical elimination such as “one ascends (not mounts) a mountain; one mounts (not ascends) a horse.” The sparing use of this method did not, however, lead to his ignoring the problem presented by such synonyms as are definable in almost identical terms yet are incapable of discrimination in implications and connotations. To get at his method let us examine parts of certain synonymies where his effectiveness is most apparent:

One excuses (either as a superior or as an equal) small faults, minor omissions, or neglects, esp. in social or conventional obligations; one pardons (as a superior, or by act of mercy or generosity) serious faults, crimes, or grave offenses, esp. against laws or morals; as, to excuse an unintentional oversight, an absence from a required exercise; “Excuse my glove” (Sheridan); to pardon a thief; to pardon a theft; “Apollo, pardon my great profaneness ‘gainst thine oracle” (Shak.).

Stop...applies primarily to action, or to that which is thought of as moving; cease applies also to states and conditions, or to that which is thought of as being; as, a train stops, but does not cease; the noise it makes both stops and ceases; one’s love may cease, but scarcely stop.

Fast and rapid are often used without distinction; but fast frequently applies to the moving object, whereas rapid is apt to characterize or suggest the movement itself; as, a fast horse, a fast train, boat; a rapid current, a rapid gait, rapid progress.

Hateful and odious are sometimes used with little distinction. But hateful more frequently applies to that which excites actual hatred, odious, to that which is excessively disagreeable, or which awakens repugnance; as, “Why shouldn’t we hate what is hateful in people, and scorn what is mean?” (Thackeray)... “There was something more odious to him in her friendship than her hatred” (Thackeray).

In these discriminations the original contribution of Lowes is the generalization regarding usage or application. An occasional synonymist before him had experimented with it, but no one before him succeeded. He knows how to guard the expression, never claims too much, and yet, in spite of all the difficulties involved, makes statements that are just and therefore convincing. There seems to have been no inclination on his part to overstate the case. If there must be inexactness, he preferred it on the side of understatement. “This is as much as it is safe to say” was a not infrequent comment of his.7 Much more could be said about the interesting technique developed by Lowes. Much more could be said also about other excellences and some defects which characterize his work. But when all is said and done there still remains his superiority as a discriminator, as manifested in his selection of methods according to his material. Whether his synonyms differed in implications, in connotations, or in applications or, more probably, some in one way, some in another, he was seldom at a loss.

---

7 In manuscript notes in the editorial files of G. & C. Merriam Company.
Just a word about antonyms. There is no evidence at hand to prove that Lowes was ever asked to enter antonyms in Webster's New International Dictionary. He did, however, incorporate a few (though not by that name) in his articles under the general formula of "opposed to . . ." when the difference between synonyms (usually very general ones) could be apprehended more easily by knowing the term which was the direct opposite of each. He does this several times, as at base, where base is "opposed to high-minded," vile is "opposed to pure, noble," and mean is "opposed to generous, magnanimous." It is possible to guess his definition of antonym, but no more. The antonyms in Webster's New International Dictionary, Second Edition (1934) were added by an office editor.

There is no need to go further in the history of synonymy. Further synonymists there have been, some very good, some not quite so good, and some very bad; but they have all taken sides, either with those who support the traditional definition of synonym as one of two or more words having the same essential meaning or with those who favor its extension to one of two or more words which coincide in some part of their meaning. There has been no compromise: it might even be said that the break has scarcely been noticed. Nevertheless, it is apparent that, unless there be some clarification in definitions, especially of synonym and antonym, the prevailing popular misunderstanding will increase—with what results no one can estimate. This clarification we propose to undertake in the essays that follow.

It is because we firmly believe in the values implicit in the study of synonyms, antonyms, and word-finding lists (in this book divided into analogous words and contrasted words) that this dictionary has been written. We hope, therefore, that it not only carries some steps forward the admirable work accomplished by Goodrich and Lowes but also removes some sources of confusion or perplexity which have arisen outside of their work. The old defect inherent in synonymies, the overuse of illustration without a sufficient background in differences of implications (which we have called the Piozzi method), has not entirely disappeared from more recent writing, but, at least, the snake was scotched by the publishers' preface of the 1859 edition of Webster's Dictionary. In its place has come an uncertainty in the definitions of synonym and antonym which is even more insidious. In the three essays that follow we, therefore, make clear our own position. In the first of these essays we define synonym briefly, in order to show what effect that definition has had on our choice of words to be discriminated and on the technique of discrimination. In the second we define antonym at length, for the reason that this term has never been clearly examined and that the definitions in the major dictionaries are all at variance with Smith's tentative definition and with the selections of many of his successors. In the third we explain our aims and practices with respect to the word-finding lists.

SYNONYM: ANALYSIS AND DEFINITION

The chief reason for including in this introduction an article on synonyms is not to phrase a new definition of that term. It is rather to make a protest as to the loosening of the definition within the last fifty or sixty years and to restate very clearly what we believe to be the true and generally accepted meaning. In addition we will show briefly the effect of this definition upon our method.

For approximately one hundred years in the history of English synonymy there was very little real difference of opinion as to what a synonym is or as to what words should be the material of discrimination. It is true that John Trusler discriminated "words esteemed synonymous," Mrs. Piozzi "words apparently synonymous," and Miss Whately "pseudo-synonyms." Roget, who held that discrimination was foreign to his purpose, claimed that "the investigation of the distinctions to be drawn between words apparently synonymous forms a separate branch of inquiry." Nevertheless, all four made a distinction between true or actual synonyms (that is, words identical in meaning) and the terms which they discriminated or, in the case of Roget, which were discriminable (that is, terms that are so nearly alike that they appear to be synonyms). For all practical purposes, however, the words which were discriminated were not at all different from the "words closely allied" in meaning between which, according to Crabb, it is the business of the synonymist "to mark the nice shades of distinction"; nor is there any clash with Soule's simple definition.

---

of a synonym as that which has "the same meaning as" the entry word under which it is listed "or a meaning very nearly the same."

It is also true that these synonymists did not always agree in their choice of synonyms. In part this was due to some confusion as to the limits of their scope, but mostly it is the result of conditions which still, to a degree, prevail. Some advances have been made in precision, but the truth was and is that there are too many factors entering into the selection of synonyms to make for absolute certainty or perfect accuracy in their choice. But these synonymists were not so far wrong as William Perry, who accepted Johnson's "proximate words" as synonyms and made no distinction between them in reference to sense. The failure of his Synonymous... Dictionary may be ascribed to this cause.

The error Perry made has renewed itself, though with slightly more justification. This renewal, also, is initially the result of the misinterpretation of a highly popular work, Roget's Thesaurus of English Words and Phrases, and of a belief that Roget presented two lists of terms, those that were alike (synonyms) and those that were opposed. It was to give voice to this interpretation that Charles J. Smith coined the word antonym for the opposed terms and gave to the world in 1867 his small book A Complete Collection of Synonyms and Antonyms. But because he was not following Roget in the arrangement of his material, choosing the dictionary (alphabetical) method rather than the classificatory method, he defined synonym (and antonym) in such a way that it would apply to Roget's lists (so far as they were of the same part of speech) and to his own. Synonyms are, in Smith's definition, "words which agree in expressing one or more characteristic ideas in common" (with the entered word). It is possible that he believed he was more careful in his selection than Roget. In line with his definition he gives lists of synonyms, such as that at accelerate, which are, it is true, less diverse than Roget's but which are still susceptible of criticism as synonyms. There are, for example, some that are not questionable, such as speed, quicken, and hasten, but there are others, such as promote, urge, expedite, facilitate, and dispatch, that are open to question. Accelerate means to make go faster; so do speed, hasten, and quicken. But promote, for example, stresses aid given in attaining an end and only occasionally implies to make go faster; urge throws the emphasis upon the force that impels rather than upon the result, which usually, but not always, is to make go faster; expedite stresses the removal of impediments so that a progress or process is not delayed longer than is necessary or normal and therefore usually means to make go faster than it might. But in all these three cases a making go faster may or may not be implied; if implied, this notion is subordinate to the main implication of the word. Agreement "in one or more ideas" is a poor basis for the selection of synonyms, for these may or may not form a part of the essential meaning.

As the demand grew for a large number of synonyms, even agreement in one or more characteristic ideas tended to break down. Twenty-five and more years later certain synonymists of repute were offering groups of words as synonyms of one word rather than of one another and were not restricting those words to one sense of their key term. For instance, one synonymist of this period gave as the synonyms of blot, stain mists have escaped and to tighten the method of discrimination so that it will be very clear at points where pediments so that a progress or process is not delayed longer than is necessary or normal and therefore confusing. They have no value in teaching the precise use of language: their only merit is to indicate some of words as synonyms of one word rather than of one another and were not restricting those words to one or more ideas" is a poor basis for the selection of synonyms, for these may or may not form a part of the essential meaning.

It is against a definition so loose as that favored by Smith or implied by others who went even further that this book makes a protest. In line with the tradition of the Merriam-Webster® dictionaries we believe that such a definition is destructive of all the values that have come to be recognized in synonyms. We hold that only by a clear return to something like the time-honored definition can we conserve these values and recognize a synonym when we see it. To emphasize this aim we propose in this dictionary to restate that this book makes a protest. In line with the tradition of the Merriam-Webster® dictionaries we believe that such a definition is destructive of all the values that have come to be recognized in synonyms. We hold that only by a clear return to something like the time-honored definition can we conserve these values and recognize a synonym when we see it. To emphasize this aim we propose in this dictionary to restate that definition fully and unequivocally so that none of the loopholes may be left through which some synonymists have escaped and to tighten the method of discrimination so that it will be very clear at points where even the best of synonymists have, in the past, unconsciously permitted vagueness.

A synonym, in this dictionary, will always mean one of two or more words in the English language which have the same or very nearly the same essential meaning. This is not a matter of mere likeness in meaning, for words may have some implications (ideas involved in their meaning) in common and yet not be synonymous. It is rather a likeness in denotation, which may be inadequately defined as the meaning which includes all the important implications but which is more strictly defined as the meaning or signification of a term as expressed in its definition. The denotation must include more than a summary of implications: it must indicate the part of speech and the relations of the ideas involved in a term's meaning.
Synonyms, therefore, are only such words as may be defined wholly, or almost wholly, in the same terms. Usually they are distinguished from one another by an added implication or connotation, or they may differ in their idiomatic use or in their application. They may be and usually are interchangeable within limits, but interchangeability is not the final test, since idiomatic usage is often a preventive of that. The only satisfactory test of synonyms is their agreement in denotation. This agreement is seldom so perfect as to make the words absolutely identical in meaning, but it is always so clear that the two or more words which are synonyms can be defined in the same terms up to a certain point.

Consequently, the statement of this common denotation is of the greatest importance. In the discriminating articles in this dictionary it is, as a general rule, presented in the first sentence, but sometimes when there is need of a preliminary statement it is put in the second sentence. For example, at nice, the common denotation of the words to be discriminated (nice, dainty, fastidious, finicky, finicking, finical, particular, fussy, squamish, persnickety, pernickety) is given as “exacting or displaying exacting standards (as in selection, judgment, or workmanship)”; at object (where object, protest, remonstrate, expostulate, kick are discriminated) it is “to oppose something (as a course, a procedure, a policy, or a project), especially by making known one’s arguments against it”; at delusion (where delusion, illusion, hallucination, mirage are discriminated) it is “something which is believed to be or is accepted as being true or real but which is actually false or unreal.” Each of these sentences is so worded that the part of speech of the words discriminated is made clear. For example, the wording is in the form of a definition of an adjective where the words discriminated are adjectives, in the form of a definition of a verb where the words discriminated are verbs. Some of these synonyms have other senses than the one here given, but in each such meaning the word has other synonyms and another common denotation. A distinct attempt, it may be said here, has been made to select synonyms according to their range of meaning. It has not always been possible to do so, since, occasionally, the more general word has no synonyms except more specific words (compare let in the list: let, allow, permit, suffer, leave). As a rule, however, a division between words of wide range and words of narrow range of meaning has been made, because it permits a more definite denotation for the narrower terms and makes for closer agreement and fewer differences. It is for this reason that we have separated the general terms for a political or legal agreement (agreement, accord, understanding) from those that are very explicit (contract, bargain, compact, pact, treaty, etc.), and have separated the general terms large, big, great from terms which specify unusual size (huge, vast, immense, enormous, etc.) and from terms which imply size and impressiveness (grand, magnificent, imposing, stately, etc.). But the difference between groups of synonyms is not always dependent on generality: it often implies a different emphasis or a different combination of implications. There have been many times when it was a serious question whether to add a word as a synonym to one group or to another, the arguments on both sides being of equal cogency. In such cases (for example, hellish and fiendish) the decision has usually depended on many factors, such as basic rather than derived meaning and the fact that, if certain words were treated separately, terms which are synonyms of one but not of the other could be added. Occasionally when a shared meaning makes a word a logical candidate for two synonymy groups but usage, connotation, or implication set the two aspects distinctly apart it has been included in two groups. For many reasons the problem of selecting synonyms has not been an easy one, but we have always tried to base our judgment upon evidence that was not affected by any personal prejudices or predilections.

Not all the words discriminated in this dictionary are synonyms. A few articles discuss a group of words that are sometimes wrongly taken as synonyms because they are confused or their actual meanings are misunderstood or because they once had one or more meanings which made them synonymous. In articles discussing such words the reason for their not being synonyms, whatever it may be, is stated clearly and unambiguously in the first or second sentence of the article. We have added these groups not merely because we believe them useful but because we believe that they come rightly within the province of the discriminator.

The method of discrimination is not invariable, for every set of synonyms presents its own problems. But, in general, the points of distinction are in: (1) implications—here, mostly minor ideas involved in the meaning of the word; (2) connotations—the ideas which color the word’s meaning and are the product of various influences, such as etymology, language of origin, and historical and literary association; (3) applications—the restrictions in a word’s use as prescribed by idiom or in accordance with the nature of the other words with which it may be associated, as when an adverb may be used to modify only certain kinds of verbs or when a verb may take only certain kinds of nouns as its subject or its object. Not all of the words discriminated in a single article differ in only one of these ways, however; some may differ in implications, some in connotations, some in applications, and some in more than one way. For no method adopted by the discriminator should be so artificial as to foster merely theoretical distinctions. The distinctions drawn should be real distinctions based on the evidence of recorded use—and it is such evidence, we cannot too strongly emphasize, that has guided the editors of this dictionary and has determined the distinctions set forth in its discriminating articles.
ANTONYM: ANALYSIS AND DEFINITION

There are probably few words more generally used with less understanding of their meaning than the word antonym. True, all the dictionaries define it, but often in such terms that the definition may be interpreted to include radically different conceptions. Is an antonym theoretically only one word or, at the most, one of two or three words which can be opposed to another word in a definite sense or is it any one of several words which may be opposed to it or to a group of synonymous terms? Probably because the latter conception is the easier one it has gained widespread acceptance, but still the dictionary definitions incline to back up the opinion of those who think of an antonym in the abstract as something more specialized and nearer to the former conception.

No one will dispute the right of a person to coin a term that fills a definite need or to give to that term the meaning he desires, though one may question whether the meaning assigned accords with the term's etymology, as in the case of antonym. For C. J. Smith who, in his ...Synonyms and Antonyms (1867), introduced this term (which, in his own phrasing, "he has ventured, not to coin, but to reissue") adopted it primarily because of its analogy to synonym and knew that only by considerable stretching could the meaning he proposed for it be made to approach the meaning of what he thought of as its Greek original. Despite his recognition of this fact, the term seemed to Smith preferable to counterterm, though he acknowledged that some persons might still prefer the latter. As for definition, he related synonym and antonym. "Words," he wrote, "which agree in expressing one or more characteristic ideas in common [that is, with a given term] has regarded as Synonyms, those which negative one or more such ideas he has called Antonyms."

Therefore, no one is likely to dispute the right of a later investigator to examine anew the meaning of a coined word questionably grounded and vaguely defined that has become established in the language. In fact, there is not only the right but a duty on the part of such an investigator when, as in the case of antonym, he finds that there is a great difference between the theory, as manifested in the definition, and the practice, as manifested in selection. There will always be strict constructionists and loose constructionists but, in this case at least, the difference is more apparent than real, for many of the latter have been forced into this position by the practical difficulties confronting them in the selection of antonyms, rather than by indifference to the concept involved.

What we propose to do here, then, is to examine the word antonym, to determine the concept it involves, and to state its definition in as clear terms as possible. When we find a term like this used frequently with such qualifying words as exact and true (the "exact antonym" of this word; the "true antonym"), we must suspect an attempt on the part of men to approximate an ideal.

Modern unabridged dictionaries, without exception, define antonym with comparative strictness. It is "a word of opposite meaning" (Webster's New International Dictionary, Second Edition\(^9\)), "a term which is the opposite or antithesis of another, a counter-term" (Oxford English Dictionary), "a word directly opposed to another in meaning; a counterterm: the opposite of synonym" (Funk and Wagnalls New Standard Dictionary), "a counterterm; an opposite; an antithetical word: the opposite of synonym" (Century Dictionary), and "a word that is an opposite in meaning of a particular word" (New Century Dictionary). In all of these definitions, the burden is on the word opposite or opposed; and, it should be added, all differences of opinion as to the criteria for determining antonyms are due to uncertainty as to what is meant by opposite or opposed. The physical connotations of these words always stand in the way of a strict definition of their abstract senses. How complex is the concept of opposition may be seen from the following analysis of its physical connotations.

Opposition is a relation involved when two things are so placed that: (1) they may be connected by a straight line (straightness as distinguished from obliquity being determined by external conditions such as the lines of a room) drawn from one to another (as, opposite windows); (2) they lie at either end of an axis, diameter, or the like (as, opposite points on the earth's surface); (3) they are contiguous but reversed in position (as, the opposite halves of the globe); (4) they face each other, the distance apart being of no consequence (as, partners stand opposite); (5) they depart or diverge from each other (as, to go their opposite ways); (6) they work against each other (as, opposite forces); (7) they cannot exist together, because they reverse or undo each other (as, the opposite processes of growth and decay); (8) they represent the obverse and the reverse (as, the opposite faces of a coin).

What this relation is both materially and immaterially and in all instances is, frankly, hard to determine. It is not invariably the confrontation of one with another, for "persons who go their opposite ways" and "the opposite processes of growth and decay," for example, do not respond to this test; it is hardly complete divergence or difference, for "the opposite halves of the globe" and "the opposite faces of a coin" represent difference only in one or more particulars, otherwise remaining fundamentally alike; it is still less antagonism or irreconcilability, for there is no hint of either in the opposite position of partners in a dance or in opposite windows. Although some of these ideas exist as implications distinguishing meanings of the word opposite, they do not yield any fundamental meaning which is involved in every sense. One can go no further than to say that opposite represents a setting of one thing against another so as to sharpen their differences or to reveal their divergencies.

\(^9\) Same in Webster's Third New International.

It will be necessary, therefore, to get at what is meant by “opposite meaning” in another way. First, let us take the words listed as antonyms in the dictionaries and manuals of synonyms and antonyms and see into what classifications they fall. When possible, we will offer a classification known to logic, but when not possible, we will form our own, naming it in unambiguous terms.

A large number of words listed as antonyms fall into two well-known logical categories, those of contradictory terms (or contradictories) and contrary terms (or contraries).

1. Contradictory terms are so opposed to each other that they are mutually exclusive and admit no possibility between them. If either is true, the other must be false; if either is false, the other must be true. Examples:—A thing is either perfect or imperfect: no matter how slight or how extensive the imperfection, the fact remains that the thing cannot be called perfect if any flaw, blemish, or defect exists. If a person is asked for his opinion, he may agree with that of others, or he may disagree, or differ: it is unimportant whether the disagreement is radical or superficial or the difference concerns a major or a very minor point; he cannot be said to agree.

2. Contrary terms are so opposed in meaning that the language admits no greater divergence. They are the true “diametrical opposites.” But they must be of or must apply to things of the same genus or fundamental kind. Thus, white and black represent the extremes in color, the former, as popularly understood, implying the absorption of all colors and the latter implying the privation of every vestige of color. Prodigal and parsimonious represent extremes in expenditure (chiefly of money), but prodigal implies excessive extravagance and parsimonious excessive frugality. Superiority and inferiority represent extremes judged by a standard of what is good. Between these extremes represented by each of these pairs of examples, there are many words which may more truly describe or designate the person or thing in question.

Other classes are the following:

3. Many words are listed as antonyms that normally appear in pairs. Some are what the logician calls relative terms, pairs of words which indicate such a relationship that one of them cannot be used without suggesting the other; as, parent and child, husband and wife, predecessor and successor, employee and employer. Others are complementary terms involving, usually, a reciprocal relation or the incompleteness of one unless the other follows; as, question and answer, attack and defend, stimulus and response.

4. An important class of words sometimes listed in antonyms may be called for want of a better name reverse terms: these comprise adjectives or adverbs which signify a quality or verbs or nouns which signify an act or state that reverse or undo the quality, act, or state of the other. Although they are neither contradictory nor contrary terms, they present a clear opposition. Their addition is usually justified in this way: if the antonym of admit is reject, what shall we do with eject which implies not the negative but the reverse of admit?: if the antonym of destructive is harmless, must we ignore constructive, which goes further and implies either the reverse or the undoing of destructive? Many words of the reverse type are often equal in value; sometimes they are even stronger than the first.

5. There is still a class of words listed as antonyms, which are neither contradictories nor contraries nor reverse terms, which do, however, present a sharp contrast—for example, such pairs as rich and destitute, dry and moist, and keep and abandon. This is one of the most perplexing of classes and one that appears very frequently in antonym lists. Such words may be designated contrasted terms. We shall return to them later.

6. The last class of so-called antonyms is very inclusive. Words in this class might be called “loosely contrasted terms,” since when they are presented side by side with the word of which they are given as antonyms, they never fully clash but show a difference in only a small part of their meaning (as, abstruse and superficial, frank and hypocritical, vigilant and careless). For the sake of uniformity, however, we will call them incompatibles, for they usually cannot both at the same time be said of or applied to the same person or thing. Frank means open and free in one’s talk and uninhibited by any restraints, such as fear, whereas hypocritical means presenting an appearance of being other and usually better than one is; abstruse means so remote from the range of ordinary human experience that there is difficulty in comprehension, while superficial, in this limited sense, means not penetrating below the surface or exterior so as to unveil what lies behind. So put, there is not the slightest sign of a clash in meaning, yet the difference which confuses, though slight, is there, for the person who is called frank gives the appearance of sincerity and the person who is called hypocritical is adjudged insincere. Similarly, a work that is spoken of as abstruse differs from a work that is spoken of as superficial in that the one is profound, the other shallow. It is sincere and insincere (not frank and hypocritical), and profound and shallow (not abstruse and superficial) which clash. in meaning. Since this class is based upon a mistake in analysis, it will be eliminated from the discussion.

If, then, we were to make a definition of antonym according to the type of word which dictionaries and manuals select as such, it would be phrased something like this: "An antonym is a word that so differs from another word that it represents its contradictory, its contrary, its relative (or counterpart), its complement, its reverse, its contrasted term, or its incompatible in some way or degree." That this is too inclusive a definition is obvious. No one, it seems fair to state, would define in terms as broad as this the word antonym as it is understood in concept; yet everyone who has made it his business to select antonyms is aware of the dangers involved and of the difficulty in avoiding the questionable types. An easygoing attitude is not chiefly responsible for this wide diversity. The English language was clearly not made to measure: it was not devised to show likenesses or differences. The discovery both of words which are closely alike and of words which are sharply different is, for the most part, the product of the need for expressing ideas or of understanding expressed ideas. No mechanical shaping power sets words right before men begin to use them.

It must be remembered that the task of selecting antonyms is imposed upon a living structure, in a desire to know its resources and so far as possible bend it to our needs. The selection not only of antonyms but also of synonyms is similar, at least in aim, to the scientist's classification of animals into orders, families, genera, and species. Both help us in the understanding and mastery of the material involved. When an old system breaks down in its study of the animal world, a new one must arise. None is perfect, but each is a help in bringing within the range of human understanding something that would otherwise be too vast for study and beyond the range of experience of any one man. So we proceed to study synonyms, words which closely resemble each other not in particular ways but in the very heart of their meaning, that we may know them better and use them more wisely, more precisely, and more effectively.

We should like to do the same thing with antonyms. It is good, we feel, to know the exact antonym of a word, for not only will it give us a firmer grasp of the meaning of the word to which it is opposed but inversely, of itself. Is there any test that will help us in discovering such words, that we may be enabled not only to speak and to write more expressively but to have a richer understanding of the pages of men who have known how to express themselves? There is a word in Smith's definition of antonym which may give us the clue, "those [words] which negative one or more such ideas he has called Antonyms." In fact, even today, some persons argue that an antonym is "the exact negative" of a word. It is not clear just what this is intended to mean. Taken quite literally and expressed in the phraseology of logic an "exact negative" is a word's contradictory term. But this is too narrow, as even those who vigorously support this definition must agree. By the terms of its definition, a word's contradictory must be the equivalent in meaning of its not-compound. Otherwise the two terms (a word and its contradictory) could not be mutually exclusive. Let us see this in tabular form.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>word</th>
<th>not-compound</th>
<th>contradictory</th>
</tr> </thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>colored</td>
<td>not-colored</td>
<td>colorless</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>perfect</td>
<td>not-perfect</td>
<td>imperfect</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>agree</td>
<td>not-agree</td>
<td>disagree or differ</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

So put, it is obvious that there is no disagreement between the not-term and contradictory: in this case the negative and the opposite agree. The trouble comes, however, with the naming of the antonym. As a matter of practical policy, if we accept the "exact negative" as the antonym, we must restrict ourselves to the very few contradictories which have an independent form, and to the very few in-, un-, dis- and similar compounds which are obviously contradictory terms. But if we wish completeness, we must supply antonyms for the vast majority of English words by constructing a not-form. That might do in logic, but it would not do when greater knowledge of the English language exists as our clear aim. Moreover, we feel the lack of the clash that gives so much savor to the antonym.

On the other hand, it is clear that the other terms listed as antonyms do not equal the "exact negative." The logical contradictory of white (not-white) may include any chromatic color or any other achromatic color, yet the contrary, or diametrical opposite, is only black: the logical contradictory of parsimonious (not-parsimonious) may include many terms, such as liberal, extravagant, prodigal, yet the contrary, or diametrical opposite, is prodigal; not-liking may include both indifference and aversion, but no one will question that aversion is the contrary of liking. Even more obvious is the difference between the logical contradictory and the relative or the complementary term, for in this case they neither represent nor include the same thing. Not-attack, for example, does not equal defend; not-husband is not the equivalent of wife; and not-stimulus does not in any way approach response.

More important than relative and complementary terms (most of which may be doubted, with good reason, to be the antonyms of each other) are the terms which take a reverse as the opposite. While the not-term in these cases often equals or includes a word that is called the term's antonym, it is never equivalent with what may be called the "reverse antonym." For instance, not-admit equals reject, but it does not cover the reverse of admit, which may be either eject or expel; not-abandon may include keep, but it cannot be interpreted to cover the reverse of abandon, which is reclaim.

One class of words listed as antonyms remains for our consideration, contrasted terms. As has been said, this class covers a large number of words the listing of which as antonyms puzzles rather than enlightens the reader. It is easy to prove that they cannot be "exact negatives." For example, keep, which is often given as the antonym of abandon, is not its contradictory, for the logical contradictory (not-keep) also includes sell, lose, give away, and many other words; rich is not the contradictory of destitute, for the logical contradictory not-rich includes needy, indigent, poor, comfortable, and many other terms as well as destitute. But this does not get at the heart of the matter and display what is wrong with these terms. Obviously also, they are not contraries, for they do not represent extremes of divergence as do parsimonious and prodigal or white and black. What is the matter with them? In answering this question, we will find the clue to the solution of our problem.

Superficially viewed, these contrasted terms differ sharply in some part, but not in all parts, of their meaning. They do not clash full force. One term covers more ground than the other, or one term is more explicit in its implications than the other. The logician would say that they equal each other neither in extension nor in intension. Put more simply, they differ (1) in their range of application or applicability, one being general, the other specific, or one being more inclusive or less inclusive than the other, and (2) in their depth of meaning—that is, in the number and quality of implications contained in the terms. It is clear that keep is more general than abandon and that to equal it in generality and at the same time to negate (or, much better, to negate) its implications, relinquish would be a better choice: it is clear that abandon has more specific implications than are found in keep, such as surrender of possession or control and relegation to the mercy of others, and that a word which exactly equates these implications in number and quality yet, at the same time, negates them must be the true antonym. There seems to be no term that fills these demands except a "reverse term," one that undoes what has been accomplished by the act of abandoning. That term is reclaim in its definite sense of regaining control or possession of something and giving it full care and attention. Rich is too broad and general to pair with the very explicit destitute. There are many implications in the latter which have no clear parallel in rich. Only poor could be opposed to rich in breadth of extension and in vagueness of intension, because rich suggests more possessions than one needs, and poor suggests fewer possessions than one requires and so negates in full the meaning of the other. On the other hand, opulent could be opposed to destitute in narrowness of extension and in explicitness of intension, for destitute suggests the miserable condition where one is deprived of all that is needed for bare existence and opulent the felicitous condition where everything that is desired is possessed in abundance. Though rich and poor come close together (the dividing line being marked by such a word as comfortable) and destitute and opulent are very far apart, being in fact "diametrical opposites," each represents the negation of the other.

In this way wet, because it equals dry in range of meaning and negates dry in number and quality of implications, is the antonym of dry, whereas damp and moist are merely contrasted terms to dry; alleviate for the same reasons is the antonym of aggravate, and mitigate, assuage, and allay are nothing more than contrasted terms; elevation in the sense of promotion is the antonym of degradation in the sense of demotion, for it contains implications not found in preferment or advancement.

In selecting antonyms, therefore, one should be on guard to match in range of meaning the word from which one starts and to negate every one of its implications so that the opposition is complete. Otherwise the opposing words do not clash full force, one word covering more or less ground than the other or exhibiting differences not apparent in the other. It is for this reason that in this dictionary we have preferred to give contrasted words as distinct from antonyms, not denying or ignoring the value of the former in word study but emphasizing the unique, disciplinary value of the latter.

It is for a similar reason that we have ruled out relative and complementary terms as antonyms of each other. Pairs of words of this class are, it is true, usually matched in extension, but one of the pair seldom negates the intension of the other. Rather they suggest union, convergence, or completion when taken together. Husband and wife, employer and employee are different elements in a combination, which we may call opposites not in the sense of negating each other but of fulfilling each other. The same is true of stimulus and response, of question and answer. Without the former the latter could not be: without the latter the former remains incomplete. An occasional instance, however, remains, such as attack and defend. Since these come as close to reverse terms as they do to complementary terms, they may be treated as the former.

The foregoing analysis would seem to leave us with three classes as possible antonyms: contradictory, contrary, and reverse terms. It is true that, in general, all antonyms may be fitted into each of these classes. But, as the first two classes are the creation of logicians, who are dealing with symbols rather than with words, they are somewhat too rigid or too artificial for our use. Whether good and bad, right and wrong, true and false are contradictions or contraries might be disputed: it is wiser, for our purposes, not to raise this issue. They still remain antonyms according to our tests. So do a large number of more specific terms, which are equated in range of meaning and are negated in their specific implications, such as extol and decry, aboveboard and underhand, constant and fitful (as applied to things), adulation and abuse. The designation "reverse term" may also be dropped now that its purpose in exposition has been served. There are only three tests which should be applied to a word selected as the antonym of another word, and these are stated in the following definition:

An antonym is a word so opposed in meaning to another word, its equal in breadth or range of application, that it negates or nullifies every single one of its implications.

It is this definition that has guided the selection of antonyms in this dictionary. Not every entry, of course, exhibits an antonym, for there are many words that have no antonym. In some few cases, moreover, we have been unable to supply any word that meets the three tests of the above definition or have been obliged to resort to an approximation. In such cases, we always welcome intelligent criticism that may enable us to supply these gaps. But, for the most part, where an antonym is listed, the editors rely upon its self-justification to the consultant who will apply these tests.

THE TREATMENT OF ANTONYMS

A few words should be added to clarify the practice of this dictionary in regard to antonyms. They form an important part of its makeup; but, as they do not require much space, their significance may be overlooked. It must be emphasized that each antonym is directly related to its entry word in the special sense in which that word is discriminated. It bears not a loose relation but a very close one to that word, and even though it may also be the antonym of some other word (especially of a synonym of the entry word) it must be judged only by the relation it bears to the entry word with which it is associated. Sometimes, however, the antonym fits that word only when it is used in a narrowed sense or in a narrow application. This limitation is indicated in a parenthetical phrase with words in italics. Thus, at abet, we have as antonym "deter (with a personal subject)" and at actuate, "deter (with a motive or fear as the subject)." A simpler instance is the antonym at brilliant, in the sense of bright, which reads "subdued (of light, color)." At other times, the entry word is so inclusive that it takes more than one antonym to cover it. Then some indication is given of the differing collocations in which each antonym appears. Thus, check, as a synonym of restrain, has for its antonyms "accelerate (of speed): advance (of movements, plans, hopes): release (of feelings, energies)." A cross reference (introduced by "see") following an antonym is merely an indication of the sense in which it is used. Thus, close, as a synonym of silent and reticent, takes open as its antonym, but the sense in which open is used here is made clear by the cross reference to frank, where the word open is discriminated.

ANALOGOUS AND CONTRASTED WORDS

The essential part of this dictionary consists of the synonyms and their discriminations and of the antonyms of the words thus discriminated. With these, judged from the point of view of one who is interested in the clarification of the differences in meaning between synonyms and in finding their direct opposites, it is a complete work. Yet for those who use this book as a word finder or as a vocabulary builder, there might be something lacking if it went no further. It is in view of the needs of such consultants that we have added lists of analogous words and of contrasted words.

Some of the analogous words or terms closely related in meaning merit the name of "near synonyms," so close are they to the vocabulary entry: some contain much the same implications as the entry word, but the implication that they emphasize is not the same as that expressed in the common denotation of the discriminated group of which the entry word forms a part. Some are more general than the entry word, some more specific; some come together in only a part of their meaning. But in some important particulars they are all like the word under which they are listed.

So, too, with contrasted words, or terms sharply differing in meaning from the entry word. Some are close synonyms of its antonym, but many are opposed to it only in part of their meaning. Through these lists the consultant who is seeking a word may find exactly the one he needs or the student may discover a useful means of extending his vocabulary.

These aims are made practical and easy of attainment by an additional aid which no work on synonyms has hitherto given the consultant. Terms listed as analogous words and contrasted words are arranged in groups, all of which are discriminated in this book. Most of the words are themselves directly discriminated, cross reference to the entry where the article is given being made by means of an asterisk or a reference introduced by "see": a few that are not themselves directly discriminated are closely dependent on words that are, as by being their derivatives or inflected forms, or by being their negatives, and are thereby covered by the article to which a clear cross reference is made. Thus, at amenity (in the sense of courtesy) the list of analogous words contains: (1) civility, politeness, courteousness, plus a cross reference to the article at civil, where civil, polite, courteous are discriminated; (2) graciousness, affability, cordiality, geniality, sociability plus a cross reference to gracious, where gracious, affable, cordial, genial, sociable are discriminated. Similarly, among the contrasted words at banal are stimulating or stimulative, provoking or provocative, exciting, piquing, which, though not discriminated themselves, are fully covered by the article at provoke, where their corresponding verbs are treated. Through the cross reference, then the consultant can find the meaning of every term in the word lists, and can sharpen his sense of their differences.

It is perhaps unnecessary to point out that the selection of words in each of these lists is not determined by the group of synonyms but by the one word at whose entry the list appears. As a result, each vocabulary entry is complete in itself: it has not only its synonyms and antonym or antonyms, but also analogous words which are closely related to it and contrasted words which are sharply opposed to it. It is thus treated as a unit, and all essential information is gathered about it.
The left-hand column below consists of entries or, usually, parts of entries selected from the main vocabulary to illustrate the principal devices used in this dictionary. The right-hand column provides explanations of these devices.

acclimated woment, customary, habitual, *usual

acoustic, acoustical *auditory

adamant, adamantine obdurate, inexorable, *inflexible adept [n] *expert, wizard, artiste, artist, virtuoso

adept [adj] *proficient, skilled, skillful, expert, masterly

affection 1 *feeling, emotion, passion, sentiment

affection disease, disorder, condition, ailment, malady, complaint, distemper, syndrome

aggravate 1 heighten, *intensify, enhance

2 exacerbate, *irritate, provoke, rile, peeve, nettle

alarm n 1 [Alarm, tocsin, alert] agree in meaning a signal that serves as a call to action or to be on guard especially in a time of imminent danger. (Alarm) is used of any signal that arouses to activity not only troops, but emergency workers (as firemen, policemen); it suggests a sound such as a cry, a pealing of a bell, a beating of drums, or a siren (sound a fire alarm) (the dog's barking gave the alarm); (Tocsin) may be either an alarm sounded by bells usually from the belfry of a church or, more often, the bells sounding an alarm (the loud tocsin tolled their last alarm —Campbell) but is used figuratively for any sort of warning of danger. (Alert) a military term for a signal to be on guard and ready for expected enemy action, is often used for any warning of danger (sirens sounded an air-raid alert) (the Weather Bureau issued a tornado alert in early afternoon . . . . The alert was cancelled after 5 P.M.—Springfield Union)

ardor [fervor, enthusiasm, zeal, *passion]

articulation 1 integration, concatenation (see under INTEGRATE vb)

2 *joint, suture

aspination reflection, *animadversion, stricture

(Ana) belief, lampoon, pasquinate, squib, skit) abuse, vituperation, invective, obloquy* detraction, backbiting, calumny, slander, scandal

(Con) praise, laudation, extolling, eulogizing or eulogy (see corresponding verbs at PRAISE: applause, acclaim, acclamation, plaudit) commendation, complimenting or compliment (see corresponding verbs at COMMEND)

assortment see corresponding adjective assorted at MISCELLANEOUS

ant jumble, hodgepodge

assuage alleviate, relieve, mitigate, lighten, allay ant exacerbat; Intensify austere *severe, stern, ascetic

ant luscious (of fruits); warm, ardent (of persons)

(feelings); exuberant (of style, quality)

---

1 The vocabulary entry (usually a single word; occasionally a phrase) is printed in boldface type.

2 Vocabulary entries which are alphabetically close to each other are sometimes listed together.

3 The part of speech is indicated (by means of the commonly accepted abbreviations, printed in italic type) where it is desirable or necessary to do so.

4 Words identical in spelling and part of speech, but of different etymology are given separate entry.

5 Two or more meanings (or senses) of a single vocabulary entry are clearly separated and each meaning is numbered with a boldface numeral.

6 The words to be discriminated in an article are listed in boldface type at the beginning of the article.

Each word is repeated in boldface type at the point in the article where it is individually discussed.

The meanings or applications of the words discriminated are profusely illustrated by means of familiar examples (often idiomatic or characteristic phrases) or by quotations from named authors or sources. The word illustrated is printed in italic type.

The source of a quotation is also printed in italics. A list of sources quoted is given on pp. 887 ff.

7 Where there is no discriminating article, the first item under an entry is a list of its synonyms or near synonyms. These synonyms are discriminated from one another in an article in this dictionary.

The place where this article is to be found is indicated by an asterisk prefixed to one of the words in the list or by a reference introduced by the word "see."

8 Each vocabulary entry is provided (where the facts require or permit) with "finding lists" of two kinds: Analogous Words introduced by the label Ana and Contrasted Words introduced by Con.

Words given in these finding lists are divided into groups. Each group consists of words discriminated (or related to those discriminated) in a single article.

The groups are separated from one another by boldface colons. Words within each group are separated by commas. The place of entry of the article discussing each group is indicated by an asterisk or a "see" reference (see §7).

9 The label Ant introduces the antonym or antonyms of a vocabulary entry.

In the antonym lists commas are used between words that are synonyms of one another, and boldface colons are used to separate words that do not have such a relationship.

While many of the words listed as antonyms are themselves entered as vocabulary entries and are therefore discussed in the articles in this dictionary, the selection of antonyms has not been restricted to such words. For this reason the antonym lists do not as a rule contain references to discriminating articles.

10 In the lists of Antonyms italic notations in parentheses indicate the limited use or application in which the preceding word is to be taken.
abandon

Abandon, desert, forsake mean to quit absolutely. Abandon implies surrender of control or possession often with the implication that the thing abandoned is left to the mercy of someone or something else. The ghost of grandeur that lingers between the walls of abandoned haciendas in New Mexico—Mary Austin—leans toward such an interpretation. Abandon implies ostracism by or exclusion from a social group for a serious offense against its code. <I don't count on my appearing your friend too openly . . . remember always that I'm a reprobate old clergyman—Hugh Walpole> Profligate and dissolve convey little if any suggestion of divine or social condemnation but both imply complete moral breakdown and self-indulgence to such an extreme that all standards of morality and prudence are disregarded. One who is dissolve has completely thrown off all moral and prudential restraints on the indulgence of his appetites <see them spend—Rose Macaulay>.

abandoned, profligate, dissolute fundamentally mean utterly depraved. Abandoned and profligate were originally applied to sinners and to their acts. One who is abandoned by his complete surrender to a life of sin seems spiritually lost or morally irreclaimable <I disdain . . . to paint her as she is, cruel, abandoned, glorying in her shame!—Cowper> One who is profligate is abandoned and therefore rejected by God or by his fellows; profligate implies ostracism by or exclusion from a social group for a serious offense against its code. <rescue the Empire from being gambled away by incapable or profligate aristocrats—Froude> One who is dissolve has completely thrown off all moral and prudential restraints on the indulgence of his appetites <see them spending and squandering and being irresponsible and dissolve and not caring twopence for the way two thirds of the world live—Rose Macaulay>.

Abandoned, profligate, dissolute fundamentally mean utterly depraved. Abandoned and profligate were originally applied to sinners and to their acts. One who is abandoned by his complete surrender to a life of sin seems spiritually lost or morally irreclaimable <I disdain . . . to paint her as she is, cruel, abandoned, glorying in her shame!—Cowper> One who is profligate is abandoned and therefore rejected by God or by his fellows; profligate implies ostracism by or exclusion from a social group for a serious offense against its code. <rescue the Empire from being gambled away by incapable or profligate aristocrats—Froude> One who is dissolve has completely thrown off all moral and prudential restraints on the indulgence of his appetites <see them spending and squandering and being irresponsible and dissolve and not caring twopence for the way two thirds of the world live—Rose Macaulay>.

Ana deplaved, debauched, perverted, debased (see under DEBASE); degenerate, corrupt (see VICIOUS); wanton, lewd, lascivious, libidinous, lecherous (see LICENTIOUS).

Ant redeemed, regenerate —Con saved, rescued, reclaimed, delivered (see RESCUE).

abase

*keep, retain: treasure, prize (see APPRECIATE); maintain, assert, defend: inhibit, bridle, curb (see RESTRAIN).

abandon n. unconstraint, spontaneity

Ana license, *freedom, liberty: relaxation, laxity or laxness, looseness (see LOOSE).

Ant self-restraint —Con repression, suppression (see SUPPRESS): self-possession, aplomb (see CONFIDENCE): poise (see BALANCE, TACT).

abandoned, profligate, dissolute fundamentally mean utterly depraved. Abandoned and profligate were originally applied to sinners and to their acts. One who is abandoned by his complete surrender to a life of sin seems spiritually lost or morally irreclaimable <I disdain . . . to paint her as she is, cruel, abandoned, glorying in her shame!—Cowper> One who is profligate is abandoned and therefore rejected by God or by his fellows; profligate implies ostracism by or exclusion from a social group for a serious offense against its code. <rescue the Empire from being gambled away by incapable or profligate aristocrats—Froude> One who is dissolve has completely thrown off all moral and prudential restraints on the indulgence of his appetites <see them spending and squandering and being irresponsible and dissolve and not caring twopence for the way two thirds of the world live—Rose Macaulay>.

Ana depraved, debauched, perverted, debased (see under DEBASE); degenerate, corrupt (see VICIOUS); wanton, lewd, lascivious, libidinous, lecherous (see LICENTIOUS).

Ant redeemed, regenerate —Con saved, rescued, reclaimed, delivered (see RESCUE).

abase, demean, debase, degrade, humble, humiliate are synonymous when they denote to lower in one's own estimation or in that of others. Abase suggests loss of dignity or prestige without necessarily implying permanency in that loss. When used reflexively it connotes

DISCRIMINATED SYNONYMS WITH ANTONYMS

AND ANALOGOUS AND CONTRASTED WORDS

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group. Ana analogous words Ant antonyms. Con contrasted words. See also explanatory notes facing page 1.
humility, abjectness, or a sense of one's inferiority; in this reflexive use humble is often used interchangeably with who-soever exalted himself shall be abased [DV and RV humbled]; and he that humbledth himself shall be exalted —Lk 14:11. Demean implies less humility than abase but is stronger in its implications of loss of dignity or social standing (it was . . . Mrs. Sedley's opinion that her son would demean himself by a marriage with an artist's daughter—Thackeray) Debase emphasizes deterioration in value or quality; it is more often used of things the currency but when used of persons it commonly connotes weakening of moral standards or of the moral character of officetholders debase themselves by accepting bribes (the struggle with Hannibal had debased the Roman temper—Buchan) Degrade stresses a lowering in plane rather than in rank and often conveys a strong implication of the shamefulness of the condition to which someone or something has been reduced (that she and Charlotte, two spent old women, should be . . . talking to each other of hatred, seemed unimaginably hideous and degrading—Wharton) Often (especially in degradation) it connotes actual degeneracy or corruption (it was by that unscrupulous person's liquor her husband had been degraded—Hardy) Humble is frequently used in place of degrade in the sense of demote when the ignominy of the reduction in rank is emphasized (we are pleased . . . to see him taken down and humbled—Spectator) When it is employed without any implication of demotion, it often suggests a salutary increase of humility or the realization of one's own littleness or impotence (it was one of those illnesses from which we turn away our eyes, shuddering and humbled—Deland) Occasionally it implies a lowering in station (in such a man . . . a race illustrious for heroic deeds, humbled, but not degraded, may expire—Wordsworth) Humiliate, once a close synonym of humble, now comes closer to mortify, for it stresses chagrin and shame (when we ask to be humbled, we must not recoil from being humiliated—Rossetti) An cringe, truckle, cower, *fawn, toady: grovel (see WALLOW): abash, discomfit, discount, *embarrass: mortify (see corresponding adjective at ASHAMED) Ant exalt: extol (especially oneself) —Con magnify, aggravandise (see EXALT): elevate, *lift, raise: laud, acclaim, *praise

abash

1 *abolish, extinguish, annihilate

An end, terminate (see CLOSE): *annul, void, abrogate: cancel, obliterate (see ERASE): *nullify, invalidate

Ant perpetuate —Con *continue, last, persist, abide 2 reduce, diminish, *decrease, lessen

An retard, slow, slacken, *delay: *moderate, temper: mitigate, lighten, alleviate (see RELIEVE)

Ant augment: accelerate (pace, speed): intensify (hopes, fears, a fever) —Con *increase, multiply, enlarge: aggrate, heighten, enhance (see INTENSIFY): *speed, quicken, hurry

3 abate, subside, wane, ebb all mean to die down in force or intensity; all imply previous approach to a high point and present movement or decline towards a vanishing point. Abate, however, stresses the idea of progressive diminution in intensity while subside suggests falling to a low level and cessation of turbulence or agitation (the wind is abating; the waves are subsiding) (the revolutionary spirit has abated—Grandgent) (the child's quick temper subsided into listlessness under the fierce Italian heat—Repabduct, kidnapp are sometimes employed without distinction as denoting to carry off (a person) surreptitiously for an illegal purpose. In general use kidnapp is the more specific term because it connotes seizure and detention for ransom. In law, however, the reverse is true, for the verbs acquire their meanings from the rigid technical definitions of kidnapping and abduction. Kidnapping is the legal term of wider application, implying that a person has been seized by violence or fraud and detained against his will or that of his legal guardian. Abduction is the carrying off of a girl (usually one below the legal age of consent), either against her will or with her consent, for marriage or seduction. Consequently in law kidnapping and abduction and kidnap and abduct can be used interchangeably only when the person carried off is a girl below a fixed age, or when seizure and detention are against her will and the motive is marriage or rape.

Ana seduce, entice, *lure, inveigle Con *rescue, ransom, redeem, deliver aberrant atypical, *abnormal Ana divergent, *different, disparate: *irregular, anomalous, unnatural: *exceptional: singular, peculiar, odd, *strange, eccentric Ant true (to a type) —Con *usual, willed, customary: normal, *regular, typical, natural aberration 1 *deviation, deflection Ana abnormality, aberrancy (see ABNORMAL): *error, blunder, mistake, slip, lapse: *fault, failing: anomaly (see PARADOX)

Ant conformity: regularity —Con normality (see REGULAR): norm, *average, mean: agreement, correspondence, accord (see corresponding verbs at AGREE)

2 aberration, derangement, alienation, as here compared, denote mental disorder. Aberration while usable to designate any form of mental unsoundness typically denotes a minor or transitory disorder insufficient to constitute insanity. Derangement applies to any functional mental disturbance whether permanent or not. Alienation implies an estrangement from a normal or usual mental or emotional state (1 I had been two or three nights without sleep, and I had fallen into the state of alienation that fatigue brings on—Webber) and in forensic use specifically denotes a becoming or being insane.

Ana *insanity, lunacy, mania, dementia: *delusion, hallucination, illusion: *mania, delirium, hysteria, frenzy Ant soundness (of mind)

abet incite, foment, instigate Ana aid, assist, *help: back, *support, uphold: cooperate, concur (see UNITE): forward, further, promote (see ADVANCE)
Ant deter (with a personal subject) —Con *frustrate, thwart, foil, balk, circumvent abettor accessory, accomplice, *confederate, conspirator Abeyant dormant, quiescent, *latent, potential

Abhor abominate, loathe, detest, *hate Ana *despise, contemn, scorn: shun, avoid, eschew (see ESCAPE)
Ant admire (persons, their qualities, acts): enjoy (things which are a matter of taste) —Con *like, love, relish, dote: cherish, treasure, prize, value (see APPRECIATE); court, woo, solicit (see INVITE): esteem, respect, regard (see under REGARD n)

Abhorrence detestation, loathing, abomination, hatred, hate (see under HATE vb)
Ana distaste, repugnance, repellency (see corresponding adjectives at REPUGNANT): horror, dismay (see FEAR)
Ant admiration: enjoyment —Con esteem, *regard, respect: liking, relish (see LIKE vb): love, affection, *attachment

Abhorrent 1 abominable, *hateful, detestable, odious Ana *contemptible, despicable, scurvy: *execrable, damnable Ant admirable: enjoyable —Con grateful, agreeable, *pleasant, pleasing, gratifying, welcome: *delightful, delectable

2 *repugnant, repellant, obnoxious, distasteful, invidious Ana *anti-pathetic: uncongenial, unsympathetic (see INCONSONANT): foreign, alien (see EXTRINSIC) Ant congenial —Con attractive, alluring, captivating (see under ATTRACT): tempting, enticing, seductive (see corresponding verbs at LURE)

Abide 1 *stay, wait, remain, tarry, linger Ana dwell, *reside, live, sojourn, lodge: *stay, cleave, cling, adhere Ant depart —Con *go, leave, quit: *move, remove, shift

2 endure, last, persist, *continue Ana *stay, remain, linger; subsist, exist, live (see BE) Ant pass vi —Con flee, fly, *escape: *fled

3 endure, *bear, suffer, tolerate, stand, brook Ana submit, *yield, bow, defer: acquiesce, accede, consent (see ASSENT): accept, *receive, take Con withstand, oppose, combat, *resist: *decline, refuse, spurn: shun, avoid, evade, elude (see ESCAPE)

Ability capacity, capability are often confused in use. Ability primarily denotes the quality or character of being able (as to do or perform) and is applied chiefly to human beings. Capacity in its corresponding sense means the power or more especially the potentiality of receiving, holding, absorbing, or accomplishing something expressed or understood and is said of persons or things. Thus one may speak of a child's ability to learn but not of the hall's ability to seat 2000 persons; on the other hand, a child's mental capacity and the hall has a seating capacity of 2000 are both acceptable. In general, ability suggests actual power, whether native or acquired, whether exercised or not (once more he had shown his ability to handle a delicate situation to the credit of his government and himself—W. C. Ford) Capacity on the other hand stresses receptiveness, or in reference to man's intellectual, moral, or spiritual nature, more explicitly, responsiveness, susceptibility, or aptitude. Capacity therefore suggests potential, as distinguished from actual or, especially, manifest power. Thus, ability to weep, the ability to work, the ability to pay, are not respectively identical in meaning with the capacity for tears, the capacity for work, the capacity for payment. The phrases of the first group mean that one can weep (because his tear glands are normal), one can work (because strong or trained), one can pay (because he has the money): those of the second group indicate, in the first case, a special sensitiveness to what is pathetic; in the second case, a readiness to work as hard as is necessary on any or every

Ana analogous words Ant antonyms Con contrasted words See also explanatory notes facing page 1
abjure, renounce, forswear, recant, retract are synonymous

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.
abolish, annihilate, extinguish, abate share the meaning abolish

Abnormal frequently connotes strangeness or excess sometimes, as in abnormality, deformity or monstrosity power when wielded by abnormal energy is the most serious of facts—Henry Adams—In psychology, as applied to persons, abnormal often suggests poorer than normal performance or poorer than normal adjustment to the conditions of life and is equivalent to subnormal; in general use better than normal powers are often implied envision the future in the light of what he remembers of the past. His powers of recollection . . . are abnormal—R. L. Taylor—Typical stresses divergence upward or downward from the established norm of some group, kind, or stage (as of development)

atypical reactions stealing is to be looked upon as atypical behavior . . . not the customarily accepted type of response that we expect from children—G. E. Gardner—Aberrant seldom loses its literal implication of wandering or straying; in the sciences, where it is applied to departures from type, it carries none of the extra connotations of abnormal and is less restricted in its reference than atypical (aberrant forms of a botanical species) In general use it often suggests moral deviation such a choice must argue aberrant senses, or degenerate blood—Kingsley—

Ana *irregular, unnatural, anomalous: unusual, un-wonted, uncustomary, uncustomed (see affirmative adjectives at usual): monstrous, prodigious

Ant normal —Con *regular, typical, natural: ordinary,

*common, familiar: usual, wonted, customary abode dwelling, residence, domicile, *habitation, home, house

abolish, annihilate, extinguish, abate share the meaning to make nonexistent. Abolish seldom refers to purely physical objects but rather to such things as are the outgrowth of law, custom, human conception, or the conditions of human existence attempts to abolish slavery proposals to abolish the income tax no plan will be acceptable unless it abolishes poverty—Shaw—An nihilate distinctively implies destruction so complete that everything involved is wiped out of existence and cannot be revived in any form realization that for the first time the homes and cities of the United States itself can be annihilated by enemy attack—Crawley—Extinguish or its related noun extinction is often interchangeable with annihilate (or annihilation) but it stresses the power of the cause to overwhelm and suppress rather than the finality of the result religion of their own which was thoroughly and painfully exterminated by the Inquisition—T. S. Eliot—

Abate in general use is far weaker in meaning than the foregoing terms and typically denotes a gradual decrease or dwindling rather than an immediate termination

the wind abated after sundown misfortune had abated the grandiosity of the Roman temper—Buchan—

In law abolish keeps close to its general sense of to make nonexistent; annihilate is sometimes used as an emphatic substitute for abolish the appointment cannot be annihilated—John Marshall—Extinguish implies destruction of a right or obligation by some act or decision which nullifies it or makes it void. Abate implies termination especially by a legal decision abate an nuisance

abate an action or writ summoning me for failing to abate a smoky chimney—Wodehouse—

Ana extirpate, eradicate, wipe, *exterminate: obliterate, efface, blot out, expunge (see erase): negate, *nullify, annul, abrogate

Ant establish —Con *found, institute: *bear, produce, turn out; create, discover, *invent abominable detestable, *hateful, odious, abhorrent

Ana analogous words

Ant antonyms

Con contrasted words

See also explanatory notes facing page 1
sion of the fetus occurring between the twelfth and twenty-eighth weeks and before the fetus is capable of living independently.

Abortive fruitless, vain, futile, bootless
Aborted immature, unformed, unripe, undeveloped (see form-less); ineffectual, ineffective, injurious: unfortunate, unlucky (see affirmative adjectives at lucky)

Ant consummated — Con completed, concluded (see close vb); finished, accomplished, consummate fell, fail: effectual, effective, efficacious

Abound overflow, teem, swarm
Abound predominate, preponderate (see corresponding adjectives at dominant)

Ant fall, fail short — Con want, lack, need, require: scant, scrimp, scrim (see corresponding adjectives at MEAGER)

About, concerning, regarding, respecting are synonymous prepositions when they take an object that names something which is the subject of talk, thought, or interest.

About is usually interchangeable with any of the others without marked loss of meaning, but it alone may follow its object as well as precede it (talk about many things)
There is nothing to complain about
Concerning is more meaningful because it often retains its verbal implications of affecting and influencing (make laws concerning public welfare)

Regarding and respecting suggest little more than about; however regarding is especially appropriate when its object names the goal or center of attention or thought (they avoided all discussion regarding the scandal)

Respecting is felicitously employed when selectiveness or specification is to be implied (he had nothing to say respecting Spain)
There's no outwitting you respecting him—Browning

Above, over are synonymous prepositions when they indicate elevation in position. They seldom imply contact between that which is higher and that which is lower; as a rule they allow an interval. Over and above differ in that over usually implies verticality while above may or may not. Thus the entire second story of a building is above but only a small part of it is directly over one who stands on the ground floor. Between the extended senses analogous relations hold. Over and above agree in the idea of superiority but differ in the immediacy of reference. Thus, the rank of ambassador is above that of minister but the British ambassador is not over the Portuguese minister; he stands in that relation to his own subordinates only. Similarly above and over indicate a relationship of excess (his strength is above the average)
We now have over half the amount required
We shall not be tempted above our power to resist
Above only, however, implies transcendence (this above all, to thine own self be true—Shak)

Ant below

Aboveboard straightforward, forthright Aboveboard open, frank, candid: honest, upright, scrupulous; fair, impartial, just: ingenuous, unsophisticated, artless (see natural)

Ant underhand, underhanded — Con furtive, covert, surreptitious; secret, clandestine: dishonest, deceitful, mendacious: crooked, devious

Absurd impossible, irrational, fictitious, nonsensical, unworkable
Absurd is generally applied to what is highly unlikely to occur, or to what is too fantastic to be true (the pious delusion that we can unlearn our animal nature)

Abridgment short, curtail, abbreviate, retrench Abridgment condense, contract, compress, shrink; cut, slash; scrape, scratch, grate, grind, rasp; limit, restrict: reduce, diminish, decrease (expand): lengthen, elongate, prolong, protract (see extend): enlarge, augment, increase of all faults that all men follow—Shak.> (a man so various that he seemed to be not one, but all mankind's epitome—Dryden) Brief is usually narrowly applied in legal use to a concise statement of a client's case made out for the instruction of counsel in a trial (called specifically trial brief) or to a statement of the heads or points of a legal argument submitted to the court (brief of argument). Synopsis and conspectus imply the giving of the salient points of a treatise or subject so that it may be quickly comprehended. Synopsis, however, often suggests an outline or series of headings and conspectus a coherent account that gives a bird's-eye view (provide in advance a synopsis of the lectures) (the book will serve as a conspectus of Chinese history) Ana digest, précis, *compendium, sketch, syllabus Ant expansion —Con paraphrase (see TRANSLATION); *development abrogate 1 *annul, vacate, quash, void Ana *abolish, extinguish, abate Ant institute (by enacting, decreeing) —Con *ratify, confirm; establish, *found 2 *nullify, annul, negate, invalidate Ana *abolish, annihilate, extinguish: *destroy, demolish: *ruin, wreck; cancel, obliterate, blot out (see ERASE) Ant establish, fix (a right, a character, a quality, a custom) —Con settle (see SETTLE); uphold, *support abrupt 1 *steep, precipitous, sheer Ana perpendicular, *vertical, plumb Ant sloping —Con *level, flat, plain, plane, even, smooth: slanting, inclined (see SLANT vb)
2 sudden, *precipitate, headlong, impetuous, hasty Ana quick, speedy (see FAST); hurried, hastened (see SPEED); unceremonious (see ceremonious under CEREMONIAL); curt, brusque (see BLUFF) Ant deliberate, leisurely —Con *slow, dilatory, laggard: easy, *comfortable, restful abscess, boil, furuncle, carbuncle, pimple, pustule all denote a localized swollen area of infection containing pus. Abcess is the most general term, applying to a collection of pus surrounded by inflammation whether in the skin or in the substance of a part or organ and whether discharging through an opening or fistula or being gradually reabsorbed (<an abscess at the root of a tooth) <a line of small abscesses where his belt had chafed him) Boil and furuncle both mean a swollen painful nodule in the skin caused by bacteria that enter skin glands or hair follicles and set up a purulent infection which terminates in the formation of pus. Pimple or pustule is a small superficial pus-containing elevation of the skin that usually subsides without rupture when treated correctly; more specifically pimple is used of the typical lesions characterizing acne while pustule implies no specific syndrome.
abscend decamp, flee, fly, *escape Ana depart, leave, quit, go Ant give oneself up —Con stay, wait, remain, abide: confess, *acknowledge abscence *lack, want,dearth, defect, privation Ana *need, necessity, exigency: deficiency (see corresponding adjective at DEFICIENT); destitution (see corresponding adjective at VOID); void, vacuum (see HOLE) Ant presence —Con abundance, copiousness, plenty (see corresponding adjectives at PLENTIFUL) absent adj preoccupied, *abstracted, absentminded,

Ana analogous words Ant antonyms Con contrasted words See also explanatory notes facing page 1
absolution  *pardoned, amnesty

Ana  forgiveness, remission  (see corresponding verbs at EXCUSE)

Ant  condemnation —Con  censure, reprobation, reprehension  (see corresponding verbs at CRITICIZE)

Absolve  exonerate, acquit, *exculpate, vindicate

Ana  pardon, forgive, remit  (see EXCUSE); release, *free, discharge

Ant  hold (to a promise, an obligation); charge (with a sin, the blame, the responsibility) —Con  blame  (see CRITICIZE); *sentence, condemn, doom; *punish, discipline, chasten

Absorb  1 Absorb, imbibe, assimilate can all mean to take (something) in so as to become imbued with it or to make it a part of one’s being. The original meaning of absorb, to swallow up (both literally and figuratively), has been retained in spite of the development of a later and more common sense, to soak up (both literally and figuratively). When the former idea is stressed, absorb implies the loss of identity of that taken in 〈the trust absorbed three small corporations〉 〈in England . . . the aristocracy are subordinate to the middle class, which is gradually absorbing and destroying them—T. S. Eliot〉 When soaking up is implied, absorb often suggests enrichment of the recipient 〈the roots of plants absorb moisture〉 〈an adult reader with trained habits of attention and concentration will absorb the contents of a book with . . . speed and retentiveness—Eliot〉 In its literal sense imbibe usually implies drinking or inhaling 〈imbibe intoxicating liquors〉 〈we did not imbibe an undiluted air—N. E. Nelson〉 However imbibe, like absorb, often connotes soaking up 〈the ground imbibes or absorbs moisture〉 In its figurative sense imbibe, like absorb, implies a process of learning, but it often carries the suggestions that the process has been unconscious and that the effect has been noticeable or profound 〈the pupils imbibe no respect for intellectual values at home, and find none among their schoolfellows—Inge〉 〈twelve years he wandered, imbibing wisdom from every source, sitting at every shrine, tasting every creed—Duran〉 Assimilate implies not only absorption but also the conversion of what is absorbed into the substance of the assimilating body. In its narrow sense it applies especially to physiological processes 〈the body assimilates digested food into its protoplasm〉 In its figurative use it often suggests lasting enrichment without loss of integrity or unity 〈poets . . . who assimilate a number of influences and construct an original speech from them—Day Lewis〉 Sometimes it stresses the process of fusion and consequent loss of identity 〈faces incapable of assimilation〉

Ana  soak, saturate, impregnate  receive, takes incorporare, embody (see IDENTIFY)

Ant  exude, give out —Con  eject, expel; throw, cast

Ana  fix, *fasten; rivet, *secure; immerse, submerge  (see DIP)

Ant  dissipate  (time, attention, energies) —Con  scatter, disperse, dispel  deplete, drain, exhaust

Absorb  *intent, engrossed, rapt

Ana  immersed  (see DIP); riveted  (see SECURE vb); fixed, fastened  (see FASTEN)

Ant  distracted —Con  absent, absentminded, distraught, abstracted: wandering, straying, rambling (see WANDER)

Absorbing  *interesting, engrossing, intriguing

Ant  irksome

Abstain  *refrain, forbear

Ana  *forsworn, eschew, abnegate; *decline, refuse, spurn, reject; desist (see STOP)

Ant  indulge —Con  pamper  (see INDULGE)*; sate, satiety, clov, gorge, glut; gratify, regale (see PLEASE) abstemious see under abstemiousness at TEMPERANCE

Abstemiousness  abstinance, *temperance, sobriety, continence

Ana  self-denial, self-abnegation  (see RENUNCIATION); asceticism, austerity  (see corresponding adjectives at SEVERE)

Ant  glutony —Con  greed, rapacity  (see CUPIDITY); epicureism (compare EPICURE)

Abstinence  *temperance, continence, abstemiousness, sobriety

Ana  forbearance, refrainment  (see corresponding verbs at REFRAIN); forgoing, eschewal, abnegation  (see corresponding verbs at FORGO); renunciation, self-denial, self-abnegation

Ant  self-indulgence —Con  greediness, covetousness, graspingness, acquisitiveness  (see corresponding adjectives at COVETOUS); satisfying, contenting  (see SATISFY); gorging, satiating, surfeiting (see SATIATE)

abstract  adj  Abstract, ideal, transcendent, transcendentental  are closely analogous rather than synonymous terms. The difference in meaning between abstract and ideal is not apparent when they are applied to things which are admirable in actuality as well as in idea, as a virtue or a desirable quality or attribute 〈abstract (or ideal) justice〉 〈ideal (or abstract) morality〉 When, however, they are applied to the name of a category known through actually existing representatives, they reveal their fundamental differences in meaning; for abstract implies the formulation of the idea by abstraction, a logical process in which the mind selects the characters common to every known member of a species or every known instance of a quality and builds up a conception (technically, a concept) which describes no one actually existing thing or instance, but covers all things of the same kind or marked by the given quality 〈man in the abstract〉 〈to shed tears over abstract justice and generosity, beauty, etc., and never to know these qualities when you meet them—James〉 〈poetic theory is almost invariably an abstraction from poetic practice—Day Lewis〉 Ideal may or may not imply abstraction; very often it suggests the exercise of imagination or the adding and the elimination of characteristics as the mind seeks a conception of a thing in its perfection 〈ideal man〉 〈Plato, in the construction of his ideal republic, is thinking . . . of the symmetry and beauty of the whole—Dickinson〉 In general, therefore, abstract connotes apartness from reality and often lack of specific application to actual things 〈algebra . . . is more abstract than geometry—Russell〉 On the other hand, ideal very frequently connotes superiority to reality or, less often, fancifulness, and, at times, untruth 〈that lofty order of minds which pant after the ideal . . . [whose] emotions are of too exquisite a character to find fit objects among their everyday fellowmen—George Eliot〉 Transcendent and transcendentental, though often used as equivalents of ideal, actually imply existence beyond experience and lack of correspondence to reality as known through the senses. Thus in careful use transcendent (or transcendentental) beauty is not the perfection of the beauty that is known, but a super-sensual beauty which has no parallel in experience and which cannot be apprehended through any likeness in actuality 〈the idea that is transcendent . . . exalted above the world . . . is yielding to the idea of God as immanent in his creation—Allen〉 In Kant’s philosophy they are distinguished. What is transcendental is both beyond experience and beyond human knowledge; what is transcendenttal is beyond experience yet knowable, because the mind possesses knowledge not derived from experience but inherent in its own constitution and essential to its understanding of experience. Thus space and time, in

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.
abstract

Kant's philosophy, are transcendent ideas.

An universal, general, generic: specific (see SPECIAL): *ultimate, absolute, categorical

Ant concrete —Con practical (see PRACTICABLE): *material, physical, corporeal, objective, phenomenal

abstract n brief, synopsis, epitome, *abridgment, con-} spectus

Ana sketch, précis, aperçu, *compendium, digest

Ant amplification —Con expansion, dilation (see corresponding verbs at EXPAND): enlargement (see corresponding verb at INCREASE)

abstract vb •detach, disengage absurd silly, preposterous, *foolish copious, ample, *plentiful, plenteous

vb abuse

—Con practical (see PRACTICABLE): •mal-} treatment, maltreat, ill-treat, usually imply a fault or an evil motive in the agent, such as meanness, culpable ignorance, or spitefulness

many more patients die from being mistreated for consumption than from consumption itself—Lytton (the meter, though a well-known English critic has maltreated it of late, is a very fine one—Saintsbury) (have small compunction in ill-treating animals, because they have no souls—Reppier)

Outrage implies abuse so violent or extreme as to exceed all bounds (an act that outraged nature and produced the inevitable tragedy of the play—Auchincloss)

Ana hurt, injure, harm, damage, impair, mar, spoil; *wrong, persecute, oppress: pervert, corrupt, *debase, debauch, vitiate

Ant respect, honor —Con esteem (see corresponding noun at REGARD): *revere, venerate, reverence: *commend, applaud, compliment: cherish, treasure, prize (see APPRECIATE)

abuse n Abuse, vituperation, invective, obloquy, scurrility, billingsgate can all denote vehemently expressed condemnation or disapproval. Abuse, the most general term, implies the anger of the speaker and stresses the offensiveness of the language (the extended vocabulary of barrack-room abuse—Kipling) *(those thunderous com-

barrack-room <those thunderous com-

implies the anger of the speaker and stresses the offen-

siveness of the language <the extended vocabulary of

abuse, billingsgate)*

Ant respect, honor —Con esteem (see corresponding noun at REGARD): *revere, venerate, reverence: *commend, applaud, compliment: cherish, treasure, prize (see APPRECIATE)

abuse n Abuse, vituperation, invective, obloquy, scurrility, billingsgate can all denote vehemently expressed condemnation or disapproval. Abuse, the most general term, implies the anger of the speaker and stresses the offensiveness of the language (the extended vocabulary of barrack-room abuse—Kipling) *(those thunderous com-

barrack-room <those thunderous com-

implies the anger of the speaker and stresses the offen-

siveness of the language <the extended vocabulary of

abuse, billingsgate)*

Ant respect, honor —Con esteem (see corresponding noun at REGARD): *revere, venerate, reverence: *commend, applaud, compliment: cherish, treasure, prize (see APPRECIATE)

abuse n Abuse, vituperation, invective, obloquy, scurrility, billingsgate can all denote vehemently expressed condemnation or disapproval. Abuse, the most general term, implies the anger of the speaker and stresses the offensiveness of the language (the extended vocabulary of barrack-room abuse—Kipling) *(those thunderous com-

barrack-room <those thunderous com-

implies the anger of the speaker and stresses the offen-

siveness of the language <the extended vocabulary of

abuse, billingsgate)*

Ant respect, honor —Con esteem (see corresponding noun at REGARD): *revere, venerate, reverence: *commend, applaud, compliment: cherish, treasure, prize (see APPRECIATE)

abuse n Abuse, vituperation, invective, obloquy, scurrility, billingsgate can all denote vehemently expressed condemnation or disapproval. Abuse, the most general term, implies the anger of the speaker and stresses the offensiveness of the language (the extended vocabulary of barrack-room abuse—Kipling) *(those thunderous com-

barrack-room <those thunderous com-

implies the anger of the speaker and stresses the offen-

siveness of the language <the extended vocabulary of

abuse, billingsgate)*

Ant respect, honor —Con esteem (see corresponding noun at REGARD): *revere, venerate, reverence: *commend, applaud, compliment: cherish, treasure, prize (see APPRECIATE)

abuse n Abuse, vituperation, invective, obloquy, scurrility, billingsgate can all denote vehemently expressed condemnation or disapproval. Abuse, the most general term, implies the anger of the speaker and stresses the offensiveness of the language (the extended vocabulary of barrack-room abuse—Kipling) *(those thunderous com-

barrack-room <those thunderous com-

implies the anger of the speaker and stresses the offen-

siveness of the language <the extended vocabulary of

abuse, billingsgate)*

Ant respect, honor —Con esteem (see corresponding noun at REGARD): *revere, venerate, reverence: *commend, applaud, compliment: cherish, treasure, prize (see APPRECIATE)

abuse n Abuse, vituperation, invective, obloquy, scurrility, billingsgate can all denote vehemently expressed condemnation or disapproval. Abuse, the most general term, implies the anger of the speaker and stresses the offensiveness of the language (the extended vocabulary of barrack-room abuse—Kipling) *(those thunderous com-

barrack-room <those thunderous com-

implies the anger of the speaker and stresses the offen-

siveness of the language <the extended vocabulary of

abuse, billingsgate)*

Ant respect, honor —Con esteem (see corresponding noun at REGARD): *revere, venerate, reverence: *commend, applaud, compliment: cherish, treasure, prize (see APPRECIATE)
abusive, opprobrious, vituperative, contumelious, scurrilous apply chiefly to language or utterances and to persons as they employ such language: the words agree in meaning coarse, insulting, and contemptuous in agree in meaning coarse, insulting, and contemptuous in character or utterance. Abusive means little more than this <abusive language> <an abusive master> <abusive satire> All the other terms carry specific and distinctive implications. Opprobrious suggests the imputation of disgraceful actions or of shameful conduct: it implies not only abusiveness but also severe, often unjust, condemnation (they desecrate the shrine in every conceivable way and level the most opprobrious language at the goddess herself—Frazer) Vituperative implies indulgence in a stream of insulting language especially in attacking an opponent (the vituperative controversialists of the seventeenth century) to restrain this employment of vituperative language—J. S. Mill Contumelious adds to opprobrious the implications of insolence and extreme disrespect and usually connotes the bitter humiliation of its victim (with scoffs and scorns and contumelious taunts—Shak.) I . . . expose a chain of causes and effects that Roosevelt himself, if he were alive, would denounce as grossly contumelious to his native purity of spirit—and perhaps in all honesty—Mencken) Scurrilous often approaches vituperative in suggesting attack and abuse but it always imples gross, vulgar, often obscenely ribald language (they never fail to attack the passengers with all kinds of scurrilous, abusive, and indecent terms—Fielding) may plaster his clean name with scurrilous rhymes!—Tennyson) Ana insulting, affronting, offending, outrageous (see offend): aspersing, maligning, vilifying (see malign) Ant complimentary: respectful —Con flattering (see corresponding noun at compliment) panevgetic, eulogistic (see corresponding nouns at encomium) praising, lauding, extolling, acclaiming (see praise vb) abutment pier, buttress abutting contiguous, adjoining, adjoining, adjacent, tangent, conterminous, juxtaposed Ana close, near, nigh, nearby: joining, connecting (see join) nearest, next: impinging (compare impingement under impact) Con detached, disengaged (see detach) disconnected, disjoined, disassociated (see affirmative verbs at join) abyss *gulf, chasm, abyss abyssmal *deep, profound Ana illimitable, *infinite Con *superficial, shallow abyss *gulf, chasm, abyss abyssal pelagic, oceanic, marine (see aquatic) academic 1 scholastic, *pedantic, bookish Ana *dry, arid: erudite, scholarly, *learned Con unlettered, uneducated, untutored, unlearned, illiterate, *ignorant 2 *theoretical, speculative accede acquiesce, *assent, consent, agree, agree, subscribe Ana concur, cooperate (see unite): yield, submit, defer, relent: allow, permit, *let Ant demur —Con *decline, refuse, reject, spurn: shy, stickle, stick, strain, balk (see demur): *object, protest, kick: oppose: resist, withstand accelerate *speed, quicken, hurry, hasten, precipitate Ana forward, further, *advance, promote: drive, impel (see move) Ant decelerate: retard —Con *delay, slow, slacken: impede, obstruct, block, *hinder: *hamper, clog accent n 1 stress, accentuation, *emphasis Ana beat, pulse, throb, pulsation (see under pulsate): *rhythm, cadence, meter 2 intonation, *inflection Ana pronunciation, enunciation, articulation (see corresponding verbs at articulate) accentuation accent, stress, *emphasis Ana *rhythm, cadence, meter: pronunciation, enunciation, articulation (see corresponding verbs at articulate) Ant inaccentuation —Con evenness, steadiness, uniformity (see corresponding adjectives at steady) accept *receive, admit, take Ana *adopt, embrace, espouse: acquiesce, *assent, agree, subscribe Ant reject —Con *decline, refuse, repudiate, spurn: disavow, disown, disacknowledge (see affirmative verbs at acknowledge) *deny, contradict, negative: ignore, disregard (see neglect) acceptance, acceptance have both at one time or another carried the meanings: the act or fact of accepting or the state of being accepted. Present usage, however, restricts their denotations. Acceptance only is used to denote the act of accepting (a blind acceptance of authority—Inge) or the state of one who accepts something, especially something inevitable or inescapable (all settled back into a sad sort of acceptance of the situation—Deland) Both acceptance and acquiescence may be used to denote the state of being accepted or especially of being approved or believed <metrical forms are conventional, and therefore rest . . . on acceptance—Lowes> Acceptation tends, however, to confine itself to denoting the sense in which a word or expression is generally received <not . . . a cultivated man in the ordinary acceptance of the words—Eliot> acceptance 1 *meaning, sense, signification, significance, import 2 *acceptance access 1 ingress, *entrance, entrée, entry Ana approaching or approach, nearing (see approach vb): admittance, admission: *way, route, passage: *door, portal, gate, gateway Ant outlet —Con departure, withdrawal, retirement (see corresponding verbs at go): retreat, recession (see corresponding verbs at recede) 2 accession, attack, *fit, paroxysm, spasm, convulsion Ana onset, onslaught, assault (see attack): seizure, clutch, taking (see corresponding verbs at take): twinge, *pain, stitch, pang, throe accession 1 *addition, accretion, increment Ant discard 2 access, attack, *fit, paroxysm, spasm, convulsion Ana see those at access 2 accessory n 1 appurtenance, adjunct, *appendage Ana concomitant, *accompaniment: *addition, accretion, increment 2 accomplice, abettor, *confederate, conspirator Ant principal accessory adj contributory, *auxiliary, subsidiary, adjuvant, ancillary, subservient Ana secondary, collateral, tributary, *subordinate: concomitant, concurrent, coincident (see contemporaneous): incidental, adventitious (see accidental) Ant constituent, integral: principal (in law) —Con *inherent, intrinsic, constitutional, ingrained: essential, indispensable, requisite, *needful, necessary: fundamental, vital, cardinal (see essential) accident 1 *quality, character, attribute, property

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.
accidental, casual, fortuitous, contingent, incidental, adventitious

Accidental, casual, fortuitous, contingent, incidental, adventitious

Accidental

Casual, fortuitous, contingent

Incidental

Adventitious

Accompaniment

Accompaniment

Analogous words: accidental, casual, fortuitous, contingent, incidental, adventitious

Antonyms: intended, designed, planned, essential

Contrasted words: contingent, dependent, conditional

See also explanatory notes facing page 1
accomplishment attainment, *acquirement, acquisition Ana *art, skill, craft: proficiency, adeptness, expertise (see corresponding adjectives at PROFICIENT) accord v/1 *agree, harmonize, correspond, tally, conform, square, jibe Ana concur, coincide (see AGREE): blend, fuse, merge, coalesce (see MIX); cohere, adhere (see STICK) Ant conflict —Con clash, collide, jar (see corresponding nouns at IMPACT): *differ, disagree; contrast, *compare 2 *grant, vouchsafe, concede, award Ana deign, condescend (see STOOP); bestow, present, confer, *give Ant withhold —Con *deny, gainsay; refuse (see DECLINE): hold, hold back, detain, reserve (see KEEP) account n 1 concord, consonance, *harmony Ana agreement, acquiescence, consent (see corresponding verbs at ASSENT): union, solidarity, *unity; sympathy, affinity, *attraction Ant dissension, strife: antagonism —Con *discord, conflict, difference, variance, contention: antipathy, animosity, hostility (see ENMITY)
2 *agreement, understanding Ana pact, compact, treaty, entente, concordat (see CONTRACT) accordingly so, consequently, *therefore, hence, then accost *address, greet, hail, salute Ana *speak, talk, converse: affront, *offend, insult Con avoid, shun, elude, evade, *escape: ignore, slight, overlook (see NEGLECT) account n 1 *use, service, advantage, profit, avail Ana benefit (see corresponding verb at BENEFIT): usefulness, utility (see USE); *worth, value Con futility, vanity, fruitlessness, bootlessness (see corresponding adjectives at FUTILE): unimportance, inconsequence, insignificance (see affirmative nouns at IMPORTANCE) 2 Account, report, chronicle, version, story denote a statement of actual events or conditions or of purported occurrences or conditions. An account is an oral or written, detailed, often firsthand statement (Lord Mountfalcon asked for an account of her passage over to the island: receiving distressingly full particulars—Meredith) A report is an account, usually of something witnessed or investigated, given to an employer or a superior (spies send in their reports in cipher) (the secretary gave a verbatim report of the conference) A chronicle is a detailed and extended account or report of events in their order of occurrence (for 'tis a chronicle of day by day, not a relation for a breakfast—Shak.) A version or story is a statement of purported facts. Version always and story often imply contrast with another statement of the same events and, usually, difference in details. But whereas version commonly implies difference of detail or of interpretation owing to limitations in each point of view, story often implies actual or suspected falsification (the Democratic and the Republican version of the state of the nation) (the witness had been primed to tell a different story) (he returned after a week's absence with a story of having been held captive by kidnappers) account vb 1 *consider, deem, regard, reckon Ana regard, esteem (see under REGARD n); rate, appraise, evaluate, assess, *estimate Con underrate, underestimate, undervalue (see base words at ESTIMATE); disregard, dis esteem (see affirmative verbs under REGARD n) 2 *explain, justify, rationalize Ana *answer: expound, elucidate, interpret (see EXPLAIN)

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.
accountable  *responsible, answerable, amenable, liable Ant unaccountable — Con *absolute, autocratic, despotic, tyrannical, arbitrary: irresponsible, inamenable, unanswerable (see affirmative adjectives at RESPONSIBLE) accountant auditor, *bookkeeper accouter equip, arm, outfit, *furnish, appoint Ana array, attire, *clothe, dress: deck, *adorn, embellish, decorate Con *strip, divest, dismantle accredit 1 certify, *approve, endorse, sanction Ana recommend, *commend: vouch, attest, *certify Con reject, repudiate (see DECLINE): *disapprove, depurate 2 commission, *authorize, license Ana credit, charge, assign, *ascribe, attribute, impute accrue, *responsible, answerable, amenable, liable: accountable, *accountable Ana adjunct, *appendage: adhesion, cohesion (see corresponding verbs at STICK): increase, augmentation, enlargement (see corresponding verbs at INCREASE) Con diminution, dwindling, decrease (see corresponding verbs at DECREASE) accumulate, amass, hoard imply in both literal and figurative usage a bringing together so as to make a store or great quantity. Accumulate implies a piling up by a series of increases rather than by a single complete act; it is applicable to almost anything that may increase in amount (unused books accumulate dust) (he will ever be gathering knowledge, accumulating experience, as he can—Gerould) (true poetry, however simple it may appear on the surface, accumulates meaning every time it is read—Day Lewis) Amass refers usually but not always to things that are regarded as valuable, such as money or treasures (amass a fortune) It frequently implies more imposing results than accumulate (scientific knowledge, painstakingly amassed by many devotees over an extended period of human history—Geldard) Hoard always implies storing up and frequently concealment of what is stored (squirrels hoard nuts for the winter months) Frequently hoard implies greed and, when used of money, avarice a miser is one who hoards gold (hoarding money is not a safe way of saving—Shaw)
Ana *gather, collect: *heap, pile, stack Ant dissipate — Con *scatter, disperse, dispel: diminish, lessen, *decrease: *distribute, dispense, deal, dole accumulative *cumulative, summative, additive Ana aggregative, conglomerative (see corresponding nouns at AGGREGATE): multiplicative, augmentative (see corresponding verbs at INCREASE) Con dissipating, dispelling, scattering (see SCATTER): disintegrating, crumbling, decomposing (see DECAY vb)
accurate *correct, exact, precise, nice, right Ana true, veracious (see corresponding nouns at TRUTH): impeccable, errorless, flawless, faultless: punctilious, meticulous, *careful Ant inaccurate — Con *careless, heedless, inadvertent: *slipshod, slowness: fallacious (see under FALACY) accursed damnable, cursed, *execrable Ana abominable, odious, *hateful, abhorrent, detestable: revolting, repulsive, loathsome, *offensive, repugnant Ant blessed — Con admirable, estimable (see corresponding nouns at REGARD): *holy, sacred, divine: *honorable, honorary accuse, charge, incriminate, indict, impeach, arraign denote in common to declare a person guilty of a fault or offense. Accuse is typically immediate and personal and often suggests directness or sharpness of imputation or censure; charge frequently connotes seriousness in the offense and formality in the declaration; one may accuse a bystander of trying to pick one's pocket (an accusation which may become a formal charge before a magistrate); one accuses a man of cheating (an offense which one personally resents); one charges a man with cheating (an infraction of the rules of a game). Incriminable may mean to charge with crime or serious offense (your friend thinks he can clear Ken by incriminating poor Wayne—G. V. Williams) (careful study . . . has failed to show that any of the cultivable bacteria can be incriminated as the cause of colds Andrews) but in current use it more often means to involve or inculpate in crime (incriminating evidence) (the answer need not reveal a crime in order to be incriminating. It is enough if it . . . leads to proof of an illegal act—Gressman) Indict adds to charge in legal context the implications of a formal consideration of the evidence by a grand jury or in general use by someone acting in the role of jury and of a decision that the accused person should be called to trial or to an accounting (the jury refused to indict the men accused of arson) (indict those citizens whose easy consciences condone such wrongdoing—Roosevelt) Impeach implies legally a charge of malfeasance in office formally brought against a public officer by a branch of the government constitutionally authorized to bring such charges (the House of Representatives impeached President Andrew Johnson of high crimes and misdemeanors) In nontechnical language impeach or its noun impeachment implies a direct charge which demands an answer (any intelligent and noble-minded American can with reason take that side . . . without having either his reason or his integrity impeached—Kenneth Roberts) ("You buy your loves." . . . he did not plead verbally against the impeachment—Meredith) To arraign is to call or bring a prisoner before a court to answer to the charge of an indictment (I was carried down to the Sessions house, where I was arraigned—Defoe) Figuratively it means to call a person or thing to public account for something done or omitted (arraigns the monks for teaching grammar rather than things spiritual—H. O. Taylor) (a despairing soliloquy . . . in which he arraigned the United States policy in relation to China—Times Lit. Sup.) Ana denounce, blame, reprove, censure, *criticize Ant exculpate — Con exonerate, vindicate, acquit, absolve (see EXCULPATE) accustom *habituate, addict, inure Ana *adapt, accommodate, adjust: *harden, season, acclimatize Ant disaccustom — Con alienate, wean, *estrange accustomed wonted, customary, habitual, *usual Ana natural, normal, *regular, typical: *common, ordinary, familiar Ant unaccustomed — Con strange, singular, peculiar, odd, queer, erratic: *infrequent, uncommon, rare, occasional acerbity *acrimony, asperity
Ana sourness, acidity, tartness (see corresponding adjectives at SOUR): crabbedness, surliness, dourness, surliness (see corresponding adjectives at SULLEN): bittleness, acridity (see corresponding adjectives at BITTER): harshness, roughness (see corresponding adjectives at ROUGH) Ant mellowness — Con gentleness, mildness, blandness, smoothness (see corresponding adjectives at SOFT): amiableness, good nature, complaisance (see corresponding adjectives at AMIABLE) ache n *pain, pang, throe, twinge, stitch Ana *distress, suffering, agony, misery: anguish, heartache, heartbreak (see SORROW): hurt, *injury: torment, torture, rack (see corresponding verbs at AFFLICTION) achieve

Con relief, alleviation, assuagement, mitigation (see corresponding verbs at RELIEVE): ease, comfort (see REST)

achieve 1 accomplish, effect, *perform, fulfill, execute, discharge

Ana complete, finish, conclude (see CLOSE): surmount, overcome, *conquer

Ant fail (to do something), fail (in) —Con *begin, commence, start

2 attain, *reach, gain, compass

Ana win, secure, obtain, acquire, *get: *realize, actualize—come, arrive

Ant miss (getting or attaining) —Con deviate, depart, *swerve: escape, avoid, elude, shun achievement *feat, exploit

Ana deed, act, *action: *victory, conquest, triumph: consummation, accomplishment (see corresponding adjectives at CONSUMMATE)

Ant failure —Con negligence, *neglect: omission, slighting (see corresponding verbs at NEGLECT): defeat, vanishment, beating, licking (see corresponding verbs at CONQUER)

achromatic *colorless, uncolored

Ana *neutral, negative

Ant chromatic —Con colored, tinted, tinged (see corresponding nouns at COLOR) acid adj acidulous, tart, *sour, dry

Ana acrid, *bitter: *sharp

Ant bland: sweet: alkaline —Con *suave, smooth: mild, *soft, gentle: basic (see ALKALINE)

acidulous acid, tart, *sour, dry

Ana *sharp: *pungent, piquant: biting, cutting (see corresponding verbs at INJURE)

Ant bland: sweet: alkaline —Con *suave, smooth: mild, *soft, gentle: basic (see ALKALINE)

acknowledge 1 Acknowledge, admit, own, avow, confess are synonymous when they mean to disclose something against one's will or inclination. All usually imply some sort of pressure as that of the law or of conscience leading to the disclosure. Acknowledge or its noun acknowledgment implies making known something which has been or might have been kept back or concealed (acknowledge a secret marriage) (acknowledged his complete ignorance of mathematics) (she did at last extort from her father an acknowledgment that the horses were engaged—Austen)

Admit, with less suggestion of possible concealment, stresses reluctance to grant or concede and refers rather to facts than to their implications; to admit a charge may involve merely the granting of the fact alleged, not necessarily (as frequently with acknowledge) the acceptance of the point of view which the charge implies (at last the government at Washington admitted its mistake—which governments seldom do—Cather). Own is less formal than acknowledge and regards the thing acknowledged in its relation to oneself (owned himself at a loss as to what to do next) (owned to forty years) (when a man owns himself to have been in an error, he does but tell you in other words that he is wiser than he was—Pope) Avow implies an open or bold acknowledgment or declaration and often one made in the face of hostility (communists, fascists, and other avowed enemies of parliamentarianism—Ogg & Zink) (made the idea of democratic nationalism intellectually respectable and thus perhaps made it easier for the Colonel publicly to avow nationalism as his creed—Forsey). Confess usually applies to what one feels to be wrong (confess a crime) (confess one's sins) but it is often used with no such implication, suggesting merely deference to the opinion of others (I am not, I confess, fully convinced)

Ana disclose, divulge, *reveal: *grant, concede, allow; publish, *declare, proclaim

Ant deny —Con conceal, *hide, secrete: disavow, disown (see affirmative verbs at ACKNOWLEDGE): gainsay, contradict, impugn, negative (see DENY)

2 Acknowledge, recognize agree in meaning to take cognizance of in some way, usually in a way dictated by custom or convention and implying acceptance or assent. Acknowledge is found in certain idioms where the concrete method of taking notice is not stated but connoted; one acknowledges a letter by sending a reply; one acknowledges a gift by a message indicating the receipt and acceptance of the gift and one's gratitude; one acknowledges a greeting by an appropriate conventional response (as a bow, smile, or friendly remark). In freer expression acknowledge usually implies definite or formal acceptance, as of a principle as binding or of a claim as rightful or of a person as ruler (he acknowledged the obligation of a son to support his aged parents) (in Italy during the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries there were two acknowledged sources of political power: the Empire and the Church—Huxley). Recognize, though often used interchangeably with acknowledge, suggests more strongly authoritative sanction or full admission concerning a given or implied status or suggests actual and manifest, as contrasted with formal or merely verbal, acceptance (in 1918 England, France, and the United States recognized Czechoslovakia as an independent state) (the ladies never acted so well as when they were in the presence of a fact which they acknowledged but did not recognize—Meredith). Recognize sometimes implies, as acknowledge never does, full realization or comprehension (courts . . . have been . . . slow to recognize that statutes . . . may imply a policy different from that of the common law—Justice Holmes)

Ana accept, *receive: notice, note, remark (see SEE): respond, reply, *answer

Ant ignore —Con disregard, slight, *neglect: repudiate, spurn, reject (see DECLINE)

acme apex, zenith, culmination, climax, *summit, peak, apogee, pinnacle, meridian

acoustic, acoustical *auditory

acquaint *inform, apprise, advise, notify Ana tell, *reveal, disclose, divulge: *teach, instruct, educate, school: accustom, *habituate

Con conceal, *hide: withhold, reserve, hold, hold back (information) (see KEEP) acquaintance *friend, intimate, confidant

Ana *associate, companion, comrade, crony

Con *stranger, outsider

acquiesce consent, agree, *assent, accede, subscribe

Ana accept, *receive: conform, *adapt, adjust, accommodate, reconcile (oneself); *yield, submit, bow: concur, coincide (see AGREE)

Ant object —Con protest, demonstrate, kick (see OBJECT): *demur, stickle, stick, shy, balk: *differ, dissent acquiescence compliance, resignation (see under COMPLIANT)

Ana deference, obeisance (see HONOR): submissiveness (see corresponding adjective at TAME)

Ant rebelliousness or rebellion —Con insubordination, contumaciousness (see corresponding adjectives at INSUBORDINATE)

acquiscent resigned, *compliant

Ana submissive (see TAME): yielding, submitting, deerring, bowing, relenting (see YIELD)

Ant rebellious —Con contumacious, *insubordinate: protesting, objecting, kicking, demonstating (see OBJECT vb): resisting, opposing, combating, conflicting (see RESIST) acquire obtain, *get, gain, win, secure, procure Ant forfeit —Con alienate, *transfer, convey: *relinquish, surrender, abandon, yield acquisition, acquisition, attainment, accomplishment denote in common a power or skill that is the fruit of exertion or effort; in this sense they are often used in the plural. Acquisition implies achievement as a result of continued endeavor and self-cultivation rather than of natural gifts or talent (a woman of considerable information and literature; acquisitions not common amongst...ladies—Edgeworth) Acquisition may add to acquisition the implications that the thing acquired is an addition or gain and that the endeavor to acquire has been characterized by avidity and stress (perhaps it was a mistake to force her into the rigid groove of classical learning...from it she got very unusual acquisitions, but overstimulation broke her health—Parrington) As applied to an acquired power or skill, acquisition usually stresses, as acquirement does not, the inherent value of that power or skill (absolute disinterestedness is a rare acquisition, even in historians (no philosopher would resign his mental acquisitions for the purchase of any terrestrial good—Peacock) Attainment commonly refers to distinguished achievements as in the arts, in statesmanship, in science; it suggests fully developed talent (artists of high attainments) (remarkable literary attainments) Accomplishment refers to any acquired power or grace such as may make for agreeable social intercourse (my new accomplishment of dancing—Charles Churchill) (we found that even for Men of Science this neat clean carving of words was a very necessary accomplishment—Quiller-Couch) (an accomplishment of which he was a perfect exponent, the interchange of humorous and agreeable civilities—Repple) Ana achievement (see FEAT): *addition, accretion Con *lack, want, dearth, defect, privation acquisition *acquirement, attainment, accomplishment Ana *addition, accession, accretion, increment: *sessions, belongings, means, assets: *gift, genius, talent, aptitude: *art, skill, cunning acquisitive grasping, avaricious, greedy, *covetous Ana avid, *eager, keen, athirst: possessing or posses- sive, owning, enjoying (see corresponding verbs at HAVE) Ant sacrificing, abnegating —Con forgoing, forbear- ing, eschewing (see FORGO): self-denying, renunciative (see corresponding nouns at RENUNCIATION) acquit 1 absolve, exonerate, vindicate, *excuse 2 admit, acquit Ana discharge, *free, release, liberate: *excuse, pardon, forgive, remit Ant convict —Con condemn, *sentence, doom, pro- scribe, damn: denounce, blame (see CRITICIZE) 2 quit, *behave, conduct, demean, deport, comport Ana *act, behave, work, operate, react Con *misbehave, misconduct, misdemeanor (see base words at BEHAVE) acrid 1 *bitter Ana *pungent, piquant: biting (see INCISIVE): *offensive, repugnant, loathsome Ant savory Con *palatable, sapid, toothsome, tasty: fragrant: *odorous, aromatic, balmy: delicious, delectable, luscious, *deightful 2 *cruetic, mordant, scathing Ana *sharp, keen: surly, crabbed, morose (see SULLEN): malevolent, malign, spiteful, *malicious: virulent, venomous, *poisonous Ant benign, kindly —Con *suave, urbane, bland, smooth, polite acrimonious *angry, irate, indignant, wrathful, wroth, mad Ana testy, spleenetic, choleric, *irascible, cranky, cross: rancorous, hostile, antagonistic (see corresponding nouns at ENMITY): quarrelsome, contentious, *belligerent Ant irenic, peaceable —Con *kind, kindly, benign, benignant acrimony, acerbity, asperity agree in denoting temper or language marked by irritation or some degree of anger or resentment. Acrimony implies bitterness or ill will and also greater stirring or blistering power in what is said than the others (the controversial writings of the seventeenth century are notorious for their acrimony—<we all know how easy it is to...defend a pet theory with acrimony—Quiller-Couch>) Acrity implies sourness as well as bitterness, sometimes as shown in words or mood, but more often as manifested in a morose, embittered nature (the judge’s smile seemed to operate on her acerity of heart like sunshine upon vinegar, making it ten times sourer—Hawthorne) Often it suggests crabbedness (the Milton of religious and political controversy...is not seldom disfigured by want of amenity, by acerity—Arnold) Asperity retains implications of harshness and roughness chiefly in reference to style (the elderly ladies in his audience had been shocked by the asperities of the new style in music—Copland) In general use asperity stresses quickness of temper or sharpness of resentment but it rarely suggests bitterness (told him with some asperity to mind his own business) Ana bitterness (see corresponding adjective at BITTER): ill will, malignity, malignancy, spite, spleen, *malice, malevolence: rancor, animus, animosity, antipathy (see ENMITY) Ant suavity —Con urbanity, diplomacy (see corresponding adjectives at SUAVE): courtesy, civility, politeness (see corresponding adjectives at CIVIL) across, crosswise, crossways, athwart are synonymous when they mean so as to intersect the length of something. Across and athwart may be used as prepositions as well as adverbs but carry the same implications in either part of speech. Across usually implies extension or passage from one side to the other (this board will not go across) (he could not get across the river that night) Crosswise and crossways stress intersection at right angles and usually suggest a horizontal direction (the stripes run crosswise) (the defect lies crossways to the grain of the wood) Athwart commonly implies obliquity of direction or inter- section at an acute angle (the tree fell athwart the road) (on the slopes the shadows lie athwart) (in some weaves the filling threads run athwart those of the warp) Figuratively, especially with reference to plans, purposes, hopes, across and crosswise are not always synon- ymous because they retain and stress their distinguishing implications. Across often implies fulfillment (he was able to get his point across to his audience) while crosswise imparts contrariety and therefore frustration (everything goes crosswise with us tonight) act n 1 *action, deed Ana performance, accomplishment, achievement (see corresponding verbs at PERFORM): *feat, exploit Con law, *bill, *act v.i. 1 Act, behave, work, operate, function, react are comparable when used with reference to the way in which a person or thing does what is expected or responds to external influences or circumstances. Act is not only the most general word of this group but also the most general of all English intransitive verbs except those (as be, exist, belong) which assert being, a state of being, or relation. Act is therefore used largely in interrogative sentences when knowledge of the specific nature of the action is sought or in declarative sentences with a qualifying adverb, adverbial element, or adjective complement how did the child act when you called him?? (he acted as if he were about to cry) (he acted frightened) how should this powder act when mixed with water?? (this medicine acts as a poison to some persons) Behavior is widely applied chiefly to persons and their conduct with reference to a standard of what is right or proper or decorous (one must keep one's contracts, and behave as persons of honor and breeding should behave—Rose Macaulay) However, in or parallel to technical use behave often approaches act in generality study how steel behaves under stress how the thyroid gland behaves during emotional excitement (two men may behave like a crowd . . . when their emotions are engaged—Conrad) Work, operate, function agree in meaning to act in the way that is natural or intended (the Swiss clock had long since ceased to work—Bennett) (but she had not thought. Her brain would not operate—Bennett) they have functioned as observers rather than participants—J. M. Brown In distinction from one another work may, especially when qualified, suggest success or effectiveness (the fact that a theory has actually worked is a better recommendation for its soundness than any amount of ingenious dialectic—Huxley); operate stresses efficient activity rather than achievement except when followed by on or upon (the revolutionary spirit, ceasing to operate in politics—Macaulay); function implies activity with reference to the accomplishment of the end or office for which a thing exists or is designed (consciousness ceases altogether at death, when the brain no longer functions—Grant Allen) rules of the game which must be observed, if society is to function at all—Galsworthy React, a word of rapidly shifting implications, is often used as though it were a close synonym of the preceding words, especially of act or behave at this threat the civil service reacted in the way which is always open to any civil service, under any regime—C. P. Fitzgerald In discriminating use it always suggests recoil or rebound; often more narrowly, but still consistently, it implies reciprocal or counteractive influence or a reverse effect home and the school react (act reciprocally) on each other (whilst most people's minds succumb to inculcation and environment, a few react vigorously: honest and decent people coming from thievish slums, and skeptics and realists from country parsonages—Shaw) As a result of use in chemistry and psychology, react now often implies a favorable or desired response children react (respond favorably) to kind treatment 2 Act, play, impersonate are synonyms when they mean to assume the appearance or role of another person or character. Actually and play frequently imply feigning for theatrical representation act (Hamlet) play the melancholy Dane Even the idiom "to play one's part" has a theatrical origin and still connotes performance and a contribution to an ensemble. Whether impersonate implies simulation for the sake of theatrical representation or for deception can be gathered only from the context an actor who impersonates women (he was arrested for impersonating an officer) acting adj temporary, supply, ad interim, provisional action 1 Action, act, deed agree in designating something done or effected. Action refers primarily to the process of acting; act and deed to the result, the thing done. An action is usually regarded as occupying some time and involving more than one step; an act is more frequently thought of as momentary or instantaneous and as individual the rescue of a shipwrecked crew is a heroic action; the launching of the lifeboat, a brave act a course of action the springs of action an act of vengeance caught in the act In the plural action has frequently an ethical connotation and is loosely synonymous with conduct (by him [the Lord] actions are weighed—I Sam 2:3) only the actions of the just smell sweet and blossom in their dust—Shirley Deed refers to a thing as done: it invariably presupposes intelligence and responsibility in the agent and therefore often connotes, as act does not, illustriousness or achievement the deed is worthy doing—Shak. what, are my deeds forgot?—Shak. little, nameless, unremembered acts of kindness and of love—Wordsworth Deed is frequently opposed to word, as act to thought (take the word for the deed) I'll entice your deeds to match these words—Shak. be great in act as you have been in thought—Shak. Ana *process, proceeding, procedure: performance, execution, fulfillment (see corresponding verbs at perform): activity, operation, work, behavior, reaction (see corresponding verbs at act) 2 cause, case, *suit, lawsuit 3 *battle, engagement Ana combat, conflict, fight, fray, affray, *contest: *encounter, skirmish, brush activate 1 energize, *vitalize Ana animate, vivify, *quicken, enliven: *stir, rouse, arouse, rally, awaken Ant arrest 2 Activate, actuate, motivate are sometimes confused when used with reference to persons and the motives which govern their actions. They are not interchangeable, however, because they carry divergent denotations. Some external influence or agent, rather than a motive or desire, activates a person or thing when it supplies an effective stimulus to activity: the motive or, at least, a latent desire for such activity being commonly presupposed Kapteyn's work . . . was not final, but it . . . attracted and activated others—G. W. Gray A motive, a principle, or a desire actuates a person (not an action or undertaking) when it governs or determines his actions the desire for conquest actuated the explorers of the sixteenth century individuals actuated by economic self-interest—Bush A dramatist or novelist motivates the actions of his characters or the incidents of his plot when he supplies the motives for each (the novelist failed to motivate adequately his hero's surrender to temptation) Also an objective, a desire, a passion motivates or gives the underlying motive of an action or undertaking ambition motivated Macbeth's murder of Duncan Ana stimulate, *provoke, excite, galvanize: spur, goad, induce (see corresponding nouns at motive): *incite, instigate, foment, abet: drive, impel, *move Ant restrain, inhibit *con curb, check, bide (see restrain): *thwart, foil, balance, balk, *frustrate active, operative, dynamic, live are synonymous when they mean being at work or in effective action. Active in general may be employed wherever the others are applicable, but it is also usable where none of the others would be appropriate. It may qualify anything that shows its nature or its existence in acts, in action, or in work an active volcano an active brain an active sympathy and it is applicable to anything which can be worked, operated, manipulated, or wielded an active pen (a mine still active after fifty years of mining) It is also applicable to an agent, an operator, an instrument, a means or to something accomplished by any such agency active enforcement of the law an active propagandist an active search for truth Active may imply little more action or movement or exertion than shown in a state that is not death, rest, or inertness his pulse is low, but his heart is still active or it may, and usually does, imply vigor and A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.
actor | player, performer, mummer, mime, mimic, thespian, impersonator, trouper denote in common one who, for the entertainment or edification of an audience, takes part in an exhibition simulating happenings in real life. An actor makes a profession of taking part in such exhibitions (as in the theater or on television) (an ambition to be an actor). A player acts in a stage play either as a professional or as an amateur (all the world's a stage, and all the men and women merely players—Shak.) Performer is a wider term than the others of this group. It emphasizes actual participation in an exhibition before an audience and may denote not only an actor or player but any public enter-tainer (as a dancer or musician) (in theatrical speaking, if the performer is not exactly proper and graceful, he is utterly ridiculous—Steele) Mummer, mime, and mimic may all denote a performer who projects a character by means of body movements, expression, and gesture usually without the use of speech. Mimicry is used more particularly of comic and amateurish performers or maskers, usually at some festival or holiday celebration (here and there the beat of drums . . . the antics and grimaces of mummers held the crowd for a moment before some fantastic festival car—A. M. Bacon). When used of the professional actor its connotation is often derogatory (dubbing, that mummer's trick with the mouth which has . . . been responsible for an endless succession of vaudeville acts—Rogow) Mime is used of both the performer and the performance (mime and mimicry are confused in the public mind . . . Chaplin is a mime, but those who imitate him are mimics. A mime does not copy . . . but invents characters who have their own life . . . quite apart from their creator—Enters) and is especially ap-plicable to the stylized gestural language of narrative dance (as ballet) (was a great mime and did not follow the then traditional ballet-mime (pantomime), but . . . in ballet gave first-class dramatic performances—Nicolaeva-Legat). Mimic more particularly stresses imitation and often comic exaggeration of qualities (had accents so grotesque that not even Molly, an able mimic, could copy them—Stafford) (mimic . . . Entertain by presenting exaggerated imitations—Dict. of Occupational Titles) Thespian is equivalent in meaning to actor but in connotation is often mock-heroic (the gossip columns, where a well-known Silk might yet be observed in solemn conclave with a distinguished Thespian—Wills). An impersonator is a performer who assumes the character of another (as a public figure, a class of persons, an animal) whom he imitates by makeup and in speech and action (a female impersonator—A noted impersonator of Abraham Lincoln). A trouper is a member of a group and especially a traveling group of actors staging a play or repertory of plays. The term often connotes the seasoning or the sense of obligation to audience and fellow actors that characterizes an experienced actor (no real trouper while conscious will ever confess himself too sick to go on—Ferber). actual | real, true

Ana | *material, physical, phenomenal, objective: particular (see SPECIAL) Actual ideal: imaginary —Con *abstract, transcendent, transcendental: spiritual, divine (see HOLY): *theoretical, speculative, academic: fabulous, *fictitious, mythical

Ant | existence, being

Ant | possibility —Con abstraction, ideality, transcendence (see corresponding adjectives at ABSTRACT) Actualize *realize, embody, incarnate, externalize, objectify, materialize, hypostatize, reify

acute | 1 move, drive, impel

ana | stimulate, provoke, excite, galvanize, quicken: *stir, rouse, arouse: energize, activate, *vitalize

2 activate, motive

Ant | *hinder, impede, bar: *restrain, inhibit, curb, check

Ant | deter (with a motive or fear as the subject) —Con *hind, impede, bar: *restrain, inhibit, curb, check

Acumen penetration, *discernment, insight, perception, discrimination

Ana | shrewdness, sagacity, perspicacity, astuteness (see corresponding adjectives at SHREW): sharpness, keenness, acuteness (see corresponding adjectives at SHARP) Obsuteness —Con dullness, stupidity, slowness, denseness (see corresponding adjectives at STUPID): blindness, purblindness (see corresponding adjectives at BLIND)

Acute | 1 sharp, keen

Ana | incisive, trenchant, cutting: penetrating, piercing (see ENTER) Obstuse —Con *dull, blunt: *stupid, slow, dull, crass, dense

2 Acute, critical, crucial. Acute most commonly indicates intensification. Sometimes rapid, of a situation demanding notice and showing signs of some definite resolution (intimately associated with Indian affairs was the pressing question of defense . . . Pontiac's rebellion made the issue acute—Morison & Commager). When the food shortage became acute in New Haven, the junior class of Yale College was moved to Glastonbury—Amer. Guide Series: Conn. Critical may describe an approach to a crisis or turning point and may imply an imminent outcome or resolution (the war has reached a new critical phase . . . we have moved into active and continuing battle—Roosevelt) (the critical lack of rubber in the last war was finally beaten by the development of synthetic rubber plants capable of turning out 1,000,000 tons a year—Collier's Yr. Bk.) Crucial applies to an actual crisis situadapt, often one viewed with fear, worry, or suspense, and implies a speedily ensuing decisive or definitive outcome <ə continuous evolution, punctuated by the sudden flowering or flowering of a crucial moment now and then—Lowers> <the next few months are crucial. What we do now will affect our American way of life for decades to come—Truman>

Ana culminating, climax (see corresponding nouns at summit): *dangerous, hazardous, precarious, perilous: menacing, threatening (see threaten): intensified, aggravated (see intensify)

adage *saying, saw, proverb, maxim, motto, epigram, aphorism, apothegm adament, adamantine obdurate, inexorable, *inflexible

Ana unyielding, unsubmitting (see affirmative verbs at yield): immovable, immobile (see affirmative adjectives at movable): *grim, implacable, unrelenting

Ant yielding —Con submissive, subdued (see tame): obliging, compliant (see amiable): relenting, submitting, capitulating (see yield)

adapt 1 Adapt, adjust, accommodate, conform, reconcile agree in denoting to bring into correspondence. To adapt is to fit or suit to something; it (reflectively implies conformity) often connotes a change or adjustment in relation to the new conditions, frequently with the added suggestion of pliability or readiness <he knew how to adapt himself. To one correspondent he is gay . . . To another he is gravely reflective—Huxley> To adjust is to bring into as close and exact correspondence or harmony as exists between the parts of a mechanism; in contrast with adapt, it suggests less of flexibility or tact in the agent and more of ingenuity or calculation <he must divine what men would welcome and shun what men might resent. He must delicately mold and adjust the popular will to his own—Buchan> Accommodate is used in preference to adjust when there exists a somewhat marked variance or discrepancy between the objects brought into often superficial or transitory agreement or harmony <man is no lawgiver to nature, he is an absorber. She is who stands firm; he is who must accommodate himself—James> Accommodate is used in preference to adapt when yielding or compromise is to be suggested <they accommodate their counsels to his inclination—Addison> To conform is to bring into harmony or accordance with a pattern, example, or principle <the liberal . . . does not wish to have to conform himself to any program or policy—Inge> In current use the reflexive to conform oneself is comparatively rare, its place being taken usually by the intransitive conform (for another intransitive sense see agree) <this officer, as his duties were prescribed by that act, is to conform precisely to the will of the president. He is the mere organ by whom that will is communicated—John Marshall> Partly because of the association of this word with compulsory legislation regarding religious observances, it often implies compliance or at times slavery acceptance <Mark Twain . . . had conformed to a moral regime in which the profoundest of his instincts could not function—Brooks> To reconcile is to demonstrate to one’s own or another’s satisfaction the fundamental consistency or congruity of things that are or seem to be incompatible <confidence in her own capacity to reconcile conflicting portraits of herself—Mary Austin> The great men among the ancients understood how to reconcile manual labor with affairs of state—Locke> In reflexive use reconcile adds to adapt the implication of resignation or of submission <reconciled himself to a lonely existence>

Ana temper, qualify (see moderate): acclimatize, acclimate (see harden)

Ant unfit

2 *edit, rewrite, revise, redact, compile

Ana fit, *prepare, condition, qualify adaptable pliant, ductile, *plastic, pliable, malleable

Ana tractable, amenable (see obedient): supple, flexible, resilient, *elastic

Ant inadequate, unadaptable —Con intractable, refractory (see unruly), unaccommodating, nonconforming, irreconcilable (see affirmative verbs at adapt)

add 1 Add, sum, total, tot, cast, figure, foot share the meaning to find or represent the amount reached by putting together arithmetically a series of numbers or quantities, and are commonly followed by up. Add is both the common and the technical word; it commonly implies strict adherence to the traditional arithmetical operation. Even in figurative use it implies a similar operation <taken as a whole the vignerettes and the stories add up to a single effect—Alridge> <the whole undertone trend adds up to a major consideration for businessmen and employees—Lack> Sum stresses the result attained rather than the method followed. In figurative use sum up implies a gathering and consolidation into a new whole, especially for the production of a single telling effect  <I summed up all the systems in a phrase and all existence in an epigram—Wilde> <values they can sum up in a few simple formulas—Croly> Total tends to replace sum up in literal use <determined the cost by totaling all expenditures> It may also mean to reach the sum or number of <absences due to colds totaled 253 last week> Tot, cast, figure, and foot are used especially of commercial matters (as accounts and bookkeeping devices). Tot and cast often imply facility in reckoning <the waiter quickly totted the bill> <if you tot up all the items that we owed against all the items that foreigners owed us—Hutton> <cast up an account> Figure usually suggests the task or burden involved in reckoning <figure the costs of operating an automobile> Foot connotes bookkeeping and totals at the bottom of each column of figures <his debts will foot up to more than he can ever pay>

2 Add, append, annex, subjoin, superadd. Add, the most general of these words, means to join one thing to another or to a group, series, or combination of other things so as to increase the original unit in numbers, size, amount <added ten books to the library>  <police action would add nothing to the protection that victims of aggression have enjoyed under the old system—Wolfe> One appends when one adds something that is supplemental and accessory and does not form an integral part of the principal thing <append notes to a book> <the final summary of his views which he enjoyed appending to his long-winded discourses—I. V. Morris> One annexes when one adds something that becomes part of the original whole yet bears usually a subordinate or subsidiary relation to it or suffers loss of identity in the merging <annex a codicil to a will> <annex conquered territory to the kingdom> One subjoins when one adds something under another thing or especially to what has already been said or written <subjoin a postscript to a letter> <subjoin additional matter in an appendix> One superadds when one adds something to what is complete in itself or already at its maximum <the phrase “to paint the lily” means to superadd decoration to that which in itself is highly decorative> <the horrors of pestilence superadded to the horrors of war>

Ana *fasten, attach, affix: augment, enlarge, *increase

Ant subtract, deduct —Con lessen, *decrease, diminish accrue, increment, accession agree in denoting something acquired that constitutes a value of his land resulting from growth of the city.

The professional historian, whose aim is exact truth, should brush aside the glittering increments.

It often suggests length of speech or communication about an assertion or convey a warning about or a disclaimer of responsibility for the truth of matter under discussion.

Those whose senses are alleged to be subject to supernatural impressions—Le Fanu—Its participial adjective alleged, especially, often serves as a disclaimer of responsibility for the assertion.
adherent

adjacent adjoining

adjacent

1 Adjust, regulate, fix share the meaning to set right

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.
fix her glasses) <please fix the clock> <he will fix up matters for us> In distinctive use it implies restoration to a good order or a state of repair <these shoes are not worth fixing> <fixed the leak in the roof>

Ana rectify, *correct: trim, steady, *stabilize, balance: *order, arrange: align, *line, line up, range

Ant derange —Con disarrange, *disorder, disturb: upset, *discompose

2 *adapt, accommodate, conform, reconcile

Ana *harmonize, attune: correspond, conform, accord, square (see AGREE)

adjuvant adj *auxiliary, contributory, ancillary, accessory, subsidiary, subservient

Ana aiding, helping, assisting (see HELP vb): supporting, upholding, backing (see SUPPORT vb): *effective, efficient, efficacious, effectual administer, dispense come into comparison because they are used in certain idiomatic phrases, similar in wording but not always equivalent in meaning, such as administer justice or dispense justice; administer a medicine or a sacrament or dispense the Sacrament. Both words imply an action on the behalf of another in or as if in the capacity of a steward. Distinctively administer denotes to manage, supervise, or conduct the affairs of another while dispense denotes to deal out in portions or equitably to recipients. These divergent significations are often lost and the words used interchangeably especially when the object of the verb is an abstraction such as justice or charity (the citizens disliked the rule of William on account of the strict justice which he administered—Freeman) (these be the sort to dispense justice. They know the land and the customs of the land—Kipling) In reference to a sacrament administer means to perform the rites and duties prescribed for its proper observance and may be used of any of the sacraments; dispense, in contrast, is used only of the Eucharist and retains its underlying implication of dealing out in portions. The two words when used in reference to medicine are precisely distinguished. One administers a medicine when he gives the prescribed dose directly to the patient; one dispenses medicines when he compounds them according to the prescription of the physician. Similarly, one administers a blow or a rebuke when he deals it out directly to the individual. Dispense, in comparable phrases, retains its implication of distribution; one dispenses advice when he metes it out to those who in his opinion need it; one dispenses alms when he manages their distribution.

Ant counteractive —Con neutralizing, negativing (see NEUTRALIZE): obstructing, hindering, impeding (see HINDER vb)

admiration 1 *wonder, wonderment, amazement

Ana astonishment, surprise (see corresponding verbs at SURPRISE): awe, fear, *reverence: rapture, transport, *ecstasy

Con indifference, unconcern, aloofness (see corresponding adjectives at INDIFFERENT): boredom, *tedium, ennui

2 esteem, respect, *regard

Ana appreciation (see corresponding verb at APPRECIATE): liking, loving, enjoying (see LIKE): adoration, veneration, reverence, worship (see under REVERE)

Ant abhorrence —Con loathing, detestation, hate, hatred (see under HATE vb) admire esteem, respect, regard (see under REGARD n)

Ana *appreciate, value, prize, cherish: *reverence, venerate, adore, worship

Ant abhor —Con *hate, loathe, abominate, detest: *despise, contempt, scorn, disdain

Admission: *admittance

Admit 1 *receive, accept, take

Ana allow, permit, suffer (see LET): *harbor, entertain, shelter, lodge, house

Ant eject, expel —Con *exclude, debar, shut out: bar, obstruct, block, *hinder

2 *acknowledge, own, confess, avow

Ana concede, *grant, allow: *assent, acquiesce, agree, subscribe: divulge, disclose, *reveal

Ant gainsay: disallow —Con *deny, contradict, negative

3 *enter, introduce

Ana induct, *initiate, install: *introduce, insert, interject, interpose

Ant exclude —Con debar, shut out (see EXCLUDE): expel, *eject, oust

Admittance, admission. Admittance is mostly confined to the literal sense of allowing one to enter a locality or building (no admittance without a pass) (admittance to the grounds) Admission has acquired the figurative sense of admitting to rights, privileges, standing, membership (his admission to the club) (admission of new words into the language) When entrance into a building or a locality carries with it certain privileges, admission rather than admittance is used (admission to a theater) (the admission of aliens into a country)

Admixture: 1 *mixture, composite, blend, compound, amalgam

2 Admixture, alloy, adulterant are comparable when they denote an added ingredient that destroys the purity or genuineness of a substance. Admixture suggests the addition of the foreign or the nonessential (pure Indian without any admixture of white blood) (love with an admixture of selfishness) (comic verses with an occasional admixture of mild bawdry—Cowie) Alloy derives its figurative implication of an addition that detracts from the value or perfection of a thing from an old literal application to a base metal added to a precious metal to give it hardness (there's no fortune so good, but it has its alloy—Bacon) (he had his alloy, like other people, of ambition and selfishness—Rose Macaulay) Adulterant, both literally and figuratively, implies the addition of something that debases or impairs a thing without markedly affecting its appearance. Consequently it usually implies the intent to deceive (interests . . . trying to upgrade consumer thinking on wool by classifying the new textile fibers as adulterants—F. A. Adams) (piety without any adulterant of hypocrisy)

Ana *addition, accretion: *touch, suggestion, streak, dash, spice, tinge, smock, shade: infusion, suffusion, leaven (see corresponding verbs at INFUSE)

Admonish chide, *reprove, reproach, rebuke, reprimand

Ana *warn, forewarn, caution: counsel, advise (see under ADVISE n): *criticize, reprehend, reprove

Ant commend —Con *approve: applaud, compliment (see COMMEND)

Ado fuss, pother, flurry, bustle, *stir

Ana trouble, pains, exertion, *effort

Ant quietness, stillness, silence (see corresponding adjectives at STILL): calm, serenity, tranquility (see corresponding adjectives at CALM)

Adolescence: *youth, puberty, pubescence

Ant senescence

Adopt, embrace, espouse mean in common to make one's own what in some fashion one owes to another. One adopts something of which one is not the begetter, inventor, or author or which is not one's own naturally (adopt the style of Swinburne) (adopt the British pronunciation of a word) (the Ralstons gave up old customs reluctantly, but once they had adopted a new one they found it impossible to understand why everyone else did not immediately do likewise—\textit{Wharton} \textit{Embrace} implies willingness to accept or it may suggest eager or joyful acceptance \textit{embrace an opportunity} \textit{embrace Christianity} \textit{she embraced with ardor the fantastic ideal of the cleaning up of England—\textit{Rose Macaulay}} One espouses that to which one attaches oneself as closely as to a wife, giving it support or sharing the same fortunes and participating in the same experiences \textit{espouse a friend’s quarrel} \textit{the spirit of uncompromising individualism that would eventually espouse the principle of democracy in church and state—\textit{Parrington}} \textbf{Ana} appropriate, *arrogate, usurp: *assume, affect \textbf{Ant} repudiate: discard —\textit{Con reject, spurn (see DECLINE): renounce, forswear, *abjure} \textbf{adoration} worship, veneration, reverence (see under \textit{REVERE}) \textbf{Ana} *honor, homage, obeisance: praise, laud, extolling (see corresponding verbs at PRAISE) \textbf{Ant} blasphemy —\textit{Con execration, cursing (see corresponding verbs at EXECUTE): *profanation, desecration, sacrilege} \textbf{adore} worship, venerate, *revere, reverence \textit{Ana} laud, *praise—extol: *exalt, magnify \textbf{Ant} blaspheme —\textit{Con *execute, curse} \textbf{2 Adore, worship, idolize} in their nonreligious senses mean to love or admire excessively. \textit{Adore} commonly implies emotional surrender to the charms or attractions of an object of love or admiration; it often connotes extreme adulation if the object of love is a person \textit{this inability \ldots to project his personality is a serious weakness in a country which likes to adore its leaders—\textit{Doty}} With other objects it may connote no more than a hearty liking \textit{like gourmet and yellow flies, sows adore eating truffles—\textit{Lauber}} \textit{Worship} usually implies more extravagant adoration or more servile attentions than \textit{adore}; it also commonly connotes an awareness of one’s own inferiority or of one’s distance from the object of one’s love \textit{he worships his wife} \textit{small boys who worship astronauts} \textbf{Idolize} often implies absurdly excessive adoration or doting love \textit{idolizing money in life and poetry—\textit{New School Bulletin}} Sometimes, however, it comes very close to \textit{adore} \textit{a spoiled child is often one that has been idolized by his parents} \textbf{Ana} love, dote (see LIKE): admire, esteem (see under REGARD n) \textbf{Ant detest} —\textit{Con *hate, loathe, abhor, abominate: *despise, scorn, contempt, disdain} \textbf{adorn, decorate, ornament, embellish, beautify, deck, bedeck, garnish} mean to add something unessential in order to enhance the appearance. These words and especially the first five are often used interchangeably; certain distinctions, however, are apparent in precise use especially when the subject of the verb is the thing that enhances rather than the agent or enhancer. An element that adorns not only serves to heighten the beauty of its background or setting but also is beautiful in itself \textit{few nobler poems have adorned our time—\textit{Quiller-Couch}} \textit{the simplicity with which great composers adorn their works—\textit{Brainwaite}} One that decorates relieves the plainness or monotony of a background by contributing beauty of color or design to it \textit{the walls are yet to be decorated} \textit{the use of inlaying in decorating furniture} Something ornaments when it is an adjunct or an accessory which sets off a thing to advantage \textit{whose bridle was ornamented with silver bells—\textit{Scott}} \textit{a doorway ornamented with pillars} \textit{Embellish} more often suggests the act of an agent than the effect of a thing. One who embellishes modifies his material, especially by adding adventitious or sometimes gaudy or fictitious ornament for the sake of effect \textit{embellishes his style with imagery} \textit{feats of virtuosity \ldots with which she embellished the usual routine of the role—\textit{Sargent}} \textit{Embellish} often suggests disregard for truth \textit{that theme is then expertly embellished by the Communists to prove that Wall Street is on the warpath against the Kremlin—\textit{Fischer}} One that beautifies either enhances the beauty of something or counterbalances its plainness or ugliness \textit{an embankment swathed and beautified by clambering roses} \textit{the eternal orbs that beautify the night—\textit{Shelley}} One that decks or bedecks contributes to the gaiety, splendor, or, especially in the case of bedeck, showiness of appearance \textit{bedeck oneself with jewels} \textit{decking with liquid pearl the bladed grass—\textit{Shak}} \textit{he likes to deck out his little person in splendor and fine colors—\textit{Thackerasy}} One garnishes something when one gives it the final touch of order or ornament in preparation for use or service \textit{the drawing room was empty, swept and garnished, waiting for the next bout—\textit{Panter-Downesy}} The word is used especially in cookery \textit{garnish a broiled fish with lemon slices and chopped parsley} \textbf{Ana} enhance, heighten, *intensify \textbf{Ant diminish: *deface: mar, spoil, impair, *injure: *deform, distort, contort} \textbf{adroit 1} dexterous, deft, handy \textbf{Ana} *agile, nimble: expert, masterly, adept, skillful, skilled, *proficient: effortless, smooth, facile, *easy \textbf{Ant maladroit —\textit{Con clumsy, *awkward, inept}} \textbf{2} *clever, cunning, ingenious \textbf{Ana} shrewd, astute, perspicacious: *intelligent, quick-witted, smart: artful, crafty (see \textbf{SLY}) \textbf{Ant} stolid —\textit{Con *impassive, apathetic, phlegmatic: *stupid, slow, dull, dense} \textbf{adulation} flattery, *compliment \textbf{Ana} praise, laud (see corresponding verbs at PRAISE): *applause, acclaim: fulsome, uncouthness (see corresponding adjectives at \textit{FULSOME}) \textbf{Ant} abuse —\textit{Con obloquy, vituperation (see ABUSE): censure, condemnation, reprobation, criticism (see corresponding verbs at CRITICIZE)} \textbf{adult} adj *mature, grown-up, matured, ripe, mellow \textbf{Ana} developed, ripened, aged (see MATURE vb) \textbf{Ant} juvenile: puerile —\textit{Con *youthful, boyish, virgin, virginal, maiden: adolescent, pubescent (see corresponding nouns at YOUTH)} \textbf{adulterant} n *admixture, alloy \textbf{adulterate, sophisticate, load, weight, doctor} mean to alter fraudulently especially for profit. \textit{Adulterate}, the usual and technical term, especially when used with reference to foodstuffs and drugs, implies either the admixture of ingredients of similar appearance to increase the bulk or of a harmful substance as a preservative or as a restorer or improver of appearance \textit{adulterate maple syrup with beet-sugar syrup} \textit{line juice adulterated with five percent sulfuric acid, jellies with formaldehyde, peas with copper—\textit{Heiser}} In its extended use \textit{adulterate} implies spuriousness or loss of purity: such implications come out strongly in \textit{unadulterated}, which is the equivalent of pure and sheer in their hyperbolic senses \textit{that book is unadulterated trash} In meaning \textit{sophisticate} is essentially identical with \textit{adulterate} but its use is restricted almost entirely to raw drug and essential oil trade \textit{rose oil is sophisticated with geraniol—\textit{Shreve}} \textit{Load} implies the admixture of something to add weight whether as an adulterant or in the normal course of manufacture \textit{numerous adulterants have been used to load tea to increase its weight—\textit{Ukers}} \textit{most kinds of paper are loaded in some way or other} \textit{. . . The process . . . was first practiced . . . to save} pulp . . . but it was found that restricted quantities of loadings improved the paper—Jennett. Weight is used interchangeably with load but is applied more especially to textiles (silk weighted with salts of tin). Doctor implies tampering sometimes by adulteration but more often by alterations or falsifications which give an illusion of genuineness, of superior quality, or of great value (doctoring poor wine with essences and brandy) (doctored his accounts to hide his thefts).

Ana *debase, vitiate, corrupt: pollute, defile, taint (see contaminant) Ant refine (sugar, oil) — Con *improve, better adultery, fornication, incest designate forms of illicit sexual intercourse which are clearly distinguished in legal use, both civil and ecclesiastical. Adultery implies unfaithfulness to one's spouse, and therefore can be applied only to sexual intercourse on the part of a married man with a woman other than his wife, or of a married woman with a man other than her husband. Fornication designates sexual intercourse on the part of an unmarried person; when occurring between a married and an unmarried person, the former is involved in adultery and the latter in fornication. Incest designates sexual intercourse between persons so closely related that their marriage is prohibited by church or state and usually by both.

Ana unfaithfulness, inconstancy, untrueness (see affirmative adjectives at faithfulness): infidelity, disloyalty (see affirmative nouns at fidelity) adumbrate *suggest, shadow Ana symbolize, typify, emblematize (see corresponding nouns at symbol): signify, denote, *mean adumbration shaedw, umbra, penumbra, *shade, umbrage Ana *symbol, type, emblem: *sign, token, symptom, note; hint, suggestion, intimation (see corresponding verbs at suggest) Ant revelation — Con *disclosure, revealing, divulging, discovering (see corresponding verbs at reveal) advance vb 1 Advance, promote, forward, further all mean to move or put ahead, but they come into comparison chiefly when they imply help in moving or putting (something) ahead. Advance usually implies effective assistance, as in hastening a process (the warm rains greatly advanced the spring crops) or in bringing about a desired end (the pact should advance peace among nations) or in exalting or elevating a person, especially in rank or in power (Ahasuerus . . . advanced him . . . above all the princes) (Esth 3:1) The implication of moving ahead is dominant in promote when the words mean to advance in grade or rank, especially in a predetermined order (promote a pupil to the next grade in school) (promote a member of a college faculty from associate professor to full professor). When the dominant implication is assistance, promote may suggest open backing or support (the objects for which a corporation is created are universally such as the government wishes to promote—John Marshall) It may, especially when the subject names a person, his influence, or his acts, imply actual advance by encouraging or fostering (a sound forest economy promotes the prosperity of agriculture and rural life—Gustafson) It may, when said of a thing such as a practice, a policy, a habit, imply subservience to an end that may not be intended (the habit of regarding the language of poetry as something dissociated from personal emotion . . . was promoted by the writing of Greek and Latin verse in school—Babbitt) In one or two collocations forward implies not assistance but effective carrying out (forward a shipment by express) (please forward all letters during my absence) In its more common sense forward is often not clearly distinguishable from advance, except that it is seldom if ever used with reference to persons (Marie de Méric has advanced Marilac by marrying him to one of her maids of honor . . . yet . . . she only forwarded the marriage because she wanted to do the girl a favor—Bello) Further, less than any other word in this group, implies movement ahead and, perhaps more than any other, emphasizes the assistance given, especially in the removing of obstacles, either to a person in an undertaking or to the project he undertakes (her sole object . . . was to further him, not as an artist but as a popular success—Brooks) (bodies like the French Academy have such power for promoting it [genius], that the general advance of the human spirit is perhaps, on the whole, rather furthered than impeded by their existence—Arnold)

Ant retard: check — Con *hinder, impede: *restrain, curb: *arrest: *delay, slow

2 Advance, progress both as intransitive verbs and as nouns share the meaning to move (or movement) forward in space, in time, or in approach to a material or ideal objective. They are often employed interchangeably; however there are instances in which one is preferable to the other. Advance only may be used when a concrete instance is signified; though one may say that at a given time science made no advance (or progress), one must say that there were no advances (not progressions) in science at that time. Advance is preferable to progress when the context implies movement ahead such as that of an army marching to its objective, the distance traveled, or the rate of traveling (bullish sentiment regained favor . . . and stock prices advanced sharply—N. Y. Times) (there are some . . . who picture to themselves religion as retreating . . . before the victorious advance of science—Inge) (boll weevil . . . may have existed in Mexico . . . for centuries . . . it advanced north and east at the rate of about 100 miles per year—Harlow) Progress usually carries implications derived from earlier meanings of a process, a circuit, or a cycle, and so is preferable to advance when the movement forward involves these implications, as by suggesting a normal course, growth, or development (the trial is progressing) (moon . . . begins . . . her rosy progress—Milton) (summer) oft, delighted, stops to trace the progress of the spiky blade—Burns) Sometimes the word without losing these implications carries additional connotations and often stresses development through a series of steps or stages, each marking a definite change (it would be . . . a dull world that developed without break of continuity; it would surely be a mad world that progressed by leaps alone—Lowes) (the progress of an artist is a continual self-sacrifice, a continual extinction of personality—T. S. Eliot) Progress is the preferable word when development with improvement is implied (there was a general belief in inevitable and universal progress—Berger)

Ana develop, *mature; *intensify, heighten Ant recede — Con *retreat, retrograde (see recede): retire, withdraw (see go) 3 *advance, allege, cite Ana *offer, present, proffer: propose (see corresponding noun at proposal): broach, *express, air Ant retraction — Con retrograding, retreating (see recede)

2 *overture, approach, tender, bid Ana *propose, proposition: offer, proffer (see corresponding verbs at offer) advancement, preferment, promotion, elevation designate the act of raising a person in grade, rank, or dignity, or the honor that comes to one who is so raised. Advancement is the general term of widest application. Preferment especially in older use often comes close to advancement. 'Tis the curse of service, preferment goes by letter and affection, and not by old gradation, where each second stood heir to the first—Shak. It now more often implies choice, especially from a series of candidates or possibilities. A military record was the surest road to military preferment among vigorous frontiersmen—Coulter. Obedience spelled preferment in the civil service—Schumpeter. Promotion, usually but not invariably, implies gradation or raising according to a fixed plan, often involving the passing of tests or the meeting of qualifications. It is the specific word in education to designate the end-of-the-term advancement of pupils to a higher grade or in any field where members of a force or staff are given positions of higher rank with increased remuneration. Elevation is applicable only when the advancement carries marked increase in honor or dignity (the prime minister's elevation to the peerage) (the bishop's elevation to the cardinalate) (the many men of talent who owed their elevation to Wolsey—Froude).

Ana analogous words  Ant antonyms  Con contrasted words  See also explanatory notes facing page 1

Ant degradation: reduction (in rank or status)
Advantage 1 Advantage, handicap, allowance, odds, edge denote a factor or set of factors in a competition or rivalry giving one person or side a position of superiority over the other. Advantage is the general term, and implies superiority of any kind (the adult, with trained powers, has an immense advantage over the child in the acquisition of information—Eliot). A handicap is something, typically an artificial advantage, designed to equalize competition; thus, in golf, the handicap assigned a player is the difference between the average of a certain number of his best scores and par for the course; for instance, if the player's best-score average is 75 and par is 72, his handicap is 3, and when he plays in a handicap match the player is allowed to deduct three strokes from his total score.

An allowance is an advantageous handicap stated as a deduction of some sort. In horse racing an allowance is a deduction from the weight that the rules require a horse to carry, granted to a horse considered to be at a disadvantage. Odds usually implies a material advantage as in strength, numbers, or resources. It is often used of such an advantage possessed by the opposite side (managed to beat the odds against him—O'Leary) (the peculiarly British quality . . . of sticking out against odds—Contemporary Review). Advantage is often stated as a difference, odds as a ratio (one boxer has an advantage of ten pounds in weight) (one army has odds of two to one over the other) Odds may also denote an equalizing concession made to an inferior competitor; it then differs from handicap and allowance in that the concession is made by the superior competitor and not assigned by a third party (each side feels that it cannot allow any odds to the other—Bryce). Edge may be an equivalent of advantage or odds but usually implies a slight but decisive superiority (here we have the edge on our rivals, not only because of our superior location, but also because we are reputedly reckless about reducing prices—Publishers' Weekly).

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.
adversary *opponent, antagonist

adverse 1 Adverse, antagonistic, counter, counteractive opposed to a thing rather than a quality in the thing which is opposed ⟨the leader is adverse to all independence of opinion among his followers⟩ However they are sometimes used as synonyms with only this distinction, that adverse is chiefly referred to opinion or intention and adverse to feeling and inclination ⟨I . . . hope that our periodical judges will not be very adverse to me, and that perhaps they may even favor me—Cowper⟩ ⟨the writer of critical studies . . . has to mediate between the author whom he loves and the public, who are certainly indifferent and frequently adverse—Stevenson⟩ ⟨what cat's adverse to fish—Gray⟩

adversity *misfortune, mischance, mishap

Ana *trial, tribulation, affliction: *distress, misery, suffering: *poverty, privation, indigence, destitution

Ant prosperity —Con felicity, *happiness, bliss: ease, comfort (see REST): wealth, affluence, opulence, richness (see corresponding adjectives at RICH)

advert 1 Advert, revert are sometimes confused because of a similar basic meaning when they are used in reference to discourse or contemplation. Advert denotes to turn from the point, topic, or incident under consideration in order to take up another. It sometimes suggests an unconscious or an illogical break in the chain of thought, but in highly discriminating use may still retain its primary implication of heeding or taking notice ⟨we are but too apt to consider things in the state in which we find them, without sufficiently adverting to the causes by which they have been produced—Burke⟩ ⟨the distinction . . . will be rendered more apparent by adverting to that provision in the second section . . . of the constitution—John Marshall⟩ Revert adds to advert the implication of return either consciously or unconsciously to a point or topic already discussed or previously in one's mind ⟨she now drops this idea, and reverts to his reasoning on death—Goldsmith⟩

2 *refer, allude

Ana remark, notice, note, observe (see see)

Con ignore, disregard, overlook, *neglect advertise publish, announce, proclaim, broadcast, promote, *declare

Ana report, recount, *relate: *communicate, impart

Con *suppress, repress: conceal, *hide, bury advertisement publication, announcement, broadcasting, proclamation, promulgation, declaration (see under DECLARE)

Ana *publicity, ballyhoo, promotion, propaganda advice 1 Advice, counsel and their corresponding verbs advise, counsel denote recommendation or to make a recommendation as to a decision or a course of conduct. Advice and advise imply real or pretended knowledge or experience, often professional or technical, on the part of the one who advises and may apply to any of the affairs of life ⟨advice regarding the choice of books⟩ ⟨the extension specialist assists and advises the farmers⟩ ⟨legal advice⟩ Counsel often stresses the fruit of wisdom or deliberation, and presupposes weightier occasions than advice or more authority or a closer personal relationship in the one who counsels ⟨I do in friendship counsel you to leave this place—Shak.⟩ ⟨seek counsel in affairs of state⟩ The noun sometimes suggests instruction or advice of a lofty or ideal character ⟨the Christian counsel of perfection⟩

Ana admonition (see corresponding verb at REPROVE): warning, forewarning, cautioning (see WARN): instruction, teaching (see corresponding verbs at TEACH)

2 intelligence, *news, tidings advisable *expedient, politic

Ana prudent, *wise, sensible: *beneficial, advantageous, profitable: practical, *practicable stunts performed for hire as a public spectacle or to their performers ⟨a daredevil acrobat⟩ Rash implies imprudent hastiness or boldness in word or action: reckless, utter heedlessness or carelessness of consequences ⟨we must deter him and . . . If we do not I am convinced Austin will do something rash that he will forever repent—Meredith⟩ ⟨a reckless disregard of the future⟩ ⟨reckless audacity came to be considered courage—Derek Patmore⟩ Foolhardy implies a foolish daring or recklessness and may be used of persons or of their acts ⟨the perfectly foolhardy feat of swimming the flood—Sinclair Lewis⟩

Ana audacious, bold, intrepid, doughty (see BRAVE): aspiring, panting (see AIM vb): *ambitious, emulous

Ant unadventurous: cautious

adversary *opponent, antagonist

Ana assailant, attacker, assaulter (see corresponding verbs at ATTACK): *enemy, foe: competitor, rival (see corresponding verbs at RIVAL)

Ant ally —Con colleague, *partner: supporter, champion, backer, upholder (see corresponding verbs at SUPPORT)

adverse 1 Adverse, antagonistic, counter, counteractive mean so opposed as to cause interference, often harmful or fatal interference. All four may be applied to one thing that comes into conflict with another ⟨an adverse policy⟩ ⟨an adverse wind had so delayed him that his cargo brought him but half its proper price—Lowell⟩ ⟨an antagonistic associate⟩ ⟨a counter proposal⟩ ⟨a counteractive agency⟩ Only antagonistic, counter, and, occasionally, counteractive are used to express mutual or reciprocal opposition ⟨antagonistic principles⟩ ⟨counter currents⟩ ⟨counteractive poisons⟩ Despite their common ground of meaning, each of these four words has distinct implications which limit its applicability and greatly increase its expressiveness. Adverse conveys so strongly the idea of unfavorable or unpropitious opposition that it often means harmful or fatal ⟨adverse criticism⟩ ⟨adverse fortune⟩ ⟨a spirit adverse to the existence of democracy⟩ Antagonistic usually implies hostility and also, when mutual opposition is suggested, incompatibility or even irreconcilability ⟨neighboring races are often antagonistic⟩ ⟨the antagonistic principles of aristocracy and democracy—Parrington⟩ ⟨some sociologists believe that the welfare of the individual and the welfare of society are antagonistic aims⟩ Counter, which usually denotes acting, moving, or proceeding from the opposite side or from opposite sides, does not necessarily connotate hostility but it does imply inevitable contact, with either resulting conflict or tension ⟨whirlpools are usually caused by counter currents in a stream⟩ ⟨the counter influences of authority and freedom in shaping the character of youth⟩ Counteractive, on the other hand, invariably implies the destruction or nullification of the thing or things opposed ⟨prescribing physicians must know the counteractive effects of certain medicines on others⟩ ⟨in the training of delinquents a bad influence is dealt with by the introduction of a counteractive good influence⟩

Ana harmful, hurtful, injurious (see corresponding nouns at INJURY): hindering, impeding, obstructing (see HINDER vb): detrimental, deleterious, *pernicious: fatal, *deadly

Ant propitious —Con auspicious, *favorable, benign: *beneficial, advantageous

2 Adverse, adverse are in origin and in common use contrasted rather than synonymous terms, though they are occasionally used as though similar in meaning. Adverse implies opposition that interferes and it is applied to the thing that stands in the way of one's progress or success ⟨the leader would tolerate no adverse opinions among his followers⟩ Averse implies repugnance in the person advise 26

advise 1 counsel (see under ADVICE 1)

Ant inadvisable

An avoid (see REPROVE): warn, forewarn, caution: induce, persuade

Con consult, confer, advise

2 consult, confer, commune, parley, treat, negotiate

An avoid (see REPROVE): warn, forewarn, caution: induce, persuade

advise 2 advocate (see under ADVICE 1)

3 notify, inform, apprise, acquaint

Ant impugn — Con assail, attack: combat, oppose, impugn

advise 3 counsel (see under ADVICE 1)

Ant defend, justify, vindicate, maintain: espouse (see ADVICE 1)

advise 4 counsel (see under ADVICE 1)

Ant impugn — Con assail, attack: combat, oppose, defend, justify, vindicate, maintain: espouse (see ADVICE 1)

Ant impose <— Con sustain, bear, support: support, uphold, champion, back

advise 5 counsel (see under ADVICE 1)

Ant impugn — Con assail, attack: combat, oppose, defend, justify, vindicate, maintain: espouse (see ADVICE 1)

advise 6 deliberate, considered, premeditated, designed, studied

advise 7 deliberate, considered, premeditated, designed, studied

advise 8 deliberate, considered, premeditated, designed, studied

advise 9 deliberate, considered, premeditated, designed, studied

advise 10 deliberate, considered, premeditated, designed, studied

advise 11 deliberate, considered, premeditated, designed, studied

advise 12 deliberate, considered, premeditated, designed, studied

advise 13 deliberate, considered, premeditated, designed, studied

advise 14 deliberate, considered, premeditated, designed, studied

advise 15 deliberate, considered, premeditated, designed, studied

advise 16 deliberate, considered, premeditated, designed, studied

Advise *adviser, advocate, assister, counselor, barrister, counsel, attorney, solicitor

Advocate vb *support, uphold, champion, back

Ant impugn — Con assault, attack: combat, oppose, defend, justify, vindicate, maintain: espouse (see ADVICE 1)

Aerated, ventila, oxygenate, carbonate. Aerate is the general term and interchangeable in certain phrases with any of the others; the last three are specific terms which are not freely interchangeable with each other. Aerate means to supply or impregnate with air or to expose to the action of air. It frequently implies a mechanical process (aerate soil by plowing). Aerate sewage by agitation in fresh air. It sometimes, however, implies a natural process (the blood is aerated in the lungs). Ventila is commonly used when exposure to air especially in large quantities with the object of purifying, freshening, or cooling is implied (ventila a room by opening windows). Ventila an engine by means of holes in its covering. The patient is unable adequately to ventilate himself with air because air cannot be easily drawn through the air passages, the caliber of which has been diminished by the disease—Science. It may be indistinguishable from aereate when applied to the blood but usually suggests rather the exposure to air and aereate the resulting gaseous exchange. More exact than either in this relation is oxygenate since it is the oxygen in the air that is required by the blood. Technically aereate and carbonate are not synonyms, for the latter means to impregnate with carbon dioxide but they may overlap when aerate is used broadly with the meaning to impregnate with a gas; hence, aerate or especially aerated is used in certain designations (as aerated water or aerated bread) where carbonated would correctly describe the process.

Aerial adj *airy, ethereal

Ant immaterial, incorporeal (see MATERIAL): impalpable, imperceptible, imponderable

Aeronautics, Aviation have to do with the operation of aircraft. Aeronautics is primarily a science dealing with the operation of any kind of aircraft. Engineers specializing in aeronautics. Aviation is an art, science, or practice concerned with the operation of heavier-than-air aircraft. Skill in aviation develops only when theoretical knowledge is supplemented by practical experience. Unlike aeronautics, it has extended use in which it may denote aircraft or their manufacture, development, and design. This is an aviation (see AVIATION). Recent advances in American aviation.

Aesthetic, dilettante, connoisseur all designate a person conspicuous for his enjoyment and appreciation of the beautiful, the exquisite, or the choice. Aesthete implies highly developed sensibilities, with acute delight in beauty of color, line, sound, and texture, and violent distaste for the ugly, shapeless, and discordant (no woman could walk down the street without risk of having her hat torn off... by some aesthete who happened to think it unbecoming—Shaw). That mystical synthetic sense, of which the modern aesthetic dreams,—the sense that sees, hears, tastes, smells, touches, all in one—Babbit. It often carries derogatory connotations of absurdity, extravagance, decadence, or effeminacy. It was perhaps natural for a man who had had to fight his way... to a recognized position in scholarly literature to be irritated by the poses of comfortable aesthetes—Renwick). Dilettante stresses the attitude of the lover of art as distinguished from that of the creative artist. Though its application to amateurs who were neither thoroughly familiar with the technique of their particular form of art nor seriously seeking for mastery, it acquired connotations of desultoriness, dabbling, and superficiality (he is a mere dilettante). However, it may apply to one who pursues an art or studies it merely for his own delight (he would always be by nature a contemplative and a dilettante; but he had had high things to contemplate, great things to delight in—Wharton). A generalization with which I find myself (with all the difference of an unknown dilettante) disagreeing—Heizer. Connoisseur (he is a dilettante) implies high appreciation of the beautiful in art; unlike it, it implies scholarly knowledge and trained taste. Because of the latter implication connoisseur is applied not only to one who knows a work of art when he sees it but also to one who recognizes superiority in other things governed by taste (as foods, wine, or gems). In this relation the word often comes close to epicure in its meaning. It is also applied to collectors of beautiful things (supposing also that the material of his Apologia was... defunct,... but who a few discerning connoisseurs of style would ever read that book now or a century hence?—T.S. Eliot). He has found time to make himself a connoisseur of porcelains, one of the most esoteric of collectors' hobbies—Heizer.

Aesthetic *artistic

Ant unaesthetic

Affable *gracious, cordial, genial, sociable

Ant courteous, polite (see CIVIL): open, candid, frank: amiable, obliging, complaisant: talkative, loquacious: suave, urbane

Ant reserved — Con uncommunicative, taciturn, reticent, silent: curt, brusque (see BLUFF): surly, grim, crabbed (see Sullen)

Affair 1 Affair, business, concern, matter, thing come into comparison only when they are little more than vague or general terms meaning something done or dealt with. Some or rarely all are used interchangeably in certain similar collocations such as his own affair, business, concern; public and private affairs, concerns, matters, business: a sorry affair, business, matter, thing; affairs, matters, things are in good condition. However, a degree of precision is possible, for each word carries distinctive implications which are not always obscured. Affair suggests action or performance; it may imply a process, an operation, a proceeding, an undertaking, a transaction (seeing a book through the press is a laborious and time-wasting affair—T. H. Huxley). In the plural it often denotes transactions of great importance such as those involved in the management of finances or in the carrying on of diplomatic negotiations (men of affairs). The had married a rich woman and administered her affairs. He was not supposed to have any affairs of his own—Mary Austin. Business usually stresses duty or office; sometimes it suggests an imposed task (because a Thing is every Body's Business, it is no Body's Business—Steele). The flight of his imagination is very swift: the following of it often a breathless business—Day Lewis. Concern suggests personal or direct relationship: it often implies an important bearing on one's welfare, success, or interests; thus, something is not one's concern because it has no bearing on one's interests, welfare, or success (the simplest way out of the difficulty was to do nothing and dismiss the matter as no concern of theirs—Conrad). Sometimes concern is preferred to affair when that which requires attention involves a degree of anxiety or solicitude (the concerns of state). Matter usually is more objective as well as more vague than the preceding words. It generally refers to something that is merely an object of consideration or that is to be dealt with (he will attend to these matters very soon) (this is still one matter in dispute) (he never insist without carrying the matter through—Russell). Thing is even more indefinite than matter and is often intentionally used when there is a desire to be vague or inexplicit (he promised that things would be better in the future) (first things should come first) (more things are wrought by prayer than this world dreams of—Tennyson) (these things are managed so well in France—Harte).2
*amour, intrigue, liaison

affect simulate, *assume, pretend, feign, counterfeit, sham affect 1 Affect, influence, touch, impress, strike, sway are more or less closely synonymous when they mean to produce or to have an effect upon a person or upon a thing capable of a reaction. Affect always presupposes a stimulus powerful enough to evoke a response or elicit a reaction (our eardrums are affected by ten octaves, at most, out of the endless range of sounds—Jeans). (even changes of season affect the townsman very little—Huxley). Often, in addition, affect implies a definite alteration or modifi-(1 am afraid... that this adventure has rather a-acted your admiration of her fine eyes—Austen.) When the object of the verb is a person, an intellectual or emotional effect is usually implied (such poetry affects one

as trite and meaningless) (the sight affected her to tears

Influence always presupposes an agent that moves a person or thing in some way or to some degree from a course, or effects changes in nature, character, or behavior (the judge was never influenced in his decisions by his sympathies or prejudices) (the body influences the mind and the mind the body) (the Society of Friends had been influenced by Quietism, and adversely affected by the para-lizing rationalism of the reigns of the first two Georges—Inge). Sometimes the implication of inducing, or inciting, or persuading, or even bribing is strong (monomaniacs, having first persuaded themselves, contrive to effect always implies a definite alteration or modifi-(1 am afraid that this adventure has rather a-acted your admiration of her fine eyes—Austen). When

the object of the verb is a person, an intellectual or emotional effect is usually implied (such poetry affects one
as trite and meaningless) (the sight affected her to tears

Influence always presupposes an agent that moves a person or thing in some way or to some degree from a course,
or effects changes in nature, character, or behavior (the
judge was never influenced in his decisions by his sympathies or prejudices) (the body influences the mind and
the mind the body) (the Society of Friends had been influenced by Quietism, and adversely affected by the para-
lizing rationalism of the reigns of the first two Georges—Inge). Sometimes the implication of inducing, or inciting, or persuading, or even bribing is strong (monomaniacs,
having first persuaded themselves, contrive to

affection adj touching, *moving, pathetic, poignant, impressive

Affecting, rousing, rallying (see STR vb): distressing, troubling (see TROUBLE vb): pitiful, piteous, pitiable

affection 1 feeling, emotion, passion, sentiment

Affect *propensity, leaning, penchant: predilection, bias: inclination, disposition (see corresponding verbs at INcline). Ant antipathy—Con aversion (see ANTIPATHY):
hate, hatred

2 love, *attachment

Affect *devotion, piety, *fidelity: liking, doting, enjoying (see LIKE vb): tenderness, warmth, sympathy (see corresponding adjectives at TENDER) ant antipathy—Con coldness: cold: undemonstrative

Affect (see correspond ing adjectives at COLD): hate, detestation, hatred, abhor-rence (see under HATE vb) affection disease, disorder, condition, ailment, malady, complaint, distemper, syndrome

Affect, access, paroxysm (see FIT): disorder, derangement (see corresponding verbs at DISORDER) affectionate *loving, devoted, fond, doting

Affect *ardent, fervent, passionate (see IMPASSIONED): tender, sympathetic, warm

Affect *cold: demonstrative—Con a pathetic, *impassive, stolid

Afflicted depo si tion, testimony, *evidence

Affiliated *allied, *related, kindred, cognate

Affect dependent, *subordinate ant unaffiliated—Con independent, *free, autonomous affinity 1 attraction, sympathy

Affect repugnance, rebellion or repulsion, abhorrence (see corresponding adjectives at REPUGNANT): antipathy, affirm

profess, aver, avow, protest, avouch, declare, *assert, warrant, predicate affirmative, positive cause difficulties in their extended use, since each term has negative for its opposite and since both words may qualify identical or similar nouns. The distinctions are not clearly fixed, but tendencies in usage may be noted. In general affirmative implies denial as its opposite, and positive implies negation, or the absence of truth, reality, or actuality as its opposite. Something that is not affirmative may be destructive; something that is not positive may be null, nonexistent, or nugatory. Hence, an affirmative philosophy either affirms accepted principles or establishes new ones, and so is opposed to negative philosophies (as skepticism and nihilism). A positive philosophy (this often equals positivism) deduces its principles from something that is evident to the senses or is from the commonsense point of view regarded as real and factual. Metaphysics is from the positivist's point of view a negative philosophy. An investigation has an affirmative result when it confirms the hypothesis of the investigator; it has a positive result if something definite is discovered, whether the result proves or disproves the hypothesis. A person may be said to exercise an affirmative influence when he strengthens or improves something that exists or develops something better to take its place; he may be said to exert a positive influence when he affects others in definite concrete ways. A defeatist may exert a very positive influence which cannot be described as affirmative; an optimist's attitude is affirmative, but it often fails to exert a positive influence.

affront

vb *fasten, attach, fix affrukt

n

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.
afraid, brazeness (see corresponding adjectives at SHAMELESS)

Ant gratification — Con deference, *honor, homage: adulation, *compliment, flattery afraid *fearful, apprehensive Ana alarmed, scared (see FRIGHTEN); timorous, *timid Ant unafraid: sanguine — Con *cool, composed, imperturbable, collected: *confident, assured, sure aft *abait, astern Ana *after, behind: rear, back, *posterior, hind Ant fore — Con *before, ahead, forward

after prep, adj, adv After, behind are synonymous adverbs, prepositions, and adjectives when they mean following upon, especially in place or in time. They are rarely interchangeable, however, without a loss of precision. With reference to place after usually implies order of movement or sequence and characteristically goes with verbs or nouns implying motion (the faculty marched in pairs, one after another) So used, after not only conveys no suggestion of predominance in order of following, but it may, by stressing pursuit, even obscure its common implication of succession: to run after a person is to attempt to overtake him.
When, as often happens, after is used with verbs of rest, the implication of movement or sequence is rarely lost but is transferred to the object or is to be gathered from the context; one stays after the others (who have left); one calls after a person (who is walking ahead); one looks after the children of a friend (who is away, ill, or engaged).
In the same connection behind characteristically implies a position at the back of something at rest (the chair is behind the door) (the men sat themselves behind the women) (the garden is behind the house) When, however, the reference is to something moving, behind usually adds the implications of delay, lagging, or immobility; to run behind another is to be outstripped; to be left behind is to be outstripped or to remain when others have departed.

With reference to time, after is in far more frequent use than behind and is the required choice when only subsequence is implied (who ruled after James I?) <after one o’clock no one may leave the room> When behind is used in this connection, it usually implies a time when someone or something is due according to a schedule, a system, or a normal order of progression. Consequently it implies variously lateness, backwardness, or falling in arrears (You are two hours behind schedule) <theory often runs behind practice>

Ana abait, aft, astern
Ant before — Con forward, ahead (see BEFORE) after adj hinder, hind, rear, *posterior, back Con *preceding, antecedent, prior aftereffect, aftermath *effect, result, consequence, up-shot, sequel, issue, outcome, event age n 1 *Age, senility, senescence, dotage are comparable when they denote the period in one’s life when one is old in years and declining in body or mind or both. Age is now usually replaced by old age except in literary use <age cannot wither her—Shak> <age, I make light of it, fear not the sight of it—Higgins> Senility adds to age the implication of decay, especially of mental decay <rheumy old man, crumpled together. . . his mind gone down the road to senility—Roberts> Senescence designates the period or the process of the decline which results in senility or old age; it is in the life of the individual the antithesis of youth or adolescence. Dotage, even more than senility, implies the childishness or mental decline of age and thus indirectly heightens the suggestion of extreme old age (Old Daniel begins; he stops short—and his eye, through the lost look of dotage, is cunning and sly—Wordsworth>

Ana analogous words  Ant antonyms  Con contrasted words  See also explanatory notes facing page 1

Ant youth 2 *period, era, epoch, aeon

age vb mature, ripen, develop aged, old, elderly, superannuated when applied to persons mean far advanced in years. Aged implies extreme old age with signs of feebleness or, sometimes, senility <the aged creature came, shuffling along with ivory-headed wand—Keats> Old stresses the years of one’s life, but in itself carries no connotations of marked decline (a man, old, wrinkled, faded, withered—Shak) Elderly may imply no more than that the prime of life had been passed (when you see me again I shall be an old man—that was a slip, I meant to say elderly—J. R.

Lowell) Superannuated indicates that one has been retired or pensioned because of having reached a certain age (varying in different callings) <superannuated teachers> <superannuated judges> Sometimes the word implies merely that one has passed the years of usefulness and with this denotation it is applied to things as well as to persons.

Ana infirm, feeble, decrepit (see WEAK) Ant youthful — Con juvenile, puerile, boyish, virgin virginal, maiden (see YOUTHFUL) agency *mean, agent, instrumentality, instrument, medium, vehicle, channel, organ

Ant cause, determinant, antecedent: operation, action, working (see corresponding verbs at ACT): activity (see corresponding adjective ACTIVE): machinery, apparatus, gear, *equipment

agenda *program, schedule, timetable

Ant n 1 *mean, instrument, agency, instrumentality, medium, vehicle, channel, organ

Ant actor, operator, worker (see corresponding verbs at ACT): activator, energizer (see corresponding verbs at vITALIZE): performer, executor or executive (see corresponding verbs at PERFORM)

Ant patient 2 Agent, factor, attorney, deputy, proxy agree in meanning one who performs the duties of or transacts business for another, but differ in specific application. Agent is very general and may be used to express this idea in any context where a specific term is not required; distinctively, however, it often implies the activity of a go-between <ambassadors, ministers, emissaries, nunciarios are diplomatic agents of their governments or sovereigns> (the heads of departments are the political or confidential agents of the executive—John Marshall) <let every eye negotiate for itself and trust no agent—Shak.) Factor was once a near equivalent of agent but is now chiefly employed as a designation for a commercial agent buying and selling goods for others on commission <wool factor> <flour factor> It is also used specifically to name the official in charge of a trading post of the Hudson’s Bay Company. Attorney, now chiefly used as a designation for a professional legal agent (see LAWYER), once was applied to one who performed the personal offices of another who was absent, incapacitated, or unqualified for the work <I will attend my husband, be his nurse . . . for it is my office, and will have no attorney but myself—Shak> This sense still survives but in a narrower application to a person legally delegated to transact certain specified business for another who is absent or otherwise disqualified. Such a person is often called (in distinction from an attorney-at-law) a “private attorney” or an “attorney-in-fact,” and the power delegated him is called “power of attorney.” Deputy always implies possession through delegation of some or all of the powers of a superior (as a sovereign or a governmental or business executive). Almost always, also, it connotes responsibility to the person whose powers are deputed, rather than to the organization from which these powers ultimately derive. (the governor-general of Canada may appoint deputes to exercise his powers or functions locally or temporarily) (a vicar-general is a deputy of a bishop) Proxy implies a substitution of persons when a promise or pledge is solemnly made or a vote, as at a stockholders' meeting, is to be cast. In a marriage service a proxy for the bride or groom or in the baptismal service a proxy for a godparent merely utters the promises in the name of the absent person, the latter assuming the obligation of fulfilling them.

Agglomerate, agglomeration conglomerate, conglomeration, aggregate, aggregation Magnify, intensify, enhance: exalt, magnify aggrandize

2 Aggregate, aggregation, conglomerate, conglomeration imply the formation of a whole by parts or particles that are not merged into each other. An aggregate composed of fragments scattered by volcanic explosions as distinguishable <sandstone—is a natural aggregate of quartz and a cementing sub-

Agglomerate and agglomeration in general use seldom imply coherence of parts; they suggest either a huddling together or often a fortuitous association (a mere agglomeration of different races, without national unity, national aims—Page) In geology agglomerate designates a rock aggregate composed of irregularly shaped fragments scattered by volcanic explosions as distinguished from conglomerate, an aggregate composed of rounded, water-worn stones.

Agglomeration and agglomeration in general use seldom imply coherence of parts; they suggest either a huddling together or often a fortuitous association (a mere agglomeration of different races, without national unity, national aims—Page) In geology agglomerate designates a rock aggregate composed of irregularly shaped fragments scattered by volcanic explosions as distinguished from conglomerate, an aggregate composed of rounded, water-worn stones.

Aggrieve *wrong, oppress, persecute

Agile, nimble, brisk, spry mean acting or moving with quickness and alacrity. Agile implies dexterity and ease in the management of one's limbs or, by extension, one's wits (agile as a monkey) (in a flow of racy comment, skimming from one topic to another with an agile manner—Rose Macaulay) Nimble suggests surpassing lightness and swiftness of movement or action, and often implies a darting here and there with an agile ease <Madame Defarge knitted with nimble and intelligent talk—Benson> It is sometimes applied to things that do not move but are invigorating or exhilarating (brisk day) (brisk pace) (brisk reply) She walked briskly in the

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.
agitate 1 *shake, rock, convulse

Ant 2 *stir, rouse, arouse: *move, actuate, drive, impel agree 1 *assent, accede, consent, acquiesce, subscribe

Ant *protest (against): differ (with) — Con *object, kick, expostulate, remonstrate: *demur, balk, jib: oppose, *resist, withstand

2 Agree, concur, coincide are comparable when they mean to come into or to be in harmony regarding a matter of opinion or a policy. Agree implies union in thought or a complete accord: even if the context suggests previous discussion, the word usually indicates that argument is ended

Agreement is sometimes confused because (the old lady is as spry as a cricket)

Con the word usually indicates that argument is ended

<she is down one day, and up and spry the next>

Agrarian usually stresses the economic or political issues for the production of crops and the breeding of animals involved in the ownership of land, in the conditions of tenure, and in the right of the individual to the profits of his labor on the land (agrarian crises were frequent in Ireland in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries when the issue of tenant rights became acute) Agricultural crises were frequent in Ireland in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries when the issue of tenant rights became acute. Agricultural stress the rather successful and profitable use of land for the production of crops and the breeding of animals (agricultural crises are likely to occur when overproduction and a restriction of markets coincide)

When, however, agricultural interests are at stake and political action is held to be necessary, a party formed to promote these ends may be called an agrarian rather than an agricultural party, and a measure advocated as an agrarian rather than an agricultural measure.

agree 1 *acknowledge

Ant protest (against): differ (with) — Con *object, kick, expostulate, remonstrate: *demur, balk, jib: oppose, *resist, withstand

Analogous words: agrarian, agricultural are sometimes confused because agonizing *excruciating, racking

agonize *writhe, squirm

agitation *commotion, tumult, turmoil, turbulence, commotion, tumult, turmoil, turbulence, contusion, convulsion, upheaval

agog *eager, keen, anxious, avid, athirst

Ant *atheist, deist, freethinker, unbeliever, infidel

agree 1 *assent, accede, consent, acquiesce, subscribe

Ant *protest (against): differ (with) — Con *object, kick, expostulate, remonstrate: *demur, balk, jib: oppose, *resist, withstand

Agrarian usually stresses the economic or political issues for the production of crops and the breeding of animals involved in the ownership of land, in the conditions of tenure, and its profitable use.

Ant tranquility

agnostic n *atheist, deist, freethinker, unbeliever, infidel agonog *eager, keen, anxious, avid, athirst

Ant excited, galvanized, stimulated (see PROVOKE): roused, aroused, stirred (see STIR vb): *impatient, restive

Aloof — Con *indifferent, unconcerned, incurious, detached, uninterested, disinterested

agonize *writhe, squirm

Agrarian are sometimes confused because they carry common implications and are used to qualify like terms (as an agrarian or an agricultural society, an agrarian or an agricultural crisis, an agrarian or an agricultural policy). Both terms have reference to land, the conditions under which it is held, and its profitable use. Agrarian usually stresses the economic or political issues involved in the ownership of land, in the conditions of tenancy, and in the right of the individual to the profits of his labor on the land (agrarian crises were frequent in Ireland in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries when the issue of tenant rights became acute) Agricultural stress the rather successful and profitable use of land for the production of crops and the breeding of animals (agricultural crises are likely to occur when overproduction and a restriction of markets coincide) When, however, agricultural interests are at stake and political action is held to be necessary, a party formed to promote these ends may be called an agrarian rather than an agricultural party, and a measure advocated as an agrarian rather than an agricultural measure.

agree 1 *acknowledge

Ant protest (against): differ (with) — Con *object, kick, expostulate, remonstrate: *demur, balk, jib: oppose, *resist, withstand

2 Agree, concur, coincide are comparable when they mean to come into or to be in harmony regarding a matter of opinion or a policy. Agree implies union in thought or a complete accord: even if the context suggests previous discussion, the word usually indicates that argument is ended

Andrews (with) — Con (against):

<this is a point upon which all persons agree>

Agrarian usually stresses the economic or political issues for the production of crops and the breeding of animals involved in the ownership of land, in the conditions of tenure, and its profitable use.

Ant tranquility

Agreement is sometimes confused because (the old lady is as spry as a cricket)

Con the word usually indicates that argument is ended

<she is down one day, and up and spry the next>

Agrarian usually stresses the economic or political issues for the production of crops and the breeding of animals involved in the ownership of land, in the conditions of tenure, and its profitable use.

Ant tranquility

Agreement is sometimes confused because (the old lady is as spry as a cricket)

Con the word usually indicates that argument is ended

<she is down one day, and up and spry the next> agreed

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.
airy, aerial, ethereal can all mean as light and insubstantial—Woolf—so . . . ethereal in appearance with its cloud colors, that . . . even . . . the most beautiful golden shades . . . seemed heavy and dull and dead-looking by comparison—Hudson

Sometimes, especially when referred to persons, their words, or their thoughts, it suggests disembodied spirit or apartness from material interests <the ethereal quality of Shelley’s poetry>

(At times he tends to fall into excessive subtlety, to be too vaporous and ethereal—Babbitt)

Anna tenuous, rare, *thin: delicate, dainty, exquisite (see choice)—light, volatile, frivolous (see corresponding nouns at LIGHTNESS)

Ant substantial—Con *massive, massy, bulky, monumental:*material, corporeal, physical: solid, hard, *firm aisle *passage, passageway, ambulatory, corridor akin *like, alike, similar, analogous, comparable, parallel, uniform, identical

Ant related, kindred, cognate, allied: corresponding, agreeing, harmonizing, according, conforming (see agree)

Ant alien —Con foreign, extraneous (see extrinsic): divergent, disparate, *different alacrity *celerity, legerity

Ana eagerness, avidity, anxiety (see corresponding adjectives at EAGER): quickness, promptness, readiness (see corresponding adjectives at quick): agility, nimbleness, briskness (see corresponding adjectives at agile): expedition, dispatch, *haste

Ant languor —Con *lathargy, torpidity, stupor: impassiveness, apathy, stolidity (see under impassive): indifference, unconcern, aloofness (see corresponding adjectives at indifferent)

alarm n 1 Alarm, tocsin, alert agree in meaning a signal that serves as a call to action or to be on guard especially in a time of imminent danger. Alarm is used of any signal that arouses to activity not only troops, but emergency workers (as firemen, policemen); it suggests a sound such as a cry, a pealing of a bell, a beating of drums, or a siren <sound a fire alarm> (the dog’s barking gave the alarm)

Tocsin may be either an alarm sounded by bells usually from the belfry of a church or, more often, the bells sounding an alarm <the loud tocsin tolled their last alarm—Campbell> but is used figuratively for any sort of warning of danger. Alert, a military term for a signal to be on guard but is used figuratively for any sort of warning or the period during which this is maintained <an abandon-ship alarm was signaled. Warning for that . . . was to be four blasts of the ships whistle—Lowell Bennett> (a peacetime round-the-clock alert against surprise aerial attack—N. Y. Times)

2 fright, *fear, panic, terror, horror, dismay, dread, consternation, trepidation

Ana frightening, scaring, startling (see fright): agitation, perturbation, upset (see corresponding verbs at DISCOMPOSE)

Ant assurance: composure—Con calmness, tranquility, serenity (see corresponding adjectives at calm): self-possession, self-assurance (see confidence): equanimity, sangfroid

alveolus vb *frighten, fright, scare, startle, terrify, affright, terrorize, affray

Ant annul, daunt, horrify, *dismay: *surprise, astound, amaze, astonish

Ant assure: relieve —Con *comfort, solace, console albeit although, *though alchemy *magic, thaumaturgy, wizardry, sorcery, witch-alcoholic 住宅, 中医 alcoholic n *drunkard, inebriate, dipsomaniac, sob, soak, toper, tosspot, tippler alert adj 1 *watchful, wide-awake, vigilant Ana *agile, nimble, brisk: vary, circumspect, *cautious Con heedless, *careless: unconcerned, aloof, detached, *indifferent 2 clever, *intelligent, smart, bright, quick-witted, brilliant, knowing Ana *sharp, keen, acute: *quick, ready, prompt, apt: *shrewd, perspicacious Con *linguist, lackadaisical, listless: *lethargic, sluggish: *stupid, slow, dull, dense alert n *alarm, tocsin alias n *pseudonym, nom de guerre, incognito, nom de plume, pen name alibi n excuse, pretext, plea, *apology, apologia Ana explanation, justification, rationalization (see corresponding verbs at EXPLAIN) alien adj foreign, extraneous, *extrinsic Ana external, exterior, outside (see corresponding adjectives at OUTER): adventitious, incidental, *accidental: *repugnant, repellent, abhorrent: incompatible, incongruous, *inconsonant Ant akin: assimilable —Con *relevant, material, pertinent, germane: compatible, *consonant, congruous, congenial: kindred, cognate, *related alien n foreigner, *stranger, outlier, outsider, immigrant, émigré Ana citizen —Con subject, national (see CITIZEN) alienate 1 *transfer, convey, deed Ana convert, proverse or proselytize (see corresponding nouns at CONVERT): *separate, part, sever, sudden, divorce Ant unite: reunite —Con reconcile, conform, accommodate, adjust, *adapt: associate, link, *join alienation 1 derangement, *aberration Ana *insanity, lunacy, mania, dementia: imbecility, idiocy, moronity (see base words at FOOL) 2 *solitude, isolation, seclusion alienist psychiatrist, psychopathologist, *neurologist, psychotherapist, psychoanalyst alight vb 1 *descend, dismount Ana mount, *ascend, scale, climb 2 Alight, light, land, perch, roost share the meaning to come to rest after or as if after a flight, a descent, or a fall.

Alight suggests previous controlled or gentle movement suggesting settling of a fowl for rest or sleep, especially by domestic fowls, on the perches and in the shelters prepared for them. So perch often implies elevation of position and tenuousness of grasp or hold (twenty or more [rooks] perched aloft, cawing and conversing comfortably—Jeffreys) ⟨a lofty perpendicular cliff . . . with a castle . . . perched on the distant top—Lucas⟩ Roost, when used of persons, often suggests a position like that of roosting fowls ⟨boys roosting on the rail of a fence⟩ Con *rise, arise, soar, ascend, rocket align *line, line up, range, array Ana *order, arrange, marshal: regulate, fix, *adjust Con *disorder, disarrange, derange, unsettle alike *like, similar, analogous, comparable, akin, parallel, uniform, identical Ana *same, selfsame, equivalent, identical Ant different —Con *distinct, separate: *different, divergent, diverse, disparate, various alignment *food, pabulum, nutriment, nourishment, sustenance, pap Ana *poison, venom, bane alive 1 *living, animated, animal, vital Ana *active, dynamic, live, operative: *lively, vivacious, sprightly: being, existing (see be) Ant dead, defunct —Con lifeless, inanimate, deceased (see DEAD): inert, *inactive: torpid, comatose (see LETHARGIC)
2 *aware, awake, sensible, cognizant, conscious Ana alert, wide-awake, vigilant, *watchful: *intelligent, knowing, quick-witted Ant blind (to): anesthetic (to) —Con *indifferent, unconcerned, aloof: insensitive, *insensible, impassible alkaline, basic are closely related and in many aspects of their use synonymous terms. Both are opposites or correlates of the adjective acid and denote some aspect of relationship to bases (alkalies). Distinctively, alkaline suggests the properties (as neutralizing acids, turning litmus paper blue) of bases ⟨alkaline taste⟩ ⟨alkaline solution⟩ ⟨alkaline earth⟩ ⟨a strong alkaline reaction⟩ Basic relates more directly to the bases themselves, especially in implying derivation from or capacity to react as a base ⟨a basic salt⟩ ⟨basic dye⟩ all adj 1 *whole, entire, total, gross Ana complete, plenary, *full 2 All, every, each, when applied to the individuals of a group, imply inclusion of the entire membership with no exceptions. All is applied to the aggregate of individuals and implies consideration of it as a unit without regard to the individuals as distinct persons or things ⟨all men are mortal⟩ ⟨all books are written to be read⟩ Every is applied to any of the individuals comprising the group, regarded not as a concrete person or thing but as the type or representative of the entire membership ⟨every man is mortal⟩ ⟨every book published should be worth reading⟩ Each is applied to any or every individual of the group, but unlike every it implies reference to him or to it as a distinct, recognizable, and therefore concrete person or thing ⟨he knows the weaknesses of each batter on the team⟩ ⟨each book on this shelf is worth reading⟩ ⟨each person in this club must pay his share of the expense⟩ Ant no
all-around *versatile, many-sided Ana complete, *full: apt, ready, *quick allay *relieve, alleviate, lighten, assuage, mitigate Ana abate, lessen, *decrease, diminish: mollify, *pacify, appease: *moderate, temper Ant intensify —Con *provoke, excite, stimulate: *stir, arouse, rouse: aggravate, enhance (see INTENSIFY) allege *adudge, cite, advance: *assert, declare, profess, avouch, avow: re-cite, recount, rehearse, state (see RELATE) Ant contravene: (in law) traverse —Con *deny, contradict, gainsay, negative, impugn: *disprove, refute, allegiance  35  allot rebut, controvert

allegiance fealty, loyalty, *fidelity, devotion, piety Ana faithfulness, steadfastness, constancy, staunchness (see corresponding adjectives at FAITHFUL): obediance, deference, homage, *honor: obedience (see corresponding adjective OBEDIENT): *obligation, duty Ant treachery: treason —Con traitoroussness, perfidy, faithlessness, disloyalty (see corresponding adjectives at FAITHLESS): disaffection, alienation (see corresponding verbs at ESTRANGE) allegory 1 Allegory, symbolism designate methods of representation in art. Both characteristically aim to represent concretely something that is abstract or for some other reason not directly representable. Allegory is applied to a form of representation found not only in literature but also in painting and sculpture. It evokes a dual interest, one in the story, scene, or characters presented and the other in the ideas they convey or the significance they bear; it demands not only aesthetic enjoyment but intellectual interpretation. The incidents, scenes, or characters may be historical or fictitious or fabulous, but if the artist has given to the historical an added meaning or has invented his material to convey an idea or truth, he has employed allegory. Symbolism is applied to a form of representation used not only in literature, painting, and sculpture but also in music, architecture, ceremonial, and pageantry. It implies an attempt to represent what by its very nature is incapable of direct representation because it is immaterial, allegories used by Plato in expounding a difficult philosophical seed). Myth is applied to a type of brief allegory used especially by Plato in expounding a difficult philosophical conception. Such myths are, as a rule, invented and their characters and incidents are purely imaginary. In a fable the moral is usually clearly stated at the end. Its characters are animals (as in Orwell’s Animal Farm) or inanimate things that by talking and acting as human beings reflect the weaknesses and follies of men.

alleviate *relieve, lighten, assuage, mitigate, allay Ana *moderate, temper: lessen, reduce, diminish, *decrease: remedy, *cure Ant aggravate —Con *intensify, heighten: *provoke, excite, stimulate: arouse, awaken, rouse, *stir alliance, league, coalition, fusion, confederacy, confederation, federation agree in the idea of combination, chiefly political, for a common object. Alliance applies particularly to a joining of interests on the part of families (by marriage) or of states (by compact or treaty); it is also less formally used of a connection for mutual benefit between other bodies, organized or not (a defensive alliance) (an alliance between producers and consumers) League though often used without distinction from alliance typically suggests a more formal compact or more definite object (the Solemn League and Covenant) and may frequently (unlike alliance) be taken in a bad sense (to be in league with the powers of darkness) Coalition refers to a temporary alliance of otherwise opposing interests, parties, or factions (Mr. Fox, and his famous coalition with Lord North—Gibbon) (a coalition government) Confederation is a coalition of political parties for the purpose of defeating another party in an election (a fusion of Republicans and independent Democrats in New York City opposed the Tammany Democratic ticket) Confederacy and confederation apply specifically to a union by compact or treaty of independent states under a government to which powers are delegated for dealing primarily with common external relations (the Southern Confederacy) (the Articles of Confederation) (the German Confederation) Federation in its broad sense includes any union under the terms of a league or covenant (the Federation of Labor) but specifically it designates a sovereign state or city formed by the union of other states or cities with a central general government and several local governments (the United States of America constitutes a federation) (federation was the name given to the scheme for blending the Five Towns into one town—Bennett) (the Federation of Malaysia) allied *related, cognate, kindred, affiliated Ana akin, parallel, similar (see LIKE): linked, associated, united, connected (see JOIN): cooperating, uniting, conjoining (see UNITE) Ant unallied —Con alien, foreign, extraneous (see EXTRANEOUS): *different, divergent, diverse, various, disparate allocate *allot, assign, apportion Ana *distribute, dispense, divide, deal, dole: *grant, accord, award Con withhold, retain, hold, hold back, *keep allot, assign, apportion, allocate mean to give as one’s share, portion, role, or place. Allot implies more or less arbitrary or haphazard selection and in itself conveys no suggestion of a fair or equal distribution (allotted himself an hour a day for exercise) (allot 500 square feet to an exhibitor) (he had been allotted a small sitting room—Mackenzie) (Brutus and Cassius ... were allotted the minor governments of Crete and Cyrene—Buchan) Assign stresses authoritative and usually fixed allotment; it too carries no hint of an even division (this original and supreme will organizes the government, and assigns to different departments their respective powers—John allow 36

alone

allow (to each month there has been assigned by tradition a birthstone considered appropriate to that month—Nurnberg & Rosenblum) Apportion, on the other hand, implies a principle of fair division, sometimes of equivalence in sharing, but more often of a proportionate distribution (after each decennial census Congress apportions the number of representatives to be elected by each state) (his guardians had apportioned to him an allowance . . . adequate to his position—Disraeli) Allocate is used chiefly in reference to money, property, territory, or powers, and suggests definite appropriation to a particular person or group or dedication to a particular use (allocate a sum of money for the construction of a bridge) (districts of Czechoslovakia allocated to Germany by the Munich Agreement) (the Marine Corps would be allocated primary responsibility for amphibious development and doctrine pertaining to landing forces—Collier’s Yr. Bk.)

Ana divide, dispense, *distribute, deal, dole: *give, bestow

Con *keep, retain, withhold, hold back: confiscate, appropriate, *arrogate allow 1 permit, suffer, *let, leave

Ana tolerate, endure, stand, brook (see bear): accede, acquiesce (see assent): *yield, submit, defer

Ant inhibit —Con *forbid, prohibit, enjoin: *prevent, avert, ward

2 *grant, concede

Ana admit, *acknowledge, confess: acquiesce, accede, *assent

Ant disallow —Con reject, refuse (see decline): *disapprove, depreciate: *deny, gainsay, contradict, traverse allowance 1 *ration, dole, pittance

Ana allotment, apportionment, assignment (see corresponding verbs at allot): *share (see corresponding verb share): grant, *appropriation, subsidy

2 Allowance, concession both signify a change made by way of compromise or adjustment. Allowance usually implies a modification or variation of a requirement or a standard made for a good reason (as probable contingencies or mitigating circumstances) (make allowance for the current in steering toward the opposite bank) (make allowance for his inexperience) (make allowance for wear through friction in designing the parts of a machine) (if business imposes its restraints and its silences and impediments, Mr. Darnay as a young gentleman of generosity knows how to make allowance for that circumstance—Dickens) (make allowance for the fact of being alone but more often suggests isolation accompanied by a longing for company (he was lonely, but not in an unhappy sense . . . it was no hardship for him to be alone—Canby) (his grim look, his pride, his silence, his wild outbursts of passion, left William lonely even in his court—J. R. Green) (she felt more lonely and forsaken than at any time since his father’s death—Archibald Marshall)

Lonesome, often more poignant, suggests sadness after a separation or bereavement (you must keep up your spirits, mother, and not be lonesome because I’m not at home—Dickens) (her flight . . . yet smote my lonesome heart more than all misery—Shelley) (sitting alone, he thought . . . he was lonesome—Coleridge) (as forlorn as King Lear at the end of his days—G. W. Johnson) Desolate is most extreme in suggesting inconsolable grief at loss or bereavement (with a fatherless, a desolate orphan—Coleridge) (for her false mate has fled and left her desolate—Shelley)

Ant repulsive —Con *offensive, loathsome, repugnant, revolting: repellent, abhorrent, distasteful, obnoxious (see repugnant)

ally colleague, *partner, copartner, confederate

Ana *associate, comrade, companion: supporter, upholder, backer (see corresponding verbs at support): cooperator (see corresponding verb at unite)

Ant adversary —Con *enemy, foe: competitor, rival (see corresponding verbs at rival): *opponent, antagonist almost *nearly, approximately, well-nigh alms benefit, contribution, *donation

Ana *charity, philanthropy: dole, pittance, allowance, *ration alone adj 1 Alone, solitary, lonely, lonesome, lone, lorn, forlorn, desolate may all refer to situations of being apart from others or emotions experienced while apart. Alone stresses the fact of physical isolation and also may connote feelings of isolation from others (the captain of a ship at sea is a remote, inaccessible creature, something like a prince of a fairy tale, alone of his kind—Conrad) (a man on an island, alone, he was to be left—Fulton) (Loney may simply indicate the fact of being alone but more often suggests isolation accompanied by a longing for company (he was lonely, but not in an unhappy sense . . . it was no hardship for him to be alone—Canby) (his grim look, his pride, his silence, his wild outbursts of passion, left William lonely even in his court—J. R. Green) (she felt more lonely and forsaken than at any time since his father’s death—Archibald Marshall)

Lonesome, often more poignant, suggests sadness after a separation or bereavement (you must keep up your spirits, mother, and not be lonesome because I’m not at home—Dickens) (her flight . . . yet smote my lonesome heart more than all misery—Shelley) (sitting alone, he thought . . . he was lonesome—Coleridge) (as forlorn as King Lear at the end of his days—G. W. Johnson) Desolate is most extreme in suggesting inconsolable grief at loss or bereavement (with a fatherless, a desolate orphan—Coleridge) (for her false mate has fled and left her desolate—Shelley)

Solitary, lonely, lonesome, desolate are applied to places and locations more than the other words discriminated above. Solitary may be applied either to something that is apart from things similar or that is uninhabited or unvisited by human beings (a solitary chamber, or rather cell, at the top of the house, and separated from all the other apartments by a gallery and staircase—M. W. Shelley) (Loney may be applied to what is either far apart from things similar and seldom visited or to what is inhabited by only one person or group and conducive to loneliness (heard not only in the towns but even in lonesome farmhouses

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.
aloof

Ana

Ant

Con

alteration

altercate amateur

amass amalgamation

amalgam

amalgamation

amalgam

amalgam

amalgam
(one who competes without remuneration) and a professional (one who competes for reward) prevails. In other use the word is opposed to expert and adept, as well as professional. Sometimes it suggests lack of experience or apprenticeship (every artist was first an amateur—Emerson); sometimes it connotes indulgence in a particular pursuit as a pastime or as an avocation (how could an amateur venture out and make an exhibition of himself after such splendid rowing!—Jeffries) Very often, especially in contrast to expert or adept, it connotes superficiality, bungling, or indifference to professional standards (it is beginning to be hinted that we are a nation of amateurs—Rosebery) (the third Earl of Shaftesbury ... illustrated this unsystematic method of thinking. He was an amateur, an aristocratic amateur, careless of consistency—Ellis) Dilettante is applied to an amateur (in the older underogatory sense of that word) in the fine arts (see AESTHETE). It stresses enjoyment rather than effort, a fretting rather than a concentration of one’s energies, and, sometimes, the point of view of the aesthete (the dilettante lives an easy, butterfly life, knowing nothing of ... toil and labor—Osler) (we continue to respect the erudite mind, and to decry the appreciative spirit as amateurish and dilettante—Benson) Dabbler implies a lack of serious purpose, but it suggests desultory habits of work and lack of persistence (your dabbler in metaphysics are the most dangerous creatures breathing—Tucker) (the certainty of touch which marks the difference between an artist and the dabbler ... can come only after patient study—Osler) Tyro does not necessarily imply youth but does suggest comparable inexperience or audacity with resulting incompetence or crudeness (it may be fancy on the part of a tyro in music to suggest that a change from poetry to prose occurs when Beethoven introduces in the last movement of the Choral Symphony ... a subject in words—Alexander) (a noble theme! the tyro cried, and straightforwardly scribbled off a sonnet. “A noble theme,” the poet sighed, “I am not fit to write upon it”—Wells)

Ana: novice, apprentice, probationer Ant: professional: expert—Con: adept, wizard, virtuoso

(see EXPERT)

amative: amorous, amatory, *erotic amatory: *erotic, aphrodisiac, amative, amorous amaze: mb astatic, flabbergast, astonish, *surprise Ana: dumbfound, bewilder, confound, nonplus (see PUZZLE): impress, touch, strike, *affect amazement: *wonder, wonderment, admiration amazon: *virago, termagant ambassador, legate, nuncio, minister, envoy, internuncio, chargé d’affaires: all designate a diplomatic agent serving his sovereign or government in a foreign country and are here compared with reference to their order of precedence as fixed by international regulations and protocol. Ambassador, legate, and nuncio designate a diplomatic agent of the first rank who is accredited to the head of the state in which he serves, is considered to represent both the government and the person of the head of state whom he serves, and as the personal representative of his sovereign or chief executive enjoys certain privileges and precedences not shared by diplomats of lesser rank. An ambassador (in full ambassador extraordinary and plenipotentiary) is almost always a resident agent, though the term may also denote one who goes on a special mission as the chief executive’s diplomatic agent. In this case he may be distinguished as an ambassador-at-large. The comparable diplomatic agents of the pope are called legate and nuncio, the difference between them being that a legate goes on a special mission and is clothed with authority to act in the name of the pope and a nuncio serves as the accredited resident ambassador of the Holy See at a foreign court or seat of government. Minister designates a diplomatic agent of the second or of the third rank. He, too, is accredited to the head of the state to which he is sent but as the representative solely of the government and not of the person of the head of his own state. As an agent of the second rank, he may also be called an envoy, for his full title is envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary. Internuncio is the designation of the papal diplomatic agent of the second rank equivalent to an envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary. Agents of the third rank, called more fully ministers resident are now uncommon. They perform essentially the same function as the envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary but are usually assigned to less important capitals.

A chargé d’affaires is an agent of the fourth rank who directs diplomatic affairs in place of an ambassador or minister in the absence or lack of such higher-ranked agent. He is accredited to the head of the department dealing with foreign affairs rather than to the head of the state and his appointment may be on a permanent footing and by his home government or on an interim basis by the head of a mission (an ambassador or minister).

Ambiguity, equivocation, tergiversation, double entendre are comparable when they denote expression or, more often, an expression, capable of more than one interpretation. Ambiguity is referable to an expression that admits of two or sometimes more interpretations; commonly, however, it suggests the use of a word or phrase rather than a construction that may be taken in either of two senses (where no ambiguity arises, the word polygon may be used to refer either to the broken line, or to the part of the plane enclosed by it—R. R. Smith) Ambiguity does not in itself suggest intentional lack of explicitness; when that idea is to be conveyed or when an attempt to mislead or an indifference to accuracy in statement is to be suggested, equivocation is the preferable word (the first cardinal sin from the logician’s standpoint is equivocation. Thus Hobbes has declared that “in all discourses wherein one man pretends to instruct or convince another, he should use the same word constantly in the same sense”—Philip Wheelwright) (equivocation is halfway to lying—Penn) But equivocation may imply that the writer or speaker is himself confused. Tergiversation stresses a shifting of senses, especially of a word or words important to an argument. It implies evasion and looseness of thought; more specifically it connotes intentional subterfuge and often a low standard of intellectual honesty (humanism depends very heavily, I believe, upon the tergiversations of the word human; and in general, upon implying clear and distinct philosophic ideas which are never there—T. S. Eliot) Double entendre designates an ambiguity which invites or offers a twofold meaning, one sense being a cover for a subtle implication, especially a stinging or an indelicate implication (sometimes with these parliamentary comedies, the humor lay in a kind of double entendre, using the phrase in an innocent sense—Manchester Guardian) (bedroom farce with many of the double entendres ... that go with that form of entertainment—McCarten)

Ant: lucidity: explicitness—Con: clearness, perspicuousness (see corresponding adjectives at CLEAR): definiteness, specificity, expressiveness (see corresponding adjectives at EXPLICIT)

Ambiguous: equivocal, cryptic, enigmatic, vague, *obscure, dark Ana: dubious, *doubtful, questionable Ant: explicit—Con: lucid, perspicuous, *clear: express, definite, specific, categorical (see EXPLICIT) ambition, aspiration, pretension mean strong desire for advancement. Ambition has personal advancement or preferment as its end; it may be praiseworthy but is sometimes inordinate (ambition for fame) (ambition to hold office) (ambition to acquire wealth) (vain ambition, which o'erleaps itself—Shak.) Aspiration implies as its object something felt to be above one, the striving after which is uplifting or ennobling (aspiration after knowledge) (that spirit of his in aspiration lifts him from the earth—Shak.)
Aspiration, however, is sometimes used especially in the plural in a derogatory sense of ambition which is felt to be unwarranted or presumptuous (his aspirations must be nipped in the bud) Pretension (see also CLAIM, PRETENSE) may be preferred to aspiration in this latter sense, for it carries a hint of presumptuousness and, therefore, of lack of real claim to the powers which fulfillment of the ambition or aspiration requires (they are always looked upon, either as neglected, or discontented because their pretensions have failed—Montagu) More often pretension implies less driving power than ambition or aspiration and suggests the guidance of mere desire rather than the possession of the necessary gifts (it was the undergraduate literary club, whose membership included all nice boys with literary pretensions—Marquand)
Ana urge, lust, *desire: eagerness, avidity, keenness, anxiety (see corresponding adjectives at EAGER): spur, goad, incentive, *motive
Con contentment, satisfaction (see corresponding verbs at SATISFY): resignation, *patience: indolence, fainency, sloth (see corresponding adjectives at LAZY)

ambitious 1 Ambitious, emulous both mean extremely desirous of something that will give one power, fame, success, or riches. Ambitious often implies inordinate, sometimes presumptuous, eagerness to advance oneself or to attain something beyond one's present reach; it may, in addition, connote aggressiveness in the pursuit of one's ends (the noble Brutus hath told you Caesar was ambitious: if it were so, it was a grievous fault—Shak.) Emulous stresses the desire to equal or surpass others; it can suggest covetous rivalry or merely the spirit of competition (men of pedigree . . . emulous always of the nearest place to any throne, except the throne of grace—Cowper) Ana *eager, avid, anxious, keen: aspiring, pining, aiming (see AIM vb): daring, venturous, *adventurous Ant unambitious —Con apathetic, phlegmatic, stolid (see IMPASSIVE): indolent, fainent, slothful, *lazy

2 Ambitious, pretentious, utopian are comparable when they are applied to such matters as plans, designs, programs, or policies and mean striving or exceeding the capacity of their authors or executants. Something is ambitious which is either so far beyond what can with certainty be accomplished that its realization or execution is doubtful or which, if realized, is accomplished only by excessive effort or by testing one's powers to the utmost (the philosopher has the ambitious aim of unifying, or harmonizing, these points of view—Inge) (this last novel was his most ambitious and possibly his best) Something is pretentious which so far exceeds one's powers or resources that any attempt to carry it out reveals one's inadequacy, inexperience, or lack of sufficient skill; in this sense it often but not necessarily implies ostentation (the program was too pretentious for so young a violinist) Sometimes is utopian which is utterly impracticable or unattainable under present or sometimes, any conditions. Utopian, if it does not suggest an idealistic approach, invariably implies indifference to actualities (the reformers started out with an ambitious program which its critics called utopian; time has shown that it was too pretentious) Ana audacious, bold (see BRAVE): daring (see ADVENTURous): ostentatious, *showy Ant modest —Con lowly, *humble: *moderate, temperate amble vb *saunter, stroll Ana loiter, dawdle (see DELAY): meander, ramble, roam (see WANDER) ambulant ambulatory, peripatetic, *itinerant, nomadic, vagrant Ant bedridden (of patients) amenity adverbial, peripatetic, *itinerant, nomadic, vagrant ambulatory n *passage, passageway, aisle, gallery, cloister, arcade, hall, hallway ambuscade *ambush ambush vb *surprise, waylay Ana *attack, assault, assail: trap, entrap, snare, ensnare, capture, *catch Ambush, ambuscade mean a device to entrap an enemy by lying in wait under cover for an opportune moment to make a surprise attack. Ambush, however, is also used to designate an act of lying in wait or in concealment (as for spying, frightening, or obtaining an advantage); when used of nonmilitary activity it sometimes connotes unfairness or cowardliness (ambushes of cutthroats—Thackeray) (when he was a boy he . . . spied on the Pecos men . . . He had lain in ambush for two nights on the mountain—Cather) Ambuscade usually implies the legitimate strategic disposition of troops in concealment, but in military use is more often applied to the body of troops or to their position than to the trap (the knights and gentlemen volunteered for an ambuscade to cut off the convoy—Froude) (fear in every wavering brake an ambuscade—Tennyson)

Ana trap, snare, *lure: *attack, onset, onslaught, assault ameliorate *improve, better, help Ana amend, remedy, reform, rectify, *correct: mitigate, alleviate, *relieve, lighten Ant worsen: deteriorate vt —Con *injure, harm, hurt, damage, impair, mar, spoil: *intensify, aggravate amenable 1 answerable, liable, accountable, *responsible Ana open, subject, *liable: *subordinate, dependent, subject Ant independent (of): autonomous —Con autocratic, arbitrary, *absolute: *free, autarchic 2 tractable, *obedient, docile, biddable Ana pliant, adaptable, pliable (see PLASTIC): responsive (see TENDER): sensitive, open (see LIABLE): submissive, *tame, subdued Ant recalcitrant, refractory —Con intractable, *unruly, ungovernable, headstrong: *fierce: *obstinate, stubborn, mulish amend reform, *correct, rectify, revise, emend, remedy, redress Ana *improve, better, ameliorate: *mend, repair: elevate, raise, *lift Ant debase: impair —Con corrupt, vitiate, deprave, daubach, pervert (see DEBASE): *injure, mar, spoil, damage, harm, hurt amends redress, *reparation, indemnity, restitution Ana compensation, recompense (see corresponding verbs at PAY): atonement, expiation (see under EXPIATE) amenity 1 Amenity, luxury both denote something (as an object, a feature, a quality, or an experience) that gives refined or exquisite pleasure or is exceedingly pleasing to the mind or senses. Amenity typically implies a delightful mildness, gentleness, or softness, especially in contrast to an uncomfortable or distressing harshness, roughness, or crudeness (many English go to the Riviera in the winter because of the amenity of its climate) It may imply no more than a vague conducing to physical or material comfort or convenience (every amenity ... including ... showers, central heating, and first-class cuisine—H. G. Smith) Luxury stresses keen, often voluptuous, enjoyment and unalloyed gratification of the mind or senses, usually without a special suggestion of opulence in the thing enjoyed or sensuality in the pleasure (and learn the luxury of doing good—Goldsmith) (Mark decided to walk back by the road . . . instead of indulging himself in the luxury of once more rejoicing in the solitude of the green lanes—Mackenzie) (a dressing room with a marble bath that made cleanliness a luxury instead of one of the sternest of the virtues—Shaw)

*please, delight, joy, enjoyment: ease, comfort, relaxation (see REST): mildness, softness, blandness, lenity or leniency, gentleness (see corresponding adjectives at SOFT)

*rigor — *harshness, roughness, ruggedness (see corresponding adjectives at ROUGH): disagreeableness, unpleasantness (see affirmative adjectives at PLEASANT): harshness, difficulty, vicissitude

*courtesy, attention, gallantry

*civility, politeness, courteousness (see corresponding adjectives at CIVIL): graciousness, affability, cordiality, geniality, sociability (see corresponding adjectives at GRACIOUS): *form, convention, convenance: ceremony, formality (see FORM)

*acerbity, asperity: rudeness — *sullen, glum, morose, melancholy, *grim

*formality (see FORM)

*gracious, cordial, affable, genial: warmhearted, warm, responsive, *tender: kindly, *kind, benign, benign

*unamiable: surly — *ungracious, *rude, ill-mannered, discourteous, impolite: *sullen, glum, morose, crabbed, dour amicable, neighborly, friendly are applied to the attitudes and actions of persons, communities, and states that have intercourse with each other and mean marked by or exhibiting goodwill or absence of antagonism. Amicable frequently implies little more than that the parties concerned are not disposed to quarrel or are at peace with each other (an amicable adjustment) (the sometimes amicable processes of bargaining between a federation of employers and a trade union—Hobson) Neighborly sometimes suggests goodwill and kindliness and a disposition to live on good terms with those with whom one must associate because of their proximity (the only encirclement sought is the encourcling bond of good old-fashioned neighborly friendship—Roosevelt) Very often, however, because of connotations acquired from scriptural uses of neighbor, especially in the parable of the Good Samaritan ("which now of these three . . . was neighbor unto him that fell among the thieves?") it implies the duty of helpfulness and the spirit of fellowship (he hath a neighborly charity in him—Shak.) (he in a very neighborly manner admonished me—Swift) Friendly is more positive in its implications of cordiality than either of the others and often suggests greater warmth of feeling (a friendly nod) (a friendly call) (their relations are friendly) (a friendly correspondence as neighbors and old acquaintances—Franklin) Peaceful, *peace, peaceable: harmonious, concordant, accordant (see corresponding nouns at HARMONY): social, gregarious, cooperative, hospitable

*amicable — *quarrelsome, contentious, *belligerent, bellicose, pugnacious, combative: hostile, anti-pathetic (see corresponding nouns at ENMITY)

*amiss, astray share the meaning wrong or otherwise than intended. Amiss implies failure (as of an arrow) to reach the mark aimed at and frequently suggests a shortcoming or defect (as by failure to reach a standard, an expectation, a definite conclusion, or the point of being useful) (his shafts of wit went amiss) (she seemed unconcerned, as though nothing had happened amiss) (no information came amiss to him) Sometimes amiss suggests a divergence from the normal or usual order (whether his general health had been previously at all amiss—Dickens) ("What's amiss in the Square?" . . . "Just now I saw a man running along Wedgewood Street"—Bennett) A stray emphasizes wandering from a predetermined path or the right way or course; it usually suggests moral or intellectual errancy (lest in temptation's path ye gang astray—Burns) (in many an hour when judgment goes astray—Wordsworth)

*wrong (or wrongly), *bad (or badly)

*right, right

*friendship, comity, goodwill *harmony, concord, accord: amicableness, neighborliness, friendliness (see corresponding adjectives at AMICABLE) *hostility, animosity, antipathy, antagonism (see ENMITY): *discord, strife, contention, dis-sensation, conflict, difference, variance

*artillery, matériel, munitions, *armament, *luxury *indifferent, aloof, detached: *cold, austere, *hostile

*pardon, absolution

*nonmoral, immoral

*erotic, amatory

*passionate, fervid, ardent, *impassioned: *enamored, *infatuated, lustful, lascivious (see LICENTIOUS)

*indifferent, aloof, detached: *cold, cool: *impassive, apathetic

*n. *sum, total, quantity, number, aggregate, whole

*liaison, intrigue, affair: denote an instance of illicit attachment of prominent persons; it stresses passion as the motivating force and often connotes transience. Amour is particularly applied to the illicit attachment of prominent persons; it stresses passion as the motivating force and often connotes transience.
Liaison implies duration but not necessarily permanence in the attachment; it is commonly used to designate the relation between a man and his mistress. Intrigue emphasizes the clandestine element in the relation and is often closer to amour than to liaison in its other implications. Affair is the least specific term and often suggests equivocal rather than definitely illicit relations or may be used without imputation of impropriety.

amour propre self-esteem, self-love, egoism, egotism, *conceit

Ana *pride, vanity, vainglory: complacency, self-complacency, smugness, self-satisfaction (see corresponding adjectives at COMPLACENT)

ample 1 *spacious, capacious, commodious amplify *expand, swell, distend, dilate, inflate

amusement, diversion, entertainment, recreation (see under AMUSE vb)

Ana engrossment, absorption (see corresponding verbs at MONOPOLIZE): play, sport, *fun, jest: diverting, frolicking, rollicking, romping (see PLAY vb): jollity, *mirth

Ant bored — Con *tire, weary, fatigue: *depress, oppress: irk, vex, *annoy

amusement diversion, entertainment, recreation (see under AMUSE vb)

Ana engrossment, absorption (see corresponding verbs at MONOPOLIZE): play, sport, *fun, jest: diverting, frolicking, rollicking, romping (see PLAY vb): jollity, *mirth

Ant bored — Con *tire, weary, fatigue: *depress, oppress: irk, vex, *annoy

analogy

analogic *mystical, mystic, cabalistic

Ana allegorical, symbolical (see corresponding nouns at ALLEGORY): occult, esoteric, *recondite analgesia anesthesia, anodynia (see under ANODYNE 1) analgesic *anodyne, anesthetic

Ant irritable analogy 1 *likeness, similitude, resemblance, similarity, affinity

2 Analogy, simile, metaphor designate a comparison between things essentially or generically different but strikingly alike in one or more pertinent aspects. Analogy is the general term since the simile and the metaphor are kinds of analogies: it is, however, usually restricted in its application to a comparison which brings out the analogy (for this sense see likeness) between two things for the sake of elucidating something hard to understand 〈God cannot be described except by analogy〉 〈the supreme example of analogy in English is Pilgrim's Progress〉. This overwhelps us with direct analogy, that is to say, the personification of allegory—Stevens 〈a simile is an imaginative analog used largely for the sake of literary effect by carrying over the emotion aroused by one image or idea to the other with which it is compared. A simile (for example, "fishing is at best almost as unpredictable as New England weather," "blue were her eyes as the fairy-flax, her cheeks like the dawn of day," "a job full of more headaches than a case of bourbon") is often brief but it characteristically indicates (as by the use of like, as, so) that comparison is intended 〈of the simile, we say that two essentially unlike things are explicitly compared . . . and we are to understand that, though some likeness is suggested between the two, the likeness is not literally intended—Margolis〉 〈a metaphor differs from a simile in not stating explicitly that it is an analogy: it therefore imaginatively identifies one object with another (as in "a heart of stone," "Thy word is a lamp unto my feet," "the moon was a ghostly galleon") and ascribes to the first one or more of the qualities of the second or invests the former with emotional or imaginative associations attached to the latter (though by metaphor we point to objects and convey emotions, what we chiefly do is to convey knowledge by forging new symbols that are themselves patterns of meaning—Waggoner〉

analysis resolution, dissection, breakdown (see under analyze, resolve, dissect, break down

analyze resolution, dissection, breakdown (see under analyze, resolve, dissect, break down

analysis resolution, dissection, breakdown (see under analyze, resolve, dissect, break down

analogue resolution, dissection, breakdown (see under analyze, resolve, dissect, break down

analogical subtle, *logical

ant compose, compound: construct —Con *integrate, concatenate, articulate anarchic anarchistic, anarchist (see under ANARCHY 1

anarchism *anarchy

anarchist anarchistic, anarchistic (see under ANARCHY 1

anarchistic anarchistic, anarchist (see under ANARCHY 1

ant authoritarian anarchy 1 Anarchy, anarchism overlap in their implications but are not synonyms because of differing denotations. Anarchy may denote a state or condition of society where there is no law or imposed order because social evolution has rendered these unnecessary (first the proletarian revolution . . . then the dictatorship of the proletariat; and lastly, the classless society: that is the Marxian order of advance towards communism and anarchy, towards justice, equality and perfect freedom—Plamenatz) It may, on the other hand, denote one of complete disorder resulting from the breakdown of normal controls (for our people liberty so often means only license and anarchy—Salzberger) Anarchism denotes a theory that government is an evil because it imposes limitations upon the freedom of the individual (nihilism is a form of anarchism) The same distinctions extend to their respective adjectives anarchic and anarchistic anarchic anarchistic, anarchistic (see under ANARCHY 1

anarchism *anarchy

anarchist anarchistic, anarchistic (see under ANARCHY 1

anarchistic anarchistic, anarchist (see under ANARCHY 1

ant authoritarian Chaos is the utter negation of order\(^1\) (a process calculated to reduce the orderly life of our complicated societies to chaos—Huxley) Lawlessness signifies a prevalent or habitual disregard of law and order rather than their absence or suspension (the traditional lawlessness of the frontier community) When anarchy and lawlessness (or their adjectives) are used of actions rather than of a state of things, there is often little distinction of meaning (the hydrogen atom was not conforming to the canons of the classical music of physics, and yet it was not anarchic in the least, for . . . it was flawlessly obeying the laws of a different music—Darrow) (illusion is not lawless) It is a world apart, if you please, but within it is its own necessities, which exact inexorable adherence to their mandates—Loves\(^2\)

\(\text{Ant} \text{ order: discipline}\)

\textbf{anathema} 1 *abomination, bête noire, bugbear

\(2 *\text{curse, malediction, imprecation}\)

\(\text{Ana} \text{ denunciation, condemnation, reprobation, censure (see corresponding verbs at \textbf{CRITICIZE})}\)

\textbf{anathematize} curse, damn, *excecute, objurate

\(\text{Ana} \text{ denounce, condemn, censure, repробate (see CRITICIZE): proscribe, *sentence}\)

\textbf{anatomy} *structure, skeleton, framework

\textbf{ancestor}, \textbf{progenitor}, \textbf{forefather}, \textbf{forebear} mean a person from whom one is descended. \textbf{Ancestor}, especially in genealogical and in historical use, implies lineal descent through one's father or mother \(\textit{he had three ancestors who were judges} \) but it is seldom applied to a grandparent. In more general use, \textbf{ancestor} (especially in the plural) may imply kinship through collaterals or through race \(\textit{the gentleman will please remember that when his half-civilized ancestors were hunting the wild boar in Silesia, mine were princes of the earth—Benjamin} \)

\textbf{Ancestor} often suggests knowledge of identities and family pride in them as persons \(\textit{ancestor worship} \) \(\textit{they had plenty of money, but apparently no ancestors} \) \textbf{Progenitor} differs from \textbf{ancestor} chiefly in its connotations rather than in its implications. It does not exclude parents or grandparents; it usually carries no hint of family or racial feeling, and it often suggests a reference to heredity or the transmission of characters \(\textit{do as your great progenitors have done, and, by their virtues, prove yourself their son—Dryden} \) \(\textit{men resemble their contemporaries even more than their progenitors—Emerson} \) Whenever an evolution is suggested, \textbf{ancestor} and \textbf{progenitor} may be used of living things or of nonliving things (as races, social castes, or literary or artistic forms) that are subject to development; they then often denote one or a kind to which from which a later or a presently existing kind or group has been derived \(\textit{the wild ancestors of our domestic animals} \)

\(\textit{Fielding was . . . the progenitor of the modern realistic novel—New Yorker} \) \textbf{Progenitor}, even more than \textbf{ancestor}, names the ultimate source or root \(\textit{he sang of the nuptials of Janus and Comesena, progenitors of the Italian people—Quiller-Couch} \) \textbf{Forefather} is used less often than \textbf{ancestor} in historical writing but is probably more common in poetic and in general use, especially when simplicity of life, strength of family feeling, or persistence of a family in one locality is connoted \(\textit{each in his narrow cell forever laid, the rude forefathers of the hamlet sleep—Gray} \) \(\textit{think of your forefathers! Think of your posterity!—J. Q. Adams} \)

\textbf{Forefather} is not only less rich in its implications than \textbf{forefather}, but it is also less connotative of sentiment (the land had been owned by his forebears for generations) \(\textit{his forebears emigrated from Scotland around 1800} \)

\(\textit{Ant} \text{ descendant}\)

\textbf{ancestry, lineage, pedigree} mean either one's progenitors collectively or their quality or character as a whole. The words, however, are clearly distinguishable. \textbf{Ancestry} in its most restricted use evokes the image of a family tree with its ramification by geographical progression of branches or roots the further it is traced forward or backward \(\textit{only by the fusion of two parent cells can an off-spring cell enjoy the advantages of joint heredity and pass on the traits of both ancestries—La Barre} \) In broader use \textbf{ancestry} often suggests one's progenitors in general, known or unknown, a cause of pride often, but sometimes of indifference or of shame \(\textit{no one is responsible for his ancestry, but his ancestry is to a certain extent responsible for his qualities} \) \textbf{Lineage} stresses descent in a line; it evokes therefore the image of a list of the persons who in order of generation are descended from a single ancestor \(\textit{the evangelist Matthew traced the lineage of Jesus by each step from Abraham down} \) \(\textit{lineage} \) is reckoned through the mother; the Zuñi are matrilineal—Kardiner) For this reason \textit{lineage} is often used as the equivalent of \textit{race} (though of a lineage once abhorred—Wordsworth) \textbf{Pedigree} is even more definite in its suggestions, for it implies a known and recorded ancestry that is typically distinguished or notable \(\textit{who proud of pedigree, is poor of purse—Pope} \) \(\textit{the deference due to a man of pedigree—Gilbert} \) The term is applied to the ancestry of persons, and to that of animals and plants propagated under controlled conditions.

\(\textbf{Ant} \text{ descendants: posterity}\)

\textbf{anchor} vb moor, *secure, rivet

\(\textbf{Ana} *\text{fasten, attach, fix, affix}\)

\textbf{anchorite} hermit, eremite, *recluse, cenobite

\(\textbf{Ana} *\text{ascetic, mystic: religious, monk, friar}\)

\textbf{ancient} *old, venerable, antediluvian, antique, antiquated, archaic, obsolete

\(\textbf{Ana} \text{ primeval, pristine, primal, primordial (see \textbf{PRIMITIVE})}\)

\(\textbf{Ant} \text{ modern —Con *new, new-fashioned, new-fangled, fresh, novel, modernistic: current, *prevailing}\)

\(\textbf{Ancillary} *\text{auxiliary, contributory, subsidiary, adjuvant, subservient, accessory}\)

\(\textbf{Ana} \text{ assisting, aiding, helping (see HELP vb): secondary, *subordinate: supplementary, complementary (see corresponding nouns at \textbf{COMPLEMENT})}\)

\textbf{androgy nous} *bisexual, hermaphroditic, hermaphrodite, epicene

\textbf{anecdot e} *story, tale, yarn, narrative

\(\textbf{Ana} \text{ incident, episode, event, *occurrence: narration, relation, recital (see corresponding verbs at \textbf{RELATE})}\)

\textbf{anemic} bloodless, *pale

\(\textbf{Ant} \text{ full-blooded: florid}\)

\textbf{anesthesia} analgesia, analodynia (see under \textbf{ANODYNE 1})

\textbf{anesthetic} adj insensitive, *insensible, impalpable

\(\textbf{Ana} *\text{dull, obtuse: impassive, apathetic, stolid: impervious, impermeable, impenetrable, *impassible}\)

\(\textbf{Ant} \text{ alive —Con *aware, awake, conscious, cognizant: responsive (see TENDER)}\)

\textbf{anesthetic n} *anodyne, analgesic

\(\textbf{Ant} \text{ stimulant}\)

\textbf{angel} backer, *sponsor, patron, surety, guarantor

\(\textbf{Anger} \text{ incident, event, episode, *occurrence: narration, relation, recital (see corresponding verbs at \textbf{RELATE})}\)

\textbf{anesthesia} analgesia, analodynia (see under \textbf{ANODYNE 1})

\textbf{anesthetic} adj insensitive, *insensible, impalpable

\(\textbf{Ana} *\text{dull, obtuse: impassive, apathetic, stolid: impervious, impermeable, impenetrable, *impassible}\)

\(\textbf{Ant} \text{ alive —Con *aware, awake, conscious, cognizant: responsive (see TENDER)}\)

\textbf{anesthetic n} *anodyne, analgesic

\(\textbf{Ant} \text{ stimulant}\)

\textbf{anchor} vb moor, *secure, rivet

\(\textbf{Ana} *\text{fasten, attach, fix, affix}\)

\textbf{anchorite} hermit, eremite, *recluse, cenobite

\(\textbf{Ana} *\text{ascetic, mystic: religious, monk, friar}\)

\textbf{ancient} *old, venerable, antediluvian, antique, antiquated, archaic, obsolete

\(\textbf{Ana} \text{ primeval, pristine, primal, primordial (see \textbf{PRIMITIVE})}\)

\(\textbf{Ant} \text{ modern —Con *new, new-fashioned, new-fangled, fresh, novel, modernistic: current, *prevailing}\)

\(\textbf{Ancillary} *\text{auxiliary, contributory, subsidiary, adjuvant, subservient, accessory}\)

\(\textbf{Ana} \text{ assisting, aiding, helping (see HELP vb): secondary, *subordinate: supplementary, complementary (see corresponding nouns at \textbf{COMPLEMENT})}\)

\textbf{androgy nous} *bisexual, hermaphroditic, hermaphrodite, epicene

\textbf{anecdote} *story, tale, yarn, narrative

\(\textbf{Ana} \text{ incident, episode, event, *occurrence: narration, relation, recital (see corresponding verbs at \textbf{RELATE})}\)

\textbf{anemic} bloodless, *pale

\(\textbf{Ant} \text{ full-blooded: florid}\)

\textbf{anesthesia} analgesia, analodynia (see under \textbf{ANODYNE 1})

\textbf{anesthetic} adj insensitive, *insensible, impalpable

\(\textbf{Ana} *\text{dull, obtuse: impassive, apathetic, stolid: impervious, impermeable, impenetrable, *impassible}\)

\(\textbf{Ant} \text{ alive —Con *aware, awake, conscious, cognizant: responsive (see TENDER)}\)

\textbf{anesthetic n} *anodyne, analgesic

\(\textbf{Ant} \text{ stimulant}\)
anger

a display of that feeling in looks, acts, or words (Belinda burns with more than mortal ire— Pope) "Then, my lady, ye've come to tell me a lie!" Farmer Blaize looked straight at the boy, undismayed by the dark flush of ire he had kindled—Meredith

Rage adds to anger the implications of lost self-control and of violent boiling over of feeling; it often connotes variously a sense of frustration, a temporary derangement of the mind, or a determination to get revenge (terrible and impotent rage—Wilde) His first hot anger against the beast had changed into a cold rage at all costs he must get it—Cloete

Fury is overreaching destructive rage verging on madness (what fury drove us into saying the stupid, intolerant, denunciatory things we said?—L. P. Smith) The war against physical evil, like every other war, must not be conducted with such fury as to render men incapable of the arts of peace—Russell

Indignation implies depth and intensity of anger, often righteous or generous anger, aroused by something one considers mean, shameful, or otherwise unworthy of a man or men (whose souls no honest indignation ever urged to elevated daring—Shelley) Is this question now placed before society... is this: Is man an ape or an angel? I, my lord, I am on the side of the angels. I repudiate with indignation and abhorrence those newfangled theories—Disraeli

Wrath may imply either rage or indignation as its emotional basis, but more strongly than either of these it suggests existence of a grievance and a desire or intent to avenge or punish or to get revenge (the wrath of God) Let not the sun go down upon your wrath—Eph 4:26

nursing her wrath to keep it warm—Burns

Acrimony, asperity, exasperation, irritation, provocation (see corresponding verbs at irritate)

Ant pleasure, gratification: forbearance—Con patience, longanimity, long-suffering: forgiveness, condonation, pardon (see corresponding verbs at excuse): indulgence, clemency, leniency (see under forbearing)

anger vb Anger, incense, enrage, infuriate, madden

All these verbs carry in common with anger, their general term, the denotation to make angry or to rouse to anger (laugh then at any, but at fools or foes; these you but anger, and you mend not those—Pope) (angered by his son's repeated disobedience) Incense implies hotness of anger, especially as provoked by something excessively irritating and offensive (Mr. Critchlow, aged and unacustomed to interference, had to render accounts of his trusteeship to this young man, and was incensed—Bennett)

Magistrates and populace were accustomed to interference, had to render accounts of his trusteeship to this young man, and was incensed—Bennett

Infuriate may imply a sense of being outraged or sometimes no more than of being thoroughly irritated or exasperated (how it infuriates a bigot, when he is forced to drag into the light his dark convictions!—L. P. Smith) (his colleagues and his subordinates had been alternately delighted and infuriated by his assumed reluctance to deal with any practical question—Sackville-West)

Madden is often not distinguishable from infuriate (can it be fancied that Deity ever vindictively made in his image a mankinik merely to madden it?—Poe) Like the former it may imply merely excessive annoyance or vexation (maddening delays)

Ana *offend, outrage, affront: exasperate, provoke, irritate, nettie, rile: vex. *annoy, irk

Ant please, gratify: pacify—Con placate, mollify, appease, propitiate (see pacify): rejoice, delight, gladden, tickle (see please)

angle n 1 *point of view, viewpoint, standpoint, slant

Ana attitude, *position, stand

2 aspect, facet, side, *phase

Ana *item, detail, particular angry, irate, indignant, wrathful, wroth, acrimonious, mad mean feeling or showing strong displeasure or bad temper. Angry is applied to persons or their moods, acts, looks, or words; it is also applied to animals (an angry bull) and by extension, because of some of its implications, to things (an angry boil) (an angry sky) In reference to persons it implies both emotional and physical excitement, usually exhibited as by an inflamed countenance or inflamed words or by threatening looks or speeches (the king is angry: see, he bites the lip—Shak)

(see the adjectives! What a theme for angry versepower!)

Irate is applied only to persons or their looks, acts, or words; it often suggests greater exhibition of feeling than angry and, as a rule, implies loss of self-control (the men were getting... more irate and violent in their language—Trollope) Often it suggests a comic aspect of anger (as from the disparity between the emotion and its exciting cause) (refractory children, over whom Mr. Spratt... exercised an irate surveillance—George Eliot)

Indignant, in contrast with irate, suggests righteousness in the anger and sufficiency of justification. Often its use imparts injustice or indignity to the cause of the anger (let the sword speak what the indignant tongue disdains to brand thee with—Shelley)

Wrathful and the less common wroth are capable of being used where irate or indignant would be more explicit (his partner retreated with a wrathful shake of his head—Sassoon) However, they usually connote more justification of the anger than irate and more vehemence in its expression than indignant (the blurring and the blotching of the later Chinese school... provoked his wrathful condemnation—Binyon)

I did not know how greatly they were fools, and this made me wroth—Kipling

Wrathful like angry may be extended to things (the wrathful thunder of God—Tennyson) A vagrant shaft of sunlight struck the ocean and turned its surface to wrathful silver—London

Acrimonious, though sometimes still applied to a person's temper or mood, is chiefly used to characterize intercourse and utterances. It invariably adds to angry the implication of irreconcilable difference of opinion and consequent bitterness of feeling that may be shown in accusations and recriminations (the dispute dragged on, becoming progressively more acrimonious, for another eleven years—Huxley)

Mad (see insane) as a close equivalent of angry is used chiefly in informal speech or writing (I was so mad the way father was talking—O'Flaherty) She looked mad for a second but then she began to laugh—Lowery anguish woé, heartache, heartbreak, grief, *sorrow, regret

Ana *impassioned, passionate: angered, incensed, enraged, infuriated, maddened (see anger vb)

Ana *distress, suffering, dolor, misery, agony: worry, anxiety (see care) *pain, pang, throe, ache: torture, torment, affliction (see corresponding verbs at afflict)

Ant relief—Con comfort, solace, consolation (see corresponding verbs at comfort); assuagement, alleviation, mitigation (see corresponding verbs at relieve); ecstasy, rapture, transport angular gaunt, rawboned, lank, lanky, *lean, spare, scrawny, skinny

Ana *thin, slender, slim: *awkward, clumsy: cadaverous, *haggard

Ant rotund—Con plump, chubby, *fleshy, stout, portly animadversion, stricture, aspersión, reflection denote a remark or statement that is an adverse criticism. Animadversion (compare animadvert at Remark) implies as its motive deep-seated prejudice or ill will or a tendency to carp or cavil (given to animadversions on the clergy).

Matthew's animadversions hurt me more. In part they appeared to me unjust, and in part ill-natured—Cowper.
Stricture implies censure, which may be either ill-natured or judicial.
Foreign strictures on the dress, looks, and behavior of the English abroad—Arnold.
The lash of the merciless Pierson. . . . [whose] strictures are founded in argument, enriched with learning, and enlivened with wit—Gibbon.
Aspersion imputes a slanderous character to the critic (who by aspersions throw a stone at th' head of others, hit their own—Herbert) (at Cambridge they tell me) while you speak very well, you write less expertly . . . . you will not set the aspersion down to me—Quiller-Couch.
Reflection often implies indirect aspersion or a defamatory imputation which may be inferred from what has been said (he cannot restrain himself from reflections on kings and priests when he is most contending for them—Hallam).
The reflections on certain named persons' chastity and honesty—Geographical Jour.
Ana criticism, reprehension, censure (see corresponding verbs at Criticize): observation, comment, remark: captiousness, faultfinding, carping, carping, censoriousness (see corresponding adjectives at Critical).
Ant commendation —Con praise, laudation, commendation, acclaim (see corresponding verbs at Praise): approval, approbation, approval.
Animate comment, commentate, remark Ana criticize, reprehend, censure, reprobrate: depreciate, disapprove: depreciate, disparage, decry Con ignore, disregard, overlook (see Neglect): comment, commend, applaud, compliment.
Animal adj carnal, fleshly, sensual Ana physical, corporeal, bodily: bestial, brutal Ant rational —Con intellectual, mental, psychic: spiritual (see Holy).
Animalism animality
Ana sensualism, voluptuousness (see corresponding adjectives at Sensual): lustfulness, lasciviousness, lecherousness (see corresponding adjectives at Licentious).
Animalism, animalism are not always clearly distinguished when they are used to denote animal nature, character, or springs of action in a man or in men. Animalism is often preferred when it is desired to suggest likenesses between men and animals rather than differences, and animalism when one wishes to convey in addition all the derogatory implications of sensuality or sensualism (he disliked union with a woman whom he had never seen; moreover, when he did see her, she disappointed him, and he begged his first child in mere animality—Forster) (puri-tanism was a natural and necessary revolt . . . against that naturalism which threatened to end in sheer animalism—Kingsley).
Ana virility, maleness, masculinity (see corresponding adjectives at Male).
Animate adj alive, living, animated, vital Ana physical, corporeal, bodily: animal, carnal, fleshly Ant inanimate —Con lifeless, dead Animate vb quicken, vivify, enliven Ana vitalize, activate, energize 2 inform, inspire, fire Ana motivate, actuate, activate: move, drive, impel, actuate: stir, rouse, arouse Ant inhibit —Con restrain, curb, check: frustrate, thwart Animated 1 alive, living, animate, vital

---

Ana active, live, dynamic: vitalized, energized, activated (see Vitalize).
Ant inert —Con inactive, passive: lifeless, inanimate, dead 2 lively, vivacious, sprightly, gay Ana buoyant, volatile, effervescent (see Elastic): agile, brisk, spry, nimble: spirited, high-spirited Ant depressed, dejected —Con languid, listless, spiritless, enervated: lethargic, torpid, comatose
Animosity animus, rancor, enmity, hostility, antipathy, antagonism Ana hatred, hate, detestation, abhorrence (see under Hate vb): vindictiveness, revengefulness, vengefulness (see corresponding adjectives at Vindictive): malice, ill will, malevolence, spite Ant goodwill —Con friendship, amity, comity: friendliness, neighborliness, amicableness (see corresponding adjectives at Amicable).
Animus animosity, rancor, enmity, hostility, antipathy, antagonism Ana ill will, spite, spleen, grudge (see Malice): prejudice, bias (see Predisposition).
Ant favor —Con predilection, partiality: sympathy, empathy Annals chronicle, history Annex vb add, append, subjoin, superadd Ana *join, unite, connect, link, associate: attach, affix, fasten Con *detach, disengage, abstract: divorce, separate, part Annex n Annex, extension, wing, ell designate an addition to a main (and, often, the original) building. An annex may be attached to the main building or it may even not be adjacent to it. When used of an addition to a hotel, an office building, or a commercial or educational establishment it usually implies a provision for expanded activity. An extension is attached to a main or central building; when it project from the central building and is connected with it at only one point it is called a wing; when it extends at right angles from one end of the building it is called an ell.
Ana addition, increment, accretion Annihilate extinguish, abolish, abate Ana obliterate, efface, expunge, blot out, cancel, *erase: extirpate, exterminate, eradicate, wipe Con create, *invent, discover: *make, form, fashion, forge, shape: renew, restore Annotate gloss and their corresponding nouns annotation, gloss mean, as verbs, to add or append comment, or as nouns, an added or appended comment intended to be helpful in interpreting a passage or text. One annotates a text (as of a literary work) when one furnishes it with critical, historical, or explanatory notes (as footnotes, marginal notes, or notes in an appendix) (annotate the works of Milton) (an annotated edition of Shakespeare's sonnets) The subject of an annotation may be any word, passage, or detail which is capable of being explained to the advantage of the reader or student. One glosses a word or phrase which is obscure in meaning because foreign, obsolete, rare, or technical by providing its definition (as in a marginal or interlinear note) or one gloses a text when one supplies definitions of its difficult words and phrases (medieval scholars, when they found in a Latin text a word not familiar to them, were accustomed to gloss it—Krutch). The word sometimes conveys (possibly by confusion with gloss, to give a luster to) a derogatory implication of perversion or sophistication of meaning or fact (trying to gloss away the irrationalities of the universe—Edman).
Ana elucidate, interpret, construe, *explain, expound: comment, commentate, remark Ana analogous words Ant antonyms Con contrasted words See also explanatory notes facing page 1 annotation gloss (see under ANNOTATE) annunciation announce, proclaim, *declare, promulgate, advertise, broadcast announcement disclose, *reveal, divulge, tell: *communicate, impart *suppress, repress: conceal, *hide, bury: withhold, hold, hold back, reserve (see KEEP) annoy vb 1 Annoy, vex, irk, bother mean to disturb and nervously upset a person. Annoy stresses loss of equanimity or patience as a result of being forced to endure something that one finds obnoxious or offensive or sometimes merely displeasing or distasteful. It seldom implies more than a temporary disturbance or display of irritation. Richard's absence annoyed him. The youth was vivacious, and his enthusiasm good fun—Meredith (it was . . . his lack of the ghost of a notion anyone else was feeling that annoyed her, had always annoyed her—Woolf) Vex usually implies greater provocation and a stronger disturbance than annoy; it often connotes a degree of anger but at other times it suggests deep perplexity or some worry. Faulty translation that so vexes teachers—Grandgent) Pointlessly vexing their minds with insoluble problems. Mr. Darcy's behavior astonished and vexed her. "Why, if he came only to be silent, grave, and indifferent," said she, "did he come at all?"—Austen) (Such petty details as now vexed the brooding soul of the old gentlewoman—Hawthorne) Irk emphasizes difficulty in enduring and resulting weariness of spirit; it is most often used in reference to something that persists or recurs annoyingly (the speed and the clatter—Kipling) (the overiterated becomes the monotonous, and the monotonous irks and bores—Lowes) Other implies a usually mild interference with one's comfort or peace of mind such as may arise on the one hand from something that calls for activity or effort or on the other from something that excites, puzzles, worries, concerns, or confuses (the sight of him bothered her and set her heart beating faster) (He would be too accessible and excessively bothered with details and complaints—Crozier) (Let dozens of little matters go, rather than bother myself—Bennett) (I am not really bothered by these questions—the hoary old puzzles of ethics and philosophy—L. P. Smith)

Annoy irritate, nettlesome, aggravate, exasperate, rile: perturb, disturb, upset, agitate (see DISCOMPOSE) Ant soothe. —Con *comfort, solace, console: *please, gratify, tickle 2 *worry, pester, plague, tantalize, tease, harass, harry Annul fret, chafe (see ABRADE): badger, hector, heckle, chivy, *bat: trouble (see INCONVENIENCE) Con neglect, ignore, overlook: mollify, appease (see PCAY)

Annul 1 *nullify, negate, invalidate, abrogate
*Anna neutralize, negative, counteract: cancel, efface, obliterate, blot out, *erase: annihilate, *abolish, extinguish 2 Annul, abrogate, void, vacate, quash are used chiefly in legal context and mean to deprive of validity, force, or authority. Though varying little in denotation, these words are not always interchangeable, their appropriate selection being dependent on the character or status of the invalidating agent and on the character of the thing invalidated. Annul is the most general term, applicable to something (as a right, marriage, charter, or statute) that may be adjudged invalid or void. It implies the exercise of competent legal authority (had parliament, immediately after the emanation of this charter . . . annulled the instrument . . .

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

The perfidy of the transaction would have been universally acknowledged—John Marshall) To abrogate is the act of one having force and authority, and often legal jurisdiction. A ruler or an arbiter as well as a court may abrogate something (as a law, a treaty, or a convention) previously effective and in effect or in intent abolish it (we are not . . . called upon to abrogate the standards of values that are fixed, not by you and not by me, but by . . . time—Lowes) Void in legal context retains much of its basic meaning, to make empty or null. It is often interchanged with annul (the state supreme bench . . . voided the referendum—Aswell & Michelson) Unlike the latter it need not imply the action of a legally competent authority (it is the insanity of the testator that voids his will, not the act of a court) Only competent legal authority can vacate or make ineffectual or invalid something that previously was effective or valid (vacate proceedings after the discovery of fraud) (vacate a grant of crown property) Quash is a strictly legal term applied chiefly to indictments thrown out of court as defective.

anodyne 1 Anodyne, analgesic, anesthetic all denote something used to relieve or prevent pain, all are freely used both substantively and adjectivally, and all have a related noun, anodynia, analgesia, anesthesia, denoting the corresponding state. Anodyne is the oldest and most inclusive of these terms; it may be applied to any agent used primarily to relieve pain whether by dulling perception of pain or by altering the pain-causing situation (as by local stimulation of blood flow), often has a literary or popular rather than medical connotation, and is the only one of these terms given broad figurative use (see ANODYNE 2). Analgesic is narrower in scope; it is applied especially to a medicinal substance or preparation used locally or systematically to dull the perception of pain (as by action on the nervous system) usually without other major disturbance of consciousness. Anesthetic is a medicinal agent that produces insensibility both to pain and to all other sensations either of a particular part or area (local anesthesia) or of the whole body (general anesthesia); anesthetic is the one term to use of an agent designed to prevent anticipated pain (as from surgery) as distinct from one designed to assuage existent pain; thus, one is administered an anesthetic before a tooth is pulled and given an analgesic to relieve pain after the anesthesia has worn off.

2 Anodyne, opiate, narcotic, nepenthe means something used to dull or deaden one's senses or one's sensibility and are often used adjectivally. Anodyne is frequently used as the opposite of stimulant (had . . . made anodyne translations from Homer and Sophocles in "rhymic" and sleepy prose—Sanctayana) It usually suggests something that allays excitement or mitigates mental distress often by inducing forgetfulness or obliviousness (this kind of religion cannot be anything better than an anodyne; but an anodyne is unfortunately just what many people want from their religion—Inge) (mutiny among the crews of Columbus was too much of a menace for the comforting daily sight of drifting vegetation not to be a very real mental anodyne—Beebe) Opiate usually is applied to something that induces a dream state and a delusion of happiness; it also commonly suggests indifference to actual evils and a false sense of security or well-being with consequent stilling of all disturbing thoughts (price-fixing is a most dangerous economic opiate—T. W. Arnold) (no military swagger of my mind, can smother from myself the wrong I've done him, without design, indeed,—yet it is so,—and opiate for the conscience have I none—Keats) Narcotic implies a putting to sleep or into a stupor; in figurative use, it suggests merely a pleasant drowsiness which overcomes one and has a lulling effect on mind and body (many lovers of the arts find in music, poetry, painting, and the novel escapes, as narcotic as they are delightful, from the pressures and exigencies in which we are involved—Edman> the promise that religion offers of a larger reward is less likely to serve as a moral stimulant than as a moral narcotic—Garvin> Nepenthe, the designation of a legendary drug or potion of the ancient Greeks, said to allay pain and sorrow, is used in modern English with the implication of something sweet and pleasurable substituted for something painful> (after the fiery stimulants, compounded of brimstone and bigotry, offered by the polemic theologians, the gentle sedative of Montaigne's conversation comes like a draft of nepenthe—Preserved Smith)> It is also freely used to denote the state of placid peace resulting from the use of a nepenthe (only. . . in idle chatter and consoling gossip and scandal, and in the more unendurable cases in drink, can they find nepenthe—Nathan)> Ant stimulant: irritant

anodynia analgesia, anesthesia (see under ANODYNE 1) anoint *oil, cream, grease, lubricate anomalous *irregular, unnatural

Ana *abnormal, aberrant, atypical: *monstrous, prodigious: singular, unique, peculiar, *strange

Con normal, natural, *regular, typical: *usual, wonted, accustomed, customary anomaly *paradox, antimony answer n reply, response, rejoinder, retort (see under ANSWER vb 1)

Ana defense, vindication, justification (see corresponding verbs at MAINTAIN): refutation, rebuttal (see corresponding verbs at DISPROVE)

Con question, query, interrogation, (see corresponding verbs at ASK): summoning or summons, call (see corresponding verbs at SUMMON) answer vb 1 Answer, respond, reply, rejoin, retort (and their corresponding nouns answer, response, reply, rejoinder, retort) mean to say or write or sometimes to do something (or something that is said, written, or done) in return (as to a question, a call, a request, or a charge). One answers or makes an answer to a question, call, or appeal, or to the person or thing questioning, calling, or appealing, when one gives the attention or service demanded by one's situation or office or required by courtesy> <answer a query> <answer the telephone> <answer the doorbell> In specific collocations the words carry more definite implications; thus, in answering an accusation one gives a detailed and sometimes, by suggestion, a successful defense; in having the answers to all the problems one has their correct solutions> he could talk; he could assert; produce opinions and information, but he couldn't meet or answer arguments—Rose Macaulay)> One responds or makes a response to a person who endeavors to elicit an answer or to a thing which serves as a stimulus when one reacts, often spontaneously and usually without resistance, to the influence> respond immediately to an appeal for help> (an unsatisfactory response to a call for recruits> when she smiled, even strangers responded)> is it true that antiquated legal ideas prevent government from responding effectively to the demands which modern society makes upon it?—Frankfurter)> A trustful affectionation disposition . . . creates the response which it expects—Russell)> Respond and response are used in preference to answer and reply when they refer to the set answers to supplications (as in a litany) or to questions (as in a catechism) (he answered by a deep, gravely accented: "Thanks, I will," as though it were a response in church—Conrad)> One replies or makes a reply (as to a question, charge, argument, or salute or to a questioner or an accuser) when one answers so as to cover the same ground as the question or charge; thus, one may answer a letter by merely acknowledging its receipt, but one replies to it only when one answers all its questions or touches on all points requiring attention; an answer to a salute is uncertain in its nature if no details are given; a reply to a salute usually indicates that the salute has been returned in the same form or in kind and spirit. Often reply is equivalent to answer back (as by echoing, protesting, or when the question is rhetorical agreeing)> the nymph exulting fills with shouts the sky; the walls, the woods, and long canals reply—Pope)> (their not to make reply, theirs not to reason why, theirs but to do and die—Tennyson)> who is here so vile that will not love his country? If any, speak; for him have I offended. I pause for a reply—Shak)> One rejoin or makes a rejoinder when one answers a reply (the assembly took the governor's reply. . . into consideration, and prepared a suitable rejoinder—Franklin)> The terms are often used to indicate an answer to an unspoken question or to an objection> he can't sleep comfortably on that ship," she said.> "In his present state," rejoined Andrew, "he might not sleep comfortably anywhere"—Douglas)> (an abstract objection an abstract rejoinder: suffices—James)> One retorts or makes a retort to an explicit or implicit charge, criticism, or attack when one responds with an answer that is in effect a retaliation, or a counter charge, criticism, or attack> it amused me . . . to read the interview and learn that I had . . . uttered a number of trenchant sayings upon female novelists. But the amusement changed to dismay when the ladies began to retort—Quiller-Couch)> Ant accord: comity—Con *agreement, understanding: concord, *harmony, consonance

antagonist *opponent, adversary

Ant foe, *enemy: rival, competitor (see corresponding verbs at RIVAL): assailant, attacker (see corresponding verbs at ATTACK)

Ant supporter—Con ally, *partner, colleague antagonistic counteractive, counter, *adverse

Ant opposing, resisting, withholding, contesting, fighting, combating, conflict or conflicting (see corresponding verbs at RESIST): strife, conflict, difference, variance, dissension, contention, *discord

Ant accord: comity—Con *agreement, understanding: concord, *harmony, consonance

antagonist *opponent, adversary

Ana analogous words Ant antonyms Con contrasted words See also explanatory notes facing page 1
antecedent

adjective, antecedent, consequent, foregoing, proceeding, previous, prior, former, anterior

Ant subsequent: consequent antediluvian

ancient, antiquated, obsolete, antique, venerable, archaic, *old

Ana primordial, primeval, primal, pristine (see primary): *early anterior

adj preceding, precedent, previous, prior, foregoing, antecedent, former

Ant posterior —Con rear, hind, back, hinder, after (see posterior) anthropoid, anthropomorphic, anthropomorphous all mean resembling man. Anthropoid in its basic meaning is used primarily of certain apes (as the chimpanzee and gorilla) and certain prehuman primate fossils that approach modern man in structure (the anthropoid apes of the Miocene). In extended use the reference to manlike apes rather than man predominates; thus, an anthropoid pelvis is a human pelvis that in shape and proportions resembles that of an anthropoid ape (the revolutionary thug who has the fine art of bursting Razumov’s eardrums... is an anthropoid forerunner of thousands who have gone one better than that in the police states—Pritchett) Anthropomorphic and the less common anthropomorphous are used interchangeably when implying a physical resemblance to man (the anthropomorphic deities of primitive peoples) (an anthropomorphous carving) and both may replace anthropoid in its basic meaning especially when it is desired to avoid taxonomic implications (anthropomorphous apes—Darwin) (Darwin himself carefully described men and apes as having evolved separately from some common “... anthropomorphic subgroup”—High School Biology) Anthropomorphic is the preferable term to modify a noun denoting something immaterial or to attribute human personality or quality as distinct from human physique (expectancy is too anthropomorphic a concept... its use leads the reader to attribute to animals what in fact only occurs at the level of human beings equipped with language—Charles Morris) (the categories of cause, force, law, are anthropomorphic in origin and were thus originally metaphors—Cohen)

anthropology, ethnology, archaeology are clearly distinguishing sciences, but they are often confused by laymen because the investigations of scholars in these fields are largely concerned with ancient or primitive races. Anthropology is a general term covering many sciences which includes comparative cultural studies of existent peoples. Its province is the investigation of prehistoric times to the present. One branch of anthropology is ethnology, which is concerned with the origin, development, geographical distribution, and distinguishing character of the human races and often includes comparative cultural studies of existing peoples. Archaeology forms a link between history and anthropology. Its province is the investigation of prehistoric and ancient cultures and civilizations and a study of their material remains (as artifacts, monuments, and traces of agriculture).

anthropomorphic, anthropomorphous

*anthropoid

antipathy

introduce, *enter; *foretell, forecast, presage; *frustrate, thwart, balk

Ant consummate —Con finish, complete, terminate, *close

2 apprehend, *foresee, foreknow, divine

Ana *foretell, forecast, prognosticate: forcaste (see corresponding noun at prospect): await, *expect anticipation

foretell, *forecast, outlook

Ana foreseeing, foreknowing (see foresee): presentiment, foreboding, *preapprehension: forecast, prophecy, prediction, presage (see corresponding verbs at forecast): conceiving, envisioning, imagining (see think)

Ant retrospect —Con recollection, reminiscence, remembrance, *memory: realization, actualization (see corresponding verbs at realize) antidote

corrective, check, control

Ana counteractive, neutralizer (see corresponding verbs at neutralize): nullifier, negator, annul (see corresponding verbs at nullify): *remedy, medicine, physic

anthony

*paradox, anomaly

Ana opposite, contradictory, contrary, antithesis (see under opposite adj): contradiction, denial (see corresponding verbs at deny): conflict, variance, *discord antipathetic, unsympathetic, averse are often used as if they were synonyms. They are, however, not interchangeable if employed in accord with careful usage. Strictly, antipathetic is applied to things or to persons objectively considered that are disagreeable, distasteful, uncongenial, abhorrent, or repellent (the whole place and everything about it was antipathetic to her—Trollope) (settlers to whom this formula was antipathetic were asked to go elsewhere—Replier) (ushering in the year with a series of calls on the most remote and the most personally antipathetic of our innumerable relations—Huxley) In broader use the word is applied to persons or groups of persons as though it were the antonym of sympathetic; it may imply animosity and not merely the absence of sympathy (he really disliked Sir Theodosius, who was in every way antipathetic to him—Joseph Shearman) Unsympathetic, on the other hand, is with rare exceptions applied to persons or to things personified or thought of as expressing personal feeling and suggests an attitude of indifference or insensitiveness or the absence of a response to an appeal to one’s interest or emotions (an unsympathetic nurse) (an unsympathetic review of a new book) Averse (for synonyms in this sense see disinclined) is closer to unsympathetic than to antipathetic in that it suggests the spirit in which a person meets something objective rather than the effect of a thing upon a person. However, averse implies not merely a lack of response but a definite turning away and consequently either avoidance or rejection (averse to a suggestion) (averse to exercise on a hot day) Thus, a man may be unsympathetic by nature yet not be averse to helping the poor. In general, it may be said that one is averse to (or, chiefly British, from) anything which is antipathetic to one.

Ana repellent, *repugnant, distasteful, abhorrent, noxious: offensive, loathsome, repulsive, revolting

Ant congenial —Con attractive, alluring, charming (see under attract): sympathetic, compatible; *consonant: agreeable, grateful, gratifying, pleasing, *pleasant

antipathy

1 antagonism, *enemy, hostility, animosity, rancor, animus

Ana repugnance, abhorrence, repellency, distaste (see corresponding adjectives at repugnant): avoidance, evasion, eschewal, escape (see corresponding verbs at escape)

Ant taste (for): affection (for) —Con *attraction, symantipodal adj antipodal, bactericidal, disinfectant (see * antiseptic*)

antipode n Antiseptic, germicide, bactericide, disinfectant all denote an agent that interferes with the growth and activity of microorganisms. An antiseptic is an agent that prevents or arrests the growth and activity of microorganisms, especially disease germs, without necessarily killing them. The word is used especially of substances mild enough to be used on living tissue. Germicide is used of an agent that kills microorganisms and especially disease germs. It is commonly applied to strong chemicals which cannot safely be used on living tissues. A bactericide is a germicide that destroys all kinds of bacteria (but does not necessarily kill bacterial spores). A disinfectant is an agent that frees from infection and especially a chemical germicide used to kill disease germs and other harmful microorganisms in sources of infection (as drains, sickrooms, clothing, bedding, laboratories, and stables). Disinfectant may be used of substances (as chloride of lime) which destroy disagreeable odors by interfering with the activity of the bacteria causing putrefaction. The same distinctions hold for the corresponding adjectives antiseptic, germicidal, bactericidal, disinfectant.

antisocial adj

antithetical adj

antithesis 1 contrast, *comparison, parallel, collation 2 opposite, antipode, contradictory, contrary, antonym (see under OPPOSITE adj) antonym n anxious adj worried, concerned, solicitous, careful (see under CARE n) apartment n *room, chamber apathetic adj phlegmatic, stolid, *impassive, stoic aperture, interstice, orifice denote an opening allowing passage through or in and out. Aperture is applied especially to any opening in a thing that otherwise presents a solid or closed surface or structure; it may be applied both to an opening that is a flaw (as a crack or cleft) or to one that is structurally essential (for example, the eyes of a fish). Interstice is applied to any unframed space or gap or interval especially in a fabric (in its widest sense) or in a mass. It is especially applicable to any of the openings in something that is loose in texture, coarse-grained, layered, or piled up. Orifice is also used of time in the sense of an interval (as the interstices between the stones of the wall were not filled with mortar). A mesh is one of the interstices in a fish net. Interstice is also used of time in the sense of an empty interval (what . . . do they do . . . in all the mysterious interstices of their lives?—L. P. Smith) Orifice is applied to any opening that serves chiefly as a mouth or as a vent (the orifice of the bladder) orifice of a chimney orifice of a wound) horror . . . when Mongibello belches forth from all its orifices its sulphurous fires—Borrow apa 1 Apex, vertex are so often used interchangeably with reference to the tip or top point of a cone, a pyramid, or a conic section that a fundamental difference in apex n *confidant, assurance, certificate:

implications is often ignored. Apex has particular reference to the sharpness or angularity of the point or tip; it may or may not in its literal application to things imply that this is the highest point (the apex of the heart is its lower and pointed end) (the apex of a lung is its upper cone-shaped end.) Apex may also refer to the converging point of two lines whether they extend in a vertical plane or not (apex of a leaf) (apex of a vein in a mine) Vertex as a rule, and apart from some technical senses in mathematics, implies a base (real or assumed) and therefore a top or highest point. This implication is retained when the word is applied to concrete things; thus, the vertex of the head or of the skull is the highest point or the upper end of its axis; vertex in astronomy is the zenith either with reference to the observer or to the particular body under observation.

2 peak, *summit, culmination, pinnacle, climax, acme, meridian, zenith, apogee aphorism apothegm, epigram, *saying, saw, maxim, adage, proverb, motto aphrodisiac *erotic, amatory, amorous apiece *each, severally, individually, respectively aplomb assurance, self-assurance, self-possession, *confidence, self-confidence

Ana coolness, collectedness, nonchalance, imperturbability (see corresponding adjectives at COOL); *equanimity, composure, sangfroid; poise, savoir faire (see TACT)

Ant shyness —Con embarrassment, discomfiture (see corresponding verbs at EMBARRASS); confusion, befuddlement (see corresponding verbs at CONFUSE); perplexity, bewilderment, distraction (see corresponding verbs at PUZZLE)

apocalypse vision, *revelation, prophecy apocalyptic see under REVELATION

Ana visionary, *imaginary, chimerical, quixotic; *mys- terious, arcane, inscrutable: mystic, *mystical, analogic; grandiose, magnificent, august, *grand apocryphal mythical, *fictitious, legendary, fabulous

Ana questionable, dubious, *doubtful

Ant genuine, *authentic, veritable, bona fide apogee climax, peak, culmination, apex, acme, meridian, zenith, *summit, pinnacle

Ant perigee

apologia *apology, excuse, plea, alibi, pretext

Ana defense, justification, vindication (see corresponding verbs at MAINTAIN): interpretation, elucidation, explanation (see corresponding verbs at EXPLAIN) apology, apology, excuse, plea, pretext, alibi denote the reason or reasons offered in explanation or defense of something (as an act, a policy, or a view). In general use apologize implies that one has been at least apparently, in the wrong; it suggests either a defense that brings forward palliating circumstances or a frank acknowledgment of error with an expression of regret, by way of repa- ration (<"Pardon us the interruption of thy devotion ---" >"My lord, there needs no such apology"—Shak.) In its older sense, still found in very discriminating use, it implies no admission of guilt or error but a desire to make clear the grounds for some course, belief, or position that appears wrong to others (capologies for various . . . doctrines of the faith—Newman) Apologia is often used in place of apologia in this latter sense (Basil de Selincourt's apologia for Ruskin in the Contemporary Review—The Nation) (Viscount Grey of Fallocon . . . the other day delivered an apologia for democracy—N. Y. Times) Excuse implies an intent to remove or avoid blame (as for a neglect of duty, a failure to accomplish an end, or a violation of a rule, law, or custom) (<"Achilles will not to the field tomorrow"—"What's his excuse?"—Shak.)

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.
real, our apparent worldliness—Mackenzie) Something is illusory that is the result of a false impression and acquires a character or appearance other than that found in the real thing or that seems to exist when it is actually nonexistent. The deception may be the result of one's sense limitations (as in an optical illusion), of a misleading appearance assumed by certain natural phenomena (as a mirage or will o' the wisp), of one's own state of mind which colors or alters the objective reality, or of the strong stimulation of the imagination (as by a work of art) that causes one to accept as real something purely imaginary (lengthwise stripes give an illusory height to the figure) (illusory pools of water on a highway) (a lover often attributes an illusory beauty to his beloved) (the beautiful is in a certain sense illusory, or rather contains an element of illusion—Alexandre) (Something is seeming that is so like the reality in appearance that it may be mistaken for it). Seeming usually implies a character in the thing observed rather than, as with the two preceding words, a defect of observation. Often it suggests an intent to deceive or delude (Miss Wilmot's reception [of him] was mixed with seeming neglect, and yet I could perceive she acted a studied part—Goldsmith) (the whole of Burns's song has an air of part—Goldsmith) (the whole of Burns's song has an air of part—Longfellow) Shade usually connotes impalpability but it stresses personality rather than mode of appearance (mighty heroes—Dryden) (followed . . . by the shade of their dead relative—Frazer) Revenant, when it denotes a ghost, carries none of the implications of the other terms for a disembodied spirit except the return from the grave; it is therefore used often in straight prose or where a term without emotional connotations is desirable (thus, our revenant from a hundred years ago would find us occupied yet with measuring intensities of force—Darow) (I felt for a queer moment of hallucination more of a ghost than the ghost I had come to visit—a revenant out of a rowdy present into the more stately epoch—L. P. Smith) apparition, phantasm, phantom, wraith, ghost, spirit, specter, shade, revenant mean a visible but immaterial appearance of a person or of a person or thing that is not physically present. Apparition, phantasm, and phantom all stress the illusory character of what appears to the sight. Apparition often connotes suddenness or unexpectedness of coming (enter the ghost of Caesar . . . I think it is the weakness of mine eyes that shapes this monstrous apparition—Shak.) while phantasm often suggests the workings of a disordered or overexcited imagination (horrible forms, what and who are ye? never yet there came phantasmbs so foul through monster-teeming Hell—Shelley) and phantom a dreamlike character and form without substance or shape without body or mass (so live and laugh, nor be dismayed as one by one the phantoms go—E. A. Robinson) Wraith specifically denotes an appearance of a living person that appears to a friend or relative and portends the former's death but is also used of an apparition of a dead person (she was uncertain if it were the gypsy or her wraith—Scott) In extended use it stresses the insubstantial and evanescent character of the apparition (a hollow wraith of dying fame, fade wholly, while the soul exults—Tennyson) The remaining words in their literal senses all denote an apparition of a dead person. Ghost and spirit are the familiar and general terms for a disembodied soul; specter (not necessarily human) connotes more of the mysterious or terrifying (specters, wandering here and there, troop home to churchyards—Shak.) (I am thy father's spirit, doomed for a certain term to wander the night—Shak.) (grisly specters, which the Fiend had raised—Milton) (lo! when the service was ended, a form appeared on the threshold . . . ? Is it a phantom of air . . . ? Is it a ghost from the grave . . . ?—Longfellow)

appeal vb plead, pray, sue, petition (see under PRAYER) Appear, implore, *beg, beseech, entreat, supplicate: solicit, request, *ask appear vb 1 Appear, loom, emerge mean to come out into view. In use, however, they are only rarely interchangeable. Appear is weakest in its implication of a definite physical background or a source; consequently it sometimes means merely to become visible or to become apparent (see EVIDENT) (one by one the stars appeared in the sky) (nothing appears in the testimony to cause doubt of the defendant's guilt) Sometimes it means to present oneself in public in a particular capacity or to be presented or given out to the public (Clarence Darrow appeared as counsel for the defendant) (Booth appeared nightly as Hamlet for the last two weeks of his run) (the new biography of Lincoln will appear next month) (weeklies usually appear on Thursday or Friday) Loom means appearing as through a mist or haze (a smear of . . . lead-colored paint had been laid on to obliterate Henchard's name, though its letters dimly loomed through like ships in a fog—Hardy) (between the bed and the ottoman . . . the cot loomed in the shadows—Bennett) Because things seen in a fog are often magnified by their indistinct outlines, loom, especially when followed in figurative use by like ships in a fog or when followed by up, suggest appearance and sometimes appalling magnitude (some mornings it [a mesa] would loom up above the dark river like a blazing volcanic mountain—Cather) (that which loomed immense to fancy low before my reason lies—Browning) Emerge definitely implies a coming out into the open from something that envelops: the word therefore presupposes a period or condition of concealment, obscurity, gestation, or insignificance (the sun emerged from the clouds) (after a long hunt for him, we saw him emerging from the crowd) (that part of northern Ohio where the Bentley farms lay had begun to emerge from pioneer life—Anderson) (Lord Sligo emerges from this account as an able and conscientious administrator—Times Lit. Sup.)

Apparition, analogous words Ant antonyms Con contrasted words See also explanatory notes facing page 1 appearance, look, aspect, semblance denote the outward show presented by a person or thing. Appearance often carries no additional implications (judge not according to the appearance—Jn 7:24) (in drawing, represent the appearances of things, never what you know the things to be—Ruskin) The word, however, frequently implies an apparent as opposed to an actual or genuine character and therefore often connotes hypocrisy, dissembling, or pretense when used of persons or their actions (to be able to tyrannize effectively they needed the title and appearance of constitutional authority—Huxley) (they spend their lives trying to keep up appearances, and to make his salary do more than it could—Cather) Look is often indistinguishable from appearance except that it more often occurs in the plural (never judge a thing merely by its looks) They are not interchangeable, however, in all instances. When a personal impression or a judgment is implied, appearance is the precise word (Aristotle . . . while admitting that Plato’s scheme has a plausible appear -ance of philanthropy, maintains that it is inapplicable to the facts of human nature—Dickinson) When the emphasis is upon concrete details (as of color, shape, or expression) observable to everybody, look is a better choice (he had the look of a man who works indoors and takes little exercise) (I choose my friends for their good looks, my acquaintances for their good characters, and my enemies for their good intellects—Wilde) Specifically look is often applied to a person’s expression as manifest in his face or posture (she had a look about her that I wish I could forget—the look of a scared thing sitting in a net!—Millay) Aspect, like look, stresses the features of a person or thing but when applied to persons, it usually distinctively suggests the characteristic or habitual appearance and expression, especially facial expression (not risking a landing because of the fierce aspect of the natives—Heiser) (he was a very handsome man, of a commanding aspect—Austen) Aspect often specifically implies reference to a facet or to the features that give something (as a place, an age, or a situation) its peculiar or distinctive character (the aspect of affairs was very alarming—Dickens) (fifty years from now, it may be, the olive tree will almost have disappeared from southern France, and Provence will wear another aspect—Huxley) (democracy . . . has different aspects in different lands—Sulzberger) Semblance basically implies outward seeming without necessarily suggesting a false appearance (it is the semblance which interests the painter, not the actual object—Times Lit. Sup.) Nevertheless it is rarely used in this sense without an expressed or implied contrast between the outward appearance and the inner reality (thou, whose exterior semblance doth belie thy soul’s immensity—Wordsworth) Sometimes, however, the word stresses the likeness of the thing to something else without suggesting deceptiveness in the appearance (a piked road that even when had begun to take on the semblance of a street—Anderson) appease *pacify, placate, mollify, propitiate, conciliate Anna assuage, alleviate, mitigate, lighten, *relieve: *pal-iate, extenuate: *satisfy, content Anti exasperate, aggravate —Con perturb, upset, disturb, *dis-compose: vex, irk, *annoy, bother: *anger, incense, enrage, infuriate appellation *name, title, designation, denomination, style append *add, subjoin, annex, superadd Anna affix, attach, *fasten Anti *detach, disengage: curtail (see shorten) applause, appurtenance, accessory, adjunct designate something regarded as additional and at the same time as subsidiary to another object. Appendage implies a certain closeness of attachment or connection yet often stresses the idea of subordination or even uselessness (the caudal appendage) (the smaller borough is a mere appendage of the larger) (those graceful and useless appendages, called Directors—Scott) Appurtenance is applied to something that belongs to the principal object or goes with it customarily yet is not an integral part of it (as the barns, worksheds, garages, gardens on a piece of land or the permanent fixtures in a building) (the bed itself, with all appurtenances of palliasse, mattresses, etc.—Barham) Accessory is applied usually to something that is dispensable yet contributes to the appearance, usefulness, comfort, or convenience of the principal thing (automobile accessories) (wore a beige suit with brown purse, gloves, and other accessories) Adjunct is applied to something that is or may be added or joined to the principal thing without becoming an essential part of it (in the great age of Louis XIV, if [the ballet] became an established institution, still an adjunct of opera—Ellis) (meter and rhyme are not mere adjuncts of poetry—Alexander) appendix, addendum, supplement designate additional matter subjoined to a book. Appendix is used of appended material which contributes (as by way of illustration, amplification, or citation of documents) to the effectiveness of a treatment that is still relatively complete in itself. Addendum and supplement, however, agree in implying that the additional matter is essential to completeness of treatment but differ in that addendum suggests greater brevity and is frequently used of material added to supply omissions while supplement implies larger compass and is often applied to material added after some lapse of time, frequently as a separate publication, to embody later information. When the additional matter of an addendum is a list (as of words or items), the plural addenda is often used instead of addendum. apperception assimilation, identification, *recognition appertain pertain, belong, relate, *bear, apply appetite *desire, lust, passion, urge Anna hungering or hunger, thirsting or thirst, yearning, longing (see LONG vb): craving, wishing, coveting (see DESIRE vb): impulse, spring, *motive: *cupidity, greed Con abnegation, self-abnegation, self-denial, renunciation: asceticism (see under ASCETIC n): repugnance, distaste (see corresponding adjectives at repugnant) appitizer, hors d’oeuvre, aperitif. Appitizer is the comprehensive term denoting food or drink served in advance of a meal as a walet to the appetizer; it may include cocktails and a savory tidbit served before going to the table or a first course (as of oysters, clams, fruit cocktail, or canapé) served at the table. Hors d’oeuvre may be used of a savory, salt, smoked, tart, or uncooked food served with cocktails or as a first course at table. Its more common plural form, hors d’oeuvres, generally suggests a tray of such foods from which one selects what pleases one’s taste. An aperitif is a small drink of liquor and especially of a fortified and usually specially flavored wine taken shortly before lunch or dinner for the purpose of or under the pretext of stimulating the appetite. appettizing *palatable, relishing, tasty, toothsome, flavorful, savory, sapid Anti nauseating applause 1 Applaud, cheer, root mean to demonstrate one’s feeling, especially one’s approbation or joy, audibly and enthusiastically. Applaud specifically and usually implies hand clapping (it is not the custom to applaud preachers) (the audiences at grand opera are asked to applaud only at applause as he came up to receive his diploma. Cheer suggests shouting, usually of meaningless words (as rah-rah-rah or hip-hip-hooray) or of a set form of words adopted by a school, college, or organization as its own; in one use it implies organized rather than spontaneous effort and includes singing as well as shouting. Cheer differs from applause also in its purpose, which is chiefly that of encouraging individuals or a team taking part in a competition or contest; often, however, it suggests jubilation aroused by a successful play or a brilliant feat. Root may imply cheering or applauding, but it stresses encouragement as the motive. Consequently it implies strong partisanship and vocal public championship of what one favors for a candidate for the home team>

Anna acclaim, exult (see PRAISE)
Ant hiss: boo — Con deride, taunt, ridicule, mock

Cheer *commend, compliment, recommend Anna *praise, eulogize, laud: *approve, endorse, sanction Ant disparage: criticize — Con *decry, depreciate, belittle: censure, reprove (see CRITICIZE): *disapprove, depreciate applause, acclamation, acclaim, plaudits denote public expression of approbation. Applause usually suggests loudness or liveliness of demonstration and often carries its literal implication of clapping hands (she waited until the applause died down) round after round of applause greeted him. However, it may be used to designate any other noisy or emphatic expression of approval (as stamping of feet, cheering, or waving of flags) (applause rang out from a hundred thousand throats—Froude) Acclamation adds to applause the implications of eagerness, enthusiasm, and often unaniomity of assent: it often retains its basic implication of crying out (he was nominated to the office by acclamation without a ballot, and with emphatically voiced approval) (his speech was received with acclamation) Acclaim is more poetic than acclamation though often interchanged with the latter; it sometimes carries implications of loftier deeds and more enduring esteem than acclamation (the heroes were hailed with acclaim) (his poetry met with universal acclaim)

Plaudits, though literally equal to applause, may suggest polite or gracious rather than demonstrative expressions of approval (the colonel bowed and smiled with very pleasant good nature at our plaudits—Thackeray) Anna cheering or cheers, rooting (see corresponding verbs at APPLAUD) Ant hisses: boos — Con deriding or derision, taunting or taunts, ridiculing or ridicule, twitting, mocking (see corresponding verbs at RUDICILE) appliance tool, *implement, instrument, utensil Anna accessory, adjunct (see APPENDAGE): *device, contrivance, gadget applicable *relevant, pertinent, apposite, apropos, germane, material Anna *fit, suitable, appropriate, apt, felicitous, happy, meet, fitting, proper Ant inapplicable — Con *impertinent: inept, *awkward applicant aspirant, *candidate application concentration, *attention, study Anna intention, engrossment, absorption (see corresponding adjectives at INTENT): toil, grind, drudgery (see WORK): sedulousness, assiduousness, industriousness or industry, diligence (see corresponding adjectives at BUSY) Ant indolence — Con abstractedness or abstraction, absentmindedness (see corresponding adjectives at ABSTRACTED): laziness, slothfulness, fainness (see corresponding adjectives at LAZY) appliqué vb *overlay, superpose, superimpose

Anna analogous words Ant antonyms Con contrasted words See also explanatory notes facing page 1 appraise

Appreciate, happy, apt, appropriate, suitable, fit, fitting: pat, timely, opportune, *seasonable

*Ant inapposite, inapt —Con *impertinent: awkward, inept; casual, hit-or-miss, haphazard, *random

appraise value, *estimate, evaluate, assay, rate, assess

*Ana *judge, adjudge: determine, ascertain, *discover: inspect, examine, *scrutinize, audit appraising (see under estimate vb)

appreciable *perceptible, sensible, ponderable, palpable, tangible

*Ana apparent, *evident: discernible, noticeable (see corresponding verbs at see)

*Ant inappreciable —Con impalpable, imponderable, *imperceptible, intangible, insensible appreciate 1 comprehend, *understand

*Ana appraise, value, rate, *estimate, evaluate: *judge,

*adjudge: *appraise, comprehend

*Ant depricate —Con disparage, derogate, detract, belittle, *decry

2 Appreciate, value, prize, treasure, cherish mean to hold in high estimation. One appreciates what one understands sufficiently to admire critically or to enjoy with discrimination of its values, especially its aesthetic values (relatively few persons are able to appreciate the fugues of Johann Sebastian Bach) (he liked to be near people and have his talent as a writer appreciated —Anderson) Appreciate may not always carry this strong implication of intelligent admiration but may stress rather a response of warm approval, keen enjoyment, or gratitude (those who are just beginning to appreciate the idea —Mackenzie) (the nature actually made him ache, he appreciated it so—Galsworthy) (children easily appreciated justice —Russell) One values what one rates highly, especially as a possession, and takes deep pride in or sets great store by (the good we never miss we rarely prize —Cowper) (what is freedom and why is it prized? —Dewey) One treasures what one keeps safe from danger of being lost or stolen, especially because one regards it as precious or attaches great sentimental value to it (she treasures every memento of her youth) (those who value money because it makes them independent are the apparently defined fear; thus, one may relieve a person's apprehension peremptorily haunted by memory and become slaves to their avarice) When used in reference to persons, treasure implies a clinging to more often than appreciation or love (pay me no homage, Mario, but if it be I have your friendship, I shall treasure it —Millay) Cherish may often be used interchangeably with prize and treasure but carries a stronger implication of love or affection for what is cherished and often suggests closer, more intimate association or attentions (cherish —the babe apprehend 1 arrest, detain, attach

*Ana seize, *take: capture, *catch

*Con release, discharge, liberate, *free

2 Apprehend, comprehend mean to lay hold of something with the mind so as to know it but together with their derivative nouns appraise and comprehend are clearly distinguished in psychological use. Apprehend and comprehend do not imply attainment of full knowledge or of complete understanding but only a glimpsing of the nature, meaning, or significance of the object of thought; comprehend (see also understand) and comprehension imply an understanding of the object of thought in its entire compass and extent. Apprehend may suggest a single act of the mind and comprehend a complex and laborious process, but this distinction is not so essential as that between imperfect and perfect understanding; thus, one apprehends many things (as infinity or beauty) which one can never comprehend; one comprehends many things as a child (as mother love) which one does not comprehend until late in life (who shall say how quickly the babe apprehends the relation between the causative howl and its effect, the demanded ministration?—Grandgent) (the thirteenth century which cared little to comprehend anything except the incomprehensible—Henry Adams)

*Ana *understand, appreciate: grasp (see take 1): perceive, observe, notice, note (see see)

3 divine, anticipate, *foresee, foreknow

*Ana fear, dread (see corresponding nouns at fear): forecast, predict, forebode, *foretell apprehension 1 arrest, detention, attachment (see under arrest vb)

*Ana seizing or seizing, taking (see corresponding verbs at take): capturing or capture, catching (see corresponding verbs at catch)

*Con releasing or release, discharging or discharge, liberation (see corresponding verbs at free)

2 comprehension (see under apprehend 2)

*Ana understanding, appreciation (see corresponding verbs at understand): perceiving or perception, observing or observation, noticing or notice, noting (see corresponding verbs at see)

3 Apprehension, foreboding, misgiving, presentiment denote fear (or an instance of it) that something is going wrong or will go wrong. Apprehension usually implies fear that obsesses the mind and keeps one anxious and worried (be under apprehension concerning a child's health) (peasants who have survived a famine will be perpetually haunted by memory and apprehension —Russell) Foreboding particularly designates oppressive anticipatory fear or superstitious, unreasoning, or inadequately defined fear; thus, one may relieve a person's apprehensions yet find it hard to dispel his forebodings (there was a sadness and constraint about all persons that day, which filled Mr. Esmond with gloomy forebodings —Thackeray) Misgiving suggests uneasiness and mistrust rather than anxiety or dread; it is often applied to sudden fears (as a suspicion that one is making a mistake, a doubt of one's capacity to accomplish what one has undertaken, or a disturbing loss of courage) (in the midst of my anecdote a sudden misgiving chilled me—had I told them about this goat before?—L. P. Smith) this self-confidence had given place to a misgiving that he had been making a fool of himself —Shaw Presentiment implies a vague feeling or a dim, almost mystical, perception of something (not necessarily unpleasant) that seems bound to happen; however, because it frequently suggests an element of anticipatory fear and, in many cases, of foreboding, it comes into comparison with the other words of this group (the delicious repose of the soul . . . had been shaken . . . and alarmed with dim presentiment —George Eliot)

*Ana *fear, dread, alarm, panic: worry, anxiety, *care

*Ant confidence —Con *trust, faith: assurance, self-

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.
approach

expert, adept, wizard

Con

*beginner, starter (see corresponding verbs at BEGIN):

approaching

was

> Often also it suggests a drawing close

approach

chiefly the other hand, is interchangeable with

In a still more

proached

analogous words

Ant

suggests advances made by the agent for some

a man with a proposal or imminent contact; to each other in meaning) Though the word retains proximate

—

nearing

Wordsworth}

<as the time or identification) is implied <her interest in others someor bribery) <the committee awaited a favorable opporapproaches

times

order of thought or in an intellectual relation (as likeness with reluctance is actually to enter upon a discussion of a topic is actually to make advances to him; to approach

the wedding

in time <it was approaching

<the storm

<the candidate's memory should closely

Dickinson}

<the echoed

Tennyson}

his happy home, the ground—appropriate

vb 1 Approach, near, approximate mean to come or draw close (to). Approach is by far the widest in its range of application. Very often it implies a coming close in space <he left the group and approached us} (the storm was approaching) Often also it suggests a drawing close in time (it was approaching three o'clock) (the day of the wedding approached) Sometimes a closeness in order of thought or in an intellectual relation (as likeness or identification) is implied (her interest in others sometimes approaches intrusiveness) (students are expected to approach the standard set for them by their teachers) (many words of distinctly different origin gradually approach each other in meaning) Though the word retains its implication of coming close, often it also implies actual or imminent contact; to approach a man with a proposal is actually to make advances to him; to approach a topic with reluctance is actually to enter upon a discussion of it. Hence, approach often stresses the manner or method of beginning, especially one calculated to evoke the response or effect desired (he did not know how to approach the subject) (every problem in painting was to Leonardo a problem in science, every problem in physics he approached in the spirit of the artist—Ellis} In a still more specific sense, when used in reference to persons, approach suggests advances made by the agent for some ulterior motive (as diplomatic negotiation, solicitation, or bribery) (the committee awaited a favorable opportunity to approach the governor concerning his candidacy) (the attorney for the prosecution declared that two jurors had been approached during the trial) Near is interchangeable with approach only when used in reference to persons or things that draw close in space or time. Because of its simplicity and familiarity it is sometimes preferred to approach in poetry but it is not as frequent in speech as might be expected, the expressions “get near” and “come near” often being used in preference (the lark could scarce get out his notes for joy ... as he neared his happy home, the ground—Tennyson} (the echoed hoof nearing the distant shore—Wordsworth} (as the time of the birth of our Lord neared—Pusey) Approximate, on the other hand, is interchangeable with approach chiefly in reference to things which come close to each other in some intellectual relation (as the actual to the ideal, the material to the spiritual, or one idea or entity to another) (results that approximate perfection) (for law, at any given moment, even under the most favorable conditions, cannot do more than approximate to its own ideal—Dickinson} (the candidate's memory should closely approximate a hypothetical norm—Armstrong} Approximate is specifically used in reference to a sum, an amount, or a quantity that approaches but does not necessarily equal a given sum or amount (a tablespoonful approaches three teaspoonsfuls) (their fund now approaches $5000)

Ana

analogous words

Ant

antonyms

Con

contrasted words

See also explanatory notes facing page 1

appropriation

*$\text{accost, *address: *begin, commence, initiate: consult, *confer, advise, negotiate}$

Con

*avoid, elude, shun, evade, *escape: *refrain, abstain, forbear: retreat, *recede: withdraw, retire, depart, leave, go

2 touch, equal, *match, rival

Con

dive, deviate (see SWERVE) approach $n$ *overture, advance, tender, bid

Ana

attempt, endeavor, essay, try (see under ATTEMPT $vb$)

Ant

repulse approbation, approval are closely related in meaning. Approbation stresses admiration or high favor and is applied either to actual expressions of such feeling or to the state of mind of a person whose favorable opinion is manifest (his speech won general approbation) (terms of approbation) (feels pleasure in the approbation of his superiors) Approval requires qualification by words like warm, hearty, or enthusiastic to be interchangeable with approbation, especially when the latter denotes expression of favor. For approval, in itself, implies no greater favor than that involved in giving full consent with no reservations or in sanctioning. It therefore is applied especially to the formal act of approving or to a formal statement of permission, endorsement, or confirmation (the interscholastic games are to be played without the approval of the principal) (the president gave his approval to the proposed legislation in yesterday’s conference with reporters) admiration, esteem, respect, *regard: *applause, acclamation, plaudits

Ana

Ant

disapprobation —Con odium, opprobrium, disrepute (see DISGRACE): hatred, detestation, abhorrence (see under HATE $vb$): censuring or censure, condemning or reprehension (see corresponding verbs at CRITICIZE)

appropriate $vb$ preemp, *arrogate, confiscate, usurp

Ana

*take, seize, grab: annex, *add appropiate *fitting, proper, *fit, suitable, apt, meet, happy, felicitous

Ana

apposite, pertinent, germane, *relevant: pat, timely, *seasonable, opportune

Ant

inappropriate —Con wrong, *false: incongruous, incompatible, *inconsonant appropriation, grant, subvention, subsidy mean money or property given or set apart by an authorized body for a predetermined use by others.  Appropriation is the comprehensive term used in government, business, or an institution controlling large sums of money for the amount formally and officially allotted to any one of its departments, projects, services, or beneficiaries in advance of the expenditure of that money (every department must keep within its appropriation) (since the bill just signed carries no appropriation for the new bridge, it is obvious that construction will not begin this year) Grant usually applies to a gift made by a government or by a corporation (as an educational or charitable foundation) to a beneficiary on the condition that certain terms be accepted or certain engagements fulfilled. The beneficiary may be a specific institution, a corporation, or even an individual; the gift may be a sum of money, but when the government is the benefactor, it is often a tract of land or a valuable franchise grants of land from the federal government were made to various railroads building new lines and to various colleges and universities providing agricultural and industrial courses in the mid-nineteenth century (foundations that make grants to institutions engaged in health and medical research) Subvention is more re-approval

*approbation

endorse, sanction, accredit, certify mean to have an expression of favor or approval—

stricted than grant since it always implies pecuniary aid especially to a person or institution in straits; it more often applies to a grant-in-aid to an artistic, literary, or scientific undertaking than to a commercial one (opea in many places is possible only because of a subvention)

Subvention applies to a grant made to an individual or a company to enable him (or it) to carry on some work regarded as advantageous to the public but not for one reason or another self-supporting. Subvention is often preferred when the grant is made by an educational or charitable foundation or similar agency; subsidy, when it is made by the government (the Carnegie Corporation makes subventions to libraries and educational institutions) (the British government provides subsidies for mail-carrying vessels)

approve *approbation

Ana commending or commendation, applauding or applause, compliment (see corresponding verbs at commend): endorsing or endorsement, sanction (see corresponding verbs at approve)

Ant disapproval —Con criticizing or criticism, reprehension or censure (see corresponding verbs at criticize): disapprobation, depreciation, derogation (see corresponding verbs at decry) approve, endorse, sanction, accredit, certify mean to have or to express a favorable opinion of. Approve often means no more than this (darling them . . . to approve her conduct —Conrad) Sometimes, however, it suggests esteem or admiration (Jane secretly approved his discernment—Rose Macaulay) Endorse adds to approve the implication of backing or supporting (as by an explicit statement): it is therefore used chiefly in reference to things requiring promotion or publicity (endorse a person’s candidacy) (endorse the platform of a new political party) (endorse a brand of cigarette) Sanction not only implies approval but also authorization (the school dances were sanctioned by the board of education) The one that sanctions may not be only a person or group but something that provides a standard by which something can be approved and authorized or disapproved and discounterenanced (proposed laws not sanctioned by public opinion) (some churches permit divorce, but do not sanction remarriage) (these statements are sanctioned by common sense—Joseph Gilbert) (the court has also sanctioned recently some federal efforts to protect Negroes in the South from violence—Barth) Accredit and certify usually imply official endorsement and conformity with certain standards. Their selection is dependent on idiom rather than on distinctions in meaning (an accredited herd of dairy cattle) (credent milk) (an accredited school) (a certified teacher) (a certified public accountant) (labels by which brain merit is advertised and certified—medals, honors, degrees—Woolf) Accredited, however, is sometimes used generally as implying public approval or general acceptance (if any . . . break away from accredited custom—Inge) (sages so fully accredited as Mr. Bertrand Russell—Montague)

Ana *commend, applaud, compliment: *ratify, confirm

Ant disapprove —Con reject, refuse, repudiate, spurn (see decline): condemn, reprehend, *criticize approximate vb *approach, near approximately *nearly, almost, well-nigh

Ant precisely, exactly appurtenance accessory, adjunct, *appendage

Ana furnishing or furniture, equipment, appointment (see corresponding verbs at furnish) apropos apposite, pertinent, *relevant, germane, applicable, material

Ana pat, timely, opportune, *seasonable: appropriate, fitting, *fit, suitable, apt, proper, meet, happy

Ant unappropos

apt 1 happy, felicitous, appropriate, *fit, suitable, meet, proper

Ana apposite, pertinent, *relevant, apropos: pat, timely, opportune (see seasonal): telling, convincing, compelling (see valid): right, nice, precise, exact (see correct)

Ant inapt, inept —Con *awkward, maladroit: wrong, false

2 Apt, likely, liable are often interchangeable when followed by to and the infinitive, but clear differences may be described. Apt implies an inherent or habitual tendency (as an inclination, bent, or predisposition); it refers to the past and the present as much as if not more than to the future; it applies commonly to persons, but may apply to things that show a tendency or drift (you are just a little apt to let yourself be a slave to that house of yours—Bennett) (the upper circles . . . are apt to favor a pronunciation derived . . . from that which prevailed in England—Grandgent) (long poems are always apt to drop in places into what is only not called prose because it is metrical—Alexander) Likely stresses probability; it refers in time to the future and therefore has its place in predictions (he is likely to succeed) (the wedding is likely to cost her parents more than they can afford) (it is likely to rain today) (“How now! is Jack Cade slain?”) “No, my lord, nor likely to be slain; for they have won the bridge”—Shak. Likely (see also liable, responsible) implies exposure to a risk or danger; it suggests a chance rather than a probability and is therefore often used in warnings, in cautions, or in the expression of fears (children who play in the street are liable to be injured by automobiles) (drivers must remember that cars are liable to skid on wet roads) (anyone who disobeys this rule is liable to be punished severely) Thus, a person who is apt to lose his head under stress knows that he is likely to fail when he is put to a test and therefore forms the habit of avoiding situations in which he is liable to encounter difficulties.

Ana inclined, disposed, predisposed (see incline vb): prone, *liable

Con averse, *disinclined, indisposed, loath

Ant unappropos

Ant inappropos

aptitude bent, turn, talent, faculty, *gift, knack, genius

Ana *taste, gusto, zest: propensity, *leaning, penchant, flair

Ant inappropos

aquatic lacustrine, fluvial, fluvitile, marine, oceanic, thalassic, neritic, pelagic, abyssal all refer to water and especially to a body of water but all except aquatic are highly specific in their applications and all are more or less technical terms in the geographical and biological sciences and in geology. Aquatic may imply a habitat in water, but as applied to animals and plants it often means living in water (but not necessarily submerged) or on the water or around a body of water. It is specifically applicable to any plant (as the water hyacinth and the water lily) that has its roots in or below water. It is also applicable to any animal that frequents the water, especially to a swimming bird or mammal (as a gull or an otter). A frog is more often described as an amphibious animal but as compared to a toad its habits may be said to be aquatic. Lacustrine relates only to a lake; it is used in biology (lacustrine shells) (lacustrine fauna and flora), in geology (lacustrine deposits), and in archaeology aqueduct

<the lacustrine period, a prehistoric period when dwellings were erected over lakes> Fluvial and fluviatile are used interchangeably to suggest the action, operation, or influence of flowing water though geologists perhaps somewhat prefer fluvial and biologists distinctly prefer fluvial (a fluvial plain) fluviatile communities generally have a smaller standing crop of phytoplankters—Park> When denoting a specific relationship to a particular stream or a relation to streams as such as distinct from their action or effects fluvial is the term of choice (<international fluvial law> coastal and fluvial shipping—Welles> sketched a geographical interpretation of the history of civilization through three stages: the fluvial, the thalassic, and the oceanic—Sat. Review (London)> In reference to salt water marine (see also marine) is the comprehensive term, applicable not only to things that pertain to the open ocean but to those that pertain to contiguous salt or brackish waters (as bays, harbors, salt marshes, or salt ponds) marine shells marine vegetation marine deposits> When specific reference to the open ocean or to mid ocean is intended, oceanic is the preferred word (oceanic fauna) oceanic currents> When reference is to seas or gulfs, as distinguished from the ocean, thalassic is often the term preferred especially by historians (thalassic empire) These terms, however, are neither so definitely restricted nor so precise as the succeeding terms, which usually name definite zones of the ocean. Neritic refers only to the belt of shallow water surrounding a landmass. Pelagic, which in general use implies definitely the open sea or the high seas (pelagic sealing), in its stricter technical application has reference in its extent only to the realm of the open ocean and in its depth only to so much of the water covering that expanse as is penetrable by light. Below the pelagic zone in the deeper parts of the ocean lies the abyssal zone, where no plant life exists and animals are carnivorous and are usually blind or luminescent.

aqueduct *channel, canal, conduit, duct

Arab Arabic, *Arabian

Arabian adj Arabian, Arab, Arabic are not freely applicable to the same things and are, consequently, often a source of confusion. Arabian is used chiefly with reference to a place, the large peninsula in southwestern Asia which includes the modern kingdom of Saudi Arabia. Thus, one speaks of the Arabian peninsula, desert, kingdoms, flora, fauna, history, intending in each case to convey a consciousness of geographic relationship. Arab is used chiefly with reference to a people who still dwell in Arabia or their descendants who are common in northern, eastern, and central Africa, in Madagascar, India, and the Malay Archipelago, and in some parts of Syria and Persia. The word, therefore, often implies characteristics or habits associated with Arabs (as a nomadic life, equestrian skill, or Muslim practices) <Arab customs> <Arab descent> <Arab harems> Distinctively, an Arabian horse is a particular horse bred in or imported from Arabia whereas the Arab horse is the kind of horse bred and used by Arabs; an Arabian caravan travels in Arabia, an Arab caravan is made up of Arabs. Arabic refers usually to a language, originally the language of the Arabs, but now used in several countries whose inhabitants are not exclusively Arab in origin (as Palestine, Syria, Iraq, Egypt, and northern Africa) the Arabic language Arabic is also applicable to a culture associated with the use of the Arabic language or to any manifestations of that culture Arabic architecture Arabic numerals Distinctively, Arab literature is the literature of Arabs whereas Arabian literature is produced specifically in Arabia and Arabic literature is written in Arabic.

Arabic Arab, *Arabian arbiter *judge, arbitrator, umpire, referee arbitrary autocratic, *absolute, despotic, tyrannical, tyrannous Ana *dictatorial, authoritarian, magisterial, oracular: domineering, *masterful, imperious, peremptory, imperative Ant legitimate —Con *lawful, legal, licit arbitrate adjudicate, adjudge, *judge Ana mediate, intervene (see INTERPOSE) *decide, determine, settle: conciliate, placate, appease (see PACIFY) arbiter *judge, referee, arbitrator, umpire arc *curve, arch, bow arcade 1 arcature, *colonnade, portico, peristyle 2 gallery, cloister, ambulatory, *passage, passageway arcane *mysterious, inscrutable Ana occult, esoteric, *recondite: cabalistic, anagogic, mystic, *mystical arcature arcade, *colonnade arch n *curve, bow, arc arch adj *saucy, pert Ana roguish, waggish, impish, mischievous, *playful: mocking, deriding or derisive, twitting (see corresponding verbs at RIDICULE) archaeology *anthropology, ethnology archaic obsolete, antiquated, antique, *old, ancient, antediluvian, venerable Ant up-to-date —Con fresh, novel, *new, newfangled, new-fashioned, modern, modernistic; fashionable, modish (see STYLISH) architect *artist, artificer, artisan architectonic adj architectural (see under ARCHITECTURE) architectonics n *architecture architectural architectonic (see under ARCHITECTURE) architecture, architectonics and their corresponding adjectives architectural and architectonic are often indistinguishable, but they tend to diverge in emphasis. The nouns mean the science of planning and building structures (as churches, houses, bridges, and ships) that involve problems of artistic design, engineering, and adaptation to the ends in view. In general use architecture and hence architectural often suggest that artistry or beauty in design is the end and goal of the architect; in technical use they stress design as the result of attention to practical as well as artistic ends and imply that the profession is both a science and an art. Architectonics and its corresponding adjective architectonic place the emphasis on constructive skill; they suggest attention to the framework, skeleton, or supporting structure, sometimes without reference to the details necessary for the completion or elaboration of the structure; when one speaks of Chartres Cathedral as a triumph of architecture, he calls attention to its beauty of design and ornamentation; but when one speaks of it as a triumph of architectonics, he calls attention to it as a great work of engineering where the supporting parts of pillars, props, and ribs are united so as to form a stone skeleton capable of carrying the enormous weight of stone roof and high towers yet permitting many windows in its enclosing walls. Architectonics and its adjective are far more common in extended use than architecture and architectural, for the latter seldom escape their suggestions of building with stone, wood, or steel. Architectonics and more especially architectonic, on the other hand, often are referable to a system of ideas or philosophy or to a work of art and especially to an epic or a poetic drama where there is not only perfect articulation of parts but their combination into an integral or organic whole <creative energy . . . is . . . architectonic, and it imposes upon the lyric impulse an ordered sequence and an organic unity—

Ana analogous words Ant antonyms Con contrasted words See also explanatory notes facing page 1
argousious hard, difficult

A laborious, toilsome (see corresponding nouns at WORK): exhausting, wearying or wearisome, tiring, fatiguing (see corresponding verbs at TIRE): *onerous, exacting, oppressive

A light, facile —Con *easy, simple, effortless, smooth area 1 Area, tract, region, zone, belt mean an extent of space especially of ground or surface that is distinguishable from its surroundings in appearance or in certain distinctive features. Area still carries its original implication of clearly marked bounds, but it may be used with reference to a space defined on a map or chart as well as to one the limits of which are actually visible <an oasis is a green or fertile area in a desert> <there are vast uncultivated areas even in the most populous of the states> <two colors—aspen and evergreen, not intermingled but lying in solid areas of light and dark> —Cather  Tract, on the other hand, stresses extent rather than limits; it is therefore preferred to area in designating a space that might otherwise be described as an expanse or is thought of as widespread or far stretching and uniform in character <beyond the area of small farms lay larger tracts that were immensely productive—Anderson>   Tract is often used in an extended sense in reference to anything that has extent or duration <wide tracts of life—Day Lewis>   Region suggests reference to some definite place or locality (as on the earth's surface, in the atmosphere, or in the human body) distinguished from other localities by certain features or by being subject to a particular condition or influence <the upper region of the air> <the Finger Lakes region of central New York State> <what region of the brain is the seat of consciousness?>  Zone denotes an area or region that suggests a girdle or an encircling band especially on a map or chart <the torrid, arctic, and temperate zones> <parcel post zones> <the pelagic zone of the ocean> In broader use it is often applied to an area that forms a band or strip and is distinctly set off from its environs by some peculiarity of feature <the firing zone of a battlefield> <the business zones of a city> <that milky way which nightly as a circling zone thou seest powdered with stars—Milton>  Basically belt is a synonym of zone: distinctively, it implies an area characterized by the presence of some distinguishing natural feature (as a particular flora or mineral) <the corn belt of the U.S.>   In strict technical usage belt is applied to an area less extensive than a zone   Ana *locality, district: *expanse, stretch 2 extent, *size, dimensions, magnitude, volume

argot cant, jargon, slang, *dialect, lingo, vernacular, patois

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.
one's opponent and by defending one's own from his attacks. Disputation, however, is more often applied to a formal exercise common in medieval universities and still found in some modern universities in which a thesis is tested by the ability of its proponent or defender to sustain it in the face of severe critical attack; debate, to a two-sided contest between persons or teams which is governed by strict rules of procedure and in which the victory goes to the person or team regarded by the appointed judges as manifesting the greater ability. Forensic in its academic use is applied to an argumentative exercise intended to convince its readers or hearers; the word suggests emphasis on the qualities of successful legal argument such as the ability to marshal evidence, to make telling points, to persuade as well as to convince. Dialectic is a term more common among philosophers than in general or academic use. It is usually applied to a method of reasoning especially by weighing and resolving contradictory or juxtaposed arguments, the aim of which is to reach the truth by the correct application of the rules of logic, but is sometimes applied to argument or argumentation that merely observes what its writer believes to be the laws of reasoning (<Newman's masterly English, and his competent, if not supreme, dialectic—Saintsbury>)

Ana argument, dispute, controversy
Ant dry
Arid barren, infertile, *sterile, unfruitful: *bare, bald, Ana—moist: verdant —Con *wet, damp, dank, humid: 2 rise, *spring, originate, derive, flow, issue, emanate, proceed, stem
Aristocracy 1 plutocracy, *oligarchy 2 Aristocracy, nobility, gentility, county, elite, society denote a body of persons who constitute a socially superior caste. Aristocracy often refers to an ideally superior caste and therefore does not invariably apply to a fixed or definite group of persons (<there is a natural aristocracy among men. The grounds of this are virtue and talents —Jefferson>) Usually the term connotes superiority in birth, breeding, and social station and is applicable to all those persons generally recognized as first in family and in personal importance (<he comes of the Brahmin caste of New England. This is the harmless, inoffensive, untitled aristocracy—Holmes>) However, in countries where there is a privileged and titled class, the nobility, aristocracy is often used to designate the same group with this difference in implication: that nobility stresses rank inferior to that of royalty but superior to that of all other classes, and aristocracy stresses the possession of power over the people through ownership of land and through long-established and generally acknowledged superiority (<the word cousin in the mouth or from the pen of a royalty signified a recognition of rank superior to nobility—Bellot> the distinguishing characteristic of an aristocracy is the enjoyment of privileges which are not communicable to other citizens simply by anything they can themselves do to obtain them—Hallam> However, nobility in British use does not include titled commoners (as baronets and knights). These latter are thought of as members of the aristocracy. Gentry and county are distinctively British terms applied to a class, essentially a leisurely class, who by birth and breeding can be described as gentlemen (in the technical sense) and ladies but who are without hereditary title and are classed as commoners. In British use gentility refers to a class in rank just below the nobility but often having in its membership persons of equally high birth or breeding. County, however, carries a suggestion of an association of the family with the county or section and usually of ownership of an estate in the country (<the gentility and the nobility were on friendliest terms> (<the newcomers were slow in being accepted by the county>) <the advantage claimed for this plan is that it provides us with a gentility that is, with a class of rich people able to cultivate themselves by an expensive education—Shaw) Elite is referable not to a social rank but to those members of any group or class who stand out as its flower or the ones most frequently sought after (<the elite of the nobility> <few others of the mathematical elite—Darrow>) When used without qualification elite usually means the group regarded as the highest, especially as judged by social or cultural standards (<it is the business of the college to produce an elite—superior men—North American Review>) Society is applied to that portion of a community which marks itself apart as a leisurely class much given to formal entertainments, fashionable sports, and other pursuits characteristic of an active social life (<society is now one polished horde, formed of two mighty tribes, the Bores and Bored—Byron> <there are only about four hundred people in New York Society —McAllister>)

Ant people, proletariat
Aristocrat patrician, gentleman
Ant commoner
Arm vb accouter, outfit, equip, furnish, appoint
Ant disarm
Armament matériel, munitions, arms, ordnance, artillery, ammunition as used in modern warfare are not all synonyms of one another, but they are frequently confused. In general they mean material used in military, naval, and air operations. Armament is by far the most inclusive term, for it comprehends everything that must be considered in determining a nation's military strength, such as trained soldiers, sailors, and fliers, land fortifications, battleships and all other war vessels (as transports, submarines, destroyers), aircraft, gun, provisions, equipment, available manpower and resources. Matériel is less inclusive; it comprehends materials only and includes all the requirements of a military establishment other than personnel. Munitions is often coextensive with matériel but typically stresses supplies of war including military equipment of all kinds, especially all weapons of attack and defense and the missiles, projectiles, and propellants necessary for their use. Arms is less definite in its application than either of the preceding words, but in general, when used as an inclusive term, it covers whatever weapons soldiers or sailors need in actual fighting (as cannon, guns, rifles, pistols, swords, and bayonets). Ordinance is used in two senses, the more general of which is probably the less common. In that sense the term includes not only everything which is covered by arms, but every other weapon of attack or defense (as tanks) and everything needed for the equipment and use of these weapons (as mounts, carriages, projectiles, and missiles) or for their manufacture or repair (as tools and machinery). More narrowly and also more commonly, ordinance is a comprehensive term for all kinds of heavy firearms, especially those discharged from mounts (as cannon, guns, howitzers, and mortars). Artillery is a close synonym of ordnance in this latter sense, but it suggests actual warfare and therefore implies group service in the management of mounted firearms. It sometimes, like the broader sense of ordnance, comprehends also the mounts, ammunition, and other items essential to the work of the branch of an army dealing with the operation of heavy guns (called also the artillery). Ammunition, though once used as a general term nearly equal to munitions, is now restricted in its application to the projectiles used in warfare (as bullets, shells, grenades, or bombs) and their necessary propellants, detonators, fuses, and primers.

A fort, fortress, citadel, stronghold: bulwark, breastwork, rampart, bastion, parapet

Armistice truce, cease-fire, peace

Armory, arsenal, magazine have related but usually distinguishable technical military senses. Armory once carried the meanings now associated with arsenal and magazine, but in current use it has commonly two applications: one, a public building in which troops (as of the National Guard) have their headquarters and facilities (as for drill and storage); the other, an establishment under government control for the manufacture of arms (as rifles, pistols, bayonets, and swords). Arsenal in its narrow sense is applied to a government establishment for the manufacture, storage, and issue of arms, ammunition, and related equipment: in popular and especially in figurative use the word usually suggests a store of or a storehouse for weapons and ammunition (weapons from the arsenal of poetic satire—Reed) (make America the arsenal of the democracies) Magazine is strictly applied to a storehouse for all sorts of military and naval supplies including especially arms and ammunition. In extended use it often more narrowly suggests a storehouse for explosives (a powder magazine) (as when high Jove his sharp artillery forms, and opes his cloudy magazine of storms—Pope) (an educated man stands, as it were, in the midst of a boundless arsenal and magazine, filled with all the weapons and engines which man’s skill has been able to devise from the earliest time—Carlyle)

In extended use magazine is applied to a supply chamber (as in a gun for cartridges, in a camera for films, or in a typesetting machine for matrices).

Arms ordnance, artillery, matériel, munitions, arms—aminaent, ammunition

Army host, legion, multitude

Aroma spicy, pungent, piquant; savory (see Palatable)

Aromatic balmy, redolent, fragrant.odorous

Arrest vb 1 line, lin, range, array, align: assort, classify, pigeonhole, sort

Arrange 1 order, marshal, organize, systematize, methodize

Arraign charge, accuse, impeach, indict, incriminate

Arraignment *summon, cite: try, test (see Prove) *

Arrant out-and-out, outright, unmitigated

Arrive 2 clothe, apparel, attire, robe, dress

Arrhythmia display, parade, pomp

Arrhythmics vitalize, energize: start, activate: quicken

Arrhythmia interpose, intervene, interfere: delay, detain, retard: frustrate, thwart, balk

Activate: clothe, apparel, attire, robe, dress

Admisitance dispose (see corresponding noun disposal): line, line up, range, array, align: assort, classify, pigeonhole, sort

Ant derange, disarrange — Con disorder, disorganize, unsettle, disturb: disperse, scatter

Arrange 2 negotiate, concert

Area plan, design, scheme, project (see under plan n)

Arrangement out-and-out, outright, unmitigated

Array vb 1 line, lin, range, array, align

Arms marshal, arrange, order

Antidote 2 clothe, apparel, attire, robe, dress

Arrangement display, parade, pomp

Arsenal showing or show, exhibiting or exhibition, exposing or exposition (see corresponding verbs at show): arranging or arrangement, marshaling (see corresponding verbs at order): disposition (see disposal)

Arrest vb 1 Arrest, check, interrupt mean to stop in midcourse. Arrest implies a holding fixed in the midst of movement, development, or progress and usually a preeminence of further advance until someone or something effects a release (arrest the progress of a disease) (disencouragement sometimes arrests a child’s development) (books that arrest attention) Check (see also restrain) suggests suddenness and force in stopping as though bringing to a halt sharply or with a jerk (the entrance of the teacher checked the disturbance in the schoolroom) (he checked himself just as he was about to blurt out his indignation) (he caught her by the arm as she ran past and . . . without trying to check her, simply darted in with her and up the stairs—Conrad) Interrupt stresses a breaking in and a consequent stopping, but it carries no clear suggestion that continuation is impossible or improbable (interrupt a lecture with a question) (their talk was interrupted by the arrival of visitors) (he was discouragingly interrupted at the point when ideas and words were flowing freely)

Arrest interpose, intervene, interfere: delay, detain, retard: frustrate, thwart, balk

Arrest: vitalize, energize: start, activate: quicken

Arrest interpose, intervene, interfere: delay, detain, retard: frustrate, thwart, balk

Arrest vb 2 Arrest, apprehend, attach, detain mean to seize and hold under restraint or in custody by authority of the law. The same likenesses and differences in meaning are manifest in the comparable use of arrest, apprehension, attachment, detention. Arrest (verb or noun) is the most widely used of these words for the seizing of a person and holding him in custody. It refers both to civil cases where a person is placed under restraint, and to criminal cases, where apprehend and apprehension are also used; strictly, one arrests a person for debt, but one apprehends a thief; witnesses are under arrest; the apprehension of the rioters is demanded. Ordinarily laymen seldom use arrest except in the sense of apprehend, for it carries connotations which make its use avoided in reference to witnesses or even suspects. The words commonly used when property is seized and held (as for payment of a debt) are attach and attachment (attach the accounts of a firm suspected of falsification of income tax reports) Attach and attachment are used in reference to persons chiefly when the intent is to make them appear in court (as to answer for contempt or to serve as a witness). Detain and detention usually imply holding in custody (as for inquiry or inspection). They are not strictly legal terms but are often used when there is the desire to avoid the stigma associated with the word arrest (the health officers detained the ship) (detain a suspect) (detain a witness)

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>arrest</th>
<th>art</th>
</tr> </thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Ana seize, *take: *catch, capture: *imprison, incarcerate, jail</td>
<td>art n 1 Art, skill, cunning, artifice, craft can mean the faculty of performing or executing expertly what is planned or devised. Art is not actually a comprehensive term but is so variable in its implications that it is interchangeable with any one of the others and capable of carrying its specific implications; hence the last four words are synonyms of art, but they are not always closely synonymous with each other and may even at times be used in distinction from each other. The earliest and still common implications of art are those which are now associated specifically with skill: technical knowledge, and proficiency or expertise in its exercise or practical application &lt;true ease in writing comes from not art, but chance, as those move easiest who have learned to dance—Pope&gt; &lt;tis hard to say, if greater want of skill appear in writing or in judging ill—Pope&gt; Both words are also used concretely with these implications &lt;there's a great art in doing these things properly. I have often had to carry off a man of fourteen stone, resting him all the time as if he was in bed—Shaw&gt; &lt;able boys and girls will . . . perceptibly accustomed . . . Russell&gt; Art also at times comes close to cunning where it adds to skill such implications as great or recondite knowledge, inventive or creative power, and capacity for perfection in execution. This sense prevails especially in the phrase “a work of art.” Sometimes either word may be substituted for the other without change of meaning &lt;high-ribbed vault . . . with wordsworth&gt; sometimes either word may be substituted for the other without change of meaning &lt;high-ribbed vault . . . with wordsworth&gt;</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Con discharge, release, liberate, *free</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>arrest n apprehension, detention, attachment (see under ARREST vb)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ana seize or seizure, taking (see corresponding verbs at TAKE): capturing or capture, catching (see corresponding verbs at CATCH)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Con liberation, discharging or discharge, releasing or release (see corresponding verbs at FREE)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>arresting striking, remarkable, *noticeable, outstanding, salient, signal, prominent, conspicuous</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ana impressive, *moving, touching, affecting, poignant: fascinating, attractive, enchanting (see under ATTRACT)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Con *common, ordinary, familiar: hackneyed, stereotyped, *trite</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>arrival, advent denote in common the reaching of a destination. Arrival implies precedent travel or movement &lt;the arrival and departure of trains&gt;</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>the morning of my arrival&gt;</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Advert is sometimes applied to an important or even momentous arrival (look forward to the advent of the Messiah) Except when it connotes birth, it usually stresses appearance on the scene more than the coming or reaching of the end of a journey (life . . . with the advent of an attractive young woman took on acknowledged connotations of interest—Mary Austin)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ana coming (see COME): appearing or appearance, emerging or emergence (see corresponding verbs at APPEAR)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ant departure —Con going, leaving, withdrawing or withdrawal (see corresponding verbs at GO)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>arrive *come</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ant depart —Con *go, leave, withdraw, retire</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>arrogant *proud, haughty, lordly, insolent, overbearing, supercilious, disdainful</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ana imperious, domineering, *masterful, peremptory, imperative: pretentious, ostentatious (see SHOWY)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ant meek: unassuming —Con *humble, modest, lowly: yielding, submitting or submissive, deferring or deferential (see corresponding verbs at YIELD)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>arrogate vb Arrogate, usurp, preempt, appropriate, confiscate mean to seize or assume something by more or less high-handed methods. Arrogate (commonly followed by to and a reflexive pronoun) implies an unwarranted and usually an insolent or presumptuous claim to something assumed, frequently to the exclusion of others &lt;by arrogating to himself too much, he was in danger of losing that degree of estimation to which he was entitled—Johnson&gt; be arrogated to himself the right of deciding dogmatically what was orthodox doctrine—Macaulay&gt; the exploitation of the tourists was a monopoly which the most active of the children had arrogated by force and cunning to themselves—Huxley&gt; Usurp stresses unlawful or wrongful intrusion of oneself into the place held by another (as through law, custom, or natural right) and the seizure for oneself of the territory, power, authority, prerogatives, or rights pertaining to such place &lt;usurp a throne&gt; the dictator usurped the powers not only of the king but of the parliament&gt; literature, or culture, tended with Arnold to usurp the place of religion—T. S. Eliot&gt; Preempt implies beforehandness in taking something desired by others and keeping it in one’s own possession. Historically it implies the right to purchase or acquire (as land or property) before others and often on more favorable terms: this implication is now sometimes found in discriminating figurative use &lt;prose has preempted a lion’s share of the territory once held, either in sovereignty or on equal terms, by poetry—Lowes&gt; In current use it more often suggests arrogation or usurpation than lawful methods such as purchase &lt;when the townpeople arrived they found that the visitors had preempted all the parking places&gt; the best of the slogans suggested had already been preempted by a rival manufacturer&gt; in the game of bridge, to preempt is to make a bid aimed at shutting out shifts by the partner or bids by the opponents&gt; Appropriate more often suggests conversion to one’s own use than a setting apart for a particular or peculiar use. However, the latter implication is often retained &lt;congress appropriated three billion dollars for flood control&gt; It usually suggests an acquiring for oneself or an annexing sometimes by lawful but often by unscrupulous or even by unlawful means &lt;growing plants appropriate whatever elements they need from the soil and the air&gt; a plagiarist appropriates the ideas of others&gt; if we could by any means appropriate to our use some of the extraordinarily digestive power that a boa constrictor has—Meredith&gt; Confiscate implies seizure (as of others’ property or goods) through an exercise of authority; it does not, like appropriate, suggest conversion to the use of the one exercising authority; thus, one might note that the sheriff appropriated the liquor confiscated when the still was raided, if he took for his own use without authority what had been taken from another in a proper exercise of authority &lt;the teacher confiscated all packages of chewing gum&gt; if miners, or any other sort of workers, find that the local authorities will confiscate the incomes of the ratepayers to feed them when they are idle, their incentive to pay their way by their labor will be . . . perceptibly slackened—Shaw&gt;</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ana seize, *take, grab</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ant renounce: yield —Con *relinquish, surrender, cede, resign</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>arsenal *armory, magazine</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ana analogous words Ant antonyms Con contrasted words See also explanatory notes facing page 1</td>
<td></td>
</tr> </tbody>
</table>
A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

on contrived skill imply a contrast with power derived from nature or inspiration (gaining his ends by one art or another) (when you come to dissect the Odyssey, what amazing artifice is found under that apparently straightforward tale—Quiller-Couch) Art and craft (see also trade) were once close synonyms but now tend to become contrasted terms. Both words still imply ingenuity and subtlety in workmanship (a gem carved with classic art) (a bracelet wrought with all the craft of a Cellini) (naturalism in prose . . . is after all only defensible as one element in the craft, the artifice of poetry—Carruth) Both may suggest, but art less often suggests, trickery or guile in the attainment of one's ends (Henry, out of a lifetime of political craft, coached Cranmer how to turn the tables on his accusers—Hackett) Both words are also affected by their use as designations of pursuits, craft tending to be applied to a lower kind of skill or inventive power revealing itself in the mastery of materials or technique and in effects that can be analyzed and imitated, and art to what is capable of expressing a personal vision and of achieving results which defy analysis and imitation; thus, an artist may demonstrate his craft in painting sunlight but he manifests his art in painting a composition that conveys his intent to the spectator (like many of the hard-boiled writers, he will allow himself craft, but not art—Porzy)

2 craft, handicraft, profession, *trade

3 Art, science designate a branch of learning. Art as it is found in the phrases the liberal arts, bachelor of arts, master of arts refers to one of the fundamental branches of learning regarded as necessary to every educated person and serving as an instrument for his advancement in knowledge not only generally but specifically in his professional studies. In the Middle Ages the liberal arts were grammar, logic, rhetoric, arithmetic, geometry, professional studies. In the Middle Ages the liberal arts and arms—"Since the nineteenth century, especially in reference to departments of knowledge or courses given in schools, colleges, and universities, these words show a wider divergence in implications and applications and a tendency (especially in the plural forms) to be used as generic terms. On the one hand, art is applied to those courses which have for their end teaching students to make or do something that requires skill and a knowledge of technique and also, usually, special gifts such as inventiveness, taste, or ingenuity (the manual arts) (the fine art of painting) (in instruction in the arts of design) On the other hand, science is applied only to such courses or studies as deal with the gathering and classification of facts, the drawing of correct inferences from them, and the establishment of verifiable general laws (the sciences of physics, botany, and economics) (major in science) (teachers of science) Still other distinctions are drawn between the two, when art or science refers not so much to a branch of learning as to a pursuit for which one is prepared by the study of an art or science; thus, questions arise as to whether architecture is an art or a science, that is (1) whether its essential demands of the architect are inventiveness, taste, and technical skill, or a knowledge of the principles of physics, engineering, and related sciences; (2) whether the end to be served is to give aesthetic pleasure or to produce something useful (rhetoric was for Rome both an art and a science. . . . It had obvious utilitarian value, and its materials were not only exact logical concepts, but the sonorous words and the noble rhythms which were the glory of their tongue—Buchan)} artery route, course, *way, passage, pass artful wily, guileful, crafty, cunning, tricky, *sly, foxy, insidious

Ana adroit, *dexterous: political, diplomatic, smooth, *suave

Ant artless —Con simple, *natural, ingenious, unspooficated, naive: candid, open, *frank article n 1 clause, plank, count, *paragraph, verse 2 *thing, object

Ana *item, detail, particular 3 *essay, paper, theme, composition articled indented, *bound, bond articulate adj 1 *vocal, oral

Ana distinct, clear (see EVIDENT): uttered, voiced (see EXPRESS vb)

Ant inarticulate, dumb 2 *vocal, fluent, eloquent, voluble, glib

Ana expressing, voicing, uttering, venting (see EXPRESS vb): *expressive, meaningful, significant: voluble, glib, *talking

Ant inarticulate, dumb articulate vb 1 *integrate, concatenate

Ana unite, *join, connect, link, relate: organize, systematize, methodize, *order

Con disseck, resolve, *analyze: *separate, part, divide

2 Articulate, pronounce, enunciate are comparable when they mean to form speech sounds. To articulate is to break up, by manipulation of the vocal organs, an expiration of breath into distinct parts (as phones or words) that such a sequence of these constitutes intelligible speech (his agitation was so great that he could not articulate—Macaulay) In a precise phonetics use to articulate is to close or narrow the vocal organs in such a manner as to produce a sound, especially a consonant, of a language, more specifically by the adjustment of the tongue with relation to the palate, at the place where the tongue has, for that sound, its maximum elevation (many foreigners . . . use a t articulated by the tip of the tongue against the upper teeth . . . . This articulation produces a very unnatural effect when used in English—Daniel Jones) In slightly extended usage articulate may also mean to make the manipulations or articulations for the sounds as a whole in one's speech with such care or carefulness that one's speech is distinctly or indistinctly heard. To pronounce is to employ articulations, accentuation, and intonation with an acceptability whose yardstick is the usage of others (colonel is pronounced the same as kernel) (s in his is pronounced 2) (c at first had the value of hard g. During the classical Latin period it was pronounced k—Goudy) To enunciate is to articulate with an effectiveness whose yardstick is a listener's ease of understanding (enunciating their words with peculiar and offensive clarity—Household) articulated integrated, concatenated (see under INTEGRATE)

Ana united, joined, connected, linked, related (see JOIN):
artificer artisan, *artist, architect
artificial, factitious, synthetic, ersatz mean not brought into being by nature but by human art or effort or by some process of manufacture. They are not often interchangeable because of differences in some of their implications and in their range of application. Artificial is far more extensive in scope than the others. It may be applied to anything that is not produced by natural conditions but is in some sense a human creation.Artificial is applied also to things which imitate and sometimes serve the same purposes as something found in nature but which are of quite different origin and constitution and usually of inferior worth.Artificial flowers of wax; Artificial jewels made from colored glass.Artificial is also applicable to something produced by human effort that has its counterpart in nature.Civilization may be said to have begun when the artificial heat and light of burning fuel were first used to supplement the natural heat and light of the sun. Artificial is applied also to things which imitate and sometimes serve the same purposes as something found in nature but which are of quite different origin and constitution and usually of inferior worth.Artificial flowers of wax; Artificial jewels made from colored glass.Artificial is also applicable to things which imitate and sometimes serve the same purposes as something found in nature but which are of quite different origin and constitution and usually of inferior worth.Artificial flowers of wax; Artificial jewels made from colored glass.Artificial is also applicable to things which imitate and sometimes serve the same purposes as something found in nature but which are of quite different origin and constitution and usually of inferior worth.Artificial flowers of wax; Artificial jewels made from colored glass.Artificial is also applicable to things which imitate and sometimes serve the same purposes as something found in nature but which are of quite different origin and constitution and usually of inferior worth.Artificial flowers of wax; Artificial jewels made from colored glass.Artificial is also applicable to things which imitate and sometimes serve the same purposes as something found in nature but which are of quite different origin and constitution and usually of inferior worth.Artificial flowers of wax; Artificial jewels made from colored glass.Artificial is also applicable to things which imitate and sometimes serve the same purposes as something found in nature but which are of quite different origin and constitution and usually of inferior worth.Artificial flowers of wax; Artificial jewels made from colored glass.Artificial is also applicable to things which imitate and sometimes serve the same purposes as something found in nature but which are of quite different origin and constitution and usually of inferior worth.Artificial flowers of wax; Artificial jewels made from colored glass.Artificial is also applicable to things which imitate and sometimes serve the same purposes as something found in nature but which are of quite different origin and constitution and usually of inferior worth.Artificial flowers of wax; Artificial jewels made from colored glass.Artificial is also applicable to things which imitate and sometimes serve the same purposes as something found in nature but which are of quite different origin and constitution and usually of inferior worth.Artificial flowers of wax; Artificial jewels made from colored glass.Artificial is also applicable to things which imitate and sometimes serve the same purposes as something found in nature but which are of quite different origin and constitution and usually of inferior worth.Artificial flowers of wax; Artificial jewels made from colored glass.Artificial is also applicable to things which imitate and sometimes serve the same purposes as something found in nature but which are of quite different origin and constitution and usually of inferior worth.Artificial flowers of wax; Artificial jewels made from colored glass.
artiste 64

ascetic

all the skills often subsumed as skilled labor. In extended use it is still often contrasted with artist, the latter now implying imaginative power and a passion for perfection, the former mere mechanical industry (free verse is not yet out of the experimental stage, and the artists who practice it have still the artisans in their own craft to reckon with —Lowes) Architect has never lost its basic implication of a master builder, though it has come to stress more the designing of something to be built than actual participation in its erection. Specifically it designates a person whose profession is to plan buildings or structures in detail and to exercise supervision over their construction in order to see that the design is executed in every particular. In extended use the word usually implies the power to conceive a thing as a whole and in detail in advance of its coming into being as well as to control its execution. It is often applied specifically to God as the Creator. Although it comes close to artist in its implications of imaginative power and constructive ability, it differs from the former in its greater emphasis upon design than upon execution <the poet is an artificer by profession, an architect experimenting with a variety of materials, concerned with . . . new designs—Day Lewis> Ana craftsman, workman (see worker): creator, *maker: *writer, composer, author 2 artiste, virtuoso, *expert, adept, wizard artistic, aesthetic are often understood as equivalent terms, especially when used in such collocations as the artistic or aesthetic temperament; artistic or aesthetic satisfaction; artistic or aesthetic standards or values; for artistic or aesthetic reasons. But artistic may stress the point of view of the artist or of one who actually produces a work of art, who thinks in terms of technique, of the relationship of details to the design of the whole, or of the effects to be gained and who therefore regards beauty as a thing that results from his attention to these matters and that is his creation. By extension artistic may imply also the point of view of one who studies or judges art objectively from the artist's angle. On the other hand aesthetic stresses the point of view of one who contemplates a finished work of art or beauty that exists and who thinks in terms of the effect it has upon him and especially of the sensations it stimulates and the feelings it excites. Strictly, the artistic temperament shows itself in an urge to fashion or to express and to create out of materials, words, or sounds the beautiful thing that the artist designs or conceives: the aesthetic temperament shows itself in a responsiveness to beauty wherever it is found, and by contrast, in aversion to that which is ugly. Artistic satisfaction is the gratification that comes to one who can look at a work of art (his own or another's) and call it good: aesthetic satisfaction is the content that accompanies the enjoyment of beauty for its own sake and independently of all other considerations. For aesthetic, largely because of its connection with aesthetics, the branch of philosophy dealing with beauty, usually implies a distinction between that which is beautiful and that which is moral or useful or merely pleasing. Artistic standards are therefore the tests of perfection in a work of art which artists and critics have accepted: aesthetic standards are the usually subjective criteria which have been set up by aestheticians or by the individual to enable him to distinguish the beautiful from the merely pleasing or gratifying.

artless *natural, simple, ingenuous, naive, unsophisticated, unaffected

Ana *spontaneous, impulsive: candid, open, plain, *frank: *straightforward, aboveboard, forthright

Ant artful: affected —Con *sly, cunning, wily, insidthe other hand, suggests the possession of a power (as a high capacity for contemplation) or of an inner revelation, by means of which one overpasses the limits of human reason and by spiritual insight comes to a knowledge of that which is divine or supernatural. Ascetic and mystic, therefore, when applied to the same person, regard him from different points of view; the former implies that he practices austerities believed favorable to spiritual contemplation; the latter, that he has had the mystical experiences that are the end of contemplation. But the two terms do not necessarily imply each other; ascetic, even when applied to those who aim at spiritual perfection, does not connote attainment of mystical knowledge; mystic, on the other hand, does not in itself imply a connection with an ascetic life. Although asceticism and mysticism may denote doctrines and practices, their chief differences are apparent when they denote the theory upon which such doctrines and practices are based. Asceticism often designates the theory that abstinence from otherwise lawful acts or pleasures and the practice of austerities are conducive to spiritual and intellectual perfection; mysticism, the theory that immediate knowledge of God or ultimate reality is attainable through a faculty that transcends the reason and makes no use of ordinary human perceptive or ratiocinative powers (one is sometimes tempted to think that to approve mysticism is to preach asceticism. Certainly many mystics have been ascetic. But that has been the accident of their philosophy and not the essence of their religion—Ellis).

Ana anchorite, hermit, eremite, cenobite (see RECLUSE); monk, friar, nun, *religious

Ant bon vivant—Con epicure, gourmet, gourmand, glutton: sensualist, voluptuary, sybarite (see correspond-sometimes with a sense of guilt and always with the awareness of being discredited or disgraced by one's own or vicariously another's shameful or indecorous act, behavior, or situation (he sees that he has nothing to be ashamed of in you—rather everything to be proud of—Meredith) (suddenly Joe began to cry. He was ashamed and did not want his wife to see—Anderson). One is also ashamed who by anticipating such feelings is reluctant or unwilling to do something that seems shameful (what shall I do? for my lord taketh away from me the stewardship: I cannot dig; to beg I am ashamed—Lk 16:3). One is mortified whose embarrassment and humiliation are mixed with a strong sense of being put in a false or disagreeable light and who suffers more because of loss of esteem or a hurt to his own pride than because of the shameful or indecorous character of the act, behavior, or situation; thus, one might say that the boy was not ashamed of his conduct (because he did not consider it wrong) but he was mortified when he was suspended from the team (because others viewed his conduct in a light that resulted in injury to his pride and position) ("Don't spare him; let the university expel him! ... Let Robert be ashamed, if you would save his soul alive!"). Robert was sullen and mortified, but, alas, not ashamed—Deland). One is chagrined whose embarrassment and humiliation are accompanied by vexation or annoyance (Tony, somewhat chagrined at his mistake, said he should like to see the other pictures—Archibald Marshall) (I was as much chagrined as they were flabbergasted by this involuntary outbreak—L. P. Smith). A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk () indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.
aspect

1 look, *appearance, semblance

Ana *face, countenance, visage: *bearing, mien, port, presence

2 *phase, side, facet, angle

Ana angle, slant, *point of view, viewpoint, standpoint asperity *acrimony, acerbity

Ana sharpness, keenness (see corresponding adjectives at SHARP); causticity, mordacity, (see corresponding adjectives at CAUSTIC); snappishness, waspishness, irritability (see corresponding adjectives at IRRITABLE)

Ant amenity —Con *courtesy, gallantry; suavity, ur-Ant amenity, blandness (see corresponding adjectives at SUAVE)

asperse vb vilify, *malign, traduce, calumniate, slander, defame, libel

Ana disparage, depreciate, derogate, detract, *decry: revile, vituperate (see SCOLD): defile (see CONTAMINATE)

Con *praise, extol, laud, acclaim, eulogize: *commend, applaud, compliment asperion *reflection, *animadversion, stricture

Ana *libel, lampoon, pasquinade, squib, skit: *abuse, vituperation, invective, obloquy: *detraction, backbiting, calumny, slander, scandal

Arm praise, laudation, eulogizing or eulogy (see corresponding verbs at PRAISE): *applause, acclaim, acclamation, plaudits: commendation, complimenting or compliment (see corresponding verbs at COMMEND)

asphyxiate *suffocate, stifle, smother, choke, strangle, asphyxiate

Ana *ambition, pretension aspiration *aim, pant

Ana assassin, cutthroat, gunman, bravo designate a murderer or one who can be hired to murder in cold blood. Assassin stresses secrecy and treachery in operation (like assassins, these destructive animals do their work in the dark). It is chiefly applied to murderers of important personages (tyrants always live in dread of assassins) (revolutions breed assassins) Cutthroat and gunman usually designate professional hired murderers. Cutthroat is chiefly literary or merely figurative because daggers and knives are no longer the weapons usually employed by such criminals, but the word still commonly suggests brutal methods of murder (I am a soldier, sir, and not a cutthroat —Froude). Gunman is used somewhat more broadly than the foregoing terms since it may denote not only one who murders with a firearm but one (as a gangster) who goes armed and is prepared to shoot to prevent interference with his criminal activities or at the orders of a leader or employer. Basically a bravo is a blustering unscrupulous ruffian or desperado (a few halfhearted catcalls from young bravos of the opposing party —Barker). The word is especially applicable in an historical situation and commonly implies a valency sufficient to perform murder for hire (unfolds all of seventeenth-century Italy and its dramas—its predatory noblemen, its murderous bravos —Rolfe) (the hired bravos who defend the tyrant's throne —Shelley)

Ana murderer, slayer, killer (see corresponding verbs at KILL) assassinate murder, *kill, slay, dispatch, execute assault n attack, onslaught, onset

Ana analogous words

Ant antonyms

Con contrasted words

See also explanatory notes facing page 1
Americans once worked a revolution of which they are proud, we need not feel so bound by this fact that we demurely accede to every other revolution, regardless of its methods, purposes, and consequences—Yale Review> (Mr. Bennet could have no hesitation in acceding to the proposal before him—Austen) Acquiesce implies tacit acceptance or forbearance of opposition (no organism acquiesces in its own destruction—Mencken) Agree may or may not imply previous difference of opinion, but it very often carries an implication of this and also of previous discussion, negotiation, or attempts at persuasion (he reluctantly agreed that his son be allowed to choose his own college) (post, my lord, to France: agree to any covenants—Shak.) Subscribe denotes assent but it implies in addition hearty approval; it seldom implies actually signing one's name in token of assent, but it does connote a willingness to go on record (no one would subscribe at present to the Kantian doctrine, that mathematics derive their validity from their applicability to sensible experience—Alexander)

Ana accept, *receive: *adopt, embrace, espouse: believe, credit (see corresponding nouns at BELIEF)
Ant dissent —Con *deny, gainsay, impugn: reject, spurn, refuse (see DECLINE): *object, protest

assert 1 Assert, declare, profess, affirm, aver, protest, avouch, avow, predicate, warrant agree in meaning to state positively usually either in anticipation of denial or objection or in the face of it. Assert implies absence of proof: it usually ascribes to the speaker or writer either assurance of the grounds for his statement or such confidence in his opinions as to make him indifferent to evidence (that rigid sect which asserts that all real science is precise measurement—Ellis) (Hobart . . . could talk; he could assert . . . but he couldn't meet or answer arguments—Rose Macaulay) Declare and profess add to assert the implication of open or public statement and are often interchangeable. In precise usage declare is somewhat more formal and impersonal than profess which is especially suitable for conveying a personal or emotional involvement in what is under discussion; thus, a government declares war while a citizen professes complete trust in his government: a jury declares a man guilty but his mother professes continued belief in his innocence (they do not, for the most part . . . declare . . . that no war can ever be right—Inge) (he talked well, professes good opinions—Austen) Profess but not declare may carry a suggestion of insincerity (our princes of darkness . . . have become what they profess to scorn—angels of light—Sullivan) Affirm implies conviction of truth and willingness to stand by one's statement because it is supported by evidence or one's experience or faith (yet, with the evidence before us . . . we cannot affirm that this is the later play—T. S. Eliot) (politicians more often affirm their desire for retirement than show that they really mean it—Times Lit. Sup.) Aver suggests complete confidence and certainty of truth (for all averred, I had killed the bird—Coleridge) Protest stresses emphasis in affirmation, especially in the face of doubt or contradiction (I here protest, in sight of heaven . . . I am clear—Shak.) (he protested that, except Lady Catherine and her daughter, he had never seen a more elegant woman—Austen) Avouch usually imparts authority or personal knowledge to the maker of a positive statement (his own deposition—Cardinal); avow implies (he had made it before them—Yonge) Avow implies open and emphatic declaration and personal responsibility for the statement (we affirm and avow that the very meanest translation of the Bible in English . . . containeth the word of God—Bible: Preface to A. V., 1611) Predicate, though occa-sionally used as a close synonym of the preceding words, usually implies the affirmation of something as a quality, a property, or a concomitant of something (logic works by predicating of the single instance what is true of all its kind—James) (to predicate of diabolic agencies, which are gifted with angelic intellects, the highly ridicu-lous activities which are so characteristic of poltergeist visitations—J. McCarthy) Warrant (see also JUS-TIFY 3) carries a strong implication of assurance or positiveness, sometimes suggesting little or no fear that one will be doubted or contradicted, and at other times connoting one's personal guarantee (I warrant that's just what will happen) (I'll warrant he's as good a gentleman as any—Buchan) (as smooth as silk, I warrant ye—L'Estrange) (cheap-jacks who sell at dockyard gates a pill warranted to cure measles, toothache and rupture—Montague)

Ana allege, advance, cite, *adduce Ant deny: controvert —Con gainsay, contradict, negative, traverse, contravene (see DENY): *disprove, refute, rebut, confute 2 vindicate, justify, *maintain, defend Ana proclaim, *declare, publish. advertiser: *express, voice, utter assertive self-assertive, *aggressive, pushing, pushy, militant

Ant retiring: acquiescent —Con *shy, bashful, diffi-cient, modest; docile, *obedient, amenable, biddable assess assay, appraise, value, evaluate, *estimate, rate Ana *calculate, compute, reckon asset 1 (in plural form assets) resources, means, *possessions, effects, belongings Ant liabilities

2 *credit
Ant handicap

assiduous sedulous, diligent, industrious, *busy Ana *indefatigable, tireless, untiring, unwearied Ant desultory —Con *random, haphazard, casual, hit-or-miss, happy-go-lucky: *lazy, slothful, indolent, faineant: remiss, lax, slack (see NEGLIGENCE)

assign 1 *allot, allocate, apportion Ana fix, *set, establish, settle: *distribute, deal, dole, dispense 2 refer, *ascribe, attribute, impute, credit, accredite, charge Ana attach, *fasten, affix: relate, link, associate (see JOIN): pigeonhole, classify (see ASSORT) 3 *prescribe, define Ana determine, settle, *decide: consign, relegate, *com-mit, entrust asignation rendezvous, tryst, date, *engagement, appointment assignment *task, duty, job, stint, chore assimilate 1 *identify, incorporate, embody Ana *change, alter, modify, vary: *transform, metamorphose, transmute: blend, fuse, merge, commingle, *mix 2 *absorb, imbibe

Ana engross, absorb, *monopolize: *adopt, embrace, espouse: *infuse, imbue, ingrain, sulfuse, inculcate, leaven asimilation *perception, identification, *recognition assist *help, aid

Ana *support, uphold, back, champion: profit, avail, *benefit: attend, *accompany, escort: cooperate, concur (see UNITE) Ant hamper: impede —Con *hinder, obstruct, block: trammel, clog, fetter (see HAMPER): *prevent, forestall assistance help, aid (see under HELP vb) associate

Ant

impendiment: obstruction

assistant

Ant

Assistant, helper, coadjutor, aid, aide, aide-de-camp all denote persons who take over part of the duties of another, especially in a subordinate capacity. Assistant is applicable to a person who meets this description, regardless of the status of his work (a baker's assistant) (a bishop's assistant) (a superintendent's assistant). Helper often implies apprenticeship in a trade or the status of an unskilled laborer (a bricklayer's helper). A mother's helper often performs the duties of a nursemaid. Coadjutor usually implies equivalence except in authority; it may be used either of a co-worker or a volunteer assistant (in working so complex a mechanism as the government of the empire he must have willing coadjutors—Buchan) (at St. James I met with a kind and cordial coadjutor in my biblical labors in the bookseller of the place—Borrow) (decided to share the government of the Roman world with a coadjutor—R. M. French). In a specific use it names or is applied to a bishop who serves as an assistant to the bishop having jurisdiction over a diocese. Especially in Roman Catholic and Protestant Episcopal use it implies the right of succession. Aide and aide-de-camp are often interchangeable synonyms of assistant (a laboratory aide) (aides and orderlies). ... assist the professional nurses—Nursing World. Aide frequently but aide rarely denotes a special and often highly qualified assistant able to act as an adviser to his principal (questioned the use of presidential aides in foreign affairs) (with their chief aides they will discuss the problems of the interregnum—N. Y. Times). Aide and aide-de-camp designate a military or naval officer who personally attends a general or a sovereign, a president or a governor, often as an escort but sometimes with definitely prescribed duties.

associate

Ant

associate, companion, comrade, crony mean a person frequently found in the company of another. Associate is the general term, referable to anyone whose company one enjoys or tolerates more or less regularly and usually on terms of equality because of a business, social, fraternal, or similar connection or because of a community of interests or aims (a person is known by his associates) (his associates included all the prominent young men of the town) (he became a leader of fashion. Then, to the visible embarrassment of his young associates, he suddenly tired of it all—Day Lewis). Companion refers to a person who actually accompanies or attends one; a person who walks along the street with one or who sits with one at a restaurant table may be called a companion for the time being even if one has never seen him before and never sees him afterwards. However, the word often implies more habitual association and closer personal relationship than associate (his wife was his lifelong companion) (he no longer stood alone; the companions of his youth had become in the full sense his coadjutors—Buchan) (she was her darling brother, her beloved companion in adventure—Rose Macaulay). Sometimes the association is not the result of friendship or of relationship but of a business arrangement (the old lady sought a competent paid companion). Comrade implies association in a common calling or pursuit, and more or less familiarity in companionship (comrades in arms) (school comrades). Commonly it connotes more sentiment than either associate or companion, even though that sentiment is sometimes no more than a sense of shared fortunes or experiences, or a consciousness of having worked or played together (return to her ... no, rather I abjure all roofs, and choose ... to be a comrade with the wolf and owl—Shak) (which weep the comrade of my choice ... the human-hearted man I loved—Tennyson). Crony is seldom used of a young person, though often applied to an older person who was an intimate friend in school days or with whom one has been on intimate terms for a very long time (an old crony of his turned up after a long absence from England) (the two old ladies are great cronies). Ana + partner, colleague, ally, confederate: accomplice, abettor, accessory (see confederate); assistant, helper, coadjutor, aide

Con

Antagonist, adversary, opponent; enemy; foe: rival, competitor (see corresponding verbs at RIVAL) association

society, club, order denote a body of persons who unite in the pursuit of a common aim or object. Association is in general used of an organization which is inclusive in its membership, excluding only those whose personal affiliations, interests, and needs are different from those of the typical member or, if the object of the organization is service of some sort, those who do not belong to the business, the industry, or the profession served (the Young Men's Christian Association) (the Modern Language Association) (the National Association of Manufacturers). Society is often used interchangeably with association, but it tends to suggest a more restricted aim, a closer union of members, and their more active participation, and sometimes a narrower field of choice of membership (the Christian Endeavor Society) (Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals) (a missionary society) (a secret society) (the Philological Society) (Society for Ethical Culture) (Club) usually suggests such privacy that admission to membership is only through election and invitation; it often also implies quarters for the meeting and entertainment of members and therefore is applied to the buildings or rooms as well as to the organization (going to the country club to play golf) (a political club) (a bridge club) (most large cities have a university club). Order is applied chiefly to a society whose members have common aims and accept common obligations (as of working together in brotherly union and of practicing certain virtues) (a religious order) (a fraternal order). Order usually suggests in addition a ritual, a uniform, and honorary distinctions (the Independent Order of Odd Fellows) (the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks)

assort

sort, classify, pigeonhole mean to arrange in systematic order or according to some definite method of arrangement or distribution. Assort (see also assorted under MISCELLANEOUS) implies division into groups of like things or of things intended for the same purpose or destination (assort the jumbled contents of an attic) (assorted his bills and papers). When used in reference to homogeneous material, assort usually implies grading (as according to size, condition, or value) (assort oranges for the market) (assort the books by author and subject). Often, additionally, it implies selection, either of what is to be eliminated or of what is to be chosen or preserved (her mind was busily assorting and grouping the faces before her—Glasgow). (the company indeed was perfectly assorted, since all the members belonged to the little inner group of people who, during the long New Year season, dispersions togethers themselves daily and nightly—Wharton). Sort usually equals assort but is often preferred to it when

assorted

sort, classify, pigeonhole mean to arrange in systematic order or according to some definite method of arrangement or distribution. Assort (see also assorted under MISCELLANEOUS) implies division into groups of like things or of things intended for the same purpose or destination (assort the jumbled contents of an attic) (assorted his bills and papers). When used in reference to homogeneous material, assort usually implies grading (as according to size, condition, or value) (assort oranges for the market) (assort the books by author and subject). Often, additionally, it implies selection, either of what is to be eliminated or of what is to be chosen or preserved (her mind was busily assorting and grouping the faces before her—Glasgow). (the company indeed was perfectly assorted, since all the members belonged to the little inner group of people who, during the long New Year season, dispersions togethers themselves daily and nightly—Wharton). Sort usually equals assort but is often preferred to it when

Ana

analogous words

Ant

antonyms

Con

contrasted words

See also explanatory notes facing page 1
assorted

70 assuage

alleviate, *relieve, mitigate, lighten, allay at assortment

see corresponding adjective assorted

assorted

*miscellaneous, heterogeneous, motley, promiscuous

the latter would seem too literary or too technical sort mail sort stockings
sort yarns Frequently, es-specially with out, sort implies culling or selection even more than arrangement he sorted and re-sorted his cargo, always finding a more necessary article for which a less necessary had to be discarded—Cather Classify is more often used of things that fall into intellectual categories than of those which can be physically grouped. It usually implies a division into kinds or types and an arrangement for convenience in dealing with material that cannot be assembled or that is not before one classify bodies of water classify poems as epic, lyric, and dramatic classify languages according to the way in which words are formed Pigeonhole suggests an arrangement of small compartments in a writing desk or of boxes in a post office, each compartment being a receptacle for one group of letters or papers that are sorted or classified; it implies the ability to put each of a number of things in its right class or category he pigeonholes the wild flowers he meets on a day's walk by assigning each to its proper classification or by being able to give it its proper specific or generic name he pigeonholes every bit of information that comes to him by filing it away in his memory properly labeled and in its right place with relation to the rest of his knowledge

Ana arrange, methodize, systematize, *order

Con *mix, mingle, commingle: derange, disarrange, disorganize, *disorder

assorted

*miscellaneous, heterogeneous, motley, pro-
miscuous

Ana diverse, *different, various, disparate, divergent: selected, picked, chosen, preferred (see CHOOSE): mixed, mingled (see MIX)

Ant jumbled —Con *like, similar, identical, uniform assortment

see corresponding adjective assorted at

MISCELLANEOUS

Ana *mixture, blend, compound: combining or combination, associating or associating, uniting or union (see corresponding verbs at JOIN)

Ant jumble, hodgepodge

assuage

alleviate, *relieve, mitigate, lighten, allay

Ana temper, *moderate: *comfort, solace, console: mollify, placate, appease, *pacify

Ant exacerbate: intensify —Con *kindle (see LIGHT vb): aggravate, heighten (see INTENSIFY): *increase, augment assume

1 Assume, affect, pretend, simulate, feign, counterfeit, sham mean to put on a false or deceptive appearance. Assume often implies a pardonable motive rather than an intent to deceive it sometimes happens that by assuming an air of cheerfulness we become cheerful in reality—Cowper To affect is to make a show of possessing or using something, usually for effect, but sometimes because of one's liking for it affect plainness of speech affect a gesture, an opinion, a phrase, because it is the rage with a large number of persons—Hazlitt Jones had really that taste for humor which others affect—Fielding

Pretend implies overt profession of what is false that pretended liking called politeness—L. P. Smith pretend to be insane even their clowns had to be learned or to pretend learning—Highley To simulate is to assume the characteristics of something else by imitating its appearance or outward signs trees hewn to simulate formidable artillery pieces were dragged into position all along the ramparts—Amer. Guide Series: La. Feign implies more invention than pretend, less specific imitation of life than simulate I grow angry and I curse them, and they feign penitence, but behind my back I know they call me a tooth-less old ape—Kipling But feign and simulate are often interchangeable. Counterfeit implies the highest degree of verisimilitude of any of the words in this group are you not mad indeed? or do you but counterfeit?—Shak. many noblemen gave the actor-manager access to their collections of armor and weapons in order that his accou-term should exactly counterfeit that of a Norman baron—Shaw Sham implies feigning with an intent to deceive; it usually connotes deception so obvious that it fools only the gullible sham sickness sham sleeping when the curtain falls there are more actors shamming dead upon the stage than actors uptight—H. A. L. Craig

Ana dissemble, *disguise, cloak, mask, camouflage

2 *presuppose, postulate, presume, premise, posit

Ana *conjecture, surmise: *grant, concede, allow: *assert, affirm, aver, predicate, profess assumption

presupposition, postulate, posit, presumption, premise (see under PRESUPPOSE)

Ana *hypothesis, theory: *principle, fundamental, axiom, theorem: conjecture, surmise (see under CONJECTURE vb)

assurance

1 certitude, *certainty, conviction

Ana *belief, faith, credence, credit: *trust, confidence, reliance, dependence: positiveness, sureness,cocksure-ness (see corresponding adjectives at SURE)

Ant mistrust: doubtful —Con doubt, *uncertainty, skepticism, suspicion: disbelief, *unbelief, incredulity

2 self-assurance, *confidence, self-confidence, self-possession, aplomb

Ana sangfroid, compose, *equanimity: sureness, sanguineness (see corresponding adjectives at CONFIDENT): mettle, resolution, spirit, *courage, tenacity: effrontery, *temerity, nerve

Ant diffidence: alarm —Con timorousness, timidity (see corresponding adjectives at TIMID): shyness, bashfulness, modesty (see corresponding adjectives at SHY assure insure, *ensure, secure

Ana alarm —Con *frighten, scare, fright, terrify: abash, discomfit, *embarrass: intimidate, cow assured

*confident, sanguine, sure, presumptuous

Ana fearless, unapproachable, unafraid (see affirmative adjectives at FEARFUL): *cool, composed, unruffled, imperturbable, unflappable, collected

Ant abashed: timorous —Con discomfited, embarrassed, rattled, disconcerted (see EMBARRASS): *fearful, apprehensive, afraid: hesitant, reluctant (see DISIN-CLINED)

astern

*abaft, aft

Ana after, hint, rear, back (see POSTERIOR)

Ant ahead —Con *before, forward astonish

*surprise, astonish, amaze, flabbergast

Ana nonplus, dumbfound, bewilder, confound (see PUZZLE): impress, strike, touch, *affect astonoud

*surprise, astonish, amaze, flabbergast

Ana dumbfound, confound, nonplus, bewilder (see PUZZLE): startle, affright, alarm, terrify (see FRIGHTEN) astral

*starry, stellar, sidereal astray

*amiss

astute

*shrewd, perspicacious, sagacious

Ana *sharp, keen, acute: discreet, prudent, foresighted

Ant *before, forward

astern

*abaft, aft

Ant false, unapproachable, unfair (see affirmative adjectives at FEARFUL): *cool, composed, unruffled, imperturbable, unflappable, collected

Ant abashed: timorous —Con discomfited, embarrrassed, rattled, disconcerted (see EMBARRASS): *fearful, apprehensive, afraid: hesitant, reluctant (see DISIN-CLINED)

at

1 At, in, on cause difficulty when used in phrases giving the place or locality of an action. When reference to the interior of any place is made prominent, on is used; when a place is regarded as a mere local point, at is more commonly employed: when the direction is indicated, on is sometimes used in place of at *look for a book in the library) meet a friend at the library (sit on my right) (the town lies on the east coast) he appointed regular meetings of the States of England twice a year in London —Hume (an English king was crowned at Paris—Macaulay) In is commonly employed before the names of countries or districts and at before names of institutions, public offices, or business houses (in America) (in the South) Milton was educated at Christ’s College (at the customhouse) (at the jeweler’s) With names of towns and cities the choice between in or at usually depends upon whether the place designated is felt respectively (1) as an including area or scene, especially with an implication of destination or permanence of occupancy, or of having familiar associations for the speaker or (2) merely as a point (as along a journey or course) on a map or in space or at a remove from the speaker (on our way to visit in Troy we lounged at Albany) (after a stopover at Chicago, we arrived in Sioux Falls on Friday) (a man born here in Zenith is consul at Hong Kong) In giving a town address we say at 141 Wood Street in Springfield. In giving the street without the number, in is preferred in Great Britain, on in the United States.

2 At, in, on are clearly distinguishable when used to introduce a phrase giving the time of an action. When reference is to time by the clock or to a point of time registered by a clock, at is commonly used (at two o’clock) (promptly at the hour appointed) (at three minutes to six) When the reference is not to a point but to a period in the course of which an action occurs, in is the usual preposition (at two o’clock in the afternoon) (September 1st in the year 1939) (in the month of May) When the reference is to a particular day in the course of which something occurs, on is used (on July fourth there will be a celebration) (it happened on a Sunday) On is sometimes used also with reference to a point of time with which there is, or should be, coincidence (be here on the hour) (he is always on the dot)

atavism reversal, throwback atavistic reversionary (see under REVERSION)

atheist, agnostic, deist, freethinker, unbeliever, infidel designate a person who rejects some or all of the essential doctrines of religion and particularly the existence of God. An atheist is one who denies the existence of God; an agnostic is one who withholds belief (though he may not deny the possible existence of a supreme being) because he does not know and is unwilling to accept as proof the evidence of revelation and spiritual experience; a deist is one who rejects the conception of a supreme being as ruler and guide of men and the universe, but still believes in a god who is the creator and the final judge of men. Since deism implies a denial of revelation and supernaturalism, deist has often been used as though it were the equivalent of atheist. Freethinker suggests loss of faith and the rejection of any or all of the tenets of revealed religion in favor of what seems rational or credible. Unbeliever is more negative than freethinker, because it carries no implication of a substitute for faith. Infidel denotes one who is not a Christian or who opposes Christianity; it is used by Christians especially to designate monotheists (as Muslim) who do not subscribe to the Judeo-Christian concept of God and in such usage is distinguishable from heathen and pagan. From the Mohammedan point of view, especially as presented in English fiction and poetry, infidel often means a Christian.

Ant theist athirst avid, *eager, keen, anxious, agog

Ana thirsting, hungering, pining, yearning, longing (see LONG vb) craving, coveting or covetous, desiring or desirous (see corresponding verbs at DESIRE)

Con indifferent, unconcerned, incurious, aloof: *languid, lackadaisical, listless: apathetic, *impassive

athlete, gymnast agree in denoting a person skilled in physical performance requiring agility, powers of endurance, and, often, muscular strength. Athlete also usually implies the status of a contender in games or in sports involving a contest, whether outdoor or indoor; school or college athletes are the students who participate in school sports (as football, baseball, basketball, or track) (an outstanding athlete who had participated in several college sports) A gymnast is one who is skilled in bodily exercises and calisthenics performed often with the aid of apparatus for the development of nimbleness, strength, and control in the use of the body (leaping back a yard . . . with the speed and security of a trained gymnast —Stevenson)

athletic muscular, husky, sinewy, brawny, burly Ana strong, stalwart, sturdy: lusty, *vigorouus, strenuous, energetic Con frail, fragile, *weak athletics, sports, games denote physical activities engaged in for exercise or play. Athletics is a collective term (not used in the singular) for exercises for the performance of which one acquires and maintains agility, skill, stamina by regular and systematic training and practice usually with the aim of competing, singly or as a member of a team, with others similarly trained, whether for pleasure, to keep the body in trim, to win honor for oneself, one’s team, school, or club, or to earn a livelihood (college athletics include football, basketball, hockey, baseball, rowing, and tennis) baseball, hockey, football, and tennis are among the better-known professional athletics). Sports are forms of physical activity, usually outdoor, that afford pleasure or diversion. The term may be used in the singular for any of the various forms of athletics, since whatever the main purpose of athletic activity may be, a certain amount of pleasure is usually derived (football, basketball, hockey, baseball, rowing, and tennis are among the popular sports with those who go out for athletics in college) (major-league baseball is a professional sport) The idea of training to develop agility, skill, or stamina, prominent in athletics, is frequently wanting in sports, which may involve so little exertion or be engaged in for so short a period or so infrequently as not to require it; thus, an impromptu baseball game between two pickup teams falls under the head of sport, but hardly of athletics. So also the idea of competition, usually present in athletics, is frequently wanting in sports (noncompetitive skating, skiing, canoeing, and swimming are sports) The term is wider than athletics, including such activities as hunting and fishing (in which the pleasure derives from pursuit of quarry). Since sports contests are often an object of interest to others, the term sports is applied also to contests which provide amusement or diversion for spectators as well as or often rather than contestants; horse racing, dog racing, bullfighting, and cockfighting are sports we . . . have every source of amusement open to us, and yet follow these cruel sports—Windham) Games (for singular see FUN) are athletic or sports contests, usually those which are of a somewhat artificial nature and therefore require more extensive rules than such contests as rowing, boxing, wrestling, and skating. Thus, practically all forms of competition that make use of a ball or similar object are called games (as baseball, foot-ball, hockey, golf, tennis, and polo). Although the plural games may be used interchangeably with meet of a competition consisting chiefly or only of track-and-field events (Olympic games) the singular game is applied to few of the individual events of such a competition.

hypochondriac, melancholic, melancholy atonement

atom 1 *air, ether, ozone attack vb Attack, assail, assault, bombard, storm are comparable not only in their military but also in their extended senses. All carry as their basic meaning to make a more or less violent onset upon. Attack originally connoted a fasting upon something as a beast of prey fastens upon its victim. It now implies aggression or aggressiveness in all its senses and usually the initiative in entering into an engagement or struggle (as with a person or thing that is opposed or that one intends to conquer) (plan to attack the enemy at dawn) (attack the position of his opponents in a debate) (attack a problem in engineering) (they lack the courage to attack their other studies with the requisite to success—Grandgent) (it had become increasingly apparent that the logical method of eradicating disease was to attack it at its source—Heiser) Assail suggests the action of one who would conquer by force of repeated blows rather than by brute strength. Its chief distinction from attack is in this suggestion of repetition of means (as blows, strokes, shots, or thrusts) of breaking down resistance (assail an enemy with shells) (assail with reproaches) (assailed by temptations) (property interests . . . assailed by attempts to put industry upon a

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.
more reasonable and more equitable footing—Hobson old pains keep on gnawing at your heart, old desires
... old dreams, assailing you—Conrad Assault implies close contact or a direct confrontation; in contrast with assail, it suggests the use of brute strength and an attempt to overpower by suddenness and violence of onslaught <assault a person with a club> <assault a stronghold on all sides> <while other aircraft assaulted supply buildings—N. Y. Times>

Bombard literally means to assail continuously and devastatingly with bombs or shells
(the advancing German army in 1914 expected to bombard Paris and bring a quick end to the war) It is, in its stronger implication of importunity or of continuous pestering, distinguishable from assail <he bombarded Cicero with letters asking for advice—Buchan>
(the reporters bombarded the district attorney with questions)
Storm means to assault with the violence, rush, and effectiveness of a sudden and devastating storm or wind; it connotes an attempt to sweep from its path every obstacle to a victory <several of their bravest officers were shot down in the act of storming the fortress—Irving> <who think to storm the world by dint of merit—Burns> Ana fight, *contend, battle, war: beset, overrun (see INFEST): *surprise, waylay, ambush Con *define, shield, guard, protect: *resist, withstand, oppose, combat attack n

1 Attack, assault, onslaught, onset denote an attempt made on another or on others to injure, destroy, or, if possible, to disgrace or to bring about the fall of.
An attack may be upon the physical person or it may be upon the character, the reputation, the writings of a person or persons; it often suggests animosity or definite enmity as its cause, but it may imply motives as various as wanton cruelty, partisan feeling, or a critical intention <the victim of a cowardly attack by hoodlums>
<the speech was a severe attack upon the policies of the administration>
<the book was the object of attacks from all sides> <an unprovoked attack upon the fairness of the court>
Assault implies more violence, more malice or viciousness, and often the infliction of greater damage or more reparable damage than attack.
However, an assault upon the person is legally an apparently violent attempt or a willful offer with force or violence to injure or hurt that person physically.
When the hurt has been inflicted, the precise legal term for the act is assault and battery.
Rape is sometimes specifically called an assault.
In military language an assault is sometimes distinguished from an attack upon the enemy, the former term being applied only to the last phase of an attack or offensive movement, when the aggressors close upon their opponents and the issue is determined.
Usually assault and attack are not clearly distinguishable except in emphasis; thus, an assault upon a person's character suggest violent emotion (as hatred or vindictiveness); an attack upon a person's character need not imply strong feeling as its motive <the passage ... shows how alarmed a Hegelian may be by an assault upon the authority of science—Inge>
Onslaught suggests a vigorous and destructive method of attack; it usually implies an attempt to overwhelm by force of momentum or of numbers or by the fury of the assault <the defenders, taken by surprise, were unable to repel the onslaught>
>No play can withstand such an onslaught from the critics> <he sees I am no man to take rebuff.... quick to the onslaught, out sword, cut and thrust!—Brown-ing> Onset is applicable chiefly to a war or to a type of fighting that involves invasion or encroachment upon another's territory and usually further connotes a determination to maintain the advantage of the attacking side pledged never to fight in a war of aggression <the business of government is to check aggression only—Smith> <an aggressive war, as distinguished from mere plundering inroads—Freeman> Offense and offensive characterize the position or the methods of the attacking side.
The noun is interchangeable with attack only when the latter word does not refer to a concrete action; thus, one may speak of methods of attack (or of offense) as contrasted with methods of defense but one would use "a war of offense" (rather than of attack) and "readiness for an attack" (rather than for offense). Both words are distinguishable from aggression and aggressive, which in many ways they closely resemble, by their absence of suggestion of any motive or aim other than that of a desire for supremacy.
Offensive implies vigorously aggressive action especially in war; thus, when taking the offensive one carries on offensive operations.
Offensive may also denote a particular campaign or episode marked by such action <an economic offensive can often prevent the necessity for a more costly military defense—Draper>
<to be offensive means to carry the war to the enemy. And this as well is the most effective sort of defense—AgeIon>

3 *fit, access, accession, paroxysm, spasm, convulsion attacking adj aggressive, offensive (see under ATTACK n) attain *reach, compass, gain, achieve Ana *come, attain: win, acquire, secure, obtain, *get: accomplish, effect (see PERFORM) attemptation accomplishment, *acquirement, acquisition attaint vb taint, pollute, defile, *contaminate

Ana analogous words
Ant antonyms
Con contrasted words
See also explanatory notes facing page 1
attempt, nothing gained> (here Shakespeare tackled a problem which proved too much for him. Why he attempted it at all is an insoluble puzzle—T. S. Eliot Try is often thought of as a simpler equivalent of attempt; in discriminating use, however, the two terms are distinguishable by subtle differences in meaning. Try seldom loses the implication of effort or experiment directed toward the end of ascertaining a fact or of testing or proving a thing. This implication is especially apparent in some idiomatic phrases; thus, one tries a window by attempting to open it so as to find out if it is fastened; one tries one's hand at something by attempting to do something new to test one's ability or aptitude; one tries one's luck with the horses by betting on horse races in the hope of proving one's luck. Try is the word of choice when effort or experiment or testing are stressed rather than a venturing upon or undertaking (try to find which of two methods is the better) (make a try at solving the problem) (succeed at the first try) (freedom in thought, the liberty to try and err, the right to be his own man—Mencken) Endeavor heightens the implication of exertion and should be avoided as too strong when likelihood of success is implied. It often connotes a striving to fulfill a duty or obey a sense of fitness (she walked up and down the room endeavoring to compose herself—Austen) (the Good, which is the goal of all moral endeavor—Inge) (in Arnold's phrases the first step for every aspirant to culture is to endeavor to see things as they are) or to learn, in short, the will of God—Eliot (we all endeavor, as Spinoza says, to persist in our own being; and that endeavor is, he adds, the very essence of our existence—L. P. Smith) Essay implies that the thing to be accomplished is especially difficult; otherwise it combines the foremost implications of attempt (that is, making a beginning) by suggesting a tentative effort and of try (that is, experiment) by suggesting the testing of a thing's feasibility (sculpture which attempted to unite repose and action, the “far off and the familiar, in a way which (see corresponding nouns at OVERSIGHT) (attempts about the power or the act or of the length of the latter's duration, it usually requires qualifying words or phrases (close attention) (a few moments' attention) Study stresses continuity and closeness of attention; it usually also implies an aim such as the acquisition of knowledge, or the analysis of something that is complex or confusing, or the working out of a plan (as for action) or of a design (as for a book) before the president said that he would not comment upon the proposal until he had given it further study) (of making many books there is no end; and much study is a weariness of the flesh—Eccles 12:12) Concentration emphasizes the centering of the attention on one thing to the exclusion of everything else (amazing powers of concentration) (the learning to read poetry takes as much patience and concentration as the learning to write it—Day Lewis) Application usually implies persistence in fixing one's attention, and diligence and assiduousness in the performance of all that is required; it suggests therefore a virtue won by effort and sheer force of will rather than (as with concentration) a power that has its origin in one's temperamental or is the result of profound interest (application for ever so short a time kills me—Lamb) (her application to her studies in school—Anderson)

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.
attract, charm, fascinate, bewitch, enchant, allure

Attire

clothe, apparel, array, dress, robe

Analogous words:
- Attraction, allure, charm, fascinate, bewitch
- The enhancement of feminine appeal

Contrasted words:
- Captivate
- The weakest of these words in its suggestion of an irresistible influence or attraction

Attractive

- Alluring, charming, fascinating, bewitching, enchanting,
- Charmed, captivating (see under ATTRACT)

Antonyms:
- Offend, affront, outrage, insult
- Misrepresent, falsify

Attract vb Attract, allure, charm, fascinate, bewitch, enchant, captivate mean to draw another by exerting an irresistible or compelling influence over him. The same distinctions in implications and connotations are observable in the adjectival forms of these words, attractive, alluring, charming, fascinating, bewitching, enchanting, captivating. Attract always implies a drawing of one thing to another either because of qualities or properties in the agent or because of an affinity in the one attracted for that which draws it or a susceptibility to its influence.

Ant belies —Con: misrepresent, falsify

Ant vb clothe, apparel, array, dress, robe

Ant accouter, appoint, equip, outfit, arm (see FURNISH)

Ant strip, bare, denude, dismantle

Ant n clothes, clothing, apparel, raiment, dress

Ant lawyer, solicitor, counselor, barrister, counsel, advocate

Attitude

1 posture, pose

2 position, stand

Ant point of view, angle, slant, viewpoint, standpoint: bias, prepossession, prejudice, predilection

Attorney

1 agent, deputy, proxy, factor

2 lawyer, solicitor, counselor, barrister, counsel, advocate

Ant *invite, solicit, court: entice, *lure, tempt, seduce: catch, capture

Attraction

Attraction, affinity, sympathy are comparable when they denote the relationship between persons or things that are involuntarily or naturally drawn together and exert, to some degree, an influence over each other. Affection implies the possession by one person or thing of qualities with the power to draw another person or thing so that the latter moves toward the former or, in the case of things, is brought into contact with it or clings to it. Attraction also implies the existence in the thing attracted of susceptibility to the influence of what attracts; in the case of persons it may be a natural inclination for, a predisposition to, or an innate liking of what attracts or, in the case of things, a tendency to unite or combine with the attractant. This natural or constitutional susceptibility is called affinity. Therefore affinity is the complement of attraction and not its synonym; thus, attraction is a force whereby a magnet draws iron to it, but iron is one of the few metals that have an affinity for the magnet; chemistry has a powerful attraction for minds that have an affinity for it; the too years with they do for something unattained by them. What an affinity for Christianity had this persecutor of the Christians! —Arnold

The words are interchangeable only when used of persons and things that are mutually attracted or have a reciprocal affinity for each other; even in these cases, however, the fundamental distinction in meaning prevails; thus, two persons may have an attraction (or an affinity) for each other; atoms remain in combination in a substance because of their affinity or attraction for each other. It is not by chance that in physics, the science concerned with energy, attraction is the word used in reference to atomic cohesion and that in chemistry, the science concerned with the composition of substances, affinity is the technical term.

Sympathy stresses not so much the drawing together of persons or things as their reciprocal influence or their susceptibility to the same influences. When used in reference to things, it commonly implies interaction (the tides rise and fall in sympathy with the moon) (there is close sympathy between the heart and the lungs). When used in reference to persons, sympathy usually connotes spiritual affinity, or compatibility in tastes, interests, or aims (union of hearts, not hands, does marriage make, and sympathy of mind keeps love awake —Hill

Attractive

Alluring, charming, fascinating, bewitching, enchanting, captivating (see under ATTRACT) attribute

_ana_ lovely, fair, *beautiful, bonny, pretty, comely: luring, enticing, tempting, seductive (see corresponding verbs at _lure_) _ant_ repellent: forbidding — _con_ repugnant, abhorrent, distasteful, obnoxious: *offensive, repulsive, revoltng, loathsome attribute _n_ 1 *quality, property, character, accident

2 _emblem, *symbol, type _ana_ *sign, mark, token, badge, note: *character, symbol, sign attribute _vb_ *ascibe, impute, assign, credit, refer, charge _ana_ *fasten, attach, fix: _predicate_ (see _assert_): _blame_ (see _criticize_): _accuse, charge attrition _contrition, repentance, *penitence, remorse, compunction _ana_ regret, *sorrow, grief, anguish

attune _tune, *harmonize _ana_ *adapt, adjust, accommodate, reconcile, conform: accord, _*agree, harmonize: temer (see _moderate_): balance, counterbalance, *compensate

con alienate, _*strange, wean typtical _*abnormal, aberrant _ana_ *irregular, anomalous, unnatural: divergent, _*different: _departing (see _swerve _vb_): _exceptional _ant_ typical: representative — _con_ ordinary, _*common, familiar: *usual, customary audacious _*brave, courageous, unafraid, fearless, intrepid, valiant, valorous, dauntless, undaunted, doubtful, bold _ana_ daring, daredevil, reckless, venturesome, _*adventurous, rash, foolhardy: brazen, brash, _*shameless _ant_ circumspect — _con_ cautious, wary, chary, calculating: prudent, sane, judicious, _*wise audacity _temerity,hardihood, effrontery, nerve, cheek, gall _ana_ intrepidity, boldness, courageousness (see corresponding adjectives at _brave_): daring, daredevilry, recklessness, rashness, foolhardiness (see corresponding adjectives at _adventurous_): _*courage, mettle, spirit: brazenness or brass (see corresponding adjective at _shameless_ ant circumspection — _con_ caution, wariness, calculation (see under _cautious_): timidity, timorousness (see corresponding adjectives at _timid_): fearfulness, apprehensiveness (see corresponding adjectives at _fearful_

audible _aural, auicular _ant_ inaudible

audience _1_ *hearing, audition

2 _public, _*following, clientele _ana_ devotees, votaries (see singular nouns at _addict_ audit _n_ examination, inspection, scrutiny, scanning (see under _scrutinize_ _ana_ check, _*corrective, control: investigation, probe, *inquiry audit _vb_ examine, inspect, _*scrutinize, scan audition _hearing, audience

auditor _bookkeeper, accountant _ana_ examiner, inspector, scrutinizer (see corresponding verbs at _scrutinize_): verifier, authenticator (see corresponding verbs at _confirm_ auditory _acoustic, acoustical mean of or relating to the hearing of sounds. Auditory often stresses hearing more than sound _the auditory powers of a dog_ (the auditory sensitivity of an individual's organs of hearing) Acoustic emphasizes sound with reference to its capacity for being heard or the conditions under which it is heard _the acoustic quality of a person's voice_ _acoustic properties of a hall_

Both words are used in anatomy with little distinction, except that some human anatomists prefer}

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.
sovereign

autarky  autarchy, autonomy, independence, freedom, sovereignty (see under FREE adj)

authentic, genuine, veritable, bona fide denote being exactly what the thing in question is said to be or professes to be. The prevailing sense of authentic is authoritative or trustworthy with the implication of actuality or accordance with fact (<confirmed both by legend and authentic record—Froude> <an authentic description of the Great Fire of London> The prevailing sense of genuine is real or true (see REAL) often with the implication of descent without admixture from an original stock or of correspondence without adulteration to the natural or original product called by that name (<genuine maple syrup>  This is real merino, the genuine article> Often the stress is on sincerity or lack of factitiousness (<genuine piety> <true simplicity and genuine pathos—Wordsworth>) Both terms are used—genuine more frequently than authentic—as opposed to spurious, counterfeit, apocryphal (<let them contrast their own fantastical personages . . . with the authentic rustic of Burns—Jeffrey>) <what is genuine knowledge, and what is its counterfeit—Newman> It is idiomatic to say of a work (as a portrait) "this is an authentic portrait of George Washington" (that is, it was painted from life) and "this is a genuine Gilbert Stuart portrait of Washington" (that is, it is properly ascribed to Gilbert Stuart, the painter). Veritable implies a correspondence with truth; it is seldom used without a suggestion of assurance or of affirmation of belief (<I who am now talking . . . am the veritable Socrates—Blackie> <though Christ be the veritable Son of God—Quiller-Couch>) It also is applied to words or phrases used figuratively or hyperbolically to assert the justice of the designation or of its truth in essentials (<his fits of passion are veritable hurricanes> <he is a veritable fool> Bona fide, though often used as though it were the equivalent of genuine or authentic, is properly applied when good faith or sincerity is in question ( )

Ana authoritarian, oracular (see DICTATORIAL): <reliable, trustworthy, dependable: *correct, right, exact: true, *real, actual

Ant spurious —Con *fictitious, apocryphal, fabulous, mythical, legendary: *false, wrong: deceptive, *misleading, delusive, delusory: *supposed, supposititious, putative, purported, hypothetical authenticate validate, verify, *confirm, substantiate, corroborate

Ana certify, accredit, endorse, *approve: *prove, try, test, demonstrate: avouch, warrant (see ASSERT)

Ant impugn: —Con *deny, gainsay, contradict, traverse, negative, contravene: reject, repudiate, spurn (see DECLINE) author 1 *maker, creator 2 *writer, composer authoritarian 1 dogmatic, *dictatorial, magisterial, doctrinaire, oracular

Ana despotic, autocratic, arbitrary, tyrannical, tyrannous, *absolutist, domineering, imperious, *masterful Ant liberal, libertarian: anarchistic, anarchic 2 *totalitarian authority 1 *power, jurisdiction, command, control, dominion, sway

Ana ascendency, *supremacy; government, ruling or rule (see corresponding verbs at GOVERN) 2 *influence, weight, credit, prestige

Ant exemplar, ideal, standard, pattern, *model, example: *expert, adept, artist; connoisseur, *aesthete authorize, commission, accredit, license denote in common to invest with power or the right to act. One authorizes a person to act for oneself when he is given the necessary legal right or power with or without instructions of a specific character. Often discretionary powers are implied (<authorize a friend to make an answer to an attack on one's character> <our clerks are authorized to receive contributions for the Red Cross>) One commissions a person when one not only authorizes but instructs him to perform a definite duty or office (<I am commissioned to make you an offer which I have told him . . . you would not accept—Gray> Commission may imply appointment as one's business agent (as in buying, selling, or supplying goods) or it may suggest an order to do a certain kind of work, especially work of a professional or artistic nature (<commissioned an artist to paint his children's portraits> One accredits a person when one sends him, invested with authority and possessed of the proper credentials, as a representative, delegate, or ambassador (<John Hay was accredited to the Court of St. James's> <the sovereign to whom I am accredited—Molloy>) One licenses a person for a business, a trade, or a craft when one grants formal legal permission to act in a certain capacity or to carry on a particular business, trade, or craft (<license a teacher> <license medical school graduates to practice medicine>  License sometimes stresses permission so strongly that the implication of authorization is obscured and that of regulation substituted (<license beggars> <license a restaurant to sell liquor>)

Ana empower, *enable: permit, allow, *let

Con enjoin, *forbid, prohibit, interdict autobiography memoir, life, *biography, confessions autochthonous indigenous, *native, aboriginal, endemic

Ant naturalized

Con foreign, alien, extraneous, *extrinsic autocratic arbitrary, *absolute, despotic, tyrannical, tyrannous

Ana *dictatorial, magisterial: authoritarian, *totalitarian: *masterful, domineering, imperious: overbearing, arrogant (see PROUD)

Con yielding, deferring, submitting, capitulating (see YIELD vb): tolerant, lenient, *forbearing, indulgent automatic adj 1 Automatic, spontaneous are not close synonyms but they agree in meaning brought into being or action by an internal as opposed to an external agency. Automatic was originally used to describe a thing that was self-acting or self-activated because it contained the principle of motion within itself (<in the universe, nothing can be said to be automatic—Davy>) Now it is applied more often to machines and mechanical contrivances which, after certain conditions have been fulfilled, continue to operate indefinitely without human supervision or until the conditions have materially changed; thus, an automatic firearm is so constructed that after the first round is exploded the force of the recoil or gas pressure loads and fires round after round until the ammunition is exhausted or the trigger is released; a thermostat is an automatic device which maintains the temperature of artificially heated rooms by operating the appropriate parts of a furnace when the temperature exceeds or falls below the point at which it is set. Spontaneous (see also SPONTANEOUS) applies not so much to objective things as to processes, particularly natural processes, thought of as originating without external agency or without human agency; thus, spontaneous generation implies origin of living directly from nonliving matter; spontaneous combustion implies a generation of heat through chemical changes in matter causing it to burn; a spontaneous growth autonomous

average

refers to vegetation produced neither from humanly sown seed nor from plantings.

2 mechanical, instinctive, *spontaneous, impulsive

Ana trained, disciplined, schooled, instructed (see TEACH); prompt, *quick, ready

Con deliberate, *voluntary, intentional autonomous independent, sovereign, *free, autarchic, autarkic autonomy independence, freedom, sovereignty, autarky, autarchy (see under FREE adj) auxiliary, subsidiary, accessory, contributory, subservient, ancillary, adjuvant mean supplying aid or support. Auxiliary may imply subordinate rank or position (an auxiliary organization); an auxiliary bishop; the conclusion that the humanistic point of view is auxiliary to and dependent upon the religious point of view—T. S. Eliot. It often suggests something kept in reserve (an auxiliary motor in a sailboat). Subsidiary stresses subordinate or inferior status or capacity, often to the obscuring or loss of the notion of supplying aid (subsidiary streams). A subsidiary company controlled by another company that holds a majority of the shares of its stock. Accessory so strongly stresses association or accomplishment that the notion of assistance or support is often obscured or lost; thus, an accessory mineral is one present in a rock but not an essential constituent; a person accessory to a crime (as the hirer of an assassin or a receiver of stolen goods) need not actively participate in its commission (see also accessory n under CONFEDERATE). Contributory stresses the assistance rather than the subordinate status of the assistant and usually implies the effecting of an end or result (resentment against the unjust tax was one of the contributory causes of the revolt); contributory negligence on the part of a person suffering an injury may impair his right to recover damages. Subservient usually stresses the subordinate nature of the assistance (a catastrophe to which every incident should be subservient—Crabbe). It may stress the importance or usefulness of the end it serves and the nature of its motive (as commendable self-subordination or a sense of order and due relation); he has uniformly made his talents subservient to the best interests of humanity—Coleridge. (Those features of a work of art which by themselves would be unattractive or repulsive, like an "ugly" face, but in the work are subservient to the total effect and may even heighten its beauty—Alexander.) Ancillary more than the other terms stresses the intimacy of the assistance (some practice in the diet of words, with its corresponding definition of thought, may well be ancillary even to the study of natural science—Quiller-Couch). Adjuvant differs from auxiliary, its closest synonym, in attributing greater importance, more noticeable effectiveness, or a more definite influence to the thing so qualified; an adjuvant ingredient in a prescription often modifies the action of the major ingredient so as to make it effective (asceticism is merely an adjuvant discipline to...pathological forms of mysticism—Ellis). Ana *subordinate, secondary, tributary: supporting, upholding, backing (see SUPPORT vb): helping, aiding, assisting (see HELP vb); supplementary, complementary (see corresponding nouns at COMPLEMENT) avail vb 1 *benefit, profit

Ana meet, answer, *satisfy, fulfill: *help, aid

Con harm, hurt, *injure, damage

2 utilize, employ, *use, apply

Con *abuse, misuse: *neglect, ignore, slight, overlook: reject, refuse, spurn (see DECLINE) avail n *use, service, account, advantage, profit avarice greed, *cupidity, rapacity

Ana avariciousness, covetousness, acquisitiveness (see corresponding adjectives at COVETOUS): stinginess, niggardliness, miserliness, parsimoniousness (see corresponding adjectives at STINGY)

Ant prodigality —Con extravagance (see corresponding adjective at EXCESSIVE); liberality, generosity, munificence, bountifulness, bounteouness, openhandedness (see corresponding adjectives at LIBERAL)

avaricious *covetous, acquisitive, grasping, greedy

Ana miserly, close, closefisted, parsimonious, *stingy

Ant generous —Con *liberal, bountiful, bounteous, openhanded, munificent: lavish, prodigal (see PROFUSE)

average, revenge mean to inflict punishment on a person who has wronged oneself or another. Once close synonyms, these verbs are now increasingly divergent in implications. One may average or revenge (oneself or another who is wronged), but average is to be preferred when the motive is a desire to vindicate or to serve the ends of justice or when one visits just or merited punishment on the wrongdoer (average, O Lord, thy slaughtered saints—Milton). (I swear on my knees, on these stones, to average you on Foulon—Dickens). (He had avered himself on them by havoc such as England had never before seen—Macaulay.) On the other hand, one revenges oneself or, rarely, another when one inflicts injury on or upon an offender in a desire to exact satisfaction for his offense. Revenge may imply a desire for vindication or an aim to serve the ends of justice, but more often it suggests a desire to get even, to pay back in kind or degree, and therefore variously connotes malice, spite, or an unwillingness to forgive (the hope of revenging himself on me was a strong inducement—Austen). (The novelist obsessed with the errors of his past...is irresistibly drawn to revenge himself on his past by rewriting it—Rolo). (He saw that his true policy was not to revenge himself by executions and confiscations—Stubbs). Also, one may either average or revenge a wrong or injury but average usually implies that the end is just retribution whether the activity is in one's own or another's behalf, whereas revenge implies that the end is retaliation and the compelling spirit of the act hatred or bitterness; thus, Orestes revenged his father's murder by killing the murderer, his mother, but the gods avered his matricide by driving him mad.

Ana requite, recompense, compensate, *pay: vindicate, defend, justify (see MAINTAIN): *punish, chasten, chastise

Con forbear, refrain, abstain: remit, pardon, forgive (see EXCUSE)

aver declare, avouch, avow, profess, affirm, *assert, protest

Ana *maintain, defend, justify

Ant deny —Con gainsay, negative, contradict, traverse (see DENY) average n Average, mean, median, norm, par denote something and usually a number, a quantity, or a condition that represents a middle point between extremes. Of these words average, mean, median, and par are also used as adjectives. Average is an arithmetical term applied to a quotient obtained by dividing a total by the number of items entering into this total so that the quotient represents the value each item would have if all were alike; thus, the average of 10, 12, 14, 16, 18, 20 is 15 (that is, 90 + 6). Such averages are computed to give one a fair estimate of a group or a series in which there are inequalities (his average for his high school course was 82). (The daily average of the apple pickers was 25 bushels.) When (as in sports) the total represents the number of chances taken or of opportunities offered or provided, the average is obtained by dividing the number of successes or successful

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.
performances by this total. Such an average may be expressed as a percentage or a permillage and gives a fair estimate of a player’s performance and a basis for comparison with others; thus, a baseball first baseman who handles a total of 1114 chances and makes 6 errors has a fielding average of .9946 (that is, 1108 + 1114); a baseball batter who is credited with 605 appearances at bat and has made 201 hits has a batting average of .332 (that is, 201 + 605). A similar method is used in estimating probabilities (as the chances of death for a person between given ages and the length of the period between recurrences of an unpredictable phenomenon); thus, the average of mortality for persons of a given age is computed from statistics of deaths at that age and of the population group consisting of persons of that age. Average also may be applied to a concept of what is the typical or ordinary person or thing of its kind (see also average, under medium) (the boy is above the average for his age and background) (the play is below the season’s average in dramatic interest) Mean originally and still in certain idioms named a condition, quality, intensity, or rate that is midway between two extremes (observe a happy mean between abjection and arrogance or between effusiveness and reserve) (he that holds fast the golden mean, and lives contentedly between the little and the great—Cowper) In its mathematical use mean is more general than average (for which another name is arithmetical mean): it covers also the geometric mean, that is, the square root of the product of two numbers or quantities (or the nth root of the product of n quantities); thus, 10 is the arithmetical mean or average of 4, 16; while 8 is the geometric mean of 4, 16. Median refers to a midway point in position; in statistics it names the figure or quantity which represents the point at which there are as many instances below as there are above it; thus, the average of a group of 5 workers earning respectively 6, 8, 10, 16, and 20 dollars a day is 12 dollars a day, whereas the median for the same group is 10 dollars, because one half of them earn less than 10 dollars a day and one half more. Norm suggests a rule for guidance or a definite pattern to be followed: it also denotes especially in such fields as psychology and sociology, an average, whether mathematically computed or estimated, of performance or achievement of a group, class, or category that can be set up as a standard for or a minimum of accomplishment by a similar larger group, class, or category: thus, a course of study for a particular school grade is based upon a norm determined by the performance of children of the age, experience, and background commonly found in that grade (crime is merely a name for the most obvious, extreme, and directly dangerous forms of . . . departure from the norm in manners and customs—Ellis) (it is everything to have acquired and to possess such a norm of Poetry within us that we know whether or not what he wrote was Poetry—Quiller-Couch) Par usually refers to an average for an individual that is like the norm for a group. It often refers to an individual person’s average in health, accomplishment, or performance (I feel below par (that is, below my average in health) today) (this theme is above par for that student) In British use par may be employed in reference to an average in amount (the par of crop production for this farm) Ant maximum or minimum average adj 1 mean, median, par (see under average n) 2 middling, *medium, indifferent, fair, moderate, mediocre, second-rate Ana *common, ordinary, familiar: *usual, customary Ant exceptional: extraordinary —Con outstanding, prominent, conspicuous: *noticeable: superlative, *superlative, surpassing, preeminent average 1 *discriminated, indisposed, loath, reluctant, hesitant Ana recoiling, shrinking, flinching, quailing (see recoil vb): uncongenial, unsympathetic (see inconsonant): balky, *contrary, perverse Ant avid (or of or for): athirst (for) 2 unsympathetic, *anti-pathetic average adj 1 *dislike, distaste, disfavor Ana antipathy, hostility, antagonism (see enmity): horror, dread, *fear Ant predilection —Con partiality, bias (see predilection): *leaning, propensity 2 *anti-pathy average n prize, *premium, reward, guerdon, meed, bonus award vb *grant, accord, vouchsafe, concede Ana bestow, confer, present: *give: assign, *allot, apportion, allocate: adjudicate, adjudge, *judge, arbitrate aware, cognizant, conscious, sensible, alive, awake mean having knowledge of something, especially of something that for some reason is not obvious or apparent to all. One is aware of something through information or through one's own vigilance in observing or in drawing inferences from what one sees, hears, or feels. To be aware does not necessarily imply firsthand or certain knowledge (he is not, as yet, fully cognizant of the facts) through the servants, or from other means, he had made himself cognizant of the projected elopement—Trollope One is conscious of something that he sees, hears, feels, or apprehends when it allows him to enter his mind so that he recognizes its existence or fixes his attention on it; thus, one may or may not be conscious of his heartbeat or of someone passing through the room (he stood there motionless and in wonder, dimly conscious that Hallward was speaking to him—Wilde) to be happy or miserable without being conscious of it seems to me utterly inconsistent and impossible—Locke (a lifelong short-sightedness . . . of which he has never ceased to be conscious—Ellis) One is sensible of something who through intuitive feeling or a rational perception realizes its existence (she was disturbing him extremely . . . but he was much too sensible of her goodwill to wound her feelings by telling her so—MacKenzie) (even he was sensible of the decorous atmosphere—Joyce) One who is alive to something is acutely susceptible to its influence or sensible of its existence (the Spring finds thee not less conscious and in wonder, dimly conscious of the decorous atmosphere—Joyce) One who is awake to something is aroused to it or on the alert for developments (the country is not awake to the potential evils of a strict censorship) Ana *sure, certain, positive: informed, acquainted, apprised (see INFORM) Ant unaware—Con *insensible, insensitive, impassive, anesthetic: *ignorant awe n fear, *reverence Ana respect, esteem, *regard: *wonder, wondernent, admiration Con contempt, scorn, disdain, despite (see under DISPISE): insolence, superciliousness, arrogance (see corresponding adjectives at PROUD) awful *fearful, dreadful, frightful, terrible, horrible, shocking, appalling, terrific, horrific Ana impressive, *moving: solemn, serious, grave: imposing, august, majestic (see GRAND): sublime, superb, *splendid: *ominous, portentous awkward, clumsy, maladroit, inept, gauche mean not adapted by constitution or character to act, operate, or achieve the intended or desired ends with ease, fitness, or grace. Awkward and clumsy are by far the widest of these terms in their range of application. Awkward often involves the idea of unfitness for easy handling or dexterous management. It may suggest unhandiness or inconvenience (an awkward tool) (awkward arrangement of controls) It may suggest embarrassment or discomfiture (an awkward situation) (an awkward silence) (an awkward meeting) (how earnestly did she then wish that her former opinions had been more reasonable, her expressions more moderate! It would have spared her from explanations . . . which it was exceedingly awkward to give—Austen) When applied to persons, their build, their movements, or their manners, awkward usually implies a lack of ease or grace and often suggests inadequate muscular coordination or deficiency in poise; thus, an awkward gait implies lack of muscular control; an awkward greeting implies want of tact or address (an awkward dancer) (sitting in silence, felt awkward; but I was too shy to break into any of the groups that seemed absorbed in their own affairs—Maugham) (his manners were awkward and unconciliatory—Buchan) Clumsy stresses stiffness or heaviness with consequent want of flexibility or dexterity and is often applied to something so constructed or contrived as to be lumbering or ponderous (a boy of clumsy build) (a bear is the most clumsy of animals) (a clumsy narrative style) (clumsy boots) (when a great writer . . . creates a speech of his own which is too clumsy to be flexible and too heavy to be intimate—Ellis) (a great play in spite of . . . the clumsy machinery of the plot—T. S. Eliot) Often, and especially when applied to persons and their acts, it implies a lack of expertness or adroitness in manipulation often with a suggestion of bungling (the clumsy attempts of governments or other social bodies to interfere . . . will only make matters worse—Hobson) (he was a clumsy dissector because of his injury—H. G. Wells) Maladroit and inept imply awkwardness or clumsiness in managing whatever requires mental or social dexterity and are applicable only to persons and their acts or utterances. Maladroit implies a lack of tact or of skill in avoiding difficult situations in human intercourse and is often opposed to political or diplomatic in their extended senses (a maladroit reply to a letter) (a maladroit remark) (it was more correct to "break" a piece of bad news to a person by means of a (possibly maladroit and unfailing) messenger—Thackeray) Inept stresses inappropriateness or lack of aptness especially in a person's acts or utterances; often, in addition, it carries a suggestion of futility or absurdity; thus, a remark may be inept because it is so out of keeping with the topic under discussion as to seem pointless and also maladroit if it gives an awkward turn to the conversation (the conviction that the British were everywhere so inept that they deserved to lose—Abend) (one of the most often encountered weaknesses in the trial of criminal cases is the inept and unconvincing testimony of the law enforcement officer—Paul Wilson) (the sharp-eyed and penetrating critic for whom . . . this extraordinary and extraordinarily inept society has in fancied security unwittingly been waiting—Brownell) Gauche suggests a lack of social graces that makes for clumsiness or ineptness: it may imply also shyness, inexperience, or ill breeding (this journey . . . tended to reduce my shy, taciturn, and somewhat gauche manner—G. G. Scott) Ana *stiff, wooden, rigid: embarrassing, discomfiting, discourteous (see EMBARRASS) Ant handy, deft: graceful—Con adroit, *dexterous: skillful, adept, *proficient: *easy, simple, facile, effortless Awry, askew, askance mean deviating from a straight line or direction. They may all imply divergence from what is straight or straightforward, direct, symmetrical, or orderly, but they are seldom applicable to the same things. Awry carries a strong implication of disorderliness, of disarrangement, or of confusion (the blind and staggered awry) (everything in the kitchen was awry) (their plans went awry) Askew stresses crookedness or distortion. It implies that the thing so described is set at a wrong angle, is twisted out of its proper position, or goes off in the wrong direc-disfavor, jealousy, or disapproval <aside the Devil turned for envy; yet with jealous leer malign eyed them askance —Milton> <both . . . were viewed askance by authority

—Gladstone> axiom *principle, fundamental, law, theorem mountain peaks and blue sky, others preferred an architectural background, such as a group of buildings or an interior> In its common extended use the term is often widened in scope to include the whole aspect of the environment of something (as an historical event, a movement, a career, or a phase of a person's or a people's development) that is capable of being seen in perspective and that may be viewed as antecedent, causal, or intimately related to the fundamental quality of what it enlivens <to know a person well one needs to know his background> <students of English literature must have as background a knowledge of English history> landscape is treated as an accessory to human life and a background to human events—Binyon> Setting also derives its basic implications from the arts, originally from the jewelers' art, where the term is used of the framework of precious metal in which a gem is mounted, and later from the dramaturgs' art, where it is used of the framework (as scenic paintings and furniture) which indicates to the spectator the surroundings in which the action of a play takes place. Hence setting is preferred to background as a designation of the element in a novel, a play, or other literary representation of human life which is distinguished from the plot and the characters and which is the author's imaginative reconstruction of the time, place, and conditions in which his characters live and act. When used in reference to real life, setting commonly connotes the standpoint of one who looks at human beings and their activities as though they were dramatic or literary representations <what a social setting it was, that little world into which Mark Twain was born! It was drab, it was tragic—Brooks> Environment basically denotes the surroundings and especially the natural surroundings (as of a town, a body of water, or an individual) <relaxed . . . in a cozy environment of apple-green furniture and art linoleum—Punch> When relating to a person or a living being environment commonly suggests not only natural surroundings but any or all external factors (as social or economic conditions, nutrient supply, or crowding) that are important in the physical, mental, and moral development of the species or the individual or as formative influences <the environment which produced Jonathan Edwards and Cotton Mather—Brownell> When the formative influences in a person's development are the result of heredity or nature, background is the preferred term; when they are the product of his surroundings or his nurture, environment is the more likely choice; thus, one may say that, although it is impossible to change a child's background, he may turn out well if brought up in a different environment. Milieu carries none of the scientific implications of environment, yet it also means surroundings and is used chiefly in reference to the physical and social surroundings of a person or group of persons. It is preferred to environment when there is the intent to evoke a clear picture or to suggest the specific character or atmosphere of such surroundings; it may be used in reference to imagined as well as to actual ænologous words  Ant antonyms  Con contrasted words  See also explanatory notes facing page 1 persons and therefore is often interchangeable with setting (his chief object...is not to make an isolated study of this or that milieu, or to describe a particular social sphere—Athenaeum) Mise-en-scène is the equivalent of setting, especially as referred to a theatrical performance. However its stronger suggestion of the use of properties to achieve a given atmosphere or theatrical effect is the reason for its preference by some writers when the reference is not specifically to a dramatic performance or even to invented scenes (in The Scarlet Letter how truly in the spirit of art is the mise-en-scène presented...). The material investiture of the story is presented...by the reserved, fastidious hand of an artist, not by the gaudy fingers of a showman or the mechanical industry of a department-store window dresser—Cather) Backdrop denotes a drop curtain at the rear of the stage which provides the decorative or realistic background for the action of a play and brings players and their movements into relief; it is increasingly common in an extended sense as a substitute for background or setting or milieu when there is the intent to stress pictorial effect rather than social influence or spiritual significance (Against the multi-towered backdrop of New York he has pictured...the passions and hopes, the dreams and desolations, the greed and corruptions, of the seven million souls that are its lifeblood—Atlantic)

backslide vb relapse, lapse *lapse Ana revert, return: deteriorate, degenerate, decline (see corresponding nouns at deterioration): recede, retreat, retrograde backslider *renegade, apostate, recreant, turncoat backsliding n relapse, lapse (see under Lapse vb) Ana retrogressiveness or retrogression, retrogradation (see corresponding adjectives at backward): abandoning, deserting, forsaking (see abandon) backward, retrograde, retrogressive, regressive all involve the idea of not moving or going ahead, or forward, or in advance. Only when applied to motion or a movement does backward imply the reverse of forward motion (a backward thrust of a hand) (the backward swimming of a crayfish) Its commonest implication is failure to move ahead; in this sense it is chiefly applied to human beings who do not or cannot progress or develop with others of their age, kind, or class or to persons or things that hold back or are held back from doing what is normal or to be expected; thus, a child who is unable to keep up with others of his age in school because of some degree of mental deficiency is described as backward; a person who holds back from expressing his appreciation, or in urging his candidacy for a position, because of shyness or self-distrust is also describable as backward: when cold weather and frosts delay the development of vegetation beyond the normal or usual time, the season may be called backward (England, throughout the middle ages, was one of the backward countries of Europe: it was on the outskirts of the great continental civilization—Mumford) Retrograde is not only applicable to backward motion and backward movement but also to any moving or seemingly moving thing that proceeds in a direction which is contrary to the direction usually followed by things of its kind (retrograde motion of a wheel) (retrograde planet seemingly moving from east to west) It is also applicable to a process (as of natural development) in which the events occur in an order contrary to the usual or progressive; thus, an animal that passes from a more complex to a simpler and often degenerate state during its development is said to manifest retrograde development. Retrograde when applied to races, cultures, institutions, or movements differs from backward in implying decline or degeneration; thus, a backward society is one that does not progress, while a retrograde society is one that is relapsing into barbarism or sinking into an inferior state. Retrogressive implies opposition to progressive. Like retrograde, and unlike backward, it implies movement in the direction that is the reverse of forward; unlike retrograde, however, it is seldom applied to physical movement; thus, one speaks of a retrograde (but not a retrogressive) movement or rotation, but one might speak of retrogressive (or retrograde) cruelties or behavior when stressing decline from some higher or more progressive level. Retrogressive is sometimes preferred as a milder term when the reverse of improvement or betterment rather than positive decline from an improved or better state is implied (a retrogressive policy) (objections were made to the proposed legislation on the ground of its probable retrogressive effect) Regressive carries a stronger implication of going backward by steps or degrees and often, also, a weaker implication of failure to progress or move ahead than any of the others. Consequently it is often the preferred term when a colorless or uncolored statement of fact is intended; thus, when one infers a cause from an effect or a principle from a number of facts he follows a regressive process of reasoning; the process of growing old may be described as a retrograde development when the emphasis is on its backward direction, as a retrogressive development when the stress is on the absence of progress, and a regressive development when the intent is to indicate that it is marked by an inversion of order in its stages; a regressive loss of memory implies that the most recent memories disappear first and the earliest linger longest.
Ana laggard, dilatory, *slow: *stupid, slow, dull, dense: *lethargic, sluggish: *abnormal, atypical Ant advanced —Con civilized, cultured (see corresponding nouns at civilization): cultivated, cultured, refined (see corresponding nouns at culture): educated, instructed (see teach) bactericidal adj germicidal, antiseptic, disinfectant (see under antiseptic n) bactericide germicide, *antiseptic, disinfectant bacterium *germ, microbe, bacillus, virus bad 1 Bad, evil, ill, wicked, naughty are comparable when they mean not meeting with the approval of the ethical consciousness. Bad is a very general term and applies to anyone or anything reprehensible, for whatever reason and to whatever degree (almost as bad, good mother, as kill a king, and marry with his brother—Shak.) (Johnny’s been a bad boy today: he’s emptied the cookie jar) (bad dog! you’ve torn up my scarf) Evil is a stronger term than bad and usually suggests the sinister or baleful as well as the reprehensible (evil deeds) (the evil eye) (he knew nothing bad about him, but he felt something evil—Cather) (an evil and treacherous folk, and they lied and murdered for gold—Morris) (the evil counselors who...abused his youth—J. R. Green) III is close to evil in basic meaning and may suggest an active malevolence or vicious intent (an ill deed) (it was ill counsel had misled the girl—Tennyson) Often ill may be used in a weaker sense to suggest the imputing or implying of evil or sometimes of mere objectionableness or inferiority to someone or something (held in ill repute by his fellows) (attached an ill significance to the statement) (had an ill opinion of their abilities). Wicked implies the actual often conscious or deliberate contravention or violation of moral law (God is angry with the wicked every day—Ps 7:11) (wicked designs) It is sometimes used with weakened, even play

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.
but is now trivial in its application. Mostly it implies mischievousness on the part of a child too young to have a lively sense of right and wrong (Charles never was a naughty boy. He never robbed birds’ nests, or smoked behind the barn, or played marbles on Sunday—Deland). Sometimes it expresses charitable censure of a person of responsible age who has done wrong (it was only one naughty woman out of the world. The clergyman of the parish didn’t refuse to give her decent burial—Meredith). Often it is applied to what is impolite, impudent, or amusingly risqué (the still popular, and still naughty, and perpetually profane Decameron—Higher).

Ana iniquitous, *vicious, villainous: *base, low, vile: *immoral, un moral, amoral

Ant good —Con righteous, virtuous, *moral, ethical, noble

2 Bad, poor, wrong are comparable when they mean not implying up to a standard of what is satisfactory. Bad implies a failure to meet one’s approval; it need not imply positive condemnation, but it always suggests that the thing so described falls below the mark or is not up to what one would call good (he is a bad correspondent) (her handwriting is very bad) (it’s a bad day for a long walk). It often applies to positive harmfulness (a bad light for the young) (bad food for the young) (a bad book for a depressed person) (a bad environment) (it is bad for her to live alone). Sometimes it suggests corruption or pollution (this meat is bad) (bad air) (bad water). Often also it may suggest unpleasantness in any degree, in this sense ranging from the merely displeasing to the strongly offensive or painful or distressing (it leaves a bad taste in the mouth) (have bad news) (he always comforted himself when things were bad by thinking how much worse they might have been). Poor also implies a failure to reach a satisfactory point or level, but it usually imputes to the thing so described a deficiency in amount or in returns or a lack of a quality or qualities essential to excellence; thus, a poor crop is one that is relatively scanty; poor land is wanting in fertility, while bad land lacks the potentiality for agricultural development; a poor book may be devoid of interest or artistic quality, but a bad book is commonly offensive to one’s sense of propriety; a poor carpenter is one lacking in skill (business was poor this year) (a poor dancer) (a poor bread) (a poor return for one’s effort)

Wrong (see also FALSE) implies a failure to conform to a strict standard; it suggests deviation from a standard of what is satisfactory or, more specifically, fit, appropriate, proper, or orderly (I know that something is wrong with this suit) (do not make a wrong choice in selecting your profession) (hang a picture in the wrong light) (there is nothing wrong in this arrangement of the furniture)

Ant good —Con excellent, perfect, meritorious (see corresponding verbs at EXCELLENCE): right (see GOOD)

bait vb catch, trap, snare, entrap, ensnare, *catch badlands *waste, desert, wilderness baffle balk, circumvent, outwit, foil, thwart, *frustrate

Ana *puzzle, mystify, confound, dumbfound: discomfit, rattle, faze, *embarrass, disconcert: *confuse, addle, muddle: *hamper, fetter, hog-tie: *hinder, impede, obstruct, block bag n Bag, sack, pouch denote a container made of a flexible material (as paper, cloth, or leather) and open or opening at the top. Bag is the widest in its range of application and is referable to anything that comes under this general description and is used to hold something (money bag) (traveling bag) (paper bag) (saddlebag) (mailbag). Sack is usually more restricted in its application than bag: within these limits, however, the terms are interchangeable. Sack commonly suggests oblong shape, a coarse material and, often, crude workmanship (gunny sack) (paper sack) (flour sack). It is probably more often used than bag when it refers to containers and their contents (deliver 1000 sacks of grain) (sacks of potatoes). Sell coal by the sack. Pouch is applied chiefly to a small bag carried on the person or in the hand and used as a substitute for a pocket; it often specifically designates a bag that is opened or closed by means of a gathering string, zipper, or flap (tobacco pouch) (pouch for bullets) (pouch-shaped handbag) (mail pouch)

bad b a v e captivate, molest, plague, tease badger vb worry, hectored, and bullied, and treated so taunted the workers, so badgered he was worried into their graves—Conrady badly vb counsel, process, enforce, support, encourage, raise bail vb *waste, desert, wilderness bail bond, surity, security, *guarantee, guaranty bail n bond, surity, security, *guarantee, guaranty baillie b u c e will province, district, territory, *field, sphere bait vb Bait, badger, heckle, hector, chiv y, hound, ride mean to persist in tormenting or harassing another. Bait derives its implications from its basic reference to the action of dogs set on to bite and worry an animal (as a chained bear, boar, or bull). Both in this and in extended use it suggests wanton cruelty or malicious delight in persecution (the diversion of baiting an author has the sanction of all ages—Johnson). Badger is more specific than bait. Basically it suggests the baiting of a badger that has been trapped in a hole or barrel and can neither escape nor adequately defend itself from attack; in reference to persons it implies pestering or persecuting that drives the victim into a hopelessly confused or frenzied state of mind (badger a witness being cross-examined) (the mill foreman so taunted the workers, so badgered them and told them that they dared not quit—Sinclair Lewis). Heckle implies persistent questioning of a speaker (as a candidate for election, a legislator discussing a bill before the house, or a person advocating or condemning a movement or cause) and an attempt to bring out his weaknesses or to destroy the effect of his argument. It suggests an intent to harass and confuse a speaker by frequent interruptions and by inconvenient or embarrassing questions (the advocates of any unpopular cause must learn to endure heckling) (infuriates some of his fellow Justices by heckling lawyers who appear before the Court—Sat. Review).

Hector always carries a suggestion of bullying and implies a spirit-breaking scolding or maddeningly domineering treatment (we are . . . not to be hectored; and bullied, and beat into compliance—Fielding) (they had hard times when they were little . . . and were hectored and worried when they ought to have been taking some comfort—Stowe). Chivy and hound both stress relentless chasing and pursuing. Chivy, however, often also suggests teasing or annoying past the endurance of the victim (have seen two successive wives of the delicate poet chived and worried into their graves—Conrad). Hound implies persistent and long-continued persecution till the tormentor's end is achieved or the victim acknowledges himself defeated <he was hounded by reporters until he made his stand known> <grandfather had been hounded out of his congregation because he couldn’t hold her to their standards of behavior for a minister’s wife—Mary Austin> <Ride> implies persistent goading or spurring (as by unfair criticism, ridicule, or onerous impositions)  <he was ridden so hard by the coach that he was no longer fit to remain on the team> <Ana> *worry, annoy, harass, harry: torment, rack, torture, try, afflict<Ana> <bait> n *lure, snare, trap, decoy<Ana> <bake> parch, *dry, desiccate, dehydrate<bake> <balance n 1 Balance, equilibrium, equipoise, poise, tension<balance> are comparable when denoting the stability or efficiency resulting from the equalization or exact adjustment of opposing forces. Balance suggests a steadiness that results when no part is properly adjusted to each other, when no one part or constituting force outweighs or is out of proportion to another <kept her balance on the icy street> <keeping his emotional balance under stress> <the balance between civilian and military needs—Collier’s Yr. Bk.> <establish an acceptable balance between satisfactions and frustrations—Kardiner> <I doubt that Thoreau would be thrown off balance by the fantastic sights and sounds of the 20th century—E. B. White> Equipoise may be interchangeable with balance (retain physical and emotional equilibrium under stress) but is more often restricted to a mechanically produced or producible property deriving from a thing’s construction, support, or relation to external forces and then often suggests a tendency to return to an original position after disturbance  <an equilibrium of opposing human impulses—Sinclair Lewis> <estimating an equilibrium between the Western forces and a possible aggressor—Current History>  Equipoise suggests perfection of balance or stability of equilibrium <to maintain . . . equipoise among contending interests—Butterfield> <the structure remains upright, a marvel of equipoise—Norman Douglas> <the equipoise of intellectual and pictistic interests in him—H. O. Taylor> Poise denotes an equality of opposing or different things or forces and often implies a state or an appearance of perfect balance or serenity especially of mind <he was in letting the whole physical system lose tone, for lack of the tension which gaiety imparts—Brownell> 2 *symmetry, proportion, harmony 3 *remainder, rest, residue, residuum, leavings, remnant, remains<balance> vb 1 counterpoise, counterbalance, *compensate, countervail, offset<balance> <Ana> attenuate, *harmonize, tune: correspond, accord, square, *agree 2 poise, ballast, trim, *stabilize, steady<Ana> settle, *set: wave, sway, oscillate, fluctuate <see SWING>: rock, *shake<Con> *overturn, upset, capsize<bald> *bare, barren, naked, nude<Ana> austere, *severe: unembellished, unadorned, unornamented (see affirmative verbs at ADORN): *colorless, uncolored<Con> *ornate, florid<balderdash> *nonsense, twaddle, drivel, bun, poppycock, gobblegook, trash, rot, bull<baleful> maleficient, malefic, malign, *sinister<Ana> threatening, menacing (see THREATEN): *ominous, portentous: fateful: hellish, *infernal: diabolical, *fiendish, devilish<Ant> beneficial —CON *beneficial, advantageous: salutary, wholesome, *healthful: benign, *favorable, propitious, auspicious<balk> vb 1 *frustrate, thwart, foil,uffle, bafflement, outreach<Ana> defeat, beat, lick, *conquer, overcome: block, obstruct, impede, *hinder: *prevent, forestall<Ant> forward —CON further, promote, *advance: abet <see INCITE>: assist, aid, *help: *support, uphold, back 2 jib, shy, bobble, stickle, scrape, *demur, strain, stick<Ana> *hesitate, falter, wave: refuse, *decline: shrink, flush, quail, *recoil<Con> *yield, submit, capitulate, succumb, relent<balky> *contrary, restive, perversive, froward, wayward<Ana> hesitant, reluctant, averse, loath, *disinclined, indisposed: *obstinate, stubborn, mulish: refractory, recalcitrant, *unruly<Con> amenable, docile, tractable, *obedient, biddable: submissive, subdued, *tame<ballast> vb *stabilize, steady, balance, trim, poise<ballet> n vote, *suffrage, franchise<ballyhoo> n *publicity, promotion, propaganda<Ana> advertisement, broadcasting (see under DECLARE)<balmy> 1 aromatic, fragrant, *odorous, redolent<Ana> refreshing, restoring, rejuvenating (see RENEW): pleasing, grateful, welcome, *pleasant<Ant> rank, nose—CON *malodorous, fetid, stinking, *rank, noisome<Ana> agreeable, *pleasant, gratifying, grateful: gladdening, delighting, rejoicing, regaling (see PLEASE): assuaging, allaying, lighten, relieving (see RELIEVE): salubrious, salutary (see HEALTHFUL)<Con> *intense, vehement, fierce, exquisite, violent: vexing, bothering or bothersome, irking or irksome, annoying (see corresponding verbs at ANNOY)<bamboozle> trick, hoodwink, *dupe, gull, hoax, befoul<Ana> delude, *deceive, beguile, mislead: outreach, circumvent (see FRUSTRATE): defraud, cozen, overreach, *cheat, swindle<ban> vb prohibit, *forbid, interdict, inhibit, enjoin<Ana> bar, block, *hinder: *prevent, preclude: *exclude, debar, rule out<Con> allow, permit, suffer, *let: tolerate, abide, suffer (see BEAR)<bana> flat, jejune, inane, vapid, wishy-washy, *insipid<Ana> *trite, hackneyed: *simple, fatuous, silly, asinine: commonplace, platitudeous, bromidic (see corresponding nouns at COMMONPLACE

Ant original: recherché — Con fresh, *new, novel; witty, terse, succinct (see CONCISE): stimulating or stimulative, provoking or provocative, exciting, piquing (see corresponding verbs at PROVOKE) band n 1 *bond, tie

Ana connection, linking (see corresponding verbs at JOIN): *joint, articulation, suture 2 *strap, stripe, ribbon, fillet 3 troop, troupe, *company, party bandy vb *exchange, interchange bane vb *poison, venom, virus, toxin baneful *pernicious, noxious, deleterious, detrimental banish, exile, expatriate, ostracize, deport, transport, extradite are comparable when denoting to remove by authority or force from a country, state, or sovereignty. To banish is to compel one, usually by public edict or sentence, to leave a country or section, although not necessarily one's own, either permanently or for a fixed time and with or without restriction to a given place (banish an enemy of the King) (the Newtonian scheme of the universe does not banish God from the universe—Times Lit. Sup.) To exile is to banish or cause to depart under constraint from one's own country; it may connote either expulsion by formal sentence or decree or the compulsion of circumstances and an enforced absence or sometimes a prolonged voluntary absence; thus, Russians and foreigners alike may be banished from Russia, but only Russians can be exiled to Siberia; Dante was banished from his native Florence because of political troubles, but he exiled himself for the rest of his life as a protest against conditions there. Expatriate differs from exile sometimes in its implication of loss of citizenship in one's own country (expatriate Jews from Germany) but oftener in its implication of voluntary exile or naturalization in another country (Henry James expatriated himself from the United States) Exile often suggests a possibility of return with full rights to one's own country; expatriate, however, may imply the exclusion of that possibility. In historical context ostracize denotes a temporary banishment by popular vote from one of the cities of ancient Greece; the term is used more commonly in an extended sense which implies not expatriation, but a forced exclusion by common consent, from recognition or acceptance by society (the dangers inherent in ostracizing from public service men of eminence—Kimmis Hendrick) (exposed as a cheat and ostracized by his fellow officers) To deport is to send a person out of which is not a citizen either because his presence is considered inimical to the public welfare or because he has not lawfully entered that country. It often implies return to the country of which the deported person is a citizen or subject or from which he has emigrated, especially if he is without funds to go where he chooses. To transport is to banish to a penal colony a person convicted of a crime (convicts were transported to Australia) To extradite is to deliver over an alleged criminal at the request of the sovereignty or state having jurisdiction to try the charge (since no treaties existed between the Allied Control Commission and neutral states, it follows that no duty to extradite existed among the latter—Neumann) (the escaped prisoner was extradited by the State of Illinois at the request of the State of Georgia)

Ana *eject, expel, oust: *exclude, debar, eliminate, shut out

Con admit, *receive, accept: *harbor, shelter, entertain: protect, shield (see DEFEND) bank n 1 *shoal, bar, reef 2 *shore, strand, coast, beach, foreshore, littoral

3 mass, heap, pile, stack, shock, cock (see under HEAP vb) 4 *aggregate, aggregation, conglomerate, conglomeration: assemblage, assembly, collection, gathering (see under GATHER) bank vb mass, *heap, pile, stack, shock, cock

Ana collect, assemble, *gather

Con *scatter, disperse

bank vb *rely, count, reckon, trust, depend bankrupt vb impoverish, exhaust, *deplete, drain

Ana denude, *strip, bare: sap, cripple, disable, undermine (see WEAKEN) banner n *flag, standard, ensign, color, streamer, pennant, pendant, pennon, jack banquet *dinner, feast banter vb Banter, chaff, kid, rag, rib, josh, jolly are comparable when denoting to make fun of good-naturedly (as by reminding one of an actual fault, foible, failure, or shortcoming, by exaggerated praise obviously remote from the truth, or by playful imputation of undeserved success). The same distinctions in implications and connotations are found in their corresponding nouns. Banter is the generic term and may usually be substituted for any of the others, though not without loss of specificity ("Why didn't you get tipsy, Sir? Don't you ever intoxicate yourself but at lawful marriages?..." Ripton endured his bantering that he might hang about Richard—Meredith) To chaff is to nettle with rough banter (they chaffed me for leaving so early—Price) Kid is frequently as general in meaning as banter (he is very fond of placing his hand on his heart and declaiming about his warm virtues. He gets a lot of kidding for it—Gunther) More often than perhaps any other word in this group, however, it specifically implies an attempt at good-natured imposition on one's gullibility; thus, "No kidding?" is a common way of asking "Are you serious?" of one who has made a statement that sounds incredible (she says he's going to do a portrait of her. I think he's kidding her—Harper's) Used with a reflexive pronoun, kid implies specifically the enactment of a role on the part of the ribber (high government officials are ribbed in the skits presented yearly before the Gridiron Club in Washington) (ribs her fellow Russians as the temperamental ballerina who introduces her equals as her "supporting cast"—Time) Josh and especially jolly imply transparent good humor in the funmaker. Josh usually suggests homeliness and unsophistication (for children he has jokes and candy. He cheers the men... and joshes the women—Time) (running the chatty, homespun, joshing sort of thing that actually goes on in a town—S.R.L.)

Jolly often implies an ulterior aim such as putting the person bantered into good humor so that he will grant a favor (he was a good salesman who jollied his customers, but not too obviously—Jollied and joked with sailors in the street—Wecter)

Ana analogous words

Ant antonyms

Con contrasted words

See also explanatory notes facing page 1
bar

vb obstruct, block, dam, impede (see HINDER)

1 Bar, barrier, barricade mean something which hinders or obstructs. Both bar and barrier apply to something that prevents free communication or passage; more specifically, bar frequently suggests a restriction of ingress or egress, while barrier suggests an obstacle to advance, progress, or attack; bar also may suggest a simple structure and barrier a more extensive or elaborate one. \(<\text{the bar of a prison}) <\text{a harbor}

\(<\text{a mountain}

\(<\text{a reef}

Reli-

\(<\text{erect}

\(<\text{the fighting at the barricades in Paris during the Commune}

2 *obstacle, obstruction, impediment, snag

\(<\text{hindrance, block, dam (see corresponding verbs at HINDER))

*: difficulty, hardship, vicissitude

\(<\text{advantage} \(<\text{Con odds, edge (see ADVANTAGE)}

\(<\text{help, aid, assistance (see under HELP vb)

\(<\text{shoal, bank, reef

\(<\text{obstruct, block, dam, impede (see HINDER)

\(<\text{shut out, debar, *exclude: *prevent, preclude, obviate: *forbid, prohibit, interdict: *close, shut

\(<\text{admit: open —*Con accept, *receive, take

barbarian adj Barbarian, barbaric, barbarous, savage are comparable when applying to people or characteristics of people that are not fully civilized. Barbarian frequently applies to a state about midway between full civilization and tribal savagery. Some barbarian peoples have brought their mores into true adjustment to their life conditions and have gone on for centuries without change. —Sumner

Barbaric and barbarous may also be used to express this notion. They had passed the barbaric stage when they invaded Chaldea. They knew the use of metals; they were skillful architects and . . . good engineers —Clodd

Caesar’s short sketch of the Germans gives the impression of barbarous peoples they had not yet reached the agricultural stage, but were devoted to war and hunting —H. O. Taylor

Savage implies an even less advanced and more primitive state for savage or semicivilized men . . . authority is needed to restrain them from injuring themselves —Eliot

Barbarous and savage are somewhat more commonly used than barbaric and barbarian to indicate uncivilized cruelty, but all may be so used. He required as a condition of peace that they should sacrifice their children to Baal no longer. But the barbarous custom was too inerterable —Frazer

The King’s greed passed into savage menace. He would hang all, he swore —man, woman, the very child at the breast —J. R. Green

The bar had further traits and customs which are barbaric rather than specifically Teutonic: cruelty and faithlessness toward enemies, feuds, wergeld —H. O. Taylor

For him those chambers held barbarian hordes, hyena foeman, and hot-blooded lords —Keats

Barbaric and barbarous are more common in relation to taste and refinement. Barbaric suggests a wild, profuse lack of restraint —this audacious and barbaric profusion of words —chosen always for their color and their vividly expressive quality—Symons

The march became rather splendid and barbaric. First rode Feisal in white, then Sharraf at his right in red headcloth and henna-dyed tunic and cloak, myself on his left in white and scarlet, behind us three banners of faded crimson silk with gilt spires —T. E. Lawrence

Barbarious implies an utter lack of cultivated taste and refinement —a race of unconscious spiritual helots. We shall become utterly barbarous and desolate —Lewishohn

But this deeply barbarous book may, in its very vulgarity of expression, be in advance of its time —Dorothy Thompson

Ant civilized

barbarian n *obscurantist, philistine barbaric *barbarian, savage, barbarous

\(<\text{Ana}

\(<\text{Ana}

\(<\text{Con}

\(<\text{help, aid, assistance (see under HELP vb)

\(<\text{shoal, bank, reef

\(<\text{obstruct, block, dam, impede (see HINDER)

\(<\text{shut out, debar, *exclude: *prevent, preclude, obviate: *forbid, prohibit, interdict: *close, shut \(<\text{admit: open —*Con accept, *receive, take

barbarous

1 savage, barbaric, *barbarian \(<\text{Ana}

\(<\text{Ana}

\(<\text{Con}

\(<\text{culture, cultivation, refinement barbarity *barbarism

\(<\text{Ana}

\(<\text{Ana}

\(<\text{Ant}

\(<\text{barbarousness, savagery, ferociousness or ferocity, cruelty, inhumanity (see corresponding adjectives at FIERCE)

\(<\text{Ant humaneness —*Con gentleness, mildness, smoothness, lenity or leniency (see corresponding adjectives at SOFT) barbarous 2 savage, inhuman, ferocious, *fierce, cruel, fell, turbulent

\(<\text{Ana}

\(<\text{Ant}

\(<\text{civilized: humane

2 savage, inhuman, ferocious, *fierce, cruel, fell, turbulent

\(<\text{Ana}

\(<\text{Ant}

\(<\text{civilized: humane

\(<\text{Ant}

\(<\text{mercy, *forbearing, tolerant, lenient: *tender, compassionate, sympathetic: humane, humanitarian, benevolent (see CHARITABLE)

bard n *poet, minstrel, troubadour, rhymer, rhymester, versifier, poetaster bare adj 1 Bare, naked, nude, bald, barren are comparable when they mean destitute or divested of the naturally or conventionally appropriate covering or clothing. Bare

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.
strongly suggests the removal or, often, the rejection of something additional, superfluous, dispensable, or acquired; thus, a bare head is one without a hat; bare legs suggest lack of socks or stockings; bare trees have lost all their leaves; one takes another's bare word for a thing when one demands no confirmation or documentary proof; a bare room may be empty of furniture or may have only such furniture as is indispensable (the bare statement that "art is useless" is so vague as to be really meaningless, if not inaccurate and misleading—Ellis) Naked suggests absence of all covering, especially in the way of protective or ornamental covering. When used with regard to persons and implying absence of clothing, the word is not uniform in its pictorial and emotional evocations; it may suggest many conditions, such as a state of nature and of physical beauty, a state of destitution and of pitiful suffering, a state of privacy and of pitiful suffering, a state of shameful publicity or of wanton exhibitionism (Eve . . . in naked beauty more adored, more lovely, than Pandora, whom the gods endowed with all their gifts—Milton) Poor naked wretches, wheresoe'er you are, that hide the pelting of this pitiless storm—Shak. In extended use, therefore, naked is preferred to bare when the emphasis is on revelation or exposure, or on the power of revealing or exposing something as it is in its severe outlines or structure, in its plain truth or without disguise, or in its hidden weakness or strength (craft must have clothes, but truth loves to go naked—Fuller d. 1734) (it is not asked that poetry should offer naked argument—Day Lewis) (the power of striking out, in a few naked, simple words, a picture which is ineffaceable—Lowes) Nude and naked are very close synonyms when they are used in reference to persons, but nude, because of its association with the representation of undraped figures in art, tends to suggest little more than the absence of covering and to be comparatively a colorless word with little extended use and with few, if any, significant and distinctive implications. Because of its unequivocal meaning, nude is preferred to naked when the mere fact of being without clothing is indicated and there is no intent to convey an aesthetic or ethical implication (three nude statues in the exhibition) (residents of the houses along the river objected to nude swimmers) Bald implies absence of the hair of the head or, sometimes, actual or apparent absence of another covering (as of foliage, feathers, or vegetation); thus, the bald eagle is the common eagle after it has reached an age when its head and neck feathers are white and inapparent at a distance; a bald tree is one that no longer bears leaves at its top; a bald mountain is one whose peak is bare of vegetation. In extended use bald implies austere or colorless barrenness and a conspicuous absence of qualities that might add charm, vividity, or interest; thus, a bare style is one that employs economy of means or a meanness of ornament; a naked style is one that disguises nothing and shows not the slightest obscurity or hesitancy in presenting the thought; a bald style is bare and plain to the point of severity (his expression may often be called bald . . . but it is bald as the bare mountaintops are bald, with a baldness which is full of grandeur—Arnold) Barren (see also Sterile) implies a lack of fertility or productive power and therewith also implies absence of natural or appropriate covering as an outward sign of impoverishment, impotence, or aridity; thus, barren lands are not only bare but they are waste, desolate lands incapable of producing crops; a barren style is the style of a person who has not the mind, heart, or imagination to give his style any signs of life or vitality or any coloring of fancy (without social history, economic history is barren and political history is unintelligible—Trevelyan) Ana stripped, divested, denuded (see Strip vb) unclothed, undressed, unrobed (see affirmative verbs at Clothe) Ant covered 2 mere bare vb denude, divest, *strip, dismantle Ant cover —Con *clothe, dress, apparel, robe, attire: *disguise, cloak, mask, disguise, camouflage barefaced brazen, *shameless, brash, impudent Ana open, plain, *frank, candid: indecent, unseemly, *indecorous Ant furtive —Con covert, surreptitious, stealthy, *secret bargain n *contract, compact, pact bark vb Bark, bay, howl, growl, snarl, Yelp, yap mean to make the sound of or a sound suggestive of a dog. Bark implies the sharp, explosive utterance characteristic of dogs; it may be used not only of them and of another animal (as a seal) that produces a similar noise but also of a person or a sonorous thing that gives the same effect (heard the barking of wolves in the distance) (the guns barked all night long) (they [critics] had . . . barked at you, foamed at you day after day, now you were ended. They praised you . . . and laid you away—Lindsey) (thunder . . . barked in the distance—McFee) Bay implies a repeated or almost continuous barking in deep prolonged tones that is characteristic of hounds in pursuit of quarry (I had rather be a dog, and bay the moon, than such a Roman—Shak) (dogs baying and driving him up a tree—Darwin) Bay is seldom used of any animals other than members of the dog family (including mythical ones such as Cerberus) and is infrequently used in reference to men. When it is so used, it generally implies the action not of an individual but of a group (as a mob) that acts like a pack of dogs baying (I dare avouch you'd stand up for yourself, though all the world should bay like winter wolves—Tennyson) Howl implies a loud, mournful cry made by dogs seemingly in distress and often interpreted as evidence of hunger or loneliness. The term implies also similar sounds made by other animals, but its strongest association has been with dogs and wolves (a dog howled each night) (pursued by howling wolves) Howl (see also Roar) may be used in reference to human beings to imply loud crying, laughing, or derisive calling, and to other sounds that suggest the howling of animals (as in loudness and prolongation). Growl applies to the long, low rumbling sound suggesting a threat that is made by an angry dog; less often it is used in reference to other animals (as the bear or cat). Like howl, it is applied to persons and to inanimate things (as thunder and winds). When used of persons, it suggests utterance in a surly or snarling manner (as in eagerness, in pain, or in fear); less often it is used in reference to other sounds that suggest the howling of animals (as in loudness and prolongation). Growl applies to the long, low rumbling sound suggesting a threat that is made by an angry dog; less often it is used in reference to other animals (as the bear or cat). Like howl, it is applied to persons and to inanimate things (as thunder and winds). Like howl, it is applied to persons and to inanimate things (as thunder and winds). Howl implies not only a growling but a snapping and baring of fangs; it, too, is used typically of dogs and suggests an aggressive or infuriated state (the dog never snarled until he was mistreated) (children run from a snarling dog) Snarl when used of a person's manner or speech implies a highly disagreeable quality and usually suggests spleen or malignity and a menacing attitude (the midwife wondered and the women cried "O, Jesus bless us, he is born with teeth!" And so I was; which plainly signified that I should snarl and bite and play the dog—Shak) Yelp has as its basic implication the utterance of short, shrill barks by a dog (as in eagerness, in pain, or in fear); when used in reference to men, the word often implies a number of short, shrill utterances, especially indicating surprise, fear, or excitement (a . . . huntsman clad for the field, with his fresh pack yelping . . . about him—Dickens> (the nominations have accordingly furnished something to yelp on—Jefferson) "Look out," yelps the crowd and the high walls fall—Lindsay> Yap comes close to yelp, but it chiefly implies the short, shrill barking of a small dog or excited, staccato sounds that are comparable <half a dozen little yapping dogs . . . assaulted me—Braddon> It may suggest excessive talking that conveys little but is usually uttered in an insistent or offensive and often high-pitched voice.

Ana bellow, vociferate, bawl, *roar: yell, *shout, scream, shriek

bark n *skin, rind, peel, hide, pelt baroque adj *ornate, florid, rococo, flamboyant barren 1 *sterile, unfruitful, infertile, impotent

Ant fecund —Con *fertile, prolific, fruitful

Ana arid —dry: desolate, forlorn (see ALONE): impoverished, exhausted, dejected (see DEPLETE): austere, *severe: stern

Con luxuriant, lush, *profuse: opulent, *luxurious, sumptuous barricade n barrier, *bar

barricade n barricade, *bar

barrister *lawyer, counselor, counsel, advocate, attorney, solicitor

basal basic, underlying, *fundamental, radical

base n Basis, basis, foundation, ground, groundwork are comparable when meaning something on which another thing is reared or built or by which it is supported or fixed in place. Base may be applied to the lowest part or bottom of something without strong implication of purpose as a support or prop <the base of a tree> <base of a mountain> but more often it implies specific reference to a broad bottom or to a substructure on which a thing rests or seems to rest for support or by which it is kept upright or stable <the base of a pyramid> <the base of a lamp> <the base of a triangle> <the first of four cabinets the liberal leader was to form . . . in attempts to achieve a combination of ministers with a wide enough base to ensure effective support—Current Biog.> The word may fail to stress an underlying and then applies to something which serves either as a starting point of a development, an operation, or a process   <coal tar is the base from which whole families of useful compounds are derived> or as a necessary ingredient that carries or contains the active ingredient of a mixture <lanolin is the base of many cosmetics> <dynamite often has an absorbent base such as sawdust>

Basis like base may be used in reference to something that underlies and supports or to something that serves as a starting point, but the term is rarely applied to a physical or material thing; thus, one may speak of the base (but not the basis) of a monument, or of the basis (not the base) for a certain belief <implicit trust is the basis of a lasting friendship> <phrase a question as a basis for discussion> <tradition forms a basis for the acquiring of literary taste—Day Lewis>

Foundation usually implies solidity in what underlies and supports and fixity or stability in whatever is erected on that support; thus, a house has a base even if it rests directly on the ground but it may properly be said to have a foundation only when it rests on a substructure (as a wall of stones or bricks lining an excavation and usually rising above the surface of the ground); a report may be said to have its basis (not foundation) in speculation, but a report that is said to be without foundation has no basis in fact <let me pry loose old walls; let me lift and loosen old foundations—Sandburg> <as the happiness of the people is the sole end of government, so the consent of the people is the only foundation of it—Adams> <how firm a foundation, ye saints of the Lord, is laid for your faith in His excellent Word!—Old Hymn> Ground implies something solid or firm beneath, or a substratum comparable to the earth or ground in its firmness and capacity for support; the term is therefore applied to a material, a substance, or a surface upon which another thing is built or against which it is displayed; thus, a piece of net may serve as a ground upon which a pattern is worked in lacemaking; before a decorative design is applied to a wall, the ground, or wall surface, must be treated and colored so that it will take the pattern and display it properly. Groundwork is applied not to a substratum but to a substructure; like foundation, the term suggests something built up before the superstructure is erected, but, unlike foundation, it is used chiefly in a figurative sense <early training is the groundwork of good habits> <lay a groundwork in college for one's professional studies> <the groundwork of all happiness is health—Hunt>

Ant top —Con *summit, peak, apex

base vb Base, found, ground, bottom, stay, rest are comparable when they mean to supply or to serve as a basis.

Base now rarely suggests a material support upon which a material superstructure is built <the pile . . . I reared up to the cloud . . . based on the living rock—Browning> but rather something material or immaterial that underlies a nonmaterial superstructure (as a belief, a system, a judgment, a hope or an action) (is it not the conviction that action should be based . . . on solid fact?—Eliot> <shares, or bonds, or other pieces of paper, the value of which is based upon the estimated future earnings or profits—Hobson> Found comes so close to base as often to be indistinguishable from it and, therefore, to be interchangeable with it (and the rain descended, and the floods came, and the wind blew . . . and it fell not: for it was found upon a rock—Mt 7:25> Often, however, it suggests not what merely underlies but what is consciously advanced as support (as for an opinion, a principle, a judgment, a belief, or an affection)  <certain fixed laws and principles which he proceeds to found upon Aristotle—Babitt> <this criticism is founded in misconception—Cardozo> Ground denotes an implanting (as into the earth) that gives solidarity and firmness; it may apply to something (as personal virtue, education, or an institution) which can grow and thrive only when it is firmly based (as if by deep roots) <that ye, being rooted and grounded in love, may be able to comprehend with all saints . . . and to know the love of Christ, which passeth knowledge—Eph 3:17-19> <ofttimes nothing profits more than self-esteem, grounded on just and right—Milton> But ground may be used, less strictly, in a sense approaching that of base and found <he grounds his theory on evidence gathered over a long period of time> <their quarrel was grounded on a dispute over petty matters>

Bottom implies a broad or strong base <bottomed upon solid principles of law and policy—Burke> Stay implies a support that keeps upright or prevents from falling and may suggest adding a supplementary support to correct an observed or anticipated tendency <stay a weakened wall with props> <his nature looked coldly upon its early faith and sought to stay itself with rational knowledge—H. O. Taylor> Rest stresses reliance or dependence on something as a base or fundamental support <their academic reputations rest, quite largely, upon their academic power—Mills> <metrical forms are conventional, and therefore rest, like all matters of usage, on acceptance—Lowes> <if the Germans are to justify the high claims they make for Lessing as a critic, they must rest them on other grounds than his intellectual originality or the fineness of his taste—Babbitt base adj Base, low, vile mean contemptible because beneath what is expected of the average man. What is base excites indignation because devoid of all nobility or even of humanity; the term usually implies the setting (as through cowardice or avarice) of self-interest ahead of duty to others <peace had brought only the shabby, dispiriting spectacle of Versailles, with its base greeds and timidities—Montague> What is low outrages one's sense of decency or propriety. The term, when implying moral contemptibility, often suggests a taking advantage (as by cunning, deceit, or other devious practice) of a person who is helpless or not in a position to defend himself <no one thought he could be low enough to steal a nickel from a blind beggar's cup> <whenever a dramatist wished to introduce intrigue, chicanery, or other dirty work, his dramatics personae included a low attorney—Low Times> Low also is often used of persons, thoughts, language, or actions that strongly offend one's sense of propriety <low humor> <they were low, those sensual feelings: they were ignoble—Huxley> What is vile is inexpressibly base or low: the word often implies disgusting fakeness or depravity <it was vile indeed to unaccustomed and unhardened senses. Every little habitation ... left its own heap of refuse on its own landing, besides flinging other refuse from its own windows—Dickens> <the vilest epithet in the English language—Freeman>

Ana mean, ignoble, abject, sordid: *bad, evil, ill, wicked: ignominious, infamous, disfamous (see corresponding nouns at DISGRACE)

Ant noble —Con *moral, ethical, virtuous, righteous: honorable, upright, honest, just baseless, groundless, unfounded, unwarranted mean not justified or justifiable in any way. Baseless implies an entire lack of foundation: it imputes to a thing lack of actuality in itself or in the events or facts upon which it is supposedly based <the baseless fabric of this vision—Shak> <he proved the rumors baseless> <no claim could have been more utterly baseless—J. R. Green>

Groundless stresses the absence of a cause or reason; it is applied especially to thoughts, emotions, or feelings that arise seemingly from nothing and have no perceptible or justifying cause <groundless fears> <groundless suspicions> Unfounded sometimes implies baselessness but more often suggests lack of support or want of evidence, authority, or proof <his theory is not entirely unfounded> <an unfounded belief> Unwarranted emphasizes the fact of exceeding the bounds of what is authorized, sanctioned, believable, or reasonable <the unwarranted proceedings of a lower court> <take unwarranted liberties> <an unwarranted assumption>

Ana *false, wrong: unsupported, unsustainable (see corresponding affirmative verbs at SUPPORT)

Con true, actual, *real: *authentic, veritable, bona fide, genuine bashful *shy, diffident, modest, coy

Ana shrinking, recoiling (see Recoil vb): timorous, *timid: embarrassed, abashed (see Embarrass)

Ant forward: brazen —Con brash, barefaced, impudent, *shameless: bold, intrepid (see Brave) basic 1 basal, *fundamental, underly, radical

Ana principal, capital, *chief, main: primordial, *primary

Ant top: peak 2 *alkaline basis *base, foundation, ground, groundwork

Ana *principle, fundamental, axiom, law, theorem: premise, postulate, presupposition, presumption, assumption (see under presuppose)

baste vb *beat, pummel, thrash, buffet, pound, belabor

Ana chastise, castigate, *punish, discipline bastion breastwork, parapet, *bulwark, rampart bathos *pathos, poignancy

Ana mawkishness, maudlinism, soppiness, mushiness (see corresponding adjectives at SENTIMENTAL) batter vb mangle, *maim, mutilate, cripple

Ana *beat, pound, pummel, thrash, buffet, belabor, baste batter n *dough, paste battle n Battle, engagement, action denote a hostile meeting between opposing military forces. Battle is commonly used of a general and prolonged combat and is distinguished, therefore, from such terms as skirmish or brush (see encounter). Engagement stresses the actual encountering of forces and may be applied to either a general encounter (as between entire armies) or a minor encounter (as between subdivisions or outposts). Action is often employed in place of battle or engagement when the stress is on the idea of active, frequently sharp offensive and defensive operations <clear the warship's decks for action> <Gustavus Adolphus, King of Sweden, was killed in action at Lutzen, 1632>

Ana *encounter, skirmish, brush: *attack, assault, onslaught, onset: combat, conflict, fight, *contest battle vb war, fight, *content

Ana combat, oppose, *resist, withstand, fight: *attack, assail, assault, bombard: kid, protest, *object bawl vb 1 *roar, bellow, bluster, vociferate, clamor, howl, ululate

Ana yell, *shout, scream, shriek: bay, *bark, growl, yelp: *cry, wail

2 rate, berate, tongue-lash, upbraid, *scold, chew out, wag, rail, revile, vituperate

Ana reprimand, rebuke, reproach, *reprove, chide: censure, denounce, condemn, reprehend, reprobate (see criticize) bay vb *bark, howl, growl, snarl, yelp, yap

Ana bellow, vociferate, clamor, *roar: yell, holler (see shout) be vb Be, exist, live, subsist are comparable when they mean to have actuality or reality. Be applies to whatever has a place in the realm of things describable as real in a material or immaterial sense; only its context makes clear whether it asserts physical or spiritual reality <to be, or not to be: that is the question—Shak> <I think, therefore I am—translation> <whatever is, is, right—Pope> Exist adds to be the implication of continuance in time; it also commonly implies a place in the realm of things which are describable as entities or as having independent, objective being  <everybody saw the drawings of the temples, strange walls and columns, but nobody believed these things existed—Stark Young>

Live basically implies existence in the realm of things possessing the character called life, which distinctively characterizes plants and animals and is manifest especially in metabolism, growth, and reproduction <many men live to be three score and ten> <plants cannot live without moisture> <whatever lives must have sustenance> Live, however, is often applied in an extended sense to immaterial entities (as ideas or beliefs); in this use it may carry a suggestion of qualities associated with life (as persistent existence, vigor, activity, and development) <his name will live as long as his country lives> <poems that live>

Subsist may be used in place of be, or exist, or live because it may imply the kind of reality or actuality connoted by one of those terms, but it (or more particularly its related adjective, subsistent) often additionally suggests a relation to or dependence on something; thus, a thing that subsists by itself (a self-subsistent thing) is independent and self-contained; an idea subsists or maintains its existence only so long as it appeals to the mind of thinking men (those secret distributions without which the body cannot subsist in its vigor—Addison) In philosophical use subsist is used often in reference to purely mental conceptions and implies logical validity or the character of being true or logically conceivable (the round square...is an object, which neither exists, nor subsists, nor has any kind of being at all—Chisholm)

See also explanatory notes facing page 1

beach n strand, coast, foreshore, shore, bank, littoral.

bear vb carry, convey, transport, transmit

beam vb beaming

strand, coast, foreshore, shore, bank, littoral.

Yield just written) <the glands

produce produces produced

Ana flashing, gleaming, glittering, glistening, glinting, sparkling, coruscating, scintillating (see flash vb) glowing, flaming, (see blaze vb)

bear vb carry, convey, transport, transmit

Ana move, remove, shift, transfer: hold, contain

produce produces produced

bear bared, bearing, beared, been, bore, bore, bore, borne, born, born, born produce produces produced bear produce, yield, turn out are comparable when they are used in their specific senses because of their customary reference, with bear, to things that are heavy or difficult or, with suffer, to things that are painful or injurious. Bear suggests more the power to sustain than the manner in which something is sustained <water as hot as one can bear it> (his decency which has made him bear prolonged and intolerable humiliation with control and courtesy—Mannes) Bear affection Suffer more often implies acceptance of infliction than patience or courage in bearing <I am laiday by Beauty...> Oh, savage Beauty, suffer me to pass—Milly> (bear a man of uncommon spirit, he never suffered the least insult or affront to pass unchastised—Smollet) Endure and abide usually refer to long-continued trials or sufferings borne without giving in. Endure usually connotes stamina or firmness of mind, while abide suggests patience and submission <I am able now, methinks...to endure more miseries and greater far—Shak> <what fates impose, that men must needs abide—Shak> Tolerate and stand imply overcoming one’s own resistance to what is distasteful or antagonistic. Tolerate often connotes failure to resist through indifference or, sometimes, through a desire for peace or harmony <tolerate differences in opinion—Archer’s New York> Endure typically implies a suffering or expenditure involving time and effort while abide implies a more permanent and possibly unceasing condition of something. Abide will refer to something regarded as established and existing in the present or future, especially something that will or must continue. Endure will be more often applied to something as it remains through a specific period or as it continues over a period of time. Tolerate is usually applied to something that is regarded as either disagreeable or useful but not essential or necessary. Bear is an almost entirely descriptive term referring to some persistence of something and implying the ability to keep from flinching <he can stand teasing—the stood the attack well> Brook occurs chiefly in negative constructions and implies self-assertion and defiance <restraint she will not bear—Milton> (he is not well-born enough to succeed there, and his sense of intellectual superiority did not bear subordination—Laski) The other verbs are also used commonly in negative clauses but with weakened emphasis. In such constructions bear (with the negative) commonly implies dislike, suffer rejection, endure intolerance, abide impatience, tolerate contempt, and stand repugnance. Ana accept, receive: afflict, try, torment, torture

press, bear down, squeeze, crowd, jam

Ana weigh, oppress, depress: burden, encumber, load, saddle

bear, relate, pertain, appertain, belong, apply are comparable when used intransitively with the meaning to have a connection, especially a logical connection. One thing bears on or upon another thing when the first touches so directly upon the second (usually something in question) as to carry appreciable weight in its solution or in the understanding of issues it involves <ignore all facts except that bear upon this particular case> (this situation bears directly upon the question under discussion) One thing relates to another thing when there is some connection between them which permits or, more often, requires them to be considered together with reference to their effect upon each other. The connection implied is usually closer in the intransitive than in the transitive verb (see join), being commonly one of dependence or interdependence <in an organism each part relates to every other part> <show how the demand relates to the supply> (each incident relates to the plot) (a detail in a painting relates to the design of the whole) (the duties of the citizen, as he understood them, related only to acts, but also to thoughts—Mencen) One thing pertains or appertains to another when there is a connection that permits their association in practice or thought. Both of these words are more widely applicable than bear and relate, for they cover not only the connections specifically implied in those words but also those close connections implied by belong and those remote connections.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.
implied by have to do with; thus, the things that pertain to happiness are all the things that can be thought of as causing, contributing to, preventing, or affecting the quality of happiness <moral philosophy is the branch of philosophy that deals with all problems pertaining to morals or ethics> Pertain more often implies a necessary connection or a very close relation than the more formal appertain, which commonly suggests an incidental or acquired connection  The crown and all wide-stretched honors that pertain by custom and the ordinance of times unto the crown of France—Shak> (to that simple object appertains a story—Wordsworth> Belong, usually with to, implies a relation in which one thing is a part or element without which another cannot exist, function, have its true character or being, or be complete. In this sense a thing that belongs is a property, an attribute, a duty, or a proper concern <the Government of the United States ... does not possess all the powers which usually belong to the sovereignty of a nation—Tane> (nor does value belong to what concerns men only—Alexander> But belong also may be used of things as they pertain to persons, then implying possession <the watch belongs to James> (this land belongs to the government) or informally of persons with reference to their qualifications for fitting into a group, especially a social group <she's smart and jolly and everything, but she just doesn't belong—Ferber> Apply, also with to, implies a relation in which a more inclusive category (as a law, a principle, a rule, a theory, a general term) covers a less inclusive specific instance, usually also explaining, interpreting, or describing the latter or having some clear bearing upon it <the rules of addition apply to our debts as rigorously as to our assets—James> (he really was the only child to whom the "spare-the-rod" precept did not apply—he was naturally good—Deland> Ana *concern, affect: touch, influence, *affect: weigh (see DEPRESS> beard vb *face, brave, challenge, dare, defy Ana confront, *meet, encounter bear down *press, bear, squeeze, crowd, jam bearing n Bearing, deportment, demeanor, mien, port, presence are comparable when they denote the way in which or the quality by which a person outwardly manifests his personality and breeding. Bearing is the most general of these words; it may imply reference to a person's mental attitude to others, his conduct in society, or his characteristic posture or way of holding himself <if I were so, she could not sway her house, command son's mental attitude to others, his conduct in society, *concern, affect: touch, influence, *affect: weigh> —Rose Macaulay> his personality on others or to attract their attention, and such a presence would seem to be a thing that directs the most affable appeal to our poor human weaknesses—Meredith> beastly bestial, *brutal, brute, brutish, feral Ana abominable, detestable, *hateful: loathsome, repulsive, revolting, *offensive: disgusting, sickening, nauseating (see TACT> Con agreeable, gratifying, grateful, *pleasant, pleasing: delicious, *delightful, delectable beat vb 1 Beat, pound, pummel, thrash, buffet, baste, belabor are comparable when they mean to strike repeatedly. Beat, the usual and general word of this group, may imply no more than the simple action of repeated striking (as with one's hands or an implement). The purpose is usually suggested by the object beaten, even when the manner of beating or the kind of implement used is not specifically stated <clean a rug by beating it> (beat his breast in anguish) (the shocking increase in the battered child syndrome, the physical result of viciously beating a young child) (the horse restlessly beat the ground with his hooves) Pound suggests beating with a weight or pestle to crush or reduce to a pulp or powder (as in grinding meal). More often the term implies heavier, more damaging blows than beat; it may suggest repeated striking (as by a heavy hammer, strong doubled fists, the hooves of horses, bombs, or shells), and it often also suggests rhythmical, loud, and heavy sounds <the big boys who sit at the tables pound them and cheer—Hughes> (the hooves of the horses pounding on the bridge—Ander- son) (he could hear his own heart pounding) (he pounded on the door in an effort to rouse the sleeping family) (night after night the port was pounded by bombs> Pummel implies the beating of a person with one's fists; although it does not suggest as heavy blows as pound, it carries a stronger suggestion of continuous raking of blows and, often, of the infliction of injury than beat  (he pummelled and slapped and scrubbed the somewhat obese nudity of his companion—Buchan> Thrash in its basic sense means to separate the grain (as of wheat) from the husks and straw, originally by beating or striking again and again (as with a flail). Consequently thrash usually means to strike repeatedly in a manner suggestive of strokes with a flail and usually with an implement (as a stick or whip) <thrash a hedge with a cane in order to drive out the rabbits> (propelled himself through the water with wildly thrashing arms> (everyone fought fire. Everyone went to the woods and thrashed out some new blaze—Vorse> Buffet implies a repeated striking with or as if with an open hand; it therefore suggests a slapping rather than a pouting and in extended use is employed chiefly with reference to something which dashes against the face or the body in the manner of a slap or which one fights as if by slapping. The two hands of Madame Defarge buffeted and tore her face—Dickens. Buffeted by high waves. Baste implies a sound vigorous thrashing with any weapon (including the tongue) I took a broom, and basted her, till she cried extremely—Pepys. If you will give me the loan of a horsewhip, I'll baste the backs of these lazy fellows of yours—Wheelwright. Belabor implies a prolonged and mighty basting or buffeting. He saw Virago nell belabor, with Dick's own staff his peaceful neighbor—Swift. A group of demonstrating Egyptians being belabored by police—Doty.

Ana slug, clout, sweat, punch, strike, hit, smite, slap, box, cuff

2 defeat, lick, *conquer, vanquish, subdue, subjudget, reduce, overcome, submont, overthrow, rout

Ana surpass, excel, outstrip (see EXCEED): confound, nonplus (see PUZZLE)

3 *pulsate, throb, palpitate

Ana quer, quaver, quake (see SHAKE): vibrate, oscillate, fluctuate, pendulate (see SWING)

beat n pulsation, pulse, throb, palpitation (see under PULSATE)

Ana accent, accentuation, stress (see EMPHASIS): *rhythm, cadence

beatitude blessedness, bliss, felicity, *happiness

Ana rapture, *ecstasy, transport: joy, fruition, enjoyment, *pleasure

beau n *top, exquisite, dandy, coxcomb, dude, buck

beau ideal ideal, exemplar, pattern, *model, example, mirror, standard

beauteous pulchritudinous, fair, good-looking, handsome, pretty, comely, bonny, lovely, *beautiful

Ana alluring, attractive, fascinating, charming (see under ATTRACT)

beautiful adj Beautiful, lovely, handsome, pretty, bonny, comely, fair, beauteous, pulchritudinous, good-looking are comparable when they express judgment of a person or a thing perceived or contemplated with sensuous or aesthetic pleasure. Although they differ widely not only in their implications and connotations but also in their range of reference, they carry in common the meaning very pleasing or delightful to look at. Of all these adjectives beautiful is usually the richest in significance; since the abstraction it represents the beautiful has been for many centuries the subject of discussion by philosophers, artists, and aestheticians, its content in a particular context often depends upon the speaker's or writer's cultural background, his chosen philosophy, or his own peculiar definition. In general, however, both in learned and in ordinary use beautiful is applied to what excites the keenest pleasure not only of the senses but also through the medium of the senses of mind and soul. It also suggests an approach to or a realization of perfection, often specifically the imagined perfection associated with one's conception of an ideal. That is why beautiful is applicable not only to things that are directly perceived by the senses (a beautiful woman) (a beautiful scene) (the beautiful "Winged Victory") (an exquisitely beautiful painting) but to things that are actually mental constructions formed in the mind through the instrumentality of language or as a result of inferences from certain outward manifestations (a beautiful poem) (a beautiful plan) (a beautiful character) Lovely, like beautiful, usually suggests more than sensuous pleasure, but it implies keen emotional delight rather than profound intellectual or spiritual pleasure. It is applied therefore to what is so pleasant to look upon, to hear, to smell, or to touch that the person affected dwells delightedly, sensuously, or amorously upon it or the sensations it produces (why ever wast thou lovely in my eyes?—Shak.) (in after years . . . thy mind shall be a mansion for all lovely forms—Wordsworth) (a sailing ship—that loveliest of human creations—Ellis) Handsome, on the other hand, carries little connotation of emotional or spiritual pleasure; it implies rather a judgment of approval occasioned by something that is pleasant to look upon because it conforms to one's conception of what is perfect in form and detail or in perfect taste, and pleasing because of its due proportions, symmetry, or elegance. It is applied chiefly to what can be regarded unemotionally and with detachment; thus, a woman who is described as handsome rather than as beautiful or lovely is by implication one whose appearance aesthetically satisfies the observer but does not markedly stir his deeper feelings (a handsome dress) (a handsome house) (a handsome table) (They say I'm handsome, "You're lovely, Bella!" She drains in his homage—Meredith) Pretty, in contrast to handsome, is applied largely to what pleases by its delicacy, grace, or charm rather than by its perfection or elegance of form or style. It is seldom used to describe something large or impressive; consequently it often connotes diminutiveness, daintiness, or exquisiteness (a group of pretty girls) (a very pretty child) (a pretty cottage) Pretty is often used depreciatively to suggest mere pleasingness of appearance and the absence of qualities that make for beauty, grandeur, or strength (a pretty poem) (a pretty view) Bonny, which is more common in British and especially Scottish use, implies approbation of a person's or thing's looks but it may also imply various pleasing qualities (as sweetness, simplicity, healthiness, plumpness) (a bonny day) (a great actress and a bonny girl—Donn Byrne) (a bonny baby) (what the sentimental women of the neighborhood called a "bonny man.") His features were remarkably regular, and his complexion was remarkably fair—G. D. Brown) Comely implies an opposition to what is homely and plain and suggests pleasant wholesomeness with a measure of good looks or physical attractiveness (a comely barmaid) (the comeliest woman in the club) (Jack was so comely, so pleasant, so jolly—Dibdin) (once a moorland Helen, and still comely as a blood horse and healthy as the hill wind—Stevenson) Fair applies especially to something which gives delight because of the purity, the flawlessness, or the freshness of its beauty (fair as a star, when only one is shining in the sky—Wordsworth) (forever wilt thou love, and she be fair—Keats) Beaufres and pulchritudinous are used especially in ironic or journalistic prose where they often carry a suggestion of derogation or imply an emphasis on mere physical attractiveness (beauteous candidates for the title of Miss America) (a beauteous platinum blonde) (pulchritudinous chorus girls) Beauteous in poetical and dignified use often carries a stronger implication of opulence of charms than beautiful (how beauteous mankind is!) O brave new world, that has such people in't!—Shak. Good-looking is a less expressive word than handsome or pretty but is often used as a close synonym (the children of that family are all good-looking) Ana *splendid, resplendent, glorious, sublime, superb: exquisite, elegant, *choice

Ant ugly — Con repulsive, repugnant, revolting, *offensive

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.
beautify embellish, deck, bedeck, *adorn, ornament, decorate, garnish

Ana enhance, heighten (see INTENSIFY)

Ant uglify — Con *deface, disfigure: *deform, distort, contort; mar, spoil, *injure, damage

because, for, since, as, inasmuch as are the chief causal conjunctions in English. Because assigns a cause or reason immediately and explicitly; as, I hid myself, because [=for the express reason that, or as caused to do so by the fact that] I was afraid; he must have passed this way, because [=owing to the specific fact that] there is no other road or because [=as is directly proved by the fact that] his footprints are here. For is a particle of less immediate reference than because; it regards the statement to which it is subjoined as relatively independent and proceeds to adduce for it some ground, reason, evidence, proof, explanation, or justification; as, I hid myself, for [=as I may add by way of explanation] I was afraid; he must have passed this way, for [=as you may readily see] here are his footprints; I like him, for [=I ask, in justification of the fact] who can help it? Since is less formal and more incidental than because; as assigns a reason even more casually than since; each of them frequently begins its sentence; as, Since (or As) I was afraid, I hid myself (I will come, since you asked me).

<As I knew him to be out of town, I did not call> Inasmuch as assigns a reason in a somewhat concessive or qualified fashion; as, Inasmuch as [=in view of, or considering, the fact that] I was afraid, I hid myself. I am ready to accept your proposal, inasmuch as [=seeing that] I believe it is the best you can offer.

becloud cloud, eclipse, fog, befog, *dim, darken, dim, bedim, *obscure, *obfuscate

Ana *confuse, muddle, addle, befuddle: *puzzle, perplex, distract bedeck deck, garnish, embellish, beautify, decorate, ornament, *adorn

bedim dim, eclipse, cloud, becloud, fog, befog, obfuscate, *obscure, darken

Ana cloak, mask, *disguise: conceal, *hide, screen

befoul foul, dirty, sulky, *soil, smirch, besmirch, grime, begrime, tarnish

Ana *spot, splotter, sprinkle

befuddle fuddle, addle, muddle, *confuse

Ana bewilder, distract, confound, perplex (see PUZZLE): intoxicate, inebriate (see corresponding adjectives at DRUNK)

Ant clarify, clear

beg entreat, beseech, implore, supplicate, adjure, importune mean to ask or request urgently. Beg suggests earnestness or insistence especially in asking a favor (why, boy, before I left, you were constantly begging to see Town—Meredith) Entreat implies an attempt to persuade or to overcome resistance in another especially by ingratiating oneself (he was accustomed to command, not to entreat—Cather) Beseech implies great earnestness and often anxiety or solicitude (she besought him, for his soul's sake, to speak the truth—Kipling) Implore, often used interchangeably with beseech, at times suggests even greater urgency in the plea or more manifest anguish (the last look of my dear mother's eyes, which implored me to have mercy—Dickens) Supplicate adds to entreat the suggestion of fervent prayer or of a prayerful attitude (invite, entreat, supplicate them to accompany you—Chesterfield) (fall on his knees and supplicate the God of his fathers—Terrien) Adjure implies an injunction as well as a plea and is strengthened by the expressed or implied invocation of a sense of responsibility or duty or of something sacred (I adjure thee by the living God, that thou tell us whether thou be the Christ—Mt 26:63) It may sometimes suggest little more than urgency or peremptoriness (so E company . . . doubled for the dear life, and in the rear toiled the perspiring sergeant, adjuring it to double yet faster—Kipling) Importune commonly suggests repeated attempts to break down resistance and often connotes annoying pertinacity (a valued adviser who connotes won't let me with the dear old doctrines of the church—Emerson)

Ana solicit, request, *ask: plead, pray, petition, sue (see under PRAYER): *demand, exact begin, commence, start, initiate, inaugurate are comparable when they mean to set something going or in progress or to take the first step in a course, process, or operation. Begin, commence, and start are also used intransitively with the activity, work, or instrument as the subject in the sense of to get going or in progress (he began the letter) play begins when the whistle blows (start a race) (the race starts at ten) Begin (implying opposition to end) and commence (implying opposition to conclude) are identical in meaning: the former is often preferred because less formal than the latter (begin work) the lecture began with an apology) well begun is half done (things never begun with Mr. Borthrop Trumbull; they always commenced—George Eliot) Traditional usage often supports the choice of commence in reference to court proceedings, religious or other ceremonies, or industrial, commercial, or military operations (commence a lawsuit) divine service commences promptly at eleven) will commence drilling for new wells) directs the commission to commence its work not later than thirty days from the adoption of this resolution—Current History) Start is often used as though it also were identical in meaning with begin and commence; the term, however, carries implications which distinguish it sharply from the other words. Start implies opposition to stop: it therefore suggests a setting out from a particular point (as on a journey, a race, or a course) often after inaction or waiting (the horses are ready to start (that is, to begin the race)) the children like to see the train start (that is, set out from the station at which it has stopped) conversation started and stopped and after a pause started again Start also frequently takes as its subject not the person or agency that begins a process or course but the one that causes, enables, or permits him or it to begin (his father started him in business) Initiate (see also initiate) suggests reference to the first step in a process and carries no implication of an end or ending; it often suggests a contrast with carry on, continue, or maintain; thus, a person initiates (more precise than begins or starts except in informal speech) a custom or practice when he is its originator; a diplomat initiates negotiations between the government he represents and another when he takes the first step leading to future discussions in which he may or may not take part, but he begins negotiations on behalf of his government when he enters into actual discussions which in the natural course of events will end only when there is agreement or hopeless disagreement (Taft had to make himself popular as a necessary incident to initiating a civil government—Heiser) Inaugurate retains, from its more frequent sense of to induct into office (see initiate), a hint of a ceremonial beginning. Often it is an inflated term for begin or commence (the Curies inaugurated a new era in science by their discovery of radium) (inaugurate proceedings on behalf of the heirs) The word sometimes takes as its subject the act, action, or incident that serves as the first step in a course or procedure the discovery of radium inaugurated a new era in science (prayers and scripture inaugurated the official day—H. G. Wells) Ana *found, institute, establish, organize: introduce, admit, *enter: originate, derive, *spring, arise, rise Ant end —Con *close, terminate, conclude, finish, complete: *stop, cease, quit, discontinue, desist: achieve, accomplish, effect, fulfill (see perform) beginning, genesis, rise, initiation are comparable when they mean the first part or stage of a process or development. Although beginning, often in the plural form beginnings, may mean the point at which a person or thing commences its existence (compare begin) it is more often used as denoting the period when something takes form or shape (the beginning of justice is the capacity to generalize and make objective one’s private sense of wrong, thus turning it to public account—Earl Warren) Often, especially when applied to something whose entire course can be viewed, beginning or beginnings is contrasted with middle and end or with end alone (a drama, according to Aristotle, is composed of three parts, a beginning, a middle, and an end) (he eschews speculation on first beginnings and ultimate ends, on the ground that no theory about them will assist him to produce . . . an end to suffering—Humphreys) Canada has had a dramatic and colorful history, particularly in her beginnings—J. D. Adams) (in the beginning God created the heaven and the earth—Gen 1:1) Genesis is usually distinguished from origin (see origin) in that the latter applies to the point at which or from which a thing started, whereas the former to the stage in which it has arrived (a beginning of a new stage, in which a thing has obtained its distinctive form or shape or was brought into being: usually, therefore, genesis suggests the gradual formulation, formulation, or unfolding, but not the full development or evolution of the thing in question; thus, one speaking of the origin of the phrase “art for art’s sake” gives the first use discoverable of the phrase, whereas one speaking of the genesis of the theory of “art for art’s sake” dwells upon what happens between the origin of the phrase and its attachment to definite ideas, or upon the period when the theory is receiving its first formulation (the genesis and growth of his ideas and attitudes—G. L. Kline) (the genesis of personality is in all probability determined largely by the anatomical and physiological makeup of the individual—Sapir) (the little theater movement . . . had its genesis in small groups of idealists eager to experiment with new methods and new media—Amer. Guide Series: Va.) Rise, although sometimes used in place of genesis, usually denotes the upward course of a new thing as opposed to its downward course or decline. It differs, therefore, from genesis, which represents a period comparable to gestation, in commonly representing a period comparable to that between a man’s birth and his full maturity or prime of life (the rise and fall of a great state) (this use of an old word in a slightly new sense took its rise out of the same milieu that led . . . to the addition of lynch law—Mathews) (the rise of large newspapers brought special problems, for their power of inflicting injury was enormous—Plucknett) Rise, however, is sometimes more limited in its signification, often being referred to that part of a growth or development which precedes its full flowering (the greater French novelists . . . chronicle the rise, the regime, and the decay of the upper bourgeoisie in France—T. S. Eliot) Initiation may refer to the period of indoctrination (as in the mysteries, rites, and ordeals of a religion or state of life or in the performance of one’s duties or functions): usually this indoctrination is by instructions which follow a system or it may be the unconscious result of many influences, but in any event it is felt as the beginning of a new period or state characterized by maturity fully attained (that universal preoccupation among men everywhere with initiation, that mysterious male rebirth of the youth into full membership in the society of men—La Barre) (such a love is the initiation into the higher life, the spring at once of virtue, of philosophy, and of religion—Dickin-
beguile

But often initiation loses this clear suggestion of attained maturity and is then essentially interchangeable with beginning (resolutely opposed the initiation and development of the researches that lead to the thermo-nuclear bomb—Times Lit. Sup.) (the platform...called for civic reform...and for the initiation of the city-manager form of government—Current Biol.).

Ana

*origin, source, inception, root: rise, derivation, emanation (see corresponding verbs at spring): emergence, appearance (see corresponding verbs at appear) termination, ending, *end: conclusion, completion, closing (see corresponding verbs at close) begrime

Con

grime, smirch, besmirch, dirty, sully, *soil, foul, befoul, tarnish

Ana

*spot, spatter, sprinkle begudge

*covet, envy, grudge

beguile

1 delude, *deceive, mislead, betray, double-cross

Ana

*duplicate, guile, trick, hoax, hoodwink, bamboozle: cajole, wheedle, blandish, *coax: *cheat, cozen: *lure, entice, seduce

2 *while, wile, beguile, fleet

Ana

divert, *amuse, entertain: *comfort, solace: *speed, hasten, hurry behave

1 Behave, conduct, comport, demean, deport, acquit, quitt are comparable when they mean to act or to cause oneself to act in a specified way or in a way that evokes comment. Behave denotes the performing of various actions or the saying of various things in the manner indicated by modifiers (one must keep one's contracts, and behave as persons of honor and breeding should behave—Rose Macaulay) (you will bitterly reproach him in your own heart, and seriously think that he has behaved very badly to you—Wilde). Used without modifiers, it indicates action and conduct adjudged proper and seemly: in this use it is common in relation to children and adolescents (the average parent is likely to say that the child behaves if the child conforms to what the parent thinks is right—Fishbein)

Conduct often applies to actions showing direction or control of one's actions or bearing with command, will, knowledge, and resolution (he conducted himself with patience and tact, endeavoring to enforce the laws and to check any revolutionary moves—W. E. Stevens)

Comport, in this sense always reflexive, is somewhat more formal than behave and conduct but usually lacks any other special suggestion though it sometimes may convey the notion of conformance to the expected (as of one's class) or suitable (as to one's position) (the missionaries...comported themselves in a way that did not rouse general antagonism or they could have been easily ousted—Spicer) (a man is judged now by how well he comport himself in the face of danger—Aldridge) (after having seen him thus publicly comport himself, but one course was open to me—to cut his acquaintance—Thackeray). In this sense demean and deport are close synonyms for comport; the former is becoming rare (it shall be my earnest endeavor to demean myself with grateful respect towards her—Austen). The latter may suggest deportment according to a code (Dido and Aeneas, in the Roman d'Eneas, deport themselves in accordance with the strictest canons of courtly love—Lowes). Acquit and quit, the latter archaic, are always used reflexively in this sense; they are likely to apply to action deserving praise or meeting expectations (I trust we acquit ourselves worthily as custodians of this sacred mystery—Wylie) (he then acquitted himself well as a hardworking and level-headed chairman of the judiciary committee of the House—Pearson) (the endless heroes of life and death who still bravely meet their separate hours...and quit themselves like men—Yale Review)

2 *act, react, operate, work, function

behavior, conduct, deportment are comparable when denoting a person's actions in general or on a particular occasion, so far as they serve as a basis of another's judgment of one's qualities (as character, temperament, mood, manners, or morals). Behavior may be used in reference to a human being regardless of status (as in age, development, or social standing), for it need not imply consciousness of what one is doing. Behavior may be thought of as instinctive or as voluntary and, hence, as either a spontaneous expression of personality or character or as the result of training or breeding (the captain's behavior to his wife and to his wife's father...was as if they had been a pair of not very congenial passengers—Conrad) (courageous behavior is easier for a man who fails to apprehend dangers—Russell) (grandfather had been bounted out of his congregation because he couldn't hold her to their standards of behavior for a minister's wife—Mary Austin). Since behavior is increasingly used in the various sciences in reference to animals and even substances, the term as referred to human beings tends to present usage to become more sharply differentiated from conduct than in the past. The latter term consistently carries a hint of moral responsibility and is less likely to confuse or mislead than behavior when this thought is prominent: thus, one diserves a servant because of his conduct (better than behavior because it implies violation of principles) (no animal's behavior is controlled by moral principles. Generally speaking, they do not rise from behavior to conduct—Clarke)

Department (see also bearing) is often used of behavior as taught or as the result of discipline; its strongest implication is that of degree of conformity to the accepted code of good manners or the conventions governing one's relations to one's fellows, one's superiors, or one's inferiors (children held up as models of deportment) (his old-fashioned deportment marked him out from others)

Ana

demeanor, mien, deportment, *bearing: *action, act, deed behest

n bidding, dictate, injunction, *command, order, mandate

Ana

precept, rule, *law: request, solicitation (see corresponding verbs at ask) behind *after

Ant

ahead

behindhand *tardy, late, overdue

Ana

dilatory, laggard, *slow: delayed, retarded, detailed (see delay vb)

Ant

beforehand —Con *early, soon, betimes: punctual (see careful): *quick, prompt behold *see, view, survey, observe, descry, espy, notice, perceive, discern, remark, note, contemplate

Ana

watch, look, *see: regard, *consider beholder

onlooker, looker-on, observer, witness, eye-witness, *spectator, bystander, kibitzer being *existence, actuality

Ana

personality, individuality, character (see disposition)

Ant

becoming: nonbeing

2 *entity, creature, individual, person

Ana

*thing, object, article: *idea, concept, thought belabor

*beat, pound, pummel, thrash, buffet, baste

Ana

*strike, hit, smite, slug, clout, swat, punch, box, cuff, slap

Ana

analogous words

Ant

antonyms

Con

contrasted words

See also explanatory notes facing page 1
belch vb Belch, burp, vomit, disgorgе, regurgitate, spew, throw up are comparable when they mean to eject matter (as food or gas) from the stomach by way of the mouth or, in extended use, from a containing cavity by way of an opening. Belch denotes the noisy voiding of gas from the stomach and may be extended to something ejected in volume and often with noise (as smoke and fire from a cannon or a volcano) (there stood a hill not far, whose grisly top belched fire and rolling smoke—Milton) (the war- fiend shrieks and belches out his fury—Capern)

Burp in its basic sense is interchangeable with belch (mopping his face solemnly with his cologne-scented handkerchief, and burping surreptitiously under it—Mencken) but in extended use is much less forceful and usually refers to something sounding like a human belch (the engine burped and ran out of gas—Road and Track).

Vomit is the usual word for the ejection through the mouth of what has been eaten or swallowed; ordinarily it implies nausea, but it may suggest a previous gorging or surfeit- ing or the use of an emetic (and the Lord spake unto the fish, and it vomited out Jonah upon the dry land—Jonah 2:10). It is often used to suggest a forcible rejection or an emission or a discharge of contents (that huge black-mouthed sewer, vomiting its pestilential riches across the mud—Kingsley).

Disgorge, though close to vomit, more specifically implies an ejection of something swallowed, in essentially its original state (Jonah was disgorged by the whale after three days and three nights). Especially in extended use it may suggest an ejection or yielding up (as of something held or secreted) that is induced by force or pressure from without (make the French generals disgorgе the church plate which they have stolen—Wellington). Basically regurgitate implies a flowing or gushing back, typically of food from the stomach to the esophagus or mouth (cattle regurgitate small cuds of hebage for further chewing). In extended use regurgitate may reflect quite neutrally its basic meaning (“Mind you,” he said regurgitating his article slowly by phrase, “the subject doesn’t make the work of art”—Huxley) but more often it carries some suggestion of the unpleasantness of the physiological phenomenon (Henry was incapable of reversing himself or of regurgitating Cromwell’s wealth—Hackett).

Spew is rare in modern usage as a synonym for vomit but has extended use as connoting a pouring forth in a stream that cannot be restrained or, sometimes, a spurring or spitting forth (the steer . . . dying spews a flood of foamy madness, mixed with clotted blood—Dryden). It also may imply specifically a pouring forth of something offensive (as abusive or foul language) (Thersites spews over everything that we had deemed high and sacred, his foul . . . insults—Downen). Basically throw up is closely equivalent to vomit, though it may stress the matter ejected rather than the physiological process. In extended use it is distinctly less vigorous than vomit and usually implies no more than a producing or bringing forth of something (all the voluminous information thrown up by successive . . . investigations—Bemis).

beleaguer vb besiege, invest, blockade

beleaguer vb besiege, invest, blockade

beleaguer vb besiege, invest, blockade

beleaguer vb besiege, invest, blockade

believable vb credible, plausible, colorable, specious

belittle vb depreciate, disparage, derogate, detract, minimize, decry

belief 1 Belief, faith, credence, credit are comparable when they mean the act of one who assents intellectually to something proposed or offered for acceptance as true or the state of mind of one who so assents. Belief is less restricted in its application than the other terms, for it may or may not imply certainty or certainty in the one who assents; it may even suggest nothing more than his mere mental acceptance (his conclusions are beyond belief) (the theory merits belief) (nothing could shake his belief in the Bible as the word of God) (hope is the belief, more or less strong, that joy will come—Sydney Smith) (belief consists in accepting the affirmations of the soul; unbelief, in denying them—Emerson).

Faith implies full assent of the mind and therefore certainty, but it adds to this a strong implication of complete trust or confidence in the source (as the divinity, the institution, or the person) that proposes something or offers itself for belief and confidence. Consequently, although belief may represent the mind’s act or state when something is assersted to, regardless of whether it is or is not fully supported by evidence, faith characteristically represents the mind’s act or state only when something is assersted to on grounds other than the merely those of the evidence of one’s senses or of conclusions entirely supported by reason (faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen—Heb 11:1) (to believe only possibilities is not faith, but mere philosophy—Browne). (Such tales, whether false or true, were heard by our ancestors with eagerness and faith—Macaulay).

Faith often carries a strong suggestion of credulity or overreadiness to accept authority (he takes everything on faith). Credence stresses mere intellectual assent without implying weak or strong grounds for belief and without suggesting credulity or its absence. Consequently it is seldom used in reference to religious or philosophical doctrines and is commonly employed in reference to reports, rumors, and opinions (there is no superstition too absurd to find credence in modern England—Inge). (We are not now concerned with the finality or extent of truth in this judgment. The point is that it gained a widespread credence among the cultured class in Europe—Day Lewis).

Credit (see also influence) carries a weaker implication than any of the preceding words of certitude or of acceptance as a result of conviction; often it specifically suggests as its ground a reputation for truth in the person who offers something for acceptance (anything he will tell you about the circumstances is entitled to credit) (full faith and credit shall be given in each State to the public acts, records, and judicial proceedings of every other State—U.S. Constitution).

Ana certitude, assurance, *certainty, conviction: assenting or assent, acquiescing or acquiescence (see corresponding verbs at assent).

Ant unbelief, disbelief (see also incredulity) *uncertainty, doubt, mistrust.

2 conviction, persuasion, view, *opinion, sentiment.

Ana *dogma, tenet: *principle, fundamental: conclusion, judgment (see under infer).

belittle vb depreciate, disparage, derogate, detract, minimize, decry.

believable vb credible, plausible, colorable, specious.

Ana *probable, possible, likely.

Ant unbelievable *Con fabulous, mythical (see fictitious) *doubtful, dubious, questionable.

believable vb credible, plausible, colorable, specious.

belittle vb depreciate, disparage, derogate, detract, minimize, decry.

Ana underestimate, undervalue, underrate (see base words in estimate): diminish, reduce, lessen, *decrease.

Ant aggrandize, magnify *Con *exalt: heighten, intensify, enhance, aggravate: vaunt, gaud, brag, *boast, crow.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.
bellicose *belligerent, pugnacious, combative, contentious, quarrelsome

Ant militant, *aggressive, assertive: antagonizing or antagonistic, combative or combative (see corresponding verbs at RESIST): fighting, warring, battling, contesting (see CONTEND): rebellious, factious, seditious, mutinous (see INSUBORDINATE)

Ant pacific: amicable — Con peaceful, pacifist, peaceable (see PACIFIC) belligerent adj Belligerent, bellicose, pugnacious, combative, quarrelsome, contentious mean having or taking an aggressive or fighting attitude. Belligerent usually implies actual engagement in hostilities (the belligerent powers in the World War) (define a nation’s status as not neutral yet not belligerent) When applied to such things as tones, speeches, or gestures, the term implies an actively hostile mood or warlike temper (a belligerent reply to a diplomatic note) Bellicose applies usually to a state of mind or temper: it suggests a desire or readiness to fight or sometimes a disposition to stir up a fight (a bellicose tribe) (an intoxicated man in a bellicose mood) (an editorial in a bellicose vein) Pugnacious and combative differ from bellicose (which is sometimes given an ironic or mock-heroic turn) in applying more commonly to disposition or character: they need not, however, convey the impression of pettiness or ill nature or of readiness to fight without genuine cause, so frequently implied in quarrelsome (the Scotch are certainly a most pugnacious people; their whole history proves it—Borrow) (in combat in the field of sports ... [is] generally approved. The combative impulses in human nature may thus find an expression—Cohen (soon every father bird and mother grew quarrelsome, and pecked each other—Cowper) (on the days they worked they were good-natured and cheerful ... on our idle days they were mutinous and quarrelsome—Franklin) Contentious frequently suggests perversity of temper and wearisome persistence in dispute (a very kind woman, though saying what she liked about her neighbors, and contentious toward all antireformers—Canby)

Ana hostile, antagonistic (see corresponding nouns at ENMITY): fighting, warring, battling, contesting (see CONTEND): warlike, *martial

Ant friendly — Con neighborly, *amicable: *neutral, indifferent curvature *curve, twist cureulate, *curve, twist crying, *shout, scream, shriek: bay, *bark, yelp: *cry, wail, keen belly *abdomen, stomach, paunch, gut belong *pertain, appertain, relate, apply, *bear belongings *possessions, effects, means, resources, assets

below, under, beneath, underneath mean in a lower position relatively to some other object or place. Below (opposed to above) applies to something which is anywhere in a lower plane than the object of reference; under (opposed to over) to something which is below in a relatively vertical line, and it may imply actual covering (below sea level) (the valley far below us) (under a tree) (under the bed) (hide one’s light under a bushel) (the Whirlpool Rapids are below, and the Cave of the Winds is under Niagara Falls) (the whole visible landscape is below, but only a small portion of it under, an observer in a balloon) Beneath is an equivalent of both below and under (heaven above, or ... the earth beneath—Exod 20:4) (beneath the spreading tree—Goldsmith) Underneath is often employed in place of under or beneath. It is, however, the preferred term when there is the intent to imply complete or nearly complete concealment (mines underneath the city) (garments worn underneath a dress)

In their extended senses below and under agree in expressing inferiority but differ (like above and over) in the immediacy of the relation expressed; thus, one officer may be below another in rank without being under him in immediate subordination. Similarly, with reference to deficiency, below is commonly used in general, under in more specific, relations (below the accepted standard) (below normal temperatures) (under six years of age) Beneath frequently suggests social, moral, or general inferiority (married beneath herself) (criticism beneath his notice) (beneath contempt) Underneath suggests, not inferiority, but something underlying and not indicated clearly by what is outwardly manifest (underneath his ingratiating manner one felt a sinister intention) (there is something underneath this announcement, I am sure)

Ant above — Con over (see ABOVE)

bent zone, *area, tract, region bemoan *bemoan bewail, lament, *deplore

Ant exult

bemuse *bemuse *daze, stun, stupefy, benumb, paralyze, petrify

Ant confuse, muddle, addle, fuddle, befuddle

Con illuminate, enlighten: arouse, rouse, *stir, awaken: excite, stimulate, *provoke bend vb *bend *curve, twist

Ant contort, *deform: defect, divert (see TURN)

Ant straighten beneath underneath, under, *below

Ant above, over benefaction *benefaction *donation, contribution, alms

Ant gift, present, largess, boon: endowment (see corresponding verb at DOWER): grant, subvention (see APPROPRIATION): *charity, philanthropy beneficent *beneficent

Ant charitable, humanitarian, philanthropic, eleemosynary, altruistic: munificent, bountiful, bounteous, open-handed, generous (see LIBERAL)

Ant maleficient

beneficial, advantageous, profitable are applied to what brings good or gain. Beneficial refers to what promotes health or well-being; advantageous, to what more directly conduces to relative superiority or subserves a desirable end; profitable, to what yields useful or lucrative returns (a climate beneficial to rheumatism) (measures ... beneficial to the kingdom—J. R. Green) (the enemy were in an advantageous position on the hill) (you see ... how swift and advantageous a harbinger it [a good reputation] is, wherever one goes—Chesterfield) (a profitable study) (profitable investments)

Ant salutary, *healthful, wholesome: *favorable, benign, propitious

Ant harmful: detrimental — Con *pernicious, deleterious, bane, noxious profit vb Benefit, profit, avail mean to do good or to be of advantage to someone. Benefit usually implies personal betterment or improvement (as of one’s physical, intellectual, moral, or spiritual condition), but it may suggest enrichment or a furtherance of one’s ends (a summer at the seashore benefits the entire family) (we all benefit greatly by lighthouses, even those of us who have never seen the sea and never expect to—Shaw) (the expansion of the city’s industries benefits everyone indirectly) Profits carries a strong implication of gain, especially material gain. It is therefore preferred to benefit when an increase or yield, as opposed to a decrease or loss, in one’s store (as of wealth, power, or knowledge) is to be suggested; thus, he always profits (not benefits, unless one wishes to imply a salutary effect) by the misfortunes of... benevolent

benign, *kind, kindly

Ant malign — Con malevolent, spiteful, *malicious: merciless, unrelenting, implacable, relentless, *grim bent n turn, talent, aptitude, knack, *gift, faculty, genius

Ana propensity, penchant, *leaning, proclivity, flair: *predilection, bias, prepossession, prejudice, partiality: capacity, *ability, capability

Con disinclination, indisposition, reluctance (see corresponding adjectives at DISINCLINED): aversion, *antiathy

benumb *daze, stun, bemuse, stupefy, paralyze, petrify

Ana chill, freeze (see corresponding adjectives at COLD): congeal (see COAGULATE): dumbfound, confound, nonplus, bewilder (see PUZZLE)

bequeath *will, devise, leave, legate

Ana *give, present, bestow: *distribute, dispense bereate *worry, annoy, harass, harry, pester, plague: assail, *berate

bequeath *will, devise, leave, legate

belong *distribute, dispense beneficent 1 charitable, philanthropic, eleemosynary, humanitarian, humane, altruistic

Ant malevolent — Con *malicious, malignant, malign, spiteful: *stingy, close, miserly

2 Benevolent, beneficent are closely related rather than strictly synonymous terms. Benevolent, which applies primarily to persons, means kindly in feelings and disposed to be generous or charitable, thereby expressing the will to do good, while beneficent, which applies to persons and things, means doing or effecting good, thereby emphasizing the fact of doing good. Consequently benevolent is not only applied to a person, a group, or an institution, but to matters (as looks, attitudes, intentions, manners, and tones) that suggest a kindly disposition or a wish to help beleaguer, invest, blockade mean to surround an enemy in a fortified or strong position so as to prevent ingress or egress. Besiege implies a sitting down before the entrance to a fortified place (as a castle or a walled town), and it may be used to denote the operation of attackers of a strongly fortified or naturally protected position of the enemy and usually implies the surrounding of it and frequent assaults upon it in order to break down the resistance of the enemy (Troy was besieged by Greek armies for ten years) Beleaguer does not materially differ from besiege in meaning, although it springs from a different type of warfare, one where fortifications are less the objects of attack and is then applicable to the benefits produced by things (overflows its banks and leaves beneficent layers of fertile soil—Mumford) (the beneficent Gulf stream prevents things from really getting cold—Joseph)

Ana, Ant, Con see those at BENEVOLENT 1

benign 1 benignant, kindly, *kind

Ana *gracious, genial, cordial, affable: sympathetic, *tender, compassionate: *suave, urbane, bland

Ant malign — Con malignant, malevolent, *malicious, spiteful: *caustic, acrid, mordant

2 auspicious, *favorable, propitious

Ant malign — Con *sinister, baleful, malefic, maleficient: threatening, menacing (see THREATEN) benignant benign, *kind, kindly

Ant malignant — Con malevolent, spiteful, *malicious: merciless, unrelenting, implacable, relentless, *grim besiege, beleaguer, invest, blockade mean to surround an enemy in a fortified or strong position so as to prevent ingress or egress. Besiege implies a sitting down before the entrance to a fortified place (as a castle or a walled town), and it may be used to denote the operation of attackers of a strongly fortified or naturally protected position of the enemy and usually implies the surrounding of it and frequent assaults upon it in order to break down the resistance of the enemy (Troy was besieged by Greek armies for ten years) Beleaguer does not materially differ from besiege in meaning, although it springs from a different type of warfare, one where fortifications are less the objects of attack than open cities or occupied positions. Beleaguer suggests the presence of camps and therefore of great numbers of troops; often it carries the connotations of besetting or harassing rather than of confining or imprisoning (a beleaguered garrison) (but Richelieu's general, Harcourt, besieged the town from the outside, himself surrounded by the Spanish governor of Milan—Belloc) (as in a beleaguered city there spread circumstantial rumors of happenings in the world outside—Eddington)

In extended use besiege stresses a blocking up (they will besiege your doors) or an assailing with importunities (I was besieged by four small Bedouin children who had been whimpering for money as I read the papers—Liebling) and beleaguer emphasizes a pestering or annoying (the girl is . . . beleaguered . . . a worthy gentleman—Richardson

〈the family is beleaguered by peddlers〉 Invest comes very close to besiege, but it does not, by comparison, carry as strong an implication of strength or of persistence in attack. In many cases it implies the use of men and weapons to prevent ingress or egress, but it carries little suggestion of frequent assaults upon the position 〈Astorga is invested, but has not been vigorously attacked—Wellington〉 〈Charleston was never besieged nor was any serious effort made . . . to invest it on the land side—Spaulling〉 Blockade usually stresses a closing of all sea-lanes to those who wish to enter or leave hostile territory. The term usually implies the use of ships or mines to attain this end, but if the attacking country is sufficiently strong, it may imply prohibition of neutral or enemy vessels entering or leaving and efforts to seize or detain those that disobe[y. The object of blockading is usually to starve the enemy or to prevent the entrance of essential supplies 〈in any showdown the West's ultimate power to blockade might make the Russians think twice—Time〉

Ana *enclose, envelop, pen: *surround, environ, encircle, encompass, hem: beset (see INFEST): assail, *attack, assault

besmirch smirch, dirty, sully, *soil, foul, befoul, grime, begrime, tarnish

Ant cleanse

besotted infatuated, *fond, insensate

Ana fatuous, asinine, foolish, silly, *simple: *drunk, drunken, intoxicated, inebriated: *stupid, slow, dull, dense, crass

Con sensible, sane, *wise, judicious, prudent: *rational, reasonable: sober, *serious, earnest

bespangled spangled, spotted, spattered, sprinkled, mot-vetted entrance of essential supplies 〈in any showdown the West's ultimate power to blockade might make the Russians think twice—Time〉

Ana *enclose, envelop, pen: *surround, environ, encircle, encompass, hem: beset (see INFEST): assail, *attack, assault

besmirch smirch, dirty, sully, *soil, foul, befoul, grime, begrime, tarnish

Ant cleanse

besotted infatuated, *fond, insensate

Ana fatuous, asinine, foolish, silly, *simple: *drunk, drunken, intoxicated, inebriated: *stupid, slow, dull, dense, crass

Con sensible, sane, *wise, judicious, prudent: *rational, reasonable: sober, *serious, earnest

bespangled spangled, spotted, spattered, sprinkled, mot-ted, flecked, stippled, marbled, speckled (see under SPOT

v b)

Ana *bright, brilliantly, radiant: illuminated, il-lumined, lighted (see ILLUINATE) bespeak betoken, attest, *indicate, argue, prove

Ana manifest, evidence, *show, evince, demonstrate: imply, hint, *suggest bestial brutish, brute, *brutal, feral, beastly

Ana debased, depraved, corrupted or corrupt (see under DEBASE): degenerate, *vicious: degraded (see ABASE): sensual, fleshly, *carnal bestow confer, present, donate, *give, afford

Ana *distribute, dispense, divide: *grant, award bet n Bet, wager, stake, pot, ante denote in common something of value, usually money, risked in the confidence or hope that something is true or will turn out in a certain way, something else of value being risked by at least one other party in support of an opposing confidence or hope. Bet and wager are used with little distinction of meaning either of what is risked or of the act of risking it. Stake implies money or valuables bet and actually produced and entrusted to a neutral party (stakeholder) or placed in the pot in a card game. By extension a stake is anything material or nonmaterial that one stands in jeopardy of losing 〈and will probably always have the largest commercial stake in the African continent—Livingstone〉 〈with my most affectionate wishes for Dr. Johnson's recovery, in which his friends . . . have so deep a stake—Dick〉 A pot is an aggregate of the bets made by all the bettors or players especially in poker 〈won several big pots in successive deals〉 An ante typically is a stake which each player in a poker game who wishes to continue a particular hand puts up after he has seen his original five cards but before he draws other cards, but in some games of stud or draw poker and in blackjack the ante is a compulsory stake put up by each player before the cards are seen. By extension an ante is a share or amount which must be put up, usually as a price or as a prelude to a joint venture 〈considerations that tend to raise the ante so as to discourage all but the most efficient producers—Amer. Fabrics〉 〈the ante of these shareholders and other private sources of financing the steel expansion will come to about 1.7 billion dollars—Atlantic〉

bête noire *abomination, bugbear, anathema bethink recollect, remind, *remember, recall, reminisce, mind better befell, *happen, chance, occur, transpire times *early, soon, beforehand

Ant unseasonably, inopportunately betoken bespeak, attest, *indicate, argue, prove

Ana presage, augur, portend, forebode (see FORETELL): import, signify, denote, *mean: evidence, manifest, *show, evince, demonstrate betray 1 misleading, delude, *deceive, beguile, double-cross

Ana trap, entrap, snare, ensnare (see CATCH): *dupe, trick, befool, hoodwink, gull 2 discover, *reveal, disclose, divulge, tell Ana manifest, evidence, evince, *show, demonstrate: attest, betoken, bespeak, argue, *indicate

Con shield, guard, safeguard, protect, *defend better adj Better, superior, preferable mean more worthy or more pleasing than another or others. Better, which often serves as the comparative of good, in this sense implies a quality or character in a person or thing that surpasses or exceeds that in the one or ones called good 〈the theme is good, but I think you can write a better one〉 〈he proposed a better scheme than any that had been discussed〉 Often, however, better is used in comparison or contrast with something that can be described as bad 〈give him time to show his better nature〉 〈looking upon myself as no better than a dead man—Steele〉 or with something that may be good, bad, or indifferent yet from the point of view of the speaker or writer is to be rejected as totally undesirable in comparison 〈it is better for him that a mill-stone were hanged about his neck, and he were cast into the sea—Mk. 9:42〉 〈better to reign in Hell than serve in Heaven—Milton〉 Superior in all its uses retains some feeling of its basic meaning, higher in physical position, which is now largely restricted to technical contexts in which it implies opposition to what is below 〈inferior〉; thus, the upper jaw or maxilla is sometimes distinguished as the superior maxilla from the lower jaw or mandible which is then designated the inferior maxilla. Superior often implies a scale (as of values or ranks) and emphasizes height (as of status, quality, or worth); thus, if a student is doing good work one might suggest that he could do better 〈as compared with his previous accomplishment〉 if he tried, and might hope that his added efforts would produce a truly superior result (as compared either with any relevant accomplishment or with a scale of possible accomplishments); one might like an author's new book better than his last but rate it superior to anything he had previously written 〈a sergeant is superior to a corporal〉 〈certain rights are superior to constitutions and to statute laws—Lippincott〉 〈the superior durability of parchment—Caulon〉 〈superior with or without desired experience—Trewarthwa〉 Preferable implies a choice between two things or one thing and all others usually on the ground that the thing chosen is better by comparison or is superior in quality, status, or kind. But its chief emphasis is upon relative desirability, and the other implications may be greatly

Ana analogous words

Ant antonyms

Con contrasted words

See also explanatory notes facing page 1
obscured or lost upon occasion (he finds a walk in the country preferable to reading a book) Ana *choice, delicate, dainty: selected, culled, picked, preferred (see choose)

better vb improve, ameliorate, help
Ana *correct, amend, reform, rectify, remedy, redress: enhance (see intensify)

Ant worsen — Con impair, mar, harm, damage, *injure: *debase, vitiate, corrupt between, among are comparable when they take as object two or more persons or things and indicate their relation (as in position, in a distribution, or in participation). Between in its basic sense applies to only two objects (between Seylla and Charybdis) (between two fires) When this word is used of more than two objects, it brings them severally and individually into the relation expressed (a treaty between three powers) (the three survivors had but one pair of shoes between them) (I hope that between public business, improving studies, and domestic pleasures, neither melancholy nor caprice will find any place for entrance—Johnson) Among always implies more than two objects which it brings less definitely into the relation expressed (among so many candidates one must find a good one) (among the survivors were two boys) *five barley loaves, and two small fishes: but what are they among so many?—bn 6:9

bewail lament, deplor, bemoan
Ana sorrow, *grieve, mourn: wail, weep, cry
Ant rejoice

bewilder mystify, perplex, distract, puzzle, confound, nonplus, dumbfound Ana *confuse, addle, muddle: fluster, flurry, per- turb, agitation, upset (see *discompose): baffle, foil (see frustrate)

bewitch enchant, captivate, fascinate, charm, allure, attract Ana *thrill, electrify: delight, please: infatuate, enamor
Ant *confuse, addle, fuddle, muddle: fluster, flurry, per- turb, agitate, upset (see *discompose): baffle, foil (see frustrate)

biannual, biennial, semiannual though not synonymous, are frequently confused. The chief source of confusion is biannual, which is used to mean either twice a year or happening every two years. If no clue to its meaning is given by the term and is used inclusively by ornithologists for such a structure; in popular usage, however, bill suggests a structure that is straight and often flattened or long and slender (as in the duck, swan, hummingbird, crane, heron, sand- piper, or snipe) or one that is short, stout, and conical (as in the cardinal bird or hawkfinch). Beak is associated with striking or tearing and is the usual term for a structure, characteristic especially of birds of prey, in which the tip of the upper mandible has a sharp downward curvature and overhangs the lower mandible (as in the eagle, vulture, or hawk) (although the kite soar with unbloodied beak—Shak.) Neb and nib are equivalent to bill or beak chiefly in dialect or poetry but derive from this use their com- moner extended sense of a jutting or pointed thing or part (the nib of a pen)

bias n prejudice, prepossession, partiality, predilection
Ana slant, standpoint, *point of view, viewpoint, angle: *leaning, propensity: inclining or inclination, predisposi- tion, disposition (see corresponding verbs at incline)

Con fairness, justness, impartiality, dispassionateness (see corresponding adjectives at fair)

bias vb incline, dispose, predispose Ana sway, influence, affect, impress bicker squabble, spat, tiff, quarrel, wrangle, altercate (see under quarrel)

Ana content, fight, battle, war

bickering spat, tiff, squabble, quarrel, wrangle, altercation Ana discord, contention, dissension, strife, conflict

bid vb 1 command, order, enjoin, direct, instruct, charge
Ana summon, summons, call, cite

Ant forbid — Con prohibit, enjoin, interdict, inhibit (see forbid) 2 invite, solicit, court, woo
Ana ask, request

bid n tender, overture, advance, approach Ana offering or offer, proffering or proffer (see corre- sponding verbs at offer: *proposal, proposition: inviting or invitation, soliciting or solicitation (see corresponding verbs at invite)

biddable docile, amenable, tractable, obedient Ana *compliant, acquiescent: obliging, complaisant, good-natured, *amiable: submissive, tame
Ant willful — Con intractable, refractory, recalcitrant, headstrong, ungovernable, *unruly: *obstinate, stubborn, stiff-necked, mulish

bidding behest, command, order, injunction, mandate, dictate Ana direction, instruction (see corresponding verbs at command: summoning or summons, calling or call, citing or citation (see corresponding verbs at summon)

biennial biannual, semiannual big large, great
Ana *grand, magnificent, imposing, grandiose, majestic, august: huge, immense, enormous, gigantic, colossal
Ant little — Con small, diminutive, wee, tiny, petite, minute, microscopic, miniature

bigot fanatic, enthusiast, zealot bigoted illiberal, narrow-minded, narrow, intolerant, hidebound Con tolerant, *forbearing, lenient: liberal, progressive, advanced, radical

bill n
Bill, beak, neb, nib denote the jaws of a bird together with their projecting horny covering. Bill is the general term and is used inclusively by ornithologists for such a structure; in popular usage, however, bill suggests a structure that is straight and often flattened or long and slender (as in the duck, swan, hummingbird, crane, heron, sand- piper, or snipe) or one that is short, stout, and conical (as in the cardinal bird or hawkfinch). Beak is associated with striking or tearing and is the usual term for a structure, characteristic especially of birds of prey, in which the tip of the upper mandible has a sharp downward curvature and overhangs the lower mandible (as in the eagle, vulture, or hawk) (although the kite soar with unbloodied beak—Shak.) Neb and nib are equivalent to bill or beak chiefly in dialect or poetry but derive from this use their com- moner extended sense of a jutting or pointed thing or part (the nib of a pen)

biography life, memoir, autobiography, confessions are comparable when they mean a more or less detailed account of the events and circumstances of a person's life. Biography is the technical, neutral term for this kind of writing or for an example of it; the term suggests neither length nor brevity of treatment, neither factuality nor in-

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.
interpretation of facts, neither partisanship nor detachment, for it may be characterized by any of these qualities, but it does imply that the course of a career is covered at least in its main events: the official biography . . . written by his son is in print and easily available—Nock. (Lynton Strachey's biography of Queen Victoria restricts itself to the facts which develop his conception of her.) Life usually suggests a fuller and more intimate treatment than biography; a work so designated may, however, be written on a brief scale or be drawn out so that very little is escaped. Life is often used in place of biography when the author especially wishes to suggest a vivid or graphic or interpretive account or to imply the addition of firsthand material (as letters or a journal); the term is also often used in the combination "life and times" as the title for a biography placing the subject in the background of his period. Boswell's Life of Dr. Johnson: (Ray Stannard Baker's Life and Letters of Woodrow Wilson): Life and Times of Jesus by J. F. Clarke: Memoir (or often the plural memoirs) refers to a biography written by one who has intimate knowledge of its details; although it does not necessarily imply that the subject of the biography is the writer, it very frequently does so. Also, memoir may suggest reminiscences of a whole or of part of a life; the term therefore carries no promise of completeness, or fullness, but it does connote a more personal approach than biography or, usually, than life. Hallam Tennyson's biography of his father is called Alfred, Lord Tennyson: A Memoir: its spirit is so devoted as to make it almost more a memoir than a biography—Nock. Autobiography refers to a biography of oneself typically written toward the end of one's life or at the completion of one's active career. Autobiography usually implies some distinction in the writer and a demand for or the desire to give information about the personalities and events of his time or about the background of the events in which he has played a part. The term is seldom used in the titles of books and is preferred as a designation of a type. My Life is Havelock Ellis's autobiography: what would we give for such an autobiography of Shakespeare—Carlyle: Confessions as a type belong to the genre of autobiography. Confessions are usually written by a person who desires to avow fully the experiences of his life, both shameful and creditable. The motive of such a book is as varied as the books themselves; thus, to give extremes, the Confessions of St. Augustine were written for the glorification of God, who has brought him out of a life of sin; the Confessions of Rousseau were written to reveal truly and sincerely all his experiences without reference to the opinions of men: De Quincey's Confessions of an English Opium Eater: biologic *drug, simple, medicinal, pharmaceutical *particle, mite, smidgen, whit, atom, iota, jot, tittle piece, fragment, detail, fraction, *part, portion bite, gnaw, champ, gnash are comparable when they mean to attack with or as if with the teeth. Bite fundamentally implies a getting of the teeth, especially the front teeth, of cutting into something so that it stings or pricks, or implies a getting of the teeth, especially the front teeth, of cutting into something so that it stings or pricks. Sometimes bite denotes wound by biting the dog has bitten a boy (unable to fight with hands or feet, he savagely bit his antagonist) In extended use bite implies unusual power of penetration or power of cutting into something so that it stings or pricks, or gives support to a good grip or hold scissors that snip sheet steel and bite off heavy bars—Shaw (bite an etching plate with acid) saws . . . as they . . . bite the notion of the bisexual character of man—Mullahy. Hermaphroditic and hermaphrodite when applied to human beings usually indicate primarily the presence of physical characteristics and especially of actual gonads of both sexes in the same individual and imply an abnormal state hermaphroditic children, where both ovaries and testes are present Newsweek: Hermaphroditism frequently or hermaphroditically occasionally has extended use in which it suggests the combination of two readily distinguishable and often more or less incongruous elements; thus, a hermaphrodite wagon is one made up of a two-wheeled cart with an extra pair of wheels and a rack added: hermaphroditism calipers have one caliper and one divider leg a young Konigsberg architect, a Bait (that is to say a kind of hermaphroditic Russian and Prussian too) Clare Sheridan everybody in every war, barring the hermaphrodite soldier who wears a uniform but doesn't fight, lives in a sort of hell—Kenneth Roberts: Androgynous in reference to human beings or to qualities or characteristics rarely connotes abnormality but rather suggests a congruous and pleasing blending has the androgynous Greek beauty which suits a youth or a goddess equally well, combining the vigor of one sex with the grace of the other—The Critic: if one is a man, still the woman part of the brain must have effect; and a woman must also have intercourse with the man in her. Coleridge perhaps meant this when he said that a great mind is androgynous—Woolf: Androgynous is also the preferred term for use in respect to deities, their attributes or appearances: a somewhat androgynous Apollo—Grigson: the androgynous character of the Bodhisattva: masculine Avalokiteshvara, feminine Kwan Yin Joseph Campbell: Unlike the preceding terms, epicene has no technical application to physical or functional status; however, in its often allusive reference to sex in characterizing human beings, their attributes, or the products of their being it may approach the other terms in meaning decapitated by a hero disguised as a woman . . . his brothers suspect the epicene wife because of her masculine arms—Lowie: More often epicene suggests deficient sexuality and may imply intersexuality, effeminacy, or sexlessness the hearty sportsman who is really epicene beneath his tweeds—Gibbs: if only all this messy business of sex could be done away with and we could all remain . . . happy, epicene Peter Pans—Dwight Macdonald: In some contexts epicene loses all direct reference to sex and suggests rather the weakness inherent in deficiency which may be expressed on the one hand in extreme delicacy something dreamy, ambiguous, almost epicene—Norman Douglas or on the other in utter decadence the glass of fashion and the mold of form, so dainty a figure, indeed, that he turned Mark Twain's stomach and appears as an epicene clown in the American's robust story—G. W. Johnson.

bizarre: debar, shut out, *exclude, eliminate, rule blackguard: *villain, scoundrel, knave, rascal, rogue, bitter, acrid: *caustic, mordant, acrid: *pungent, poignant, piercing Bitter blame: reprehend, reprobate, condemn, denounce, censure, *criticize Blame
blameworthy: culpability, guilt, fault are comparable culpability: blame, culpability, guilt, fault are comparable culpability: blame or criticism and must suffer or receive reproach, censure, or even more severe punishment (they therefore still, blameworthy as thou art . . . thee I account still happy, and the chief among the nations, seeing thou art free—Cowper)
A person is guilty who is justly chargeable with responsibility for a delinquency, crime, or sin,

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.
either in his own knowledge or in that of others, by his confession or by proof (often legal proof) of his responsibility; the term may stress either the fact that guilt has been proved or the fact or the fear of resulting punishment (the defendant was found guilty) suspicion always haunts the guilty mind; the thief doth fear each bush an officer—Shak.> <let no guilty man escape, if it can be avoided—Grant> Often the term suggests merely a state of mind (as a consciousness that one has committed a sin or a crime or a fear that one is justly suspected of wrongdoing or of a misdeed) a guilty conscience there is no use in making the refractory child feel guilty—Russell> A person is culpable who has been shown to be blameworthy and open to severe censure or condemnation (the judge . . . remarked that those whom Smith had gulled were almost as culpable as he—Altick> The term is also applicable to a blameworthy act, condition, or practice for which one is responsible or which leads to wrong or harm culpable ignorance culpable neglect is it not . . . culpable and unworthy, thus beforehand to slur her honor?—Shelley> Ant blameless —Con faultless, *impeccable, flawless Con *expressive, meaningful, significant, pregnant *blasphemous *improbable, profane, sacrilegious blasphemy 1 Blasphemy, profanity, swearing, cursing are comparable when meaning impious or irreverent speech. Blasphemy, the strongest term (see also PROFANATION), applies strictly to an intentional or malicious utterance in which the Supreme Being is defied or offered indignity; as such it is regarded as a serious sin in theology and as a crime at the common law genuine blasphemy, genuine in spirit and not purely verbal, is the product of partial belief and is as impossible to the complete atheist as to the perfect Christian—T. S. Eliot> Profanity has a wider range and includes all irreverent reference to holy things; it is particularly applied to speech in which the names of God, Jesus, and the Virgin Mary are used lightly and irreverently, especially in expressing rage or passion in oaths, curses, and imprecations (he had what one might call a preliminary recourse in his profanity, those "scorch- ing, singing blasts" he was always directing at his compa- 2 *profanation, desecration, sacrilege...

blaze

vb Blaze, flame, flare, glare, glow are comparable both as verbs meaning to burn or appear to burn brightly and as nouns denoting a brightly burning light or fire. Blaze implies great activity in burning, the thorough kindling of the burning substance or material, and the radiation of intense light and often heat (the sun blasted down upon them with a crushing violence—Forrestor) (everyone fought fire. Everyone went to the woods and threshed out some new blaze—Vorse) (her eyes blazing in her white face—Stevenson) Flame suggests a darting tongue or tongues of fire formed by rapidly burning gas or vapor; it therefore often connotes less steadiness than blaze and sometimes less intense heat and light (the burning house was soon a mass of flames) (the torches flamed in the wind) (the dry fuel soon burst into flame) (dimmed hope's newly kindled flame—Shelley) Flare implies flame, especially a flame darting up suddenly against a dark background or from a dying fire (torches that guttered and flared—Howlett) (he . . . lighted a cigarette and then remembered that the flare of the match could probably be seen from the station—Anderson) Glare (see also Gaze) emphasizes the steady emission or reflection of bright light; it sometimes connotes an almost unendurable brilliance (dazzed by the lantern glare—Kipling) (the snow glares in the sunlight) (the glare of a forest fire in the sky) (he . . . lets the fire glare on the sullen face for a moment, and it sears itself into the memory forever—J. R. Lowell) (his days were passed in the glare of publicity—Buchan) Glow also stresses the emission of light, but it suggests an absence of flame and therefore connotes steadiness, intensity, radiance without brilliance, and often warmth and duration (the glow of coals) (her fine effect of glowing from within as a lamp glows—Mary Austin) (the fire that burned within him, that glowed with so strange and marvelous a radiance in almost all he wrote—Huxley) Ana *illuminare, illumine, light: *burn: *flash, gleam, glance

bleach

vb Bleach, fire, kindling, igniting or ignition (see corresponding verbs at LIGHT): effulgence, refugence, radiance, brilliance or brilliancy (see corresponding adjectives at BRIGHT)

blind

vb Blind, stain, *stigma: tainting or taint, pollution, defilement (see corresponding verbs at CONTAMINATE): *fault, failing, frailty: *lack, want, privation

blendedness—Con purity, simplicity (see corresponding adjectives at PURE): cleanliness, cleanlinessness (see corresponding adjectives at CLEAN): clearness, transparency, pellucidness (see corresponding adjectives at CLEAR)

blessed—*holy, sacred, divine, spiritual, religious

bleach

vb Bleach, fire, kindling, igniting or ignition (see corresponding verbs at LIGHT): effulgence, refugence, radiance, brilliance or brilliancy (see corresponding adjectives at BRIGHT)
blind 105 blossom

(\text{the intolerable narrowness and the purblind conscience of the society—George Eliot}) (in Washington purblind congressmen, sensitive only to the demands of big business, fastened . . . the McKinley tariff—Nevins & Commanger)\textit{Con} seeing, perceiving, discerning, noticing, noting (see \textit{SEE}): *aware, alive, conscious, sensible, cognizant, awake

\textbf{blind n} Blind, shade, shutter mean a device that serves as a screen for a window. Blind is used especially in British countries to designate a window covering, usually of fabric and operating on a roller, that shuts out the sunlight or at night prevents those outside from seeing in. In this sense shade is more usual in the United States. The use of the term \textit{blind} as an element of or as a shortened form for \textit{venetian blind} is common both in American and British countries. \textit{Venetian blind} refers to a flexible inside curtain composed of light and narrow laths fixed on tapes which may be raised or lowered as desired and whose laths may be opened or closed according to the amount of light needed. But \textit{blind} (or \textit{blinds}, since a pair of the devices is usually fitted to a single window) is used chiefly for a device fitted on the outside or on the inside of a window, made of a wooden frame with slats that are movable or fixed, and typically hinged at the side so that when opened it lies flat against the outside wall or folds into an inner recess of the window frame. This device is also called a \textit{shutter}. But \textit{shutter} is actually a more inclusive term and implies a device that can be shut (as to exclude light, rain, or wind, to insure privacy, or to make safe against intruders). The term therefore includes such devices as those made of solid panels whether used singly or in pairs or sets to each window, and whether left permanently in place or hung when desired (\textit{storm shutters}) (\textit{hurricane shutters}) (\textit{each night the shopkeeper put up his shutters})

\textbf{blink vb} *wink

\textit{Ana} ignore, disregard, overlook, slight, *neglect: evade, elude, avoid, shun (see \textit{ESCAPE})\textit{Con} *see, note, notice, observe, remark

\textbf{bliss} beatitude, blessedness, felicity, *happiness

\textbf{blockade vb} *besiege, beleaguer, invent

\textit{Ana} *close, shut: block, impede, obstruct (see \textit{HINDER}): *enclose: *surround, environ, encircle

\textbf{bloodless} anemic, *pale

\textit{Ana} *colorless, uncolored: wishy-washy, vapid, inane (see \textit{INSIPID})

\textbf{Ant} sanguine: plethoric —\textit{Con} vital, alive, *living: vivid, *graphic: *vigor: *lusty, nervous

\textbf{bloody, sanguinary, sanguine, sanguineous, gory} are comparable when they mean affected by or involving the shedding of blood. \textit{Bloody} may be used in place of any of the succeeding words, but it specifically and distinctively applies to that which is covered with blood or is actually or apparently made up of blood (\textit{a bloody knife}) (\textit{bloody hands}) (\textit{a bloody discharge from a wound}) \textit{Sanguinary} usually and \textit{bloody} also when a simpler, more forcible word is desired apply to something attended by or someone bent upon bloodshed (\textit{a sanguinary conflict}) (\textit{sanguinary deeds}) (\textit{my thoughts be bloody, or be nothing worth—Shak.}) (\textit{a bloody battle}) \textit{Sanguine} and \textit{sanguineous} are used chiefly in a literary context in place of either of the preceding words or in specifically implying an association with the demands of bloodlustiness or the color of blood (to find his way through the sanguine labyrinth of passion through which he was wandering—Wilde) (his passion, cruel grown, took on a hue fierce and sanguineous—Keats) \textit{Gory} sometimes suggests clotted blood, but more often it suggests a profusion of blood that testifies to slaughter (\textit{a gory fight}) (\textit{never shake thy gory locks at me—Shak.})

\textbf{bloom n} flower, blow, blossom (see under \textit{blossom vb})

\textit{bloom vb} flower, blow, *blossom

\textit{Ana} flourish, thrive, prosper (see \textit{SUCCEED})

\textit{blossom n} flower, bloom, blow (see under \textit{blossom vb})

\textit{blossom vb} *Bloom, blossom, flower, blow are comparable as verbs when meaning to become florescent and as nouns when meaning the period or state of florescence or (except for \textit{blow}) meaning the florescent part itself. \textit{Blossom} may be used of a plant that reaches the condition of florescence, but typically it applies to trees, shrubs, and herbaceous plants (and to their florescent parts) that normally proceed to bear what is ordinarily (not technically) called a fruit (\textit{the cherry trees are in blossom}) (\textit{the apple trees will blossom next month}) (\textit{the tomatoes have shed their blossoms}) \textit{Bloom}, though sometimes employed interchangeably with \textit{blossom}, is typically used of such herbaceous plants, shrubs, or trees (or their florescent parts) as have reached the height of their beauty during the period of florescence (\textit{the roses are in bloom}) (\textit{the iris is blooming}) (\textit{the rhododendron has blooms in early June in this locality}) \textit{Flower} in technical use as a noun refers to the part of a seed plant which normally bears reproductive organs; in popular use it is usually restricted to such part when its gross structure is showy and conspicuously colored or white. Fragrance, freshness, shortness of life or of beauty are the implications in the popular use of the noun and the verb that distinguishes \textit{flower} from \textit{bloom} chiefly but also from \textit{blossom}; also \textit{flower} is often thought of as apart from the plant where it has grown (\textit{a bouquet of flowers}) (\textit{the rambler's period of flowering is short}) (\textit{one after another the garden plants were} flowered, but always in the meantime some had faded) (\textit{as for man, his days are grass: as a flower of the field, so he flourisheth—Ps 103:15}) (\textit{full many a flower is born to blush unseen, and waste its sweetness on the desert air—Gray}) (\textit{there can be no perfect flower without fragrance—Symons}) \textit{Blow}, in this sense, has an archaic or poetic flavor except in the combination full-blown. Usually it suggests a bursting into flower or bloom and often, especially in the noun, connotes a great display of blooms 〈I know a bank where the wild thyme blows—Shak〉 〈the blossoms blow; the birds on bushes sing—Dryden〉 〈such a blow of tulips, as was not to be matched—Addison〉

\textit{Ana} analogous words \textit{Ant} antonyms \textit{Con} contrasted words See also explanatory notes facing page 1

All of these words have extended use. Blossom usually suggests something analogous to a natural blossom (as in freshness or rich development) 〈after a shy girlhood she is blossoming out in college〉 Bloom usually suggests a time or period of perfection, vigor, or beauty 〈the bloom of perfect manhood—Hamilton〉 〈the hills are full of marble before the world blooms with statues—Phillips Brooks〉 Flower implies the choicest part, specimen, or product of something or its coming into being 〈the flower of a nation died in that war〉 〈always the flower of courtesy—Cather〉 〈I think it [Greek literature] one of the brightest flowers of the human spirit—Benson〉 〈art, he thought, should flower from an immediate impulse towards self-expression or communication—Huxley〉 Blow, by far the least frequent of these terms in such use, implies a bursting into beauty or perfection.

blot n  ∗stigma, brand, stain Ant  ∗taint, defilement, pollution (see corresponding verbs at contaminate) 〈blemish, flaw, defect; shame,  ∗disgrace, ignominy, obloquy〉 blot out vb  delete, obliterate, expunge,  ∗erase, cancel, extirpate Ana  ∗abolish, annihilate, extinguish; wipe,  ∗exterminate, suppress Con  preserve,  ∗save, conserve: imprint, print, impress, stamp (see corresponding nouns at impression) blow vb  ∗blossom, bloom, flower Ana  ∗expand, swell: enlarge, augment (see increase) blow n  blossom, bloom, flower (see under blossom vb) blowsy frowzy,  ∗slatternly, dowdy Ana  ∗frowzy,  ∗slatternly, dowdy bluster vb  ∗bluster, blare, holler, roar, bawl, bellow, vociferate, clamor, howl, ululate

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.
boast

vb Boast, brag, vaunt, crow, gasconade mean to give vent in speech to one’s pride in oneself or something (as family, connections, race, or accomplishments) intimately connected with oneself. Boast and vaunt are often used transitively as well as intransitively; the other words are chiefly intransitive. Boast is the general term; it may or may not carry a suggestion of contempt or impute exaggeration, ostentation, or vaingloriousness to the boaster (what folly then to boast what arms can do!—Milton) (the wretch . . . abhors the craft he boasted of before—Cowper) (he was childishly anxious to boast that he had walked the whole of the six or seven miles—Mackenzie) Brag is more forceful than boast and carries a stronger implication of exaggeration and conceit; it often also implies glorying in one’s superiority or in what one can do as well as in what one is, or has, or has done (nor shall death brag thou wander’st in his shade—Shak.) (even when they brag, their eyes are generally self-mocking, mildly wise—Lord) (that we may brag we have a lass, there’s none again sae bonie—Burns) Vaunt is more literary than either of the preceding terms; it usually connotes more pomp and bombast than boast and less crudeness or naiveté than brag (charity vauntest not itself, is not puffed up—1 Cor 13:4) (and ye vaunted your fathomless power, and ye flouted your iron pride—Kipling) Crow usually implies exultant boast or especially blatant bragging in a manner suggestive of the triumphal crowing of a cock (the barrister crowded with triumph but the professor was in no way put out—Kersh) Gasconade is the least common of these terms and implies habitual or extravagant self-vaunting (an enlightened statesman and not a gasconading militarist—Bowers)

Ana flaunt, parade (see show): *pride, plume, pique, preen: *exult, magnify, arrogandise Ant depreciate (oneself, one’s accomplishments) —Con *decry, disparage, belittle, minimize: depreciate (see disapprove)

boat, vessel, ship, craft are comparable when they denote a floating structure designed to carry persons or goods over water. Boat is sometimes used as a general designation of such a structure but more specifically it is applicable to a small, typically open structure operated by oars, paddles, or poles (a rowboat) or by sails or a power mechanism (a sailboat) (a motorboat) Vessel suggests a purpose as well as a form, the term in general applying to anything hollowed out so as to serve as a receptacle. Hence, vessel is appropriate when the containing and transporting of goods and persons is stressed; it is applied chiefly to large boats, especially seagoing boats, in the business of carrying passengers or freight or serving as a base of operations at sea (as in fishing or in war) (a steam vessel) (a fleet of war vessels including dreadnoughts, cruisers, destroyers, and submarines) (fishing vessel) Ship is the preferred term for the large seagoing vessel, especially when its navigation rather than its business is emphasized (a sailing ship) (a steamship) (a battleship) (the captain stands by his ship) Ship also suggests more personality, more romance, and more beauty than the other words and therefore is far more common in poetry and in figurative use (sailing, like a stately ship . . . sails filled, and streamers waving—Milton) (O Captain! my Captain! our fearful trip is done! The ship has weathered every wrack, the prize we sought is won—Whitman) Craft may be used as a singular or collective noun and is now applicable to any type of boat or ship that plies the water. Originally it was found only in the phrase small craft and was applied to smaller vessels, especially to those in the service of ships (as lighters, tugs, and fireboats) or to those forming part of a navy or fleet (when the winds increased the Coast Guard sent out small craft warnings) The word may still be used in the sense of small craft but it tends to become a comprehensive term covering all kinds of boats and vessels (the harbor is filled with craft) As a singular, craft unqualified is often a vague and general term (for me, my craft is sailing on, through mists today, clear seas anon—Bangs) However, for that very reason, craft is often, when it is qualified, a better choice than boat, ship, or vessel (a huge, lumbering craft) (for she is such a small little craft—Gilbert) bodily, physical, corporeal, corporal, somatic are comparable when used narrowly to mean of or relating to the human body. Bodily suggests opposition to mental or intellectual (so engrossed in thought as to be unaware of his bodily needs) (he has never known bodily pain) Bodily illness is more easy to bear than mental—Dickens) Physical (see also material), though often used interchangeably with bodily, does not carry so strong a suggestion of organic structure; thus, bodily suffering implies some disturbance within the organism or, if external, some stimulus directly affecting the organism; physical suffering may also mean this, but often it is vaguer and less explicit in its implications or reference (bodily pains induced by physical exhaustion) (a sense of physical well-being is often the result of freedom from bodily ailments) Corporeal refers more specifically to the substance or matter of which the body is composed; like physical it has a more inclusive sense (see material) but when used with reference to the human body, it implies an opposition to immaterial or to spiritual as applied to substance or nature (our notion of man, for instance, necessarily includes its specific parts, rational soul and corporeal body—Connolly) (until, the breadth of this corporeal frame . . . almost suspended, we are laid asleep in body, and become a living soul—Wordsworth) Corporal applies almost exclusively to things that have for their object an often painful effect upon the body (subjected to corporal punishment) In some contexts (as in “corporeal works of mercy”) it may stand in contrast to spiritual. Somatic, because of its freedom from theological and poetic connotations, is now preferred to bodily and corporeal by physiologists, psychologists, and physicians with an implied opposition to psychological (somatic reactions to a stimulus) (a somatic disturbance) (somatic behavior)

Ana *carnal, fleshly, animal, sensual Con *mental, psychic, intellectual: spiritual (see holy)

body, corpse, carcass, cadaver denote the physical organism of a man or animal (especially one of the larger animals). Body refers to the animal organism, living or dead; but its commonest use is in reference to man, then often implying an opposition to mind or soul (absent in body, but present in spirit—1 Cor 5:3) (women take great care of their bodies) (they removed the body to a morgue) Corpse and carcass (of man and animal respectively) refer to the dead body (make a ring about the corpse of Caesar—Shak.) (there was a swarm of bees and honey in the carcass of the lion—Judg 14:8) Carcass is also used as a term of contempt for the human body, dead or alive (the bleak shore now lies th’ abandoned king, a headless carcass, and a nameless thing—Dryden) Cadaver (compare cadaverous at Haggard) applies to a corpse used for the purpose of dissection in a laboratory. The term is sometimes applied to living men and then suggests extreme emaciation or the appearance of a skeleton.

Ana *soul, spirit: *mind, intellect, psyche, intelligence Ant *boggle (vb) stickle, stick, strain, scrape, *demur, balk, jib.
bombard

vb prop, *support, sustain, buttress, brace rhapsody, rant, fustian, rodomontade all designate

a style of speech or writing characterized by high-flown bombastic grandiloquent, magniloquent, *rhetorical, bogus adj *counterfeit, spurious, fake, sham, pseudo,

boisterous obstreperous, clamorous, blatant, *vociferous, boil vb Boil, seethe, simmer, parboil, stew mean to prepare (decorating) in a liquid heated to the point where it emits con-considerable steam. Boil implies the bubbling of the liquid and and the rapid escape of steam; it may be applied to the liquid alone, but usually it suggests a fast method of accomplish-boil n *abscess, furuncle, carbuncle, pimple, pustule boil water

vb

beef)

imply inflation or a grandiosity or im-atory in some degree; some of them are frankly contemp-

a style of speech or writing characterized by high-flown

devil, rash, foolhardy: mettlesome, *spirited: fearless, a chicken before frying it) Stew them with beef)

(see PLAY

FEARFUL)

to boil it thoroughly or to make an infusion of it <tomorrow eggs) <boil clothes> it suggests that the liquid is at the point of boiling; it implies less steam and less bubbling than boil and is used, therefore, to denote a gentle and slower form of cooking <corned beef should be simmered, not boiled> <simmer milk> Parboil usually implies boiling for a limited time to prepare some food for further cooking (as by roasting or frying) <parboil potatoes prior to roasting them with beef> <parboil a chicken before frying it) Stew implies long slow simmering, usually in a closed vessel; it is used especially in reference to meats or fruits cooked until they are tender or broken up <stew beef and kidneys together> <stew fruit for dessert> boisterous obstreperous, clamorous, blatant, *vociferous,

strident

Ana sporting, disordering, rollicking, frolicking, gambolling (see play vb): *unruly, ungovernable: *indecorous, unseemly

Con quiet, noiseless, *still: peaceful, *calm, tranqul, serene, placid: staid, sedate, *serious, sober bold *brave, courageous, unafraid, fearless, intrepid, valiant, valorous, dauntless, undaunted, doughty, audacious

Ana daring, reckless, venturesome, *adventurous, dare-devil, rash, foolhardy: mettleosome, *spirited: fearless, unapprehensive, unafraid (see affirmative adjectives at

FEARFUL)

Ant cowardly —Con *timid, timorous: quailing, flinch-ing, shrinking, recoiling (see recoil) bolster vb prop, *support, sustain, buttress, brace

Ana *strengthen, reinforce, fortify: uphold, champion

(see support)

bombard assail, storm, assault, *attack bombast, rhapsody, rant, fustian, rodomontade all designate

a style of speech or writing characterized by high-flown

bombosity or pretentiousness of language disproportionate to the thought or subject matter. All of them are derogatory in some degree; some of them are frankly contemptuous. Bombast does not necessarily connote emptiness of thought, but it implies inflation or a grandiosity or impressiveness in language and style which so outruns the thought that the attention is distracted from the matter and concentrated upon the manner of expression. When used in description rather than in censure, bombast often additionally suggests a soaring eloquence or a kind of oratorical grandeur, such as is found in Marlowe’s Tamburlaine the Great or is characteristic of Elizabethan drama in compar-sion with modern realistic drama; when used in depreciation, it suggests padding, windiness, verbosity, and exaggeration <to outbrave better pens with the swelling bombast of a bragging blank verse—Nash> <their eloqueness is all bombast—Kingsley> <it looks like mere “rhetoric,” certainly not “deeds and language such as men do use.” It appears to us, in fact, forced and flagitious bombast—T. S. Eliot> Rhapsody, like bombast, may be scarcely or obviously derogatory. It designates an ecstatic or effusive utterance or writing in which the language or style is governed by the feelings rather than by logical thought. It may, at one extreme, suggest inspired utterance

(as in rapture) or, at the other, a maudlin loquaciousness

>O then my breast should warble airs, whose rhapsodies should feast the ears of seraphims—Quarles> <his characters . . . are excellently drawn, but he writes as though he had uncovered a new religion and thought it deserved a rhapsody—New Yorker> In scholarly and critical use it is often applied to a kind of writing that has no perceptible argument and is seemingly incoherent, yet moves by a kind of logic of its own from one expression of feeling or one image to another <the traditional assumption that it [Kubla

Khan] was a rhapsody of enchanting images which “led to nothing”—Times Lit. Sup.> Rant and fustian are definitely terms of derogation. Both are applicable to bombast and rhapsody at their worst, but rant stresses its extra-gance or violence of expression or utterance and fustian the banality of its quality or the preposterousness of its character <the hoarse rant of that demagogue fills the air and distracts the people’s minds—Ascoli> he, whose fustian’s so sublimely bad, it is not poetry but prose run mad—Pope> romantic fustian; which may be defined as the enormous disproportion between emotion and the outer object or incident on which it expends itself. Victor Hugo abounds in fustian of this kind—Babbity Rodonmontade is applied especially to the rant of the braggart, of the demagogue, or of anyone given to bluster and mag-niloquence (the brothers set about abusing each other in good round terms and with each intemperate sally their phrases became more deeply colored with the tincture of Victorian rodomontade—Marsh> Ana grandiloquence, magniloquence, rhetoric (see corresponding adjectives at Rhetorical): inflatedness, turgidty, turmidity, flatulence (see corresponding adjectives at Inflated)

Con temperateness or temperament, sobriety or sobriety, unimpassionedness (see corresponding adjectives at Sober): dispassionateness, justness (see corresponding adjectives at Fair) bomastic grandiloquent, magniloquent, *rhetorical, aurate, flowery, euphistic

Ana *inflated, turgid, tumid: verbose, diffuse, *wordy:

eloquent, voluble, fluent, articulate, *vocal

Con temperate, unimpassioned, *sober: *sincere: unaffected, *natural, simple, artless: dispassionate, just, impartial, *fair

bona fide *authentic, genuine, veritable

Ana true, *real, actual: *reliable, dependable, trustworthy: *pure, absolute, simple, sheer

Ant counterfeit, bogus —Con simulated, feigned, pretended, affected, shammed, assumed (see assume) bond adj *bound, indented, articulated

Ant free —Con emancipated, manumitted, liberated, freed (see free vb): independent (see free adj) bond 1 Bond, band, tie all denote something which serves to bind or bring two or more things firmly together, but they differ from each other not only in implications but in their specific applications. Bond often retains its basic implication of restraint upon the freedom of the individual. It may be applied to a restraining device (as a rope, a chain, a fetter, or a manacle) which prevents a prisoner from escaping or, more broadly, to something that interferes with one’s liberty and holds one down (it has been said that only the dying man is free, for death breaks every bond). But bond is equally applicable to something that connects or brings together two individuals (persons or things) or all the individuals comprising a group or mass into a stable union. In this sense the term may and often does refer to a connection that is primarily spiritual; occasionally, especially when the plural is used, there is also a hint of restraint or constraint (the bond of marriage) (the bond of faith) (the bond of fellowship) (the bonds of a common tradition) (the religion of the Greeks) [was] . . . the bond of their political life—Dickinson) Band (see also strip) may imply, like bond, a restraint, a fastening, or a connection, but it more usually also implies something malleable in the form of a flat and narrow piece of material, often one that forms a hoop or ring; thus, a band around the hair is worn to confine the hair and may be a ribbon with ends tied together or a hoop or half hoop (as of metal or plastic); an endless strip of rubber or elastic material is called a rubber band; a hooplike piece which holds together two parts of a structure (as the barrel and stock of a gun or two sections of a pillar) is called a band: also, a straight member of a wall (as continuous molding, a frieze, or a strip of brickwork in a different pattern) often serves to keep closely united or together but to bring together two things that are affected by common forces so that when they are subjected to strain or tension they will not spread or pull apart; thus, the transverse bars on which rails rest and which serve to keep the rails equidistant from each other are called ties; a piece (as a beam, a post, or a rod) which connects two parts or sides of a structure (as the ribs of a vessel or the two sides of a pointed arch) and serves to brace and stay the whole is called a tie.

2 surety, security, bail, *guarantee, guaranty bondage *servitude, slavery boner blunder, mistake, *error, howler, bull, slip, lapse, faux pas bonny comely, pretty, good-looking, fair, lovely, *beautiful, handsome, beauteous, pulchritudinous Ana pleasing, agreeable, *pleasant: attractive, charming, captivating (see under ATTRACT)

Ant homely
bonus bounty, *premium, reward, guerdon, award, prize, meed bon vivant gastronome, gourmet, gourmand, *epicure, glutton

Ant ascetic bookish academic, scholastic, *pedantic bookkeeper, accountant, auditor. A bookkeeper keeps a regular, concise, and accurate record of business transactions by making the proper entries in the various books of account for that purpose. An accountant is a person skilled in the art of bookkeeping and may be employed either to organize and set up a system of records suitable to the needs of a particular organization or to investigate and report upon the financial condition of an organization by a study and analysis of its books of record. An auditor is an examiner who checks and verifies the financial records of an organization to see that these records correctly represent its condition.

boon favor, *gift, present, gratuity, largess Ana benefaction, *donation, contribution Ant calamity—Con *misfortune, mischance, mishap: *trial, cross, tribulation, affliction boor, churl, lout, clown, clodhopper, bumpkin, hick, yokel, rube are comparable when meaning an uncouth, ungraciously fallow. Most of these words may be applied to rustics, but they tend increasingly to imply referentiality to breeding, manners, and appearance rather than to origin or social status. The same distinctions in connotations and implications are apparent in the adjectives derived from the first four of these nouns, boorish, churlish, loutish, clownish. Boor implies an opposition to gentleman, especially in respect to characteristics indicative of good breeding and fineness of feeling. As a rule boor and boorish imply variously rudeness of manner, insensitiveness, lack of ceremony, or unwillingness to be agreeable in the presence of others (love makes gentlemen even of boors, whether noble or villain—Henry Adams) (to the European mind, with all its goodwill, the very things that make us more powerful make us also more boorish—Lerner) Churl may suggest low birth or social status but more often ill-bred surly meanness of expression or attitude. The latter implication is far more common in the adjective churlish, which characteristically implies surliness, irresponsiveness, or ungraciousness (warns all whom it concerns, from King to churl—John Morley) (by what magic was this divine sweet creature could be allied with that old churl —Meredith) (they object to the dairymaids and men crossing the elm vista . . . . It seems churlish—Shaw) Lout and loutish apply especially to hulky youths or men without regard to origin and usually suggest stupidity, clumsiness, and sometimes, abdomen of bearing or demeanor. Both words are terms of contempt frequently applied to idlers or loafers of particularly unprepossessing appearance (it was inevitable that the older boys should become mischievous louts; they bullied and tormented and corrupted the younger boys because there was nothing else to do—H. G. Wells) Clown and clownish come close to lout and loutish in connotation. Instead of stupidity, however, the terms often connote ignorance or simplicity and instead of hulkiness they suggest the unattractiveness of a person whose body and movements reveal hard plodding labor (the clown, the child of nature, without guile—Cowper). When used in reference to those who are not countrymen the terms still imply reference to rustics and awkwardness and often, by association with the other sense of clown, a propensity for absurd antics (he was the sort of boy that becomes a clown and a lout as soon as he is not understood, or feels himself held cheap—D. H. Lawrence) Clodhopper distinctively suggests the frame and the heavy movements generally associated with plowmen but is not restricted in application to rustics (though hon-boorish

louche, clownish (see under BOOR)

Ana *awkward, clumsy, maladroit, inept: rude, discourteous, ungracious, uncivil, impolite, ill-mannered

Ant gentlemanly — Con *suave, urbane, smooth: courteous, courtly, gallant, polite, civil boost *lift, raise, elevate, hoist, rear, heave

ANA *limit, bound, confine, end

Con inside, interior (see corresponding adjectives at INNER) bore vb *perforate, drill, puncture, punch, prick

Ana penetrate, pierce, *enter boredom *tedium, ennui, doldrums

Ant amusement — Con diversion, entertainment, recreation (see under AMUSE) bottom vb *base, found, ground, stay, rest

Ana *support, sustain: *set, fix, establish

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.
bough
- branch, limb, *shoot bounce vb *dismiss, drop, sack, fire, discharge, cashier bound n *limit, confine, end, term Ana *border, verge, edge bound adj Bound, bond, indentured, articulated are comparable when they mean obliged to serve a master or in a clearly defined capacity for a certain number of years by the terms of a contract or mutual agreement. Bound not only stresses the obligation, but it also often connotes a condition of or approaching servitude. It frequently implies the status of an apprentice, one obliged to serve a master for an agreed term in return for being taught a trade, a craft, an art, or a profession. It may, however, imply the status of an unskilled laborer (as a domestic servant) who agrees to serve (as in a distant colony) in return for transportation, keep, and, sometimes, a wage (he emigrated from England to the American colonies as a bond servant). When the condition of servitude is emphasized and service without a wage is implied, bound (placed before the noun) is often used in place of bound <bond servant> (a bondwoman) Indentured implies apprenticeship and emphasizes the fact that the agreement is in writing, has been executed in duplicate, and has legal validity. Usually, it carries the implication of fairness and equity to both parties to the agreement (a tailor's indentured employees) (a solicitor's indentured clerk) Sometimes, especially in reference to an apprentice in a law office, articulated is preferred to indentured, though there seems to be no clear distinction between the two (he started out as an articulated clerk in an attorney's office)

bound vb 1 *jump, leap, spring, vault (see under JUMP vb) Ana advance, progress (see under ADVANCE vb): *haste, hurry, speed, expedition bound vb 1 *jump, leap, spring, vault Ana *advance, progress: *speed, precipitate, hasten, hurry 2 *skip, ricochet, hop, curvet, lope, lollipop Ana dart, skim, skud (see FLY): *rebound, recoil, resile bounder *cad, rotter boundless *infinite, uncircumscribed, illimitable, eternal, sempiternal Ana vast, immense, enormous (see HUGE): *monstrous, prodigious, tremendous, stupendous Con circumscribed, limited, confined, restricted (see LIMIT vb) bountiful, bounteous generous, openhanded, munificent, *liberal, handsome Ana *charitable, philanthropic, benevolent: prodigal, lavish (see PROFUSE) Ant nigarily —Con *stingy, parsimonious, penurious, close, miserly: avaricious, *covetous, greedy, grasping: frugal, *sparing, economical bounty award, reward, meed, guerdon, prize, *premium, bonus Ana gratuity, largess, *gift, boon: grant, subvention, subsidy (see APPROPRIATION) bouquet perfume, *fragrance, redolence, incense Ana odor, aroma, *smell, scent bout n stint, turn, trick, tour, *spell, shift, go bob vb defer, *yield, submit, capitulate, succumb, relent, cave bow vb arch, *curve bow vb *flex, crook, buckle Ana bend, *curve, twist box vb *strike, hit, smite, punch, slug, slog, slap, clout, cuff boyish *youthful, juvenile, puerile, maiden, virgin, virginal brace n *couple, pair, yoke brace vb *support, sustain, buttress, prop, bolster

ana analogous words
Ant antonyms
Con contrasted words
See also explanatory notes facing page 1
one might refer to the valorous deeds of a valiant band of knights (the regiment itself is a proud one, with a valorous record—Infantry Jour.) Dauntless emphasizes determination, resolution, and fearlessness despite danger or difficulty (the dauntless English infantry were receiving and repelling the furious charges—Thackeray) (nothing appalled her dauntless soul—Beckford) Undaunted indicates continued courage and resolution after danger, hardship, or defeat (he watched them at the points of greatest danger falling under the shots from the scorpions, and others stepping undaunted into their places to fall in in the same way—Froude) Doughty combines the implications of formidable, sturdy, and brave but may have an archaic or humorous suggestion (when Fisk reached the head of the stairs leading to the boardroom, the doughty president of the endangered railway knocked him down to the ground floor—Charles & Mary Beard) (so doughty a warrior must break a lance—Parrington) Bold may indicate a forward or defiant tendency to thrust oneself into difficult or dangerous situations (it was a bold man who dared to walk alone through hundreds of miles of lion-infested country with nothing but a spear in his hand to seek work and adventure—Cloete) (these fellows who attacked the inn tonight—bold, desperate blades, for sure—Stevenson) (he knew a fool and a tyrant in high places, and was bold to call them by their true names—Parrington) When used of immaterial things (as plans, experiments, or deeds) bold suggests a disregard for danger, risk, or convention (a bold scheme to corner the wheat market) Audacious implies spirited and sometimes reckless daring (the place where the fiery Ethan Allen first sketched his scheme to corner the wheat market) (hitherto no liberal statesman has been so audacious as to . . . lay pro- fane hands on the divine right of nations to seek their own advantage at the cost of the rest—Veblen) Ana daring, venturesome, daredevil, *adventurous: fane hands on the divine right of nations to seek their own advantage at the cost of the rest—Veblen) Ant craven—Con *timid, timorous: shrinking, flinch-craven Ant timid, timorous, shy, diffident, modest, coy: *timid, timidous; stealthy, surreptitious, underhand, *secret breach n 1 Breach, infraction, violation, transgression, trespass, infringement, contravention are comparable when denoting the act or the offense of one who fails to keep the law or to do what the law, one's duty, or an obligation requires. Breach occurs rarely by itself except in phrases such as “a law more honored in the breach than in the observance.” The word is usually followed by of and a noun or pronoun which indicates the thing which is broken or not kept (his action constitutes a breach of faith) (he was found guilty of breach of the peace by reason of his noisy, disorderly, and annoying conduct) (sued for breach of contract) Infraction is now more often used than breach (except in certain time-honored idioms) for a breaking of a law or obligation (an infraction of the school rules) (an infraction of a treaty) (an infraction of canon law) (we have scrutinized the case, but cannot say that it shows an infraction of rights under the Constitution of the United States—Justice Holmes) Violation adds to breach and infraction the implication of flagrant disregard of the law or of the rights of others and often suggests the exercise of force or violence; thus, the violation of a treaty suggests positive, often aggressive and injurious action, while its infraction may imply a mere failure strictly to adhere to its terms (a violation of military discipline) (the police interference was a violation of the right to free assembly) (when more of the people’s sustenance is exacted through the form of taxation than is necessary to meet the just obligations of Government . . . such exaction becomes ruthless extortion and a violation of the fundamental principles of a free Government—Cleveland) Transgression is applied to any act that goes beyond the limits prescribed by a law, rule, or order; often the term is used specifically of an infraction of the moral law or of one of the commandments (for sin is the transgression of the law—1 Jn 3:4) (“I was forgetting,” she said. “I am forbidden tea.” . . . She looked at the cup, tremendously tempted. . . . An occasional transgression could not harm her—Bennett) Trespass also implies an overstepping of prescribed bounds, but it carries in addition a strong implication of encroachment upon the rights, the comfort, or the prop-

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.
bread

break

ersty of others. In Scriptural and religious use a trespass is particularly an offense against God or one's neighbor—a forgery not men their trespasses, neither will your Father forgive your trespasses—Mt 6:15. In law a trespass is an unlawful act, involving some degree of force or violence, committed against the person, the property, or the rights of others. The passing through another's premises against his wish or without his invitation constitutes a trespass. A burglar who is frightened away before he actually enters a house is liable to arrest for trespass.

Infringement is sometimes used as though it were identical in meaning with infraction—an infringement of the law; an infringement of a treaty. More often it implies trespass rather than violation and therefore is the idiomatic term when trespass involving an encroachment upon a legally protected right or privilege is at issue; thus, the unauthorized manufacture of something which has been patented constitutes an infringement (rather than an infraction or violation) of a patent (the unauthorized reproduction and sale of matter already copyrighted constitutes an infringement of the copyright). An infringement on the liberty of the American people.

Contra-contravention applies specifically to a going contrary to the intent of the law or to an act in defiance of what is regarded as right, lawful, or obligatory. Warrants in contravention of the acts of Parliament—Macauley. If there is in a work of art a contravention of nature—Lowe.

Ant observance

2 Breach, break, split, schism, rent, rupture, rift are comparable when they mean a pulling apart in relations or in connections. Breach, the most general in application of any of these terms, is capable of being referred to any such pulling apart without in itself, as apart from the context, throwing light on its cause, its magnitude, or its seriousness a breach in unity a breach between old friends having followed the high banks of the Tom to the furthest extremity . . . they happily found a breach in the inclosure—Kingston. It may be one man's privilege and duty to heal the breach between the Arab and the Jew—Douglas. Break (see also break n) is often substituted for breach when one wishes to emphasize the strain that is inducing or has induced a disruption (as between persons or groups) efforts to avoid an open breach with the conserver faction the break was final, and there was no course open for the nation except war. Split usually implies a complete breach, suggesting a division such as would be made by an ax or knife; often, also, it hints at the impossibility of bringing together again the two parts (as parties or factions) that once formed a whole. Split often implies a division of friends or friendly groups into opposing parties or factions a major split between the United States and most of the rest of the free world—Bundy. I fear the split betwixt Constable and Cadell will render impossible what might otherwise be hopeful enough—Scott. Schism implies a clear-cut separation between divisions of an original group and consequent discord and dissension between the two parts; typically the term is used of such a division in a religious communiton, but it may be applied to any union of rational beings (as a political party or a philosophical school) he succeeded in dividing the American Quakers into two bodies; and this schism . . . lasted on till the present year—inge. A school of literalists arose with all the mad consequence of schism and heresy—Blackmur. Rent suggests an opening made by tearing or rending and may impute characteristics (as irregularity, jaggedness, and narrowness) to a break to which it is applied (thy stately mansion, and the pride of thy domain, strange contrast do present to house and home in many a raggy rent of the wild Peak—Wordsworth) through the wide rent in Time's eternal veil, hope was seen beamimg—Shelley. A rent in the social fabric—Millstein. Rupture approaches breach in meaning, but it carries a more clearly defined stress upon a break in relations between people or groups; in addition, it frequently is affected by its special medical use and then often suggests an actual but not always clearly apparent break mother and son avoided an open rupture by never referring to their differences—Santayana. It was still the policy of the Cardinal . . . to carry on the convention that he had not provoked any direct rupture with Vienna—Bello. Rift implies a breach that is made usually by some natural process (as one that produces a separation of rocks in a mountain or a cracking of the earth); consequently it is often applied to a breach that is small at first and is in danger of growing larger this little rift it was that had widened to a now considerable breach—H. G. Wells. It is the little rift within the lute, that by and by will make the music mute—Tennison. It was, I believe, the terrible Wars of Religion that made the fatal rift between religion and science which we are now trying to close—Inge.

Ana division, severance, separation (see corresponding verbs at separate); dissension, *discord, difference, variance, strife: estrangement, alienation (see corresponding verbs at estrange)

Con union, *unity, solidarity, integrity: accord, *harmony, concord

bread, bread and butter sustenance, *living, livelihood, subsistence, maintenance, support, keep break vb Break, crack, burst, bust, snap, shatter, shiver are comparable as general terms meaning fundamentally to come apart or cause to come apart. Break basically implies the operation of a stress or strain that will cause a rupture, a fracture, a fissure, or a shattering either in one spot or in many (break a dish by dropping it). A column broke when subjected to too great a weight. A flood resulted when the dam broke. But break goes much further than this. Often, with or without the help of an adverb, it suggests the disruption of something material or immaterial, either in whole or in part. It may then imply a collapsing or causing to collapse (the wagon broke down) the break the enemy by the only methods possible starvation, attrition, and a slow, deadly . . . envelope—Buchan. His spirit was broken. Similarly it may imply a destruction of completeness, integrity, or wholeness; thus, one breaks a set of china by losing or destroying one or more pieces of the set; one breaks a ten-dollar bill by spending part of it and getting the remainder in smaller bills or coins (break a solid group into factions) With the same underlying notion it may imply a destruction of continuity (as by interrupting, terminating, or disintegrating) (break a circuit) (break a journey) (break his silence) (break up a friendship) (it was the only time that day he saw her pale composure break—Cather). Sometimes the sense of disruption is not obvious, and the idea of piercing so as to let someone or something make entrance or exit predominates (break his way through the crowd) (break a new path) (break the news gently) she had just broken into her fifty-second year—Woolf. Most common of the senses that bear only a slight relation to the primary sense of break is one that implies violation or transgression (break the law) (break the Sabbath) (call the policy of the Cardinal . . . to carry on the convention that he had not provoked any direct rupture with Vienna—Bello. Rift implies a breach that is made usually by some natural process (as one that produces a separation of rocks in a mountain or a cracking of the earth); consequently it is often applied to a breach that is small at first and is in danger of growing larger this little rift it was that had widened to a now considerable breach—H. G. Wells. It is the little rift within the lute, that by and by will make the music mute—Tennison. It was, I believe, the terrible Wars of Religion that made the fatal rift between religion and science which we are now trying to close—Inge.

Ana division, severance, separation (see corresponding verbs at separate); dissension, *discord, difference, variance, strife: estrangement, alienation (see corresponding verbs at estrange)

Con union, *unity, solidarity, integrity: accord, *harmony, concord

bread, bread and butter sustenance, *living, livelihood, subsistence, maintenance, support, keep break 114 break

break n 1 Break, gap, interruption, interval, interim, hiatus, lacuna all denote a lapse in continuity. Break applies not only to a lapse in continuity in something material or substantial (a break in geological strata) (a break in the clouds) (he tried to find a break in the fence) but also in things (as a course of action or something having extension in time) that may be considered in reference to their continuity (he ran the long race without a break) (the book was written with no breaks except for eating and for sleeping) (a holiday makes a pleasant break in routine) (there was no break in the long, cold winter) (yet he felt that he was going away forever, and was making the final break with everything that had been dear to him—Cather) Gap basically applies to an opening (as in a wall or fence) made either by natural decay or by deliberate effort as a means of ingress or egress; the term may also include an opening (as a gash between mountains) that serves as a passage inward or outward (the great fracture at the Great Gap) (a chasm) (in representing either a break in continuity or in leaving an unfilled or unfillable space (here's our chief guest. If he had been forgotten, it had been as a gap in our great feast—Shak.) (so that the jest is clearly to be seen, not in the words—but in the gap between—Cowper (a fatal gap in our security structure—Truman) (one would like to cling to the old-fashioned theory that there is a gap between accusation and proof—Schlesinger b. 1917) Interruption implies a break that not only makes for a lapse in continuity but that disturbs the procedure (as of an action, a work, or a discourse) and causes a temporary stop or that, less often, makes a void or gap in space or order (the growing infirmities of age manifest themselves in nothing more strongly, than in an invertebrate dislike of interruption—Lamb) (those who hope to render themselves...oblivious to the harsh interruptions of reality—Day Lewis) (the mountain range continues without interruption until it meets the sea. Interval refers to the distance (as in time or in space) that exists between two things that are basically alike; the term often serves simply as a basis for measuring or suggesting this distance (at present, perhaps, it was as well to be asunder. She was...oblivious to the harsh interruptions of reality—Conby) Interim applies to the interval between two events (as the death or abdication of a sovereign and the accession of his successor or the discarding of one method and the instituting of another) (many contended that the Great War Waite instructed the inspectors like a chaser or void from Pesaro and her marriage to Bisceglie was sired by Cesare—Beuf) (in a healthy mind there is an interim between one duty and another—Crothers) Hiatus applies mainly to an interruption or lapse in time or continuity, and so implies that something important or essential is missing (Charles II had been restored to his kingdom...after an accession of his successor or the discarding of one method—Canby) (one who has broken with the old-fashioned theory that there is a gap between accusation and proof—Schlesinger b. 1917) Gap implies a break or discontinuity (the knight's lance shattered against his opponent's shield) (the Great War shook civilization to its base...another) (the willow scarce holds the sap that would...be restored to his kingdom...after an accession of his successor or the discarding of one method) (the news of the attack burst upon the nation) (the news of the attack burst upon the nation) (the willow scarce holds the sap that would...be restored to his kingdom...after an accession of his successor or the discarding of one method) (the knight's lance shattered against his opponent's shield) (the Great War shook civilization to its base...another. Gap may be used informally in place of burst especially in the sense of to break under the strain of pressure, of tension, or of concussion (this westernmost province...is beginning to burst its industrial britches—Wall Street Jour.) Snap fundamentally implies a quick, sudden effort to seize (as by biting or by snatching at), but usually this action is accompanied by a short sharp sound (as a report or a click). Snap is often used to imply the action of breaking or bursting when the intent is to suggest a quick, clean-cut break and the sharp sound which accompanies it (branch after branch snapped during the storm) (a string of his violin snapped) (sharp the link of life will snap—Housman) Shatter literally implies a breaking into many pieces, but unlike burst, which emphasizes the cause, it stresses the effect, a scattering of the pieces far and wide, and a total destruction of the thing involved (the flying debris shattered the window) (shatter a rock by an explosion of dynamite) (a bolt of lightning shattered the oak tree) Consequently, especially as applied to intangible things, shatter consistently implies a far more devastating and destructive effect than break; thus, "his health was broken by the experience" means that it was seriously impaired, but "his health was shattered by the experience" means that it was impaired beyond the point of complete recovery. The shattering of his illusions (the pathetic groanings after the fragments of a shattered faith—Day Lewis) (the Great War shook civilization to its base:...another) (the Knight's lance shattered against his opponent's shield. The legend of Rome's invincibility had been shattered—Buchan) Shiver, a chiefly rhetorical term, implies a shattering by dashing, smashing, or any usually external force and a wide scattering of fragments or splinters; in extended use it ordinarily preserves a context approaching the literal and so has never acquired a detached secondary sense (the knight's lance shivered against his opponent's shield) (as he crossed the hall, his stature fell, and shivered on the stones—Froude) (the upshot of which, was, to smash this witness like a crockery vessel, and shiver his part of the case to useless lumber—Dickens) Ana disintegrate, crumble (see DECAY): (detach, disintegrate, crumble) (detach, disintegrate) Ant cleave (together): (keep (of laws)—Coheer, clinging, (stick: unite, join, combine; observe (see KEEP) used specifically of a blank in a text (as of a manuscript or inscription) where a few words have been omitted or effaced (translated the whole work anew, and succeeded in filling many lacunae in the text—Meger). In anatomical use the term more often stresses the minuteness than the vacuity of a gap (as a pit or chamber) (cartilage cells are isolated in scattered lacunae).

Ana division, separation, severance (see corresponding verbs at separate): falling, sinking, dropping (see fall): respite, null, intermission, recess, pause

2 breach, split, schism, rent, rupture, rift

Ana, Con see those at breach 2

3 chance, opportunity, occasion, time

break down analyze, resolve, dissect

Con concatenate, articulate, integrate breakdown analysis, resolution, dissection (see under analyze)

breastwork bulwark, bastion, parapet, rampart bristle express, utter, air, voice, ventilate breeze wind, gale, hurricane, zephyr bridle vb *check, curb, restrain, inhibit broad adj beaming, beaming, broad brief vb generate, engender, propagate, reproduce procure, beget, sire, get brief n variety, subspecies, race, cultivar, strain, clone, stock breeding cultivation, culture, refinement

brightness luminous, radiant, lustrous, effulgent, refugent, beaming, lambent, lucent, incandescent are comparable when they mean actually or seemingly emission of rays of light; it suggests, therefore, a power or property possessed by a thing rather than a quality ascribed to it because of its effect on the vision; thus, a celestial body is properly described as radiant only when it emits rays of light; a planet, no matter how bright it appears to the eye, is preferably described as bright or radiant because it shines by reflected light (virtue could see to do what virtue would by her own radiant light, though sun and moon were in the flat sea sunk—Miller) The term, however, is sometimes used of anything that seems to give out light in the manner of the sun or a star (in warlike armor drest, golden, all radiant!—Shelley)

brilliant like radiant, suggests emission of light, but, unlike it, implies the sending forth of steady suffused glowing light; it is applicable to anything that shines by reflected light or that glows in the dark because of some special quality (as of physical state or chemical activity); thus, all celestial bodies are luminous, but only self-luminous bodies (stars in the strict astronomical sense) are also radiant (phosphorus is a luminous substance) As applied to color or to colored things the term implies more than bright, for it usually suggests a beauty like quality (the luminous green of the emerald) or iridescence (the blue off Nantucket is not the miracle of luminous, translucent color off Sardinia—Lowes) As applied to ideas or their expression, the term implies crystallike clearness and the absence of all obscurity (a luminous treatment of a subject) (a luminous statement—Brougham)

lustrous is applied only to an object whose surface reflects light; it therefore seldom implies pervading light but, rather, a brilliant or iridescent sheen or gloss (the lustrous brass of a burnished lamp) (a lustrous enameled surface) (lustrous satin) Effulgent and refugent indicate resplendent or gleaming brilliance, and the latter implies further that the brilliance is reflected, sometimes from an unseen source (effulgent Loveliness) (a chandelier of effulgent crystal) (in arms they stood of golden panoply, refugent host—Miller)

beaming literally implies emission of a beam (see beam under ray) (rising moon, fair beaming, and streaming her silver light the boughs amang—Burns) In its commonest use (as applied to looks or expression) beaming suggests a display of happiness, satisfaction, or benevolence (the beaming eyes of children greeting Santa Claus) (broad beaming smile—George Eliot)

lambent is applied to a thing (as a flame or a luminous body) which throws a play of light over an object or surface without rendering it brilliant or lustrous (the lambent flame of genius . . . lights up the universe—Hazlitt) (lambent lightning-fire—Shelley) Often lambent suggests the emission of soft gleams of light (kind, quiet, nearsighed eyes, which his round spectacles magnified into lambent moons—Deland)

lucent is a highly poetical or literary adjective that approaches luminous or, less often, lustrous in its meaning; it is usually applied to something transfigured by light (as from the sun or a fire) (the lucent fume of the city's smoke rising up—Mackenzie> (til every particle glowed . . . and slowly seemed to turn tolucent amber—Gibson> Incandescent suggests intense glowing brightness of or as if of an intensely heated body <pots incandescent in the kiln> (an incandescent lamp> (set thoughts aglowing in incandescent language—Iglesias> Ana> illuminated, illumined, lighted, lightened, enlight-ened (see ILLUINATE): flashing, gleaming, glistening, sparkling (see FLASH vb): glowing, flaming (see BLAZE vb)

Anna> *sharp, keen, acute: *quick, ready, prompt, apt: precocious, advanced (see PREMATURE)

Anna dense, dull —Con> *stupid, slow, crass, dumb: *lethargic, sluggish: phlegmatic, stolid, *impassive brilliant 1 radiant, luminous, *bright, effulgent, lustrous, refugent, beaming, lumbent, luent, incandescent

Anna> flashing, scintillating, sparkling, gleaming, glittering, coruscating (see FLASH vb): blazing flaming, flaring, glowing (see BLAZE vb)

Ant subdued (of light, color) —Con> gloomy, murky, obscure, dim, dusky (see DARK)

2* intelligent, clever, bright, smart, alert, quick-witted, knowing

Anna erudite, *learned, scholarly: sage, sapient, *wise

Anna crass —Con> *stupid, slow, dull, dense, dumb brim rim, edge, brink, *border, verge, margin

bring, take, fetch are comparable but not interchangeable when used in the sense of to convey from one place to another. Bring implies carrying, leading, or trans- porting from a distance to the point where the speaker or agent is or will be; take, a carrying, leading, or con- ducting to a point away from the one where the speaker or agent is or will be; thus, a mother asks her boy setting out for school to take a note to the teacher and to bring home a reply; a farmer takes his cattle to the market and brings back a supply of sugar, flour, and fresh meat.

Fetch implies going to a place where something is to be found, getting it, and bringing it back to the starting point <please fetch me a chair from the next room> (I shall fetch whatever you need> <he called to her, and said, Fetch me, I pray thee, a little water in a vessel, that I may drink. And as she was going to fetch it, he called to her, and said, Bring me, I pray thee, a morsel of bread in thine hand—I Kings 17:10-11>

Anna> bear, *carry, convey: obtain, procure, *get

Ant withdraw, remove brink verge, edge, *border, rim, margin

Anna> *limit, bound, end, confine: *shore, strand, coast brisk nimble, *agile, spry

Anna fast, quick, rapid, fleet, swift, speedy: ready, prompt, *quick: dynamic, live, *active

Ant sluggish —Con> *lethargic, torpid, comatose: *lazy, indolent, slothful, faineant: *inactive, inert, idle

bristle vb bridle, *strut, swagger

Anna preen, plume *pride, pique: evince, manifest, *show, evidence: flaunt, parade, display, exhibit (see SHOW)

Con conceal, *hide, bury briatle crisp, *fragile, fragrant, short, friable

Anna> *hardened, indurated

Ant supple —Con> *elastic, resilient, springy, flexible: tough, tenacious, *strong, stout broach vb voice, utter, *express, vent, air, ventilate

Anna> *reveal, disclose, divulge: *introduce, interject, interpose broad adj Broad, wide, deep are comparable chiefly when they refer to horizontal extent. Broad and wide apply to surfaces or areas as measured from side to side  and deep (see also DEEP) to those as measured from front to back  Broad and wide always and deep in some in- stances may be used of surfaces that spread away from one: thus, a river may be wide or broad (but not deep, which would here refer only to vertical distance) at a given point, but a flower border may be four feet wide, broad, or, if the far side is not ordinarily accessible, deep. When a plot of ground or similar area is measured, broad or, especially, wide is used of the distance from one side to the other and deep of that from front line to back line (the lot is 70 feet wide and 100 feet deep> Broad and wide are frequently interchangeable when used descriptively to mean having relatively great extent across or from side to side  But broad commonly applies only to surfaces or areas as such   <broad-shouldered> Wide applies also to apertures or to something that opens or spreads. Wide, therefore, is the preferred term when the emphasis is upon the distance between limits rather than on the extent of the intervening surface    <the doorway is four feet wide> Deep in similar descriptive use, when it carries an implication only of horizontal extent, is applicable only to something that has great extent backward (as from an opening or from the front)

Anna extended or extensive (see corresponding verb at EXTEND): *spacious, capacious, commodious, ample; vast, immense (see HUGE): expanded, dilated (see EXPAND)

Ant narrow —Con confined, circumscribed, limited, restricted (see LIMIT vb)

broadcast vb 1* strew, straw, scatter, sow

Anna> *spread, circulate, disseminate, propagate

2 promulgate, publish, advertise, announce, *declare, proclaim broadcasting promulgation, publication, advertisement, announcement, declaration, proclamation (see under DECLARE)

Brobdignagian *huge, vast, immense, enormous, ele- phantine, mammoth, giant, gigantic, gigantean, colossal, gargantuan, Herculean, cyclopean, titanic

Anna liliputian

broil n fracas, melee, row, *brawl, rumpus, scrap

Anna fray, affray, fight, conflict, combat, *contest: al- tercation, wrangle, *quarrel: contention, strife, dissen- sion, conflict (see DISCORD)

bromide cliché, platitude, truism, ^commonplace brook vb stand, abide, *bear, tolerate, suffer, endure browbeat bulldoze, bully, *intimidate, cow

Anna terrorize, terrify, *frighten, scare

Con *coax, cajole, wheedle, blandish bruise vb *crush, mash, smash, smash, macerate

Anna batter, mangle, *maim: *press, squeeze bruise n *wound, contusion, trauma, traumatism, lesion brush vb Brush, graze, glance, shave, skin are comparable when they mean to touch lightly in passing. Brush implies a movement like the flick of a brush upon a surface: sometimes it suggests no more than an almost impalpable touching, but sometimes it suggests a light touching or rubbing that disperses something that it touches <ye tinsel Insects! whom a court maintains .... The Muse's brusht and where they common the roof—

brusht he... like birds' wings—F. S. Fitzgerald

Graze implies the swift passage of a bullet or any rapidly moving object so that it touches a person or thing abrading the surface or, in the case of a person, the skin whose solid virtue the shot of accident nor dart of chance could neither graze nor pierce—Shak.

The bullet grazed the young lady's temple—Scott.
The missile grazed the spot where the shrike sat, and cut the ends of his wings—Burroughs.

Glance (see also flash) basically implies a blow (as from a sword, a spear, or an ax) that owing to the hardness or resistance of what is struck turns aside or slips and so fails of its full effect; hence glance in its participial form glancing is often used to describe such a blow either in its course or effect (he struck a glancing blow). The blow glanced off his shoulder without even jarring him.

The blade glanced, I did but shear a feather—Tennyson.

Shave implies a touching as lightly and closely as a razor that passes over the face; although it comes near to glanced (brute beings) why am I not to understand—Spenser.

The English mistrust of the intellectual, the brutish aesthetic apathy and contempt for the creative artist must go—Connolly.

Whoso loveth instruction loveth knowledge: but he that hateth reproof is brutish—Prov 12:1.

Bestial likewise applies to men and their acts, their minds, and their manners, but it usually stresses neither inhumanity nor a low-grade mind but a depravity or state of degradation unworthy of man and fit only for beasts and is therefore usually a term of severe reprobation (bestial habits).

Living in bestial filth (inclined to describe any sexual indulgence of which he does not approve as bestial—Krutch).

Beastly may come close to bestial in its suggestion of utter depravity or abominable character (beastly crudity) but more often it is weakened and implies no more than disapprobation of something unpleasant or distasteful to a greater or less degree.

A beastly stench pervaded the house.

A beastly day.

Beastly weather.

Feral, when applied to men, suggests savagery or ferocity (the feral instincts of men). Her wrath, savage and feral, utterly possessed her. She was like a wild animal, cornered and conscious of defeat—S. S. Van Dine.

Ana sensitive, animal, fleshly, *carnal: *coarse, gross, vulgar: stupid, dull, dense, crass: barbarous, savage (see barbarian)

Con humane, humanitarian (see charitable): gentle, mild (see soft): chivalrous, courteous (see civil) brute adj. *brutal, brutish, bestial, beastly, feral brutish *brutal, brute, bestial, beastly, feral

Con *intelligent, alert, quick-witted: responsive, sensitive, impressionable (see sentient) buccaneer *pirate, freebooter, privateer, corsair buck n. *dude, *top, dandy, beau, coxcomb, exquisite buckle vb *flex, crook, bow

Ana *break, crack, snap, burst: bend, twist, *curve bucolic pastoral, *rural, rustic

Ana boorish, loutish, clownish, churlish (see under boor): *natural, simple, naive, ingenuous

Ant urbane

buffet vb *baste, pummel, *beat, pound, belabor, thrash

Ana *strike, smite, hit, slap, slug: batter (see main) bugbear bête noire, *abomination, anathema build vb Build, construct, erect, frame, raise, rear are comparable when they mean to form or fashion a structure or something comparable to a structure. Build strictly implies a fitting together of parts and materials to form something which may be large (as a house, a factory, a church, or a bridge) or small (as a bird's nest, a fence, or a child's toy) but of which the forming must involve some measure or degree of complication in the bringing together of parts and materials build a cathedral build a shack (the robins built their nest in the fork of a tree) build a battle-ship.

When used in reference to something immaterial build (often followed by up) may suggest an analogy between the immaterial thing and an edifice especially by implying an adding of part to part or bit to bit in the attainment of an end build up a man's ego build up a fortune bit by bit build a theory on slight evidence.

Construct comes close to build in its implication of the putting together of the material given or at hand to form something. But it is not quite equivalent, for it stresses not the labor, especially the manual labor, involved but the problem involved in the fitting together of parts.

Construct therefore emphasizes the discovering by the mind of how the parts or the materials should be combined in order to gain the desired end. To build is the work of men who use their hands or by analogy their brains to bring something into being.
to construct is the work of men who use their brains, though sometimes their hands in obedience to their brains, to solve the problem of how a thing should be or is built or made or brought into being; hence construct implies composition or design and may take as its object anything brought into material or immaterial existence by one or the other process (construct a plot) (construct a dam) (the mind of the scientist constructs its own world—Inge) (each constructed and consolidated a realm—Belloe) Construct is also often used as the opposite of destroy without a specific reference to these implications (it is proverbially easier to destroy than to construct—T. S. Eliot) (roughly speaking, we construct when we increase the potential energy of the system in which we are interested, and we destroy when we diminish its potential energy—Russell) Erect basically means to set upright. Although the term may carry this as its essential meaning (erect a flagpole) (the cobra erected itself to strike) it was early applied to high structures and has accordingly come to imply constructing in its most usual sense. The word is often used in place of build without any marked implication of putting together parts and materials (many huge factories erected during the war now stand idle) but it always carries some suggestion of the sense of to set up (as by building or establishing) (erect a statue to his memory) (erect a scaffold) (a very much denser obstruction is in the process of being erected now by literary critics—Day Lewis) Frame approaches construct but in respect to physical structures more specifically applies to the bringing together and joining of parts (as sills, plates, and joists) that define the form of the final structure (a cottage framed of pine and sheathed with cedar) In extended use it throws the stress upon a forming or fashioning to suit a design, an intention, a purpose, or the facts and may be applied to anything so constructed (frame an answer) (frame a hypothesis) (picture him excuses framing—going from her far away—Gilbert) (all those who have framed written constitutions contemplate them as forming the fundamental and paramount law of the nation—John Marshall) (it is in order to overcome these obstacles that the notes and questions in this volume have been framed—Notes and Queries on Anthropology) Raise and rear (see also LIFT) often replace build, especially when the idea of height is emphasized (now after this he built a wall without the city . . . and raised it up a very great height—2 Chron. 33:14) (those arts which were destined to raise our Gothic cathedrals—Coulton) (this tower; it is my own; though it was reared to Beauty—Millay) Ana fabricate, fashion, manufacture (see make): produce, turn out, yield, *bear

build

vb phrase, habit, constitution

Ana form, figure, shape, conformation, configuration: *structure, framework: contour, *outline: style, *fashion

bulge

vb Bulge, jut, stick out, protuberate, protrude, project, overhang, beetle mean to extend outward beyond the usual and normal line. Bulge suggests a swelling out in an excessive or abnormal fashion; it may be used when the impression to be given is that there is an imperfection, a defect, or a cause of strain that explains the swelling (the wall bulged in the center) (above her boots . . . the calves bulged suddenly out—Bennett) (good little Fyne's eyes bulged with solemn horror—Conrad) Jut (often with out) and stick out do not imply abnormality as a rule but construction, formation, or position that permits a thing to extend outside or beyond the flat line of a surface (rocks jutting from the water) (the nun took Father Latour to a window that jutted out and looked up the narrow street—Cather) (one building stuck out from the straight line made by the street) Protuberate, which is currently much less used than the corresponding adjective protuberant and the corresponding noun protuberance, implies a swelling or sticking outward (as in a rounded or angular prominence): it does not differ greatly from bulge, but it often carries less implication of something radically wrong (the point of his elbows markedly protuberated) Protude implies a thrusting forth especially in an unexpected place: it applies especially to something that does not seem to belong or that sticks out obviously (whenever a small tuft of heather . . . protruded itself through the grass . . . and entangled her feet—Hardy) (through the leaves . . . a slender dead stem protruded, and from a twig at its summit depended a broken spider's web—Hudson) (the great rollers piled up on the sandy beach where great boulders protruded here and there—Heiser) In literal use project is more often intransitive, though in extended uses it is chiefly transitive. Intransitively it may mean to jut out or to protrude (the eaves usually project far beyond the roof in semitropical and tropical climates) (this great rimrock, which projected out over the erosions like a granite shelf—Cather) In its transitive use, however, it carries implications of throwing or casting forward both in literal use (project a shadow) (project the colors from a prism upon a wall) and especially in extended use when it refers to thoughts, conceptions, or feelings; thus, one projects not only his ideas or thoughts but his powers (as of imagination or comprehension), as if by throwing them out, so that they reach their goal effectively (one couldn't formulate and express one's ideas and project them into that spate of charming, inconsequent talk, that swept on gaily over anything one said—Rose Macaulay) (all the knowledge we possess . . . is of the past, and the further back we can project our vision, the more comprehensive, the more thorough, the more efficient is that knowledge—Grandgent) Often the idea of extending beyond the usual and normal line gives way to other implications derived especially from psychology, mathematics, and magic, and the word then means simply to externalize or to free oneself from (project one's thoughts) (she projected her own guilt into the other person—Overstreet) Both overhang and beetle imply a jutting out over the support or base: overhang sometimes connotes a threatening position, while beetle often suggests precariousness or ominousness (then lend the eye a terrible aspect . . . let the brow o'erwhelm it as fearfully as doth a gallled rock o'erhang and jutty his confounded base—Shak. (an overhanging roof) <bulling brows> (the dreadful summit of the cliff that beetles o'er his base—Shak) (an isolated hill that beetled over the western edge of the ridge—Cather) *Anapl, antonym; *Distinct; *Expand bulge n protuberance, *projection, protrusion

Con cavity, hollow, *hole, pocket bulk n Bulk, mass, volume mean a body of usually material substance that constitutes a thing or unit. Bulk is applied mainly to what is or appears to be inordinately large or heavy (the bulk of ancient minister—Wordsworth) and often more or less shapeless or unshapely (on the living sea rolls an inanimate bulk—Shelley)  (Dr. Lanskell sank his gouty bulk into the armchair behind his desk—Wharton)

Mass is applied mainly to something, whether material or immaterial, that is or gives the appearance of being built up by the piling or gathering together of things of the same kind so that they cohere and have a real or apparent unity (the towering mass of the Sierras) <pieces of obsolete science, imprisoned ... in the solid mass of a religious creed—Inge> (the mass of people) never comes up to the standard of its best member, but on the contrary degrades itself to a level with the lowest—Thoreau> Volume usually applies to something that flows and is therefore without outline and often continuous in extent (a tremendous volume of water) (a volume of gas poured into the room) <it [the voice] rose through a tremendous volume>

Mass is applied mainly to something, whether material or immaterial, that is or gives the appearance of being built up by the piling or gathering together of things of the same kind so that they cohere and have a real or apparent unity (the towering mass of the Sierras) <pieces of obsolete science, imprisoned ... in the solid mass of a religious creed—Inge> (the mass of people) never comes up to the standard of its best member, but on the contrary degrades itself to a level with the lowest—Thoreau> Volume usually applies to something that flows and is therefore without outline and often continuous in extent (a tremendous volume of water) (a volume of gas poured into the room) <it [the voice] rose through a tremendous volume>
bunkin

Victor Emmanuel clashed sharply, and on these occasions it was usually the King who won—Times Lit. Sup. 〈when the new demands of our changing economic life clash with the old dogmas—Cohen〉 Collide denotes a more or less direct running together or against with a definite and often destructive force or shock 〈the tanker sank after it collided with the freighter〉 or it may indicate a forceful direct disagreement or opposition 〈an English East India Company was using the Portuguese route around Africa and colliding with the Portuguese in India—Barr〉 Conflict is archaic in senses involving physical contact and is used to convey the notion of variance, incompatibility, or opposition 〈conflicting testimony by two witnesses〉 〈to stand up amid conflicting interests—Wordsworth〉

An hit, *strike, smite: impinge, jolt, jar (see corresponding nouns in Impact)

bumpkin hitch, yokel, rube, clodhopper, clown, lout, boor, churl

bunch 1 *group, cluster, parcel, lot

An see those at bunch 2

2 bundle, bale, parcel, pack, package, packet 〈bundle, collection, assemblage, gathering (see under gather); quantity, number, aggregate (see sum)

bundle 〈bundle, bunch, bale, parcel, pack, package, packet denote things done up for storage, sale, or carriage. A bundle is a collection of articles bound or rolled together 〈a bundle of papers〉 〈a bunch for the laundry〉 〈a bundle of old clothes〉 A bunch is a collection of things, usually of the same sort, fastened closely together in an orderly fashion 〈a bunch of violets〉 〈a bunch of radishes〉 A bale is a large bundle of goods bound up for storage or transportation and especially one composed of materials (as rags, hay, straw, cotton, or wool) which are closely pressed together so as to form a mass, usually rectangular, tightly bound with stout cord or wire, and often wrapped in paper or burlap. Because there is in various localities a uniform size for a bale of a certain commodity, the word often also implies an average or approximate weight 〈a United States bale of cotton weighs approximately 500 pounds〉 〈Parcel (see also part) implies a state of being wrapped and tied and a small or moderate size, and it carries no suggestion of the number or kind of things so wrapped and tied 〈a shopping bag for parcels〉 〈loaded down with parcels〉 〈send parcels through the mail〉 〈Pack implies more careful and more compact arrangement than bundle; specifically it denotes a conveniently packed bundle of goods or supplies that is carried on the back (as by a peddler, a soldier on the march, or a mule). A package is specifically something packed (as in a box or receptacle of moderate size or in a compact bundle) especially for convenience in sale or transportation 〈an express package〉 〈a package of envelopes〉 〈candy in the original package〉 〈pack goods〉 It may also be applied to a group of intangibles (as contracted services or performances) forming, offered, or dealt with as a unit 〈sell them a . . . complete package (lot, house, equipment and financing in a single transaction)—Guthrie〉 〈a series of treaties and agreements forming a single package—Fay〉 〈A packet is a small package or parcel (a packet of letters or dispatches) 〈An* collection, assemblage, gathering (see under gather)〉

bungle 〈vb botch, fumble, muff, cobble 〈An* confuse, muddle, addle, befuddle: confuse, confound, confine, *mustache: *disorder, disarrange, disorganize, de- range: *entangle, enmesh 〈bunk 〈n *nonsense, twaddle, drivel, balderdash,-poppycock, gobbledygook, trash, rot, bull

buoyant volatile, expansive, resilient, effervescent, *elastic

Ant depressed, dejected —Con doleful, lugubrious, *melancholy: *sullen, morose, glum, dour: *despondent, despairing, hopeless, forlorn

burden 〈n *load, cargo, freight, lading

burden vb *Burden, encumber, cumber, weigh, weight, load, lade, tax, charge, saddle are comparable when they mean to lay a heavy load upon or to lie like a heavy load upon a person or thing. Burden implies the imposition or the carrying of a load that makes one conscious of its weight and that is therefore regarded as grievous, trying, or oppressive. The term often suggests something that is or seems to be too much to be borne by the mind or spirit (burdened with too many responsibilities) 〈exorbitant taxes that burden the workingman〉 〈but this murder—was it to dog him all his life? Was he always to be burdened by his past?—Wilde〉 〈when the aesthetic sense deviates from its proper ends to burden itself with moral intentions . . . it ceases to realize morality—Ellis〉 Encumber specifically suggests the presence of something that impedes, obstructs, hampers, or embarrasses. Even when the term connotes too great a weight, it stresses the fact that the weight is an annoyance or a clog to one’s progress 〈he must be encumbered by mountains of luggage〉 Consequently it is oftener used of things than of persons (the father had left his inheritance encumbered—Bello) 〈the vast quantity of mere survivals (customs and beliefs) which encumber modern life—Inge〉 〈awaiting release from the . . . encumbering bulk of gross matter—Montague〉 Cumber is close to encumber but it is less likely to stress motion and more likely to stress what perplexes, worries, discommodes, or inconveniences (he cumbmers himself never about consequences, about interests: he gives an independent, genuine verdict—Emerson) 〈such an enterprise might well have seemed to him beyond the power of Rome, cumbred already with so many duties—Buchan〉 Weight suggests a load of something (as sorrow, fears, or anxiety) that lies upon the heart, the spirit, or the mind so that it oppresses or depresses it 〈canst thou not . . . with some sweet oblivious antidote cleanse the stuffed bosom of that perilous stuff which weighs upon the heart—Shak.〉 〈mortality weighs heavily on me like unwilling sleep—Keats〉 Weight differs from *weigh in suggesting not a load that oppresses or depresses the heart, mind, or spirit but one that serves as a handicap in a struggle or a disadvantage to be met: the term may be so used that the handicap or disadvantage either may be thought of as residing in the person or thing considered or in the person or thing set against it 〈weighted as he was with faults . . . he fought his battle bravely—Froude〉 〈it wants to have a House of Commons which is not weighted with nominees of the landed class—George Eliot〉 Load and lade carry an implication of overloading but may imply an overabundance that is agreeable as well as one that entails a burden or impresses one as a superfluity (a store loaded with merchandise of every sort) 〈load human life with frustration and grief—Cort〉 〈load one with reproaches〉 (the butler entered with a laden tea tray—Wilde) 〈come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden—Matt 11:28> Tax in its relevant sense means to place an exacting burden or demand upon: it suggests something that strains one to the uttermost 〈it may tax the highest wisdom of the race to preserve civilization at all—F. N. Robinson〉 〈the war severely taxed the resources of the country〉 Charge basically means to load a thing up to its burden

*substance, purport, gist, core, pith

*oppressive, *onerous, exacting thief, robber (see under THEFT)

burglar

vb

Burn, scorch, char, sear, singe mean to injure by husky, *muscular, brawny, athletic, sinewy burlesque

n

burglary

*rob, plunder, rifle, loot burglarize

vb

oppress, *depress, weigh: *crush, mash

Con

lighten, alleviate, mitigate, *relieve: *moderate, temper

burden

n

*substance, purport, gist, core, pith

*subject, matter, subject matter, theme, text, topic burdensome

oppressive, *onerous, exacting

*heavy, ponderous, cumbersome, cumbrous, weighty: *irksome, wearisome: fatiguing, exhausting, flagging, tiring (see TIRE): arduous, *hard, difficult

Ant

light —Con

*easy, facile, simple, smooth, effortless

burglar

thief, robber (see under THEFT)

stealer, pilferer, filcher, purloiner (see corresponding Ana

Ana

—Con

Ant

analogous words

Con

contrasted words

See also explanatory notes facing page
toral and labor are involved. The term may be used generally to include all activities covered by this definition (automation is rapidly revolutionizing industry) It may also be used more narrowly of any branch of industry as determined by the thing produced (the sugar industry comprises all business organizations engaged in the processing and refining of sugar) (the steel industry) (the automobile industry) Traffic (see also INTERCOURSE) applies to the activities of those who are engaged in the operation of public carriers (as ships, railroads, bus lines, and systems of trucking) and who are therefore primarily responsible for the transportation not only of commodities and articles of manufacture but also of persons from one part of a country or of the world to another (the traffic interests were also represented at the conference).

bust vb break, crack, burst, snap, shatter, shiver

Ana see those at BURST

bustle n flurry, *stir, ado, fuss, pother bustle *busy, industrious, diligent, assiduous, sedulous flurry, *stir, ado, fuss, pother bustle

break, crack, burst, snap, shatter, shiver bust

buy, purchase mean to acquire something for money or an equivalent. Buy is at once the more general and the homelier word; consequently, while it may be freely used of any such transaction, it is distinctly the word of choice in respect to small, casual, or day-to-day exchanges of money for goods. Purchase, on the other hand, frequently implies a transaction of some dignity or importance and negotiations or other efforts to obtain it. Thus, one buys (rather than purchases) a dozen eggs, a glass of beer, or a new hat, but one purchases (or buys) a yacht or a country estate (peace, how oft, how dearly bought—Pope) (thou hast thought that the gift of God may be purchased with money—Acts 8:20) Whereas buy may almost always be substituted for purchase without disadvantage, the use of purchase instead of buy often weakens the effect or strikes a jarring note.

Ana obtain, acquire, procure, *get: *pay, compensate, remunerate by, through, with are comparable as prepositions followed by a word or phrase naming the agent, means, or instrument. By is followed commonly by the agent or causative agency (a wall built by the Romans) (a novel by Scott) (destroyed by fire) (devoured by wolves) (blessed by a priest) (inflamed by the jibes of officers) (impressed by the evidence) Through implies intermediacy; it is followed by the name of the person or thing that serves as the medium or the means by which an end is gained or an effect produced (speak through an interpreter) (procure a rare book through a friend) (express ideas through words) (acquire a position through influence) (an opportunity lost through indecision) With, on the other hand, is often followed by the name of the instrument which accompanies the action (write with a pen) (eat with a fork) (defend oneself with a stick) It may, however, take for its object something not consciously used as an instrument but serving as the instrumentality by which an effect is produced (he amused the crowd with his anecdotes) (do not kill us with kindness)

bystander onlooker, looker-on, witness, eyewitness, *spectator, observer, beholder

byword *catchword, shibboleth, slogan

Ana proverb, *saying, saw, motto: *abuse, invective: legend, caption (see INSCRIPTION) cad, bounder, rotter mean one who shows himself to be no gentleman. Usually they are somewhat vague terms of contempt for bad behavior or manners. Cad is applied especially to a man who violates in some way or another the code of morals or of manners by which he has been brought up and is supposed to be guided. (Napoleon III—in whom the cad, the coward, the idealist, and the sensualist were exposed, exhibit, display, *show: unearth, *discover con expose, exhibit, display, *show: unearth, *discover cad, bounder, rotter mean one who shows himself to be no gentleman. Usually they are somewhat vague terms of contempt for bad behavior or manners. Cad is applied especially to a man who violates in some way or another the code of morals or of manners by which he has been brought up and is supposed to be guided. (Napoleon III—in whom the cad, the coward, the idealist, and the sensualist were exposed, exhibit, display, *show: unearth, *discover secrete, bury, *hide, conceal, ensconce, screen vb *harden, solidify, indurate, petrify cajole wheedle, blandish, *coax calamity

calamitous

calculate, compute, estimate, reckon mean to determine something (as cost, speed, or quantity) by mathematical and especially arithmetical processes. Calculate is usually preferred when highly advanced, intricate, or elaborate processes are followed with precision and care and when the result arrived at is not readily proven by a physical confirmation (as by measuring or enumerating) <calculate the distance between the sun and the earth> (calculate the number of atoms in a cubic centimeter of hydrogen) Compute is preferred where the data are given or the actual figures involved are known and at hand and not arrived at indirectly; it therefore commonly implies the use of simple though often lengthy arithmetical processes (compute the interest due) (compute the cost of running a business during a given year) Estimate carries so strong an implication from its more common sense (see ESTIMATE) of an evaluation based on one's experience and good judgment that even when it implies careful calculation or computation it still connotes a result that is not necessarily exact but approximates the exact result; for he who estimates deals with data or figures that are to some extent unsatisfactory. Hence estimate is preferred to calculate and compute when the cost of a piece of work to be done is computed at present prices (a contractor's bid on a projected building is based on its estimated cost to him) (a printer estimates a printing job when he names the price he will probably ask for doing it) Reckon is used in place of compute and usually connotes simpler mathematical processes especially such as can be carried on in one's head or aided by the use of counters (reckon the cost of a trip to the city) (reckon the number of eggs laid by the hens during the month) Ana weigh, study, *consider: ponder, ruminate: determine, ascertain, *discover

Con guess, *conjecture, surmise calculating circumspect, *cautious, wary, chary

Ana *deliberate, designed, considered, studied, premeditated: designing, scheming, plotting (see corresponding verbs under PLAN n): wily, guileful, crafty, artful, cunning, *sly

Ant reckless, rash —Con foolhardy, daring, venturesome, *adventurous: imprudent, imprudent, indiscreet (see affirmative adjectives at PRUDENT) calculation circumspection, caution, wariness, cauterity (see under CAUTIOUS)

Ana *prudence, forethought, foresight, providence, discretion: care, concern, solicitude: astuteness, perspicacity, sagacity, shrewdness (see corresponding adjectives at SHREWD)

Ant recklessness, rashness caliber *quality, stature

Ana capability, capacity, *ability: force, *power

call vb *summon, summons, cite, convocate, convene, muster

Ana assemble, *gather, collect: *invite, bid call n *visit, visitation caller *visitor, visitant, guest calling occupation, pursuit, business, *work, employment

Ana profession, *trade, craft, art, handicraft callous *hardened, indurated

Ana tough, tenacious, stout, strong: *firm, solid, hard: *inflexible, adamant, obdurate, inexorable: insensitive, impassible, *insensible, anesthetic

Ant tender —Con *soft, lenient, gentle, smooth: yielding, submitting, relenting (see YIELD): compassionate, responsive, sympathetic (see TENDER): sensitive, susceptible, open, exposed, subject, *liable callow green, crude, raw, *rude, rough, uncouth

_An_ puerile, boyish, juvenile, *youthful: naïve, ingenuous, simple, unsophisticated, artless, *natural: adolescent, pubescent (see corresponding nouns at YOUTH)

Ant full-fledged, grown-up — _Con_ *mature, adult, matured calm _adj_ Calm, tranquil, serene, placid, peaceful, halcyon _mean quiet and free from all that disturbs or excites. Calm is primarily applied to sea or weather, usually conveys an implicit contrast with its opposite, stormy, and suggests freedom, real or assumed, from agitation of whatever sort (as men for ever temp’rate, calm, and wise — Pope) Tranquil implies a more settled composure, a more inherent quiet, than calm with less suggestion of previous agitation overcome (farewell the tranquil mind! farewell content! — Shaks) (a tranquil beauty of Greek sculpture — Fitzgerald) (a tranquil trust in God amid tortures and death too horrible to be related — Motley) Serene suggests a lofty and unclouded tranquillity (regions of mild calm and serene air, above the smoke and stir of this dim spot which men call Earth — Milton) (the serene monotony that so often wears the aspect of happiness — Glasgow)

_Placid_ connotes lack of excitement and suggests an unruffled and equable aspect or temper or even sometimes, in derogatory use, a hint of stupidity (to confirm by placid silences the fact that the wine had been good — Henry James) (the placid common sense of Franklin — J. R. Lowell) (she is as placid as a cow)

_Peaceful_ (see also PACIFIC) implies repose or the attainment of undisturbed tranquility (I am grown peaceful as old age tonight — Browning) (they harried his hitherto peaceful domains — Irving) Halcyon implies an almost magic or golden calmness especially of weather or of spirit (soft blue stone, the color of robins’ eggs, or of the sea on halcyon days of summer — Cather) (the long uproar over the passage of the Reform Bill compared to which the stormiest days of the New Deal were halcyon — Dwight Macdonald)

_An_ *still, quiet, stillly, noiseless: *pacific, peaceful: *impassive, stoic: unruffled, composed, collected, imper turbable, unflappable, *cool

_Ant_ stormy: agitated — _Con_ shaken, rocked, convulsed (see SHAKE): disturbed, perturbed, discomposed, upset (see DISCOMPOSE)

calm _vb_ Calm, compose, quiet, quieten, still, lull, soothe, settle, tranquilize are comparable when they relate to persons and their feelings and moods and mean essentially to bring to an end or relieve from whatever distresses, agitates, or disturbs. Calm implies a previous disordered state and denotes a returning to inner quietude especially as aided by judgment, fortitude, or faith (Christian faith calmed in his soul the fear of change and death — Wordsworth) (her also I with gentle dreams have calmed — Milton) Compose, often reflexive, retains its basic notion of arranging in order, specifically in an order that results in repose; it may heighten suggestions of conscious effort, resolution, and fortitude (my child, if ever you were brave and serviceable in your life . . . you will compose yourself now — Dickens) (a most composed invincible man; in difficulty and distress, knowing no discouragement — Carlyle) Quiet and quieten may connote a temporary external calmness in speech or demeanor rather than lasting inner calm (the most unreasonable of Franklin’s impulses has now been quieted by this most reasonable of marriages — Van Doren) These terms are likely to be used in indicating the effect of actions of persons in authority on others (threats to the physical well-being of the unborn baby can quieten a noisy and uncooperative patient in labor — Lancet) Still is somewhat literary or poetic and stresses the fact of cessation of agitation (flattened, silenced, stilled — Woolf) (a voice stilled by death) It may suggest more peremptory action than the other terms compared and often connotes a return to quietude induced by power, authority, or awe (the debate was stilled by the crash of guns) (it was Mary who stilled the hideous bawling of Peter — H. G. Wells) Lull suggests the somnolence of lullaby, to which it is related (Aiken has lulled the reader with a seductive music and has transported him into the dreamworld of Freudian fantasy — Matthiessen) It may, on the one hand, apply to the gentle easing of an infant into sleep (as by song or rocking) or, on the other hand, imply a sleepy relaxation into repose, com placence, unawareness, or apathy when one should be vigilant (we must not let a year or two of prosperity lull us into a false feeling of security — Truman) Soothe suggests bland, gentle mitigation, assuagement, or solace (cooled their fevered sleep, and soothed them into slum bers full and deep — Keats) (when they [babies] wake screaming and find none to soothe them — Lamb) Settle (see also DECIDE) stresses the subsiding of swirling agitation and implies a stabilizing and easing of a mind or body previously upset (as by emotional excitement, illness, or intoxication) (settled her stomach with peppermint tea) (I’ll read a bit before supper to settle my mind — Turnbul) (I can’t settle my brains, your next news of me will be that I am locked up — Montagu) Tranquillize in general usage stresses the serenity and depth of peace achieved (when contemplation . . . sends deep into the soul its tranquillizing power — Wordsworth) but in recent years it has acquired a more specific though closely related medical application in which it implies a relieving of mental tension and agitation by means of medication (tranquilizers will calm nervous cows for milking . . .) The most hopeful prospect in tranquillizing the animal world lies in the possibility it may change the attitude of some dogs toward postmen — Sacramento Bee

_Ana_ allay, assuage, mitigate, alleviate, *relieve: mollify, placate, appease, *pacify _Ant_ agitate, arouse — _Con_ upset, perturb, disturb, dis quiet, *discompose calumniate defame, slander, asperse, traduce, *malign, vilify, libel

_An_ revile, vituperate (see SCOLD): *decry, derogate, defame, slander. Asperse — _Con_ extol, laud, *praise, acclaim: defend, justify (see MAINTAIN) calumnny slander, *detraction, backbiting, scandal

_An_ aspersion, reflection, *animadversion, stricture: defaming or defamation, maligning, traducing, vilifying or vilification, libeling or libel (see corresponding verbs at MALIGN)

_ANT_ eulogize: vindicate — _Con_ extol, laud, *praise, acclaim: defend, justify (see MAINTAIN) camouflage *disguise, cloak, mask, disguise can _vb_ Can, may are often confused in use. In its commonest sense can expresses ability, whether physical or mental (he can climb this pole) (he is only four, but he can read) (he will do it if he possibly can) (when Duty whispers low, thou must, the youth replies, I can — Emerson) But can may imply ability that is granted (as by the will of the people or one in authority) (the law does all that is needed when it does all that it can — Justice Holmes) May fundamentally expresses not ability but possibility (he may go if the day is pleasant) (you may be right): When the possibility depends for its fulfillment on the permission or sanction of another, may is the usual term (I shall call tomorrow if I may) (you may go, if you wish> (may we take your coach to town?—Thackeray> The use of can for may in asking or granting permission is widespread.

canal *channel, conduit, duct, aqueduct cancel efface, obliterate, expunge, delete, *erase, blot out Ana invalidate, annul, *nullify: void, *annul, abrogate: *deface, disfigure: *neutralize, counteract, negative Con confirm, *ratify: *enforce, implement cancer *tumor, neoplasm, malignancy candid open, *frank, plain Ana truthful, veracious (see corresponding nouns at TRUTH): *fair, dispassionate, impartial, unbiased, just: *sincere: honest, scrupulous, *upright Ant evasive —Con *dishonest, deceitful, lying, mendacious, untruthful candidate, aspirant, nominee, applicant denote one who seeks an office, honor, position, or award. Candidate is applied not only to a seeker but to one who is put forward by others or is considered as a possibility by those whose function it is to make a choice. It implies therefore an examination of qualifications and is applicable wherever selection is dependent upon others’ judgment of one’s fitness (the Republican candidate for governor) (candidates for the degree of doctor of philosophy) (candidates for life orders) Since the word often implies previous training or grooming for a position or honor, it is sometimes used more widely of a person whose career is such that he seems headed for a certain place or end (a grafter is a candidate for prison) Aspirant definitely implies that one seeks an office, honor, post, or promotion because of one’s own desire or decision; it therefore often connotes ambition or laudable efforts to improve one’s state or condition (the preliminary physical examination was so rigid that twelve aspirants were promptly ruled out—Heiser) (in consequence of the resignations . . . the way to greatness was left clear to a new set of aspirants—Macaulay) Nominee is applied to a candidate for office who has been chosen to represent a party or a faction in a coming election or who has been proposed as the appropriate person to fill a particular office (the president’s nominee to the post was approved by the Senate) Applicant is applied to one who definitely or formally submits himself as a possibility for a post or position. It is often used interchangeably with candidate when personal solicitation is implied in the latter, but unlike candidate, it conveys no suggestion of consideration by those who make the selection (weed out applicants without experience) (there are plenty of unemployed seamstresses and laborers starving for a job, each of them trying to induce you to give it to her or him rather than to the next applicant—Shaw) canon *law, precept, regulation, rule, statute, ordinance Ana *principle, fundamental, axiom: criterion, *standard, yardstick, touchstone, gauge cant n 1 jargon, argot, *dialect, lingo, vernacular, slang, patois Ana phraseology, vocabulary, diction, *language: idiom, speech (see LANGUAGE) 2 *hypocrisy, sanctimony, pharisiasm canting hypocritical, sanctimonious, pharisaical (see under HYPOCRISY) capability *ability, capacity
Ana competence, qualification or qualifications (see corresponding adjectives at ABLE): proficiency, adeptness, expertise, skillfulness (see corresponding adjectives at PROFICIENT): *art, skill, cunning Ant incapability, incompetence —Con *inability, disability capable competent, qualified, *able

Ana analogous words  Ant antonyms  Con contrasted words  See also explanatory notes facing page 1
dealing perfect justice to his son he was doing all that was possible—Meredith> Vagary suggests still more strongly the erratic, extravagant, or irresponsible character of the notion or fancy <straight they changed their minds, flew off, and into strange vagaries fell—Milton>  Crotchet implies even more perversity of temper or more indifferently to right reason than vagary; it often is applied to a capriciously heretical opinion on some frequently unimportant or trivial point <the impracticable crotchets you are fond of airing are not recognized in England as sane political convictions—Shaw> <this political view may now seem to have been the crotchet of a particular set of historical scholars—Dewey>

Ana humor, *mood, temper, vein: notion, *idea: impulse (see MOTIVE): irrationality, unreasonableableness (see corresponding adjectives at IRRATIONAL): perverseness, contrariness (see corresponding adjectives at CONTRARY)

Con intent, purpose, *intention, design: project, scheme, *plan: deciding or decision, determining or determination, resolving or resolution (see corresponding verbs at DECIDE) capricious mercurial, unstable, *inconstant, fickle

Ana *changeable, changeful, protean, variable: moody, humorose (see corresponding nouns at MOOD): volatilé, effervescent (see ELASTIC)

Ant steadfast —Con constant, resolute, staunch, loyal, *faithful: *steady, constant capsize vb upset, *overturn, overthrow, subvert caption *inscription, legend captious caviling, carping, *critical, hypercritical, faultfinding, censorious

Ana *contrary, perverse: exacting, demanding (see CONTRARY) —Con reasonable: judicious, *wise, sensible captivate fascinate, bewitch, enchant, charm, allure, *attract

Ana delight, *please, gratify: win, gain (see GET)

Ant repulse captivating fascinating, bewitching, enchanting, charming, alluring, attractive (see under ATTRACT)

Ana pleasing, *pleasant, agreeable, grateful: *delightful, delectable: lovely, bonny, fair, *beautiful

Ant repellent, *repugnant, distasteful, obnoxious: *offensive, loathsome, revolting captive n *prisoner capture vb *catch, trap, snare, entrap, ensnare, bag

Ana seize, *take, grasp, clutch, snatch: *arrest, apprehend

Con release, *free, liberate: surrender, yield, *relinquish carbonate vb *aerate, ventilate, oxygenate

Ant decarbonate

carbon copy copy, duplicate, transcript, *reproduction, facsimile, replica carbuncle *abscess, boil, furuncle, pimple, pustule carcass corpse, cadaver, *body cardinal adj vital, *essential, fundamental

Ana requisite, necessary, indispensant, *needful: radical, *fundamental: basic: capital, principal, *chief, main, leading: important, significant, momentous (see corresponding nouns at IMPORTANCE)

Ant negligible

care n Care, concern, solicitude, anxiety, worry are comparable when meaning either a state of mind in which one is engrossed and troubled by something pertinent to oneself or another, or the pertinent thing that engrosses and troubles one. The same distinctions in implications and connotations are evident in their corresponding adjectives (careful, concerned, solicitous, anxious, worried) when they mean engrossed and troubled by a particular matter. Care and careful (which is archaic in this sense; see also CAREFUL 2) imply preoccupation and oppression of mind because of heavy responsibilities or disquieting fears or apprehensions <the king . . . most sovereign slave of care—Thoreau> <her face was worn with care> <she was free . . . to go where she liked and do what she liked. She had no responsibilities, no cares—Bennett> <be careful for nothing; but in every thing . . . let your requests be made known unto God—Phil 4:6> Concern and concerned stress absence of indifference, but they also imply a degree of care because of one's interest, affection, respect, or responsibility <his child's future was his greatest concern> <an adult who falls on the street is the object of concern and commiseration—Repplier> <it was quite characteristic of the state of mind of England in the summer of 1914 that Mr. Britting should be mightily concerned about the conflict in Ireland, and almost deliberately negligent of the possibility of a war with Germany—H. G. Wells> Solicitude and solicitous imply profound concern; sometimes they connote extreme apprehensiveness, but more often they suggest thoughtfulness for another's welfare, well-being, or success and sometimes an almost heroic fortitude in another's misfortune (they . . . tended the wounded man with the gentlest solicitude—Dickens> <with motherly solicitude, he insisted that Tom get to his feet—Anderson> <they . . . were as solicitous to see it through for me as though I had been an only child among a lot of maiden aunts—Mary Austin> The last two pairs of words in this group imply far more agitation and depression than the first three. Anxiety and anxious stress the anguish of fear coupled with uncertainty or the anticipation of impending failure, misfortune, or disaster <poor Miss Maria! she was anxious, no doubt . . . over money matters. Ladies ought not to have such anxieties—Delaun> <the child's inner life is often a turmoil of terrors and anxieties of which his parents know almost nothing—Inge> Worry and worried usually suggest more mental activity, often futile, than anxiety and anxious or more fretting or stewing over problems or situations or persons that are a cause of solicitude or anxiety <because the list of her worries is too long, it is difficult to feel as sorry for her as one ought—Moorehead> <the high command . . . had begun to wrinkle their brows. They were perplexed, vexed and worried—Pyle> <worried . . . by the need for keeping up their social positions—Shaw>

Ana trouble, pains, *effort, exertion: disquieting or disquiet, perturbing or perturbation, discomposing or discompose (see corresponding verbs at DISCOMPOSE): vigilance, watchfulness, alertness (see corresponding adjectives at WATCHFUL) careful 1 solicitous, anxious, worried, concerned (see under CARE n)

Ana disquieted, perturbed, discomposed, disturbed, upset (see DISCOMPOSE): troubled, distressed (see TROUBLE vb): *watchful, vigilant, alert

2 Careful, meticulous, scrupulous, punctilious, punctual are comparable in their basic sense of showing or revealing close close attention to details or care in execution or performance. Careful implies great concern for the persons or things in one's charge or for the way in which one's duties or tasks are performed. With regard to the former, the term implies solicitude or watchfulness (a careful mother) (a careful nurse) (a careful spender of money) and with regard to the latter, it usually implies painstaking efforts, thoroughness, cautiousness in avoiding errors, and a careless examination by the doctor) (a careful mapping out of the plan of battle) All of the other words mean exceedingly careful, but they vary in their implications of the motives which inspire such carefulness and, to a less extent, in regard to the objects of attention. Meticulous usually suggests timorousness lest one make the slightest error or fall short of a high standard; in addition, it implies extreme fussiness or fastidiousness in attention to details (Mr. Prufrock . . . like most converts, meticulous over points of ritual—Day Lewis) (the meticulous care with which the operation in Sicily was planned has paid dividends. For our casualties . . . have been low—Roosevelt) (there were men who ploughed clumsily . . . leaving banks of land untouched . . . but Hendrik was not one of these, his work was meticulous—Cloete) Scrupulous (see also upright) implies the promptings of conscience, not only of one’s moral conscience but of one’s sense of what is right and wrong (as in fact, in logic, or in aesthetics); it therefore also implies strict or painstaking adherence to what one knows to be true, correct, or exact (scrupulous fairness of statement) (scrupulous observance of details—Bradley, like Aristotle, is distinguished by his scrupulous respect for words, that their meaning should be neither vague nor exaggerated—T. S. Eliot) Punctilious, on the other hand, implies knowledge of the fine points (as of law, etiquette, ceremony, or morality) and usually connotes excessive or obvious attention to the details or minutiae of these (I am sorry . . . to see you so punctilious as to stand upon answers, and never to come near me till I have regularly left my name at your door—Gray) (the punctilious gods who judged them according to the principles laid down in some celestial Book of Etiquette—Krutch) Punctual may occasionally come close to punctilious in its stress on attention to the fine points of a law or code, but in such use the term carries a much stronger implication than punctilious of emphasis on their observance and a weaker implication of concentration upon the minutiae (we are not altogether so punctual as the French, in observing the laws of comedy—Dryden) (his punctual discharge of his duties—Froude) More usually the term implies near perfection in one’s adherence to appointed times for engagements or in following a schedule and then means punctuarily prompt (I made Mr. Middleditch punctual before he died, though when he married me he was known far and wide . . . to see, observe, take note of, or remark rather than laziness or negligence; the term often also connotes light-mindedness, frivolousness, or flightiness (heaps of flies . . . fell dead . . . their decease made no impression on the other flies out promenading. . . . Curious to consider how heedless flies are!—Dickens) (discreetly heedless, thanks to her long association with nobleness in art, to the leaps and bounds of fashion—Henry James) Thoughtless may emphasize lack of reflection or of forethought (thoughtless of tomorrow and God—Guthrie) More frequently it suggests lack of thoughtfulness or consideration for others (now and then, however, he is horribly thoughtless, and seems to take a real delight in giving me pain—Wilde) Inada1dent usually implies heedlessness; the term is rarely applied to persons or their minds but is used in qualifying their acts and especially such of their withakes, errors, or blunders as ensue from heedlessness or inadvertence resulting from concentration on other things rather than from ignorance or intention (an inadvertent wakening of a person who is asleep) (an inadvertent error in spelling or in pronunciation) (they are in a bad fix . . . and sometimes with an inadvertent child or two to support—Rand) Ana *negligent, neglectful, lax, slack, remiss: casual, desultory, haphazard, *random, hit-or-miss, happy-go-lucky) Ant careful—Con meticulous, scrupulous, punctilious, punctual (see careful) Accurate, precise, exact, nice (see correct) Caress vb Caress, fondle, pet, cosset, cuddle, dandle mean to show affection or love by touching or handling. Caress implies an expression of tender interest (as by soft stroking or patting) or of affection ordinarily without undue familiarity (soothing with a touch the wild thing’s fright . . . caressed it into peace with light, kind palms—Arnold) (the little Isaac . . . leans . . . against his father’s knee . . . while Abraham’s left hand quiets him and caresses the boy’s face—Henry Adams) Fondle implies doting fondness and frequently lack of dignity; it usually suggests attentions (as hugging or kissing) more obvious and less gentle than caressing (fondle a baby) (all that he was good for, she said, was to fondle and fumble and kiss—Graves) (dwarf trees that had to be fondled and humored—Brooks) Pet, sometimes, and cosset imply special attentions and indulgences including more or less fondling (the petted child of the family) (died . . . in the newest and largest of hospitals petted by all her nurses—Jarrell) (soothed and cosseted by his aunt—Cather) In recent use pet more often stresses flirtatious or amorous fondling and sometimes suggests undue familiarity (a petting party) Cuddle chiefly suggests the action of a mother or nurse in drawing a child close to her breast to keep it warm, happy, and quiet (little boys . . . who have kind mammals to cuddle them—Kingsley) The term may be extended to other attentions which imply a desire to protect and keep warm and comforted (The Temple seems . . . to have been coaxed, and warmed, and cuddled by the people round about him—Thackeray) We might cuddle up to the world in a comfortable attitude—Langer) Dandle suggests playful handling of a child (as by moving him up and down lightly on one’s knee) (the mother cuddles, but the father dandles, their little boy) In its extended use dandle usually implies torying with especially in a playful but pampering manner (editors, scholars, mercaricature, even the noble lords and ladies freted and dandled him—Eastman

Ana *trifle, toy, daily, flirty, coquet: cherish, *nurse careworn, *haggard, pinched, wasted, cadaverous

Ana troubled, distressed (see TROUBLE vb): *lean, gaunt, scrawny, skinny: exhausted, fagged, jaded, tuckered

(see TIRE vb)

Ant carefree cargo burden, *load, freight, lading caricature * Caricature, burlesque, parody, travesty are comparable as nouns meaning a grotesque or bizarre imitation of something and as verbs meaning to make such an imitation. Caricature implies ludicrous exaggeration or distortion (often pictorial) of characteristic or peculiar features (as of a person, a group, or a people) for the sake of satire or ridicule *cartoonists who caricature prominent politicians * that propensity to caricature which tempts clever writers . . . to transform into objects of derision the venerated Great—L. P. Smith

* his portrait of Addisson, for example . . . depends upon . . . the apparent determination not to exaggerate. The genius of Pope is not for caricature—T. S. Eliot

Burlesque implies mimicry (especially of words or actions in the theater) that arouses laughter. The term usually also suggests distortion (as by treating a trilling subject in mock-heroic vein or by giving to a serious subject a frivolous (or laughable turn) for the sake of the comic effect *in Don Quixote Cer-vantes burlesques the old romances of chivalry

Burlesque is . . . of two kinds: the first represents mean persons in the accouterments of heroes; the other describes great persons acting and speaking like the basest among the people—Spectator

Parody basically denotes a writing in which the language and style of an author or work are closely imitated for comic effect or in ridicule

Parody may be regarded as an unique combination of both creative and cognitive criticism. At its best, it is creative because it is genuine self-expression through imitation of another’s self-expression. It debunks aesthetic illusion by means of a mock-aesthetic illusion of its own—J. L. Davis

Parody, like caricature, may involve exaggeration or, like burlesque, distortion but ordinarily is more subtle and sustained than the first and quieter and less boisterous than the second *burlesque or parody may be aimed at the most august object, but surely it must imply an understanding of that object—Bentley

Bentley (one of the richest sources of their humor lies in their ability to parody the most solemn efforts of radio and television as these media attempt the dramatic slush known as soap operas—G. S. Perry

In extended use parody may apply, often with more than a hint of bitterness or disgust, to a feeble or inappropriate imitation *his art had become parody, his body a gutted edifice—there was nothing left but to drink in the company of friends and to hope to die with dignity—Conway

Wogow or to a poor inadequate substitute *subsidized football results in some quite parodies of education—Eaton

* the mechanically produced parodies of period designs hitherto offered by the furniture trade—Gloag

Travesty is usually a harsher word than others of this group; it implies a palpably extravagant and often debased or grotesque imitation and more often and more intensely than parody suggests repulsion *it should never be the object of a satirist to make a travesty of a genuine work of art—Kitchell

* facetious explanations of the fall of Rome are a travesty of the facts—Benedit

* later examples of the Greek revival travestied the classic style rather than copied it—Amer. Guide Series: Mass.

Ana satire, humor, sarcasm (see WIT): grotesqueness, fantastically, bizarrezza (see corresponding adjectives at FANTASTIC): lampoon, *libel, skit, squib, pasquinade

Caricature * burlesque, parody, travesty (see under CARICATURE n)

Ana mimic, mock, ape, imitate, *copy: distort, *deform: simulate, counterfeit (see ASSUME): *ridicule, deride carnage * slaughter, butchery, *massacre, pogrom carnal, fleshly, sensual, animal are comparable when they are used in reference to human beings, their acts, works, desires, and interests and mean having or showing a physical rather than an intellectual or spiritual character or origin. Both carnal and fleshly imply a connection with the body or flesh especially when thought of as distinct from the spirit. Carnal need not in itself imply condemnation *armed against ghostly as well as carnal attack—Stoker

Often it is a purely descriptive or classificatory term *a . . . flier with a lyrical gift for conveying the carnal élan of men fighting, was the first writer ever to treat air combat in epic style—Flannery but through its frequent opposition to the spiritual it has come to suggest not merely man’s bodily but his lower nature and appetites *the superiority of the spiritual and eternal over the carnal and temporal had to be vindicated—H. O. Taylor

Medieval Christianity tended to restore the conviction that sex, being carnal and not spiritual, is low, lascivious, and wicked—Garvin and ultimately to be applied more or less specifically and usually derogatorily to the sexual and the lustful as the most bodily of appetites and the most antithetical to the spiritual nature *to make herself a carnal object, the prey of another, is in contradiction to her self-worship: it seems to her that embraces blight and sully her body or degrade her soul—Parshley

* he has also three partner antagonists: his wife Lucy and his two mistresses, one a carnal affair, the other "idealistic"—Bentley

* who more carnal than a recent virgin—Steinbeck

* had an instant succès du scandale. It titilated the prurient with the frankness of its carnal detail—S. H. Adams

Fleshly, though it implies a connection with the flesh thought of as man’s lower nature, is often less suggestive of condemnation than carnal *turn to Bernard’s love of God, and rise with him from the carnal and temporal had to be vindicated—Parshley

Sensual implies a connection with sensations, but it further implies an indulgence in bodily sensation for its own sake rather than for an aesthetic end *his feet and hands were always cold and there was for him an almost sensual satisfaction to be had from just lying perfectly still . . . and letting the hot sun beat down on him—Anderson

* Very often the word carries implications of grossness marked by concentration on bodily satisfaction and the absence of intellectual or spiritual qualities *a sloping meaty jaw, and large discolored buckteeth which showed unpleasantly in a mouth . . . always half open . . . that gave his face its decency on bodily satisfaction and the absence of intellectual or spiritual qualities *a sloping meaty jaw, and large discolored buckteeth which showed unpleasantly in a mouth . . . always half open . . . that gave his face its

Ant spiritual: intellectual —Con *moral, ethical, virtuous, noble, righteous: ethereal, aerial (see AIRY): pure, *chaste, modest, decent carol * sing, troll, descant, warble, trill, hymn, chant, intone carping adj cavity, faultfinding, captious, *critical, hypercritical, censorious Ana blaming, reprehending, reproaching, criticizing (see CRITICIZE): upbraiding, jawing, railing (see SCOLD): depreciating or deprecatory, disparaging, decrying (see corresponding verbs at DECRY) Ant fulsome —Con commending or commendatory, applauding, complimenting (see corresponding verbs at COMMEND): praising, lauding, extolling (see PRAISE vb): approving, endorsing (see APPROVE) carry vb Carry, bear, convey, transport, transmit are comparable when they mean to be or to serve as the agent or the means whereby something or someone is moved from one place to another. Carry often implies the use of a cart or carriage or more recently of a train, ship, automobile, or airplane, but it may imply a personal agent or a beast of burden or some natural or artificial passage (as an artery or a pipe) or ship carries heavy cargo) <airplanes carry mail)  <carry news) <please carry the basket to the house) <the arteries carry the blood from the heart to the various parts of the body> Bear stresses the support of the weight of whatever is being moved; in its extended senses, even though actual weight may not be implied, bear is preferred to carry when effort is suggested or the importance or the significance of what is carried is to be connote) <let four captains bear Hamlet, like a soldier, to the stage—Shak.) > over his head was borne a rich canopy—Johnson> then came the envoy's bearing rich gifts) > some bearing good news) Convey is more often used than carry of things that move continuously or in the mass or that pass through natural or artificial channels or mediums an endless belt for conveying dirt from an excavation to the trucks removing it) <freight cars for conveying coal from the mines to the various cities and towns) <pipelines to convey natural gas from one section to another) <language conveys thought) Transport is used in place of carry or convey when the stress is on the movement of persons or goods especially in numbers or bulk and typically over a considerable distance and by a professional carrier (as a railway or steamship line) fast liners were used to transport troops to France) <trucks transporting farm produce to market) <most modern well-to-do Englishmen and Americans, if they were transported by magic into the Age of Elizabeth, would wish themselves back in the modern world—Russell) Transmit emphasizes the causative power in an agent or instrument: it implies either an actual sending by some means of conveyance or transportation (the telegraph company transmit messages to all parts of the world) > the steamship company will transmit your baggage whenever it receives the word) or the power or the property of permitting passage through or from one place to another (glass transmits light) <metals transmit electricity) Ana take, *bring, fetch: > move, remove, shift, transfer: drive, *ride cartel 1 compact, pact, convention, *contract, bargain, concordat, treaty, entente 2 pool, syndicate, corner, *monopoly, trust Ana combine, *combination: *consolidation, merger, amalgamation carve 1 *cut, slit, hew, chop, slash Ana shape, fashion, form (see MAKE): > separate, divide, part 2 Carve, incise, engrave, etch, chisel, sculpture, sculpt, sculp are comparable when they denote to cut an outline or a shape out of or into some substance (as stone, wood, or metal). They are, however, not close synonyms, for few of the terms keep within the limits of this meaning. Carve (see also CUT) suggests working with an instrument (as a knife or a chisel) in order to adorn a surface or to fashion a solid figure; the term may connote an artistic purpose (as representation or decoration) and a method of working involving the cutting of a pattern into a surface (intaglio carving) or the cutting away of parts of the original surface so as to leave a raised design or raised figures upon a new ground (relief carving) or the fashioning of a whole or partial figure by cutting or chipping away excess material (carve an inscription on a tombstone) <the legs of chairs and table were carved with oak leaves) > a figure carved in stone is fine carving when one feels that not the figure, but the stone . . . has come to life—Sweeney) Incise implies cutting into with an instrument (as a knife) that leaves traces; more specifically it implies a cutting into some hard or resistant material so that figures, letters, or devices are marked upon its surface incise an epitaph upon a monument) <the gem had been incised with his coat of arms and was used as his seal) Engrave often implies a cutting into and may be used as an equivalent of incise: in general use, however, it more often implies a cutting (as upon wood, stone, or metal) with a graving tool in order to form an inscription or a pictorial representation that can be printed either from the incised lines, spaces, or points (as in copperplate engraving) or from parts of the surface left in relief (as in wood engraving). The noun engraving denotes a picture printed from a plate or block thus made, but the verb usually emphasizes the work of the one who actually cut the plate or block was asked to engrave a portrait of Daniel Webster) <prints made from an engraved copper plate) Engrave also may be used to connote an indelible impression upon the heart, mind, or memory no stone stands over where he lies. It is on our hearts that his life is engraved—Galsworthy) Etch differs from engrave only in implying that the lines and dots which form a picture are incised not upon the metal but through a hard, acid-resisting surface (as of varnish) covering the metal of a plate and are then eaten into the plate by coating this surface with acid. Chisel, though used widely by workers in stone and wood to suggest the various processes (as of cutting or shaping) that are executed with a chisel, is in general use more often employed to suggest either literally or figuratively the process of carving an image from resistant material; the emphasis in such use is upon the skill of the maker and the artistic quality of the product it was a great artist who chiseled the vital figure of the Winged Victory out of stone) > finely chiseled features) Sculpture and the related sculpt and sculp imply the formation of primarily three-dimensional figures especially in stone or metal. Basically sculpture suggests carving or chiseling out of some hard substance, but all three terms stress the end result over the technique and may be extended to include the making of three-dimensional art forms by such diverse methods as modeling and molding, welding, or construction as well as by the traditional carving and chiseling, and all three, but especially sculpture, may be further extended to processes and results suggesting the work of a sculptor a sculptured bronze head) <because it was God Who had sculptured the mountains . . . while it was men who had bricked the cities and that was why they were sometimes so ugly—Bruce Marshall) > does not so much sing Mozart's phrases as sculpt them, with the sure instincts of a master craftsman—Gelatt) > Brancusi . . . sculps what Plato had in mind by the idea of form—Time)

Ana shape, fashion, form (see MAKE): produce, turn out

Ana analogous words Ant antonyms Con contrasted words See also explanatory notes facing page 1
catalog vb *dismiss, discharge, drop, fire, sack, bounce

Ara *ejert, expel, oust: eliminate, disbar, *exclude, suspend

Con engage (see PROMISE): elect, appoint, *designate, name cast vb 1 *throw, fling, hurl, pitch, toss, sling

Ara *direct, aim, point, level, train, lay; *scatter, disperse

2 *discard, shed, molt, slough, scrap, junk

Ara *relinquish, abandon, yield, surrender, leave: repudiate, reject (see DECLINE): *dismiss, drop

3 figure, foot, *add, sum, total, tot

Ara compute, *calculate, reckon castaway n derelict, *outcast, reprobate, pariah, untouchable castigate vb chastise, *punish, chasten, discipline, correct

Ara *beat, baste, thrash, pillumel, belabor: berate, tongue-lash, rate, upbraid, wig, rail (see SCOLD): *penalize, fine, amerce, mulct castrate 1 *sterilize, spay, emasculate, alter, mutilate, geld, cauponize casual 1 *accidental, incidental, adventitious, contingent, fortuitous

Ara unpremeditated (see EXTemporaneous): *indifferent, unconcerned, incurious: *negligent, slack, lax, remiss: inadvertent, *careless, heedless

Con intentional, *voluntary: premeditated, *deliberate, studied, considered, advised, designed: *careful, meticulous, punctilious, scrupulous

2 desultory, *random, haphazard, chancy, hit-or-miss, happy-go-lucky

Ara offhand, impromptu, improvised, *extemporaneous, extempore: *spontaneous, impulsive: unmethodical, un­ systematic (see affirmative adjectives at ORDERLY)

Ant deliberate —Con formal, conventional, ceremonial (see CEREMONIAL) casualty 1 *accident, mishap

Ara *disaster, calamity, catastrophe, cataclysm: *misfortune, mischance, mishap casualistic sophistical, fallacious (see UNDER FALLACY)

Ara *plausible, specious: tortuous (see WINDING): oblique, devious, *crooked: *misleading, delusive, deceptive, delusory

Con sound, cogent, convincing, *valid casuistry sophistry, sophism, *fallacy cataclysm catastrophe, *disaster, calamity

Ara convulsing or convulsion, rocking, shaking, agitation (see corresponding verbs at SHAKE): revolution (see REBELLION): *misfortune, mischance, mishap catalog n *list, inventory, table, schedule, register, roll, roster catalog vb *record, register, list, enroll

Ara enumerate, number, *count: *enter, admit catastrophe 1 *disaster, calamity, cataclysm

Ara *trial, tribulation, visitation: defeating or defeat, overthrowing or overthrow, routing or rout (see corresponding verbs at CONQUER)

Con *victory, triumph catch vb 1 Catch, capture, trap, snare, entrap, ensnare, bag are comparable when meaning to get into one’s possession or under one’s control either by taking or seizing or by means of skill, craft, or trickery. Catch, the ordinary and general term of this group, distinctively implies that the thing laid hold of has been in flight, in concealment, or in constant movement and that possession has been gained by pursuit, force, strategy, or surprise or by means of a device or accident which brings it within one’s reach physically, visually, or mentally (after several days’ search the detectives caught the murderer) (not able to catch the man who snatched her purse) (catch fish) (catch a ball) (catch a pupil cheating in an examination) (his eyes caught the skirt of her dress—Dickens) (Yancey Cravat caught the word beneath his teeth and spat it back—Ferber) (he smiled back like a child caught in a lie—Steinbeck) Sometimes the power of laying hold of is ascribed not to a person, his vision or other sense, or his mind, heart, or imagination but to the thing which draws to itself his attention, his eye, or his fancy (the fact caught her interest, just as sometimes a point in a wide dull landscape catches the eye—Deland) (two recent imports... offer striking new surprises which may catch unaware even the veteran reader—Anthony Boucher) Catch implies heavier odds (as greater opposition or difficulty or more competition) than does catch and suggests a taking possession that amounts to an overcoming or a victory (catch a stronghold of the enemy) (catch a company of retreating soldiers) (he was making plans... to catch the banking of the country—Bello) (no artist can set out to capture charm; he will toil all the night and take nothing—Benson) Trap, snare, entrap, and ensnare imply catching by a device which holds the one caught in a position that is fraught with danger or difficulty or from which escape is difficult or impossible. Trap and snare imply the use of a trap or snare (see LURE n), but entrap and ensnare suggest trickery in capture more often than the use of an actual trap or snare: all four terms impute craft to the catcher and unwarranted or lack of caution to the one that is caught. Distinctively, trap and entrap suggest a being held in a position where one is at the mercy of the captor and his designs, and snare and ensnare a being held so that the more one struggles the more desperate becomes one’s situation (trap an animal) (snare a bird) (trap a detachment of soldiers with an ambush) (themselves in bloody toils were snared—Scott) (as if he would clear away some entanglement which had ensnared—Steinbeck) Sometimes the power of laying hold of suggests a being physiologically, visually, or mentally (after several days’ imprisonment). Sometimes the power of laying hold of suggests a being physically, visually, or mentally (after several days’ imprisonment) categorize

its philosophy and basic tenets (<"the new deal" became the catchword of supporters and critics of Franklin Roosevelt as "the square deal" was that of the friends and the enemies of Theodore Roosevelt>  <these catchwords which you repeat when people ask you for intelligence—Masefield> Byword sometimes denotes a significant phrase that is repeated far and wide until it has become a proverb (the old byword of necessity being the mother of invention—Kroebel)
The more usual sense is a person or thing that has become proverbial as the type of certain evil, ludicrous, or shameful characteristics and whose name, therefore, has become the object of concentrated scorn or contempt <I had disgraced that name eternally. I had made it a low byword among low people—Wilde> <even those public departments that were bywords for incompetence and red tape were far more efficient than the commercial adventurers who derided them—Shaw> <Emerson . . . was still an impossible puzzle in the popular mind, even a national joke, a byword of the country paragraphers—Brooks> She was the word which, in Judges 12, the Ephra-imites fleeing from the Gileadites could not correctly pronounce when tested, thus giving away their identity to Jephthah as his enemies; it typically applies to a fixed usage (as a word, phrase, or speech sound) whose employment identifies a person as belonging to a particular party, class, profession, ethnic group, or time. The term basically stresses help in placing a person (a child who . . . has not yet learned sufficiently well the phonemic shibboleths, the arbitrary sound-gamuts, which his society insists upon —La Barre> <our listeners type us—stereotype us—according to the impression they gain from our verbal habits . . . every word we speak is a shibboleth—G. A.
Miller> but may also imply the emptiness and triteness of such usage and then approach platitude in meaning <some truth in the shibboleth that crime does not pay—Rogow> Slogan, originally a cry used in battle, has come to mean a phrase that is a shibboleth of the party or group using it <that was in fact the position that the Dadaists took up. "Art is a private matter: the artist does it for himself" was one of their slogans—Day Lewis> It may be a phrase deliberately invented for the sake of attracting attention to a party or group (a slogan . . . is a short mesgage designed to be repeated over and over again, word for word—Kleppner> <traditional schoolbook platitudes and campaign slogans—Frankfurter> it may be an eye-catching or ear-catching bit used as an advertising device (the Heinz "57 Varieties" label . . . provided the company with both a trademark and an advertising slogan—Current Biog.>

Ana caption, legend (see inscription): *phrase, expression, idiom: *commonplace, platitude, truism, bromide, cliché catechize interrogate, quiz, examine, question, *ask, query, inquire categorical 1 *ultimate, absolute

Con hypothetical, conjectural, supposititious (see supposed): conditional, contingent, relative, *dependent 2 express, define, *explicit, specific

Ana positive, certain, *sure: *forthright, downright

Con ambiguous, equivocal, vague, cryptic, enigmatic, *obscure: dubious, *doubtful, questionable, problematic category *class, genus, species, denomination, genre

Ana division, section, *part: classification (see corresponding verb at assort) cater vb Cater, purvey, panderv are comparable when they mean to furnish with what satisfies the appetite or desires.
Cater basically implies the provision of what is needed in the way of food and drink (he that doth the ravens feed, yea, providently caters for the sparrow—Shak.) The term essentially implies provision of food and drink ready for the table (a firm that caters for dinners, weddings, and receptions) In extended use catering often implies the provision of something that appeals to a specific appetite <catering to the national taste and vanity—Thackeray> Often, especially when followed by to, the term implies a certain subserviency (as to popular standards or uncultivated tastes) <too many movies, novels, and comic books do cater to an appetite for violence—Sisk> <cater to the public demand for the sensational> Purvey usually suggests the provision of food but sometimes of such other material necessities as lodgings and clothes. In contrast with cater, however, it suggests service as a source of supply, either as an agent through whom what is wanted may be found or as a merchant who sells the needed articles (merchants who purveyed to the troops during the Seven Years' War) In extended use, especially when followed by for, purvey implies the provision of whatever is needed to satisfy, delight, or indulge (the function of the eye is not merely ministerial; it merely purveys for true ears—Lanier) Purveyor, which basically means to act as a procurer or as a go-between in an illicit amour, in its frequent extended use may imply a purveying of something which will gratify desires and passions that are degrading or base (<pander to depraved appetites) <pander for morbid tendencies> or may connote mere servile trucking (<denounced legislative pandering to special interests—Time> <institutions which pandered to the factory workers . . . —a movie house, a quick-lunch wagon —F. S. Fitzgerald> or even no more than a deferring to or a reasonable indulgence of tastes (<choose a plan to suit your type of land and to pandering to your own particular tastes—Sydney Bulletin>) <such things, as being traditional, may pander to your sense of the great past.

Histrionically, too, they are good—Beerbohm>

Ana *furnish, equip, appoint, accouter: pamper, *indulge, humor: *satisfy, content catholic adj *universal, cosmic, ecumenical, cosmopolitan

Ana *whole, entire, total: all-around, many-sided, *versatile: prevalent, *prevailing, current Parochial: provincial —Con bigoted, fanatic, enthusiastic (see corresponding nouns at enthuasiast) catnap nap, snooze, *sleep, slumber, drowse, doze cause n 1 Cause, determinant, antecedent, reason, occasion are comparable when denoting what in whole or in part produces an effect or result. Cause is applicable to an agent (as a circumstance, condition, event, or force) that contributes to the production of an effect or to any combination (as of circumstances, conditions, or events) that inevitably or necessarily brings about a result (<one of the causes of the French Revolution was the bankruptcy of the government) <every effect must have an adequate cause) <what was the cause of this outbreak?> <water and soil pollution are the root causes of mortality in the tropics—Heiser> Cause is sometimes used of a personal agent whose activities are instrumental in bearing consequences (he is the cause of all our troubles) or of the motive which prompts one to action (he claimed to have just cause for his attack) A determinant is a circumstance, factor, element, quality, or motive that by itself or in combination with other factors conditions or fixes the nature of a result and especially of a product or outcome <environment is an important determinant of character> <the ideals and the character of citizens are the final determinants of their form of government> (<imponderables,> which in philosophy as in politics are the most important factors of experience and determinants of action—Inge> caustic, mordant, acrid, scathing are comparable when meaning prudently attentive to the dangers one may encounter or the risks one may face, or revealing such attentiveness. The same differences in implications and connotations are apparent in the nouns caution, circumspection, wariness, chariness, calculation when they denote the quality of the character or the mental processes of one who is so attentive.

Cautious and caution usually imply both the prompting of fear, especially of failure or of harm to oneself or others, and the exercise of forethought in planning or of prudence in proceeding so that the dangers of failure or the risks of disaster may be avoided or minimized (the troops advanced with great caution) (a cautious investor). For the most part, he generalizes with a sobriety and a caution worthy of the highest praise—Huxley (the old man, cautious in all his movements, always acting as if surrounded by invisible spies, delayed setting out until an hour after dark—Hudson) Circumspect and circumspection frequently imply less fear than cautious and caution; commonly, however, they suggest the exercise of great prudence and discretion, especially in making decisions or in acting, and the surveying of all possible consequences, lest moral, social, business, or political harm may inadvertently occur (in all things that I have said unto you be circumspect—Exod 23:13: they do not live very happy lives, for they even more than the others are restricted in their movements, and they must live the most circumspect of lives—Steinbeck) (the . . . circumspection with which it approaches the consideration of such questions—John Marshall) Wary and wariness usually carry a far stronger suggestion of suspiciousness than cautious and caution and sometimes, as a result, connote less well-grounded fear. Often, also, the terms imply alertness in watching out for difficulties or dangers or cunning in escaping them (they . . . had a wary eye for all gregarious assemblages of people, and turned out of their road to avoid any very excited group of talkers—Dickens) (we must always be wary of those who with sounding brass and a tinkling cymbal preach the "ism" of appeasement—Roosevelt) (our domestic dogs are descended from wolves . . . they do not live very happy lives, and may have lost in wariness—Darwin) Chary and chariness imply the cautiousness of those who are careful of what they have or what they can give, say, or do and proceed with great reserve or discretion (I am chary of admitting native differences between the sexes, but I think that girls are more prone than boys to punish oddity by serious physical cruelty—Russell) (my business experience has taught me to be chary of committing anything of a confidential nature to any more concrete medium than speech—Faulkner) (there was no fastidious overrefined chariness in the use of that name—F. W. Robertson) Calculating and calculation imply the caution of one who carefully and deliberately plans the way to attain his own and often selfish end taking into account every possible danger and the way in which it can be met (some day the American boy's outlook upon the future may be as clear and calculating as that of his European brother—Grandgent)
cease
* stop, quit, discontinue, desist

cede
surrender, abandon, waive, resign, yield, * relinquish, * truce, armistice, peace
* cease-fire

cease-fire
* truce, armistice, peace

cavalcade
* procession, parade, cortège, motorcade cca LA

* succession, progression, chain, train: array, * display, bow cave succeed, submit, * yield, capitulate, relent, defer, play caviling

adj captious, faultfinding, censorious, carping, * critical, hypercritical

ca exacting, demanding (see DEMAND): * contrary, perverse: obj ecting, protesting, expostulating, kicking (see OBJECT)

con
accommodating, obliging, favoring (see OBIGE): complaisant, * amiable, good-natured: conciliating, pacifying, mollifying, appeasing (see PACIFY)

cavity hollow, * hole, pocket, void, vacuum

C On
bulge, protuberance, protrusion, * projection

cease
* stop, quit, discontinue, desist

end, terminate, * close, conclude, finish: stay, suspend, intermit (see DEFER) spring, arise, rise, originate: * begin, commence, start, initiate, inaugurate: * extend, prolong, protract: * continue, persist

cease-fire
truce, armistice, peace

cede
surrender, abandon, waive, resign, yield, * relinquish, leave grant, concede, award, accord, vouchsafe withhold, hold, hold back, keep back, retain (see KEEP) celebrate commemorate, solemnize, observe, * keep celebrated renowned, * famous, famed, eminent, illustrious prominent, conspicuous, outstanding, signal (see NOTICEABLE)

celebrity
* fame, renown, glory, honor, éclat, reputation, repute, notoriety

prominence, conspicuousness (see corresponding adjectives at NOTICEABLE)

clarity, ac larity, leg erity are comparable when they are used in reference to human beings and denote quickness in movement or action. Celerity stresses speed in moving or especially in accomplishing work (she could, when she chose, work with astonishing celerity—Bennett) (the human brain, we are reminded, acts at times with extraordinary celerity—Cardozo) Alacrity emphasizes promptness in response more than swiftness in movement, though the latter is usually implied (you must wait till she sends for you— and she wined a little at the alacrity of his acceptance—Wharton) Very often, also, it connotes eagerness or cheerful readiness (working away at his subject with the alacrity... of a man... fulfilling the very office... for which nature had designed him—L. P. Smith) Legerity, a less common word than the others, refers more to the quality than to the rate of speed and implies nimbleness and ease (cover the ground with the legerity of a trained runner) (when the mind is quickened... the organs... newly move, with... fresh legerity—Shak) (the legerity of the French mind made the Gallic visitor quick to comprehend his desire for solitude—Wylie) Ana expedition, dispatch, speed, hurry, haste: quickness, rapidity, swiftness, fleetness (see corresponding adjectives at FAST): velocity, * speed: agility, briskness, nimbleness (see corresponding adjectives at AGILE)

Ant leisureliness — Con slowness, deliberateness or deliberation, dilatoriness (see corresponding adjectives at SLOW): * lethargy, languor celestial adj Celestial, heavenly, empyrean, empyreal mean of, relating to, or fit for heaven or the heavens. Celestial (opposed to terrestrial) may refer either to the visible heavens (the region surrounding the earth and seemingly enclosed by the sky) or to the religious conception of heaven or the heavens (in Christian use, the abode of God, the angels, and the blessed dead); thus, a celestial globe is one on whose surface the stars, planets, comets, and nebulae are depicted; a celestial body is a star, planet, or other aggregation of matter that forms a unit for astronomical study; a celestial visitant is an angel or other spirit from the spiritual heaven; celestial bliss is the happiness enjoyed by the residents of heaven (angels by Raphael... whose serene intelligence embraces both earthly and celestial things—Hawthorne) Heavenly, although it is applicable, especially in nontechnical use, to the visible heavens (heavenly bodies—Bacon) or to pagan conceptions of Olympus or other abodes of the gods (the immortal sun, who, borne by heavenly steeds his race doth run—Shelley) is far more often applied to heaven as conceived by Jews and Christians and is apt, therefore, to suggest spiritual qualities (your heavenly Father—Mt 6:14) (they desire a better country, that is, an heavenly—Heb 11:16) (i thought that liberty and heaven to heavenly souls had been all one—Milton) Empyrean and empyreal suggest association with the empyrean, either as thought of in ancient and medieval cosmology as the highest celestial sphere, a region of light or fire (from the courts of the empyrean dome came forth... a fiery car—Prad) or, more often, as conceived by various theologians and poets as the highest of the spiritual heavens, where God is and reigns in spiritual light the fire (into the Heaven of Heavens I have presumed... and drawn empyreal air—Milton) The words are often weakened in idiomatic use to mean little more than outstanding of its kind (well-meaning ineptitude, that rises to empyreal absurdity—Dworkin) (empyrean aplomb—Basso)

Ana ethereal, aerial, * airy: divine, spiritual, * holy

Ant terrestrial — Con earthly, mundane, earthly, worldly, sublunary: * infernal, hellish, chthonian

celebrate
commemorate, solemnize, observe, * keep

celebrated
renowned, * famous, famed, eminent, illustrious prominent, conspicuous, outstanding, signal (see NOTICEABLE)

celebrity
* fame, renown, glory, honor, éclat, reputation, repute, notoriety prominence, conspicuousness (see corresponding adjectives at NOTICEABLE)

ana
analogous words
ana
antonyms
ana contrasted words
ana
See also explanatory notes facing page 1
center 134

center

- reprimand, rebuke, reproach, *reprove: upbraid, berate, tongue-lash (see scold)
- command — *Con: applaud, compliment, recommend (see commend): eulogize, laud, *praise

center n

Center, middle, midst, core, hub, focus, nucleus, heart

- Are comparable when meaning the point, spot, or portion of a thing which is comparable to a point around which a circle is described. Center approximates more or less closely its strict geometrical sense as the point within a circle or sphere that is equidistant from every other point on the circumference or is the average distance from the exterior points of a body or figure. (the center of a table) (the center of the earth)

  Center may be extended to a thing or a part of a thing which suggests a geometrical center especially in being the point around which the rest rotates or revolve. (each airy thought revolved round a substantial center—Wordsworth) (the old school was the center of our lives, somehow: dances, socials, Sunday services—McCourt) or at which all lines (as of activity) converge (draw to one point, and to one center) (bring beast, man, or angel, servant, lord, or king—Pope) (cause, or branch radiates—railroad center) (a power center) (of which lies midway between extremes (in Europe a party of moderate views, neither conservative nor radical, is often called the center)

  Middle is less precise than center and suggests a space rather than a point; it is the part of an object which includes and surrounds the center; thus, the middle of a room is the central portion of it (they have what they call a central depot here, because it's the middle of England—Bennett) (Middle, unlike center, also applies to what has duration (the middle of the night) and to merely linear extension (the middle of the road) *(Middle may be applied freely to something which lies between the beginning and end (as of a process, a course, or a piece of work) (in this, as in most questions of state, there is a middle—Burke) (he was stopped in the middle of his speech) (a play should have a beginning, middle, and end)

  Midst is often used in place of middle for a point or spot well within a group or number of enveloping persons or objects or of things (as duties, affairs, and burdens) which surround or beset one; however it seldom occurs except in a prepositional phrase introduced by in, into, from, out of (he stood in the midst of a crowd) (he penetrated into the midst of the forest) (why it was he should feel in the midst of all these people so utterly detached and so lonely—Bromfield) (sense of right, uppermost in the midst of fiercest strife—Wordsworth)

  Core basically denotes the central portion of certain fruits (as the apple) which is made up of papery or leathery envelopes containing seeds and is often extended to something that similarly lies at the center of a thing and that resembles an apple core in being the unburnt portion (of a coal or of a lump of lime) or in forming a firm central core (of papery or leathery envelopes containing seeds and is often extended to something that similarly lies at the center of a thing and that resembles an apple core in being the unburnt portion of certain fruits (as the apple) which is made up of papery or leathery envelopes containing seeds and is often extended to something that similarly lies at the center of a thing and that resembles an apple core in being the unburnt portion of certain fruits (as the apple) which is made up of papery or leathery envelopes containing seeds and is often extended to something that similarly lies at the center of a thing and that resembles an apple core in being the unburnt portion of certain fruits (as the apple) which is made up of papery or leathery envelopes containing seeds and is often extended to something that similarly lies at the center of a thing and that resembles an apple core in being the unburnt portion of certain fruits (as the apple) which is made up of papery or leathery envelopes containing seeds and is often extended to something that similarly lies at the center of a thing and that resembles an apple core in being the unburnt portion of certain fruits)

Heart applies especially to a vital and usually small and stable center about which matter is gathered or concentrated or to which accretions are made (the nucleus of a cell) (the nucleus of an atom) (a small but good collection of books as a nucleus for his library) (unable to re-create a satisfactory social group from the nucleus of his own individuality—Day Lewis)

- Heart to a place or thing that lies well within something (as a region or system) and which determines the essential character of the whole or serves as a vital, positive, or motivating part (the economic heart of the nation has gradually shifted to the west) (exploits done in the name of France—Shak) (Rome was the heart and pulse of the empire—Buchan) (the discernment and understanding with which he penetrates to the heart and essence of the problem—Cardozo)

  Con *circumference, periphery, perimeter, compass: bounds, confines, limits (see singular nouns at limit)

  center vb *(Center, focus, centralize, concentrate are comparable (though not closely synonymous) because all mean to draw to or fix upon a center. Center strongly implies a point upon which things turn or depend; typically the term is followed by a prepositional phrase (as with in, on, or upon) that names the thing (or sometimes the person) upon which all responsibility or all attention is placed or around which anything or everything of a specified kind (as hopes, fears, or joys) turns (the authority was centered in one person) (the incident upon which the plot centers) (a common belief about art is that it centers around emotion—Alexander) (the man whose hopes and fears are all centered upon himself can hardly view death with equanimity, since it extinguishes his whole emotional universe—Russell)

  Focus implies a point at which a number and usually the total number of things of the same sort (as rays of light, waves of sound, attentions, or interests) converge and become one (the attention of the audience was focused upon the speaker) (the essential characteristic of poetry is its power of focusing the whole range of our sensibilities—Binyon) (how to get the sense of equity or fair play which prevails in many other spheres of action to focus upon these . . . disturbing economic questions is thus distinctively a moral issue—Hobson)

  Centralize is used of things (as government, authority, or administrative procedure) that may be either gathered about a center or divided, distributed, or diffused; it especially implies the placing of power and authority under one head or in one central organization or the bringing together of similar things at one point (authority is said to be centralized wherever a manager tends toward delegating authority to his subordinates—Koontz & O'Donnell) (the amalgamation of trade organizations reorganized as the associated type of administrative organization has worked well with the national government, with the better-governed cities, and with American business—Dimond & Pfieger) (by centralizing . . . the reserves of the member banks within a district, the Federal Reserve System builds up a large sum of money and credit upon which any member bank may call—Goodman & Moore)

  Concentrate differs from the other words not only in being more widely applicable but also in its greater emphasis upon human affairs—Reid)* skill and human methods, discipline, or effort in effecting its purpose; the word may be used not only with reference to what may be centralized or focused and to much that may be centered but is applicable also to material substances that can be reduced in volume (as by dehydration or evaporation), thereby gaining in strength or intensity (see also compact) <here Hannibal ... concentrated the forces which had been gathered from such distant countries—R. B. Smith> (but neither of the men paid much attention to these things, their eyes being concentrated upon the little flat stone—Hardy> (I think that it is a test which we may apply to all figure-painters . . . if we ask whether the figures are really occupied by what they are doing, if the movements of the body are concentrated on the particular business of the moment—Binyon> central, focal, pivotal are more closely comparable when mental, intellectual, psychic, intelligent center, focus, concentrate centralize adj ceremonial and ceremonial imply strict attention to and regard for what is prescribed by the etiquette or tradition of a court or of polite society, by the ritual of a church, or by the formalities of the law for a ceremony or a proceeding. They are sometimes interchangeable <Duncan dropped back, whether from reverence or ridicule his father had never discovered, into the ceremonial usages of the past—Glasgow> (an age in which no lady was too frail to attend a play alone . . . seemed to her, on the whole, better worth living in than the ceremonial era that had witnessed her fall—Glasgow> (its worship is not highly ceremonial—Shepherd) but more often ceremonial distinctively suggests the existence of and conformance to an elaborate, prescribed, and usually ritualistic code of procedures, while ceremonial stresses elaborate, often punctilious and dignified procedures or, in reference to persons, a tendency to formality and ceremony; thus, a wedding is a ceremonial occasion but not one at which the participants need be excessively ceremonial <grave ceremonial occasions, like birth and death and the assumption of manhood—Buchan> (the president is . . . the ceremonial head of the American government . . . He greets distinguished visitors, lays wreaths on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier, bestows the Medal of Honor on flustered pilots—Rossiter> (the Zuñi are a ceremonial people, a people who value sobriety and inoffensiveness above all other virtues. Their interest is centered upon their rich and complex ceremonial life—Benedict>

certain adj 1 positive, *sure, cocksure

---

central adj Ceremonial, ceremonial, formal, conventional, solemn are comparable when they mean characterized or marked by attention to the forms, procedures, and details prescribed as right, proper, or requisite. Both ceremonial and ceremonial imply strict attention to and regard for what is prescribed by the etiquette or tradition of a court or of polite society, by the ritual of a church, or by the formalities of the law for a ceremony or a proceeding. They are sometimes interchangeable <Duncan dropped back, whether from reverence or ridicule his father had never discovered, into the ceremonial usages of the past—Glasgow> (an age in which no lady was too frail to attend a play alone . . . seemed to her, on the whole, better worth living in than the ceremonial era that had witnessed her fall—Glasgow> (its worship is not highly ceremonial—Shepherd) but more often ceremonial distinctively suggests the existence of and conformance to an elaborate, prescribed, and usually ritualistic code of procedures, while ceremonial stresses elaborate, often punctilious and dignified procedures or, in reference to persons, a tendency to formality and ceremony; thus, a wedding is a ceremonial occasion but not one at which the participants need be excessively ceremonial <grave ceremonial occasions, like birth and death and the assumption of manhood—Buchan> (the president is . . . the ceremonial head of the American government . . . He greets distinguished visitors, lays wreaths on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier, bestows the Medal of Honor on flustered pilots—Rossiter> (the Zuñi are a ceremonial people, a people who value sobriety and inoffensiveness above all other virtues. Their interest is centered upon their rich and complex ceremonial life—Benedict>

ceremonial n ceremony, ritual, rite, liturgy, *form ceremonious *ceremonial, formal, solemn, conventional ceremony ceremonial, ritual, liturgy, rite, *form, formality

certain adj 1 positive, *sure, cocksure

---

central adj Ceremonial, ceremonial, formal, conventional, solemn are comparable when they mean characterized or marked by attention to the forms, procedures, and details prescribed as right, proper, or requisite. Both ceremonial and ceremonial imply strict attention to and regard for what is prescribed by the etiquette or tradition of a court or of polite society, by the ritual of a church, or by the formalities of the law for a ceremony or a proceeding. They are sometimes interchangeable <Duncan dropped back, whether from reverence or ridicule his father had never discovered, into the ceremonial usages of the past—Glasgow> (an age in which no lady was too frail to attend a play alone . . . seemed to her, on the whole, better worth living in than the ceremonial era that had witnessed her fall—Glasgow> (its worship is not highly ceremonial—Shepherd) but more often ceremonial distinctively suggests the existence of and conformance to an elaborate, prescribed, and usually ritualistic code of procedures, while ceremonial stresses elaborate, often punctilious and dignified procedures or, in reference to persons, a tendency to formality and ceremony; thus, a wedding is a ceremonial occasion but not one at which the participants need be excessively ceremonial <grave ceremonial occasions, like birth and death and the assumption of manhood—Buchan> (the president is . . . the ceremonial head of the American government . . . He greets distinguished visitors, lays wreaths on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier, bestows the Medal of Honor on flustered pilots—Rossiter> (the Zuñi are a ceremonial people, a people who value sobriety and inoffensiveness above all other virtues. Their interest is centered upon their rich and complex ceremonial life—Benedict>

certain adj 1 positive, *sure, cocksure

---

central adj Ceremonial, ceremonial, formal, conventional, solemn are comparable when they mean characterized or marked by attention to the forms, procedures, and details prescribed as right, proper, or requisite. Both ceremonial and ceremonial imply strict attention to and regard for what is prescribed by the etiquette or tradition of a court or of polite society, by the ritual of a church, or by the formalities of the law for a ceremony or a proceeding. They are sometimes interchangeable <Duncan dropped back, whether from reverence or ridicule his father had never discovered, into the ceremonial usages of the past—Glasgow> (an age in which no lady was too frail to attend a play alone . . . seemed to her, on the whole, better worth living in than the ceremonial era that had witnessed her fall—Glasgow> (its worship is not highly ceremonial—Shepherd) but more often ceremonial distinctively suggests the existence of and conformance to an elaborate, prescribed, and usually ritualistic code of procedures, while ceremonial stresses elaborate, often punctilious and dignified procedures or, in reference to persons, a tendency to formality and ceremony; thus, a wedding is a ceremonial occasion but not one at which the participants need be excessively ceremonial <grave ceremonial occasions, like birth and death and the assumption of manhood—Buchan> (the president is . . . the ceremonial head of the American government . . . He greets distinguished visitors, lays wreaths on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier, bestows the Medal of Honor on flustered pilots—Rossiter> (the Zuñi are a ceremonial people, a people who value sobriety and inoffensiveness above all other virtues. Their interest is centered upon their rich and complex ceremonial life—Benedict> certainty, certitude, assurance, conviction are comparable when they mean to testify to the truth or genuineness of something.

Certitude usually implies a statement in writing, especially one that carries one’s signature or seal or both or one that is legally executed; thus, a certified check carries the guarantee of a bank that the signature is genuine and that there are sufficient funds on deposit to meet it (they said their chemists... could certify on their honor that their extract contained no salicylic acid—Heiser).

Certify 1 Certify, attest, witness, vouch are comparable when they mean to testify to the truth or genuineness of something. Certify usually implies a statement in writing, especially one that carries one’s signature or seal or both or one that is legally executed; thus, a certified check carries the guarantee of a bank that the signature is genuine and that there are sufficient funds on deposit to meet it (they said their chemists... could certify on their honor that their extract contained no salicylic acid—Heiser).

Certify (see also INDICATE) implies oral or written testimony from a person in a position to know the facts, usually but not invariably given under oath or on one’s word of honor; thus, when one says that something is well attested, he implies that there is sufficient documentary or oral testimony from competent persons to warrant its acceptance (the pleader... had witness ready to attest... that every article was true—Swift) (Washington’s strong natural love of children, nowhere attested better than in his expense accounts—Fitzpatrick). In technical legal use attest is used chiefly in reference to the official authentication of a document (as a will, a deed, or a record) or to the guaranteeing of the genuineness of a signature or a statement or an oath by a qualified public agent (as a notary public or a commissioner of deeds) (an attested copy of the marriage record—Cather). Witness implies attestation, not necessarily official or notarial, of a signature (as of a statement, a will, or a bond) by one who has seen that signature actually made and who subscribes his own name to the document as evidence of its genuineness (the called in two of his servants to witness the signature to his will—Vouch (usually with for) rarely implies official or legal proof, which the other words in this group usually do imply, but it suggests that the one who testifies is a competent authority or a reliable person who will stand behind his affirmation and support it further if necessary (for the exactness of this story [of a purported miracle] in all its details, Bishop James of Voragio could not have vouched, nor did it greatly matter. What he could vouch for was the relation of intimacy and confidence between his people and the Queen of Heaven—Henry Adams).

Certify (see also CONFIDENCE) stresses sureness and confidence rather than certainty; the grounds of such sureness need not be objective proofs or the evidence of one’s senses, for something of which one has assurance is typically something that is demonstrable or is yet to happen; the word usually suggests implicit reliance on oneself or on one’s powers, one’s intuitions, or one’s methods or complete trust in another (as a source of information, a supporter, a sovereign, or God) (I’ll make assurance double sure, and take a bond of fate—Shak.) (faith is the assurance of things hoped for—Heb 11:1 (RV)) (rather, it might be said that he went beyond hope to the assurance of present happiness—More). Conviction usually implies previous doubt or uncertainty. It involves the idea of certitude but is not its equivalent, for certitude may or may not imply a rational basis for one’s freedom from doubt, and conviction (see also OPINION) usually does. It differs from certainty in stressing one’s subjective reaction to evidence rather than the objective validity of the evidence itself. Conviction is therefore commonly applied to the state of mind of one who has been or is in the process of being convinced (have lost the old American conviction that most people are good and that evil is merely an accident—Malcolm Cowley) (she does not wish me to go unless with a full conviction that she is right—Conrad).

Con reject, repudiate, refuse (see DECLINE)

Certitude *certainty, assurance, conviction

Certitude *certainty, assurance, conviction

Certainty, certitude, assurance, conviction are comparable when denoting a state of mind in which one is free from doubt. Certainty and certitude both imply the absence of all doubt as to the truth of something; they are not always distinguishable in use, although philosophers and psychologists have often tried to distinguish the states of mind which they designate. The psychological differentiation of certainty as the state of mind induced by something of which there is objectively as well as subjectively not the slightest question, from certitude as the state of mind of one whose faith or belief is so strong that it resists all attack, has indubitably affected the meanings and the use of these terms in general use (some philosophies tend to destroy man’s certainty of his own existence) (one has certainty of nothing in the future, even that the sun will rise tomorrow, but that does not weaken one’s certitude that the world will go on indefinitely) (certitude is not the test of certainty. We have been cocksure of many things that were not so—Justice Holmes). Certitude is usually more personal and less objective than certainty and suggests deeper roots for one’s freedom from doubt and less likelihood of a change of belief (one thing, however, we feel with irresistible certitude, that Mark Twain’s fate was once for all decided there—Justice Holmes) (his plays are the necessary expression of his mind and character, not the necessary conditions of his existence—Inge).

Ant uncertain —Con *doubtful, dubious, questionable

Ant probability —Con possible, likely (see CONTEST)

Ant doubt —Con *uncertainty, skepticism, mistrust.
1 Chance, accident, fortune, luck, hap, hazard

2 champion

3 bite, gnaw, gnash

4 vb

5 chagrined mortified, * ashamed

6 challenge

7 *face, brave, dare, defy, beard

8 vb

9 chafe *abrade, excoriate, fret, gall chance 1 Chance, accident, fortune, luck, hap, hazard denote something that happens without an apparent or determinable cause or as a result of unpredictable forces. Chance serves often as a general term for the incalculable and fortuitous element in human existence and in nature and is usually opposed to law (see PRINCIPLE). It is incorrect to say that any phenomenon is produced by chance; but we may say that two or more phenomena are conjoined by chance... meaning that they are in no way related by causation—J. S. Mill change

<1 wish you luck> <he had luck in all his adventures> with luck and the help of atomic research our children may be safe from this grim disease—A. E. Stevenson

Hap is rather neutral and commonly denotes what falls or, more often, has already fallen to one’s lot (lives that had known both good and evil hap) (by some bad tide or hap... the ill-made catamaran was overset—Melville)

Hazard, which basically denotes a game of dice in which the chances are complicated by arbitrary rules, is often used in place of accident, especially when there is the traceable but not predictable influence of existing conditions or of concomitant circumstances (men and women danced together, women danced together, men danced together, as hazard had brought them together—Dickens) (the choice [of examples] has been determined more by the hazards of my recent reading than by anything else—Huxley)

Ana contingency, emergency, pass, * juncture, exigency

Ant law (see PRINCIPLE) — Con inevitability or inevitability, necessariness or necessity, certainty (see corresponding adjectives at certain)

2 *opportunity, occasion, break, time

Ana possibility, likelihood, probability (see corresponding adjectives at probable): * prospect, outlook, foretaste, anticipation chance vb 1 * happen, befall, betide, occur, transpire

2 * venture, hazard, risk, jeopardize, endanger, imperil

Ana dare, beard, * face: * meet, encounter, confront chance adj * random, haphazard, chancy, casual, desultory, hit-or-miss, happy-go-lucky cancy haphazard, chance, hit-or-miss, happy-go-lucky, * random, casual, desultory change vb Change, alter, vary, modify (and their corresponding nouns change, alteration, variation, modification) are comparable when denoting to make or become different (or when denoting a difference effected). Change and alter are sometimes interchangeable: thus, conditions may change (or alter) for the better. Change, however, usually implies either an essential difference, even a loss of identity, or the substitution of one thing for another (can the Ethiopian change his skin, or the leopard his spots?—Jer 13:23) (and Earth be changed to Heaven, and Heaven to Earth—Milton) (this chamber changed for one more holy—Poe) while alter stresses difference in some particular respect (as in form or detail) without implying loss of identity (one may alter a coat without changing its style) (the whole existing order must be, if ever so slightly, altered—T. S. Eliot) (external circumstances may change catastrophically, as during a war; or gradually, as when means of production are altered—Huxley)

Vary frequently implies a difference or a series of differences due to change (as by shifting, diversification, or growth) (the temperature varies greatly during the day) (any intelligent effort to vary or improve the effect—Henry Adams) Sometimes it implies a deviation from the normal, the conventional, or the usual (the prospectus tendered by the Communists to the peasants varies with the type of discontent in the particular area—W. O. Douglas) (this is not a proceeding which may be varied... but is a precise course... to be strictly pursued—John Marshall)

 Modify suggests a difference that limits or restricts; thus, an adjective is said to modify a noun because it definitely reduces the range of application of that noun (as old in “old men” and red in “a red rose”). Often the word implies moderation (as of severity) or to a degree (as of height). Modify modifies the temperature—Amer. Guide Series: R. I. (Sophia was at first set down as overbearing. But in a few days this view was modified—Bennett)

Modify may sometimes suggest minor changes or absence of radical changes: history shows you men whose master-touch not so much modifies as makes anew —Browning

\(<\) the atmosphere —as it was called for many years before the word was modified to airplane—Harlow\(>\)

Ana • transform, metamorphose, transmute, convert, transmogrify: *exchange, interchange: fluctuate, oscillate (see SWING \(vb\))

Con settle, *set, establish, fix: endure, abide, *continue, persist

\(<\) change \(n\) 1 alteration, variation, modification (see under change \(vb\))

Ana • variety: diversity: divergence, *deviation, aberration

Ant uniformity: monotony

2 Change, mutation, permutation, vicissitude, alternation are comparable especially in their concrete senses. Change, the inclusive term, denotes not only any variation, alteration, or modification in a thing (as in its form, substance, or aspect) but also any substitution of one thing for another: he could detect no change in her when they met again: the body undergoes changes during puberty: a change of season: a change of clothes often makes a change in one's appearance: poor faithful dogs, lovers of novelty and change of scene—Reynolds: Mutation and permutation are applied to a change within a thing or in a combination of things regarded or functioning as a unit. Mutation stresses lack of permanence or stability; it has been applied to variations or alterations that are expected only because they are inherent in the nature of things but are otherwise fortuitous or unaccountable: O world! But that thy strange mutations make us hate thee, life would not yield to age—Shak.: More typically the term connotes suddenness and unpredictability but seldom implies impossibility of explanation; often also it implies orderly change: so far as reality means experienceable reality, both it and the truths men gain about it are everlasting in process of mutation—mutation towards a definite goal, it may be—James: Permutation implies transposition within a group or combination of things without change in the constituent elements or parts of that group or combination. It is now used largely in reference to a change in position within a group of differentiable items (as digits, letters, colors, or sounds): the 26 letters of the alphabet are capable of endless combinations and permutations: It may imply a rearrangement of constituent elements that affects a change in relations, emphasis, or significance and so gives a new form to what is substantially the same material: conventions beget conventions, to be sure, and their ramifications and permutations are endless—Lowes: (by whatever permutations and combinations may be necessary, we may gradually move somewhat nearer to that reign of law—Davis: Vicissitude (see also DIFFICULTY) implies a change so great as to seem a substitution for, or a reversal of, what has been. Sometimes it is applied to such changes as occur in natural succession or from one extreme to another: Nature indeed vouchsafes for our delight the sweet vicissitudes of day and night—Cowper: like walking in a wood where there is . . . a constant vicissitude of light and shade—J. R. Lowell: More often it is applied to a sweeping and unpredictable change that overturns what has been and so has the character of a revolution or an upheaval: the place and the object gave ample scope for moralizing on the vicissitudes of fortune, which spares neither man nor the proudest of his works, which buries empires and cities in a common grave—Gibbon: This implication of reversal is now so strong that the original implication of succession in turn is disappearing. Alternation, though logically used only of the succession of two things in turn, is also used, as vicesitute once was, of two or more things: the alternation of the seasons: Ana metamorphosis, transformation, conversion, transmutation, transmogrification (see under TRANSFORM): substitute, surrogate, shift (see RESOURCE)

\(<\) changeable, changeful, variable, mutable, protean are comparable when meaning having or showing a marked capacity for changes or a marked tendency to alter itself or be altered under slight provocation. Changeable, the ordinary and most comprehensive term of this group, usually suggests this as a characteristic or property that is the result of such reactions as inconstancy, fickleness, an unsettled state, a ready responsiveness to certain influences, or a roving habit: changeable weather: she was a fresh, cool, dewy thing . . . fitful and changeable with the whim of the moment—Hawthorne: A changeable silk is one that seems to change its color with each change of position or point of view: Changeful is a more poetic term than changeable; it throws greater stress on the fact of changing frequently than on the underlying characteristic or property which manifests itself in such changes: the changeful April day—Southey: he felt that life was changeful, fluid, active, and that to allow it to be stereotyped into any form was death—Wilde: call your charms more changeful than the tide—Milton: Variable carries an implication of subjection to frequent and often deeper changes than either of the preceding words; it stresses shifting or fluctuation as a characteristic or property and therefore usually connotes uncertainty or unpredictability: a region of variable winds: man himself was a variable, mixed and transitory creature: he could not escape the law of his own being—L. P. Smith: the methods of statistics are so variable and uncertain . . . that it is never possible to be sure that one is operating with figures of equal weight—Ellis: Mutable also implies subjection to change, but it suggests an opposition to unchanging, fixed, or permanent and therefore is less often applied to something fluctuating and variable than to something living, growing, or developing that shows changes due to progression or retrogression or to external influences or conditions over which the thing affected has no control: my lord, you know what Virgil sings, woman is various and most mutable—Tennyson: our view of any of these concepts, say justice, is mutable, changing from century to century, from place to place—G. W. Johnson: our valuation of poetry . . . depends upon several considerations, upon the permanent and upon the mutable and transitory—T. S. Eliot: Protean suggests a capacity for assuming many different forms or shapes without loss of identity; the term therefore implies changeability with respect to outer manifestations rather than inner character or nature: an amoeba is a protean animalcule: the protean genius of Shakespeare: for poetry is protean in its moods and dispositions, and its diction changes with its bents and its occasions—Lowes: but an idea is a misty, vague object that takes on protean shapes, never the same for any two people—Dwight Macdonald: Ana unstable, *inconstant, mercurial, capricious, fickle: mobile, *movable

\(<\) Ant stable: unchangeable —Con set, fixed, settled, established (see SET \(vb\)): unceasing, *everlasting; enduring, abiding, persisting or persistent (see corresponding verbs at CHANGE)

\(<\) changeful • changeable, variable, protean

Ana fluid (see LIQUID \(adj\)): *active, dynamic, live: progressing, advancing (see ADVANCE \(vb\)): declining, deteriorating, degenerating (see corresponding nouns characteristic adj Characteristic, individual, peculiar, distinctive are comparable when they mean indicating or revealing the special quality or qualities of a particular person or thing or of a particular group of persons or things. Characteristic stresses the indication or revelation not only of what is essential or typical, but of what distinguishes and serves to identify the person, the thing, or the group; the word, however, fixes the attention on the thing considered more as it is in itself than as it seems in contrast or relation to other things (he answered with characteristic courtesy). It was characteristic of the relationship between these two that, in all the pleadings and protests of the poor deferred lover, Sally never made the offer of convention and custom to release him—Deland. A fertile oasis possesses a characteristic color scheme of its own—Huxley.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

Individual (see also) analogueous words

Ant antonyms
Con contrasted words
See also explanatory notes facing page 1
A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.
usually retains in some degree the implications of fraternal love or of compassion as the animating spirit behind the gift or the judgment (generous and charitable, prompt to serve—Wordsworth) (Mrs. Hawthorne had been rude ... to a friend of his, but that friend, so much more charitable and really good than she was, had made excuses for her—Archibald Marshall) (it is more charitable to suspend judgment—Glashow) Benevolent also stresses some inner compulsion (as native kindness, a desire to do good, or an interest in others' happiness and well-being). In contrast with charitable, however, it more often suggests an innate disposition than an inculcated virtue (his intentions are benevolent) (old Dimple with his benevolent smile—H. G. Wells) (my mother ... always employed in benevolent actions while she uttered uncharitable words—Wharton) (the administrator of the future must be the servant of free citizens, not the benevolent ruler of admiring subjects—Russell) Humane implies tenderness and compassion, sometimes as qualities of one's temperament, but sometimes as required qualifications of enlightened and sensitive human beings; it is referable chiefly, but not exclusively, to methods and policies affecting the welfare of others (humane treatment of prisoners or of animals) (with reasonable measures of humane mercy I will plead; but to tyrants I will give no quarter, nor waste arguments where they will certainly be lost—Garrison) Humanitarian suggests an interest in the welfare or well-being of mankind or of a particular class or group of men more than of the individual; it is applied especially to acts, outlooks, and policies (as of institutions, rulers, or governments) (as a nation we have been sharing our abundance with the world's hungry people ... primarily from a humanitarian standpoint—Hope) (such humanitarian issues as the repeal of the brutal debtor laws—Parrington) (a part of the nation became humanitarian, and with a tender conscience turned ... toward the perfectibility of man—Canby) (to use the A-bomb ... was ... wrong ... on humanitarian grounds—Zacharias) Philanthropic and eleemosynary also suggest interest in humanity rather than in the individual, but they commonly imply (as humanitarian does not) the giving of money on a large scale to organized charities, to institutions for human advancement or social service, or to humanitarian causes (philanthropic foundations) (found time to devote to church, civic, and philanthropic affairs—Silveus) (eleemosynary institutions) (contractors, rarely known for wearing eleemosynary halos, cheerfully pocketed a loss ... while they waited for the self-help workers ... to catch up—Olivier) (an institution of higher education is not a commercial enterprise ...) (its character is eleemosynary, strictly eleemosynary—Himstead) Altruistic presupposes the guidance of an ethical principle: that the interests of others should be placed above those of self; it usually implies the absence of selfishness and often indifference to one's own welfare or interests (if it is assumed that the objectives of American policy are wholly altruistic, it follows that non-Americans who participate ... must be wholly virtuous—Muggeridge) (altruistic motives) (an altruistic physician).

Ana generous, *liberal, bountiful, bounteous, openhanded, munificent: merciful, *forbearing, lenient, clement, tolerant: *tender, compassion, warmhearted, sympathetic

Ant uncharitable—Con merciless, relentless, implacable (see GRIIM): *stingy, close, closefisted, parsimonious, niggardly, cheeseparing

charity 1 mercy, clemency, grace, lenity

Ana love, affection, *attachment: benevolence, humane-

chart 141

chart, philanthropy are comparable in several of their meanings. Both words denote basically a love for one's fellowmen and a disposition to help those who are in need. But charity in this sense tends to suggest a Christian virtue and the will to help, as well as the deed, whenever the occasion arises (as for the rarity of Christian charity under the sun!—Hood) (melt not in an acid sect the Christian pearl of charity—Whittier) Philanthropy in this sense is much vaguer because it usually implies a love of mankind and a disposition to help the community or one's fellowmen rather than the individual (this philanthropy ... is everywhere manifest in our author—Dryden) Consequently there is a tendency to think of charity as benevolence manifested especially in public or private provision for the relief of the poor, and of philanthropy as benevolence manifested in efforts to promote the welfare or well-being of one's fellowmen; thus, out of charity one provides for the support of a destitute orphan; out of philanthropy one sends a large gift of money to an educational institution (in benevolence, they excel in charity, which alleviates individual suffering, rather than in philanthropy, which deals with large masses and is more frequently employed in preventing than in allaying calamity—Lecky) The terms also may be applied to what is done or given out of charity or philanthropy or to an institution or cause which is the object of such benefaction (the cold philanthropies, the ostentatious public charities ... he exposed with utter and relentless scorn—Wilde) (many charities and many philanthropies were aided by him during his lifetime)

charlatan mountebank, quack, *impostor, faker charm vb fascinate, allure, captivate, enchant, bewitch, *attract

Ant delight, rejoice, *please, gratify

Ant forbidding chart n Chart, map, graph are comparable as nouns meaning a graphic and explanatory representation by means of lines, dots, colors, and symbols of something incapable of verbal or pictorial representation (because too large, too detailed, or too abstract) and as verbs meaning to make such a representation of something. Chart is the most inclusive of these terms; it implies the aim of making clear to the mind through the eye by graphic projection of data something (as solutions of an equation, points on the face of the earth, or values of a variable at specified times and places) that cannot be viewed directly (a chart of coastal rainfall) (a nomographic conversion chart for an equation relating two variable quantities consists of two scales and a pivot point—French & Vierck) (a star chart) (charting the shifting channel of a river) (at 30,000 feet, in clear skies above the boiling cloud cap of a hurricane, an Air Force plane charts the size of the disturbance—N. Y. Times> Chart often specifically denotes a map designed as an aid to air or water navigation by stressing features and hazards of the area depicted. The modern nautical chart is the end product of all the field operations. Into its construction enter the results of the geodetic, topographic, hydrographic, tidal, and magnetic work of the Survey—Shalowitz. <an uncharted rock> Map usually implies a representation of the earth’s surface or of a part of it that shows directly according to some given scale or projection the relative position and size of cultural features (as streets, buildings, cities, towns, villages, counties, states, provinces, or countries) as well as the shape and proportionate extent of natural features (as bodies of water, mountain ranges, and coasts)  <map a newly explored country> It may also be used in reference to a representation of the celestial sphere or of a particular heavenly body <mapping the surface of the moon>  Graph applies specifically to a chart or diagram in which two variable factors (for example, the prices of a commodity and the times at which these varying prices were asked) are so represented as to indicate their interrelationship. The usual method of preparing a graph is to locate by means of coordinates a series of points and often to join them with a curve or a series of straight lines  <graph the course of business since 1962> <Ana> *plan, plot, scheme, design, project chart vb map, graph (see under CHART n) <Ana> see those at CHART n charter vb *hire, let, lease, rent chary *cautious, circumspect, wary, calculating <Ana> prudent, discreet, provident (see under PRUDENCE): *sparing, economical, frugal, thrifty: reluctant, hesitant, loath, *disinclined chase vb *follow, pursue, trail, tag, tail Con *plan, plot, scheme, design, project *prove *beat, thrash, pummel, baste, belabor chastise *punish, discipline, correct, castigate, chasten <Ana> *beat, thrash, pummel, baste, belabor chat vb Chat, gab, chatter, pratter, prate, prattle, babble, gabble, jabber, gibber denote to emit a loose and ready flow of inconsequential talk or as nouns the talk so emitted. That is to talk in light, easy, and pleasant fashion; in an easy mirth we chatted o’er the trifles of the day before—William Whitehead. <passed an hour in idle chat> To gab is to talk trivially gibbly and long, often tiresomely <came in to tea and sat there gabbling till ten o’clock—J. W. Carlyle> <uncheon gab among women—Port> To chatter is to talk aimlessly, incessantly, and (often) with great rapidity <it was she who chattered, chattered, on their walks, while . . . he dropped a gentle word now and then—Conrad> <my chatter was as gay and sprightly as birdsong—Warren> To patter is to speak or repeat rapidly and mechanically <pattering prayers half inaudibly> or glibly and volubly often without much regard to sense <they’re college-reared and can patter languages—Buchan> <the patter of an auctioneer> To prate is to talk idly and boastfully  The word is often specifically used in reproach implying platitudeous or fulsome boasting or a readiness to talk at length about things of which the speaker is really ignorant or has only superficial knowledge <we may prate of democracy, but actually a poor child in England has little more hope than had the son of an Athenian slave to be emancipated into that intellectual freedom of which great writings are born—Quiller-Couch> To prattle is to talk like a child (as in artlessness and freedom or sometimes in lack of substance and sense) <prattled on . . . in this vein, spewing up the squalid confusion of his thoughts—Anthony West> <we are . . . charmed with the pretty prattle of children—Sidney> Babble, gable, jabber, and gibber basically imply making sounds suggestive of speech but lacking the meaning content, intelligibility, and articulateness of normal adult human speech  <the noisy gable of geese> <monkeys jabbering in the trees> <an idiot mewing and gibbering> As applied to human speaking <speech all four terms are somewhat derogatory and especially suggest lack of clarity in both articulation and content, the babble of four or more voices going on at once—G. A. Miller> <saying nothing comprehensible, just babbling and gabbling, half unconsciously—Bennett> <subjected to gabble about fifteen-century politics—McCarten> <must we fall into the jabber and babble of discord—Sir Winston Churchill> <listened to gibber about . . . our present form or methods of government—The Nation> <the sheeted dead did squeak and gibber in the Roman streets—Shak> <Ana> <converse, talk, *speak: gossip A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk () indicates place of treatment of each group.

Ana analogous words Ant antonyms Con contrasted words See also explanatory notes facing page 1
cheat vb cheat, gab, patter, prate, babble, gabble, jabber, gibber

Ana see those at chat

cheap beggarly, shabby, pitiful, sorry, *contemptible, despicable, scurvy

Ana *mean, ignoble, sordid, object: paltry, *petty, mealy, trifling: meretricious, tawdry (see GAUDY): low, *base, vile; poor, *bad, wrong

Ant noble

cheat n fraud, fake, deceit, deception, *imposture, counterfei- feit, sham, humbug

Ana hoaxing or hoax, bamboozling or bamboozlement (see corresponding verbs at DUPE): *deception, trickery, chicanery, chican; charlatan, quack, mountebank, faker, *impostor: swindler, defrauder, cozener (see corresponding verbs at cheat) cheat vb Cheat, cozen, defraud, swindle, overreach are comparable when meaning to obtain something and especially money or valuables from or an advantage over another by dishonesty and trickery. Cheat suggests deceit and, usually, tricks that escape or are intended to escape the observation of others (cheat at cards) (cheat in a written examination) (she and her husband had cheated every one with whom they had dealings—Anderson) (he is not cheated who knows he is being cheated—Coke) Cozen implies more artfulness or craft and often more allusions than cheat; it usually suggests the victim's loss of something of value to him whether of real worth or not (soldiers cozened of their pay by clever girls) (cousins, indeed; and by their uncle cozen'd of comfort, kingdom, kindred, freedom, life—Shak.) (the Popular Front—that famous opportunity for men of good-will to be cozened by the Communists—Poore) Defraud implies depriving another of something that is his by right whether by taking it from him or by withholding it; the word, however, implies misleading statements or deliberate perversion of the truth more often than it implies craft, artfulness, or wiles (defraud a widow of a piece of property) (the stockholders held that they had been defrauded by those who reorganized the company) (thou shalt not defraud thy neighbor, neither rob him—Lev 19:13) (freedom of speech and press does not include . . . the right to deceive or defraud—Neil) Swindle implies either gross cheating or defrauding especially by imposture or by gaining the victim's confidence; it usually implies the obtaining of money or something quickly or easily convertible into money by false pretenses (the forger swindled the merchants of the city out of large sums of money) (the despised Chinese, who were cuffed and maltreated and swindled by the Californians—Brooks) Overreach implies getting the better of a person with whom one is dealing or negotiating or bargaining by unfair or dishonest means; often it implies cheating or defrauding or swindling (he never made any bargain without overreaching (or, in the vulgar phrase, cheating) the person with whom he dealt—Fielding)

Ana *dupe, gull, hoax, hoodwink, bamboozle, trick, befoul; *deceive, delude, beguile, double-cross, misunderstand

check n *corrective, control, antidote

Ana *oversight, supervision, surveillance check vb 1 *arrest, interrupt

Ana stay, suspend (see DEFER): *stop, cease, discontinue, desist: repress, *suppress: *frustrate, thwart, foil, circumvent

2 bridle, curb, *restrain, inhibit

Ana *hinder, impede, obstruct, block: *prevent, preclude, obviate: baffle, balk (see FRUSTRATE): control, manage (see CONDUCT vb)

Ant accelerate (of speed): advance (of movements, plans, hopes): release (of feelings, energies) checked, checkered *variegated, parti-colored, motley, pied, piebald, skewbald, dappled, freaked cheek nerve, effrontery, hardihood, gall, *temerity, audacity

Ana boldness, intrepidity (see corresponding adjectives at BRAVE): impudence,-brazerness, shamelessness, brashness (see corresponding adjectives at SHAMELESS)

Ant diffidence —Con shyness, modesty, bashfulness (see corresponding adjectives at SHY): timorousness, timidity (see corresponding adjectives at TIMID): reservedness or reserve, reticence (see corresponding adjectives at SILENT)

cheep vb *chirp, chirrup, peep, tweet, twitter, chitter cheep n chirp, chirrup, peep, tweet, twitter, chitter (see under chirp vb)

cheer vb 1 *encourage, inspire, hearten, embolden, nerve, steel

Ana *comfort, console, solace: gladden, gratify (see PLEASE): stimulate, excite, quicken, *provoke

Ant deject: dismay —Con *discourage, dishearten, dispirit

2 root, *applaud

Ana acclaim, laud, *praise

Con deride, mock, *ridicule, taunt cheerful light-hearted, joyful, joyous, *glad, happy

Ana jolly, jovial, *merry, blithe, jocund: mirthful, glee- ful (see corresponding nouns at MIRTH): gay, vivacious, *lively, animated

Ant glum, gloomy —Con *sullen, saturnine, dour, morose: dejected, depressed, melancholy, sad (see corresponding nouns at SADNESS): doleful, lugubrious, rueful (see MELANCHOLY)

cheerless * dismal, dreary, dispiriting, bleak, desolate

Ana discouraging, disheartening, dejecting (see DIS- COURAGE)

Ant cheerful

cheeseparing * stingy, close, closefisted, tight, tight- fisted, niggardly, penny-pinching, parsimonious, penurious, miserly

Chemist *drugist, apothecary, pharmacist cherish 1 prize, treasure, value, *appreciate

Ana love, enjoy, *like: esteem, respect, regard (see under REGARD n): *revere, venerate, reverence: protect, *defend, shield, safeguard, guard

Ant neglect —Con ignore, overlook, slight, disregard, forget (see NEGLECT): desert, forsake (see ABANDON) 2 foster, *nurse, nurture, cultivate

Ana preserve, conserve, *save: *harbor, shelter, entertain

Ant abandon —Con repudiate, scorn, reject (see DECLINE vb): contemn, *despise, disdain chew out * scold, upbraid, rate, berate, tongue-lash, jaw, bawl, wig, rail, revile, vituperate chic adj smart, fashionable, modish, *stylish, dashing

Chicane, canicary trickery, double-dealing, *deception, fraud

Ana artifice, stratagem, maneuver, ruse, feint, *trick, vile, gambit, ploy: intrigue, machination, *plot: under- handedness, furtiveness, surreptitiousness (see corresponding adjectives at SECRET)

Con straightforwardness, forthrightness (see corresponding adjectives at STRAIGHTFORWARD): *honesty, integrity, probity, honor

Chide reproach, *reprove, rebuke, reprimand, admonish

Ana *criticize, reprehend, censure, blame, condemn, *denounce: *scold, upbraid, rate, berate

Ant commend —Con applaud, compliment (see com- MEND): *praise, laud, extol

Ana analogous words Ant antonyms Con contrasted words See also explanatory notes facing page 1 chief

Chief, chieftain, head, headman, leader, master are comparable when they mean the person in whom resides authority or ruling power but they differ in their applications and associations. Chief is the most comprehensive of these terms, being applicable as a general term to anyone from an absolute monarch to one's immediate superior (the chief of a court of inquiry was called the grand inquisitor) (the chargé d'affaires reports daily to his chief). Usually, however, the term is applied specifically to one who is supreme in power or authority over a tribe or clan (an Indian chief) or to the superior officer in a civil department (fire chief) (chief of police) or to one who is vested with authority and power to act by the organization over which he presides (the chairmen of the national committees of the leading political parties are virtually party chiefs). The phrase in chief is often added to a title, held by two or more, to indicate the one who is first in authority (commander in chief) (editor in chief). Chieftain has never obtained the generality of chief, and still usually carries implications derived from its early and still leading application to the chief of a tribe, a clan, or of a primitive, savage, or barbaric group (the chieftain's plaid) (a robber chieftain). Head, though seemingly as comprehensive as chief, is applied most frequently to the person of a group who serves as its chief executive or on whose shoulders the responsibility finally rests (the head of the family) (the head of a school) (the head of government) (the head of a department). Headman comes close to chieftain in that it usually applies to the person who serves as the chief of his tribe or village; the term, even more than chieftain, implies a condition of savagery or barbarism. Leader implies headship, sometimes of a nation or people but more often of an organized body (as a political party, a society, or a band of musicians) or of an informal assembly (as of persons or animals) (a rangy red steer was the leader of the stampede). The term usually implies a capacity for guidance, direction, or for the assumption of full control and of winning the support of those under one (the leader of an orchestra) (the leader of the opposition in the British parliament). Master, on the other hand, applies to a head who has another or others under him subject to his direction or control and necessarily obedient to his will: the term stresses his authority rather than his capacity for guidance (a man cannot serve two masters). In general use the term is applied as a designation to an employer of servants and to the head of a school or of a class. It is also applied generally to anyone who exerts great and controlling influence over others or who is regarded as one to be followed or obeyed. The chief specific use of master is as the title of the person qualified to command a merchant vessel; in this use it is commonly superseded by captain as a courtesy title. Ana governor, ruler (see corresponding verbs at GOVERN) Con *follower, disciple, henchman, adherent, satellite chief adj Chief, principal, main, leading, foremost, capital mean first in importance or in standing. Chief is applicable to a person that serves as the head of his class or group or to a thing that stands out as above all the rest of its class or kind in rank, importance, dignity, or worth; the term therefore usually implies the subordination of all others (chief justice of the supreme court) (president of a republic is its chief magistrate) (the cathedral is the chief church of a diocese) (the chief topic of conversation) (duty, not pleasure, is the chief aim of living—Glasgow). Principal is applicable to whatever is the first in order of power or importance, and so is applied chiefly to a person to whom is given direction, control, or government of others or to a thing (or person thought of as a thing) that, because of its size, its position, or its intrinsic importance precedes all others of its class or kind (the principal dancer in a ballet) (the principal keeper in a prison) (the principal gate to the grounds of an institution) (the principal streets of a city) (the principal witness against the accused) (a chicken stew of which the principal ingredient was not chicken but sea cucumber—Steinbeck). Main is applicable to something (often a part, unit, or division of a large or extensive thing) that excels all the others of its class or kind in size, potency, or importance (the main line of a railroad) (the main street of a small city) (the mainland). Words have been used so long as the main channel for communication—Day Lewis) (the literary critic . . . will yet find, like the historian, his main subject matter in the past—L. P. Smith) Leading, like principal, implies precedence, but it often distinctively implies, in addition, a capacity or fitness for drawing others, for guiding them, or for giving a particular quality or character to a movement (the leading men of the city) (he had been the leading counsel for the seven Bishops—Macaulay) (the leading automobile in a procession) (another leading object in education for efficiency is the cultivation of the critical discernment of beauty and excellence in things and in words and thoughts, in nature and in human nature—Elliot) Foremost differs from leading, which is otherwise closely resembles, in its stronger implication of being first in an advance or progressive movement; it is preferable for that reason whenever there is a suggestion of the person's or thing's having forged ahead to that position (one of us, that struck the foremost man of all this world—Shak.) *handedness, of course, is the foremost prime characteristic—La Barre Capital is applicable to a thing that stands at the head of its class or kind because of its importance, its significance, its excellence, or its seriousness (a capital plan) (his capital offense was that he had omitted to mention her at all) (the seven capital sins are the most important sins theologically not because they are the worst sins but because they lead to other sins and are fatal to spiritual progress) (with a little managing . . . she would have gained every point as easily as she had gained the capital one of taking the foundling baby under her wing—Wharton) Ana *dominant, paramount, sovereign, predominant, preponderant, preponderating: *primary, prime: *supreme, preeminent Ant subordinate — Con secondary, dependent, subject (see subordinate): subservient, ancillary, subsidiary, *auxiliary chiefly *largely, greatly, mostly, mainly, principally, generally chieftain *chief, head, leader, master childish *childlike Ana puerile, boyish, *youthful: *simple, foolish, silly, fatuous, asinine Ant mature, grown-up — Con adult, matured (see mature): manly, manful, virile, manlike (see male): womanly, womanlike (see female) childish, childish agree in meaning having or showing the manner, spirit, or disposition of a child. Both are applicable to adolescents and to adults as well as to children. Childlike, however, usually suggests such qualities of childhood as innocence, simplicity, or straightforwardness which are worthy of admiration or emulation; childish suggests such less pleasing and less admirable characteristics as helplessness, peevishness, or undeveloped mentality (her arias have the childish quality Puccini wanted—Hume) (the same thought which clothed

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.
chirp, chirrup, cheep, peep, tweet, twitter, chitter crack, cleft, fissure, crevasse, crevice, cranny crake chine backbone, back, spine, vertebrae chilly
Ana naive, unsophisticated, ingenuous, artless (see natural) docile, obedient, tractable, biddable chilly cool, cold, frigid, freezing, frosty, gelid, icy, glacial, arctic Ant balmy chimerical fantastic, fanciful, visionary, imaginary, quixotic Ana utopian, ambitious, pretentious; illusory, apparent; delusive, delusory, misleading, deceptive; fabulous, mythical; (see fictitious); preposterous, absurd (see foolish) Ant feasible — Con = possible, practicable: reasonable; rational; sensible, sane, wise, prudent chine backbone, back, spine, vertebrae chink = crack, cleft, fissure, crevasse, crevice, cranny Ana = break, gap, interruption: split, rift, break chirp = Chirp, chirrup, cheep, peep, tweet, twitter, chitter can all mean as verbs to make the little sounds characteristic of small animals and as nouns the little sounds so made, and all can be extended to sounds and the making of sounds (as by human beings) that suggest such small animal sounds. Chirp implies the short, sharp, and thin sound that is made by practically all small birds and some insects; it regularly connotes cheerfulness but often also busyness and immaturity (there was no sound save the chirping of birds) (the linnet ... chirps her vernal song of love—Southey) (one of these birds ... began to ascend, by short hops and flights, through the branches, uttering a sharp, preliminary chirp—Burroughs) (someone turned on the water down the hall and all the second-floor faucets chirped at once, like so many crickets—Algren) (wait until the boldest chirps: “It was tonight, dear, wasn’t it?”—MacLeish) Chirrup implies a more sustained effect than chirp, as though a bird is singing or is learning to sing; it also often heightens the connotations of cheerfulness or liveliness (untucked his head from under his wing and chirruped drowsily—Sinclair) (the shrill persistent chirrup of a fledging sparrow) (there is a new chirrup in their talk, feeling that they shall feel livelier in a livelier land—O’Casey) (made her little chirruping sound of welcome—Woolf) (the bullet chirruped by her in the soft buzzing sound of insects on the wing—Mailer) Chirrup implies cheerfulness and liveliness (untucked his head from under his wing) Chirrup implies the right or the privilege to choose freely from a number (as of persons, things, or courses) (take your choice of rooms) (he had no choice in the determination of his profession) (everyone admires his choice, for she is a very attractive young woman) Option stresses a specifically given right or power to choose one from among two or more mutually exclusive actions or courses of action (the state constitution gives local option to cities and towns in the matter of granting or withholding licenses for the sale of intoxicants) (the court sentenced the convicted speeder to one month’s imprisonment with the option of a fine) (the students have no option in the matter of vacations) In business transactions, an option is usually purchased and enables one to demand during an agreed length of time fulfillment of a contract to sell (as a specified quantity of a commodity) or buy (as a particular parcel of real estate) at a price and on terms agreed upon when drawing the option (acquire an option on a tract of land) (buying and selling options on the stock exchange) Alternative typically stresses restriction of choice between two mutually exclusive things (as propositions, theories, courses, or choices

146 choose to describe things which give delight to the fastidious taste, especially to the eye, and often also the palate (her house is elegant and her table dainty—Johnson)

More often, however, the term implies smallness and exquisiteness (those dainty limbs, which Nature lent for gentle usage and soft delicacy—Milton) (the spirit of romance, gross and tawdry in vulgar minds, dainty and refined in the more cultivated—Parrington) Dalicate, like dainty, implies exquisiteness and an appeal to a fastidious taste, but it ascribes fineness, subtlety, and often fragility to the thing rather than smallness, and it implies an appeal not only to the eye or palate, but to any of the senses or to the mind or spirit (the more delicate perfume of the pink-flowering thorn—Wilde) (not, however, an effervescing wine, although its delicate piquancy produced a somewhat similar effect—How-thorne) (I have, alas! only the words we all use to paint commoner, coarser things, and no means to represent all the exquisite details, all the delicate lights, and shades—Hudson) (an irony so quiet, so delicate, that many readers never notice it is there . . . or mistake it for naive—Pierce)

Ana preeminent, surpassing, peerless, incomparable, *supreme, superlative: picked, selected, culled, chosen (see choose)

Ant indifferent (see medium) —Con mediocre, second-rate, middling, fair, average, *medium: *common, ordinary choke *suffocate, asphyxiate, stifle, smother, strangle, throttle choleric spleenetic, testy, *irascible, touchy, cranky, cross

Ana *irritable, fractious, huffy, querulous, petulant, peevish: *angry, acrimonious, wrathful, wroth, indignant, mad, irate: fiery, peppery, spunky (see spirited): captious, carping, faultfinding (see critical)

Ant placid: imperturbable —Con *calm, tranquil, serene: *cool, composed, nonchalance choose, select, elect, opt, pick, cull, prefer, single are comparable when they mean to fix upon one of a number of things as the one to be taken, accepted, or adopted or to make such a determination. Choose commonly implies both an act of judgment and the actual taking or adoption of what is fixed upon (that he may know to refuse the evil, and choose the good—Isa 7:15) (between them . . . we can see little to choose—Henry Adams) (the disinterested search for truth is certainly one of the highest and noblest careers that a man can choose—Inge) Select usually implies a wide range of choice and discrimination or discernment of values in making one's choice (one particular nation to select from all the rest—Milton) (the difficult task of selecting a presidential candidate—H. D. Jordan) (his temperament was selecting the instances he should narrate, his mind selecting the words to employ—F. M. Ford) Eject often implies a deliberate choice, especially between alternatives, or a careful selection of some out of many possibilities: ordinarily, it carries a stronger implication of the rejection of that not chosen than either of the preceding words (eject a president) (according to the doctrine of predestination, God elects those who are to be saved) (will it not look a little odd . . . when you have so many devoted children, that you should elect to live alone—Sackville-West) (having elected deliberately . . . that stern land and weather—Faulkner) Opt (often with for) implies an election between alternatives (give the people an opportunity to opt for statehood—Rupert Emerson) often specifically, in the case of inhabitants of territory transferred by treaty, between retaining one's former citizenship or acquiring citizenship in the new state opt

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.
circumstance 148
circumstantial, minute, particular, particularized, detailed, itemized are comparable when they mean dealing with a matter point by point. Circumstantial applies especially to accounts of events or to narratives, but it is applicable also to the persons who recount or narrate or to their memories. The term implies full and precise reference to the incidents or circumstances attending an event (a circumstantial account of the battle has not yet been written) (generally speaking, a historical novel . . . must be documented with the news of what once happened, and full of circumstantial life—Garriques) (my memory is exact and circumstantial—Dickens) Minute, in addition, applies to investigations, researches, inspections, and descriptions; it stresses interest in or inclusion of every detail, no matter how trivial or insignificant. It therefore usually connotes exhaustiveness or meticulous exactness (he prolonged the flower-picking process by minute and critical choice—Deland) (Plato . . . in the Laws . . . provides for the state a perfect jungle of minute regulations—Buchan) (she was interested in the little details and writes with minute care about the change of fashion—Bradford) Particular differs little from circumstantial except in being applicable also to descriptions and lists; it may therefore imply attention to every feature or item rather than to every incident or circumstance (a particular description of every musical instrument in the orchestra) (it is as particular as the four-sheet maps from which it is taken—Jefferson) (I think myself obliged to be very particular in this relation, lest my veracity should be suspected—Swift) Particularized often replaces particular as applied to narratives, descriptions, and lists; it is not used of those who so narrate, describe, or list, but it may be applied to the circumstances, features, and items that they present (Scott’s particularized descriptions of his characters) (a most concrete, particularized, earthy series of small diurnal recognitions—Powy) Detailed applies to a circumstantial or minute account, description, study, or representation; it implies, however, abundance of rather than exhaustiveness in detail (Perera in the sixteenth century . . . presents a detailed picture of Chinese life—Ellis) (the detailed study of history should be supplemented by brilliant outlines—Russell) Itemized implies complete enumeration of details, especially of those that indicate the separate purchases or separate credits in a mercantile account, or of those that indicate the articles or groups of articles in the possession of a person or business (as in an inventory) (an itemized bill) (itemized list of his expenditures) The term is also applicable to descriptions, narratives, or accounts which in addition to being particularized have something of the formality of an inventory (an itemized description of a room) Ana precise, nice, exact, accurate (see correct): *full, complete, replete Ant *abridged: summary —Con succinct, terse, laconic, *concise, pithy, compendious: shortened, abbreviated, curtained (see shorten) citadel stronghold, fortress, *fort, fastness citation *encomium, eulogy, tribute, panegyric Anu commendation, recommendation, compliment or compliment (see corresponding verbs at commend): award, guerdon, reward (see premium) cite vb 1 *summon, summons, call, convolve, convene, must *bid, *invite: *arrest, detain, apprehend: *praise, extol, eulogize, laud, acclaim: award, accord (see grant) 2 *quote, repeat 3 *adduce, advance, allege Ana enumerate, tell, *count, number: recount, recite, narrate, rehearse (see relate) citizen 1 inhabitant, resident, denizen
Con *stranger, outsider
2 Citizen, subject, national are comparable when denoting a person who is regarded as a member of a sovereign state, entitled to its protection, and subject to its laws. Citizen implies alien as its opposite. It is applicable to a native or naturalized person, regardless of sex or age, who owes allegiance to a government and is entitled to its protection of his life, liberty, and property at home or abroad. Ordinarily (as in the United States) citizenship does not imply possession of all political rights (as the right to vote). Citizen often implies allegiance to a government in which the sovereign power (theoretically or absolutely) is retained by the people; it is usually the preferred term in designating those persons in a republic whose status is not that of aliens (American citizens living in Mexico) (all persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the State wherein they reside—U. S. Constitution) Subject is applicable to a person, no matter where he resides, who by right of birth or naturalization owes allegiance to a personal sovereign (as a king or emperor) whether this sovereign rules directly or is a figurehead in whose name an often representative government is conducted; thus, subject is the preferred term in the British Commonwealth of Nations largely for historical reasons in spite of the limitations on the power of the sovereign and in spite of the representative form of government in Great Britain and in its dominions (British subjects living in the United States) (the millions of subjects of Queen Elizabeth) The term is also applicable to any person residing in territory governed by another state that has gained power over it by force of arms or by conquest, whether the sovereign power in that state is vested in a person or in the people (the line of distinction between the citizen and the subject, the free and the subjugated races—Talley) National belongs with this group of terms in spite of its shifting significance and more or less conflicting implications. It is applicable chiefly to any of a body of persons of the same nation or people living in a country other than the one in which they have or have had the status of citizen or subject. In diplomatic use the term is often applied to one’s fellow countrymen (the consul in each of the large cities is responsible for protecting the rights of his own nationals) Still other denotations, not so common, have come into use. Chief among these is the definition of a national as anyone who has been born in the territory of a given government, even though he now resides in another country, either as an alien or, by naturalization, as a citizen or subject of that country (some European governments claim authority over their nationals in North and South America) There is also a tendency to prefers national to subject or citizen in some countries where the sovereign power is not clearly vested in a monarch or ruler or in the people or where theories of racism civic, civil, civilian are not close synonyms but rather words whose meanings lend themselves to confusion. In a sense they have a common meaning: of, relating to, or characteristic of a citizen—but in each case the word citizen has a specific or particular meaning. Civic implies some relation to a city and its citizens; city, however, is used loosely so as to cover any community having closely related interests (as a town, a village, or a city proper) or any municipality or corporation having powers of local self-government: in this sense civic is used in distinction from state, federal, and national. Civic interests gave way to national interests; organizations for civic betterment often the word comes close in meaning to public when used to modify acts, functions, obligations, or qualities, the chief distinction consisting in its closer application to the life of the community. Civic liberty was no less outstanding than his civic virtues. For the theme of her life is that the social purpose as well as private beings and that civilization depends on the spread of civic virtue—Bunle.

Civil, in general, has reference to a citizen as a member of the state, or to citizens as members of the state. In this sense state denotes usually a larger organized unit than that denoted by city and comes close in meaning to country, nation, and people. The term civil implies reference to this organization; thus, civil liberty is the liberty permitted to a citizen by the laws of the state or exemption from arbitrary government interference; a civil war (as opposed to a foreign war) is a conflict between citizens of the same state. More specifically, there is often a definitely implied contrast in the use of civil; the civil authorities are those that prevail in all affairs except where ecclesiastical authorities or military authorities have the final say; civil service denotes service of the state in any capacity that does not distinctively belong to the military organization; thus, civil architecture applies to architecture which is neither ecclesiastical nor military; in law, civil actions are distinguished from criminal actions as relating to proceedings in connection with the private or individual rights of citizens; also, in law, a civil death implies not a natural (that is, actual) death, but the loss or renunciation of all legal rights or status. Civic, while sometimes suggesting a merely perfunctory attitude, is more positive than civil; it commonly implies thoughtfulness for the feelings of others, united with polish of manners and address. Civic men were supposed to resemble the Athenian lecture rooms by Justinian—Inge.

Civilization, culture are comparable when meaning the particular state or stage of advancement in which a race, a people, a nation, a specific class, or an integrated group of these finds itself at a given period. Civilization always implies a definite advance from a state of barbarism; often it suggests the absence of all signs of barbarism or a divorce from all the ways of living, all the beliefs, all the conditions that distinguish a primitive from a civilized society. Civilization depends on the spread of civic virtue—Austen. The qualities of...survival and chivalry and gallantry attentiveness to women. But gallant suggests spirited and dashing or ornate and florid expressions of courtesy. Gallant and chivalrous imply courteous attentiveness to women. Civil, polite, courteous, courtly, gallant, chivalrous are comparable as applied to persons or their words and acts when in intercourse with others with the meaning observant of the forms required by good breeding. Civil commonly suggests the bare fulfillment of the ordinary requirements of social intercourse; it frequently implies little more than forbearance from rudeness. Civil, on the other hand, suggests rather the complex of attentions, beliefs, customs, and traditions which forms the background of a particular people or group, which distinguishes them from all other peoples or groups, and which gives their particular civilization, no matter how little or how far advanced, its peculiar quality or character. Greece for our purposes means not a race, but a culture, a language and literature, and still more an attitude towards life, which for us begins with Homer, and persists, with many changes but no breaks, till the closing of the Athenian lecture rooms by Justinian—Inge. It would no doubt have been more satisfactory to select a people like the Fijians rather than the Lithuanians, for they represented a more robust and accomplished form of a rather similar culture, but their culture has receded into the past—Ellis.

Civilization, culture, breeding, refinement

Barbarism—Con barbarity (see BARBARISM). barbarousness, savagery (see corresponding adjectives at BARBARIAN) claim vb *demand, exact, require

Ana *maintain, assert, defend, vindicate, justify: allege, *adduce, advance

Ant *disclaim: renounce — Con *disavow, disown, dis—

(reject, repudiate, refuse (see DECLINE): concede, allow, *grant: waive, cede, *relinquish: *forgo, abnegate

claim n Claim, title, pretension, pretense are comparable when they denote an actual or alleged right to demand something as one’s possession, quality, power, or prerogative. Claim carries the strongest implication of any of these terms of a demand for recognition; only the context can indicate whether that demand is regarded as justifiable or not or whether the right is actually asserted by the person involved (though the house was legally the daughter's, the father, as the one who had paid for it and had taken care of all taxes and insurance, had a moral claim to live there the rest of his life) (intelligent persons cannot accept the claims made for many patent medicines) (the advanced no claim to scholarly knowledge) (searching for truth as against all the claims and all the counterclaims of all the partisans—Lippmann) (liberty itself became ... a principle of anarchy rather than a body of claims to be read in the context of the social process—Laski) Claim also occurs in a more concrete sense as denoting the property or possession for which one sets up a claim (stake out a claim in an oil field) (title (see also NAME), on the other hand, distinctively imputes validity or justice to the claim, or its substantiation in law or in reason (his distinguished success as the governor of a great state gives him a title to our support of his candidacy for president) (many of the people who masquerade under the name of "men of science" have no sort of title to that name—Ellis) (they were discussed by men each of whom, in his own way, had some title to speak on them—Sat. Review) (pretension (see also PRETENSE, AMBITION)) is sometimes used in place of claim (gifts and exceliances to which Wordsworth can make no pretension—Arnold) and less often, in place of title (the courtier, the trader, and the scholar, should all have an equal pretension to the denomination of a gentleman—Steele) Very often, however, pretension connotes a lack of warrant or a weakness in the claim and may attribute to a measure of hypocrisy or deceit (this court disclaims all pretensions to such power—John Marshall) (his pretension, deftly circulated by press agents, was that he was a man of brilliant and polished mind—Mencken) (pretense has become rare in the sense of claim (see PRETENSE). Usually the term applies to an asserted claim (Marlborough calmly and politely showed that the pretense was unreasonable—Macaulay) but it may apply to a claim that is tacitly made in that one is assumed by another to be something that one is not or to have a right that one does not actually possess (she knew that she was in the house under false pretenses, for her host and hostess had warmly welcomed her as a daughter of old friends of the same name)

Ana assertion, affirmation, protestation, declaration (see corresponding verbs at ASSERT): *right, prerogative, birthright, privilege

clamor n *din, uproar, pandemonium, hubbub, babble, racket clamor vb *roar, bellow, bluster, bawl, vociferate, howl, ululate

Ana *shout, yell, scream, shriek, screech, holler: agitate, dispute, debate (see DISCUSS): *demand, claim clamorous vb *vociferous, blatant, strident, boisterous, obstreperous

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.
classify vb

Classify is a verb that means to place or arrange into categories or classes. It involves the act of dividing or organizing things into groups based on shared characteristics or attributes. The term is particularly useful in fields such as biology, economics, and data analysis, where it is applied to organize complex data into more manageable forms. For example, in a biological context, scientists classify organisms into species, genera, and other categories based on their similarities and differences. Similarly, in a business context, financial analysts may classify companies into industries or sectors based on their operational characteristics.

---

clean vb — clean, cleanse

Clean vb is a verb that means to remove dirt or impurities from a surface or object. It involves the act of washing or cleaning something to make it free from dirt, germs, or other contaminants. The term is applied in various contexts, from personal hygiene (cleaning hands with soap and water) to industrial processes (cleaning machinery to prevent malfunctions). For example, in a domestic setting, people often clean their dishes with soap and water to remove food residue, while in a medical setting, doctors may clean surgical instruments with harsh chemicals to prevent infection.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.
Con desert, forsake, *abandon: *relinquish, leave, resign, yield clinkers cinders, *ash, embers clip vb *shear, poll, trim, prune, lop, snip, crop Ana *cut, chop, slash: slit: curtail (see shorten): sever, *separate clique *set, circle, coterie Ana party, faction, bloc, ring, combine, *combination cloak vb mask, *disguise, disguise, camouflage Ana conceal, *hide, screen Ant uncloak —Con *reveal, disclose, discover, betray clodhopper bumpkin, yokel, rube, *boor, lout, *clown, churl clog vb fetter, hog-tie, shackle, manacle, *hamper, tramml Ana impede, obstruct, *hinder, block: balk, baffle, *frustrate: check, curb (see restrain) Ant expedite, facilitate —Con *free, liberate, release: forward, further, *advance, promote cloister n 1 Cloister, convent, monastery, nunnery, abbey, priory. Cloister and convent are general terms denoting a place of retirement from the world for members of a religious community; they may apply to houses for recleses of either sex. In such use cloister stresses the idea of seclusion from the world; convent, of community of living. Basically a monastery is a cloister for monks: in actual use it is often applied to a convent for men or occasionally for women who combine the cloistered life with teaching, preaching, or other work. Nunnery, which specifically denotes a cloister for nuns, is often displaced by convent with the same specific meaning. A monastery or nunnery governed by an abbot or an abbess is called an abbey: by a prior or prioress, a priory. A priory is subordinate in rank to, but often independent of, an abbey.
2 arcade, *passage, passageway, ambulatory, gallery, corridor, aisle, hall, hallway crone *variety, subspecies, race, breed, cultivar, strain, stock close vb 1 Close, shut are very close synonyms in the sense of to stop or fill in an opening by means of a closure (as a door, a gate, a lid, or a cover) and are often used interchangeably. However, they may have distinctive nuances of meaning and quite different implications in idiomatic use. Close is the more general term, usually implying both the act of stopping an opening and the result produced by such an act but stressing exclusion of those who would enter or pass through. Shut stresses the act or process and the means employed in this process; it not only carries a more emphatic implication or a more vivid suggestion of drawing a door, gate, lid, or window into a position which closes the opening, but it often also evokes an image of fastening securely (as by drawing a bar or a bolt or locking); hence, in closing a door or gate one merely draws it into a position which bars entrance or egress until it is again opened but in shutting a door or gate one pushes or pulls it into the position where it is closed. Idiomatically, one closes (not shuts) an opening or a gap or one closes (not shuts) a park or a church to the public, because in neither case is the use of a door, gate, or other means of exclusion clearly or definitely implied. On the other hand, in idiomatic use shut, especially when followed by up, out, or against, carries a stronger and often a more direct and emphatic suggestion than close of the interposition of a barrier or obstacle (often an immaterial, one) that effectually prevents ingress or egress (he found every road to the accomplishment of his desires shut against him) (he shut his eyes to everything he did not wish to see) (closed his eyes in death) (he was warned to shut his mouth) Ana *exclude, debar: block, bar, dam (see hinder)
Ant open
2 Close, end, conclude, finish, complete, terminate are comparable as transitive verbs meaning to bring something to a stopping point or to its limit, or, with the exception of complete, as intransitive verbs meaning to come to that point. Close usually has latent in it the idea of action upon something which may be regarded as in some sense open as well as unfinished (see close vb i) (close an account, a debate, or a subscription list) (recall those nights that closed thy toilsome days—Pope) (the Peace of Westphalia . . . which closed the Thirty Years’ War—Barr) End conveys a stronger sense of finality; it frequently has implicit reference to a progress or development which is thought of as having been carried through (the harvest is past, the summer is ended, and we are not saved—Jer 8:20) (ended his life) (ended his labors upon a book) Conclude is a more formal term and applies particularly to transactions, proceedings, or writings that have a formal or special close (concluded his speech with a peroration) (conclude a meeting with a benediction) (I shall conclude this essay upon laughter with observing that the metaphor of laughing . . . runs through all languages—Spectator) Finish implies that what one set out to do is done: often, therefore, it connotes the completion of the final act in a process of elaboration (as polishing or perfecting) (give the festive table a finishing touch) (I have finished the work which thou gavest me to do—John 17:4) (it wants but seventeen lines of having an end, I don’t say of being finished—Gray) (I shall finish with a Chopin nocturne—Hellman) Complete implies the removal of all deficiencies or a finishing of all that has been attempted (when Blondel paused about the middle, the king began the remainder, and completed it—Warton) Complete their education in Europe (art partly completes what nature is herself sometimes unable to bring to perfection—Ellis) (he may well have thought that his days would be few on earth, and that it would be foolish to put his hand to a task which he could not complete—Buchan) Terminate implies the setting of a limit in time or space (Ben Lomond terminates the view—Dorothy Wordsworth) (the age at which the youth of each nation terminates full-time education—Conant) (he had never seen the instrument that was to terminate his life—Dickens) (hostilities terminate at sundown)
Ana *stop, cease, quit, desist Con *begin, commence, start, inaugurate, initiate close adj 1 Close, near, nigh, nearby are comparable both as adjectives and as adverbs when they mean not far (as in place, time, or relationship) from the point, position, or relation that is indicated or understood. Close (see also close adj 2) commonly implies so slight a difference that the two things (sometimes persons) under consideration may be said to be almost in contact if the difference is in distance or almost coincident if the difference is in time, to be of the immediate family if the difference is in relationship, or to be very like the original if the difference is in a copy (the houses on this street are close together) (close relatives) (close friends) (hold one close) (the more accurately we use words the closer definition we shall give to our thoughts—Quiller-Couch) (a close shave) (give close attention to a problem) (a close translation of a passage) Near may often be used in place of close (events that come near to each other) (near relatives) but it carries a much less explicit suggestion of contiguousness or adjacency and may be used of persons or things that, though not far off (as in place, time, or relationship) are not almost in contact, almost coincident, or of the closefisted

immediate family <come near where I can see you>  Near also is applied to things reproduced (as by copying, imitating, or translating) that more or less closely resemble but are far from replicas of the original; in this sense the term is often used in depreciation <near beer>  <near silk> <near-leather upholstery> Nigh is somewhat outmoded or poetic in the sense of near. As an adverb it, even more often than near, is followed by to, unto, about, on, upon <he was sick nigh unto death—Phil 2:27> <now the day is over, night is drawing nigh—Baring-Gould> As an adjective it differs little from near except in sometimes being given preference in the comparative and superlative degrees to nearer and nearest <friend, brother, nearest neighbor—Whitman> Nearby indicates a position near in distance or close at hand <nearby towns> <the nearby houses> <there is no hotel nearby> Ana adjoining, *adjacent, contiguous, abutting: *related, kindred

Ant remote or remotely —Con *distant, removed, far, faraway, far-off

2 Close, dense, compact, thick are comparable when they mean having constituent parts (as filaments, particles, cells, or atoms) that are massed tightly together. Close may apply to the texture or weave of something <between the close moss violet-inwoven—Shelley>   More often, however, the term applies to something that is made up of a number of single things pressed or seemingly pressed together <he writes a close hand> <the troops fought in close formation> Especially as applied to literary expression, close implies a compression of what is to be said into the fewest and most telling words possible <it is a relief to turn back to the austere, close language of Everyday—T.S. Eliot> Dense applies to something in which the arrangement of parts or units is exceedingly close <dense clouds>    The term commonly implies impenetrability  and in extended use may lose the basic notion of close packing of parts  <dense stupidity> <dense silence> <Proust's book is a gigantic dense mesh of complicated relations—Edmund Wilson> Compact suggests close and firm union or consolidation of parts, especially within a small compact; it often also implies neat or effective arrangement <he was all compact and under his swart, tattooed skin the muscles worked like steel rods—Melville> <small, compact, homogeneous communities such as the Greek city state or Elizabethan England—Day Lewis> Thick (see also STICKY) usually applies to something which is condensed or is made up of abundant and concentrated parts <make the grael thick and slab—Shak>

Ana compressed, condensed, constricted (see CONTRACT vb): concentrated, compacted (see COMPACT vb)

Ant open —Con scattered, dispersed (see SCATTER): expanded (see EXPAND)

3 close-lipped, closemouthed, tight-lipped, secretive, reserved, taciturn, reticent, uncommunicative, *silent

Ant open (see FRANK) —Con *frank, candid, plain: garrulous, loquacious, *talkative, voluble, glib

4 intimate, confidential, chummy, thick, *familiar

Ant aloof

5 closefisted, tight, tightfisted, niggardly, parsimonious, penurious, *stingy, cheesepearing, penny-pinching

Ana *sparing, economical, frugal, thrifty

Ant liberal —Con generous, bountiful, bounteous, openhanded (see LIBERAL): lavish, prodigal (see PROFUSE)

closefisted —stingy, close, tight, tightfisted, niggardly, parsimonious, penurious, miserly, cheesepearing, penny-pinching

Ana, Ant, & Con see those at close adj close-lipped close, closemouthed, uncommunicative, taciturn, reserved, reticent, secretive, *silent, tight-lipped

Ant & Con see those at close adj

closemouthed close, close-lipped, tight-lipped, reticent, reserved, uncommunicative, *silent, taciturn, secretive

Ant & Con see those at close adj

cloot vb congeal, curdle, *coagulate, set, jelly, jell clothe, attire, dress, apparel, array, robe. Cloth, the least specific of these terms, means to cover or to provide what will cover (one’s body or whatever is bare) with or as if with garments <clothe the child warmly> <clothe your thoughts in words> <rugged clothes and softened with snow> The other words convey the same meaning but each one adds to it distinctive implications and connotations. Attire suggests a more careful process and more formality than cloth and therefore is avoided except when the context requires that note <he said it was for the honor of the Service that he arrayed himself so elaborately> but those who knew him best said that it was just personal vanity—Kipling> Dress is far less formal than attire and much richer in its connotations than cloth. It often suggests care in the choice and arrangement of clothes and sometimes, especially in dress up, preening and prinking or selection of one’s best or choicest clothes <children warmly but simply dressed for school> <every afternoon she dresses up and goes out> <dressed up in his Sunday clothes> Dress up sometimes distinctively implies an assuming of the dress of or a dress suitable to another <dress up as Cleopatra> while dress, especially in its intransitive or reflexive forms, often implies a change of clothes to those that are appropriate for a special occasion; thus, to dress for dinner implies a change into dinner or evening clothes <I shall not have time to dress> The idea of decking or adorning is frequently associated with dress especially in its extended senses <dress the hair with flowers> <dress the table for an elaborate dinner> <yet shall thy grave with rising flow'rs be dressed—Pope>

Apparel and array are chiefly literary words used when there is the intent to connote splendor, elegance, or gorgeousness in what a person or thing is clothed with <she had a garment of divers colors upon her: for with such robes were the king's daughters> appareled—2 Sam 13:18  <consider the lilies of the field, how they grow: they toil not, neither do they spin: and yet I say unto you, that even Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these—Mt 6:28, 29> <I rode with him to court, and there the Queen arrayed me like the sun—Tennyson>

Robe implies a dressing with or as if with a robe and has the same wide range of use as the noun especially in its intransitive or reflexive forms, often accompanied with dress especially in its extended senses <dress the hair with flowers> <dress the table for an elaborate dinner> <yet shall thy grave with rising flow'rs be dressed—Pope>

Apparel and array are chiefly literary words used when there is the intent to connote splendor, elegance, or gorgeousness in what a person or thing is clothed with <she had a garment of divers colors upon her: for with such robes were the king's daughters> appareled—2 Sam 13:18  <consider the lilies of the field, how they grow: they toil not, neither do they spin: and yet I say unto you, that even Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these—Mt 6:28, 29> <I rode with him to court, and there the Queen arrayed me like the sun—Tennyson>

Robe implies a dressing with or as if with a robe and has the same wide range of use as the noun especially in its intransitive or reflexive forms, often accompanied with dress especially in its extended senses <dress the hair with flowers> <dress the table for an elaborate dinner> <yet shall thy grave with rising flow'rs be dressed—Pope>
clothing 155

Dress is used with reference only to a wearer's outer clothing; it is not only far less inclusive than clothes and clothing but less concrete in its suggestions except when qualified (both men and women are expected to wear full dress) (the actors will be costumed in the period) (a man of sense carefully avoids any particular character in his dress—Chesterfield) (in pilgrimage dress on his way to Mecca—Dotty) Attire usually stresses the appearance or the total impression produced by one's clothes; it is therefore rarely used with reference to one's own clothes except in affectation or humorously; when applied to another person's, it is as a rule qualified (our speech, our color, and our strange attire—Pope) (his unfashionable attire and clumsy manners—Cole) Apparel (often specifically wearing apparel) carries a weaker suggestion of the effect produced and a stronger implication of a collection or assemblage of clothes than attire, which otherwise it closely resembles in meaning; therefore one says an article of apparel (rather than attire) and the richness of her attire (rather than apparel) (a blue serge suit, a grey shirt, a blue and red necktie, a gray homburg, and black shoes and gloves comprised his apparel) (the apparel oft proclaims the man—Shak.) (his daily apparel was rough and shabby—Cather) Raiment is a more or less literary term that is nearly as comprehensive as clothes, for it includes everything that is worn for decency, comfort, and adornment and therefore suggests reference to undergarments as well as to outer garments (brought a change of raiment with him) When the quality or the texture of the clothing is to be indicated, raiment is the appropriate word (fine raiment) (the coarse raiment of a penitent pilgrim) (but what went ye out for to see? A man clothed in soft raiment? behold, they that wear soft clothing are in kings' houses—Mt 11:8) (if these strangers were of important air and costly raiment—O’Nolan)

clothing clothes, dress, attire, apparel, raiment cloak vb obscure, dim, bedim, darken, eclipse, becloud, fog, befog, obfuscate

Ana *confuse, muddle, addle, befuddle: *puzzle, perplex, —Con dexterous, adroit: facile —Con deft (see Dexterous): graceful, dignified, elegant (see corresponding nouns at ELEGANCE): *elastic, resilient, flexible, supple, springy; *easy, effortless, smooth cluster n group, bunch, parcel, lot

Ana collection, assemblage (see under GATHER): aggregate, number, quantity (see SUM) clutch vb *grab, grab, take, seize, snatch

Ana capture, *catch: hold; *have, possess, own clutch n hold, grip, grasp

Ana seizing, grabbing, taking (see TAKE) coarse clother n *confusion, disorder, disarray, jumble, chaos, muddle, snarl coadjutor *assistant, helper, aid, aide, aide-de-camp

coagulate, congeal, set, curdle, clot, jelly, jel are comparable when meaning to form or cause to form a stiff mass that is solid or at least cohesive. Coagulate implies a thickening or solidification of a liquid and usually the making insoluble (as by chemical reaction) of something that was soluble (fresh blood exposed to air rapidly coagulates) (heat coagulates the white of egg) (waterborne impurities which coagulate when aluminum sulfate is added can be removed by filtration) Congeal specifically implies a thickening or solidification by means of cold; the mass thus affected may dissolve or become liquid when the temperature rises again (freezing temperatures have congealed the surface waters of the river) (there no hungry winter congeals our blood—Longfellow) Set (see also SET) carries no implication of how the stiffening, or making solid or viscid, occurs but only of the nature of the effect (rennet may be used in setting milk for cheese) (give the jelly time to set before adding a paraffin cover) Curdle basically implies the coagulation of milk (as through souring or the addition of rennet) into a soft but solid part (the curd) from which cheese is made, and the separation of this part from the watery part (the whey): in more general use the term connotes a thickening and sometimes a souring (Mark Twain was expressing his true opinions, the opinions of the cynic he had become owing to ... the constant curdling as it were of the poet in him—Brooks) (envy soon curdles into hate—Froude) Clot implies the coagulation or congealing of a liquid into lumps or masses or, less often, the gathering of something light and diffuse into hard accumulations or lumps (the blood not yet had clotted on his wound—Southey) (clotted cream) (the bed becomes uneasy by the feathers clotting together into hard knobs—Tucker) Jelly specifically implies the setting during cooling of a cooked liquid (as broth or juice of meats) containing gelatin from animal tissue or one (as fruit juice and sugar) containing the pectin of acid fruits (the jellied juice of the veal roast) (jellies and marmalades jelly readily if pectin is added to the boiling juice) Jell is basically identical to jelly (the jelly won't jell—Alcott) but unlike the latter it is often used especially in negative constructions to imply the state when nonmaterial things (as ideas or plans) attain fixity or cohesiveness (public opinion has not yet jelled on this question) (his ideas for the story would not jell, no matter how much he kept turning them over in his mind)

coalesce merge, fuse, blend, mingle, commingle, *mix, amalgamate

Ana compact, consolidate, concentrate, unify: *contract, condense, compress: cohere, adhere, *stick, cleave, cling: mass (see HEAP)

Con disintegrate, crumble, decompose (see DECAY): *separate, part, divide: deliquesce (see LIQUEFY): dissipate, disperse (see SCATTER) coalition fusion, confederacy, confederation, federation, *alliance, league coarse, vulgar, gross, obscene, ribald are comparable when applied to persons, their language, or behavior and mean offensive to a person of good taste or moral principles. Coarse is opposed to fine not only with reference to material things (as fiber, texture, or structure) but also with reference to quality of mind, spirit, manners, or words; it implies roughness, rudeness, crudeness, or insensitivity (whose laughs are hearty, though his jests are

Ana analogous words Ant antonyms Con contrasts words See also explanatory notes facing page 1
coarse—Pope 〈simple parables of the coarse businessman and the sensitive intellectual—De Voe〉 〈some of the royal family were as coarse as the king was delicate in manners—Henry Adams〉 Vulgar 〈see COMMON 3〉 suggests something that is offensive to good taste or decency, frequently with the added implication of boorishness or ill breeding 〈Caliban is coarse enough, but surely he is not vulgar—Hazlitt〉 〈Burns is often coarse, but never vulgar—Byron〉 〈it was, in fact, the mouth that gave his face its sensual, sly, and ugly look, for a loose and vulgar smile seemed constantly to hover about its thick coarse edges—Wolfe〉 Gross 〈see FLAGRANT〉 is opposed to fine in the sense of delicate, subtle, ethereal; it implies either a material, as contrasted to a spiritual, quality or a bestiality unworthy of man 〈the grosser forms of pleasure—Wharton〉 〈gross habits of eating—Caliban . . . is all earth, all condensed and gross in feelings and images—Coleridge〉 〈my anger and disgust at his gross earthy egoism had vanished—Hudson〉

Obscene stresses more strongly the idea of loathsome indecency or utter obnoxiousness 〈the war to him was a hateful thing . . . waged for the extension of the obscene system—Negro slavery—Parrington〉 〈an obscene allusion—The jest unclean of linkboys vile, and watermen obscene—Pope〉 〈the raffle of Comus . . . reeling in obscene dances—Macaulay〉 〈it was, of course, easy to pick out a line here and there . . . which was frank to indecency, yet certainly not obscene—Canby〉 Ribald suggests vulgarity and often such impurity or indecency as provokes the laughter of people who are not too fastidious 〈a ribald folksong about fleas in straw—Lowers〉 〈their backs . . . shaking with the loose laughter which punctuates a ribald description—Mary Austin〉 〈we stare, as in the presence of some great dignity from behind whom, by a ribald hand, a chair is withdrawn when he is in the act of sitting down—Beerbohm〉

An faint: refined —Con delicate, dainty, exquisite, *choice: cultivated, cultured (see corresponding nouns at CULTURE)

coast vb toboggan, *slide, glide, slip, skid, glissade, slither cox, cajole, wheel, blandish mean to use ingratiating art in persuasively or attempting to persuade. Coax implies gentle, persistent efforts to induce another or to draw what is desired out of another 〈in a coaxing voice, suited to a nurse soothing a baby—Burney〉 It most often suggests artful pleading or teasing in an attempt to gain one's ends 〈little by little, he coaxed some of the men whom the measure concerned most intimately to give in their views—Kipling〉 〈one . . . who can linger over and taste the attributes of the variable human mind to divine objects—T. S. Eliot〉 but it may be extended to other situations in which persevering yet careful efforts are used to attain an end 〈coax embers into a blaze〉 Cajoled may stress deceit (as by flattering or making specious promises) 〈they . . . should be treated as they themselves treat fools, this is, be cajoled with praises—Pope〉 It more often implies enticing or alluring and suggests beguilement rather than duplicity 〈I think a vein of sentiment . . . induced me to take the journey, and to cajole a reluctant friend into accompanying me—Rephiller〉

Wheelde suggests more strongly than cajole the use of soft words, artful flattery, or seductive appeal 〈she could wheelde the soul out of a saint—Hewlett〉 〈he had wheelde the Abeyta woman out of her geraniums, and left her pleased with herself for surrendering them—Mary Austin〉 〈no hucksters to wheelde you into buying souvenirs—Nebel〉

Blandin implies less artfulness than wheelde and more open flattery and a more apparent desire to win over by charming or alluring 〈would the blandishing enhancer still weave his spells around me—Dickens〉 〈found herself being blandished by millionaires—Rogow〉

Ana *induce, persuade, prevail, get: tease, pester (see WORRY); inveigle, entice, tempt, *lure cobble vb *botch, bungle, fumble, muddle cock vb stack, shock, pile, *heap, mass, bank

Ana *gather, collect, assemble
Con *scatter, disperse

cock n stack, shock, pile, heap, mass, bank (see under HEAP vb)

cocksure positive, certain, *sure

Ana *confident, assured, sanguine, presumptuous: pretentious (see SHOWY): *decided, decisive

Ant dubious, doubtful —Con modest, diffident (see SHY) coerce compel, *force, constrain, oblige

Ana *intimidate, bulldoze, bully, browbeat, cow: *threaten, menace: drive, impel (see MOVE): terrorize (see FRIGHTEN)

Con *induce, persuade, prevail, get: *coax, cajole, wheelde, blandish: *lure, entice, tempt, seduce, inveigle corruption compulsion, *force, violence, duress, constraint, restraint

Ana *power, might, puissance, strength: intimidation, bulldozing, bullying, browbeating (see corresponding verbs at ATTEMPT): threatening or threat, menacing or menace (see corresponding verbs at THREATEN) coevasive coeval, contemporaneous, *contemporary, synchronous, simultaneous, coincident, concomitant, concurrent coeval coevasive, synchronous, concurrent, simultaneous, coincident, concomitant, *contemporary, contemporaneous cogent convincing, compelling, telling, *valid, sound

Ana forceful, forcible, potent, *powerful, puissant: compelling, constraining (see FORCE vb): inducing, persuading or persuasive (see corresponding verbs at INDUCT): proving, demonstrating (see PROVE): *effective, effectual cogitate *think, reflect, deliberate, reason, speculate

Ana ponder, ruminate, meditate, muse: *consider, excogitate, weigh, contemplate, study: *think, conceive, imagine, envisage, envision cognate *related, allied, kindred, affiliated

Ana akin, alike, identical, similar (see LIKE): common, generic, general, *universal

Con diverse, *different, divergent, disparate, various cognizant *aware, conscious, sensible, alive, awake

Ana *conversant, versed: informed, acquainted, apprised (see INFORM)

Ant ignorant —Con *insensible, insensitive, impossible, anesthetic: ignoring, overlooking, slighting, neglecting (see NEGLECT): oblivious, unmindful, *forgetful cohere *stick, adhere, cleave, cling

Ana coalesce, fuse, merge, blend (see MIX): *fasten, attach, affix: *join, combine, unite, connect, associate

Con *detach, disengage: disentangle, untangle, diembarrass (see EXTRICATE) cohesion mean the quality or character of a whole all of whose parts cohere or stick together. Coherence usually implies a unity of such immaterial or intangible things as the points of an argument, the details of a picture, or the incidents, characters, and setting of a story, or of material or objective things that are bound into unity by a spiritual, intellectual, or aesthetic relationship (as through their clear sequence or their harmony with each other); it commonly connotes an integrity which makes the whole and the relationship of its parts clear and manifest (to treat the subject with the clearness and coherence of which it is susceptible—Wordsworth) (is there or is there not a spiritual coherence in Christianity, or is it only a gathering of laws and precepts, with no inherent connected spiritual philosophy?—Galsworthy) (scientific work . . . may indeed possess the appearance of beauty, because of the inner coherence which it shares with fine art—Alexander) (no more coherence than the scattered jangle of bells in the town below—Quiller-Couch) Coherence more often implies a unity of material things held together by such a physical substance as cement, mortar, or glue or by some physical force (as attraction or affinity) (a house stands and holds together by the natural properties, the weight and cohesion of the materials which compose it—T. H. Huxley) (what am I? Life? A thing of watery salt held in cohesion by unresting cells which work they know not why, which never halt—Masefield) Coherence may also be used of either material or immaterial things when the emphasis is on the process by which things cohere rather than on the resulting unity (a state composed of discordant races incapable of cohesion) Ana *unity, integrity, solidarity, union: clearness, perspicuousness, lucidity (see corresponding adjectives at CLEAR) Ant incoherence cohesion *coherence Ana unification, consolidation, concentration, compacting (see corresponding verbs at COMPACT): coalescence, fusing or fusion, blending or blend, merging (see corresponding verbs at MIX) Con disintegration, decomposition, crumbling (see corresponding verbs at DECAY): deliquescence (see corresponding verb at LIQUEFY) coil vb *wind, curl, twist, twine, wreath, entwine Ana *turn, revolve, rotate, circle coin n coinage, currency, specie, legal tender, cash, *money coinage coin, currency, cash, specie, legal tender, *money coincide concur, *agree Ana accord, correspond, jibe, harmonize, tally (see AGREE): *match, equal Ant differ—Con diverge (see SWERVE) coincident synchronous, simultaneous, concurrent, concomitant, coeval, coextensive, contemporaneous, *contemporary cold, cool, chilly, frigid, freezing, frosty, gelid, icy, glacial, arctic mean having a temperature below that which is normal or comfortable. Cold is the general term, often implying nothing more than a lack of warmth (a cold day) (a cold hand) (cold meat) It may also connote discomfort (shivering in her cold room) (battered by a cold wind) Cool suggests moderate and often refreshing coldness (a cool breeze) (a cool hand on a fevered brow) (a cool drink) but when hotness or warmth is desirable it, too, connotes something disagreeable (cool soup) (a cool radiation). Chilly implies coldness that makes one shiver (a chilly morning) (a chilly room) Frigid, freezing, and frosty imply temperatures below 32° Fahrenheit. Frigid stresses the intensity of the cold (a frigid climate) (frigid weather) and freezing its congealing effect (as on man, vegetation, and water) (a freezing wind) (freezing temperature) while frosty applies rather specifically to times or conditions in which fine ice crystals are deposited from atmospheric moisture onto a cold surface (frosty nights are usually clear and cold with little wind) Gelid is equivalent to freezing, but it somewhat more often stresses the resultant discomfort (so the leaden hours passed in the gelid darkness—Sitwell) (while sea-born gales their gelid wings expand—Goldsmith) Icy, when used to indicate a kind of coldness, implies frigidity so great as to be painful and cutting; it is applicable chiefly to winds, storms, and water (an icy rain) (an icy northeast wind) Basically glacial is very close to icy (the air in the cave was glacial, penetrated to the very bones—Cather) but its later association with glacier has given it an ambiguous cast in many locutions; thus, a glacial lake might be, according to context, either a painfully cold lake or one formed by the action of a glacier. Arctic is the strongest of these words in its suggestion of intense coldness. It connotes the frigidity of the polar regions and is usually a hyperbolic rather than an exact term (a winter notable for its arctic temperatures) When applied to persons, their temperaments, their acts and words, and their responses to stimuli, these words are also marked by differences in implications. Cold suggests absence of feeling or emotion, or less than normal love, sympathy, friendliness, sensitiveness, or responsiveness (his plea left us cold) (cold words) (he treated us with cold justice) (their cold intelligence, their stereotyped, unremitting industry repel me—L. P. Smith) (Okio, in spite of his unerring eye and his incomparable cunning of hand, was of too cold a temperament to infuse a powerful current of life into the old tradition—Binyon) Cool (see also COOL 2) stresses control over one's feelings or emotions, and therefore absence of excitement or agitation (this wonder, that when near her he should be cool and composed, and when away from her wrapped in a tempest of desires—Meredith) (both looked at life with a cool realism which was not allowed to become cynical—Buchan) Chilly, frosty, and freezing usually stress the effect of another's coldness; chilly connotes a depressing or repressive influence (a chilly greeting) (a chilly reception) while frosty connotes a checking or restraining of advances (a frosty smile) and freezing connotes a blighting or repelling (a freezing reply to a letter) (many . . . had been repelled by his freezing looks—Macaulay) Frigid suggests such a deficiency of natural feeling as is abnormal or repellent; it is specifically applicable to persons who are sexually passionless and averse to sexual intercourse, but it is often applied to things which are not, but by their nature should be, impassioned or infused with feeling or warmth (frigid verse) (a frigid religion) (frigid hospitality) Gelid and icy suggest a discomfitting chill (as in manner or conduct), the former sometimes stressing the power to benumb, the latter the power to pierce or stab (immediately, the long gelid, nightly silence fell between us—Spina) (sweeping her sympathizers with a gelid gaze—Paton) (her voice dropped into an icy gravity—Yerby) (a lady of the most arresting beauty and icy good breeding—Max Peacock) Glacial suggests a chilling lack of vitality or animation (Boston, for all its glacial perfection, has no intimacy at all—Virgil Thomson) (his manner more glacial and sepulchral than ever—Molloy) Arctic frequently adds to frigid a connotation of remoteness from all that is human or referable to humanity (exact and arctic justice—Mencken) Ant hot collate *compare, contrast collateral adj *subordinate, secondary, dependent, subject, tributary

Ana *related, allied, kindred, cognate; correlative, complementary, corresponding, reciprocal collation *comparison, parallel, contrast, antithesis

(see corresponding verbs at CONFIRM): emending or emendation, revising or revision, correcting or correction (see corresponding verbs at CORRECT)

colleague *partner, copartner, ally, confederate

Ana *associate, companion, comrade collect *gather, assemble, congregate

Ana mass, *heap, pile; *accumulate, amass, hoard; consolidate, concentrate, *compact

Ant disperse: distribute —Con *scatter, dissipate, dispel: Dispense, divide, deal, dole (see DISTRIBUTE): *separate, part, sever, sunder: * assort, sort collected composed, *cool, unruffled, imperturbable, unflappable, nonchalant

Ant distracted, distraught —Con agitated, perturbed, upset, disturbed, flustered, flurried (see DISCOMPOSE) collection assemblage, assembly, gathering, congregation (see under GATHER vb)

Ana heap, pile, mass, stack (see under HEAP vb): accumulation, hoarding or hoard (see corresponding verbs at ACCUMULATE)

collide *bump, clash, conflict

Ana hit, *strike: impinge, impact (see corresponding nouns at IMPACT): dash, charge, *rush collision *impact, impingement, clash, shock, concussion, percussion, jar, jolt

Ana striking, hitting (see STRIKE vb): wrecking or wreck, ruining or ruin, dilapidation (see corresponding verbs at RUIN): demolishment, destruction (see corresponding verbs at DESTROY) colonnade, arcade, arcature, portico, peristyle are discrimination as used in architecture. A colonnade is a row of columns (typically on the outside of a building) spaced at regular intervals and carrying an architrave or horizontal member lying directly across their capitals, so that the opening between each pair of columns is square-topped. A colonnade is usually applied not only to the columns but to the entire structure consisting of columns, roof, and pavement or to the space which they enclose. The word is used especially in reference to classical architecture. An arcade is a long series of arches with their supporting columns and piers together with the other members that complete the structure as an architectural feature. An arcade may be either inside or outside of a building: it may be a purely decorative feature or a means of admitting light and air. When purely decorative, the spaces between the arches and the piers may be filled in (sometimes providing niches for statues); this type of arcade is also called an arcature. An arcade may take the place of an outer wall (as of a gallery or cloister). Arcade is used especially of types of architecture (as the late Romanesque and the Gothic) in which the arch is an essential feature. Portico and peristyle are used in reference to architectural features employing the colonnade. When the colonnade extends across, or nearly across, one side of a building and serves as an entrance, it is called a portico; when it is continued so as to extend along three or, usually, all four sides of a building, it is called a peristyle.

color n 1 Color, hue, shade, tint, tinge, tone are comparable when they mean a property or attribute of a visible thing that is recognizable only when rays of light fall upon the thing and that is distinct from properties (as shape or size) apparent in dusk. Color is the ordinary term and, in precise use, the only generic term of this group. It may apply to the quality of blood which one describes as redness, of grass as greenness, of the sky as blueness, of snow as whiteness, or of ebony as blackness, or to the optical sensation which one experiences when one sees these things respectively as red, green, blue, white, and black. It may refer to any of the bands of the spectrum or to any of the variations produced by or as if by combination of one or more of these with another or with white, black, or gray. Color is also specifically applicable to the attribute of things seen as red, yellow, blue, orange, green, purple (the chromatic colors) as distinct from the attribute of things seen as black, white, or gray (the achromatic colors) <give a white house touches of color by painting the window sashes and shutters green> Hue, especially in poetry or elevated prose, is often synonymous with color (as brown in hue as hazelnuts and sweeter than the kernels—Shak.> <all the gradational hues of the spectrum from red through yellow, green, blue, to violet—Scientific Monthly> More specifically, hue suggests some modification of color (their shining green has changed to a less vivid hue; they are taking bluish tones here and there—Hearty> Shade is often used in the sense of one of the gradations of a color, especially as its hue is affected by its brilliance. Shade is a darker shade of blue  <various shades of gray> <the dark ultramarine of the west turns a shade paler—J. C. Van Dyke> Tint is also used as meaning a gradation of color in respect to brilliance, but it always suggests hue and is commonly used in reference to light colors that seem to be given by a light or delicate touching; thus, what are often called "pastel colors" or "pastel shades" are known also as tints. The term is not frequently used in contrast to shade, especially when the latter word connotes comparative darkness or dullness <the flags by the shore were turning brown; a tint of yellow was creeping up the rushes—Jeffries> <dark it appeared, but the precise tint was indeterminable—Hudson> <the sprays of bloom which adorn it are merely another shade of the red earth walls, and its fibrous trunk is full of gold and lavender tints—Cather> Tinge implies more of interfusion or stain than tint (autumn bold, with universal tinge of sober gold—Keats) <the water . . . imparts to the body of one bathing in it a yellowish tinge—Thoreau> Tone is a rather general word, sometimes equivalent to color but more often suggesting hue or a modification of hue (as a tint or tinge) <from strand to cloud-capped peak, the tone was purple—Beebe> <tone, which he plays with as has no other of the moderns, modifying color brightness to achieve his foreseen tonal harmony—Cheney>

Nearly all of these terms carry extended meanings derived from or related to the senses previously considered. Color usually suggests an outward character or aspect such as may be changed by circumstances <your love for him has changed its color since you have found him not to be the saint you thought him—Hardy> <it had been an essentially aristocratic movement—But . . . it took on a strongly democratic color—Menchower> color may be imparted to a thing to brighten and vivify it <people talk of matters which I had believed to be worn threadbare by use, and yet communicate a rich color . . . to them—Benson> Hue is less often used than color: it usually suggests a character rather than an aspect, but it does not necessarily imply an ingrained character <our mental hue depends...completely on the social atmosphere in which we move—Horace Smith

Tint applies to a character that is not dominant but imparted as if by contact or influence (our inborn spirits have a tint of thee—Byron) Shade and tinge are used in the sense of trace, touch, trifile (for this sense, see touch) (eyes that...had some tinge of the oriental—Edmund Wilson) (a tinge less cordial than usual) (a tinge of sadness)

2 usually in plural colors *flag, ensign, standard, banner, streamer, pennant, pendant, pennon, jack colorable *plausible, credible, believable, specious

Anna convincing, compelling, telling, cogent, sound, *valid colorless uncolored, achromatic mean without color. However, they are not freely interchangeable. Colorless is applied to something that is transparent (water is a colorless liquid) or to something that is bleached, bleached, or paliled (colorless leaves) (colorless cheeks and lips) Uncolored is applied to something that is left in its natural state or is not dyed or stained (uncolored oranges) or to objects which have not been touched or touched up with color (an uncolored photograph) Achromatic is applied to something that is free from any of the hues in the spectrum or from any hues formed by combinations of these or that gives images which are free from extraneous colors produced by refraction (an achromatic color) (an achromatic telescope) A color (in its inclusive sense) may be chromatic or achromatic: if the former, it has a hue; if the latter, it has not and is, therefore, white, black, or a pure gray

Anna *pale, pallid, ashen, wan: whitened, blanched, bleached, decolorized (see whitening)

Ant colorful colossal *huge, vast, immense, enormous, elephantine, torpid, sluggish, *lethargic

Anna monumental, stupendous, tremendous, prodigious, monstrous column *pillar, pilaster

comatose torpid, sluggish, *lethargic

Anna *languid, languorous, listless, languishing: phlegmatic, *impassive: *insensible, anesthetic, impassible: inert, passive, supine (see inactive)

Ant awake

comb vb *seek, search, scour, hunt, ferret out, ransack, combat

Combative *belligerent, bellicose, pugnacious, quarrelsome, contentious

Anna *aggressive, militant: strenuous, energetic, *vigorous, virile, manly, manful (see male)

Ant pacific

Combination, combine, party, bloc, faction, ring denote a union, either of individuals or of organized interests, for mutual support in obtaining common political or private ends. Combination is the most comprehensive of these terms, being applicable to any such union whether a trust, an alliance, or simply an association for the purpose of urging demands or resisting claims (a combination of citizens devoted to holding down taxes) (a combination of railroads to maintain existing rates) Combine is often interchangeable, especially in informal use, with combination (the coal combine) Often it may connote a combination with an improper or illegal aim in view (how the Mafia operates has been duplicated...in Ed Reid's book of that famous...combine—Kogan) (a combine that understands it must destroy...if it is actually to control—The Commonwealth) A party is a number of persons united in support of some opinion, cause, or principle; it usually implies a similar body in opposition, especially when used in reference to a political organization built up to continue the action and policies of government through election of its candidates to office (in the United States there are usually only two strong parties) (the Labour party in England) (he who draws his pen for one party must expect to make enemies of the other—Dryden) (who, born for the universe, narrowed his mind, and to party gave up what was meant for mankind—Goldsmith) Bloc implies a combination of persons or groups who otherwise differ in party or in interests for the sake of achieving a common and often temporary end; thus, in France and in Italy, a bloc is a combination of members of two or more political parties; in the United States, a bloc is a combination not of parties but of members of different parties who have a common end (the farm bloc formed by members from the agricultural states wishing to secure legislation helpful to their constituents) Faction frequently suggests a smaller body than party and commonly implies selfish ends and the use of unscrupulous or turbulent means (so several factions from this first ferment work up to foam and threat the government—Dryden) (the Whigs and Tories in Rome, Athens, and Jerusalem never forwent national points with more zeal, to attend to private faction, than we have lately—Walpole) Ring is applicable to an exclusive, often more or less secret, combination for a selfish and often corrupt or criminal purpose (as the control of a market, of political patronage, or of distribution of narcotics) (the Tweed Ring was in control of New York City politics for six years) Innocent women were frequently framed by a ring consisting of police officers, stool pigeons, bondsmen and lawyers—Ploscowe) Anna *monopoly, corner, pool, cartel, syndicate, trust

Combine vb 1 unite, associate, link, conjoin, *join, connect, relate

Anna *mix, mingle, commingle, blend, fuse, amalgamate: consolidate, unify (see compact vb)

Ant separate—Con part, divide, sever, sunder, divorce (see separate): *detach, disengage

2 *unite, cooperate, concur, conjoin

Anna coalesce, merge (see mix): coincide, *agree, concur

Combine n *combination, party, bloc, faction, ring

Anna see those at combination combustible adj Combustible, inflammable, flammable, incendiary, inflammatory, which are not close synonyms, since they apply to different types of nouns, are comparable because they mean showing a tendency to catch or be set on fire. Combustible applies chiefly to material which is of such a nature that it catches fire easily and usually burns quickly (excelsior is very combustible) (a combustible roof of pine shingles) Inflammable applies to materials ready to flame up at the slightest cause. The term, however, suggests more than the ease with which a thing burns, for it stresses a capacity for flaring up dangerously (the fire soon gutted the attic, which had been full of old papers and other inflammable materials) Inflammable as applied to persons, their natures, their hearts, and their temperaments stresses the danger as well as the ease in arousing them (as to anger, excitement, or passion); it applies also to a subject or situation that can induce such arousal (the vision of a single young woman is said to have overcome the inflammable monk—Meredith) (Don't trouble about it, Clym. They may get to be friends.” He shook his head. “Not two people with inflammable natures like theirs”—Hardy) A very inflammable subject to be raised at election time Flammable is equivalent to inflammable and used chiefly in respect to materials dangerously likely to flare up or explode (gasoline is a highly flammable substance requiring special care in storage and transportation) Incendiary not only stresses a capacity for starting up or causing a conflagration but a malicious intent to do the same. Therefore the term applies not only to something that is designed to cause fire but to fire that is caused by intent or design (an incendiary bomb) (an incendiary conflagration) The term may be extended to something (as an act, practice, speech, or publication) that tends to arouse something (as sedition, evil passions, or violence) that acts as destructively or disastrously as fire (incendiary ideas) (an incendiary policy) While the adjective is seldom applied to persons, the noun incendiary chiefly, except when used as short for such phrases as incendiary bomb, designates a person who maliciously or willfully sets fire to a building or other property or who deliberately incites quarrels, unrests, sedition, or violence. Inflammatory, like incendiary, emphasizes the power to cause a fire, especially in the hearts or minds of people, but it carries less suggestion of a malicious intent (taking to politics, he became a Chartist, and was found to be a capable inflammatory speaker—Lucas) this gentleman ... having been imprisoned fourteen months for inflammatory language anent the Federal Government—Reipplier

Come, burnable (see corresponding verb at burn): kindling, firing, igniting (see light vb) come, arrive are comparable because both basically mean to get to one point from another more or less distant in space, time, relation, or development. Come (with to) and arrive (with at) are synonyms of reach (see reach); thus, one comes to or arrives at the end of a journey; one comes to or arrives at a decision. Come is one of the elementary intransitive verbs of motion, always implying movement toward, and may be used wherever such movement, actual or apparent, physical or spiritual, is implied. Arrive, however, stresses rather the reaching of and the end of movement toward a destination. Come, therefore, may be used with or without the implication that the destination is reached; arrive consistently carries that implication (I can see them coming) (they will arrive at three o'clock) When used in reference to things that move or progress without an agent or agency (as because of some law of nature or in obedience to some inner law or principle) come is usually preferable unless a definite end or termination or, often, fulfillment (as of expectation) is suggested (the days come and go) (at last the day of departure arrived) (the longed-for breeze was slow in coming, but when it arrived it brought joy to all) (success never comes to those who await it idly; it usually arrives only after years of patient endeavor) Come often suggests or requires statement of a source of place from which a thing has issued; arrive, on the other hand, often suggests or requires a statement of an end, a goal, or a climax to a progress or development (the family comes from peasant stock) (the family arrived socially when the grandfather of the present baron was elevated to the peerage) In such cases come and arrive are not interchangeable, for the former is loosely synonymous with issue, emanate, originate, or arise and the latter with succeed, triumph, or (when followed by at) with acquire.

A approach, near: rise, arise, spring, proceed, emanate, issue, stem

Ant go — Con leave, depart, quit, withdraw, retire (see go)

Comely adj fair, pretty, bonny, handsome, lovely, beautiful, good-looking, beauteous, pulchritudinous

Ant homely

Comestibles provisions, viands, victuals, food, feed, provender, fodder, forage

Comfort n ease, rest, repose, relaxation, leisure

A contentedness or content, satisfaction (see corresponding adjectives under satisfy vb): enjoyment, joy, fruition, pleasure: relief, assuagement, alleviation (see corresponding verbs at RELIEVE)

Ant discomfort — Con distress, suffering, misery

Comfort vb Comfort, console, solace are comparable when meaning to give or offer a person help or assistance in relieving his suffering or sorrow. Comfort, the homelier, more intimate word, suggests relief afforded by imparting positive cheer, hope, or strength as well as by the lessening of pain and distress (he hath sent me . . . to comfort all that mourn—Isa 61:1-2) (a mother comforts her sobbing child) but there was about him a certain reserve, and she dared not comfort him, not even speak softly to him (D. H. Lawrence) Console, the more formal term, emphasizes rather the alleviation of grief or the mitigation of the sense of loss than the communication of pleasure; it frequently implies some definite source of relief (the presence of his friend consolated him) (console oneself by philosophic reflections) (if you really want to console me, teach me rather to forget what has happened—Wilde) (his father's letter gave him one of his many fits of melancholy over his own worthlessness, but the thought of the organ consolated him—Butler d.1902) Solace frequently suggests relief from distressful emotions (as weariness, despondency, chaplain, loneliness, or dullness) rather than from grief or pain, and often, specifically, a lift of the spirits; the source of that relief is more often things than persons (solace oneself with books) (though you rail against the bar and the imperfect medium of speech, you will be solaced, even in your chaplain, by a sense of injured innocence—Cardozo)

Ant delight, gladden, rejoice, please: relieve, assuage, mitigate, alleviate: refresh, restore (see renew)

Ant afflict: bother — Con distress, trouble: torment, torture, try (see afflict): vex, annoy, irk

Comfortable, cozy, snug, easy, restful are comparable when they mean enjoying or providing conditions or circumstances which make for one's contentment and security. Comfortable usually implies the absence of whatever gives trouble, pain, or distress in any degree or of any kind to the body or mind (a comfortable chair) (a comfortable room both in summer and in winter) (he is never comfortable except in his own home) (a makeshift arrangement not altogether agreeable or comfortable for either of us—Ellis) but it often applies to persons or things that encourage in one serenity of mind, tranquillity, a sense of well-being, or complacency (the family was left in comfortable circumstances) (a comfortable, motherly woman) (diverted from senseless controversy into comfortable monologue—Jan Struther) Cozy suggests comfortableness derived from warmth, shelter, ease, and friendliness (a cozy fire) (a cozy armchair) (close all the windows and doors so as to make the house cozy) (the cozy talk by the fireside—J. R. Green) (Wimsey gratefully took in the cozy sitting room, with comical comic
adj comical, laughable, farcical, funny, droll, risible, ludicrous, ridiculous

vb
command

— Con (see also NEAT) suggests the state or the frame of mind of one who has as much room, or responsibility, or freedom, or money as is essential to his well-being but no more than he actually needs to be cozy, content, or secure; the term usually connotes such comfort as is associated with small but comfortable quarters as distinguished from those that are spacious or with a quiet, restricted, but pleasant way of life as distinguished from one where there is little time for one's own interests or where one is driven by ambitions or restlessness; often, specifically, the term emphasizes protection from the elements, and warmth and dryness, as contributions to one's comfort (all the gypsies and showmen...lay snug within their carts and tents—Hardy)

<s>Arnold the heartbroken outcast from the snug house-hold of faith, wearing in spiritual wastes of sand and thorns—Montague</s>

Easy (see also EASY 2) implies relief from all that makes for discomfort or hardships, with the result that one is happy or free from care, anxiety, trouble, or doubt (he is in easy circumstances for the first time in his life) (she could now enjoy herself with an easy conscience) (people of the right sort are never easy until they get things straight—Mrs. Struthers—Con)

Ana
comforting, consoling, solacing (see COMFORT vb) content or contented, satisfied (see under SATISFY) grateful, welcome, agreeable, gratifying (see PLEASANT)
Ant
uncomfortable: miserable —Con (see MISERABLE): distressing, troubling (see TROUBLE vb) annoy ing, vexing, irritating, bothering (see ANNOY)

comic
adj
comical, laughable, farcical, funny, droll, risible, ludicrous, ridiculous

Ana
diverting, amusing, entertaining (see AMUSE):
*witty, humorous, facetious: grotesque, antic, *fantastic
Ant
tragic —Con (see TERRORISM): distressing, troubling (see TROUBLE vb)
an noying, vexing, irritating, bothering (see ANNOY)

comical
comical, farcical, ludicrous, ridiculous, *laughable, risible, droll, funny

Ana
absurd, silly, *foolish: jocular, jocose, humorous (see WITTY): waggish, impish, roguish, sportive (see PLAYFUL): deriding or derisive, ridiculing, mocking (see corresponding verbs at RIDICULE)

Ant
pathetic —Con (see TERRIBLE): distressing, troubling (see TROUBLE vb)

comity amity, goodwill, *friendship

Ana
*association, society: companionship, comradeship (see base words at ASSOCIATE): concord, accord, *harmony

command
vb
Command, order, bid, enjoin, direct, instruct, charge mean to issue orders to someone to give, get, or do something. Command and order agree in stressing the idea of authority, command implying its more formal and official exercise (the chairman commands the undertaking—Kefauver) and order, its more peremptory, sometimes even arbitrary, exercise: thus, a king, a military officer, the captain of a ship, commands; a landowner orders a trespasser off his premises; one is apt to resent being ordered, except by those who have a right to command. But order is used by a physician with no such connotation (the doctor ordered outdoor exercise) Bid in this sense is usually somewhat literary or informal; it usually implies an ordering or directing (often with a suggestion of peremptoriness) directly and by speech (she bade him be seated) (he seized him by the collar and sternly bade him cease making a fool of himself—Shaw) Enjoin adds to the idea of authority the implication of urging or warning; direct and instruct suggest especially business, official, or diplomatic relations, direct being perhaps the more mandatory, instruct the more formal, of the two (a parent enjoins his children to be quiet) (the church enjoin certain duties) (the editor directed his secretary to admit no callers during a conference) (instruct an assistant to gather certain information) (St. Peter...enjoins us to be ready always to give an answer to every man that asks us a reason for the faith that is in us—Lowes) (why otherwise does it [the Constitution of the United States] direct the judges to take an oath to support it?—John Marshall) Charge, chiefly a literary term, implies not only enjoining but the imposition of a task as a duty (Mrs. Yeobright gave him the moneybags, charged him to go to Misstover—Hardy) (Gustavus...considered himself charged by God with the defense of the true Lutheran faith—Barr)

Ana
control, manage, *conduct, direct: exact, *demand, require: *force, compel, coerce, constrain, oblige Ant comply, obey command n

1 Command, order, injunction, bidding, behest, mandate, dictate mean a direction, that must or should be obeyed, to do or not do something. Command imputes to the person who issues the directions either unquestioned authority (the commands of a general) or complete control of a situation (the command of the intruder he held up his hands) The term usually connotes either peremptoriness or imperativeness (at the command of his father he returned to the house—Lowe) (every request of hers he interpreted as a command) encroachment to some extent there is by every command or prohibition—Cardozo)

Order is not always clearly distinguishable from command; it is, however, the preferred word for directions to subordinates that are instructions as well as commands; in such use it commonly implies explicitness in detail (the troops were awaiting orders from headquarters) (in response to the principal's order, the pupils maintained silence while passing through the corridors) (refusal to recognize the authority of the emperor amounted to a refusal to take orders—Pharr)

Injunction carries a weaker implication of imperativeness than the preceding words except in legal use, where it is applied to a court order commanding a person to do or more often to refrain from doing something on the penalty of being adjudged guilty of contempt of court. In general use the word stresses admonition without losing the implication of expected or demanded obedience (the high injunction not to taste that fruit—Milton)

<she carefully obeyed the injunctions laid upon her by her physician> (delivered stern injunctions)

Bidding, chiefly literary, usually implies the status of master or parent in the person who issues the orders and therefore stresses expected obedience or the fact of being obeyed (thousands at his bidding speed—Milton) (at the ghostly bidding of the cloud, the surly summons of the sun—Aiken)

Behest is also distinctly literary and equivalent to bidding in its implications (do his master's high behest—Scott) (during the war, it is true, at the behest of government agencies, many writers worked into their serials incidents and dialogue of a worthy sociological nature—Thurber)

Mandate (see also MANDATE 2) carries the strongest implication of imperativeness of all of these words, for it denotes a command or order issued by a commend, commemorate
vb
A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

judicious or restrained praise, but it suggests as its motive criticize, reprehend, censure: admonish — praise, laud, extol, eulogize, acclaim — flattery in the manner or words of praise the visitors complimented, and Madame Defarge knew enough been so complimented, and Madame Defarge knew enough thing police commissioner publicly commended the —Skinner) Applaud implies an enthusiastic expression of approval; it usually applies to a command or authoritative judgment uttered by an inner voice (as of the conscience) or formulated in a principle or law the government which has a right to do an act, and has imposed on it the duty of performing that act, must, according to the dictates of reason, be allowed to select the means—John Marshall (a suspicion that . . . the moral law speaks in equivocal tones to those who listen most scrupulously for its dictates—L. P. Smith) command adds to it to men of other times and commend it to men of other times and places—Cohen) Recommend adds to commend the implication of offering something that is praised for acceptability, use, or employment by another the physician recommended the treatment of bruises with alternating cold and hot applications his present employers highly recommended him to his prospective employers a spare hour, I can recommend no more diverting pursuit —Skinner) Applaud implies an enthusiastic expression of approval; it usually suggests approval by a large number of persons or by the public the president was applauded for his closing of all banks in the crisis everybody applauded the mayor’s proposed entertainment, especially when it became known that he meant to pay for it all himself—Hardy) Compliment stresses either courtesy in the commendation or, sometimes, flattery in the manner or words of praise the visitors to the convention complimented the townpeople on the arrangements made for their comfort ("Marvelous cognac this, madame!") It was the first time it had ever been so complimented, and Madame Defarge knew enough of its antecedents to know better—Dickens commercial adj Commercial, mercantile are comparable when they mean of, relating to, or dealing with the supplying of commodities. Commercial is the more widely applicable term: it may be used in reference to anything which has to do with the buying or selling of commodities for profit, with their transportation, and sometimes, even, with their production, or with business affairs in general; thus, a commercial transaction is any piece of business involving a buyer and seller of goods or property that is for the financial benefit of the seller; commercial law deals with all matters (as contracts, negotiable papers, liens, payment of debts, and partnerships) that have reference to business; a commercial attaché is, in the United States, an officer of the Department of Commerce attached by the Department of State to an embassy or legation in a country where trade is important. Also, commercial is used to describe whatever has for its aim financial profit or is guided by the methods or practices of business the commercial theater) (commercial aviation) (commercial sports) (commercial radio programs are programs paid for by advertisers) Mercantile is often used interchangeably with commercial with little difference in meaning; thus, a mercantile transaction is not ordinarily distinguishable from a commercial transaction, nor mercantile law from commercial law. The term, however, more often suggests actual buying and selling (the occupation of a merchant) than commerce in general including production and transportation and is therefore more restricted in its application; thus, a commercial house is a business or company engaged in foreign or domestic commerce: a mercantile house is a business, usually wholesale, engaged in merchandising (mercantile agent) (mercantile establishment).

commingle mingle, blend, *mix, merge, coalesce, fuse, amalgamate

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.
commit vb 1 Commit, entrust, confide, consign, relegate are comparable when they mean to assign to a person or place for some definite end or purpose (as custody or safekeeping). Commit is the widest term; it may express merely the general idea of delivering into another's charge <commit the management of an estate to an agent> <on landing in Boston in 1872, my father and I were able safely to commit our trunk to the expressman—Santayana> or it may have the special sense of a transfer to a superior power or to a place of custody <into thine hand I commit my spirit—Ps 31:5> <we therefore commit his body to the ground; earth to earth, ashes to ashes, dust to dust—Book of Common Prayer>

2 committed, entrusting, confiding, conveying, entrusting (see corresponding verbs at DEPLORE): pitifulness, piteousness, pitiableness (see corresponding adjectives at PITIFUL)

Ant ruthlessness, pitilessness

commission vb *authorize, accredit, license

commit vb 1 Commit, entrust, confide, consign, relegate are comparable when they mean to assign to a person or place for some definite end or purpose (as custody or safekeeping). Commit is the widest term; it may express merely the general idea of delivering into another's charge <commit the management of an estate to an agent> <on landing in Boston in 1872, my father and I were able safely to commit our trunk to the expressman—Santayana> or it may have the special sense of a transfer to a superior power or to a place of custody <into thine hand I commit my spirit—Ps 31:5> <we therefore commit his body to the ground; earth to earth, ashes to ashes, dust to dust—Book of Common Prayer>

2 committed, entrusting, confiding, conveying, entrusting (see corresponding verbs at DEPLORE): pitifulness, piteousness, pitiableness (see corresponding adjectives at PITIFUL)

Ant ruthlessness, pitilessness

commission vb *authorize, accredit, license

people than does vulgar, which even in this sense nearly always carries derogatory connotations (as of inferiority or coarseness) (a popular song dancing . . . of all the arts . . . most associated in the popular mind with pleasure —Ellis this mode of interpreting Scripture is fatal to the vulgar notion of its verbal inspiration—Arnold a popular instead of an accurate and legal conception of what the word monopolize in the statute means—Justice Holmes we were reluctant to expose those silent and beautiful places to vulgar curiosity—Cather Ana prevalent, *prevailing, rife, current: *usual, customary: *plentiful, abundant, ample Ant uncommon: exceptional —Con rare, *infrequent, occasional: singular, unique, peculiar, odd, *strange commonplace n Commonplace, platitude, truism, bromide, commonplace which fit them for narrower use in specific senses. Commotion designates great physical, mental, or emotional excitement, it indirectly suggests commotion represents mental or emotional excitement, it indirectly suggests movement in heightening the ideas of unrest and perturbation (eighteen years of commotion had made the majority of the people ready to buy repose at any price—Macaulay) Agitation, on the other hand, suggests a stirring up or a shaking up comparable physically to that accompanying a fermentation or to boiling or seething (the agitation of the earth's crust during an earthquake Usually it describes strong emotional excitement that, whether controlled or not, causes distress or pain to the person involved (that sickening agitation of the heart which arises from hope deferred—Scott ‘Pray,’ said Mr. Lorry . . . bringing his left hand . . . to lay it on the suppuratory fingers that clasped him in so violent a tremble, ‘pray control your agitation’—Dickens) It may also refer to the stirring up of men's minds and emotions on some usually emotionally charged matter or question (political agitation by foreign agents an anti-Catholic agitation that was marked by the destruction of churches—Amer. Guide Series: N. Y. Tumult may mean, generally, either commotion or agitation that is characterized by uproar, din, or great disorder (the tumults and the shouting dies, the captains and the kings depart—Kipling) It also may apply specifically to a riot or fracas or to an insurrection or rebellious outbreak (the tumults and disorders of the Great Rebellion had hardly been subdued—T. S. Eliot) but it is equally applicable to other things (as a violent disturbance of the elements or an agitating conflict of passions) that suggest in combination noise, disorder, and intense excitement (thunders and lightens . . . what tumult's in the heavens?—Shak) (the gods approve the depth, and not the tumult, of the soul—Wordsworth) Turmoil implies a state where nothing is at rest and where everything seethes with excitement. It is applicable to a state of physical commotion or to a condition of mental or emotional agitation, but in all cases it carries a suggestion of harassment and of ferment from which there seems no escape. In fact, it often connotes the point of view of a person who loves peace and hates disturbance (her life had been calm, regular, monotonous . . . now it was thrown into . . . indescribable turmoil—Bennett) (the child's inner life is often a turmoil of terrors and anxieties of which his parents know almost nothing—Inge) (the great peace beyond all this turmoil and fret compassed me around—L. P. Smith) Turbulence implies an excitement that cannot be easily put down or allayed; it may suggest impetuosity, insubordination, unruliness, lack of discipline, or comparable qualities in inanimate things (yon foaming flood seems motionless as ice; its dizzy turbulence eludes the eye, frozen by distance—Wordsworth) (it required all the personal influence of the king to check the turbulence of his irritated followers—Pattison) (the rest exhibited plenty of the turbulence of passion, but none of the gravity of thoughtful emotion—Quiller-Couch) Confusion (see also confusion) applies chiefly to a mental state which may affect one person or many and which is marked by such a condition that the mind is at sea and unable to function; usually it suggests perturbation and inability to think coherently often as a result of embarrassment or discomfort (the crown was slowly emerging from the mental confusion which followed the fall—Ellis to cover his confusion, he half turned away—Anderson) Convulsion and upheaval suggest large-scale violent activity, commotion, or agitation. More particularly convulsion implies a sudden, surging, confused, or spasmodic action (as in the earth's crust, the individual's mind, or the body politic) (flourishing cities were demolished by the earth's convulsion—Martín commune

Gardner: 'a convulsion of wild laughter' (the vast social convulsions of a continent in travail—Niebuhr) while upheaval implies a violent and forceful thrusting that results in a heaving up or overthrowing (an emotional upheaval as shattering as an earthquake—Gough) (there had also been social upheavals before the Reformation—J. R. Lowell)

Ana hubbub, racket, *din, uproar, pandemonium: *motion, movement: *stir, bustle, flurry, ado

Con calmness or calm, placidity, tranquillity (see corresponding adjectives at Calm): quietness or quiet, silence or stillness (see corresponding adjectives at Still) commune vb *confer, consult, advise, parley, treat, negotiate

Ana converse, talk, *speak: *discuss, debate, argue communicable *infectious, contagious, catching communicate, impact mean to convey or transfer something (as information, feelings, or qualities) neither tangible nor concrete; they differ chiefly in emphasis, communicate stressing the result, impart rather the process, of the transfer. To communicate (the more general term) is to make common to both parties or objects involved the knowledge or quality conveyed: to impart is to share with another what is regarded as primarily one's own <his courage communicated itself to his men> <the smoke imparted its odor to his clothes> <teaching is essentially an imparting of one's knowledge or skill to others> <I wonder do we ever succeed really in communicating our thoughts to one another—Shaw> (you are worth to society the two marriages with the Dutch Vandergraves had consolidated these qualities of thrift and handsome living—Wharton)

Unify implies a union of heterogeneous or homogeneous parts, elements, or individuals that results in the making or producing of something that has oneness and integrity and that stands by itself as a thing apart; the term does not, however, carry as strong an implication of solidarity as does consolidate but, on the other hand, it places stress on the integration of parts so that each does its appointed work or serves its own purpose to the benefit not only of itself but of the whole; thus, a dramatist unifies (not consolidates) the play he composes; after a civil war, the task of the government is to unify (rather than consolidate) a nation; the imagination of a great poet unifies a mass of images and impressions; the Homeric poems may have been originally a collection of narrative poems, but it seems likely that one person unified them <would now be technically possible to unify the world and abolish war—Russell> Concentrate usually carries the implication of bringing together a number of things that are scattered or diffused and of massing them around a point or center; <concentrate troops at places where an attack is expected> <concentrate one's efforts on a single piece of work> (the science of that age was all divination, clairvoyance . . . seeking in an instant of vision to concentrate a thousand experiences—Wharton) Concentrate may be extended to imply the fixing of the mind or attention on one thing so that all distracting objects or thoughts are eliminated <her excitement made her unable to concentrate on the task> A similar implication of eliminating whatever weakens, dilutes, or adulterates is found in technical use; thus, the chemist concentrates a solution by evaporating the solvent; a miner concentrates ores (i.e., separates the base from the precious metals) by a machine or by washing compact vb Compact, consolidate, unify, concentrate are comparable when meaning to bring or gather together the parts, particles, elements, or units of a thing so as to form a close mass or an integral whole. Compact stresses the process more than the effect. It usually suggests a packing or pressing together of many things so as to form a closely arranged mass or a dense substance and may be used in reference both to material and immaterial things; sometimes it carries so strong an implication of solid formation or construction that it fundamentally means to build firmly or to strengthen <heat and lack of rain have compacted the soil> <compact matted fibers of wool and hair into felt by rolling and pressing> <sweet spring . . . a box where sweets compacted lie—Herbert> (it is based on solid facts, may, is compacted of solid facts from the first sentence to the last—Times Lit. Sup.)

Consolidate implies a merging or uniting, often in an exceedingly close union, of previously distinct but usually homogeneous or complementary things. The term may take as its object such a whole as a nation, a people, or an empire or as a substance or material and may imply a process which promotes the binding together of the parts, elements, or individuals so that solidarity or solidity is achieved <war tends to consolidate a people> <organize state leagues for political action in order to consolidate the labor vote—Watkins> <rolling and cooling consolidated the newly laid asphalt into a firm smooth pavement> But consolidate can also take as its objects the units (as parts, elements, individuals, or groups) which have been brought together in close union (these organizations worked independently, and subsequently they were partially consolidated—Heiser) <two marriages with the Dutch Vandergraves had consolidated these qualities of thrift and handsome living—Wharton>)

Con conceal, *hide: *suppress, repress: withhold, hold, keep back, reserve (see Keep) compact adj dense, *close, thick

Ana compressed, condensed, contracted (see Contract vb): concentrated, consolidated, compacted (see Compact vb): solid, *firm, hard: *tight

Con *loose, slack: diffuse, prolix, verbose, *wordy: versing, talking (see Speaking): *news, tidings, advice, information compact noun a thousand experiences—Wharton) Concentrate usually carries the implication of bringing together a number of things that are scattered or diffused and of massing them around a point or center; <concentrate troops at places where an attack is expected> <concentrate one's efforts on a single piece of work> (the science of that age was all divination, clairvoyance . . . seeking in an instant of vision to concentrate a thousand experiences—Pater) Concentrate may be extended to imply the fixing of the mind or attention on one thing so that all distracting objects or thoughts are eliminated <her excitement made her unable to concentrate on the task> A similar implication of eliminating whatever weakens, dilutes, or adulterates is found in technical use; thus, the chemist concentrates a solution by evaporating the solvent; a miner concentrates ores (i.e., separates the base from the precious metals) by a machine or by washing

Con dissipate, disperse, *scatter: separate, part, divide compact noun Pact, entente, convention, concordat, treaty, cartel, *contract, bargain companionable *social, cooperative, convivial, gregarious, hospitable

Ana friendly, neighborly, *amicable: *amiable, obliging, complaisant, good-natured: sociable, affable, *gracious, cordial

Con uncongenial, unsympathetic (see Inconsonant): reserved, taciturn, uncommunicative (see Silent)
A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.
compassion, ken, purview

Analogous words
- compendium
- compendious summary, pithy, succinct, *concise, terse
- compelling

Contrasted words
- tenderness, compassionateness, responsiveness, warmheartedness (see corresponding adjectives at TENDER)
- mercy, charity, grace, lenity, clemency

Contrasted words
- indifference, aloofness, unconcern (see corresponding adjectives at INDIFFERENT)
- merciless, unrelenting, relentless, implacable

Compatible words
- compatible
- congruous, *consonant, consistent, congruous

Compendium
- compendious
- digest, abridged, abbreviated, shortened (see SHORTEN)

Compensate
- compensate vb 1 Compensate, counterbalance, balance, offset, counterbalance, counterpoise are comparable when meaning to make up for or to undo the effects of.

Compendium
- aperçu
- compendious summary, pithy, succinct, *concise, terse

Compell
- *force, coerce, constrain, oblige

Compelling
- impel, drive, *move: *command, order, enjoin

Compendious
- extraneous

Compassionate
- tender, sympathetic, warmhearted, warm, responsive

Compassion
- pitty, pitiful, piteous: merciful, *forbearing, clement
- humane: benevolent, *charitable

Competent
- competent

Compatible
- compatible
- congruous, *consonant, consistent, congruous

Compat
- compat, *close: condensed, contracted (see CON-}

Compassion
- tender, sympathetic, warmhearted, warm, responsive

Compat
- compact, *close: condensed, contracted (see CON-}

Con
- indifference, aloofness, unconcern (see corresponding adjectives at INDIFFERENT)
- merciless, unrelenting, relentless, implacable, *grim:

Compatible
- compatible
- congruous, *consonant, consistent, congruous

Compensate
- compensate vb 1 Compensate, counterbalance, balance, offset, counterbalance, counterpoise are comparable when meaning to make up for or to undo the effects of.

Compendium
- aperçu
- compendious summary, pithy, succinct, *concise, terse

Compell
- *force, coerce, constrain, oblige

Compelling
- impel, drive, *move: *command, order, enjoin

Compassionate
- tender, sympathetic, warmhearted, warm, responsive

Compassion
- pitty, pitiful, piteous: merciful, *forbearing, clement
A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.
Democracy—Schlesinger b. 1917)

Anna self-assured, self-confident, self-possessed, assured, confident (see corresponding nouns at CONFIDENCE); conceited, egotistic, egotistic (see corresponding nouns at CONCEIT); proud, vain, vainglorious (see under PRIDE n)

Con *humble, modest: diffident, *shy complaint ailment, *disease, disorder, condition, affection, malady, distemper, syndrome

complaisant obliging, good-natured, *amiable complement

Complement, supplement are comparable both as nouns meaning one thing that makes up for a want or deficiency in another thing and as verbs meaning to supply what is needed to make up for such a want or deficiency. Complement implies a completing; it may suggest such a relation between two things or two groups of things that if they are put together they form a whole, or the full number, amount, or quantity necessary for a given purpose; thus, a grammatical complement is a word or phrase which must be added to a predicate if the latter is to make a definite assertion (as in "he feels well," free in "to set him free," of no use in "it proved of no use") (bought a farm complete with its complement of implements and livestock) (you need two more chairs to complement those you already have in the room). However, the term even more often suggests such disparity in two things that what is supplied by either one is lacking in the other, with the result that their actual or theoretical combination gives a completeness that constitutes or approaches perfection (had found someone whose . . . masculinity was the very complement of his own fragile graces—Horace Gregory) (no adequate conception of the pictorial art of Asia can be attained without taking account of these wonderful works [of Japanese figure painting], complementing, as they do, the philosophic and poetic art which culminated in the Chinese painting of the Sung era—Binyon) (the chief products of Belgium and the Netherlands appeared to complement more than to duplicate one another—Valentine) Supplement implies an addition to something relatively complete but capable of improvement, enrichment, or enhancement by such an addition; thus, a supplement to a newspaper (often, a "book supplement" or "literary supplement") is an additional section which enriches the character of the issue. Usually the term means exactly this (a year of foreign travel is an excellent supplement to a college education) (supplement a work with an index) (the detailed study of history should be supplemented by brilliant outlines—Russell) Sometimes, however, the term carries the implication of needless addition (the policy of apartheid is only a political supplement to an economic policy—Ross) Sometimes, on the other hand, it comes close to complement in suggesting essential differences or a need of combination if perfection is to be attained (physics, history, and religion have their different valuations of experience—Russell) A complete philosophy would find room for all and would show how they supplement each other—Inge (the settle, which is the necessary supplement to a fire so open that nothing less than a strong breeze will carry up the smoke—Hardy)

Anna counterpart, correlate, *parallel

complement vb (see under COMPLEMENT n)

Anna complete, finish, *close

complementary, complementary *reciprocal, correlative, corresponding, convertible

Anna complementing, supplementing (see corresponding verbs under COMPLEMENT n); completing, finishing (see close vb); related, associated (see join)

Con *different, diverse, divergent, disparate: inconsiderant, incompatible, incongruous, inconsistent

complete adj *full, plenary, replete

Anna entire, *whole, total, all: *perfect, intact, whole, entire

Ant incomplete

complete vb finish, conclude, *close, end, terminate

Anna effect, fulfill, achieve, execute, accomplish, *perform, discharge

Con initiate, inaugurate, start, *begin, commence complex adj Complex, complicated, intricate, involved, knotty are comparable when they mean having parts or elements that are more or less confusingly interrelated. Something is complex which is made up of so many different interrelated or interacting parts or elements that it requires deep study or expert knowledge to deal with it (the complex mechanism of a watch) (our general failure to grasp the need of knowledge and thought in mastering the complex modern world—Russell) (the complex details of naval, ground, and air activities—Roosevelt) Something is complicated which is so complex that it is exceedingly difficult to understand, solve, explain, or deal with (a complicated problem in mathematics) (his descriptions of the most complicated organic structures are astonishingly lucid—Huxley) Something is intricate which, because of the intertwining or interlacing of its parts, is perplexing or hard to follow out (the intricate tracery of an arabesque) (nature utilizes the sunshine, the air and the earth as raw materials for creating myriad perfumes, but so intricate are her processes . . . that man cannot follow precisely in her footsteps—Morris) (the economic situation is so complex, so intricate in the interdependence of delicately balanced factors—Dewey) Something is involved in which the parts are or are thought of as so intertwined or interwoven or so turned upon themselves as to be separated or traced out only with difficulty; the term, therefore, in reference especially to financial affairs, implies extreme complication or disorder (the involved patterns of heraldic knots) (an involved sentence or argument) (her husband . . . at his death . . . had left his affairs dreadfully involved—Austen) (public issues are so large and so involved that it is only a few who can hope to have any adequate comprehension of them—Dickinson) Something is knotty which is not only complicated but is so full of perplexities, difficulties, or entanglements that understanding or solving seems almost impossible (that brings up at last the knotty question, what is enough?—Shaw) (the knotty problems of a complex society—Parrington) The same object may often be regarded from more than one of the above points of view; a sailor’s knot may be intricate and complicated, as well as involved; a network of railroad tracks may be complicated as well as intricate, though not involved. Anna mixed, mingled, blended, merged, fused, amalgamated (see mix); composite, compound (see corresponding nouns at MIXTURE)

Ant simple (see pure)

complex n *system, scheme, network, organism, economy

Anna component.—Con member, *part, portion, piece: constituent, *element, factor: *item, particular, detail

complexion temperament, temper, *disposition, character, personality, individuality

Anna humor (see wit): *mood, humor, vein, temper: nature, kind, *type, sort compliance acquiescence, resignation (see under COM-<table>

<thead>
<tr>
<th>PLAIN</th>
<th>170</th>
</tr> </thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>compliment</td>
<td>compunction</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>yield, submit, defer, bow</td>
<td>Ant command, enjoin — Con resist, withstand; thwart, balk, frustrate</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>component</td>
<td>convene</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>constituent, ingredient, element, factor</td>
<td>Con persuasion, inducement (see corresponding verbs at INDUCE): *choice, option, election, preference</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
| compliment, acquiescent, resigned, and their corresponding nouns compliance, acquiescence, resignation, are comparable when used in reference to a person, a mood, or a disposition that manifests acceptance (as of another's will or of something disagreeable or hard to endure). Compliant suggests a flexibility or lack of firmness in mood or temperament and frequently implies readiness to accept meekly and without question educational methods that make children compliant > (a naturally compliant race) Acquiescent implies acceptance without protest or rebellion; it often also connotes a temperamentally weak person. Resigned usually presumes a disposition or a temperament neither compliant nor acquiescent and implies deliberate but not necessarily happy acceptance and resolute forbearance from repining. He had become resigned to his perpetual lamentation — Meredith Resignation to inevitable evils is the duty of us all — Austen
| obedience, docility, amenability, tractableness (see corresponding adjectives at OBEDIENT): submitting or submission, yielding, deferring or deference (see corresponding verbs at YIELD) || obedience, amenability, tractableness (see corresponding adjectives at OBEDIENT): submitting or submission, yielding, deferring or deference (see corresponding verbs at YIELD) |
| Ant frowardness — Con obstinacy, stubbornness (see corresponding adjectives at OBSTINATE) | *Ant command, enjoin — Con *resist, withstand; thwart, balk, *frustrate |
| Think | *Ant command, enjoin — Con *resist, withstand; thwart, balk, *frustrate |
| compliment | compliance |
| praise addressed directly to a person. A compliment is a courteous expression of commendation and may be either sincere or merely formal > (in the noble dedication . . . to the Duchess of Ormond we have an example of Dryden’s most polished and magnificent style in elaborate personal compliment — Gosse > pay the craftsmen the compliment of making a study of their language — Ulliyett |
| Flattery implies insincerity in compliment or a play upon self-love or vanity by means of artful or obsequious praise > (when one is flagging, a little praise (if it can be had genuine and unadulterated by flattery) . . . is a cordial — Scott > it is better to leave genuine praise unspoken than to expose yourself to the suspicion of flattery — Shaw |
| Adulation adds to flattery the implications of servility or fulsomeness > (he fascinated others into believing him a superior being; feasted his self-esteem on their adulation until it swelled to monstrous proportions — Huxley |
| encomium, tribute, panegyric, eulogy: praise, lauding or laudation, extolling or extollation (see corresponding verbs at PRAISE) | encomium, tribute, panegyric, eulogy: praise, lauding or laudation, extolling or extollation (see corresponding verbs at PRAISE) |
| Ant taunt — Con *affront, insult, indignity: deprecation, disparagement (see corresponding verbs at DECRY): criticism, censure, reprehension, reprobation, denunciation (see corresponding verbs at CRITICIZE) | *Ant taunt — Con affront, insult, indignity: deprecation, disparagement (see corresponding verbs at DECRY): criticism, censure, reprehension, reprobation, denunciation (see corresponding verbs at CRITICIZE) |
| compliment | compliance |
| vb commend, applaud, recommend | Con *criticize, censure, reprehend, condemn, denounce: decry, depreciate, disparage
| praise, laud, extol, eulogize, acclaim | comply obey, mind |
| accede, consent, agree, acquiesce (see ASSENT) | accede, consent, agree, acquiesce (see ASSENT) |

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.
compute | 171 | concern

*Anà regret, *sorrow: conscientiousness, scrupulousness or scrupulosity (see corresponding adjectives at UPRIGHT) 2 scruple, *qualm

Anà *hesitation, hesitancy: reluctance, disinclination (see corresponding adjectives at DISINCLINED)

*compute: calculate, reckon, estimate

Anà *count, enumerate, number: sum, total, tot, figure, cast, *add

*comrade: associate, companion, crony

Anà *friend, intimate, confidant: colleague, *partner, confederate, ally

*conation: will, volition

Anà *grant, allow

*grant, accord, award

Anà *yield, submit: surrender, resign, cede, *relinquish

Anà *hesitation, hesitancy: reluctance, disinclination (see RELINQUISH)

Anà *hesitation, hesitancy: reluctance, disinclination (see corresponding adjectives at INTENT)

Anà *秉持, *seek, *oblige

Anà *grant, allow

Anà *yield, submit: surrender, resign, cede, *relinquish

Ant *deny (see DECLINE)

conceive 1 Conceit, egotism, egoism, self-esteem, self-love, amour propre mean an attitude of regarding oneself with favor. Conceit implies a conviction of superiority in one or more lines of achievement or an overwhelmingly favorable opinion of one’s powers or accomplishments. It often connotes a failure to see oneself truly or an offensive, pompous manner. To have lost the godlike conceit that we may do what we will, and not to have acquired a homely zest for doing what we can, shows a . . . mind that . . . forswears compromise—Hardy. Conceit may puff a man up, but never prop him up—Ruskin. It was part of the author’s formidable conceit that he wrote only for the most learned of his professional colleagues—Galbraith. Egotism stresses the tendency to attract attention to one’s achievements. The word sometimes implies contempt for but more often an overriding of or disregard for others’ interests or opinions. A man and a boy of ten are perhaps better company than a man and a boy of fifteen. There’s so much less egotism between them—H. G. Wells. Egotism resides more in a kind of proud isolation, in a species of contempt for the opinions and aims of others—Benson. Egoism emphasizes concentration on oneself, one’s interests, and one’s needs. It seldom suggests a tendency to display oneself or to attract attention to oneself, but it commonly implies self-interest, especially as opposed to altruism or interest in others, as the inner spring of one’s acts or as the measure by which all things are judged—she preferred to be herself, with the egoism of women—Meredith. The essence of a self-reliant and autonomous culture is an unshakable egoism. It must not only regard itself as the peer of any other culture; it must regard itself as the superior of any other—Mencken. Self-esteem implies a proper and balanced pride in oneself oftentimes nothing profits more than self-esteem, grounded on just and right—Milton. Love, hope, and self-esteem, like clouds depart and come, for some uncertain moments lent—Shelley. Woman had the feeling of being a constructive factor in the economic process; thus she was provided with a sound basis for self-esteem—Horne.

Self-love usually implies an abnormal regard for oneself that excludes or overshadows all other interests or affections. On the other hand it occasionally designates that degree of love for oneself or interest in one’s well-being which is the proper and necessary complement of one’s love for others but ’tis not easy with a mind like ours . . . to bid the pleadings of self-love be still—Cowper. Self-love but serves the virtuous mind to wake, as the small pebble stirs the peaceful lake . . . friend, parent, neighbor, first it will embrace; his country next; and next all human race—Pope. Amour propre comes closer to self-esteem, for it stresses pride, usually pardonable pride, in oneself. It is therefore used when the idea of sensitivity to others’ opinions is indicated (the amour propre of the French people had been outraged—Holt & Chilton. She flattered his amour propre by asking that from his generosity which she could have taken as a right—Read.

Anà *pride, vanity, vainglory: arrogance, superciliousness, insolence (see corresponding adjectives at PROUD): complacency, smugness, priggishness (see corresponding adjectives at COMPLACENT)

Anà *humility —Con humbleness, modesty, meekness, lowliness (see corresponding adjectives at HUMBLE): diffidence, shyness, bashfulness (see corresponding adjectives at SHY)

2 *caprice, freak, fancy, whim, whimsy, vagary, crotchet conceive *think, imagine, fancy, realize, envisage, envision

Anà *consider, excogitate: speculate, cogitate, *think: ponder, ruminate, meditate concentrate *center, focus, centralize

Anà *fix, set, settle: establish: muster, convoque, convene (see SUMMON)

2 *compact, consolidate, unify

Ant *dissipate —Con disperse, dispel, *scatter: dilute, *thin, attenuate, extenuate, rarely: *distribute, divide, dispense, deal concentration *attention, study

Anà *intentness, raptness, engrossment, absorption (see corresponding adjectives at INTENT)

Ant *distraction concept *idea, conception, notion, thought, impression

Anà *opinion, view, belief, conviction, persuasion, sentiment: theory, *hypothesis

Ant *opinion, view, belief, conviction, persuasion, sentiment: theory, *hypothesis concern *affair, business, matter, thing

2 solicitude, *care, anxiety, worry

Anà *thoughtfulness, considerateness or consideration, attentiveness or attention (see corresponding adjectives at THOUGHTFUL)

Ant unconcern —Con indifference, aloofness, inconsiderateness, uninterestedness, disinterestedness (see corresponding adjectives at INDIFFERENT) concerned solicitous, careful, anxious, worried (see under CARE)

Ana engrossed, absorbed; *intent; impressed, affected, influenced, touched (see AFFECT vb): troubled, distressed (see TROUBLE vb)

Ant unconcerned —Con *indifferent, incurious, aloof, detached, uninterested, disinterested; *negligent, neglectful, remiss concerning regarding, respecting, *about concert vb *negotiate, arrange

Ana *discuss, debate, argue: concur, cooperate, *unite, conjoin, combine concession *allowance

Ana favor, boon; *gift: indulgence, leniency, tolerance, forbearance (see under FORBEARING) conciliate *pacify, appease, placate, propitiate, mollify

Ana arbitrate, adjudicate (see JUDGE vb): mediate, intervene (see INTERPOSE): persuade, prevail (see INDUCE): calm, tranquilize (see corresponding adjectives at CALM): adjust, accommodate, reconcile, *adapt

Ant antagonize —Con *strange, alienate, disafflect: *provoke, excite, stimulate, pique; *excite, foment concise, terse, succinct, laconic, summary, pithy, compendious are comparable when meaning briefly stated or presented or given to or manifesting brevity in statement or expression. A person is concise who speaks or writes briefly; a thing is concise that is brief because all superfluities have been removed and all elaboration avoided (a concise report) (I hadn’t known Jane spoke so well. She has a clever, coherent way of making her points, and concise in reply if questioned—Rose Macaulay) A thing is terse that is both concise and finished; the word often implies both pointness and elegance (pure, terse, elegant Latin—Edwards) {terse headlines are another part of the Tribune’s campaign to save newspaper—New Yorker} A person or thing is succinct that compresses or is marked by compression into the smallest possible space; the term suggests great compactness and the use of no more words than are necessary (succinct directions) (a strict and succinct style is that where you can take away nothing without loss, and that loss to be manifest—Ben Jonson) {a book must have a title, and today it must have a succinct title; therefore this book appears as Richelieu—Bello} A person or thing is laconic that is characterized by such succinctness as to seem curt, brusque, unperturbed, or mystifying (this laconic fool makes brevity ridiculous—Davenant) {I cannot exactly say with Caesar, “Veni, vidi, vici”; however, the most important part of his laconic account of success applies to my present situation—Byron} {laconic, these Indians—La Barre} A thing is summary that presents only the bare outlines or the main points without detail (a summary account of the year’s events under a few main headings) The term often suggests almost rude curtness or extreme generality (the terms I use here are exceedingly summary. You may interpret the word salvation in any way you like—James) {her diary and her letters continued to be mainly the swift and summary record of crowded and delightful days—Elitist} A thing is pithy that is not only terse or succinct but full of substance and meaning and therefore especially forcible or telling (pithy epigrams) {a brief, pithy, and, as it then appeared to him, unanswerable argument against the immortality of the human soul—Hawthorne} {his speech was blacksmith-sparked and pithy—Masefield}

Something is compendious which is concise, summary, and weighted with matter; the word suggests the type of treatment that distinguishes the typical compendium {a compendious account of the Reformation} {a compendious style} {the compendious scholarly words which save so much trouble—T. E. Brown}

Ana condensed, compressed (see CONTRACT vb): compacted, concentrated (see COMPACT vb): abridged, abbreviated, shortened (see SHORTEN): *brief, short

Ant redundant —Con prolix, diffuse, verbose, *wordy conclude 1 *close, finish, terminate, end, complete

Ant open —Con commence, *begin, start, initiate, inaugurate

2 judge, gather, *infer, deduce

Ana reason, speculate (see THINK): *conjecture, surmise, guess concluding adj *last, final, terminal, latest, ultimate

Ana closing, terminating, ending, finishing, completing (see CLOSE vb)

Ant opening —Con beginning, commencing, starting, initiating or initial, inaugurating or inaugural (see corresponding verbs at BEGIN) conclusion judgment, deduction, inference (see under INFERENCE) conclusive, decisive, determinative, definitive are comparable when they mean having or manifesting qualities that bring something to a finish or end. Conclusive applies most frequently to an argument, evidence, or reasoning that is irrefutable or so convincing that it compels certainty or certitude and puts an end to question or debate concerning a matter (there is one very convincing text which so strongly supports the tradition that it seems conclusive—Bello) {a very persuasive if not a conclusive argument—John Marshall} Decisive (see also DECIDED) applies to something (as an act, event, influence, or argument) that puts an end to controversy or competition, to vacillation, to uncertainty, or to insecurity; it often comes close in meaning to critical (the decisive battle of the war had not yet been fought) {my words had been decisive. At least they put an end to the discussion—London}

Determinative applies especially to matters (as decisions, judgments, operative causes, or influences) which put an end to uncertainty, wavering, and fluctuation and serve to give a fixed direction, goal, or character (as to a life, a course, or a movement) (the determinative influence in shaping his career) {an appeal covering similar merchandise is pending . . . which will be determinative of this issue—U. S. Treasury Decisions} Definitive, which is often opposed to tentative and, sometimes, to provisional, applies to whatever is put forth as final and as serving to make further questioning, dispute, uncertainty, or experiment needless or as serving to put an end to an unsettled state or condition where temporary measures have been necessary (the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States are definitive) {a definitive treaty} {a definitive edition of an author’s works is one that claims to have said the last word on all textual problems} {not until there is a settled and definitive world order can there be such a thing as a settled and definitive version of human history—Huxley}

Ana convincing, compelling, telling, cogent (see VALID): *certain, inevitable, necessary

Ant inconclusive —Con *doubtful, dubious, questionable, problematic: *theoretical, speculative, academic: *plausible, credible, specious

concot *contrive, devise, invent, frame

Ana *make, fabricate, fashion, manufacture: create, discover (see INVENT): conceive, envisage, envision

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.
*think concomitant adj coincident, concurrent, synchronous, simultaneous, contemporaneous, *contemporary, coeval, coetaneous

*due, rightful condescend *stoop, deign

condition Condition, stipulation, terms, provision, proviso, reservation, strings are comparable when meaning something that is established or is regarded as the prerequisite of a promise or agreement being fulfilled or taking effect. Condition implies the laying down of something as a prerequisite which must be observed or satisfied if the validity of the whole agreement, promise, dispensation, or gift is not to be destroyed. *be to go to Oxford or Cambridge ... if he succeeded in gaining a scholarship ...

That was the condition his father had laid down—Archibald Marshall—and by the stipulation of the lessor was that if the lessee held over he held over for a year—Justice Holmes. A stipulation is a statement of conditions that are agreed to in the conduct of some affair—Kaufmann. Terms indicates conditions offered or agreed upon by one or both parties to a contract, agreement, or deal; thus, two parties may come to terms (i.e., may agree upon such a matter as work to be done, prices to be paid, or a division of property) ... only a general of repute could get recruits, and for that service he could make his own terms—Buchan. The terms of the lease are not harsh—Montague. A certain despair of her ever understanding ... terms of a contract—Mary Austin. Provision applies chiefly to a documentary statement which provides measures for the treatment of certain matters legally (the admission of Arkansas with a provision in its constitution forbidding the abolition of slavery without the consent of the slaveowners—L.B. Evans). According to the provisions of the constitution the state courts have no jurisdiction in this controversy. It may be specifically used of a clause or of a part of such a document or of a document that is comparable in laying down a condition or making a stipulation (into his will he wrote a provision that all of his children should accept his decision regarding the disposal of his property on pain of being disinherited). Proviso denotes a condition or a stipulation, especially one that is clearly stated and binding ... passions—Russell. It is because the practical businessman always forgets this proviso that he is such a hopeless idiot politically—Shaw. Reservation indicates a qualification or modification of the terms of an agreement or statement, often to cover contingencies. It may become a stipulation or proviso if the other party or parties concerned agree or acquiesce (she [Spain] had already in the treaty of Madrid promised to leave the Valettein, but with such reservations that she could still hold on—Belloc) or it may be avowed only to oneself (mental reservation) in evading the generally understood sense of a promise or an oath or other statement that one is impelled to make for reasons of necessity or expediency (the issues that won him most votes were issues that, at bottom, he didn’t believe in; there was always a mental reservation in his rhetoric—Mencken). Strings suggests strands which the maker of a promise, a proposal, or an offer keeps in his hands so that he may pull them back if what he lays down as a condition or imposes as a stipulation is not kept; the term usually denotes conditions or provisos, often unexpected or concealed, that may radically alter or even annul an agreement (make me a cash offer, with no strings).

Ana prerequisite, requisite, *requirement

2 *state, situation, mode, posture, status

Ana circumstance, *occurrence, event: occasion, antecedent, *cause: phase, aspect, side, facet, angle

3 *disease, disorder, affection, ailment, malady, complaint, distemper, syndrome condition vb *prepare, fit, qualify, ready conditional *dependent, contingent, relative

Ana problematic, questionable (see doubtful): *provisional, tentative: subject, prone, *liable, open: *acci-condolence *sympathy, pity, commiseration, compassion, ruth, empathy

%Ana consoling or consolation, solacing or solace, comforting (see corresponding verbs at comfort)

Con felicitation, congratulation (see corresponding verbs at felicitate) condone *excuse, forgive, pardon, remit

%Ana disregard, overlook, forget, ignore (see neglect vb): *excutate, absolve, acquit

Con *punish, chastise, discipline, castigate, correct: condemn, denounce, censure, reprobate, reprehend (see criticize): *disapprove, deprecate conduct n *behavior, deportment Ana act, deed, *action: demeanor, mien, deportment, *bearing convey, transmit, *carry vb 1 escort, convoy, *accompany, attend, chaperon Ana *guide, lead: convey, transmit, *carry

2 Conduct, manage, control, direct are comparable when they mean to use one's skill, authority, or other powers in order to lead, guide, command, or dominate persons or things. Conduct may imply the act of an agent who is both the leader and the person responsible for the acts and achievements of a group having a common end or goal (conduct an orchestra) (the minister conducts the prayer meetings) (Douglas conducted conferences and studies which led to a reorganization of the Stock Exchange—Current Bisg.) but often the idea of leadership is lost or obscured and the stress is placed on a carrying on by all or by many of the participants (debates, conducted seriously with a view to ascertaining the truth, could be of great value—Russell) (it was judged desirable for him to see how affairs were conducted in the United States—Heiser) Manage usually implies the handling, manipulating, or maneuvering of a person or persons or a thing or things so as to bring about a response or submission to one's wishes or attempts to use, guide, lead, or command (he manages the sailboat admirably) (he cannot manage himself, so how can he be expected to manage others) (manage a refractory child) (the boy . . . could not yet manage his “r’s” and “th’s” aright—Kipling) (the first condition for an artist in glass is to know how to manage blue—Henry Adams) (now do you leave this affair in my hands. Only tell me which woman it is and I will manage the affair—Buck) But manage is also often used to imply the action of one who is in authority and charged with handling the details of a business or industry or of one of its departments or of any complex or intricate system or organization (he manages a theater) (manage the financial affairs of a company) (the delight she would take in managing a real house, not in any sense as its drudge, but magnificently as its mistress—Dell) (manage a chain of restaurants) Control stresses the idea of authoritative guidance and suggests a keeping within set or desired bounds (as of accuracy, efficiency, propriety, or discipline); it implies a regulating or a restraining often by getting or keeping the upper hand (no attempt was made . . . to control by public authority the production and distribution of wealth—Dickinson) (in order to make its highways most useful, the business traffic upon them must be controlled—Justice Holmes) (he started things moving and then was caught up in the repercussions of the movement. He mounted an act as if it were a horse, found himself unable to control it—Cloete) (Sometimes, however, control implies little more than domination or the complete subjection of the dominated person or thing to one's will (he has learned to control himself) (the struggle between two strong-willed women to control one weak-willed man is the usual motive of the French drama in the nineteenth century—Henry Adams) (pirates at one time practically controlled the coasts of Florida—Amer. Guide Series: Fla.) (direct (see also command, direct 1, direct 2) implies a regulation of the activities (as of a group of persons) or of the course or courses to be followed; it carries no suggestion of a desire or aim to dominate, but of an intent or purpose to keep the persons or things involved straight, well organized, or properly administered (the president and trustees direct the affairs of the institution) (the architect directed the building of the bank) (direct American taste and mold the genius of the young republic—Brooks) (Ana supervise, oversee (see corresponding nouns at oversight): *govern, rule: engineer, pilot, steer, lead (see guide vb): operate, work, function (see act vb) 3 demean, deport, *behave, comport, acquit, quit conduct *channel, canal, duct, aqueduct confederacy, confederation federation, coalition, fusion, *alliance, league confederate n 1 *partner, copartner, colleague, ally Ana, Ant, & Con see those at ally

2 Confederate, conspirator, accessory, abettor, accomplice. As used in law these words all convey the idea of complicity or common guilt in a wrongful act. Confederate is the general term applied to any person who in conjunction with others intentionally contributes to the commission of an unlawful act, whether the act be a crime or a civil injury. For civil joint wrongdoers the specific term is conspirator. An accessory is neither the chief actor (principal) in an offense nor a person present at its performance but one who accedes to or becomes involved in its guilt by some act (as of instigating, encouraging, aiding, or concealing) either previous or subsequent to the commission of the offense. In the case of certain classes of offenses (as treason or misdemeanors) the law ordinarily recognizes no distinction between an accessory and a principal. An abettor is one who is actually or constructively present at the commission of the deed and contributes to it by moral or physical force. An accomplice is one who with criminal intent participates in the commission of an offense whether as principal, abettor, or accessory. Legal usage does not recognize the distinction made by laymen between principal and accomplice.

confer 1 bestow, present, *give, donate, afford Ana accord, award, vouchsafe, *grant

2 Confer, commune, consult, advise, parley, treat, negotiate are synonyms when they are used intransitively and bear the meaning to carry on a conversation or discussion especially in order to reach a decision or settlement. Confer implies comparison of views or opinions and, as a rule, equality in those participating in the discussion (the executives confer weekly about important business affairs) (the Dauphin and his train approacheth, to confer about some matter—Shak) Commune, once a close synonym of confer, now is rare in this sense (we were communing on important matters—Walpole) In current use it usually implies spiritual intercourse (as in prayer or meditation or in a close union of minds and spirits) (there, sitting on the ground, the two [mother and child] would commune with each other by the hour—Hudson) Consult adds to confer the implication of seeking or taking counsel (the president will not make his reply to the ambassador until he has consulted with the cabinet) (the three powers would consult on how to ameliorate the internal political conflict—Vucinich) Advice often is not clearly distinguishable from consult except that it is more suitable for use regarding personal matters on which one seeks advice (before he makes his decision, he will...
confide

in his power of dealing with the difficulties of the confidant

confession

in his power of dealing with the difficulties of the

Ant

confess acknowledge, admit, own

Ant

converse, talk, speak: discuss, debate, argue

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana

Ana
*sure Ant apprehensive: diffident — Con *fearful, afraid: nervous, uneasy, jittery (see IMPATIENT): shy, bashful, modest: dubious, *doubtful confidential close, intimate, *familiar, chummy, thick Ana *secret: trusty, tried, trustworthy (see RELIABLE) configuration conformation, figure, shape, *form Ana *outline, contour, silhouette, profile, skyline confine vb circumscribe, *limit, restrict Ana bind, tie: restrain, curb, inhibit, check: hamper, trammel, fetter, shackle, hog-tie, manacle: imprisonment, incarcerate, immure, intern, jail confine n bound, *limit, end, term Ana verge, edge, *border: circumference, periphery, compass confirm 1 ratify Ana *assent, consent, acquiesce, accede, subscribe: validate (see CONFIRM 2): sanction, *approve, endorse Con reject, refuse, *decline

2 Confirm, corroborate, substantiate, verify, authenticate, validate mean to attest to the truth, genuineness, accuracy, or validity of something. Confirm and corroborate are both used in reference to something doubtful or not yet proved. Confirm, however, usually implies the resolving of all doubts typically by an authoritative statement or by indisputable facts (his failure to pay his debts confirmed their suspicion that he was not to be trusted) (there is a rumor—which cannot of course be confirmed—Gorell) (it was expected exquisitely gratified, superabundantly confirmed—Henry James) Corroborate suggests particularly the strengthening of one statement or piece of evidence by another (the bystanders corroborated his story) (In general the material illustrates and corroborates what has already become known from other sources—Kennan) Substantiate presupposes something needing to be demonstrated or proved and implies the offering of evidence sufficient to sustain the contention or to create a strong presumption in its favor (they were able to substantiate their claim to the property when the long-lost deed was found) (Darwin spent nearly a lifetime in gathering evidence to substantiate his theory of the origin of species) (no proof had to be brought forward to substantiate the claims they made—Anderson) Verify has for its distinctive implication the established correspondence of the actual facts or details to those that are given in an account or statement. When what is in question is a suspicion, a fear, or a probability, it can be verified only if the result, event, or fulfillment (the prediction of a severe storm was verified in every detail) (it [faith] begins as a resolution to stand or fall by the noblest hypothesis . . . ; but it is verified progressively as we go on—Inge) In more general use verify implies a deliberate effort to establish the accuracy or truth of something usually by comparison (as with ascertainable facts, an original, or a series of control experiments) (verify all the citations in a book) (statements of accounts due are not sent out until they are verified) (the careful scientist verifies every step in an experiment) (he has explored most of Trans-Jordan, verified biblical accounts by his findings and excavations—Current Bio.) (a government survey party was verifying the neighboring landmarks—Farphy) Authenticate presupposes question of a thing's genuineness or validity and therefore implies a demonstration of either of these by someone (as an expert or the proper authority) in a position to know or to determine (the collector refused to purchase the manuscript until it had been authenticated by experts) (the bank authenticated the signatures on the note) (an authenticated copy of the Declaration—Dumas Malone) Validate is more often used than authenticate when applied to legal papers requiring an official signature or seal before becoming valid (validate a passport) It is, however, also used when the soundness of a judgment, of a belief, or of a policy is in question (the expansion of demand which alone can validate the policy—Hobson) (he validated his conclusion when he demonstrated that his facts and his reasoning were correct in every detail)
Ana *support, uphold, back: vouch, attest, *certify Ant deny: contradict — Con gainsay, traverse, impugn, contravene, negative (see DENY): confute, refute, controvert, *disprove confirmed *inveterate, chronic, deep-seated, deep-rooted Ana established, fixed, set, settled (see SET vb): hardened, indurated, callous confiscate appropriate, *arrogate, usurp, preempt Ana seize, *take, grab: condemn, proscribe (see SENTENCE vb) conflagration *fire, holocaust conflict n 1 combat, fight, *contest, affray, fray 2 strife, contention, dissension, difference, variance, *discord

Ana clash, collision, impingement, *impact: antagonism, hostility, *enmity: incompatibility, incongruousness, inconsistency, inconsonance, discordance (see corresponding adjectives at INCONSONANT) Ant harmony — Con consonance, concord, accord (see HARMONY): comity, amity, *friendship: compatibility, congruity (see corresponding adjectives at CONSONANT) conflict vb 1 *resist, withstand, contest, oppose, fight, antagonize 2 *bump, clash, collide

Ana *contend, fight: *differ, vary, disagree Ant accord — Con harmonize, *agree: *match, equal, touch, rival confluence *junction, concourse conform 1 *adapt, adjust, accommodate, reconcile Ana *harmonize, tune, attune: *assent, accede, acquiesce: accept, *receive 2 *agree, accord, harmonize, correspond, square, tally, jibe Ant diverge — Con *differ, disagree conformation configuration, *form, shape, figure Ana *structure, anatomy, framework, skeleton confound 1 dumbfound, nonplus, bewilder, mystify, *puzzle, perplex, distract Ana flabbergast, amaze, astound, astonish, *surprise: discomfit, faze, rattle, abash, *embarrass, disconnect 2 confuse, *mistake

Ana muddle, addle, *confuse: *mix, mingle Ant distinguish, discriminate confront vb *meet, face, encounter Ana defy, beard, challenge, brave, dare (see FACE): oppose, withstand, *resist Ant recoil from confuse 1 Confuse, muddle, addle, fuddle, befuddle mean to throw one out mentally so that one cannot think clearly or act intelligently. Confuse usually implies intense embarrassment or bewilderment (you confuse me, and how can I transact business if I am confused? Let us be clear-headed—Dickens) Muddle often suggests stupefaction (as by drink) and usually implies blundering, aimless, but not necessarily unsuccessful attempts to deal with ideas, situations, or tasks beyond one's powers of analysis or one's capacity (a subject so abstruse as to muddle the brains of all but exceptional students) (we have muddled through so often that we have come half to believe in a providence which watches over unintelligent virtue—Inge> Adde suggests staleness or emptiness of mind and resulting mental impotence (I have added my head with writing all day—Dickens> Fuddle and the more common befuddle imply confusion from or as if from titpling or indulgence in a drug that clouds the mind and makes one's thinking and speech absurdly incoherent (Shakespeare's Falstaff is most amusing when he is completely befuddled) (corridors, archways, recesses... combined to fuddle any sense of direction—Elizabeth Bowen) (perhaps his best would be a little better if he didn't befuddle his mind with... slander—Franky> Ana confound, bewilder, mystify, perplex, *puzzle: discomfit, discontent, faze, rattle (see EMBARRASS): fluster, flurry (see DISCOMPOSE)> Ant enlighten 2 *mistake, confound Ant differentiate confusion

1 Confusion, disorder, chaos, disarray, jumble, clutter, snarl, muddle are comparable when they mean the state or a condition in which things are not in their right places or arranged in their right relations to each other, or an instance of such a state or condition. Confusion suggests such mixing or mingling as obliterates clear demarcation or distinction; disorder (see also DISEASE) implies lack or more frequent disturbance or breach of due order or arrangement; thus, a busy worker might leave his desk in confusion with objects mingled together and no arrangement apparent to an observer, but a burglar searching it for money would probably leave it in disorder with contents thrown about and out of their normal (though not necessarily orderly) arrangement (the dark confusion of German history—Guérard> (mid the misery and confusion of an unjust war—Shelley> (cowardice has succeeded to courage, disorder to discipline—Dickinson> (our last chance to substitute order for disorder, government for anarchy—E. B. White> Chaos suggests an absolute or sometimes hopeless confusion suggestive of the ancient Greek conception of Chaos as the unorganized state of primordial matter before the creation of distinct and orderly forms; the term therefore more often implies innate lack of organization rather than disturbance of an existent order (the Essays of Montaigne... a chaos indeed, but a chaos swarming with germs of evolution—J. R. Lowell> When chaos does imply a disturbing, it usually suggests a reducing to the utter confusion of primordial matter (back not merely to the dark ages but from cosmos to chaos—Baruch> Disarray, more even than disorder, implies disarrangement; it is therefore preferable when the breaking up of order or discipline is to be suggested (the disarray into which society had been thrown by this deplorable affair made their presence in town more necessary than ever—Wharton> Jumble implies the mixing of incongruous things with resulting confusion (the house they lived in... was a heterogeneous architectural jumble—Meredith> Clutter implies confusion and crowding and often suggests a disagreeable or more or less messy state (Lord, what a mess this set is in! If there's one thing I hate above everything else... it's clutter—Millay> Snarl, basically applied to a tangle of filaments (as hairs or threads), implies confusion and entanglement and suggests great difficulty in unraveling and ordering (his affairs are in a snarl) (held up by a traffic snarl) Muddle (compare muddle at CONFUSE 1) also implies confusion and entanglement, but in addition it suggests the influence of bungling and a more or less hopeless condition (we both grumbled in a muddle—Dickens> the world's been confused and poor, a thorough muddle; there's never been a real planned education for people—H. G. Wells> Ana derangement, disarrangement, disorganization, disturbance (see corresponding verbs at DISORDER): *din, babel, pandemonium, hullabaloo: *anarchy, lawlessness Con ordering or order, systematization, organization (see corresponding verbs at ORDER): system, *method 2 *commotion, agitation, tumult, turmoil, turbulence, convulsion, upheaval Ana disorder, disorganization, disturbance (see corresponding verbs at DISORDER): perturbation, agitation, disquiet, upset (see corresponding verbs at DISCOMPOSE): discomfiture, embarrassment (see corresponding verbs at EMBARRASS)> Confute controvert, refute, *disprove, rebut Congeal vb *coagulate, set, curdle, clot, jelly, jell Ana solidify, *harden: *compact, concentrate, consolidate: cool, chill, freeze (see corresponding adjectives at COLD)> Con melt, *liquefy, deliquesce congenial *consonant, consistent, compatible, congruous, sympathetic Ana companionable, cooperative, *social: sociable, genial, cordial, *gracious, affable: pleasing, *pleasant, agreeable Ant uncongenial: antipathetic (of persons); abhorrent (of tasks, duties)

Ana inherent, constitutional, ingrained: *native Con acquired (see GET): *accidental, adventitious Conglomerate, conglomeration agglomerate, agglomeration, *aggregate, aggregation Ana mass, heap, pile, stack (see under HEAP vb): accumulation, amassment, hoarding or hoard (see corresponding verbs at ACCUMULATE)> Congratulate *felicitate Con console, solace, *comfort: commiserate, condole with, pity (see corresponding nouns at SYMPATHY)> Congregate *gather, assemble, collect Ana swarm, *teem Ant disperse Congregation assembly, assemblage, gathering, collection (see under GATHER vb)> Ant audience, *following, public: *crowd, throng, press, crush Congruous compatible, congenial, *consonant, sympathetic, consistent Ana harmonizing or harmonious, according or accordant, corresponding or correspondent, agreeing or agreeable (see corresponding verbs at AGREE): seemly, proper (see DECOROUS): meet, appropriate, fitting, *fit Ant incongruous —Con incompatible, uncongenial, *inconsonant, discordant, discrepant

Conjectural hypothetical, suppositional, *supposed, suppositious, reputed, putative, purported Ana presumed, assumed, postulated (see PRESUPPOSE): *theoretical, speculative: alleged (see ADDUCE)> Con proved, demonstrated (see PROVE)> Conjecture vb Conjecture, surmise, guess are comparable as verbs, meaning to draw an inference from slight evidence, and as nouns, denoting an inference based upon such evidence. Conjecture implies formation of an opinion or judgment upon what is recognized as insufficient evidence (Washington conjectured that at least 300 of the enemy were killed—Amer. Guide Series: Pa> (mysteries which must explain themselves are not worth the loss of time which a conjecture about them takes up—Sterne> Surmise implies still slighter evidence, and exer-

Ana analogous words Ant antonyms Con contrasted words

See also explanatory notes facing page 1
cise of the imagination or indulgence in suspicion (what thoughts he had beseems not me to say, though some surmise he went to fast and pray—Dryden) (just how long the small multiplied impressions will take to break into surmise . . . nobody can tell—Quiller-Couch) (we are not told what their business was but we may surmise it was the fur trade—G. F. Hudson) Guess implies a hitting upon or an attempting to hit upon either at random or from insufficient, uncertain, or ambiguous evidence (you would never guess from meeting them that anyone would pay them for their ideas—Rose Macaulay) (my daughter Lucie is . . . such a mystery to me; I can make no guess at the state of her heart—Dickens)

Ana infer; gather, conclude, judge, deduce: speculate, reason, *think: imagine, fancy, conceive (see THINK)

Con ascertain, determine, learn, *discover: *prove, demonstrate, test, try conjecture n surmise, guess (see under CONJECTURE vb)

Ana theory, *hypothesis: *opinion, view, belief, sentience: inference, deduction, conclusion, judgment (see under INFER)

Ant fact

conjoin 1 *join, combine, unite, connect, associate, relate

2 combine, *unite, concur, cooperate conjugal *matrimonial, marital, connubial, nuptial, hymenal

Ant single connect *join, link, associate, relate, unite, conjoin, combine

Ana attach, *fasten, affix: articulate, concatenate, *integrate

Ant disconnect—Con sever, sunder, divorce, *separate, part, divide: *detach, disengage

connosseur dilettante, *aesthete

Ana epicure, gourmet, bon vivant: *expert, adept

Con amateur, tyro, dabbler

connotation denotation (see under CONNOTE)

Ana suggestion, implication, intimation (see corresponding verbs at SUGGEST): evoking consonant

Ant fact

conquer, defeat, vanquish, overcome, surmount, subdue, subjugate, reduce, overthrow, rout, beat, lick all mean to get the better of or to bring into subjection whether by the exercise of force or of strategy. Conquer and defeat are perhaps the most general. Defeat usually signifies merely the fact of getting the better of or winning against and may imply no more than a temporary checking or frustrating (the enemy were successfully defeated) (he defeated the older man in the tennis tournament) (a distortion of the news picture which defeats the whole purpose to which our system is committed—Mott)

Conquer, however, usually implies a large and significant action (as of a large force in war) or an action involving an all-inclusive effort and a more or less permanent result (Caesar conquered most of Gaul) (culture conquers more surely than the sword—A. M. Young) (science has conquered yellow fever—Amer. Guide Series: LA.) (the 21-year-old Englishman who conquered the most dangerous river in the world—N. Y. Times Book Rev.)

Vanquish suggests a significant action of a certain dignity usually in the defeat of a person rather than a thing and usually carrying the suggestion of complete defeat (to overthrow the enemy solely by his own strength—to vanquish him solely by his own effort—Heaney) (vanquish an opponent in a championship match at tennis) Overcome usually implies an opposing, more or less fixed obstacle to be dealt with and a high degree of effectiveness in dealing therewith whether by direct conflict or perhaps more often by indirect means (as evasion or substitution) (overcome the enemy’s shore fortifications) (overcoming difficult legal obstacles—Americana Annual) (using the airlift to overcome the blockade—Collier’s Yr. BK.) (overcome a speech defect) Surmount, like overcome, implies an opposing, more or less fixed obstacle but carries the idea of surpassing or exceeding rather than overcoming in face-to-face conflict (the technical problems to be surmounted—K. F. Mather) (many petty faults which he is apparently unable to surmount—New Republic) (Simon . . . has an inner force that is capable of surmounting conditions—Malcolm Cowley) Subdue, subjugate, and reduce all throw emphasis upon the condition of subjection resulting from defeat. Subdue signifies to bring under control by or as if by overwhelming (in 1803 Commodore Edward Preble subdued the Barbary Coast pirates—Amer. Guide Series: ME.) (in their last century of conquest they almost succeeded in subduing the whole island—Blanshard) (all violence or recklessness of feeling has been finally subdued—Cather) (the wilderness had been almost completely subdued by cutting down the forests and building roads and cities) Subjugate signifies to bring into and keep in subjection, often as a slave is in subjection (authoritarian reaction which overwhelmed Italy and subjugated it for two centuries—R. A. Hall) (the heart and imagination subjugating the senses and understanding—Arnold) Reduce signifies surrender and submission but usually of a town or fortress under attack or siege (the town and finally the province were reduced by the invaders) Overthrow is much like overcome but carries the strong idea of disaster to the overthrow (overthrow the established government by violence) (get swiftly through the field of fire and pierce and overthrow the enemy lines—Wintringham) (a huge body of evidence . . . completely overthrows the older view—Comfort) Rout always suggests a defeat so complete as to cause flight or the complete dispersion of the opposition (twelve hundred French and a large force of Indians . . . were intercepted . . . and utterly routed, only 200 of the French escaping capture or death—Bingham) (Weaver with the assistance of two other gunboats routed a large force of Texas cavalry when they attacked Fort Butler—Bolander) Beat and lick are characteristic of a less formal style of expression or level of usage than the preceding verbs. Both come close to defeat in meaning but distinctively beat (see also BEAT 1) is rather neutral in this sense, except that occasionally it may imply the finality though not the scope of vanquish (the local ball team won the state championship by beating all comers) while lick usually implies a complete humbling or reduction to impotency and ineffectiveness of the one defeated (the fighter must be confirmed in the belief that he can lick anybody in the world—Liebling) (with the problem growing, the railroads have redoubled their efforts to lick it—Faulkner)

Ana frustrate, thwart, foil, circumvent, outwit, baffle, balk

Con surrender, submit, capitulate (see corresponding nouns at SURRENDER): *yield, succumb, bow, cave

conqueror vanquisher, *victor, winner, champion conquest *victory, triumph

Ana subjugation, subdual, defeating or defeat, overthrowing or overthrow, routing or rout (see corresponding verbs) conscientious scrupulous, honorable, honest, *upright, just Ant unconscious, unscrupulous —Con slack, lax, remiss, *negligent, neglectful: *careless, heedless, thoughtless conscious sensible, *aware, cognizant, alive, awake Ana attending or attentive, minded or mindful, watching (see corresponding verbs at TEND): *watchful, alert, vigilant: perceiving, noticing, noting, remarking, observing (see SEE) Ant unconscious —Con ignoring, overlooking, disregarding (see NEGLECT vb): *forgetful, unmindful, oblivious consecrate hallow, dedicate, *devote Con desecrate, profane (see corresponding nouns at PROFANATION): defile, pollute (see CONTAMINATE) consecutive, successive, sequent, sequential, serial are comparable when meaning following one after the other in order. Consecutive and successive apply to objects which follow one another without interruption or break. But consecutive is somewhat more emphatic, stressing the immediacy of the succession, the regularity or fixedness of the order, and the close connection (as in time, space, or logic) of the units while successive is applicable to things that follow regardless of differences (as in duration, extent, or size) or of the length of the interval between the units; thus, one would speak of nine, ten, and eleven as consecutive numbers since they follow one another in immediate and regular order, but of flashing the consecutive numbers three, eleven, and nine on a screen since the order would then be neither immediate nor regular; one would speak of successive (not consecutive) leap years since the order though regular is not immediate and of successive strokes of a piston since, though immediate, it need not be regular (the most important cause . . . has run through our post-Conquest history like a consecutive thread —Coulton) <the product of the successive labors of innumerable men—Mumford> Consecutive is also applicable to a person or to thought that manifests logical sequence <consecutive thinking absolutely requires personal initiative—Eliot> Sequent and sequential apply to an arrangement or to things (sometimes a thing) following a sequence (as a causal, logical, or chronological sequence) or some settled order <the events of the Narrative do not follow in sequent order> <the galleys have sent a dozen accounts of his adventures—Krutich> <towards the end of her adventure story she adds: —Shak> <changes which proceed with sequential regularity> <combination of two sequential courses into one—Pressey> Serial implies that the thing or things so qualified form a series or will appear as a series; it therefore suggests likeness or uniformity in the units and, usually, a prearranged order especially in time or space <the fifth of the series> <from the publisher’s point of view mystery stories make good serial narratives> <wrote her a serial account of his adventures—Krutich> Ana following, succeeding, ensuing (see FOLLOW): continuous, *continual, incessant: coherent (see corresponding noun COHERENCE): logical Ant inconsecutive —Con alternate, *intermittent, recurrent, periodic: desultory, *random, haphazard, hit-or-miss conscientiousness 1 result, *effect, upshot, aftereffect, aftermath, sequel, issue, outcome, event Ana antecedent —Con *cause, determinant, reason, occasion: *origin, source, root Ant consequence 1 result, *effect, upshot, aftereffect, aftermath, sequel, issue, outcome, event Ana necessity, *need, exigency: *worth, value: renown, honor, reputation, repute, *fame: eminence, illustriousness (see corresponding adjectives at FAMOUS) Consider 1 Consider, study, contemplate, weigh, exegocate are comparable chiefly as transitive verbs meaning to fix the mind for a time on something in order to increase one’s knowledge or understanding of it or to solve a problem involved in it. Consider often suggests little more than an applying of one’s mind  but sometimes it also carries such a restricting implication as that of a definite point of view <in the last paragraphs we have considered science as a steadily advancing army of ascertained facts —Inge> or as that of thinking of <the publishers told him they would consider his book> <marriage is an action too freely practiced and too seldom adequately considered—Rose Macaulay> <in Florida consider theflamingo, its color passion but its neck a question—Warren> or as that of casting about in order to reach a suitable conclusion, opinion, or decision <when I came to consider his conduct, I realized that he was guilty of a confusion —T. S. Eliot> Study implies greater mental concentration than consider; usually it also suggests more care for the details or minutiae and more of an effort to comprehend fully or to learn all the possibilities, applications, variations, or relations <the president said that the bill must be studied before he reached a decision regarding the signing or vetoing of it>  <study a patient’s reactions to a new treatment> <I like very naturally to think that I am being read; but the idea that I am being studied fills me, after the first outburst of laughter, with a deepening gloom—Huxley> Bryce, who had studied the matter so thoroughly, was wont to insist it is the smallest democracies which today stand highest in the scale—Ellis> Contemplate (see also SEE) implies, like meditate (see under PONDER), the focusing of one’s attention upon a thing and a close dwelling upon it; the term, however, does not always carry a clear implication of the purpose or result. When the object on which the mind rests is a plan, a project, or an imaginative conception, the word usually suggests its formulation in detail or its enjoyment as envisioned <Henchard bent and kissed her cheek. The moment and the act he had contemplated for weeks with a thrill of pleasure—Hardy> <the poet "has an idea," and in the course of contemplating it he draws up from his subconscious a string of associated ideas and images—DayLewis> When the object contemplated lies outside the mind and has either material or immaterial existence, the term suggests an attempt to increase one’s knowledge and comprehension of it through minute scrutiny and meditation <nature is beautiful only to the mind which is prepared to apprehend her beauty, to contemplate her for her own sake apart from the practical delight she brings—Alexander> <the opinion . . . widely held, that while science, by a deliberate abstraction, contemplates a world of facts without values, religion contemplates values apart from facts—Inge> Weigh (compare PONDER) implies evaluation of something and especially of one thing in respect to another and relevant thing or things; it suggests an attempt to get at considerate

the truth by a balancing (as of counterclaims, contradictory data, or conflicting evidence) in teaching the young to think hard, any subject will answer. The problem is to get them to weigh evidence, draw accurate inferences . . . and form judgments—Elliot (it is not enough to count, we must evaluate; observations are not to be numbered, they are to be weighed—Ellis) Excogitate is often replaced by think out and implies the application of the mind to something so that one may find the solution of the problems involved (excogitate a plan whereby poverty may be relieved without unduly burdening the taxpayers) (there may have been a time when the scientific inquirer sat still in his chair to excogitate science—Dewey)

Ana 180

consistent

*alot: resign, surrender, yield (see relinquish) consistent congruous, *consistent, compatible, congenial, sympathetic Ana conforming or conformable, tallying, jibing, squaring (see corresponding verbs at agree): matching, equaling (see match vb): identical, alike, similar, *like Ant inconsistent —Con discreet, discordant, incongruous, *inconsistent, incompatible: contradictory, contrary, *opposite, antithetical console vb *comfort, solace Ana assuage, alleviate, mitigate, *relieve, allay: calm, tranquilize (see corresponding adjectives at calm): *satisfy, content

Con *trouble, distress: *discompose, disturb, perturb, agitate, upset, disquiet consolidate *compact, unify, concentrate Ana *integrate, articulate, concatenate: amalgamate, merge, fuse, blend (see mix): condense, compress (see contract vb): *weave, knit Con melt, *liquefy: *separate, sever, Sunder, part: *distribute, dispense, divide: dissipate, *scatter, disperse consolidation, merger, amalgamation are comparable when denoting a union of two or more business corporations. Consolidation is often used as a general term; more precisely it implies a unification of the companies or corporations with dissolution of their separate corporate identities and transfer of their combined assets, franchises, and goodwill to a single new corporate unit, often under an entirely new name. Merger usually implies a unification in which one or more companies or corporations are absorbed by another and the assets (as property, franchises, and goodwill) of the former are transferred to or merged into the latter whose corporate status and name remain unchanged. In a merger additional shares of stock may be issued by the absorbing company or corporation to replace on an agreed basis the shares of the units absorbed or a monetary transaction may be involved. Amalgamation is often used interchangeably with consolidation in its general sense and applied to any form of consolidation or merger. It is sometimes restricted to a consolidation in which a new corporation with an entirely new name and corporate identity results or, in British use, to a union of the merger type.

Ant dissolution

consonance *harmony, concord, accord Ana agreement, conformity, correspondence (see corresponding verbs at agree): concurrence, coincidence (see corresponding verbs at agree): compatibility, congruity (see corresponding adjectives at consonant) Ant dissonance (in music): discord —Con inconsonance, discordance, incompatibility, incongruity, discrepency (see corresponding adjectives at consonant) consonant adj Consontant, consistent, compatible, congruous, congenial, sympathetic are comparable when they mean being in agreement one with another or agreeable one to the other. Consonant implies agreement with a concurrent circumstance or situation, or conformity to an accepted standard, or harmony between two things that must come into contact or comparison with each other; the term suggests absence of discord (Fijians possessed a physical endurance consonant with their great stature—Krutch) (it is . . . more consonant with the Puritan temper to abolish a practice than to elevate it and clear away abuses—Quiller-Couch) (to pursue callings more consonant with Buddha's teaching—Binyon) (nature has no ends consonant with . . . the desires of man which would make it possible for him to accord himself to her—Krutch) Consistent suggests such agreement or harmony between things or between the details of the same thing as implies the absence or avoidance of contradiction (that their letters should be as kind as was consistent with proper maidenly pride—De Quincey) (did not think it to be consistent with his dignity to answer this sally—Trollope) (no one has yet imagined a consistent picture of what the electron and proton really are—Jeans) Consistent implies a capacity for existing or coming together without disagreement, discord, or disharmony; the term does not necessarily suggest positive agreement or harmony, but it does imply the absence of such conflict between two or more things as would make their association or combination impossible or incongruous (with all the eagerness compatible with . . . elegance, Sir Walter and his two ladies stepped forward to meet her—Austen) (to combine, in the highest measure in which they are compatible, the two elements of refinement and manliness—Froude) (many bad qualities are of course compatible with vitality—for example, those of a healthy tiger. And many of the best qualities are compatible with its absence—Russell) Congruous implies more positive agreement or harmony than comparable does; ordinarily it implies the fitness, suitability, or appropriateness of one thing to another so that their association or combination, no matter how they produce a pleasing or at least a not disagreeable impression (congruous furnishings of a room) (not congruous to the nature of epic poetry—Blair) (thoughts congruous to the nature of their subject—Cowper) The negative form incongruous is currently far more common than congruous. Congenial is most often used of persons or things that are in such harmony with the taste of a person that they afford him pleasure or delight or satisfaction (a congenial companion) (a pair of not very congenial passengers—Conrad) (the reticence and understatement of the method it made it specially congenial [to the Chinese]—Binyon) (Hobbes’s) theory of government is congenial to that type of person who is conservative from prudence but revolutionary in his dreams—T. S. Eliot) (the ideal of a Greek democracy was vastly congenial to his aristocratic temperament—Parrington) Occasionally congenial is used of things in the sense of wholly and satisfyingly congruous (all such introduced ideas are congenial to the subject—Alexander) (statement, overstatement, and understatement in letters given a congenial context, every one of them is right—Montague) Sympathetic (see also tender), like congenial, usually suggests qualities in the person or thing so described that make him or it in agreement with another person’s likings or tastes, but, in contrast with congenial, it suggests a more subtle appeal and often a less hearty acceptance (every author who is sympathetic to them—Bradley) (Arnold does still hold us. . . . To my generation. . . . he was a more sympathetic prose writer than Carlyle or Ruskin—T. S. Eliot) (a tête-à-tête with a man of similar tastes, who is just and yet sympathetic, critical yet appreciative—Benson) Ana) conforming or conformable, harmonizing or harmonious, agreeing or agreeable, according or accordant (see corresponding verbs at agree): concurring or concurrent, coinciding or coincident (see corresponding verbs at agree)

Ant inconsonant: dissonant (in music) —Con discordant, discrepant, inconsistent, incompatible, incongruous (see inconsonant)

Conspicuous synopsis, epitome, *abridgment, abstract, brief

Ana *compendium, syllabus, digest, survey, sketch, précis, aperçu

Conspicuous prominent, salient, signal, *noticeable, remarkable, striking, arresting, outstanding

Ana patent, manifest, *evident, distinct, obvious: eminent, celebrated, illustrious (see famous)

Ant inconspicuous —Con *common, ordinary: *obscure, vague: lowly, *humble, modest: hidden, concealed (see hide): *secret, covert

Conspicuous calab, intrigue, machination, *plot

Ana *sedition, treason: treacherousness or treachery, perfidiousness or perfidy, disloyalty, faithlessness, falseness or falsity (see corresponding adjectives at faithlessness)

Conspirator *confedrate, accessory, accomplice, abettor

Constant adj 1 faithful, true, loyal, staunch, steadfast, resolute

Ana abiding, enduring, persisting or persistent, lasting (see corresponding verbs at continue): dependable, trustworthy, *reliable, trusted, tried

Ant inconstant, fickle —Con unstable, capricious, mercurial (see inconstant): disloyal, *faithless, false, perfidious

2 *steady, uniform, even, equable

Ana established, settled, set, fixed (see set vb): invariable, immutable, unchangeable (see affirmative adjectives at changeable): *regular, normal, typical, natural

Ant variable —Con *changeable, changeable, mutable, protean: fluctuating, wavering (see swing)

3 *continual, incessant, unremitting, continuous, perpetual, perennial

Ana persisting or persistent, persevering (see corresponding verbs at persevere): persistent, dogged, *obstinate, stubborn: chronic, confirmed, *inveterate

Ant fitful —Con *intermittent, alternate: spasmodic (see fitful): occasional, sporadic, *infrequent

Constitution panic, terror, alarm, fright, *fear, dread, dismay, horror, trepidation

Ana confusion, muddlement or muddle (see corresponding verbs at confuse): bewildernment, distraction, perplexity (see corresponding verbs at puzzle): agitation, perturbation (see corresponding verbs at discompose)

Con sangfroid, composure, *equanimity, phlegm: aplomb, self-possession (see confidence)

Constituent n component, *element, ingredient, factor

Ana *part, portion, piece, detail, member: *item, particular

Ant whole, aggregate —Con *system, complex, organism, economy: composite, compound, blend, amalgam (see mixture)

Constitution *physique, build, habit

Ana temperament, temper, personality (see disposition): organism, *system: *structure, framework, anatomy

Constitutional adj *inherent, intrinsic, essential, ingrained

Ana congenital, *inmate, inborn: *native: natural, normal (see regular): *characteristic, individual, peculiar

Constrain oblige, coerce, compel, *force

Ana impel, drive, *move, actuate: require, exact, *demand

Constrain compulsion, coercion, duress, restraint, *force, violence

Ana suppression, repression (see corresponding verbs at suppress): compelling or impulse, driving or drive (see corresponding verbs at move): goad, spur, *motive, spring: *obligation, duty

Constrict compress, *contract, shrink, condense, deflate

Ana *tie, bind: restrict, confine, circumscribe, *limit: *restrain, curb

Con *expand, dilate, distend, swell, inflate: enlarge, *increase

Construct *build, erect, frame, raise, rear

Ana analogous words Ant antonyms Con contrasted words See also explanatory notes facing page 1
An adjective (adj) denotes a quality or characteristic. A verb (vb) describes an action or state of being. An adverb (adv) modifies a verb, adjective, or other adverb. A noun (n) names a person, place, thing, or idea. Prepositions (prep) show the relationship between a noun and another word in the sentence. Pronouns (pron) take the place of nouns. Conjunctions (conj) connect words, phrases, or clauses. Interjections (intr) express strong emotions or sudden actions. A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.
contemn 183 contemnible

or stained or in process of corruption or decay <tainted meat> <his unkindness may defeat my life, but never taint my love—Shak.> <the Claudii, brilliant, unaccountable, tainted with some deep congenital madness—Buchan> <directed toward the purge from the public service rolls of those tainted with fascism—Taylor Cole>

The less common attainant may be closely synonymous with taint <our writers have been attained by the disease they must help to cure—Frank> More often it retains a hint of its primary meaning of to sentence to outlawry or death and then suggests a sullying (as of one's name) or a degrading especially as a result of actual or reputed misconduct <wherein a good name hath been wrongfully attained—Milton> <no breath of calumny ever attained the personal purity of Savonarola—Milman>

Pollute implies that the process which begins with contamination is complete and manifest and that what was pure and clean has lost its clearness or fairness and has become muddy or filthy or poisoned <the nuisance set forth in the bill was one which would be of international importance—a visible change of a great river from a pure stream into a polluted and poisoned ditch—Justice Holmes>

Pollute is especially apt when the reference is to something that ideally is clean, clear, or bright <pollute the minds of children by obscenities> <you . . . are polluted with your lusts—Shak.> Delicately strongly implies befouling of something which ought to be kept clean and pure or held sacred. It usually suggests violation, profanation, or defacement and is highly opprobrious in its connotations <an evil bird that defilies his own nest—Latimer> (scenics such as these) "tis his supreme delight to fill with riot, and defile with blood—Cowper> Cruelty is not only the worst accusation that can be brought against a man, defiling the whole character—Bellow>

Ana *debase, vitiate, corrupt, deprave: impair, spoil, injure, harm

tempt *despire, disdain, scorn, scowl

Ana repudiate, reject (see DECLINE): slight, neglect, disregard: flout, scoff, jeer

Con venerate, revere, reverence: respect, esteem, admire, regard (see under REGARD n) contemplate 1 study, consider, weigh, exorcitate

Ana *ponder, meditate, muse, ruminant: reflect, cogitate, speculate, *think

2 observe, survey, notice, remark, note, perceive, discern, *see, view, behold, descry, espys

Ana *scrutinize, inspect, examine, scan contemplative meditative, reflective, *thoughtful, speculative, pensive

Ana *intent, rapt, engrossed, absorbed: musing, ruminating, pondering (see PONDER): reflecting, cogitating, reasoning, thinking (see THINK) contemporaneous *contemporary, coeval, coetaneous, synchronous, simultaneous, coincident, concomitant, concurrent

Con *preceding, antecedent, previous, prior, foregoing: following, ensuing, succeeding (see FOLLOW) contemporary adj Contemporary, contemporaneous, coeval, coetaneous, synchronous, simultaneous, coincident, concomitant, concurrent are comparable when they mean existing, living, or occurring at the same time. In contemporary and contemporaneous (of which contemporary is applied somewhat more frequently to persons, contemporaneous to events), the time regarding which agreement is implied is determined only through the context <Shakespeare was contemporary with Cervantes, who died in the same month> <Shelley's last year was contemporaneous with Matthew Arnold's first> <the reign of Louis XIV was contemporaneous with the Commonwealth in England and also with the Restoration and the revolution of 1688>  <love of school is not contemporaneous with residence therein; it is an after product—Grandgent> Contemporary, but not contemporaneous, may imply reference to the present; it then means of the same time as that of the speaker or writer <we are not without contemporary talent—Wharton> <most contemporary novels Jane found very bad—Rose Macaulay>

Coeval usually implies contemporaneousness for a long time or at a remote time (everybody knows that the Roman Catholic religion is at least coeval with most of the governments where it prevails—Burke) <the theory requires that these coeval stars should be of nearly the same mass and brightness—Eddington> Coetaneous is a close synonym of coeval, but it may more specifically suggest contemporaneity of origin (the maturation of Veblen's thought led him to note two forces . . . whose coetaneous presence acted first in the promotion of reason and then in its derangement—Rosenberg> <ancient and coetaneous mountain ranges> Synchronous implies an exact correspondence between the usually brief periods of time involved; simultaneous more frequently denotes agreement in the same point or instant of time <two pendulums so adjusted that their movements are synchronous>

The two shots were simultaneous <French speech has run a similar and almost synchronous course with English—Ellis> <it was proposed that there should be simultaneous insurrections in London . . . and at Newcastle—Macaulay> Coincident applies to events that are regarded as falling or happening at the same time; it ordinarily minimizes the notion of causal relation (the discovery of America was almost coincident with the capture of Granada) <the growth of the mine union movement was coincident with the growth of business and manufacturing—Hay> Concomitant carries so strong an implication of attendance or association that it often imparts a subordinate character; however, only when it implies coincidence or synchronousness is it truly a synonym of the other words <the concomitant circumstances of this event cannot be ignored> <as the beauty of the body always accompanies the health of it, so certainly is decency concomitant to virtue—Spectator>

Concurrent adds to synchronous the implication of parallelism or agreement (as in length of existence or in quality or character) <concurrent terms in prison> <the concurrent operation of many machines> <great cultural achievements have not been inevitably, or even generally, concurrent with great material power—Bryson>

Ana living, existing, subsisting (see BE)

Con see those at CONTEMPORANEOUS contempt despite, disdain, scorn (see under DESPISE vb)

Ana abhorrence, detestation, loathing, hatred, hate (see under HATE vb): aversion, *antipathy: repugnance, distaste (see corresponding adjectives at REPUGNANT)

Ant respect —Con esteem, admiration, *regard: *reverence, awe, fear contemnible adj Contemnible, despicable, pitiable, sorry, scurrv, cheap, beggarly, shabbily are comparable when they mean arousing or deserving scorn or disdain. Contemnible applies to whatever inspires such scorn or disdain for any reason however great or small <with that property he will never be a contemnible man—Austen> (the one disgraceful, unpardonable, and to all time contemnible action of my life was to allow myself to appeal to society for help and protection—Wilde> Despicable is a stronger term and frequently implies both keen and scornful, sometimes indignant, disapprobation and a sufficient cause for such a reaction <the immorality of James's Court was hardly more despicable than the imbecility of his government—J. R. Green> (even excellent science could and did often make despicable morality—Gauss) Pitiable (see also PITIFUL) implies the inspiring of pity mixed with contempt (a pitiable show of weakness) (a pitiable attempt at reform) (the resorting to epithets . . . is a pitiable display of intellectual impotence—Cohen) Sorry is often used interchangeably with pitiable without marked loss, but it often distinctively implies contemptible or ridiculous inadequacy, wretchedness, or sordidness (sorry accommodations for the travelers) (mounted . . . upon a lean, sorry, jackass of a horse—Sterne) Scary implies extreme despircibility and meanness and the arousing of disgust as well as scornful contempt (a scary trick) (a scary impostor) (what difference between this Rome and ours . . . between that scary dumbshow and this pageant sheen . . . ?—Browning) Cheap often implies contemptibility that results from undue familiarity or accessibility (had I so lavished of my presence been . . . so stale and cheap to vulgar company—Shak.) More often, however, cheap and beggarly imply contemptible pettiness, cheap by falling far below the standard of what is worthy, beggarly by its remoteness from what is adequate (cheap politics) (a cheap and nasty life—Shaw) (about his shelves a beggarly account of empty boxes—Shak.) (the South in 1800 was a land of contrasts, of opulence and squalor . . . fine mansions, beggarly taverns—Brooks) Shabby comes close to cheap and beggarly in implying contemptible pettiness and to scary in implying meanness and the arousing of disgust; distinctively it may stress the poverty, the paltriness, or the ungenerous nature of what is so characterized (the shabby way in which this country . . . treated a poet so deeply devoted to it—Engle) (the explorer's mistress shows up with the shabby truth of the man's life—Hewes) Ana detestable, abominable, abhorrent, odious, hate- ful: vile, low, *base: abject, *mean, sordid, ignoble Ant admirable, estimable: formidable —Con *splendid, sublime, glorious, superb contend 1 Contend, fight, battle, war come into comparison when they mean to strive in opposition to someone or something. Contend, the most general of these words, always implies a desire or an effort to overcome that which is opposed, but it may imply rivalry rather than animosity, the use of argument rather than the exercise of physical strength or skill or the employment of weapons, a nonhuman rather than a human antagonist (the river was stronger than I, and my arms could not for many hours contend with the Thames—Jefferyes) (since they had left the España country behind them, they had contended first with wind and sandstorms, and now with cold—Cather) (the Manichean theory of a good and an evil spirit contending on nearly equal terms in the arena—Inge) Fight in its earliest and still most common sense implies a struggle involving physical strength or prowess, originally between men with the fists or with weapons and later also between animals (fight, gentlemen of England! fight, bold yeomen!—Shak.) (fight fiercely, Harvard—Lehrer) (a dog that will fight other dogs larger then himself) In extended use (see also RESIST) fight differs from contend not so much in its range of application, for both may imply other than a human adversary, as in its stress on a rigorous effort to achieve one's ends, and in its suggestion of a struggle against odds or great difficulties (fight for the defeat of a bill) (fight for breath) (fight against a growing evil) (he had fought like a demon every inch of the way against poverty and discouragement—Long) Battle and war are more picturesque or more poetic terms than fight: they are used chiefly in an extended sense, the first to suggest a continuous assaulting or attacking of the enemy or other method characteristic of open battle, and the second to suggest the noise, fury, or tumult of war (he found he must battle his way to success) (sometimes a patriot, active in debate, mix with the world, and battle for the state—Pope) (he wars with darkling powers (I war with a darkling sea)—Kipling)

Ana quarrel, wrangle, altercation, squabble (see under QUARREL n): *resist, combat, withstand, oppose, fight: compete, vie, *rival 2 *compete, contest Ana battle, war (see CONTEND): oppose, *resist, withstand, combat, fight content, contended satisfied (see under SATISFY)

Ana gratified, pleased (see PLEASE): sated, satiated, cloyed, surfeited (see SATIATE): replete (see FULL) content vb */satisfy

Ana gratify, *please: sate, *satiate, surfeit, cloy Con tansilize, tease (see WORRY): pique, stimulate, *provok, excite

contention dissension, difference, variance, strife, *discord, conflict

Ana *quarrel, wrangle, altercation, squabble: controversial, dispute, *argument: contending, fighting, warring (see CONTEND)

Con agreement, concurrence, coincidence (see corresponding verbs at AGREE): *harmony, accord, concord, concurrence contentious quarrelsome, bellicose, *belligerent, pugnacious, combative

Ana *contrary, perverse, froward: captious, faultfinding, caviling, carping (see CRITICAL): *aggressive, militant

Ant peaceable —Con *pacific, peaceful, irenic: serene, tranquil, *calm: *amiable, good-natured, complaisant, obliging

conterminous contiguous, abutting, adjoining, *adjacent, tangent, juxtaposed contest vb */1 compete, contend Ana struggle, strive, endeavor (see ATTEMPT): fight, battle (see CONTEND)

2 *resist, withstand, oppose, fight, combat, conflict, antagonize contest n Contest, conflict, combat, fight, affray, fray denote a battle between opposing forces for supremacy, for power, or for possessions. Contest is the broadest term; originally it referred solely to strife in argument but it is now applicable to any struggle, whether friendly or hostile, for a common object that involves a test of ability, strength, endurance, or strategic skill (a swimming contest) (a contest of wits) (what mighty contests rise from trivial things—Pope) (boundary controversies or other contests between states—Frankfurter) Conflict implies discord and warfare; it also suggests a closer engagement than contest (arms on armor clashing brayed . . . dire was the noise of conflict—Milton) Conflict may be extended to denote a struggle (often spiritual or mental) between opposing or contradictory principles or forces (there is [in a Shakespearean tragedy] an outward conflict of persons and groups, there is also a conflict of forces in the hero's soul—Bradley) Combat is less commonly used in an extended sense (a combat against despair) It implies an encounter, especially an armed encounter, between two (individuals, parties, or forces), frequently for the determination of a dispute (let these have a day appointed them for a single combat in convenient place—Shak.) (these progressive leaders in both parties rose only after bitter struggle. They were the product of more than a lively contest. Sometimes the contingent emergency, exigency, pinch, juncture, pass, continual, continuous, constant, incessant, unremitting, lecherousness, lustfulness, incontinence —

or antonyms

lecherousness, lustfulness, incontinence —

or antonyms

contilines to be spoken in a radio broadcast) as provision for perfection in sequence and in timing of the performance. Ana extending or extension, prolonging or prolongation, protracting or protraction (see corresponding verbs at Extend)

Ant cessation

Continue, last, endure, abide, persist are comparable when meaning to remain indefinitely in existence or in a given condition or course. Continue distinctively refers to the process and stresses its lack of an end rather than the duration of or the qualities involved in that process. Often, in addition, it suggests an unbroken course *(what a man is as an end perishes when he dies; what he produces as a means continue to the end of time—Russell) *(the illusion continues that civilization can somehow be reconciled with atomic war—Fleming) Last especially in its derivative lasting *(see lasting)* when unqualified usually stresses length of existence exceeding what is normal or expected *(the anger of slow, mild, loving people has a lasting quality—Deland) When qualified, last often loses this distinctive implication *(the work that Michelangelo did complete has lasted well—Barry) *(the refrigerator is guaranteed to last five years; *(the fire lasted only three months). Endure adds to last the implication of resistance, especially to destructive forces or agencies *(for living things, who suffer pain, may not endure till time can bring them ease—Lowely) *(an art . . . which endured . . . until man changed his attitude toward the universe—Henry Adams) Abide and its derivative abiding imply stability or constancy, especially in opposition to mutability or impermanence *(though much is taken, much abides—Tennyson) *(notwithstanding the countless features of London's living which were abiding, the changes made themselves felt—J. M. Brown) Persist adds to continue the implication of outlasting the appointed or normal time; it often also connotes recurrence, especially in sporadic instances *(an attitude towards life, which . . . persists, with many changes but no breaks, till the closing of the Athenian lecture rooms by Justinian—Inge)

Ana remain, stay: survive, outline, outlast

Con arrest, interrupt, check: stop, cease, desist, quit, discontinue: suspend, stay, intermit, defer, postpone

Continuity continuation, continuance

Ana succession, sequence, chain, train, progression Con intermittence, recurrence, alternation, periodicity *(see corresponding adjectives at Intermittent): fitfulness *(see corresponding adjective at Fitful)*

Continuous constant, perennial, cyclic, incessant, unremitting

Ana connected, related, linked *(see Join): successive, consecutive, sequent, serial: steady, constant, uniform

Ant interrupted — Con interrupted, recurrent, periodic, alternate

Confort distill, warp, deform

Ana twist, bend, curve

Contour outline, silhouette, skyline, profile Ana configuration, shape, form, conformation, figure

Contraband adj smuggled, bootleg

Contract n Contract, bargain, compact, pact, treaty, entente, convention, cartel, cordand designate an agreement reached after negotiation and ending in an exchange of promises between the parties concerned. Contract applies especially to a formal written agreement, often of a business nature, couched in such explicit terms as to be enforceable at law *(a regular contract to the above effect was drawn up by a lawyer, and signed and sealed in the presence of witnesses—Hawthorne) Bargain applies especially to an agreement regarding purchase and sale *(this bargain provides for an exchange of so much Ameri—can wheat and cotton for so much British rubber and tin* A compact is an earnest or solemn exchange of promises, sometimes between state or political groups and often between persons. A compact may be unwritten or undocumented, the only assurance of its execution being the trust which each party places in the honor of the other. The word is used when a keen sense of the obligation which it imposes is assumed of each of the parties *(men and women . . . marry and promise loyalty to some one person. They can keep that compact and yet not shut themselves away from other men and other women—Rose Macaulay) *(let us make a compact. I shall do everything to please you, and you must promise to do everything to please me—Hudson) *(the National Assembly, inspired by Thiers's patriotism, adopted . . . the "Compact of Bordeaux," whereby it was agreed that political differences should be put aside in order to carry through expeditiously the work of reconstruction—Schapiro)

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

Pact as used of an agreement between persons or groups is usually interchangeable with compact (suicide pact, an agreement between two persons to commit suicide) *(an unvoiced pact between us to read him with . . . skepticism—Horace Gregory) Perhaps because of its popularity with newspaper headline writers which its brevity won for it, pact is used with increasing frequency in the (often unofficial) agreement between states *(the Pact of Corfu was a constitutional pact wherein leaders of the southern Slavs agreed to join in a unitary kingdom—The Nation); in this use it is frequently interchanged with treaty, which is the generic term for an agreement between states made by negotiation or diplomacy *(the lateran pact or treaty establishing vatican city—*a nonaggression pact—*a trade pact—*a commercial treaty—*the president . . . shall have power, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to make treaties—U. S. Constitutions treaty, and never pact, however, is the term for an agreement establishing peace after a period of armed hostility *(the Treaty of Versailles)* An entente is a cordial or amicable agreement between nations in regard to their foreign affairs, usually involving a promise of joint military action in case of aggression against an adherent to the entente *(the Triple Entente between France, Great Britain, and Russia)* An entente may be in writing set forth in a published document or it may be based simply on an exchange of promises between heads of government, or may be merely a state of mind of the peoples concerned *(it changes the entente into an alliance, and alliances . . . are not in accordance with our traditions—Grey) The word is also used of an understanding between groups (as of economic competitors) *(a broader "peace treaty" between leaders of industry, labor, and agriculture governing both price and wage adjustments. This kind of entente would seem to be central to the management of an economy such as ours—L. G. Reynolds) A convention is usually an agreement which is either less formal or more specific than a treaty; it may be an agreement between several states regulating matters affecting all of them *(as the treaty of copyright for the conduct of war) or an agreement between commanders of armies in respect to military operations *(the conventions for suspending hostilities agreed upon by me with Marshals Soult and Suchet—Wellington) A cartel *(see also Monopoly) is a written agreement or convention between opposing nations, usually for the regulation of intercourse between them in view of or during war. Cartels provide for such matters as the treatment and exchange of prisoners, postal and telegraphic communication, the mode of reception of bearers of flags of truce, and the treatment of the wounded. Concordat usually applies to ### contract

1. pledge, covenant, engage, promise, plight
2. catch, incur

Con
- escape, evade, elude, shun, eschew: avert, ward, prevent

3. Contract, shrink, condense, compress, constict, deflate
   - denote to decrease in bulk, volume, or content, but they vary widely in their suggestion as to how this decrease is effected and what consequences it has. Contract means to draw together the sides or the particles of, especially by a force from within, with a consequent reduction in compass or a compacting of the mass (the heart, by contracting and dilating rhythmically, keeps up the circulation of the blood) <molten iron contracts as it cools>
   - Shrink means to contract so as to fall short of an original length, bulk, or volume (shrink cloth) <his assets have shrunk>
   - Capples often shrink before rotting<condense denotes reduction, usually of something more or less homogeneous, to greater compactness without material loss of content (condense a gas to a liquid) (condense a speech into a few paragraphs)>
   - Compress, which also means to reduce to a compact state, differs from condense in that it connotes a pressing or squeezing of something formless or diffused into definite shape or into a small compass (compress air) (compress cotton into bales) (compress the events of a lifetime into a play taking three hours to present)>
   - Constrict means to make narrow or smaller in diameter either by contraction or by squeezing (the pores of certain bodies are constricted under the influence of cold) (the throat is constricted by too tight a collar)>
   - Deflate means to cause to shrink by exhausting of a gas, or something insubstantial (deflate a balloon)

Ana
- dwindle, diminish, decrease, reduce

Ant expand — Con dilate, swell, distend, inflate (see EXPAND)

contrary

adverse: negating, nullifying (see NULLIFY)

1. Contrary, perverse, restive, balky, froward, wayward are comparable when they mean given to opposing or resisting wishes, commands, conditions, or circumstances. A person is contrary who by nature or disposition is so self-willed that he cannot or will not accept dictation or advice (she is the most contrary child I have ever seen) or who vigorously objects to any arrangements or plans made by others (they've been in your way all these years, and you've always complained of them, so don't be contrary, sir — Cather)
   - A person or sometimes one of his acts, occurrences, or desires is perverse when he or it as a result of temperament or disposition, or sometimes of physical constitution or moral character, runs counter to what is right, true, correct, or in keeping with human nature, especially as determined by the moral law, by custom, or by the laws of nature or the state. Like contrary, the term may suggest obstinate willfulness, but even then it usually carries a stronger suggestion of wrongheadedness (perverse disputings of men of corrupt minds, and destitute of the truth — 1 Tim 6:5) (they will not be resolute and firm, but perverse and obstinate — Burke)
   - More often, however, the term suggests defiance of or disobedience to the law, especially the moral law or the established proprieties (Rimbaud was the rebel incarnate . . . he was perverse, untractable, adamant—until the very last hour—Henry Miller) (the poet's sense of responsibility to nothing but his own inner voice is perhaps his only way of preserving poetic integrity against the influences of a perverse generation — Day Lewis)
   - Perverse sometimes suggests perversion or a sexual maladjustment that reveals itself in aberrant or abnormal desires or acts (the presence of a small minority of abnormal or perverse persons affords no excuse for restricting the liberty of the many to the standard of the few — Ellis) (the last perverse whim which has taken possession of the debauchee — Krutch)
   - A person is restive (see also IMPATIENT) who obstinately refuses to obey the commands or the will of another; the term may imply inaction or a turning in another direction but more often it suggests intractability or unrelunis (the common man . . . is increasingly restive under the state of “things as they are” — Veblen) (your colonies become suspicious, restive, and untractable — Burke)
   - A person or, more often, an animal (as a horse) is balky when he or it stops short and refuses to go further in the desired direction or in the performance of something undertaken (the horse was never balky unless he was overloaded) (a child may become balky when he is confused by too many orders) (examination of witnesses, mostly reluctant if not downright balky — The Nation)
   - A person (often a child) is froward who is so contrary or so prone to disobedience that he will not comply with the most reasonable of requests or suggestions; the term usually suggests a characteristic rather than an occasional or a justifiable reaction (all the words of my mouth are in righteousness; there is nothing froward or perverse in them — Prov 8:8) (I never entered on disobedience without having settled with myself that the fun of it would be worth the pains, scornd repentance, and endured correction with a philosophy which got me the reputation of being a hardened and froward child — Mary Austin)
   - A person is wayward who is so perverse that he is incapable of government by those in authority over him and therefore goes his own way, however wanting captured they are deprived it may be (an institution for wayward girls) (I have been wild and wayward, but you'll forgive me now — Tennyson)
   - Things that are erratic or fail no clear law or principle are also describable as wayward (wayward fancies) (a wayward breeze)

contrasted words

- See also explanatory notes facing page I contrast 188

contrast n
- comparison, collation, parallel, antithesis
- distinction, difference, divergence, discrepancy, dissimilarity, unlikeness: conflict, discord

contravene vb
- deny, contradict, traverse, impugn, negative

contribution n
- donation, benefaction, alms
- contribution contrivance n

- means for example

Ana inventing, creation, discovery (see corresponding verbs at INVENT): implement, tool, instrument, appliance, utensil: machine, mechanism, apparatus

counsel vb
- direct, manage, conduct

converse vb
- contradiction, denial, dispute, argument

counsel vb
- advise, counsel, consult

counsel vb
- counsel, consult

contrive, devise, invent, frame, concoct mean to find a way of making or doing something or of achieving an end by the exercise of one’s mind. Contrive implies ingenuity or cleverness in planning, designing, or in scheming; it is a matter of indifference whether the end or object is good or bad, since the word stresses the manner of making, doing, or achieving rather than the character of the end (in every deed of mischief he had a heart to resolve, a head to contrive, and a hand to execute—if we were perfectly satisfied with the present, we should cease to contrive, to labor, and to save with a view to the future—Macaulay) *(she was forced to hurry. And she had risen that morning with plans perfectly contrived for the avoidance of hurry—Bennett) (contrive a way of helping them without their knowing it!) Devise often comes very close to contrive, but in general it throws more stress upon mental effort than upon ingenuity; the term often implies the serious reflection and experimentation that precedes the bringing of something into being, especially something new or quite different *(devise new and dainty dishes for a fastidious taste) *(devise an engine of triple the power) *(devise a plan of campaign) *(devise a new method of teaching a subject) *(grossly contriving their dear daughter’s good—poor souls, and knew not what they did, but sat ignorant, devising their own daughter’s death—Tennyson) (Leonardo was a child even ... in devising ... fantasy ... and concocting ... tricks—Ellis)

Invent, though often used interchangeably with devise, commonly retains from its primitive senses some notion of finding, but the term comes closer in its implication to originating, especially after reflection and but, sometimes more quickly, as the result of a happy accident *(the telescope was invented by Galileo in 1609) *(Huxley claims to have invented the term agnostic) *(his pains to invent a complete, generally unlovely terminology of his own—Muller) (she was tired of inventing means for making the days and nights pleasant and capriciously variable for others—Van Vechten)

Frame (see also build) implies the exact fitting of one thing to another (as in devising or inventing a story, a theory, or a rule); usually the term suggests an exact fitting (as of the words to the thought, or of the plot, character, and actions to the story as a whole, or of the expression to the spirit, or of the means to the end) (it will take me some time to frame a proper reply to this letter) (statutes ... which must needs have been framed for some purpose or other—Kingsley) (never, it may be safely asserted, was a plan of society framed so consistent, harmonious and beautiful in itself—Dickinson)

Concoct especially suggests a bringing together of ingredients in new or unexpected combinations, arrangements, or order so as to enhance their effectiveness (as in writing, in imagining, or in fashioning) *(from the scraps of conversation he had overheard he concocted a plausible and amusing yarn) (the most horrible monsters and tortures ... his fervid imagination could concoct out of his own bitter experiences and the manners and customs of his cruel times—Elliot)

Ana plan, scheme, project (see under PLAN): manipulate, ply, swing (see HANDLE)

control vb
- direct, manage, conduct

Ana govern, rule: regulate, adjust: guide, lead, pilot, engineer, steer: restrain, curb, check control n

- command, dominion, authority, power, jurisdiction, sway

Ana ascendancy, supremacy: might, puissance, power, force: management, direction (see corresponding verbs at CONDUCT)

Con mutiny, revolt, rebellion

control vb
- rebut, refute, disprove, confute

Ana contravene, traverse, impugn, deny, gainsay: oppose, combat, fight (see RESIST): dispute, debate, agitate, argue, discuss

Ant assert — Con defend, justify, maintain, vindicate contumacious rebellious, insubordinate, mutinous, seditious, factious

Ana contrary, perverse, froward: refractory, recalcitrant, intractable, ungovernable, unruly, headstrong

Ana obedient — *Con compliant, acquiescent, resigned: amenable, tractable, docile (see OBEDIENT) contumelious *abusive, opprobrious, vituperative, scurrilous

Ana insolent, overbearing, arrogant, disdainful (see Proud): humiliating, demeaning, debasing, abasing (see ABASE): flouting, scoffing, jeering, sneering (see SCOFF)

Ana obsequious — *Con complimenting or complimentary, commending or commendatory, applauding (see corresponding verbs at COMMEND)

contusion bruise, wound, trauma, traumatism, lesion

Ana Edmund, puzzle, riddle, enigma, problem, mystery convalesce *improve, recover, recuperate, gain

Ana progress, advance: strengthen, invigorate: cure, heal, remedy convenience convention n, *form convene convocation n, *summon, summons, call, cite

Ana gather, congregate, assemble, collect

Ant adjourn — *Con disperse, scatter, dismiss, eject convent convent n, *cloister, nunnery, monastery, abbey, priory convention convention n, *entente, compact, pact, treaty, cartel, cord, contract, bargain

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.
conversant, versus are comparable when they mean being familiar with something; they are seldom found in attributive use. Conversant (usually followed by with) implies a familiarity with a subject or a field of knowledge or with the writings on that subject or in that field that comes from long association, long experience, frequent intercourse, or many dealings with them (like Walpole ... he was thoroughly conversant with questions of finance—Lecky) "The Pilgrim's Progress" is known not only to everyone who is conversant with the other writings of the period, but to thousands, the world around, who never heard of ... [Bacon's] "Essays"—Lowes) "British officers ... must be conversant with the ways of a dozen or more castes—Rand) Versed (followed by in) may be used interchangeably with conversant or it may be used distinctively to convey not only an implication of familiarity with something, but of skill, adeptness, or proficiency (as in an art or a profession); thus, a person versed in law need not be conversant with the laws of all European countries; a specialist in forensic medicine though versed in medicine may not be conversant with all the new methods of treating pneumonia. Because of this added implication, versed is often used in combination <well-versed> <ill-versed> <poorly versed> <I don't think he is deeply versed in life—Byron) <political minutemen excited by the issues of the day, informed on these issues and at the same time fully versed in the problems of the community—Humphrey) <versed in all the arts of procrastination, indolence, and evasion—A. R. Williams.)

Ana intimate, *familiar: informed, acquainted (see inform): *learned, erudite: adept, *proficient, skilled, expert, skillful, masterly

Ant ignorant

conversation, converse communion, communication, *intercourse, commerce, traffic, dealings, correspondence

Ana conversing, talking or talk, speaking or speech (see corresponding verbs at speak)

converse vb talk, *speak

Ana *express, voice, broach, air, ventilate, vent, utter: *chat, chatter, gabble: *gossip, tattle: *discourse, descant, expatiate, dilate converse n see CONVERSATION converse n Converse, obverse, reverse are frequently confused when they mean something which is the opposite of another thing. Converse applies chiefly to statements or to propositions; typically it implies an interchange or transposition of the important terms (the relation of wife to husband is called the converse of the relation of husband to wife—Russell) "the converse of "none but the brave deserves the fair" is "none but the fair deserves the brave") "Converse is not to be confused with contradi-tory (see under OPPOSITE adj); so long as the important terms are transposed, one proposition is the converse of another whether or not it is its opposite (the feeling that society needs protection against the individual rather than the converse—Brownell.) Obverse and reverse specifically apply to the two faces of a coin or medal, obverse applying to the one containing the head or principal inscription, reverse to the other; in more general use, obverse refers to the more, reverse to the less, apparent or intentionally conspicuous side or face of something (looking at the fair tapistry of Life, with its royal and even sacred figures, he dwells not on the obverse alone, but here chiefly on the reverse; and indeed turns out the rough seams, tatters, and manifold thums of that unsightly wrong side—Carlyle)

Ana opposite, contrary, antithesis, contradictory (see under OPPOSITE adj) conversion transformation, metamorphosis, transmutation, transmogrification, transfiguration (see under TRANSFORM) convert vb *transform, metamorphose, transmute, trans-mogrify, transfigure

Ana manufacture, fabricate, forge, *make: apply, utilize, employ, *use convert n Convert, proselyte are synonyms only in being applicable to the same person. Both denote a person who has embraced another creed, opinion, or doctrine than the one he has previously accepted or adhered to. Convert commonly implies a sincere and voluntary change of belief; it is, therefore, the designation preferred by the church, the party, or the school of thought of which such a person becomes a new member (the first American novelist to become a ... convert to naturalism—Malcolm Cowley) Convert is also applied to a person who undergoes the religious experience called conversion or a turning from a life of sin or indifference to one guided by religious (specifically, Christian) principles and motives. Proselyte basically denotes a convert to another religion. It is still used in reference to a convert to Judaism who manifests his sincerity and fidelity by strict adherence to religious laws and practices. In general use, however, the term may suggest less a reverent or convicted and voluntary embracing than a yielding to the persuasions and urgings of another, be it an earnest missionary or zealot or someone with less praiseworthy motives (ye compass sea and land to make one proselyte—Mt 23:15) Proselyte is often the designation chosen by the members of a church for one formerly of their number who has been converted to another faith. The term is also applied to a person won over to a party, a cause, or a way of life in which he has formerly expressed disbelief or disinterest (you agree with the rest of the married world in a propensity to make proselytes—Shenstone)

Ana neophyte, *novice

Con apostate, *renegade, backslider, recreant, turncoat convertible *reciprocal, corresponding, correlative, complementary, supplemental

Ana interchangeable, exchangeable (see corresponding verbs at EXCHANGE) convey 1 transport, *carry, transmit, bear

Ana *move, remove, shift, transfer: take, fetch, *bring

2 *transfer, deed, alienate

Ana consign, *commit, relegate convict n *criminal, felon, malefactor, culprit, delinquent

Ana miscreant, blackguard, scoundrel, *villain: offender, sinner (see corresponding nouns at OFFENSE) conviction 1 assurance, certitude, *certainty

Ana faith, *belief, credence, credit

Con doubt, *uncertainty, dubity, dubiosity, skepticism: disbelief, *unbelief, incredulity

2 belief, persuasion, *opinion, view, sentiment

Ana tenet, dogma, *doctrine: judgment, conclusion (see under INFER) convincing compelling, telling, cogent, *valid, sound

Ana proving, demonstrating (see PROVE): persuading or persuasive, inducing (see corresponding verbs at INDUCE): forceful, forcible, potent, *powerful convivial companionable, *social, gregarious, hospitable, cooperative

Ana analogous words Anant antonyms Con contrasted words See also explanatory notes facing page 1 convulse

Con

rock, *shake, agitate

Ana

*discompose, disturb, disquiet, perturb

vb

 escort, conduct, *accompany, attend, chaperon

rock, * shake, agitate

convene, muster, * summon, summons, call, cite convoke

unruffled

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

and assurance that one cannot be abashed, annoyed, disconcerted, alarmed, or otherwise disturbed; it usually implies a temperamental rather than an acquired frame of mind ⟨Franklin’s imperturbable common sense—Arnold⟩

⟨a very good-looking, rosy little man with . . . a soft voice and a manner of imperturbable urbanity—H. G. Wells⟩

Unflappable is a somewhat informal synonym of imperturbable and like the latter stresses ability to resist what tends to disturb ⟨from his encounters with lions and hippos . . . Mr. Hillaby emerges unflappable and subtly triumphant—Times Lit. Sup.⟩

 ⟨an unflappable debater, he never let a Soviet accusation go unanswered—Newsweek⟩ (an unflappable management of affairs that might otherwise become bothersome—Wicker)

Nonchalant stresses an easy coolness of manner or casualness that suggests indifference or unconcern; it often connotes lightheartedness or offhandedness ⟨God . . . knows, if he is not as indifferent to mortals as the nonchalant deities of Lucretius—Byron⟩ (at the back [of the ambulance], haughty in white uniform, nonchalant on a narrow seat, was The Doctor—Sinclair Lewis)

⟨he walked in a nonchalant fashion—D. H. Lawrence⟩

Ana calm, tranquil, serene, placid: detached, aloof, indifferent; *inactive, stoic, phlegmatic

Ant

ardent: agitated —Con fervid, fervent, passionate, per fervid, *impassioned: perturbed, discomposed, disturbed, upset, fluttered, flurried (see DISCOMPOSE)

coop

*enclose, enclose, fence, pen, corral, cage, wall

Ana con fine, circumscribe, *limit, restrict: *hinder, impede, obstruct, block, bar cooperate conjoin, *unite, combine

Ana coincide, *agree, concur

Ant counteract —Con neutralize, negative: *nullify, negate, annul cooperative *social, companionable, gregarious, convivial, hospitable

Ana sociable, cordial, genial, affable, *gracious: helping or helpful, aiding, assisting (see corresponding verbs at HELP)

Ant uncooperative —Con *unsocial, asocial cop vb *steal, filch, pinch, snatch, swipe, lift, pilfer, purloin copartner *partner, colleague, ally, confederate

Ana *associate, companion, comrade

copious *plentiful, abundant, ample, plenteous

Ana *profuse, lavish, exuberant, prodigal, luxuriant, luscious

Ant meager —Con scanty, scant, scrimpy, sparse, exiguous, spare (see MEAGER): *thin, slight, tenuous, slim, slender copy n *reproduction, duplicate, carbon, carbon copy, transcript, facsimile, replica

Ana counterpart, *parallel: imprint, print, *impression, impress: *image, effigy

Ant original

copy vb *Copy, imitate, mimic, ape, mock mean to make something like an already existing thing in form, appearance, or obvious or salient characteristics. Copy implies duplication of an original and thereby as close a resemblance as is possible under the circumstances ⟨copy a letter⟩ ⟨copy Da Vinci’s “Mona Lisa”⟩ (copy the clothes of a fashionable designer) ⟨later examples of the Greek revival travestied the classic style rather than copied it—Amer. Guide Series: Mars.⟩

Imitate stresses following something as a pattern or model; it does not therefore preclude variations from the original; thus, a writer who imitates Keats may merely reecho enough of that poet’s rhythms, images, or sentiments to produce poetry reminiscent of Keats. Imitate may imply emulation ⟨she slept for hours in the daytime, imitating the cats—Stafford⟩ (imitated the example of his elders) or it may imply

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.
Costly

to something which affords a means of securing or insuring accuracy, uniformity in quality, or the maintenance of a standard <an arbitrary formula too rigidly adhered to may endanger good writing, but a good set of principles used as a check and an aid may be very helpful—Mott> Antidote, basically a remedy that counteracts a poison, implies that harm has been done and that a corrective which will neutralize or nullify these effects is necessary <there is no antidote against the opium of time—Browne> <the whole truth is the best antidote to falsehoods which are dangerous chiefly because they are half-truths—Coleridge> correlate n *parallel, analogue, counterpart correlative adj corresponding, complementary, complemental, *reciprocal, convertible correspond *agree, square, accord, tally, jibe, harmonize, conform Appraoch, touch, *match, rival, equal correspondence *intercourse, communication, conversation, conference, communion, commerce, traffic, dealings corresponding adj *correlative, complementary, complemental, *reciprocal, convertible Ana similar, analogous, *like, parallel, comparable corridor passageway, *passage, hall, hallway, gallery, arcade, cloister, aisle, ambulatory corroboration *confirm, substantiate, verify, authenticate, validate Ana attest, vouch, *certify: *support, uphold, back Ant contradict *—Con *invalid*ate, negate, *nullify corrupt vb deprave, debauch, pervert, *debase Ana degrade, debase, *abuse: *ruin, wreck: pollute, defile, *contaminate Con reform, amend, *correct corrupt adj 1 also corrupted debased, vitiated, depraved, perverted (see under DEBASE) Ana *abandoned, dissolve, profligate, reprobate Con *upright, honorable, honest, just, conscientious, scrupulous: virtuous, righteous, *moral, ethical, noble 2 iniquitous, nefarious, flagitious, infamous, *vicious, villainous, degenerate Ana *crooked, devious, oblique: venal, *mercenary: *base, low, vile: *pernicious, noxious, deleterious, detrimental, baneful: degraded, abused (see ABASE) corsair *pirate, freebooter, buccaneer, privateer cortège *procession, cavalcade, parade, motorcade Ana train, string, *succession: followers, satellites, disciples, partisans, henchmen (see singular nouns at FOLLOWER) coruscate *flash, gleam, scintillate, glance, glint, sparkle, glitter, glisten, twinkle cosmic *universal, catholic, ecumenical, cosmopolitan Con *earthly, terrestrial, mundane, worldly cosmopolitan adj catholic, *universal, ecumenical, cosmic Ana *liberal, progressive: all-around, many-sided, *versatile Ant provincial: insular: many-sided, *versatile cosmos universe, macrocosm, *earth, world cosset *caress, fondle, pet, cuddle, dandle cost n expense, *price, charge costly adj Costly, expensive, dear, valuable, precious, invaluable, priceless mean having a high value or valuation, especially in terms of money. Costly, expensive, dear refer to the expenditure or sacrifice involved in obtaining or procuring a thing. Costly applies to something which actually costs much; it usually implies such justification as sumptuousness, rarity, or fine workmanship their home is filled with costly furniture} I took a (chestnut) necessarily filled with (diamonds—Shak.) they are clad in very costly robes of silk; they are girdled like queens—Hearn) Expensive appplies chiefly to something which is high-priced, especially with the implication of a cost beyond the thing's value or the buyer's means (an expensive suit of clothes the father . . . was unable to give the child as expensive
a education as he had desired—Froude} Both costly and expensive may also be applied to whatever involves great losses or is a drain upon one's resources, not only in money but in such matters as time, effort, or health (Ches. St. F.) that is expensive for get rid of, but even more expensive to maintain—Heiser} Dear is opposed to cheap and commonly suggests a high, often an exorbittant, price or excessive cost; usually it implies a relation to other factors than the intrinsic worth of a thing (but to cheap it is when it is plentiful, and dear when it is scarce—Shaw) (relatively high wages of building labor bring derar. housing—Hobson) (their stout resistance was destined to cost them dear. . . . Many thousand citizens were ruined—Motley} Valuable when applied to things which have monetary value usually suggests the price they will bring in a sale or exchange (the most valuable dog in the kennel) (he stores away all his effects which have monetary value usually suggests the price were ruined—)

Would seem not quite in exorbitant, extravagant, *excessive: sumptuous,

Another synonym. But it carries a heightened implication of worth which is humanly valuable but biologically useless—Krutch} Precious originally came closer in meaning to costly than to valuable, of which it is now a very close synonym. But it carries a heightened implication of worth and often applies to something or someone whose value can scarcely be computed in terms of money (precious friends hid in death's dateless night—Shak.) (happy is the man who findeth wisdom . . . she is more precious than rubies—Prov 3:13-15) (to any one who has ever looked on the face of a dead child or parent the mere fact that matter could have taken for a time that precious form, ought to make matter sacred ever after—James) (and these two things, judgment and imagination, are, with knowledge itself, the most precious results of well directed schooling—Granten) When applied to a thing of monetary value, precious usually means that it is one of the rarest and most costly of the class that is named (precious stones) (an alabaster box of very precious ointment—Mt 26:7) but it may mean that the thing so described is too scarce and therefore, often, too expensive to use freely or generally (he be careful of the butter; it's too precious to waste) Invaluable and priceless imply worth that cannot be estimated. In practice they are sometimes used when precious is actually meant but would seem not quite in keeping for one reason or another (an invaluable servant

this invaluable liquor was of a pale golden hue, like other of the rarest Italian wines—Hawthorne) (a priceless (jewel) the colleges of this country have been a priceless element in the making of the freedom and might of this nation—L. M. Chamberlain) Therefore their use tends to be hyperbolic and often, especially in the case of priceless, intensive (I've just heard a priceless story isn't that dress priceless?

*luxurious, opulent Ant cheap —Con beggarly, sorry, scurvy, *contemptible poor, *bad

coterie circle, set, clique couchant recumbent, dormant, supine, *prone, prostrate counsel n 1 *advice Ant admonishing or admonition, chiding, reproaching or reproach (see corresponding verbs at PROPOSE); warning, forewarning, cautioning or caution (see corresponding verbs at WARN); precept, rule (see LAW) 2 *lawyer, counselor, barrister, advocate, attorney, solicitor counsel v e advise (see under ADVICE) Ant admonish, chide (see REPRAISE); *warn, forewarn, caution: remonstrate, expostulate (see object vb):

instruct, direct (see COMMAND vb) counselor *lawyer, barrister, counselor, advocate, attorney, solicitor count v b 1 Count, tell, enumerate, number are comparable when they mean to ascertain the total of units in a collection by noting one after another or one group after other. Count (see also RELY) implies computation of a total by assigning to each unit or each group of units as noted its proper numeral in succession, such as one, two, three . . . or three, six, nine . . . (they were counting the books one by one when he told them it would be quicker to count them by fives) (as many as thirty bonfires could be counted within the whole bounds of the district—Hardy) Tell, which is somewhat old-fashioned in general use, usually stresses a counting one by one (look now toward heaven, and tell the stars, if thou be able to number them—Gen 15:5) (all told there were 27 public schools

—Jones) or it may suggest a lingering counting interspersed with meditation on each unit counted (thus he ... like beads the collections of his days—Powell) Tell is more common in current use in the collocation tell off which adds to the notion of counting that of setting apart the units counted (told off a detail and put them to opening a trench—Dobie) Enumerate implies a listing or mentioning of each one in a series not only that their total may be ascertained, but that they may be individually known or specified (enumerate the powers of the supreme court) (enumerate the species of plants found on an island) (enumerate the various dishes served at a dinner) Number is a somewhat literary equivalent of either count or enumerate: in some uses it carries an additional suggestion of allotment or limit (the days of every man are numbered) Ant numbers the flowers of the field) (but even the very hairs of your head are all numbered—Lk 12:7) isn't that dress priceless?y

*analogous words
Ant antonyms
Con contrasted words
See also explanatory notes facing page 1 counteractive counter adverse, antagonistic

countervaluing, counterbalancing, counterpoising, compensating, offsetting, balancing (see COMPENSATE); correct(ing) (see CORRECT vb 1); neutralizing (see NEUTRALIZE)

counterbalance vb offset, compensate, counterval, balance, counterpoise

*stabilize, steady, poise: correct (sense 1)

counterfeit vb feign, sham, simulate, pretend, assume, affect *copy, imitate, mimic, ape: dissemble, disguise

counterfeit adj Counterfeit, spurious, bogus, fake, sham, pseudo, pinchbeck, phony are comparable when meaning not at all what it is said to be or purports to be. Counterfeit implies that what is so qualified is an imitation of something else and usually of something finer, rarer, or more valuable and that the imitation is intended to deceive or defraud; thus, play money intended for the use of children at play is imitation but not counterfeit money; a clipped coin, though intended to defraud, is a real coin and not counterfeit; but a false banknote is both imitation and intended to deceive or defraud and is counterfeit <planned to substitute a counterfeit gem for the historic original> <the austere word of genuine religion is: save your soul! The degenerate counsel of a counterfeit religion is: save your soul!—Sullivan> Spurious designates something as false rather than true or genuine; it carries no strong implication of being an imitation; thus, a spurious painting is one that is falsely attributed to a well-known painter; spurious writings attributed to Shakespeare are those thrown out of a canon of his work; a spurious condition is one which only superficially resembles the genuine condition <spurious pregnancy> The word does not necessarily connote a fraudulent purpose; it may suggest an honest mistake, confusion, or lack of scholarship <it is certain that the letter, attributed to him, directing that no Christian should be punished for being a Christian, is spurious—Arnold> <it would have been unfair to call his enthusiasm <it would have been unfair to call his enthusiasm for social reform spurious. It was real enough in its way—Galsworthy> <no spurious argument, no appeal to sentiment . . . can deceive the American people—Roosevelt> Bogus carries the implications of fraudulence or deceit and applies to whatever may be passed off on one or may attempt to deceive one as to its true nature <bogus certificates> <bogus legal actions> <he had figured . . . the night before, in red cambic and bogus ermine, as some kind of a king—Mark Twain> <Herman Melville made a habit of breaking out, whenever he was excited, into bogus Shakespeare—Huxley> Fake and sham are often equal to the past participle adjectives faked and shammed, both usually implying a more or less obvious implication of something real. But fake emphasizes the idea of a false fabrication or of fraudulent manipulation <give fake news> <Americans who cling to illusions about communism and its fake Utopia—A. E. Stevenson> <sell a fake medicine>  and sham stresses the thinness and obviousness of the disguise, the naiveté of the deception, or often the lack of intent to imitate exactly     Pseudo actually means false in any way; as an adjective modifying a noun or in the combining form joined with a separate noun it frequently implies pretense rather than fraud or spuriousness rather than counterfeit(ing) <these pseudo evangelists pretended to inspiration—Jefferson> <luxuries which, when long gratified, became a sort of pseudo necessaries—Scott> <o'er taste awhile these pseudo-bards prevail—Byron> Pinchbeck implies a cheap, tawdry, or worthless imitation often of something precious, costly, or grand; it rarely implies an intent to deceive and is therefore closer to sham than to counterfeit   Phony stigmatizes something which does not impose but puzzles or perplexes since it has a dubious appearance of reality   <journalists described as a phony war the period of relative inactivity near the beginning of World War II> Simulate, feign, pretended (see ASSUME): fraudulent (see corresponding noun at DECEPTION): deceptive, misleading, delusive, delusory counterfeit, spurious, bogus, fake, sham, pseudo, pinchbeck, phony are comparable when meaning not at all what it is said to be or purports to be. Counterfeit implies that what is so qualified is an imitation of something else and usually of something finer, rarer, or more valuable and that the imitation is intended to deceive or defraud; thus, play money intended for the use of children at play is imitation but not counterfeit money; a clipped coin, though intended to defraud, is a real coin and not counterfeit; but a false banknote is both imitation and intended to deceive or defraud and is counterfeit <planned to substitute a counterfeit gem for the historic original> <the austere word of genuine religion is: save your soul! The degenerate counsel of a counterfeit religion is: save your soul!—Sullivan> Spurious designates something as false rather than true or genuine; it carries no strong implication of being an imitation; thus, a spurious painting is one that is falsely attributed to a well-known painter; spurious writings attributed to Shakespeare are those thrown out of a canon of his work; a spurious condition is one which only superficially resembles the genuine condition <spurious pregnancy> The word does not necessarily connote a fraudulent purpose; it may suggest an honest mistake, confusion, or lack of scholarship <it is certain that the letter, attributed to him, directing that no Christian should be punished for being a Christian, is spurious—Arnold> <it would have been unfair to call his enthusiasm for social reform spurious. It was real enough in its way—Galsworthy> <no spurious argument, no appeal to sentiment . . . can deceive the American people—Roosevelt> Bogus carries the implications of fraudulence or deceit and applies to whatever may be passed off on one or may attempt to deceive one as to its true nature <bogus certificates> <bogus legal actions> <he had figured . . . the night before, in red cambic and bogus ermine, as some kind of a king—Mark Twain> <Herman Melville made a habit of breaking out, whenever he was excited, into bogus Shakespeare—Huxley> Fake and sham are often equal to the past participle adjectives faked and shammed, both usually implying a more or less obvious implication of something real. But fake emphasizes the idea of a false fabrication or of fraudulent manipulation <give fake news> <Americans who cling to illusions about communism and its fake Utopia—A. E. Stevenson> <sell a fake medicine>  and sham stresses the thinness and obviousness of the disguise, the naiveté of the deception, or often the lack of intent to imitate exactly     Pseudo actually means false in any way; as an adjective modifying a noun or in the combining form joined with a separate noun it frequently implies pretense rather than fraud or spuriousness rather than counterfeit(ing) <these pseudo evangelists pretended to inspiration—Jefferson> <luxuries which, when long gratified, became a sort of pseudo necessaries—Scott> <o'er taste awhile these pseudo-bards prevail—Byron> Pinchbeck implies a cheap, tawdry, or worthless imitation often of something precious, costly, or grand; it rarely implies an intent to deceive and is therefore closer to sham than to counterfeit   Phony stigmatizes something which does not impose but puzzles or perplexes since it has a dubious appearance of reality   <journalists described as a phony war the period of relative inactivity near the beginning of World War II> Simulate, feign, pretended (see ASSUME): fraudulent (see corresponding noun at DECEPTION): deceptive, misleading, delusive, delusory

courageous

ingrained or characteristic capacity for meeting strain or stress in a manner suggestive of a finely tempered sword blade. It often implies qualities (as resiliency, ardor, fearlessness, fortitude, or gallantry associated less with physical strength than with mental or spiritual vigor.)

Courage, like mettle, refers to a temperamental quality but suggests something more fragile or volatile. It implies an ability to hold one's own, to assert oneself or one's principles, or to keep up one's morale when opposed, interfered with, frustrated, or tempted. It does not mean that one can forgive you entirely, even now—it is too much for a woman of any spirit to quite overlook. To quit a comrade on the road, and Hardy) he saw that England was saved a hundred years ago. (Paracelsus) It often connotes ingratiating personal qualities (as ease of address, a dashing style, or a polished manner.)

Tenacity adds to resolution the implications of stubborn persistence and of unwillingness to acknowledge defeat. Tenacity—Kirk) is not to say that the French lack tenacity. . . . Having determined upon a thing, the French character tends to exceed in its pursuit, and, while fighting for it, to hold out to the death—Bello) maintained this conviction with a fearless tenacity—Kirk) Ana bravery, boldness, audacity, dauntlessness, intrepidity, doubtlessness, fearlessness (see corresponding adjectives at BRAVE): valor, heroism, gallantry: fortitude, spirit, guts, backbone, sand

Courageous

- Con timorousness, timidity (see corresponding adjectives at TIMID)

- Con cowardice—Con timorousness, timidity (see corresponding adjectives at TIMID)

Courteous

- Polite, civil, courtly, gallant, chivalrous

- Newark, affable, cordial, suave, urbane, politic, diplomatic: considerate, thoughtful, attentive: obliging, complaisant (see AMIABLE)

- Con discourteous—Con rude, impolite, uncivil, ill-mannered, ungracious: curt, brusque, gruff, blunt (see BLUFF): insolent, supercilious, overbearing (see PROUD)

- Con courtesy, amenity, attention, gallantry are comparable when they denote a manner or an act which promotes agreeable or pleasant social relations. Courtesy suggests consideration for others or deference (as to their rank, sex, or age); it usually implies good breeding and acquired graces but it sometimes connotes innate gentleness or instinctive politeness rather than social training. The beauty of an inherited courtesy . . . of a thousand little ceremonies flowering out of the most ordinary relations and observances of life—Binyon) rising to him . . . with all the engaging graces and courtesies of life—Dickens) Amenity implies a disposition to make easy the approach to or the continuance of pleasant social relations; when used concretely it may be applied not only to words or acts but to pursuits, interests, or facilities that bring men into rapport. He was . . . a charming letter-writer; above all, an excellent and delightful talker. The gaiety and amenity of his natural disposition were inextricable—Arnold) he is a man of informed tastes who happens to prize the amenities. A snob, however, he is not and never has had to be—J. M. Brown) Should she be interested to read it? Might he send it to her? Joan's chaperon . . . put no bar upon these amenities—H. G. Wells) Attention implies a singling out of a particular person for special favor or consideration, or as the recipient of courtesies showing one's admiration or love (as in courting). The elder son is paying attention to his roommate's sister: Of his visitors were busily deferential toward the young lord, and evidently flattered by his attentions—Carlos Baker) she loved her children, but did not unduly spoil them or turn their heads with injudicious attentions—Rose Macaulay) Gallantry stresses devoted attention, sometimes amorous attention, to a lady; it also often connotes ingratiating personal qualities (as ease of address, a dashing style, or a polished manner.)

- Con graciousness, cordiality, affability, geniality (see corresponding adjectives at GRACIOUS): politeness, courteousness, courtliness, chivalrousness or chivalry, civility (see corresponding adjectives at CIVIL): considerateness or consideration, attentiveness, thoughtfulness (see corresponding adjectives at THOUGHTFUL)

- Con discourtesy—Con churlishness, boorishness (see corresponding adjectives under BOOR): rudeness, impoliteness, ungraciousness, incivility (see corresponding adjectives at RUDE)

- Con courtesies flowering out of the most ordinary relations; and a set purpose; a man not desirous to be met rushing down a narrow pass with a gulf on either side, for nothing would turn the man—Dicksen) the General . . . had no resolution, no will of his own, was bullied into the favors he bestowed—Parrellis) he saw that England was saved a hundred years ago. (Paracelsus) It often connotes ingratiating personal qualities (as ease of address, a dashing style, or a polished manner.)

- Con courtesies flowering out of the most ordinary relations; and a set purpose; a man not desirous to be met rushing down a narrow pass with a gulf on either side, for nothing would turn the man—Dicksen) the General . . . had no resolution, no will of his own, was bullied into the favors he bestowed—Parrellis) he saw that England was saved a hundred years ago. (Paracelsus) It often connotes ingratiating personal qualities (as ease of address, a dashing style, or a polished manner.)
the emphasis is upon one of these implications, the basic idea being obscured <their advance was covered by squadrons of airplanes> <he covered his anxiety by joining in the laugh> <there is nothing covered, that shall not be revealed—Mt 10:26> In still another sense cover implies an extending so far as to include, embrace, or comprise something (left scarcely enough money to cover his debts) <this point has already been covered in the argument> <Chaucer's life covered the last sixty years of the fourteenth century> <I think your statement covers the matter completely>  Overspread usually implies a covering by something that diffuses itself or spreads over a surface; the word carries no clear implication of concealing, sheltering, or protecting, but it does suggest the activity of something that flows, expands, or scatters until the entire surface is covered <clouds overspread the sky> <the ground is overspread with weeds>  <the rising waters quickly overspread the valley> Envelop suggests the presence or addition of something that surrounds and therefore covers or nearly covers a person or thing on all sides; it is often used of a gas or a liquid or of clothing <enveloped in a fur overcoat> <enveloped in water up to his chin> <till the sweet . . . incense-laden atmosphere . . . enveloped her like a warm and healing garment—Rose Macaulay> Envelop lends itself to extension and often connotes something impalpable or intangible as the enveloping element <words stir our feelings . . . through their enveloping atmosphere of associations—Lowes> <we are surely justified in . . . calling the spiritual presence which envelops us the spirit of Christ—Inge> Wrap comes very close to envelop in meaning, but it suggests something that folds or winds about so as to enclose rather than surround; the difference, although sometimes slight, is usually important to idiomatic usage; thus, one wraps (better than envelops) oneself in blankets or one wraps up (not envelops) several bars of soap  In extended use wrap usually suggests something that enfolds, envelops, or entangles or enfolds <one covetousness is suggested <is not thy kindness subtle, covetous . . . expecting in return twenty for one?—Shak.> Greedy emphasizes absence of restraint in desire; it is a censorious term only when the object of longing is evil either in itself or in immoderation, or cannot be possessed without harm to oneself or to others <greedy for gold> <exploitation [of provinces] by greedy proconsuls—Buchan> <he loved learning; he was greedy of all writings and sciences—Coulton> Acquisitive implies not only eagerness to possess but the capacity for acquiring and retaining what is desired. Thus, an acquisitive mind is not only greedy for knowledge but is capable of absorbing it in large amounts; the acquisitive classes of society not only covet possessions but have the means whereby they can constantly add to their possessions <one of those strenuous, acquisitive women—Weeks> Grasping implies eagerness and capacity to acquire wealth and selfishness in its acquisition and often suggests use of wrongful or unfair means <people who are hard, grasping . . . and always ready to take advantage of their neighbors, become very rich—Shaw> Avaricious also implies eagerness and capacity to acquire wealth, but especially wealth in a form (as money) which can be hoarded. It, more than any of the others, emphasizes extreme stinginess <an unremittting, avaricious thrift—Wordsworth> Clear, manifest, patent, *evident, obvious Covet 1 Covet, envy, grudge, begrudge though not closely synonymous all carry the implication of a selfish desire to have something for one's own enjoyment or possession. To covet (for fuller treatment see desire) is to long inordinately for something which belongs to another <covet a neighbor's piece of property because of its fine view> To envy is to regard another with more or less chagrin, repining, jealousy, or hatred because he possesses something one covets or feels should have come to oneself <envy a person his good fortune or his promotion> To grudge or begrudge implies reluctance or hesitation (often through selfishness, meanness, or stinginess) in giving another what he (or it) ought to have because it is his (or its) due or need <surely you wouldn't grudge the poor old man some humble way to save his self-respect—Frost> <begrudges every penny he spends on taxis> <she grudges every moment spent on housekeeping chores> 2 crave, *desire, wish, want Ana yearn, *long, pine, hanker, thirst, hunger: pant, aspire, *aim Ant renounce <something desirable> —Con resign, *relinquish, yield, surrender: *abjure, forswear: *decline, refuse, reject Covetous, greedy, acquisitive, grasping, avaricious mean having or manifesting a strong desire for possessions, especially material possessions. Covetous implies inordinateness of desire: very often, with allusion to the Ten Commandments, it implies longing for something that is rightfully another's <covetous of Shakespeare's beauty—Cower> <first settlers brought fine hunting dogs . . . of which the Indians were so covetous that a day was set each year when settlers traded dogs—Amer. Guide Series: Va.> It is, however, used with derogatory intent or effect only when envy is implied or wrongful means of acquiring possession are suggested <is not thy kindness subtle, covetous . . . expecting in return twenty for one?—Shak.> Greedy emphasizes absence of restraint in desire; it is a censorious term only when the object of longing is evil either in itself or in immoderation, or cannot be possessed without harm to oneself or to others <greedy for gold> <exploitation [of provinces] by greedy proconsuls—Buchan> <he loved learning; he was greedy of all writings and sciences—Coulton> Acquisitive implies not only eagerness to possess but the capacity for acquiring and retaining what is desired. Thus, an acquisitive mind is not only greedy for knowledge but is capable of absorbing it in large amounts; the acquisitive classes of society not only covet possessions but have the means whereby they can constantly add to their possessions <one of those strenuous, acquisitive women—Weeks> Grasping implies eagerness and capacity to acquire wealth and selfishness in its acquisition and often suggests use of wrongful or unfair means <people who are hard, grasping . . . and always ready to take advantage of their neighbors, become very rich—Shaw> Avaricious also implies eagerness and capacity to acquire wealth, but especially wealth in a form (as money) which can be hoarded. It, more than any of the others, emphasizes extreme stinginess <an unremittting, avaricious thrift—Wordsworth> Ana *envious, jealous: desirous, lustful (see corresponding nouns at desire): avid, athirst, *eager: rapacious, ravenous, glutonous, ravenous, *voracious Con self-denying, self-abnegating (see corresponding nouns at renunciation): renouncing, abjuring, forswearing (see abjure) Cow vb *intimidate, browbeat, bulldoze, bully Ana *frighten, terrorize, terrify: daunt, *dismay, appall: abash, discomfit, rattle, faze, disconcert, *embarrass cozy •comfortable, snug, easy, restful

*cheat, defraud, swindle, overreach coxcomb

*fop, dandy, beau, exquisite, dude, buck croy bashful, *shy, diffident, modest

Ana nice, proper, seemly, *decorous, decent: aloof, detached (see INDIFFERENT): cautious, wary, chary

Ant pert —Con *saucy, arch: brazen, brash, impudent (see SHAMELESS)

cozens *cheat, defraud, swindle, overreach

Ana *dupe, bamboozle, gull, trick, hoax, hoodwink, befoul: delude, beguile, *deceive, mislead

cozy *comfortable, snug, easy, restful

Ana sheltering, harboring, housing, lodging (see HARBOR)

*safe, secure: containing, satisfying (see SATISFY)

Con *miserable, wretched

crabbed *sullen, surly, glum, gloomy, sulky, saturnine, dour

Ana *dupe, bamboozle, gull, trick, hoax, hoodwink, befoul: delude, beguile, *deceive, mislead

—Con pert

Ana *saucy, arch: brazen, brash, impudent (see SHAMELESS)

crack vb *break, burst, bust, snap, shatter, shiver

Ana *break, burst, bust, snap, shatter, shiver crust, gruff, brusque, blunt (see BLUFF): testy, irritable, *miserable, wretched

Ana *miserable, wretched sullen, surly, glum, morose, gloomy, sulky, saturnine, dour

Ana *dupe, bamboozle, gull, trick, hoax, hoodwink, befoul: delude, beguile, *deceive, mislead

Con *saucy, arch: brazen, brash, impudent (see SHAMELESS)

Ana *dupe, bamboozle, gull, trick, hoax, hoodwink, befoul: delude, beguile, *deceive, mislead

—Con pert

Ana *saucy, arch: brazen, brash, impudent (see SHAMELESS)

credential 198  creep ing or acceptance, admitting or admission, receiving or reception (see corresponding verbs at RECEIVE): assenting or accept, acquiescing or acquiescence (see corresponding verbs at ASSENT): reliance, confidence, *trust, faith credential, testimonial, recommendation, character, reference mean something presented by one person to another in proof that he is what or who he claims to be. Credential (usually in the plural credentials) implies material evidence and especially a letter or document indicating that a person (occasionally a thing) is what he claims (or it seems) to be; the term was originally and is still used of the letter from the sovereign or head of one state to another carried by a new envoy or ambassador and formally presented to the sovereign or head of the state in which he is to serve <an envoy extraordinary from Savoy . . . presented his credentials in the Banqueting House—Macaulay> The term is often used of a letter presented to show competency or to attest identity, or of statements made or acts performed that serve as proof of what is to follow <if we turn out to be poor managers of our own affairs, we will have inferior credentials to present abroad—W. O. Douglas> <the putative Providence of the fight business, who may or may not die of old age before his credentials as an architect are established—Lardner> <these statements I put forward by way of credentials for a comparison which I purpose to make—Grandgent> Testimonial usually implies a written statement from a person competent to judge the character, qualifications, or merits of another and to testify to his fitness to hold or to fill an office or a position <six testimonials were received affirming his fitness for the ministry> <the selected that seemed to me from the testimonial to be the two best men—Crofts> However, the word is often used as an equivalent of recommendation, a term which implies that the statement comes from one (a former employer or teacher) who commends a person to the notice of a possible employer <armed with several recommendations he started out to seek a job> Character, which in this sense is used chiefly in Great Britain, is the designation given to a statement furnished by a former employer about the qualities and habits of a person as manifested while in his employ <then came . . . the coachman, the grooms, the sweeper. For each and all of these I had to write characters—John Lang> Although reference may imply no more than the giving of the name of a person from whom information regarding another may be obtained (as by a possible employer or landlord) it increasingly tends to be employed as a synonym of recommendation or character <Mrs. Blank told the woman she would let her know when she had examined her references> <she had lost all her references and was afraid to apply for a job>

Ana certification, accreditation, endorsement, sanction (see corresponding verbs at APPROVE)

credibile believable, *plausible, colorable, specious Ana *probable, likely, possible: reasonable, *rational: trustworthy, *reliable, dependable Ant incredible —Con fabulous, mythical, apocryphal, *fictitious: dubious, *doubtful, questionable credit n 1 *belief, faith, credence Ana reliance, *trust, confidence, faith: assurance, certitude, conviction, *certainty Con *unbelief, disbelief, incredulity: *distrust, mistrust; doubt, *uncertainty 2 prestige, authority, *influence, weight Ana reputation, repute, *fame; renown:

*power, sway

Ant discredit —Con opprobrium, obloquy, ignominy, disrepute (see DISGRACE)

3 Credit, asset are comparable when they mean a person or a thing that enhances another. Someone or something is a credit to another when he or it is a source of honor or of increase in good repute <the boy is a credit to his school> <his integrity is a credit to his upbringing> Someone or something is an asset to another when he or it adds to the usefulness, the worth, the advantages, or the attractiveness of another <the new teacher is an asset to the school> <his knowledge of how to deal with people made him an asset to his employer> credit vb. accredit, *ascribe, assign, attribute, impute, refer, charge credulity gullibility (see under CREDOUS) Ana credence, credit, *belief Ant incredulity: skepticism —Con *uncertainty, doubt, suspicion, mistrust creduulous, gullible both mean unduly trusting or confiding but they differ significantly in their implications as do their corresponding nouns credulity and gullibility. Credulous and credulity stress a tendency to believe readily and uncritically whatever is proposed for belief without examination or investigation; typically they suggest inexperience, naiveté, or careless habits of thought rather than inherent incapacity <far from being unconscious of heredity . . . men were insanely creduulous about it; they not only believed in the transmission of qualities and habits from generation to generation, but expected the son to begin mentally where the father left off—Shaw> <Hess, who was as deeply interested in psychic matters as Lanny, and far more creduulous—Upton Sinclair> <we know from the satiric comments of Lucian and from the ingenuousness of Pliny the deep creduility of the average Roman—Buchan> Gullible and gullibility, on the other hand, stress the idea of being duped; they suggest more the lack of necessary intelligence than the lack of skepticism, and connote the capacity for being made a fool of <it was discovered that this man who had been raised to such a height by the creulity of the public was himself more gullible than any of his depositors—Conrad> <that any of us may be so gullible and so forgetful as to be duped into making "deals" at the expense of our Allies—Roosevelt> <monstrous was the gullibility of the people. How could an overcoat at twelve and sixpence be "good"—Bennett>

Ana assenting, acquiescing or acquiescent, agreeing, subscribing (see corresponding verbs at ASSENT): believing, crediting (see corresponding nouns at BELIEF)

Ant incredulous: skeptical —Con uncertain, doubtful, suspicious, mistrustful (see corresponding nouns at UNCERTAINTY)

creed faith, persuasion, *religion, denomination, sect, cult, communion, church creep vb. Creep, crawl mean to move slowly along a surface in a prone or crouching position. Creep is more often used of quadrupeds or of human beings who move on all fours and proceed slowly, stealthily, or silently  <crouching down . . . in a corner . . . he made out the three fishermen creeping through some rank grass—Dickens> and crawl of elongated animals with no legs (as snakes and some worms) or with many small legs (as centipedes) that seem to move by drawing the body along the ground or a surface, or of human beings who imitate such movement <when she saw the snake crawling along the path, she screamed> <he was so badly injured that he could only crawl to the open door> In extended use both words often imply intolerable slowness (tomorrow, and tomorrow, and to-tomorrow, creeps in this petty pace from day to day—Shak.) (that sad, disappointing, disillusioning . . .

war crawled through that bitter winter of defeat—Rose Macaulay) Both often imply a slow movement of a person, especially into another's favor or into a given status or position, but creep usually suggests stealthy and insinuating methods (creep along the hedge-bottoms, an' thou'll be a bishop yet—Tennyson) (even in later and more enlightened times, the study of literature has crept its way into official Cambridge—Quiller-Couch) and crawl, procedure by awkwardness, servility, cringing, or groveling (Cranmer . . . hath crawled into the favor of the king—Shak.) (pomp-fed king . . . art thou not the veriest slave that 'e'er crawled on the loathing earth?
—Shelley) Both also imply a sensation such as might be produced by lice, fleas, or other human or animal parasites, but creep suggests a shivering, nervous reaction, and crawl, an intense feeling of distress and discomfort (something in their countenances that made my flesh creep with a horror I cannot express—Swift) (his flesh was crawling with the need of alcohol—Doherty) crevasse n crack, cleft, fissure, crevice, cleft, chink Ana chasm, *gulf: *gulf, *gulf: *break, gap

Ant antonyms

critical adj critical, severe, trenchant, biting Ant hypercritical, faultfinding, critical Con principled

Analogous words

199 critical

1 Critical, hypercritical, faultfinding, captious, caviling, carping, censorious are comparable when they mean exhibiting the spirit of one who detects and points out faults or defects. Critical, when applied to persons who judge and to their judgments, is the one of these terms that may imply an effort to see a thing clearly, truly, and impartially so that not only the good in it may be distinguished from the bad and the perfect from the imperfect, but also that it as a whole may be fairly judged or valued (a tête-a-tête with a man of similar tastes, who is just and yet sympathetic, critical yet appreciative . . . is a high intellectual pleasure—Benson) Critical may also imply a keen awareness of faults or imperfections with often the suggestion of loss of fairness in judgment (the attitude of Euripides towards the popular religion is . . . clearly and frankly critical—Dickinson) (the vast audience . . . was wont to be exceedingly critical. Bungling work drew down upon the headsman the execrations of the mob, and not infrequently placed his own life in danger—Reppier) When this loss of fairness is to be implied or when the judge's undue awareness of defects and over-emphasis of them is to be suggested, writers often prefer hypercritical to critical (the audience that night was, as the actors soon knew, hypercritical) (he was . . .
excessively difficult to please, not . . . because he was hypercritical and exacting, but because he was indifferent —Bennett) (constant hypercritical belittling of the efforts of others—Rosen & Kiene) Faultfinding sometimes takes the place of critical, sometimes of hyper-critical, but usually suggests less background, less experience, or less fastidiousness than either; it is therefore frequently used when an unreasonably exacting or a querulous temperament is also to be suggested (continually faultfinding reviewer of books) (a fault-finding parent) (Mrs. Stebbins's book would be better throughout for a more critical (I don't mean faultfinding) account of her authors' works—Bentley) Captious implies a readiness, usually a temperamental readiness, to detect trivial faults or to take exceptions on slight grounds, because one is either unduly exacting or perversely hard to please (is it captious to say that, when Manoah's

Analogous words

Ant

Con contrasted words

See also explanatory notes facing page I locks are called “white as down,” whiteness is no characteristic of down?—Landon) <after reading a work of such amplitude it seems captious to protest that the motivating forces . . . are inadequately analyzed—Bruin Caviling usually implies a captious disposition but stresses the habit or act of raising picayune or petty objections <cavilling legislators who delay the passage of a bill> <the most caviling mind must applaud their devoted sense of duty—Willis> <those cavilling critics who snipe from the musty back rooms of libraries—Ramsdell> Carping, far more than hypercritical or faultfinding, implies ill-natured or perverse picking of flaws and often in addition suggests undue emphasis upon them as blameworthy <and to that end we wished your lordship here, to avoid the carping censures of the world—Shak.> <that carping spirit in which she had been wont to judge of his actions —Trollope> Censorious implies a disposition or a tendency to be both severely critical and condemnatory of what one criticizes <such is the mode of these cen-sorous days, the art is lost of knowing how to praise—Sheffield>
Ana judicious (see WISE): *judicial: fastidious, finicky, particular, *nice, fussy, squeamish: discriminating, discerning, penetrating (see corresponding nouns at DIScERNMENT): understanding, comprehending, appreciating (see UNDERSTAND) Ant uncritical —Con *superficial, shallow, cursory 2 crucial, *acute Ana decisive, determinative, *conclusive: momentous, consequential, weighty, significant, important (see correspending nouns at IMPORTANCE) criticism, critique, review, blurb, puff are comparable when meaning a discourse (as an essay or report) presenting one’s conclusions after examining a work of art and especially of literature. None of these terms has a clearly established and narrowly delimited meaning, but, in general, each can be distinguished from the others with reference to its leading implications and its place in usage. Criticism is of all these terms the most nearly neutral and the least capable of carrying derogatory connotations. The proper aim and the content of a criticism have never been definitely fixed and are still subjects of controversy, but the term usually implies an author who is expected to have expert knowledge in his field, a clear definition of his standards of judgment, and an intent to evaluate the work under consideration <read every criticism of a new play the day following its first performance> Criticism is more often applied to the art, craft, or collective writings of such writers or speakers than to the individual article <this feeling, that contemporary judgments are apt to turn out a little ludicrous . . .
has converted much criticism of late from judgment pronounced into impression recorded—Galsworthy> <1 go on the assumption that a review is simply a short piece of criticism, and that it should be as good criticism as its writer can make it—Matthiessen> Because of this tendency to restrict the use of criticism to its general sense, critique is sometimes preferred as a designation of a critical essay, especially of one dealing with a literary work; but currently it is often avoided as an affectation <Jeffrey’s critiques in the Edinburgh Review> Review is now the common designation of a more or less informal critical essay dealing particularly with new or recent books and plays. The term is frequently preferred by newspaper and magazine critics as a more modest designation of their articles than criticism or critique and as permitting less profound or exhaustive treatment or as requiring only a personal rather than a final judgment of the merits and faults of the work. Review generally suggests literary criticism of a less pretentious kind, giving in general a summary of a book’s contents and the impressions it produces on the reviewer <the Sunday editions of many newspapers have a supplement devoted to book reviews> Blurb is applied chiefly to a publisher’s description of a work printed usually on the jacket of a book for the purposes of advertisement  Puff, a word once common for any unduly flattering account (as of a book or play), in current use applies especially to a review that seems obviously animated by a desire to promote the sale of a book or the success of a play regardless of its real merits or to one that is markedly uncritical in its flattering comments <puffs . . . with which booksellers sometimes embroider their catalogs—John Carter> criticize, reprehend, blame, censure, reprobate, condemn, denounce are comparable when they mean to find fault with someone or something openly, often publicly, and with varying degrees of severity. Criticize in its basic sense does not carry faultfinding as its invariable or even major implication; rather it suggests a discernment of the merits and faults of a person or thing <know well each ancient’s [classic poet’s] proper character; his fable, subject, scope in ev’ry page; religion, country, genius of his age: without these at once before your eyes, cavil you may—but never criticize—Pope> In ordinary use, however, the word does commonly imply an unfavorable judgment or a pointing out of faults and is probably the term most frequently used to express this idea <criticize a play severely> <averse to being criticized> <avoid criticizing a person’s errors in speech> <it is foolish
. . . to criticize an author for what he has failed to achieve
—Huxley> <we are trying to get away from the word “management” because it has been lambasted, ridiculed, criticized, and blasted—Personnel Jour.> Reprehend in present-day English takes a person as an object far less often than a thing, a quality, or an action. In such use it not only explicitly suggests the approach of a critic and his disapproval but implies a more or less severe rebuke <reprehend not the imperfection of others—Washington> <the thing to be reprehended is the confusing misuse of the word “verse”—Grandgent> Blame fundamentally implies speaking in dispraise of a person or thing rather than in his or its favor; in general it also suggests the mental approach of a critic or detector of faults <some judge of authors’ names, not works, and then nor praise nor blame the writings, but the men—Pope> <Heine . . . cared . . . whether people praised his verses or blamed them—Arnold> <Aristotle, while blaming the man who is unduly passionate, blames equally the man who is insensitive—Dickinson> Blame sometimes loses much of its opposition to praise and then may strongly convey an imputation or accusation of wrongdoing <one cannot blame starving children who steal food> or of guilt <there is no one to blame but yourself> Again blame may connot ultimate responsibility rather than actual guiltiness and then can take a thing as well as a person for its object <the German family, whose patriciarchical authoritarianism has been blamed . . . for militarism and despotism—Padover> <the drugfiend will get drugs somehow: if he finds his poppy and mandragora in poetry, you must blame his habit, not the poet—Day Lews> Since blame no longer invariably implies the simple reverse of commendation, censure is usually preferred to blame as the antonym of praise. This word carries a stronger suggestion of authority or competence in the critic or judge than does critique

201

crowd

blame, as well as a clearer connotation of reprehension or, sometimes, of a reprimand (the judge censured the jury for their failure to render a verdict on the evidence) (the official was not dismissed until after he had more than once been severely censured for his mistakes of judgment) (I lose my patience, and I own it too, when works are censured, not as bad but new—Pope) (it is not one writer’s business to censure others. A writer should expound other writers or let them alone—F. M. Ford) Reprobate is often used as though it were a close synonym of reproach or rebuke ("I put it to you, miss," she continued, as if mildly reproaching some want of principle on Lydia’s part—Shaw) Distinctively, however, it may imply not only strong disapproval and, usually, vigorous censure but also a rejection or a refusal to countenance (he reprobed what he termed the heresies of his nephew—Irving) (that wanton eye so reprobed by the founder of our faith—L. P. Smith) Condemn carries even stronger judicial connotations than censure, for it implies a final decision or a definitive judgment; it commonly also suggests an untempered judgment which is wholly unfavorable and merciless (condemn the fault, and not the actor of it? Why, every fault’s condemned ere it be done—Shak.) (the freedom with which Dr. Johnson condemns whatever he disapproves, is astonishing—Burney) (no conceivable human action which custom has not at one time justified and at another condemned—Krutch) Denounce adds to condemn the implication of public declaration or proclamation (in all ages, priests and monks have denounced the growing vices of society—Henry Adams) (nothing ... makes one so popular as to be the moral denouncer of what everybody else denounces—Brooks)

Ana inspect, examine, *scrutinize, scan: *judge, adudge, appraise, evaluate, assess (see ESTIMATE) critique *criticism, review, blur, puff crochet vb knit, *weave, plait, braid, tat crony comrade, companion, *associate

Ana intimate, *friend, confidant crook vb *flex, bow, buckle

Ana *curve, bend, twist: contort, *deform crooked, devious, oblique mean not straight or straightforward. Crooked may imply the presence of material curves, turns, or bends (a crooked back) (a crooked road) (the crooked trunk of a tree) In its frequent extended use it applies especially to practices (as fraud, cheating, or graft) involving marked departures from rectitude (crooked dealings) (a crooked politician) (crooked policies) (they are a perverse and crooked generation—Deut 32:5) Devious implies departure from a direct, appointed, regular, or fixed course and hence suggests wandering or errancy and, often, circuitousness (we sought with relief the empty roads of the fens, and, by devious routes, wound our way between golden buttercups and brown cattle—Lucas) (he went by devious ways, a little proud of himself for knowing the shortcuts, through a building used as a thoroughfare from one street to another, through what had once been the chuchyard of an ancient church—Archibald Marshall) The term as applied to persons and their acts or practices usually implies unreliability and often trickiness or shiftiness (the devious policies of the administration) (he had been a devious rascal—Bennett) (the marks of the thoroughbred were simply not there. The man was blatant, crude, overly confidential, devious—Mencken) Oblique implies a departure from the perpendicular or horizontal direction, or a slanting course (an oblique tower) (an oblique sunbeam) and in extended use suggests indirection or lack of perfect straightfor-wardness (an oblique glance) (all censure of a man’s self is oblique praise—Johnson) (their rebellion was an act of oblique homage—Collet) (people ... who think that ... the Japanese people are maddeningly oblique—Faunon Bowers)

Ana *awry, askew: twisted, bended or bent (see corresponding verbs at CURVE): distorted, contorted, deformed, warped (see DEFORM): tortuous, *winding: corrupt, nefarious, iniquitous, *vicious: stealthy, furtive, underhand (see SECRET)

Ant straight —Con *straightforward, aboveboard, forthright: *upright, honest, scrupulous, conscientious, honorable, just crop vb *shear, poll, clip, trim, prune, lop, snip

Ana *cut, chop, hew, slash: *detach, disengage cross n trial, tribulation, affliction, visitation cross adj cranky, testy, touchy, cholerie, splenetic, *irascible

Ana capious, carping, caviling, faultfinding (see CRITICAL): *irritable, fractious, peevish, petulant, snappish, waspish, querulous crosswise, crossways *across, athwart crotchet *caprice, freak, fancy, whim, whimsy, conceit, vagary crush vb *boast, brag, vaunt, gasconade crow vb 1 *press, bear, bear down, squeeze, jam

Ana *push, shove, thrust, propel: *force, compel, constrain

2 *pack, cram, stuff, ram, tamp

Ana compress (see CONTRACT): *compact, consolidate, concentrate crowd n Crowd, throng, press, crush, mob, rout, horde are comparable when they mean a more or less closely assembled multitude usually of persons. Crowd basically implies a close gathering and pressing together (the crowd came pouring out with a vehemence that nearly took him off his legs—Dickens) It often implies a merging of the individuality of the units into that of the mass (study the psychology of crowds) (no one in European art has rivalled Keion in the mastery of crowds of men each individually alive yet swept along by a common animating impulse, whether the raging passion of the victors or the panic of the routed—Binyon) (all our ideas are crowd ideas—Ferril) Throng varies so little in meaning from crowd that the two words are often used interchangeably without loss. Throng sometimes carries the stronger implication of movement and of pushing and the weaker implication of density (thronging circulating through the streets) (so they went northward ... past droves and droves of camels, armies of camp followers, and legions of laden mules, the throng thickening day by day—Kipling) (sailors hung from yards and bowsprits to shout the names of vessels to the bewildered, harried throng—Kenneth Roberts) Press differs from throng in being more often applied to a concentrated mass in which movement is difficult because of the numbers, but otherwise it also suggests pushing or pressing forward (perched on the folded-down top of a convertible, to roll down the boardwalk with a press of people following her car—Pete Martin) Crush carries a stronger implication than either crowd or throng of compactness of the group, of offering difficulty to one who wishes to make his way through it, or of causing discomfort to one who is part of it (the crush was terrific for that time of day ... for the street was blocked—Woolf) (a crush of dancing couples packed the floor—Basso) Mob strictly applies to a crowd or throng bent on the accomplishment of riotous or destructive acts (the citizens were terrorized for weeks by mobs) crucial

crush

〈a mob . . . which pulled down all our prisons—Burke〉 Especially in the United States and in Australia mob may be employed as an intensive of crowd, sometimes implying more disorganization (it is the tendency of a large crowd to become a mob) but at other times denoting merely an extremely large crowd (you could scarcely call it a crowd; it was a mob) In theatrical use mob applies to any large and manifestly agitated crowd of persons that has to be directed as a unit to achieve the proper or the intended effects. Rout applies to an especially disorderly or tumultuous mob 〈a hireling rout scraped together from the dregs of the people—Milton〉 (the busy rout of the street could be seen. He loved the changing panorama of the street—Dreiser〉 Horde usually applies to an assemblage or to a multitude massed together. It is sometimes preferred to crowd, throng, mob, or rout when a contemptuous term is desired, especially one that suggests the rude, rough, or savage character of the individuals who constitute the multitude or mass 〈hordes of small boys roving through the streets〉 (the horde of excursionists took possession of the beach) 〈hordes of sturdy rogues and vagrants—Fussell〉

Ana *multitude, army, host, legion crucial critical, *acute Ana threatening, menacing (see THREATEN): trying, afflicting, torturing or torturous (see corresponding verbs at AFFLICT)

crude *rude, rough, uncouth, raw, callow, green Ana primitive, primeval (see PRIMARY): *immature, unmatured: *coarse, vulgar, gross Ant consummate, finished —Con cultivated, refined, cultured (see corresponding nouns at CULTURE): *mature, mellow, adult: matured, developed, ripened (see MATURE)

crueI inhuman, fell, *fierce, trunculent, ferocious, barbarous, savage Ana atrocious, *outrageous, monstrous, heinous: *brutal, bestial: merciless, relentless, implacable, *grim Ant pitiful —Con compassionate, *tender, sympathetic: merciful, clement, *forbearing, lenient: humane (see CHARITABLE) crusIe n voyage, trip, tour, *journey, jaunt, excursion, expedition, pilgrimage crumble disintegrate, decompose, *decay, rot, putrefy, spoil crush vb 1 Crush, mash, smash, bruise, squash, macerate are comparable when they mean to reduce or be reduced to a pulp or broken mass. Crush implies a compressing between two hard or resistant surfaces that succeeds, usually, in destroying the shape and integrity of the mass; the result depends on the texture of what is crushed, whether it is permanently deformed and destroyed, broken into fragments, or capable of springing back into shape 〈crushed her fingers between the rollers of a mangle〉 〈[the ostrich] leaveth her eggs in the earth . . . and forgetteth that the foot may crush them—Job 39:14-15〉 〈many persons were crushed to death in the panic〉 〈this hat crushes easily〉 〈the crushed leaves of mint have a strong smell〉 Mash implies the beating or pounding of something, often deliberately, to a soft pulp; in this sense mash may come close to crush in meaning 〈this hand shall . . . mash all his bones—Pope〉 but it is more often used in reference to the preparation of certain vegetables and fruits in the kitchen by similar means 〈mash cooked potatoes〉 〈mash strawberries for jam〉

Smash carries a stronger implication of violence in implying a force that shatters or batters; it also often suggests the uselessness for all purposes of what is smashed 〈smash this witness like a crockery vessel, and shiver his part of the case to useless lumber—Dickens〉 〈his hair was black and close-cut; his skin indurated; and the bridge of his nose smashed level with his face—Shaw〉

Bruise, though more commonly used in reference to an injury of the flesh, also carries a sense related to that of crush, smash, or mash in which it implies the pressing or beating of something so as to break it down with the effect of setting the juices running or of softening the fibers 〈nor bruise her flowerets with the armed hooves of hostile paces—Shak.〉 〈some scartting pot-herbs . . . bruised with vervain—Dryden〉

Squash differs from the preceding words chiefly in its applicability to objects that are very soft (as through overripeness or immaturity) or that require little effort to crush by pressure 〈every pear that fell from the tree was squashed〉 〈he squashed under his foot every beetle he could find〉

Macerate is used chiefly in reference to a process of steeping something in a liquid so as to soften or detach its fibers or to wear away its soft parts; the softening or detachment of fibers is chiefly emphasized, and macerate often refers to a step in an industrial process or to a part of a digestive process 〈macerate rags as the first step in papermaking〉 〈corn is macerated in the gizzard of a fowl〉

The term may, however, imply a wearing away of the soft part from whatever cause; it particularly suggests a wearing away of the body (as through fasting or worry) 〈the fierce unrest, the deathless flame, that slowly macerates my frame—Martin〉

Ana *press, squeeze, crowd, jam: batter, mangle, *maim: *beat, pound

2 Crush, quell, extinguish, suppress, quench, quash are comparable when they mean to bring to an end by destroying or defeating. Crush in this sense carries from its basic meaning the implication of being destroyed or injured severely by pressure from without, but it differs in being more often applied to immaterial than to material things and in implying a force at work that makes for the destruction of effective opposition or operation especially by preventing resistance or by depriving of the freedom necessary for expansion or thriving 〈truth, crushed to earth, shall rise again—Bryant〉 〈the free play of passion and thought, the graces and arts of life . . . were crushed out of existence under this stern and rigid rule—Dickinson〉 〈the mere volume of work was enough to crush the most diligent of rulers—Buchan〉

Quell means to overwhelm completely and reduce wholly to submission, to inactivity, or to passivity; the term may be used in respect to people or animals or to (usually immaterial) things; thus, one may quell a riot or the rioters; quell a mutiny or the mutineers 〈the nation obeyed the call, ralled round the sovereign, and enabled him to quell the disaffected minority—Macaulay〉 had some difficulty in quelling the tumult that arose when the bell was answered—Shaw〈 Extinguish (see also ABOLISH) implies an end as sudden or as complete as the blowing out of a candle or the putting out of a fire with water 〈the sudden and soon extinguished genius of Marlowe—T. S. Eliot〉〈lives that were to be extinguished in Hitler's gas chambers—Deutscher〉

Suppress differs from crush especially in implying conscious action, in more strongly suggesting a power or force that openly quells or extinguishes, and in more often taking as its object a definite objective person or thing 〈suppress a political organization〉 〈one purpose of the purchase was to suppress competition〉 〈little by little the two roads were to come into competition between the two roads—Justice Holmes〉 deeply as the Cistercians disliked and distrusted Abelard, they did not violently suppress him—Henry Adams〈 Quench, which is close to extinguish cuddle

cry

crutch, rage, *fashion, style, mode, fad, craze, dernier crusty brusque, gruff, blunt, curt, *bluff press, throng, *crowd, horde, mob, rout

crush

vb:

puzzling, perplexing, mystifying (see PUZZLE

*destroy, demolish: *ruin, wreck: annihilate, ante:

outstanding, conspicuous (see NOTICEABLE): com-

Ana

C. H. Adams

S. H. Adams

Henry S. Adams

F. M. Fordyce

T. S. Eliot

R. Crothers

Shakespeare

and

T. Steegmuller

Richard Galsworthy

see also ANNULE

implied: a sudden and summary extinction (quash a rebellion) (he foresaw that the dreadful woman ... would quash his last chance of life—Dickens) (the lady, together with her family, was dispatched to the safe distance of the Far East. . . . Thus was quashed an idyll—S. H. Adams

Ana *destroy, demolish: *ruin, wreck: annihilate, *abolish: obliterate, blot out, efface (see ERASE)

crush

n press, throng, *crowd, horde, mob, rout *multitude, army, legion, host crusty

brusque, gruff, blunt, curt, *bluff *snapping, wapish, *irritable: choleric, splenetic, cranky, testy, *irascible: crabbed, surly, saturnine, dour

(see SULLEN)

cry

vb

Cry, weep, wail, keen, whimper, blubber mean to show one's grief, pain, or distress by tears and utterances, usually inarticulate utterances. Cry and weep (the first the homelier, the second the more formal term) are frequently interchanged. Cry is more apt to stress the audible utterances. Weep, on the other hand, usually implies expressing grief without restraint, in mournful and often long-drawn-out cries, moans, and lamentations ( "Where is my father, and my mother, nurse?" "Weeping and wailing over Tybalt's corpse"—Shak.) (hear him, o'erwhelmed with sorrow, yet rejoice;

no womanish or shading of tears has part—Cowper) (soon as she . . . saw the lifeblood flow . . . weeping loud she clasped him—Shelley)

Keen implies the wailing lamentations or diges of a professional mourner (keen [means] hideous, dismal wailing or howling practiced in Ireland among the humber classes in token of grief, at funerals, and on hearing news of a death or other calamity—Wylde) (kept our sorrow—Punch) (keene'd like a squaw bereft—M. H.

Moody)

Whimper implies low, whining, broken cries (as made by a baby or puppy) (whimpering in fright)

(he had seen the old general whimper like a whipped dog

—F. M. Ford)

Blubber implies scalding, disfiguring tears and noisy, broken utterances (as of a child who cannot have his way) (he always blubbers until those who oppose him give in to him) (tears came easy to him;

he could blubber like a child over a slight or a disappointment—S. H. Adams

Ana

lament, bewail, bemoan, *deplore: sob, moan,

*sigh, groan

cry

n

vogue, rage, *fashion, style, mode,fad, craze, dernier crying adj

pressing, urgent, imperative, importunate, insistent, exigent, instant

Ana

outstanding, conspicuous (see NOTICEABLE): comp-pelling, constraining (see FORCE vb)

cryptic

enigmatic, *obscure, dark, vague, ambiguous, equivocal puzzling, perplexing, mystifying (see PUZZLE vb):

Ana

occult, esoteric, *recondite: *mysterious, arcane

cuddle

fondle, dandle, pet, cosset, *caress

Ana

analogous words

Ant

an antonym

Con

contrasted words

See also explanatory notes facing page 1
cumulative, accretive, additive, summative are comparable when meaning increasing or produced by the addition of like or assimilable things. Something is cumulative which is constantly increasing or is capable of constant increase (as in size, amount, power, or severity) by successive additions, successive accretions, or successive repetitions; thus, the cumulative effect of a drug may be harmful even though the immediate effect of each dose has, apparently, been beneficial; terror is cumulative because one fear tends to inspire another (groupings of fact and argument and illustration so as to produce a cumulative and mass effect—Cardozo) Something is cumulative which is constantly increasing in amount or bulk through successive additions or which has reached its sum total or magnitude through many such additions (the art of nations is to be cumulative . . . the work of living men not superseding, but building itself upon the work of the past—Ruskin) (such persons cannot understand the force of accumulative proof—Whately) Cumulative is now used more often than accumulative especially where increasing severity or enhancement in influence or power are to be suggested. Something is additive which is of such a nature that it is capable either of assimilation to or incorporation in something else or of growth by additions. An additive detail, element, or factor is one that has such affinity for another thing that it becomes a constituent part of that thing; thus, red, green, and blue-violet are the additive colors and are used in color photography because they blend to form any color (this new hypothesis assigns to the atom properties which are in no way inconsistent with the inverse-square attraction of its electrons and protons; rather they are additive to it—James) (this pluralistic view, of a world of additive constitution, is one that pragmatism is unable to rule out from serious consideration—James) Something is summative which is capable of association or combination with other things so as to produce such a sum total as an additive whole or a cumulative effect (the summative action of a drug and its adjuvant) (if the student could not add up his achievements, if there was nothing summative in his education—Eduational Review)

Ana accumulated, amassed (see ACCUMULATE); multiplying, increasing, augmenting (see INCREASE)

Con dissipated, dispersed, scattered (see SCATTER)

cunning adj 1 ingenious, *clever, adroit 2 crafty, tricky, artful, *sly, fox, insidious, wily, guileful 3 shrewd, astute: knowing, smart (see INTELLIGENT) 4 artless, unsophisticated, naïve (see NATURAL) cunning n 1 skill, *art, craft, artifice 2 dexterity or dexterity, adroitness, deftness (see corresponding adjectives at DEXTEROUS): proficiency, adeptness, expertise (see corresponding adjectives at PROFICIENT): ingenuity or ingenuity, cleverness (see corresponding adjectives at CLEVER)

3 guile, *deceit, duplicity, dissimulation 4 craftiness, insidiousness, wiliness, guilefulness, trickiness or trickery, artfulness, slyness (see corresponding adjectives at SLY): stratagem, ruse, maneuver, feint, *trick, wile, gambit, ploy 5 ingenuousness

cupidity, greed, rapacity, avarice are comparable when meaning intense desire for wealth or possessions. Cupidity stresses the intensity and compelling nature of the desire and often suggests covetousness as well (the sight of so much wealth aroused his cupidty) (the vast cupidty of business in preempting the virgin resources of California—Parrington) Greed, more than cupidty, implies a controlling passion; it suggests not strong but inordinate desire, and it commonly connotes meanness as well as covetousness (a low, incessant, gnawing greed . . . for power, for money, for destruction—White) Rapacity implies both cupidty and actual seizing or snatching not only of what one especially desires but of anything that will satisfy one’s greed for money or property; it often suggests extortion, plunder, or oppressive exactions (the rapacity of the conquerors knew no bounds) (the woman’s greed and rapacity . . . disgusted me—Thackeray) (the rapacity of the warlords—Peffer) Avarice, although it involves the idea of cupidty and often carries a strong suggestion of rapacity, stresses that of miserliness and implies both an unwillingness to let go whatever wealth or property one has acquired and an insatiable greed for more (such a stanchless avarice that, were I king, I should cut off the nobles for their lands, desire his jewels and this other’s house: and my more-having would be as a sauce to make me hunger more—Shak) (they scripped and stinted and starved themselves . . . out of avarice and the will-to-power—Mumford) cureful, sanative, restorative, remedial, corrective are comparable when they mean returning or tending to return to a state of normality or health. Curative is applicable to whatever effects or, sometimes, seeks or tends to effect a complete recovery especially from disease of body or of mind (a curative drug) (curative regimens) (most medicines are alleviative in their action and not definitely curative). Rather, they overcome the symptoms of disease and give the patient a chance to recover—Morrison Sanative is a general term applicable to whatever is conducive either to the restoration of or the maintenance of health, whether of body and mind or of spirit or morals; the term often comes close to salutary in meaning (the sanative virtue of action . . . to dispel doubt and despair—Masson) Restorative is occasionally applicable to what restores to health but more often to what revives someone unconscious or renews or refreshes someone or something overstrained or exhausted (the restorative effect of rain on parched fields) (take a restorative drink before dinner) (that voyage proved entirely beneficial and restorative—Ellis) Remedial is much the broadest term of this group and like the related noun (see REMEDY n) and verb (see CURE vb) is applicable not only to whatever alleviates or cures disease or injury of body or mind but to whatever tends to relieve or correct a faulty or evil condition (as of the community, the law, or the body politic). While . . . the teacher's greatest contribution lies in the prevention of maladjustment, he must also assume a major responsibility in remedial work with the student who has become poorly adjusted—C. C. Dunsmoor & L. M. Miller) (whatever action the court takes towards a convicted offender . . . is in fact a punishment; and it does not cease to be so because it may also be used as a form of remedial treatment, adapted to the personality of the offender and directed to his social rehabilitation—Ford) (with power and humility she overcame the world, and cast down the devil with prayer and remedial tears—H. O. Taylor) (the communities affected entered upon a patient course of remedial action and successfully labored to prevent a recurrence of these disorders—Handlin) Corrective (compare CORRECTIVE n) in many of its uses comes close to remedial, but, unlike the latter, it cannot ordinarily replace curative; specifically it applies to what is designed to restore something to a norm or standard or bring it up (or down) to a desirable level from which it has deviated. In this relation the term is peculiarly applicable to material objects that supplement or compensate for a defective function or part, but it may be used interchangeably with remedial in most contexts, though the emphasis may be more on making good a defect or deficiency than (as in remedial) on relieving the distress it causes; thus, one would speak of corrective (rather than remedial) shoes for the relief of weak ankles, but one could say that among remedial (or corrective) measures for weak ankles are shoes with special lifts in the soles (constantly called upon their corrective lenses to decipher documents—Ace) such corrective declines need not, necessarily, represent the end of this greatest of all bull markets—Van Loan, there is today special need for the balancing and corrective sanity of not taking ourselves and our time over-seriously—Alain Locke)

Ana healing, curing, remedying (see cure vb)

curb vb check, bridle, *restrain, inhibit

Ant spur —Con *indulge, pamper, humor

curdle n coagulate, congeal, set, clot, jelly, jel cure vb Cure, heal, remedy mean to rectify an unhealthy or undesirable condition especially by some specific treatment (as medication). Cure and heal may apply interchangeably to both wounds and diseases (pierced to the soul with slander's venomed spear, the which no balm can cure—Shak.) (physician, heal thyself—Lk 4:23) Often, however, they tend to be differentiated in such applications, cure more frequently implying restoration to health after disease, heal implying restoration to soundness of an affected part after a wound or lesion (the treatment failed to cure his headache) (the salve will heal slight burns) (his fever ... might cure him of his tendency to epilepsy—Byron) (1. I must not break my back to heal his finger—Shak.) In extended use a similar distinction often holds, with cure applicable when a condition (as a state of mind or a habit of behavior) is under discussion and heal when a specific incident or event is involved; thus, one would seek to cure (not heal) mistrust but to heal (rather than cure) a breach between friends (if you can compass it, do cure the younger girls of running after the boys—Eliot) (we have no cure for my name and character—Austen) (we are denied the one thing that might heal us ... that might bring balm to the bruised heart, and peace to the soul in pain—Wilde) Remedy (see also remedy n) applies to the using of whatever will correct or relieve an abnormal condition (as of body or mind) whether affecting physical or mental health or causing mere local or occasional discomfort (who ... may likeliest remedy the stricken mind—Southey) (see also curative). 1) remedy is often used in reference to evil conditions corrected, relieved, or counteracted by any means (remedy an abuse) (remedy the breakdown of international prestige—Ascoli) curious 1 Curious, inquisitive, prying, nosy, nosey are comparable when meaning interested in finding out or in a search for facts that are not one's personal concern. Curious need not imply objectionable qualities such as intrusiveness or impertinence, but it suggests an eager desire to learn, especially to learn how or why things have happened or are happening (children are naturally curious about almost everything) (curious onlookers were held back about almost everything) (she never wished to seem curious about her neighbor's affairs) Ana analogous words Ant antonyms Con contrasted words See also explanatory notes facing page 1 tained the anathemas—R. M. French] In more general use the term applies to a strong or violent denunciation by one in authority or in a position to judge of something as grossly wrong, as productive of evil, or as accursed (the Pope... has condemned the slave trade—but no more the cutting or shaping of large, difficult, or resistant objects or material <hew> them to pieces, hack their bones asunder—Shak.> 〈a wall of hewn stones〉 <and now also the axe is laid unto the root of the trees: every tree . . . which bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire—Lk 3:9〉 〈there’s a divinity that shapes our ends, roughhew them how we will—Shak〉 Chop implies a cleaving or dividing by a quick, heavy blow (as of an ax, a cleaver, or a hatchet) or, more often, a dividing into pieces by repeated blows of this character 〈chop off branches of a tree〉 〈chop the trunk of a tree into firewood〉 〈chop meat into small pieces〉 Carve has come to be restricted to two types of cutting. The first requires the use of special tools (as chisels and gouges) and has for its end the artistic shaping, fashioning, or adornment of a material (as stone, ivory, or wood) 〈a sculptor carves a statue out of marble〉 〈the back and legs of the chair were elaborately carved〉 〈an exquisite ivory box carved with figures〉 The second requires a sharp knife and has for its end the cutting up and especially the slicing of meat at table in pieces suitable for serving 〈carve a roast of beef〉 〈the head of the family carves the turkey〉 Slih implies the making of a lengthwise cut; except that it suggests the use of a sharp clean-cutting instrument (as scissors, a scalpel, a sword, or a knife) it carries no clear connotations as to the extent of the cut in depth or in length 〈the surgeon slit the abdominal wall in front of the appendix〉 〈the long skirt was slit to the knee〉 〈slit a sealed envelope〉 Slash also implies a lengthwise cut but usually suggests a sweeping stroke (as with a sharp sword, knife, or machete) that inflicts a deep and long cut or wound: very frequently it connotes repeated cuts and often furious or rough-and-tumble fighting 〈slashing desperately at his circling enemies〉 〈tires slashed by vandals〉

Ana split, cleave, rive (see TEAR); sever, sunder (see CUT); separate vb; curtail (see SHORTEN)

cutthroat *assassin, gunman, bravoe cutting *incisive, trenchant, clear-cut, biting, crisp Ana *sharp, keen, acute: piercing, penetrating, probing (see ENTER) cyclone *whirlwind, typhoon, hurricane, tornado, waterspout, twister cyclopean *huge, vast, immense, enormous, elephantine, mammoth, giant, gigantic, gigantean, colossal, gargantuan, Herculean, titanice, Brobdingnagian cynical, misanthropic, pessimistic, misogynic are comparable when meaning deeply and often contemptuously distrustful. Cynical implies a sneering disbelief in sincerity and integrity (the case with which she asserted or denied whatever suited her purpose was only equalled by the cynical indifference with which she met the exposure of her lies—J. R. Green) <but people are nowadays so cynical—they sneer at everything that makes life worth living—L. P. Smith> Misanthropic implies a rooted dislike and distrust of one’s fellowmen and aversion to their society (Swift was of an unhappy, misanthropic state of mind) 〈he . . . viewed them not with misanthropic hate—Byron〉 〈his loathing . . . hardened into a misanthropic mania—Powy’s> Pessimistic suggests a distrustful and gloomy view of things in general 〈the pessimistic philosophy of Schopenhauer〉 〈of kindly heart, though of violent speech . . . and of pessimistic temperament—Ellis> Misogynie implies a deep-seated aversion to, and a profound distrust of, women 〈his misogynie soul—Meredith〉 〈a misogynie old bachelor〉 Ana sneering, girding, flouting, scoffing (see SCOFF); captious, caustic, carping, censorious, *critical: disbelieving, unbelieving (see corresponding nouns at UNBELIEF)

Con *hopeful, optimistic, roseate

---

dabbler tyro, *amateur, dilettante

Con adopt, *expert, wizard, artiste daily, diurnal, quotidian, circadian mean of each or every day. Daily is used with reference to the ordinary concerns and customary happenings of life 〈daily wants〉 〈daily visits〉 (the daily newspaper) Sometimes however it implies an opposition to nightly 〈the daily anodyne, and nightly draught—Pope> Diurnal is commonly either astronomical (with special reference to the movements of the heavenly bodies) or poetic in its use 〈the diurnal revolution of the earth〉 〈rolled round in earth’s diurnal course—Wordsworth〉 Diurnal also implies opposition to nocturnal 〈the diurnal and nocturnal offices of the monks〉 〈hunting dogs are mainly diurnal animals—Stevenson-Hamilton〉 Quotidian adds to daily the implication of recurrence each day 〈a quotidian fever〉 It often suggests also a commonplace, routine, or everyday character or quality 〈that quality of strangeness which puts a new light on all quotidian occupations—Bennett〉 〈he has found in quotidian interests and affections and appetites so complete an escape from the labors and the struggles of the creative spirit—Brooks〉 〈as quotidian as catching the 8:52 from Surbiton to go to business on a Monday morning—Huxley〉 Circadian is a chiefly technical term of recent coinage that differs from daily or quotidian in implying only approximate equation with the twenty-four hour day 〈circadian rhythms in insect behavior〉

Con *nightly, nocturnal: periodic, alternate, recurrent, *intermittent: occasional, *infrequent, sporadic dainty I delicate, exquisite, *choice, elegant, recherché, rare Ana petite, diminutive, little, *small: pretty, bonny, fair, lovely, *beautiful: *delightful, delectable, delicious Ant gross — Con *coarse, vulgar: *common, ordinary 2 fastidious, fussy, finicky, finicking, fnical, *nice, particular, fussy, squeamish, persnickety, pernickety Ana *careful, meticulous, punctilious, scrupulous: discriminating, discerning (see corresponding nouns at DISCERNMENT) daily flirt, coquet, toy, *trifle Ana *play, sport, frolic, gambol: *caress, fondle, pet dam vb bar, block, obstruct, *hinder, impede Ana clog, *hamper, tramnel, shakele, fetter, hog-tie: *suppress, repress Con *advance, forward: *express, vent, utter, air

damage n harm, injury, hurt, mischief Ana impairment, marring (see corresponding verbs at INJURE); ruining, dilapidation, wrecking (see corresponding verbs at RUIN); detriment, deleteriousness (see corresponding adjectives at PERNICIOUS)

---

Ana analogous words  Ant antonyms  Con contrasted words  See also explanatory notes facing page 1

---

D
danger

Danger, peril, jeopardy, hazard, risk mean either attended by or involving the possibility of loss, evil, injury, harm; however, they are frequently not freely interchangeable in usage. Dangerous applies to persons, things, or situations that should be avoided or treated with excessing care because contact with them or use of them is unsafe and exposes one or causes one to expose others at least to danger. Hazardous means attended by or involving the possibility of loss, evil, injury, harm; it is often the preferred term when the chances of loss or death, or both, are comparatively great; thus, a hazardous occupation (especially from the point of view of insurability) is one in which the worker must run significantly greater than average risks of accident or loss of life; a hazardous enterprise is one which has as many (if not more) chances of failing as of succeeding; no one should be deluded into believing that we can ever have completely assured lives. Living is a hazardous business at the best—Furnas—(the hazardous game of secret service in enemy country—Alexander Forbes) Precaution is often used inaccurately where dangerous or even hazardous would be the better word. The basic meaning of this word is uncertain or insecure: therefore, it may be used without implication of threatened danger or of possible hazards; in strict use precautionary is uncertain health rather than a physical condition threatening death; a precautionary occupation is one that may be neither dangerous nor hazardous but uncertain (as in its tenure or remunerativeness) (whoever supposes that Lady Austen's fortune is precarious is mistaken. . . . It is . . . perfectly safe—Cowper) (a National Church in the early Caroline sense depended upon the precarious harmony of the king, a strong archbishop, and a strong first minister—T. S. Eliot) The term often carries also an implication of attendance by danger or hazards especially as a factor in or source of insecurity or uncertainty; thus, a precautionary hold or footing is one that is so insecure that it involves danger (the precarious track through the morass—Scott) (keeping a precarious and vital balance, like a man walking on high on a tightrope—Montague) Perilous carries a stronger implication of the immediacy of a threatened evil than dangerous (after all their intolerable toils, the sounding tumult of battle, and perilous sea-paths, resting there . . . amid the epitaphs and allegorical figures of their tombs—L. P. Smith) (we all know how perilous it is to suggest to the modern woman that she has any "sphere"—Babbit) Risk comes close to perilous in suggesting high possibility of harm or loss, but it is usually applied to an action or activity which a person undertakes voluntarily and often with knowledge of the perils or risks to which it exposes him (undertake a risky job) (make a risky investment) (so risky was travel that the Indiana legislature specifically permitted travelers to carry concealed weapons—Sandburg) Ana unsafe, insecure (see affirmative adjectives at SAFE): chance, chance, haphazard, *random, hit-or-miss dark, dim, dusky, obscure, murky, gloomy

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.
adj Daredevil
rash, reckless, daredevil, foolhardy, venturesome *face, brave, challenge, defy, beard
vb
dare
Dank damp, humid, moist, *wet Anadark
soaked, saturated, sopped or soppy, drenched Anadappled
*variegated, parti-colored, motley, checkered, checked, pied, piebald, skewbald, freaked
dare
vbFACE, brave, challenge, defy, beard Anaventure, risk, chance, hazard daredevil adj daring, rash, reckless, foolhardy, venturesome *adventurous Anaadventure
bold, intrepid, audacious (see BRAVE)
Con	*timid, timorous: *cautious, wary, circumspect, chary: prudent, sensible, sane, *wise, judicious dark adj Darkeither
mean partly or wholly destitute of light.
Dark, the ordinary word and the most general of these terms, implies a lack of the illumination necessary to enable one to see or to identify what is before him. It may imply lack of natural illumination (as by the sun or moon) (a dark forest) (a dark night) or of artificial illumination (as by gas or electricity) (a dark room) or a lack of immaterial light (as cheerfulness) (a dark mood) (a dark countenance) or of moral or spiritual light (a dark deed) or of brilliance—that is, the quality of lightness in color (a dark blue)
Dim suggests just so much darkness that the things before one cannot be seen clearly or in their distinct or characteristic outlines: it may be applied equally to things viewed or to a source of illumination (the light has grown dim) (dim stars) (he could just make out dim figures in the distance) It may designate a usually bright thing that is dulled or softened (a . . . dim and tender red—Hudson) (a dim image of their glorious vitality—Krutch) or a place or time that is nearly dark (scrambled over to join the other ghosts out on the dim common—Galsworthy) (the hazy light . . . reminded him of the dim distances of his own . . . country—Anderson) Dim as applied to eyes, sight, or insight suggests a loss of functional keenness (eyes dim with tears) (dim eyesight)
Dusky suggests the halfway state between light and dark characteristic of twilight: like (see also SULLEN) implies imperfect illumination owing to causes that interfere seriously with the radiation of light (as dense clouds or the heavy shade of many closely set trees): in addition, it often connotes pervading cheerlessness (the day was especially gloomy for June) (the gloomiest part of the forest) (the room was gloomy and depressing with only a dim light from a small candle) (their gloomy pathway tended upward, so that, through a crevice, a little daylight glimmered down upon them—Hawthorne)
Ant light—Con *bright, brilliant, radiant, luminous: illuminated, illuminated, enlightened, lighted (see ILLUMINATE) 2 *obscure, vague, enigmatic, cryptic, ambiguous, equivocal Anacity obstinate, occult, *recondite, esoteric: *mystical, mystic, anagogic, cabalistic: intricate, complicated, knotty, *complex Ant lucid—Con *clear, perspicuous: simple, *easy, light, facile darken obscure, dim, bedim, eclipse, cloud, becloud, fog, befog, obfuscate Ant illuminate—Con enlighten, illumine (see ILLUMINATE): elucidate, *explain dart vbFLY, scud, skim, float, shoot, sail Ant *speed, precipitate, hasten, hurry dash vbRUSH, tear, shoot, charge Ant dart, *fly, scud dash n
1 *vigor, vim, spirit, esprit, verve, élan, drive Ant force, energy, might, *power: vehemence, intensity (see corresponding adjectives at INTENSE): impressive—Con (see corresponding adjective at MOVING) 2 *touch, suggestion, suspicion, suspicion, tinge, shade, smack, spice, vein, strain, streak dashing smart, *stylish, fashionable, modish, chic date n *engagement, rendezvous, tryst, appointment, assignation daunt apprall, *dismay, horrify
Ant cow, *intimidate, browbeat: discomfit, disconcert, faze (see EMBARRASS): foil, thwart, baffle (see FRUSTRATE): *frighten, alarm, scare, terrify Con rally, rouse, arouse, *stir, waken, awaken: impel, drive, move, actuate: activate, *vitalize, energize daulless *brave, courageous, unafraid, fearless, intrepid, valiant, valorous, undaunted, bold, audacious Ant indomitable, unconquerable, *invincible: heroic, gallant (see corresponding nouns at HEROISM) dazzle
vb
power, impressive—Con (see corresponding adjectives at INTENSE) date
*clear, perspicuous: simple, *easy, light, facile daydream n *daydream, *fancy, fantasy, phantasy, phantasm, vision, nightmare Ant imagining or imagination, conceiving or conception, fancying (see corresponding verbs at FANCY): illusion, *delusion, hallucination daze vb Daze, stun, bemuse, stupify, benumb, paralyze, petrify all mean to dull or deaden the powers of the mind through some disturbing experience or influence. Daze may imply any of numerous causes (as a blow on the head, an excess of light, or a physical or mental shock) which prostrates one’s powers and leaves one confused or bewildered or dazzled (Till I felt I could end myself too with the dagger—so deafened and dazed— . . . with the grief that gnawed at my heart—Tennyson) (the cattle gather and blare, roused by the feet of running men, dazed by the lantern glare—Kipling) Stun usually suggests a sudden deprivation of one’s powers of thought or a loss of consciousness as a result of a heavy blow or a violent fall, but it is also used in an extended and often hyperbolic sense to describe the devastating effect of noise, surprise, or astonishment "stunned" his assailant with the butt of his rifle) "stunned" by the news of his son's drowning) where wild Oswego spreads her swamps around, and Niagara stuns with thundering sound—Goldsmith  "ye little children, stun your grandame's ears with pleasure of your noise!—Wordsworth or has the shock . . . confused . . . and stunned me from my power to think—Tennyson Bemuse implies an adding or muddling of the mind whether through intoxication or through employment, preoccupation, or engrossment that dulls or abstracts the mind "A Prussian was regarded in England as a dull beer-bemused creature—M'Carthy" his senses so bemused in the intensity of calculation —Scott "people with brains and intelligence . . . play cards until they are bemused and stupid—McCler's Mag" Stupefy heights the implication of stupor or stupidity by weakening not only the implication of shock or surprise but that of overwork or fatigue; it therefore usually implies something (as an injury, an illness, a grief or anxiety long-continued, or intoxication) that dulls both the senses and the mind "sun elated them; quiet rain sobered them, weeks of watery tempest stupefied them—Hardly" Benumb is used chiefly of the effect of cold in deadening or immobilizing the muscles, but it is used also of anything that becomes so inert that it seems as if frozen "it is so cold, so dark, my senses are so benumbed—Dickens" Mrs. Ralston drew back a step or two. Charlotte's cold resolution was thoroughly deadened and she could find no immediate reply—Wharton Paralyze is often used figuratively to imply an inability to act or to function, on the part of a thing as well as of a person, that comes as the result of a dire event, a burden too heavy to be borne, or an astounding disclosure "in these wild places . . . a snowstorm . . . does not . . . paralyze traffic as London permits itself to be paralyzed under similar circumstances—Jefferies" a certain helplessness in the presence of what is unfamiliar that fairly paralyzes even Gallic curiosity—Brownell" Petrify (see also Harden) emphasizes the immediate effect of fear, amazement, shock, or awe and suggests complete inability to move, to think, or to act, as though one were turned to stone "the spectators were petrified with horror" or she was too petrified to answer the question More than any other word in this group, petrify is often used hyperbolically "I was too petrified to pay any attention to him" Ana confound, bewild, mystify (see Puzzle): *confuse, muddle, befuddle: dazzle, dizzy (see corresponding adjectives at GIDDY) Dazzled *giddy, dizzy, vertiginous, swimming Ana confused, added, befuddled, muddled (see confuse): confounded, bewildered, puzzled, perplexed (see Puzzle) Dead adj Dead, defunct, deceased, departed, late, lifeless, inanimate all mean devoid of life. Dead applies strictly to anyone or to anything that has been deprived of life and has therefore ceased to grow or to function "a dead person" "a dead animal" "a dead tree" "every plant in the garden is dead as a result of the intensely severe winter" Dead is also applicable to things which have not had life (in its literal sense) but have existed for a time and have been used or accepted or have proved effective or influential; thus, a dead language is no longer in spoken use by anyone; a dead belief no longer has any acceptance; a dead journal no longer is printed and circulated; a dead issue or question no longer arouses interest or debate. Figure 1 the term implies lack or loss of sensation, consciousness, feeling, activity, energy, or any of the qualities associated with life "a dead engine" "a dead cigar" "the dead season in a business" Defunct differs little in its literal sense from dead, except that it is somewhat bookish "Charlotte had entered society in her mother's turned garments, and shed with satin sandals handed down from a defunct aunt—Wharton" The term is more often applied to a thing that by failure or dissolution has ceased to function or to operate (a defunct newspaper) "a defunct corporation" Deceased applies only to a person and especially to one who has died comparatively recently or who, though dead, is at the moment under consideration especially in some legal context "laws prohibiting the marriage of a man with his deceased wife's sister" "the legal heirs of the deceased millionaire were never found" Departed is distinctly euphemistic (especially in religious use) "pray for the souls of departed relatives and friends" Late is used in place of deceased or departed especially when stressing a relationship to a surviving person or an existent institution "under the terms of his late father's will" "the late chairman of the board of directors" "the late master of the house" Lifeless, unlike the preceding words, does not necessarily imply deprivation of life, for it is applicable not only to something literally dead but also to something which never had life or is incapable of life. In comparison with dead, however, lifeless stresses the absence (sometimes, when loss of consciousness is implied, the apparent absence) of the phenomena characteristic of being alive, that is, of a life man, but a lifeless body (that is, a body that shows no signs of life) "there in the twilight cold and grey, lifeless, but beautiful, he lay—Longfellow" In its extended use lifeless is especially applicable to things (far less often to persons) that have not or never have had vitality, power, or spirit "a lifeless color" "a lifeless poem" "she has been lifeless since her recovery from a prolonged illness" (dull lifeless mechanical systems that treat people as if they were things—Wilde) "monochrome is a starved and lifeless term to express the marvellous range and subtlety of tones of which . . . Chinese ink is capable—Binyon" Inanimate is more consistently used than lifeless in describing something which never had life; it is the preferred term when a contrast between that which is devoid of life and that which possesses life is expressed or implied "objects which consist of inanimate matter—Jeans" "a transition . . . from the inorganic to the organic, from the inanimate to the living—Inge" "harnessing inanimate power to carry us and our burdens—Furnas" But inanimate is also applicable in extended use to that which is spiritless, inactive, or not lively, and therefore dull "an inanimate style" "her inanimate movement when on the stage—Yeats" Ant alive—Con *living Deadlock n *draw, tie, stalemate, standoff Ana situation, condition, *state, posture: *predicament, plight, dilemma, quandary Deadly adj 1 Deadly, mortal, fatal, lethal mean causing or causative of death. Deadly may imply an extremely high degree of probability rather than a certainty of death; the term therefore applies to something with the capacity of or a marked potentiality for causing death; a deadly disease is one usually ending fatally; a deadly weapon is one capable of inflicting death; the seven deadly sins in theology are those sins which must be avoided because they are the source of other sins and are destructive of spiritual life and progress "two brave vessels matched in deadly fight, and fighting to two spans—Wordsworth" (poisons more deadly than a mad dog's tooth—Shak) "the neglect of form—was even deadlier to poetry—Viereck" Mortal implies that death has deal
See also explanatory notes facing page 1

occurred or is certain to occur; the term therefore is applicable only to that which actually has caused or is about to cause death; a mortal disease is one that ends fatally; a mortal wound is one that caused or will inevitably cause death; a mortal sin (in contrast with a deadly sin) is a grievous sin deliberately committed and actually inflicting spiritual death. Deadly applies to the instrument that deals the wound or blow that proves mortal (a deadly lance) (a mortal stab) (Gigi took off his mask and hid it under a rock; it would be no help to him now, but on the contrary a mortal danger —Upton Sinclair) Fatal stresses inevitability and applies to a potential or actual result of death, destruction, or disaster. The term is often used in place of mortal as applied to wounds, blows, or illnesses especially when some time has intervened between the wounding or sickness and the dying. Fatal rather than mortal is used in predictions (to remove him to the hospital would be fatal) (at her age ... it [diabetes] was not speedily or fatally) Applied to wounds, blows, or illnesses especially when some time has intervened between the wounding or sickness and the dying.

dearth

lack, want, absence, defect, privation

Ana scarcity, infrequency, rarereness, uncommonness (see corresponding adjectives at INFREQUENT); scantiness, meagerness, scantness (see corresponding adjectives at MEAGER)

Ant excess

death, decease, demise, passing denote the end or the ending of life. Death is the general word and is used for the termination of plants and animals as well as of men and also of inanimate things marked by continuity or development (the death of an enterprise) Decease and demise apply only to human beings except in figurative use. Decease is preferred in legal context but in ordinary use conveys a slightly euphemistic or rhetorical quality. Demise in literal use has become somewhat pompous or affected (the lady's demise had been ascribed to apoplexy—Hynnd) In figurative use it frequently lacks such connotation (organized labor, which promised his political demise if he signed the bill against jurisdictional strikes—Beverly Smith) Passing is a euphemism for the death of a person.

Ant life

deathless immortal, undying, unfading

Ana *everlasting, endless: eternal (see INFINITE): enduring, abiding, persisting (see CONTINUE)

Con ephemeral, transient, transitory, evanescent, passing

deally deadly

Ana *ghastly, macabre, gruesome, grisly

Ant lifelike

debar exclude, blackball, disbar, suspend, shut out, eliminate, rule out

Ana preclude, obviate, *prevent: forbid, prohibit, ban, interdict

Con invite, court, woo, solicit, bid: permit, allow, *let debase 1 *Debase, vitiate, deprave, corrupt, debauch, pervert mean to cause a person or thing to become impaired and lowered in quality or character and share certain distinctions in implications and connotations with the adjectives (usually participial adjectives) corresponding to the verbs, debased, vitiated, depraved, corrupted (but more often, corrupt), debauched, perverted.

Debase (see also ABASE) and debased imply a loss of worth, value, or dignity and are widely applicable (plays that debase the taste of the people) (a debased coinage) (the life-and-death struggle with Hannibal ... had permanently debased the Roman temper and left in it a core of hard inhumanity—Buchan) (success permits him to see life as he has converted distort and debase ... his teaching—Huxley) (the fine old language which has been slowly perfected for centuries, and which is now being ... debased by the rubbishy newspapers which form almost the sole reading of the majority—Inge) (human values cruelly and systematically debased by the Nazis—Dean) Vitiate and vitiated imply impairment through the introduction of a fault, a defect, or anything that destroys the purity, validity, or effectiveness of a thing (a style vitiated by exaggeration) (inappropriate and badly chosen words vitiate thought—Huxley) (the fox ... vitiates his line of scent with the gas fumes on the macadam highway—Heinold) (the vitiated air of a crowded hall) Party jealousies vitiated the whole military organization—Times Lit. Sup.) (a final decree ... vitiated by the judge's assumption that he was bound by the master's findings of fact—Justice Holmes) Deprave and depraved usually imply pronounced moral deterioration; thus, a person who has a debased taste cannot enjoy what is really good or beautiful if it lacks showy surface qualities which catch his attention, but a person with a depraved taste finds satisfaction only in what is wholly or partly obscene or prurient (the belief that a witch was a person who leagued herself with the Devil to defy God and deprave man—The Spectator) (the servants, wicked and depraved, corrupt and deprave the children—Henry James) Corrupt (both verb and adjective: for the latter see also Vicious) and corruptly imply a loss of soundness, purity, integrity through forces or influences that break down, pollute, or destroy: the terms are applicable to things which are subject to decay, disintegration, or irreparable contamination of any sort (lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth, where moth and rust doth corrupt—Mt 6:19) (we must not so stain our judgment, or corrupt our hope—Shak.) (the idea of beauty has been corrupted by those who would make it purely impressionistic or expressive—Babbit) (our schools teach the morality of feudalism corrupted by commercialism—Shaw) Often also, the terms imply seduction, bribery, or influence as leading to a moral breakdown or to an immoral act (they were not able to corrupt the new legislators) (corrupted courts) (at sixteen the girl was utterly corrupted by a "perverse and wicked" young man—Edmund Wilson) Debauch and debauched imply a moralizing and depraving through such corrupting influences as a life of pleasure, ease, or sensual indulgence: they suggest the weakening, more often than the loss, of such qualities as loyalty to one's allegiance or duties, fitness for responsibility or high endeavor, and moral purity or integrity, and they often also connote dissoluteness or profligacy (to betray their master and debauch his army—Mill) (she takes them to an enchanted isle, where she debauches them with enravishing delights and renders them oblivious to their duty—R. A. Hall) (the gay, debauched, quite inconsequent lad was managed like a puppet—Bellow) Pervert and perverted imply a twisting or distorting of something (sometimes someone) from what it is in fact or in its true nature, so as to debase it completely or make it incapable of proper or correct application; to pervert the meaning of a text is to twist that meaning in interpreting it so that it will serve one's own ends or seem to prove one's thesis; to pervert the facts in a case is to give a distorted and, usually, personally advantageous view of them; to pervert the ends of nature is to use one's appetites or natural desires for other ends than those which are normal and in accordance with nature (subjugation of the eternal to the temporal in a perverted set of values—Times Lit. Sup.) (these things which . . . people are so prone to start a row about, and nurse into hatred from an idle sense of wrong, from perverted ambition—Conrad) (the truth to him . . . is not only not to be spoken at all times, but it is now and then to be perverted—Brownell)

Defile, pollute, taint, contaminates: adulterate, sophisticate, load, weight, doctor: impair, spoil, mar: damage, harm, injure

Ant
elevate (taste, character): amend (morals, way of life)—Con enhance, heighten (see intensify): raise:

lift: improve, better, ameliorate degrade, demean, *base, humble, humiliate

Ant

weak, undermine, sap, enfeebles, debilitate, cripple, disable

Con

*vitalize, energize, activate: vivify, enliven, *quicken:
renew, restore, refresh, rejuvenate

Debased, vitiated, depraved, corrupted, debauched, perverted (see under DEBASE I)

Ant
degradated, degenerated or degenerate, decadent (see corresponding nouns at DETERIORATION)

Con

improved, bettered, ameliorated (see IMPROVE): raised, elevated, lifted (see lift vb)

debased

taste finds satisfaction only in what is wholly or partly obscene or prurient (the belief that a witch was a person who leagued herself with the Devil to defy God and deprave man—The Spectator) (the servants, wicked and depraved, corrupt and deprave the children—Henry James) Corrupt (both verb and adjective: for the latter see also VICEIOUS) and corruptly imply a loss of soundness, purity, integrity through forces or influences that break down, pollute, or destroy: the terms are applicable to things which are subject to decay, disintegration, or irreparable contamination of any sort (lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth, where moth and rust doth corrupt—Mt 6:19) (we must not so stain our judgment, or corrupt our hope—Shak.) (the idea of beauty has been corrupted by those who would make it purely impressionistic or expressive—Babbit) (our schools teach the morality of feudalism corrupted by commercialism—Shaw) Often also, the terms imply seduction, bribery, or influence as leading to a moral breakdown or to an immoral act (they were not able to corrupt the new legislators) (corrupted courts) (at sixteen the girl was utterly corrupted by a "perverse and wicked" young man—Edmund Wilson) Debauch and debauched imply a moralizing and depraving through such corrupting influences as a life of pleasure, ease, or sensual indulgence: they suggest the weakening, more often than the loss, of such qualities as loyalty to one's allegiance or duties, fitness for responsibility or high endeavor, and moral purity or integrity, and they often also connote dissoluteness or profligacy (to betray their master and debauch his army—Mill) (she takes them to an enchanted isle, where she debauches them with enravishing delights and renders them oblivious to their duty—R. A. Hall) (the gay, debauched, quite inconsequent lad was managed like a puppet—Bellow) Pervert and perverted imply a twisting or distorting of something (sometimes someone) from what it is in fact or in its true nature, so as to debase it completely or make it incapable of proper or correct application; to pervert the meaning of a text is to twist that meaning in interpreting it so that it will serve one's own ends or seem to prove one's thesis; to pervert the facts in a case is to give a distorted and, usually, personally advantageous view of them; to pervert the ends of nature is to use one's appetites or natural desires for other ends than those which are normal and in accordance with nature (subjugation of the eternal to the temporal in a perverted set of values—Times Lit. Sup.) (these things which . . . people are so prone to start a row about, and nurse into hatred from an idle sense of wrong, from perverted ambition—Conrad) (the truth to him . . . is not only not to be spoken at all times, but it is now and then to be perverted—Brownell) Defile, pollute, taint, contaminates: adulterate, sophisticate, load, weight, doctor: impair, spoil, mar: damage, harm, injure

Ant
elevate (taste, character): amend (morals, way of life)—Con enhance, heighten (see intensify): raise:

lift: improve, better, ameliorate

degrade, demean, *base, humble, humiliate

Ant

weak, undermine, sap, enfeebles, debilitate, cripple, disable

Con

*vitalize, energize, activate: vivify, enliven, *quicken:
renew, restore, refresh, rejuvenate

Debased, vitiated, depraved, corrupted, debauched, perverted (see under DEBASE I)

Ant
degraded, degenerated or degenerate, decadent (see corresponding nouns at DETERIORATION)

Con

improved, bettered, ameliorated (see IMPROVE): raised, elevated, lifted (see lift vb)

debate

n disputation, forensic, argumentation, dialectic

Ant controversy, *argument, dispute: contention, disension (see DISCORD)

debate

vb dispute, argue, *discuss, agitate

Ant

contend, fight, battle, war: wrangle, altercation, quarrel (see under QUARREL n): controvert, refute, confute, rebut, *disprove: *prove, demonstrate debauch corrupt, deprave, pervert, *debase, vitiate

Ant

injure, harm, damage, spoil, mar: seduce, inveigle, decoy, tempt, *lure: pollut, defile, taint (see CONTAMINATE)

debauched

corrupted, depraved, perverted, debased, vitiated (see under DEBASE)

Ant

dissolute, reprobate, *abandoned, profligate: licentious, libertine, lascivious, libidinous, lecherous, lewd, wanton debilitate

enfeebles, *weaken, undermine, sap, cripple, disable

Ant

improve, better, ameliorate debris

*refuse, waste, rubbish, trash, garbage, offal debt, indebtedness, obligation, liability, debit, arrear mean something, and especially a sum of money, that is owed another. Debt usually implies that the amount is owed in return for goods, property, or services and can be definitely computed or, if something other than money is owed, that it equals in value if not in kind the thing sold or the service given (incurred a heavy debt for repairs to his house) (pay one's social debts) (this debt is now due) (the firm has no debts at present) Indebtedness is applied either to the total amount owed one's creditors or a single creditor (the indebtedness of the city exceeds the legal limit) (his indebtedness to his father fell just short of a thousand dollars) Obligation, which is chiefly a legal term in this sense, implies a formal agreement to pay a certain amount or to do something or an acknowledgment of such an agreement (as by a contract or a bond) (a contract is said to be "performed" . . . when all the obligations have been fulfilled on both sides—Rubinstein) Liability is an accountant's term used chiefly in reference to general balance sheets of a company or corporation and is the opposite of asset. It is also used of the affairs of individuals especially in bankruptcy actions. It applies to any amount which constitutes an item of indebtedness. Liabilities include accounts payable, accrued interest, taxes, such obligations as notes, bonds, and debentures, and even capital stock. Debitt is also a term in accounting for any item shown on the left side of an account; it usually designates a purchase and its price and is opposed to credit, or any entry on the right side (that is, for an article returned or an amount paid on account). Arrear especially in its plural arrears usually implies that some of a debt, but not all, has been paid, but it always implies that the amount owed is overdue (pay off the arrears of one's rent) (the servants found it difficult to obtain the arrears of their wages)

decadence

decay, declension, deterioration, degeneration, devolution

Ant

retrogressiveness or retrogression, regressiveness or regression or regress, retrograding or retrogradation (see corresponding adjectives at backward)

Ant rise: flourishing —Con advance, progress (see under ADVANCE vb): *progress, progression decamp

escape, flee, fly, abscond

Ant depart, quit, leave, *go: elude, evade, *escape, shun, avoid

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.
Decay vb Decay, decompose, rot, putrefy, spoil, disintegrate, crumble mean to undergo or, in some cases, to cause something to undergo destructive dissolution. Decay implies change, commonly a natural and gradual change, from a state of soundness or perfection; it may or may not suggest the certainty of complete destruction (teeth decaying from lack of care) (infamy, that decays the wise—Shak.) (as winter fruits grow mild ere they decay—PoPE) (nor shall I discuss the causes why science decayed and died under the Roman Empire—InGe) Decompose stresses the idea of breaking down by separation into constituent parts or elements (as by chemical action in the laboratory or, in respect to animal and vegetable matter in nature, by the action of living microorganisms) (whenever molecules combine or decompose or atoms change partners, it is chemistry—Furnas) (the action of bacteria in decomposing the organic products contained and forming gases useful for power and heat—Morrison) (the odor of decomposing meats) (after slaying his colleague, he chemically decomposed the body—Guildy) Rot implies decay and decomposition, usually of or as if of animal or vegetable matter; the term may or may not imply offensiveness or foulness; figuratively it differs from decay in stressing stagnation or corruption rather than decline (blossoms which fall before they wither rather than clinging rotting to the stalk—Binyon) (there shall they rot, ambition's honored fools!—Byron) (it was this garrison life. Half civilian, half military, with all the drawbacks of both. It rotted the soul, robbed a man of ambition, faith—IrwIn Shaw) Putrefy not only suggests the rotting of or as if of animal matter but also stresses its extreme offensiveness to sight and smell (corpses putrefying on the sun-drenched battlefields) (flesh in that long sleep is not putrefied—Donne) Spoil (see also INJURE) is often used in place of decay, rot, or putrefy when foodstuffs, especially in the home or the market, are referred to (roasted pork spoils quickly if not kept in a refrigerator) Disintegrate implies either a breaking down or a breaking apart so that the wholeness or integrity of the thing or the cohesiveness of its particles is destroyed or is in process of destruction (the London atmosphere tends to disintegrate bricks) (Rutherford and Soddy found that radioactive substances disintegrate in a way they described as "spontaneous"—the rate of decay cannot be expedited or retarded by any known physical process—Jeans) (the other great civilizations with which it was once contemporary have passed away or been disintegrated and transformed—Ellis) Crumble implies disintegration of or as if of a substance that breaks into fine particles; neither it nor disintegrate need imply, as the remaining terms almost inevitably do, an alteration at the chemical level (crumbled a piece of bread in his fingers) (winter rains had washed and washed against its . . . old bricks until the plaster between them had crumbled—Deland) (great periods of human culture which flourished at their height just as the substructure crumbled—Krutch) Ana *weaken, undermine, sap, debilitate, enfeeble; taint, *contaminate, defile, pollute; dilapidate, *ruin, wreck; deliquescence (see LIQUEFY) decease *death, demise, passing deceased departed, late, *dead, defunct, lifeless, inanimate deceit 1 Deceit, duplicity, dissimulation, cunning, guile mean the quality, the habit, the art, or the practice of imposing upon the credulity of others by dishonesty, fraud, or trickery. Deceit usually implies the intent to mislead or delude; otherwise, it is the most comprehensive of these terms, for it may imply deliberate mis-representation or falsification, the assumption of a false appearance, the use of fraud or trickery or craft (the fox banks not when he would steal the lamb. No, no, my sovereign! Gloucester is a man unsounded yet and full of deep deceit—Shak.) (not there my husband never used deceit—Browning) (there is an element of sham and deceit in every imitation—Dewey) Duplicity commonly implies double-dealing or bad faith; usually it suggests a pretense of feeling one way and an acting under the influence of another and opposite feeling (I should disdain myself as much as I do him, were I capable of such duplicity as to flatter a man whom I scorn and despise—Burney) The word may sometimes imply no more than the appearance of deceit arising out of a complexity of motives or a lack of singlemindedness (it was chiefly that the simplicity and openness of their lives brought out for him the duplicity that lay at the bottom of ours—Mary Austin) Dissimulation implies deceit by concealing what one truly is or what one actually feels and therefore often suggests duplicity (Archer looked at her perplexedly, wondering if it were lightness or dissimulation that enabled her to touch so easily on the past at the very moment when she was risking her reputation in order to break with it—Wharton) (the levity of Hamlet, his repetition of phrase, his puns, are not part of a deliberate plan of dissimulation, but a form of emotional relief—T. S. Eliot) Cunning implies deceit by the use of trickery, wiles, or stratagems; it often connotes a perverted intelligence and almost vicious shrewdness in attaining one's end (surely the continual habit of dissimulation is but a weak and sluggish cunning, and not greatly politic—BacOn) (he had come to the belief that I was incapable of the cunning and duplicity they practiced . . . to deceive with lies and false seeming was their faculty and not mine—Hudson) Guile carries an even stronger implication of lack of obviousness in the arts practiced or tricks used than does cunning; in strict use it carries a strong implication of insidiousness or treacherousness (we now return to claim our just inheritance of old. . . . by what best way, whether of open war or covert guile, we now debate—Milton) (but Father Vaillant had been plunged into the midst of a great industrial expansion, where guile and trickery and honorable ambition all struggled together—Cather) The word has, however, so long been used in such phrases as "without guile" and "devoid of guile" that it often is used in a very much weaker sense than cunning, sometimes implying little more than artfulness or the use of wiles (her heart innocent of the most pardonable guile—Conrad) (there is a note of unconscious guile, the guile of the peasant, of the sophisticated small boy, in the letter he wrote—Brooks) Ana *deception, fraud, trickery, double-dealing, chicane, chicanery, craft, artifice (see ART); cheating, cozening, defrauding, overreaching (see CHEAT vb) Con honestly, uprightness, scrupulosity (see corresponding adjectives at UPRIGHT); openness, candor, frankness (see corresponding adjectives at FRANK); straightforwardness, forthrightness (see corresponding adjectives at STRAIGHTFORWARD) 2 imposture, cheat, fraud, sham, fake, deception, counterfeiture, humbug Ana ruse, wile, *trick, feint, stratagem, maneuver, artifice, gambit, ploy deceitful *dishonest, mendacious, lying, untruthful Ana crafty, tricky, wily, guileful, foxy, insidious, cunning, sly, artful; underhand, underhanded, stealthy, furtive, clandestine (see SECRET); *crooked, devious, oblique; delusory, deceptive, delusive; *misleading Ant trustworthy —Con *reliable, dependable, trusty deceive, mislead, delude, beguile, betray, double-cross mean to lead astray or into evil or to frustrate by underhand-ness or craft. A person or thing deceives one by leading one to take something false as true, something nonexistent as real, something counterfeit as genuine, something injurious as helpful: the term may imply no more than a chance or inadvertent confusing or it may suggest a deliberate ensnaring or entrapping for the agent's own and often evil ends <deceived by a chance resemblance into the belief that he had seen his dead sister's spirit> (<"No woman's safe with him."—Ah, but he hasn't deceived me, Mrs. Berry. He has not pretended he was good”—Meredith> (a person who first subconsciously deceives himself and then imagines that he is being virtuous and truthful—Russell) A person or thing misleads one by causing one to follow a wrong path, way, or course or to fall into error <misled by a confusing traffic signal> (we never find them misled into the conception that such gifts are an end in themselves—Dickinson> (nor is there any safeguard against the nations being misled and deceived by their governments into sanctioning another great war—Inge) (Thrasyllus never told lies but he loved misleading people—Graves> A person or thing deludes one by deceiving or misleading one so completely as to make one a fool, a dupe, or so befuddled as to be incapable of distinguishing the false from the true (I began to wonder whether I, like the spider that chased the shadow, had been deluded, and had seemed to hear a sound that was not a sound—Hudson> (did he, did all the people who said they didn't mind, things, know that they really did? Or were they indeed deluded?—Rose Macaulay> A person or, less often, a thing, beguiles one by using such subtle and usually agreeable or startling devices as to mislead, deceive, or delude one (the male propensity to be beguiled—Mary Austin) (I recalled some of the Indian beliefs, especially that of the . . . man-devouring monster which is said to beguile his victims into the dark forest by mimicking the human voice—Hudson> (marsh-lights to beguile mankind from tangible goods and immediate frictions—Mumford> A person or thing betrays one by using deception or treachery to deliver one into the hands of an enemy or put one in a dangerous or false position (verily I say unto you, that one of you shall betray me—Mt 26:21) (knowing that nature never did betray the heart that loved her—Wordsworth) (so, times past all number deceived by false shows, deceiving we cumber the road of our foes, for this is our virtue: to track and betray—Kipling> A person double-crosses another and usually a friend, partner, or accomplice by deceiving or betraying him, especially by double-crossing or duplicity (said he had been double-crossed by his partner> (De Valera charged that his own trusted negotiators had double-crossed him by signing an agreement to take the detested oath of loyalty to the British king—Blashard> Ana *cheat, cozen, defraud, overreach: outward, circumvent (see frustrate): *dupe, gull, befool, trick, hoax, hoodwink, bamboozle> Ant undeceive: enlighten

decency *decorum, propriety, dignity, etiquette Ana seemliness, decorousness (see corresponding adjectives at decorous): fitness, suitability, fitnessness, appropriateness (see corresponding adjectives at fit) decent 1 *decently, seemly, proper, nice Ana fitting, *fit, appropriate, suitable, meet: conventional, formal, ceremonial (see ceremonial) Con *awkward, gauche, inept, maladroit, clumsy: crude, rough, *rude, uncouth 2 modest, pure, *chaste Ana virtuous, *moral, ethical, noble: pleasing, grateful, welcome, agreeable, *pleasant decception 1 Deception, fraud, double-dealing, trickery, chicane, chicanery mean the act or practice of, or the means used by, one who deliberately deceives in order to accomplish his ends. Deception may or may not imply blame-worthiness, for it may be used not only of cheating, swindling, and tricking but also of many arts or games in which the object is illusion or mystification (he is incapable of deception) (there is, as the conjurers say, no deception about this tale—Kipling> (magicians are adepts in deception) Deception also may be used for the state of being deceived (fall into deception) (he is surely greedy of delusion, and will hardly avoid deception—Browne) Fraud, on the other hand, except in casual use, always implies guilt, often criminality, in act or practice. Distinctively, it usually suggests the perversion of the truth for the sake of persuading someone to surrender some valuable possession or a legal right (the elder brother gained control of the property by fraud> (he will never stoop to fraud, no matter how much he desires to get rich)
The term may suggest an act or practice involving concealment of truth, violation of trust and confidence, or nonperformance of contracted acts by which one (as an agent, an attorney, an executor, an employer, or an employee) gains an advantage over another to the injury of the latter (according to one legal decision "silence where necessity requires speech may sometimes constitute fraud") (I think that obtaining money by fraud may be made a crime as well as murder or theft; that a false representation, expressed or implied at the time of making a contract of labor, that one intends to perform it and thereby obtaining an advance, may be declared a case of fraudulent obtaining money—Justice Holmes)> Double-dealing usually implies duplicity in character and in actions, for it frequently suggests an act that in its essence is contrary to one's professed attitude (one does not always believe them . . . they often say one thing and mean another, so that we may fairly accuse them of double-dealing—Jernigan> The term may imply secret treating with each of two opposed persons or groups as though one were friendly to that person or group and inimical to the other (Saville . . . by his double-dealing with the King and the Scots, proved himself a political traitor—D'Israelis)
Trickery implies acts or practices that are intended to dupe or befool others; it often implies sharp practice or actual dishonesty (we rely not upon management or trickery, but upon our own hearts and hands—Jowett) (they held that the basest trickery or deceit was not dishonorable if directed against a foe—Amer. Guide Series: R. I.) Chicane and chicanery imply petty or paltry trickery and often subterfuge especially in legal proceedings (to wrest from them by force, or shuffle from them by chicane—Burke) (many scenes of London intrigues and complex chicanery—De Quincey) (making a tremendous fight, chiefly by chicane—whooping for peace while preparing for war, playing mob fear against mob fear—Mencken)
Ana *deceit, duplicity, dissimulation, cunning, guile: cheating, cozening, defrauding, overreaching (see cheat): duping, gulling, hoaxing, hoodwinking, bamboozling, befooling (see dupe)
2 *imposture, cheat, fraud, sham, fake, humbug, counterfeet, deceit Ana illusion, *delusion, hallucination, mirage deceptive *misleading, delusory, delusive Ana specious, *plausible, colorable: *false, wrong Con genuine, *authentic, veritable, bona fide: true, *real,
A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.
decide, determine, settle, rule, resolve mean to come or to cause to come to a conclusion. Decide presupposes previous consideration of a matter causing doubt, wavering, debate, or controversy and implies the arriving at a more or less logical conclusion that brings doubt or debate to an end; the word may take as its subject the person or persons arriving at such a conclusion or the thing or things that bring them to the conclusion (the time for deliberation has then passed. He has decided—John Marshall) (this exordium, and Miss Pross's two hands in quite agazoned entreaty clapping his, decided Mr. Cruncher—Dickens) (the mistress of the household referred to her whether we should have another round or go in to supper. Of course, she always decided as she supposed the hostess wished—Jefferies) (it should disturb the complacency of those network officials who decided . . . that not enough people were watching to justify the expense—Seldes) Determine (see also DISCOVER 2) may mean to set limits or bounds to; when it means basically to decide, this implication of definitely fixing something so that its identity, its character, its scope, its direction is clear and beyond doubt distinguishes it from decide; one decides to give a dinner party but determines the guests to be invited; a legislature decides that the state constitution should be revised and appoints a committee with power to determine what changes shall be made. In a slightly different sense determine implies the arrival at a conclusion that either is a fixed and unalterable purpose or intention (can you weep [i.e., move by weeping] fate from its determined purpose?—Middleton) (she was . . . obviously tormented by shyness, but as obviously determined to conquer it—Mackenzie) or is the inevitable result, outcome, or end of what precedes (what we notice determines what we do; what we do again determines what we experience—James) (their civilization was one of “city-states,” not of kingdoms and empires; and their whole political outlook was necessarily determined by this condition—Dickinson) Settle implies the arrival at a conclusion, often a mental or logical conclusion but sometimes a termination for which no individual is responsible, that brings to an end all doubt, all wavering, all dispute (the Supreme Court of the United States has power to settle all questions of law) (time has settled few or none of the essential points of dispute—Henry Adams) (death settled all their problems) Rule (see also GOVERN) implies a decision or determination by authority, especially by the authority of the court (the judge ruled that the question was inadmissible) Resolve implies an expressed or clear decision or determination to do or refrain from doing something (resolve to get up earlier in the mornings) (resolve to give up smoking) (be was resolved to win through to fortune, but he must first discover his tools—Buchan)

Con decide, decide are often confused, especially when they mean positive and leaving no room for doubt, uncertainty, or further discussion. In this sense the words are applied chiefly to persons, their natures, their utterances or manner of utterance, their opinions, or their choices. Decided implies a contrast with what is undetermined, indefinite, and neither this nor that; thus, a decided blue raises no question of its greenness or blackness; a decided success so far overpasses the line between success and failure that no one can question its favorable termination; a decided answer leaves no doubt of a person's meaning, wishes, or intentions. When applied to a person's character, expression, or movements decided suggests such qualities or outward signs of qualities as determination, resolution, and lack of all hesitation or vacillation (the mother was a decided person to whom everyone in the family submitted) (he has very decided opinions) (I see too many ways of saying things; a more decided mind hits on the right way at once—Warde) (then with a decided step she turned toward home—Wharton) Decisive, on the other hand, implies an opposition to what is unsettled, uncertain, or wavering between this and that (for this sense as applied to things see CONCLUSIVE). When used in reference to persons it implies ability or intent to settle or success in settling a controverted matter once and for all (this was enough to determine Sir Thomas, and a decisive "Then so it shall be closed that stage of the business—Austen) (she stood up and surveyed herself in the pier glass. The decisive expression of her great florid face satisfied her—Joyce)

Ana *definite, definitive: determined, resolved (see DECIDE): positive, cocksure, certain, *sure: categorical, *explicit, express Con dubious, *doubtful, questionable, problematic advertising his willingness to make concessions—Time

In its specific sense, as implying publicity for the sake of gaining patronage or support for an article of merchandise, it implies the use of communication media (as the press, the radio, handbills, or billboards); so used, it is devoid of unfavorable connotation <advertise a new model of automobile> To proclaim is to announce orally, sometimes by means of other sound (as of a trumpet), and loudly in a public place; by extension, to give wide publicity to, often insistently, proudly, boldly, or defiantly <lie is as much a lie, when it is whispered, as when it is proclaimed at the market cross—Wollaston> <you proclaim in the face of Hellas that you are a Sophist—Jowett> To promulgate is to make known to all concerned something that has binding force (as a law of the realm or a dogma of the church) or something for which adherents are sought (as a theory or doctrine) <the Doctrine of the Immaculate Conception was promulgated in December 1854—Robertson> <that for the training of the young one subject is just as good as another . . . is surely . . . an amazing doctrine to promulgate—Grandgent> To broadcast is to make known (as by radio or television) in all directions over a large area <the doctrine of missionary zeal . . . has been broadcast over Christendom—Isaac Taylor> <the largest . . . wireless station that can broadcast to the world—Daily Mail> <the book he has written to broadcast this conviction—Gordon Harrison>

Ana, inform, apprise, acquaint, advise, notify: impart, *communicate: *reveal, disclose, discover, divulge 2 *assert, profess, affirm, aver, avouch, avow, protest, predicate, warrant Ana *express, voice, utter, vent, broach, air, ventilate *inform, apprise, acquaint, advise, notify: impart, *express, voice, utter, vent, broach, air, ventilate

*decay, rot, putrefy, spoil, disintegrate, decline, deterioration, degeneration
*express, voice, utter, vent, broach, air, ventilate

*inform, apprise, acquaint, advise, notify: impart, *express, voice, utter, vent, broach, air, ventilate

Ana *express, voice, utter, vent, broach, air, ventilate

*decay, rot, putrefy, spoil, disintegrate, decline, deterioration, degeneration

*express, voice, utter, vent, broach, air, ventilate

*inform, apprise, acquaint, advise, notify: impart, *express, voice, utter, vent, broach, air, ventilate

Ana *express, voice, utter, vent, broach, air, ventilate

*decay, rot, putrefy, spoil, disintegrate

Ana *inform, apprise, acquaint, advise, notify: impart, *express, voice, utter, vent, broach, air, ventilate

*inform, apprise, acquaint, advise, notify: impart, *express, voice, utter, vent, broach, air, ventilate

Ana *express, voice, utter, vent, broach, air, ventilate

*mortify, melt

decorate ornament, embellish, beautify, adorn, deck, bedeck, garnish

Ana enhance, heighten, *intensify decorous, decent, seemly, proper, nice apply to persons, their utterances, and their behavior, and mean conforming to an accepted standard of what is right or fitting or is regarded as good form. Something is decorous when it is marked by observance of the proprieties; the term usually implies a dignified, sometimes ceremonious, sometimes prim, formality <the decorous plaititudes of the last century—J. R. Lowell> <done something strange and extravagant and broken the monotony of a decorous age—Emerson> <on Sunday mornings the whole school went to church; in the afternoon it had a decorous walk—H. G. Wells> Something is decent (for other sense, see CHASTE) when it keeps within the bounds of what is appropriate or fitting to its kind or class, not only from the points of view of morality or social propriety but also from those of good taste or the exigencies of a situation <to praise a man's self, cannot be decent, except it be in rare cases—Bacon> <he cast only one glance at the dead face on the pillow, which Dolly had smoothed with decorous care—George Eliot> <his decent reticence is branded as hypocrisy—Maugham> Something is seemly when it is not only decorous or decent, but also pleasing to the eye, ear, or mind of the observer <to make a seemly answer—Shak>  <it was not seemly that one so old should go out of his way to see beauty, especially in a woman—Galsworthy> <the safety of human society lies in the assumption that every individual composing it, in a given situation, will act in a manner hitherto approved as seemly—Mencken> Something is proper when it is exactly what it should be according to accepted ethical or social standards or conventions <Henchard's creed was that proper young girls wrote ladies'-hand—nay, he believed that bristling characters were as innate and inseparable a part of refined womanhood as sex itself—Hardy>  Something is nice (see also NICE 1; CORRECT)

declass

his willingness to make concessions—Time

216
decorous

(common sense, rejecting with scorn all that can be called mysticism—Inge) Repudiate implies a casting off (as of a wife whom one refuses any longer to recognize or accept); it usually connotes either a disowning or a rejection with scorn as untrue, unauthorized, or unworthy of acceptance <repudiate a son> <the state has repudiated its debts> <repudiate a religious doctrine or a scientific theory> <I do not see how the United States could accept the contract and repudiate the consequence—Justice Holmes> <it is the law of nature that the strong shall rule; a law which everyone recognizes in fact, though everyone repudiates it in theory—Dickinson> Spurn carries an even stronger implication of disdain or contempt in rejection than repudiate <the proposals which she had proudly spurned only four months ago—Austen> <he would be spurned out of doors with a kick—Snaith> <must spurn all ease, all hindering love, all which could hold or bind—Lowell>

Ana *demur, balk, shy, boggle, jib, stick, stickle, scruple

Con accept — Con take, *receive: consent, *assent, acquiesce, accede decline n declension, decadence, *deterioration, degeneration, devolution

Ana & Con see those at DECLENSION decorate

blanch, bleach, etiolate, *whiten decompose *decay, rot, putrefy, spoil, disintegrate, crumble

Ana deliquesce, *liquefy, melt
decorate ornament, embellish, beautify, adorn, deck, bedeck, garnish

Ana enhance, heighten, *intensify
decorous, decent, seemly, proper, nice apply to persons, their utterances, and their behavior, and mean conforming to an accepted standard of what is right or fitting or is regarded as good form. Something is decorous when it is marked by observance of the proprieties; the term usually implies a dignified, sometimes ceremonious, sometimes prim, formality <the decorous plaititudes of the last century—J. R. Lowell> <done something strange and extravagant and broken the monotony of a decorous age—Emerson> <on Sunday mornings the whole school went to church; in the afternoon it had a decorous walk—H. G. Wells> Something is decent (for other sense, see CHASTE) when it keeps within the bounds of what is appropriate or fitting to its kind or class, not only from the points of view of morality or social propriety but also from those of good taste or the exigencies of a situation <to praise a man's self, cannot be decent, except it be in rare cases—Bacon> <he cast only one glance at the dead face on the pillow, which Dolly had smoothed with decent care—George Eliot> <his decent reticence is branded as hypocrisy—Maugham> Something is seemly when it is not only decorous or decent, but also pleasing to the eye, ear, or mind of the observer <to make a seemly answer—Shak>  <it was not seemly that one so old should go out of his way to see beauty, especially in a woman—Galsworthy> <the safety of human society lies in the assumption that every individual composing it, in a given situation, will act in a manner hitherto approved as seemly—Mencken> Something is proper when it is exactly what it should be according to accepted ethical or social standards or conventions <Henchard's creed was that proper young girls wrote ladies'-hand—nay, he believed that bristling characters were as innate and inseparable a part of refined womanhood as sex itself—Hardy>  Something is nice (see also NICE 1; CORRECT)
when it satisfies a somewhat fastidious taste in behavior, manners, or speech (his conduct is not always so nice) (it is not enough for the knight of romance that you agree that his lady is a very nice girl—Justice Holmes) (the undergraduate literary club, whose membership included all nice boys with literary pretensions—Marquand)

Ana formal, conventional, ceremonial, ceremonial: dignified, elegant (see corresponding nouns at ELEGANCE)

Ant indecorum: blatant decorticate *skin, peel, pare, flay decorum, decency, propriety, dignity, etiquette are comparable either when they mean a code of rules respecting what is right, fitting, or honorable in behavior or, more often, when they mean the quality or character of rightness, fitness, or honorableness in behavior resulting from the observance of such a code. The first three words are somewhat literary; the last two are the most common in speech. Both decorum and decency imply that the code is based upon the nature of things or the circumstances which attend them, and therefore the rules which it embodies have their basis in nature or sound reason. Decorum especially suggests a code of rigid rules or laws governing the behavior of civilized men under given or understood conditions (if gentlemen of that profession [the army] were at least obliged to some external decorum in their conduct—Swift) (that continual breach of... decorum which, in exposing his wife to the contempt of her own children, was so highly reprehensible—Austen) (he enjoyed a distinguished reputation for the excellence of his sermons, for the conduct of his diocese... and for the decorum and devotion of his private life—T. S. Eliot)

The term may suggest also order, moderation, and a high degree of intelligibility as a basis of literary or artistic beauty (that decorum and orderliness without which all writing speeches must be ineffective and obscure—Ellis). Decency often stresses a freedom from immodesty or obscurity (decency in dress) (decency in conduct). It may imply a seemliness or appropriateness that is based upon the right relation of one thing to another (as of a person to his profession, rank, or condition in life or of a thing to use or end) (for himself, Father Joseph was scarcely acquiescent to the point of decency. He owned nothing in the world but his mule—Cather) (there are those... for whom St. Paul's [in London], in comparison with St. Peter's [in Rome], is not lacking in decency—T. S. Eliot) (there were May [his wife], and habit, and honor, and all the old decencies that he and his people had always believed in—Wharton) Propriety stresses conformity to a standard of what is proper or correct. When used in reference to language, it implies a regard for propriety stresses conformity to a standard of what is proper or correct by either the generality or a particular class of society (my whole life has been at variance with propriety, not to say decency—Byron) (in the reign of James I the conduct of ladies and gentlemen was not marked by the same prim propriety as in the reign of the highly respectable Victoria—Ellis) (with characteristic independence she had made her reception rooms upstairs and established herself (in flagrant violation of all the New York proprieties) on the ground floor of her house—Wharton) Propriety is sometimes preferred to decency when merely seemly or fitting correctness (and not conformity to convention) is implied (the propriety and necessity of preventing interference with the course of justice—Justice Holmes) Dignity (see also ELEGANCE) seldom applies directly to a code or a rule but it does often denote a state of being that arises from obedience to what one, one's class, or one's profession regards as elevated, noble, or in full accordance with his rank, status, or position, and thereby it implies governance by a code or by forces which often correspond to the decencies or proprieties (lost his dignity (not in accord with the dignity of man as a son of God) (I had half a mind to save my dignity by telling him that—Conrad) (it is of the essence of real dignity to be self-sustained, and no man's dignity can be asserted without being impaired—Henry Taylor) Etiquette is the usual term for the code of manners and behavior governing one's conduct in society or in particular circumstances (as in a court or legislature). It may replace propriety, for the conventional observance of these rules (trained in the complex etiquette and protocol of the Diplomatic Corps) (unaware of the etiquette governing the setting of a table for a formal dinner) (the pompous etiquette of the court—Prescott) (Augustus had kept to the strict constitutional etiquette, indicating his preference but leaving the choice of his successor to the Senate—Buchan) (the formality, ceremony, solemnity, propriety, ceremomiousness, solemnity (see corresponding adjectives at CEREMONIAL):)

form, convention, convenance, usage

Ant indecorum: license deceit vb *lure, bait, snare, trap deceit n *lure, entice, inveigle, tempt, seduce deceit *form, convention, convenance, usage

Ana analogous words Ant antonyms Con contrasted words See also explanatory notes facing page 1
deep times of craft "a deep politician" "deep plots" "a little knowledge often estranges men from religion, a deeper knowledge brings them back to it"—Inge "a deep study of the inner meaning of the work—Braithwaite" profound connotes exceedingly great depth "a gulf profound as that Serbonian bog . . . where armies whole fallen—Sat. Review"

Abysmal carries the idea of abyss, infinite depth, and implies fathomless distance downward, backward, or inward from a surface "mountain roads . . . within a few inches of abysmal precipices—W. R. Arnold" It may imply measureless degree and is then used with words denoting a lack of something "abysmal ignorance" "abysmal darkness" "plays of an abysmal foolishness—Brooks"

Con shallow, *superficial: flat, plane, plain, *level deep-rooted, deep-seated, chronic, confirmed, *invertedeface, disfigure mean to mar the appearance of a thing. Deface usually suggests a marring of the face or external appearance of something; it frequently implies the effacement, obliteration, or removal of some part or detail "there has yet a little gilding left, not quite rubbed off, dishonored, and defaced—Hazzitt" A door defaced by innumerable incised inscriptions—Shaw "bad poets deface what they take [from others], and good poets make it into something better—T. S. Eliot" Disfigure, as applied to a surface, implies deeper or more permanent injury than deface; as applied to figure or configuration, it frequently suggests such impairing of beauty or attractiveness as results from other than structural injury "a book disfigured by many serious faults" "the smallpox . . . fell foul of poor little Oliver's face . . . and left him scarred and disfigured for his life—Thackeray" "where trees, disfigured by no gaudy lanterns, offered the refreshment of their darkness and serenity—Galsworthy"

(instead of the midst of the investigations which disfigure our time—Sat. Review)

Ana *injure, damage, mar: *deform, distort, contort; mutilate, batter, mangle (see MAIM) deface vilify, calumniate, *malign, traduce, asperse, slander, libel

Ana vituperate, revile (see SCOLD): *decy, disparage, detract, derogate

Con *praise, laud, eulogize, extoll, acclaim default n *failure, neglect, miscarriage, dereliction

Ana absence, *lack, want, privation: *imperfection, deficiency, shortcoming, fault defeat vb beat, *conquer, vanquish, lick, subdue, subjugate, reduce, overcome, surmount, overthrow, rout

Ana *frustrate, thwart, foil, baffle, balk, circumvent, outwit

Con *yield, submit, capitulate, succumb, cave, bow, defer defect 1 *lack, want, dearth, absence, privation

Ana deficiency, definitiveness (see corresponding adjectives at DEFICIENT): *need, necessity, exigency

2 flaw, *blemish

Ana *fault, failing, frailty, foible

Con *excellence, perfection, virtue, merit defection, desertion, apostasy mean an abandonment that involves the breaking of a moral or legal bond or tie and that is highly culpable from the point of view of the person, cause, or party abandoned. Defection emphasizes both the fact of one's falling away and the loss that is sustained by his failure to adhere to his allegiance; in itself as apart from the context it commonly gives no certain indication of motive, though at times disaffection or loss of confidence is connoted (the conversions are probably balanced by the defections and in some countries the Church seems even to be losing ground—Times Lit. Sup.) (the news of the defection of Lepidus caused the Senate to declare him a public enemy—Buchan) a single defection would throw the Senate into a deadlock of 48 to 48—Neuberger

Desertion (see also under ABAN-

Don) presupposes an oath of allegiance or a duty or an obligation to guard, protect, or support, the violation of which constitutes a crime or a distinctly blameworthy act. It also suggests a base motive (as cowardly fear or a desire to shirk) "the penalty for desertion from an army in time of war is usually death" (many persons considered Wordsworth's defection from the liberal cause a desertion) "the crisis of our times is not such as to justify desertion of basic traditions—Chapman" Apostasy implies a repudiation of something one has formerly and voluntarily confessed; it connotes therefore a retreat (as in weakness) from a position or stand one has taken.

The term is used chiefly with reference to a repudiation of religious beliefs, but it is employed also when moral, philosophical, or other principles are involved "when Raphael . . . had forewarned Adam, by dire example, to beware apostasy—Milton" (marriage is to me apostasy . . . sale of my birthright, shameful surrender—Shaw) "my political apostasy . . . was attended with no diminution of reverence for that great citizen army that defended and saved the Union—Nicholson"

Ana disaffection, alienation, estrangement (see corresponding verbs at ESTRANGE): abandonment, forsaking (see corresponding verbs at ABANDON)

Con faithfulness, loyalty, constancy (see corresponding adjectives at FAITHFUL): allegiance, *fidility, fealty defective *deficient

Ana impaired, damaged, injured, marred (see INJURE):
vitiated, corrupted, debased (see under DEBASE): deranged, disordered (see DISORDER)

Ant intact —Con *perfect, entire, whole: complete, *full, plenary: sound, *healthy defend 1 Defend, protect, shield, guard, safeguard mean to keep secure from danger or against attack. Defend implies the use of means to ward off something that actually attacks "raise a large army to defend the country from aggression" "guns used in defending the explorers against hostile incursions of the natives" (the independence of the Supreme Court of the United States should be defended at all costs—Lippmann) Protect implies the use of a covering as a bar to the admission or impact of what may injure or destroy "protect one's estate from intruders by a high wall" "protect one's eyes from the sun by dark glasses" (protect one's family by ample insurance) "protect tobacco plants by a cheesecloth screen" "the ring of old forts which so far had protected the city successfully—P. W. Thompson" Shield differs from protect especially in its suggestion of a protective intervention comparable to a medieval warrior's shield before one exposed to imminent danger or actual attack (Heavens shield Lysander, if they mean a fray!—Shak.) I could scarcely believe that she would wish to shield her husband's murderer, if he were that—Rose Macaulay

Guard implies a standing watch at or over for the sake of defense; it usually connotes vigilance the entrances to the palace are well guarded (the president is always guarded by secret service men) the accumulation of private wealth in Boston, thriftily guarded by the canny Whigs—Brooks (mates of a fortress are defended by its guns, protected by its walls, and guarded by sentries against surprise) Safeguard, much more strongly than any of the preceding words, implies use of protective measures where merely potential danger exists (safeguard children who play on the streets) (safeguard our shores from attack) (in all this he was more than worldlywise. He was safeguarding his own self-respect—Reppier)

Defer, postpone, intermit, suspend mean to cause a delay in an action, activity, or proceeding. Defer suggests little more than a putting off till a later time; ordinarily it implies an intentional delaying (defer) a discussion of the pace set by its inventions, madness must ensue—(a) moment of her hand—Dickens) (they couldn't stay the flow of her ideas by reminding her how much the alteration would cost—Mary Austin) (when his mind fails to stay the pace set by its inventions, madness must ensue—Day Lewis)

Con hasten, hurry, *speed, accelerate defer bow, *yield, submit, cave, capitulate, succumb, relent deference reverence, homage, *honor, obeisance Ana veneration, worship, adoration (see under REVERE): respect, esteem, admiration, *regard Ant disrespect —Con disdain, scorn, contempt, despite (see under DESPISE)
Deficiency *imperfection, shortcoming, fault Ana *lack, want, dearth, defect: flaw, *blemish: *failure, neglect, default, miscarriage, dereliction Ant excess

Deficient adj Deficient, defective mean showing lack of something necessary. The words are sometimes used interchangeably though they tend to diverge in their meanings. Deficient typically implies a falling short in the amount, quantity, or force considered essential to adequacy or efficiency; defective on the other hand typically implies existence of some definite fault, injury, or flaw that impairs the completeness or efficiency of something; thus, a person is deficient in courage when he has not sufficient courage to meet his difficulties; he is mentally defective when he has not sufficient intelligence to enable him to take care of himself; he is mentally defective (or a mental defective) when some fault or defect in his nervous system impairs his ability to think coherently; he suffers from defective hearing when by disease or injury the organ of hearing has become defective (defective sympathy) (a defective supply of food) (a defective crystal) (a defective mechanism)

Ana *meager, scanty, scant, sparse, exiguous: scarce, rare, *infrequent, uncommon
Ant sufficient, adequate: excessive—Con *plentiful, plenteous, ample, abundant: *excessive, inordinate, immoderate, extravagant
Defile pollute, taint, *contaminate, taint Ana *debate, vitiate, deprave, corrupt, pervert, debauch: profane, desecrate (see corresponding nouns at PROFANATION) Ant cleanse: purify —Con hallow, consecrate (see DEVOTE) Define vb *prescribe, assign Ana *limit, circumscribe: fix, *set, establish Con *mix, merge, mingle: *mistake, confuse, confound Definite 1 Definite, definitive are sometimes confused.
What is definite (see also EXPLICIT) has limits so clearly fixed or defined or so unambiguously stated that there can be no doubt concerning the scope or the meaning of something so qualified (he has very definite opinions on the matter) (definite accomplishments) (appointments are made for definite periods of time) What is definitive (for fuller treatment see CONCLUSIVE) fixes or settles something else and therefore is final or decisive (a definitive statement of a doctrine) (a definitive judicial decision by the highest court of the land) (a definitive biography)
Ana defined, prescribed, assigned (see PRESCRIBE): limited, restricted, circumscribed (see LIMIT vb): determined, settled, decided (see DECIDE)
Ant vague: lose —Con *obscure, ambiguous, equivocal

2 *explicit, express, specific, categorical Ana clear, plain, distinct (see EVIDENT): *full, complete: downright, *forthright: precise, exact (see CORRECT adj): clear-cut, *incisive
Ant indefinite: equivocal —Con *doubtful, dubious, questionable

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.
deflection 1 determinative, decisive, *conclusive

Ana setting, deciding, determining (see DECIDE): final, concluding, *last, terminal, ultimate

Ant tentative, provisional

2 *definite

Ana, Ant see those at DEFINITIVE 1

deflate compress, shrink, *contract, condense, constrict

Ana reduce, *decrease, lessen: exhaust, *deplete, drain: puncture, prick (see PERFORATE): attenuate, extenuate (see THIN)

Ant inflate —Con distend, *expand, dilate, swell deflect *turn, divert, avert, sheer

Ana deviate, depart, diverge, *swerve, veer, digress: bend, *curve, twist deflection *deviation, aberration, divergence

Ana bending, curving, twisting (see CURVE): swerving or swerve, veering or veer, departing or departure (see corresponding verbs at SWERVE) deform, distort, contort, warp mean to mar or spoil a person's or thing's appearance, character, true nature, or development by or as if by twisting. Deform is the least specific of these terms in its implications; sometimes, it carries no significance other than that expressed above; sometimes, however, it suggests a loss of some particular excellence or essence (as comeliness, perfection of line, or attractiveness) <soul-killing witches that deform the body—Shak.> <to deform thy gentle brow with frowns—Rowe> <I suspect Mr. Babbitt at times of an instinctive dread of organized religion, a dread that it should cramp and deform the free operations of his own mind—T. S. Eliot> (with the best intentions in the world, Mr. Imam is incessantly at work to deform and degrade the content of poetry—Times Lit. Sup.) Distort usually carries a clear implication of twisting or wresting away from or out of the natural, regular, or true shape, posture, or direction; the term, however, is used not only in reference to physical or material things, but also in reference to minds, judgments, facts, or statements that may be twisted by conditions, circumstances, or, when a personal agent is involved, a dominating purpose or intent <distorted as a living thing by pain—Wilde> <the upward slant of the candlelight distorted Mary Adeline's mild features, twisting them into a frightened grin—Wharton> <there is an element of truth in what you say, grossly as you may distort it to gratify your malicious humor—Shaw> <some accident of immediate overwhelming interest which appeals to the feelings and distorts the judgment—Justice Holmes> Contort implies a more involved or continuous twisting together or upon itself; it therefore differs from distort in suggesting a grotesque or a painful effect rather than a departure from the natural, the true, or the normal <that most perverse of scowls contorting her brow—Hawthorne> <the baby's face muscles contorted in a manner that only Mammy Clo could have interpreted as an expression of merriment—Roark Bradford> <one generation of fearless women could transform the world, by bringing into it a generation of fearless children, not contorted into unnatural shapes, but straight and candid, generous, affectionate, and free—Russell> Warp denotes a twisting or bending or drawing out of a flat plane by some force (as drying and shrinking) <the covers of the book are warped> <the back of the chair is warped> It often may imply the operation of a force that twists or wrenches a thing so as to give it a bias, a wrong slant, an abnormal direction, or a distorted significance <cares have warped her mind> <warped opinions> <so they [trees] slowly come to full growth, until warped, stunted, or risen to fair and gracious height, they stand open to all the winds—Galsworthy> <to cut me off from all natural and unconstrained relations with the rest of my fellow creatures would narrow and warp me if I submitted to it—Shaw> <I'm sure you are disinterested . . . but, frankly, I think your judgment has been warped, twisted, and soured—Lardner>

Ana *maim, cripple, mutilate, mangle, batter: disfigure, *deface: *injure, mar, damage, impair defraud swindle, overreach, *cheat, cozen

Ana trick, bamboozle, hoax, gull, *dupe, befoul: outwit, circumvent, foil (see FRUSTRATE)

deft *dexterous, adroit, handy

Ant awkward —Con clumsy, maladroit, inept, gauche <see AKWARD> defunct deceased, departed, late, *dead, lifeless, inanimate

Ant alive: live defy *face, brave, challenge, dare, beard

Ant recoil from degenerate adj corrupt, infamous, *vicious, villainous, iniquitous, nefarious, flagitious

Ana degraded, demeaned (see ABASE): debased, deprived, debauched, perverted (see under DEBASE): disolute, *abandoned, reprobate, profligate degeneration devolution, decadence, *deterioration, decline, declension

Ana retrogressiveness or retrogression, regressiveness or regression (see corresponding adjectives at BACKWARD): debasement, degradation (see corresponding verbs at ABASE) degradation see under degrade at ABASE degrade 1 Degrade, denote, reduce, declas, disrate mean to lower in station, rank, or grade. Degrade may be used of any such lowering <babies . . . degrade one to the state of anxious, fawning suppliants for a smile—Wallace> <turkeys not in prime condition are degraded on the market> <that the Duke of York should have concurred in the design of degrading that crown which it was probable that he would himself . . . wear—Macaulay> It usually implies a real or presumed fault in what is acted on and often adds to the basic meaning a suggestion of humiliation (see degrade under ABASE) ridiculed and degraded for his ideas, he maintained his integrity in the prison cell —D. M. Wolfe & E. M. Geyer> <the world is weary of statesmen whom democracy has degraded into politicians—Disraeli> It sometimes denotes a formal or ceremonial stripping (as of a priest or a military officer) of outward evidences of station or rank <Dreyfus is degraded before the Army, January 5, 1895—Guérard> Demote in itself and as distinct from its context does not imply fault to or humiliation of the one demoted <he returns a captain (temporary), is promoted and demoted in the same order, made first lieutenant (permanent)—Mailer> <the secretaryship was demoted to a subordinate bureau in the Department of the Interior—Neill> Reduce (see also DECREASE and CONQUER) never wholly loses its basic sense of make less or smaller; it denotes a lessening in status or dignity whether involving an actual lowering in rank or not  <people in reduced circumstances> <an old crusader . . . reduced to menial work—Costain> Declas is typically used with respect to social classes; it may imply a loss of social position especially as a result of one's own actions <even today a woman may declass herself by acts tolerated

Ana analogous words Ana, Ant antonyms Con contrasted words See also explanatory notes facing page 1 dehydrate dehalogenate

of or her brothers. Perhaps more frequently it may imply an altering of or a freeing from the restrictions of social status. The growing masses of modern society that stand outside all class-strata. These classed, groups, composed... of individuals from all strata of society. The Dial, members of the classed intelligentsia—Ridgely Cummings. Disregard implies a reduction in military and especially in naval or nautical rank and is used chiefly with reference to petty or noncommissioned officers. The witness had been chief mate... but had been disregarded for drunkenness. Mercantile Marine Mag.

Ana humble, humble, *abase, debase: disbar, rule out (see EXCLUDE)

Ant elevate

2. A degenerate, degenerate, *abase, humble

Ana *debase, deprave, debauch, pervert, corrupt, vitiate

Ant uplift —Con *exalt, magnify, aggrandize

dehydrate vb desiccate, *dry, parch, bake

defy condescend, *stoop

despondence, depression, melancholy, melancholia, gloom, *sadness, blues, dumps

Ana despondency, hopelessness, forlornness, despair, desperation (see under DESPONDENT)

Ant exhilaration: cheer

dejected depressed, dispirited, *downcast, disconsolate, weepbegone

Ana weighed down, oppressed (see DEPRESS): *despond, forlorn, hopeless: morose, glum, gloomy (see SULEN)

dehydrate vb desiccate, *dry, parch, bake

defy condescend, *stoop

despondency, depression, melancholy, melancholia, gloom, *sadness, blues, dumps

Ana despondency, hopelessness, forlornness, despair, desperation (see under DESPONDENT)

Ant exhilaration: cheer

delay vb Delay, retard, slow, slacken, detain are not always close synonyms, but they carry the same basic meaning: to cause someone or something to be behind in his or her schedule or usual rate of movement or progress. Delay implies the operation, usually the interference, of something that keeps back or impedes, especially from completion or arrival at a set or given time. (A plague upon that villain Somerset, that thus delays my promised supply.) A criminal court judge... delayed a verdict all afternoon—C. G. Jameson. Retard applies especially to motion, movement, or progress and implies something which causes it to reduce its speed. (Retard the revolution of a wheel) the snow retards our progress. (children retarded in development) Mental evolution has perhaps retarded the progress of physical changes—Inge. The rate of decay of radioactive substances cannot be expedited or retarded by any known physical process—Jews. Slow (often followed by up or down) and slacken also imply a reduction in speed or rate of progress, but slow usually implies deliberation or intention and slacken, an easiness or letting up or a relaxation of some sort. The engineer slowed down the train as he approached the city. The doctor administered digitalis to slow up his pulse. (As we turned into Compton Street together he slowed his step—Brace. He slackened his pace to a walk) (having never slackened her... search for your father—Dickens. Detain (see also ARREST 2) implies a holding back beyond an appointed time, often with resulting delay in arrival or departure or in accomplishment of what one has in mind. I had been detained by unexpected business in the neighborhood—Conrad. (Tell him that as I have a headache I won't detain him today—Hardy. You will not thank me for detaining you from the bewitching converse of that young lady—Austen.) I slipped my arm around her slender body to detain her—Hudson. Ana impede, obstruct, *hinder, block: *defer, postpone, stay, suspend, intermit.

Ant expedite: hasten —Con *speed, hasten, hurry, accelerate, quicken, precipitate

2. Delay, procrastinate, lag, loiter, dawdle mean to move or act slowly so that progress is hindered or work remains undone or unfinished. Delay (for transitive sense see DELAY 1) usually carries an implication of putting off something (as departure, initiation of an action or activity, or accomplishment of necessary work) (when he had his instructions, he did not delay an instant) (time and again we were warned of the dykes, time and again we delayed—Kipling). Procrastinate implies blameworthy or inexcusable delay usually resulting from laziness, indifference, hesitation, or the habit of putting off until tomorrow what should be done today (the less one has to do, the less time one finds to do it in. One yawns, one procrastinates, one can do it when one will, and therefore one seldom does it at all—Chesterfield) (a timid, unsystematic procrastinating ministry—Burke) (to fumble, to vacillate, to procrastinate and so let war come creeping upon us almost unawares—White.) Lag implies a failure to maintain a speed or pace, either one set by and therefore in comparison with that of another or one requisite to some end or goal (after an hour's brisk walk, two of the hikers lagged behind the rest) (it was a time of great men, but our learning and scholarship lagged far behind those of Germany—Inge. (military preparation does lag at a shameful rate—Carlyle). The production of certain parts necessary for airplanes is lagging.) Loiter implies delay while in progress, commonly while one is walking but sometimes one is trying to accomplish a piece of work; it also suggests lingering or aimless sauntering or lagging behind (very little remained to be done. Catherine had not loitered; she was almost dressed, and her packing almost finished—Austen.) (the caravan has to go on; to loiter at any distance behind is to court extinction—Montague). The children sauntered down Sloane Street, loitering at the closed shop windows, clicking their shillings in their pockets—Rose Macaulay. Dawdle carries a slighter implication of delay in progress (especially in walking) than loiter but an even stronger connotation of idleness, aimlessness, or of a wandering mind; consequently it usually implies a wasting of time or a taking of more time than is warranted (dawdle through four years of college) (the new maid dawdled over her work) (I did not hurry the rest of the way home; but neither did I dawdle—Heiser) (the sun dawdled intolerably on the threshold like a tedious guest—Jan Struther). Ana linger, tarry, wait (see STAY): *hesitate, falter.

Ant hasten, hurry

deletable *delightful, delicious, luscious

Ana gratifying, grateful, agreeable, pleasing, welcome, *pleasant: exquisite, rare, delicate, dainty, *choice: palatable, savory, sapid, toothsome

Con *offensive, repulsive, revolting, loathsome: repellent, *repugnant, distasteful, abhorrent, obnoxious deletation enjoyment, delight, *pleasure, joy, fruition

Ana amusement, diversion, entertainment (see under AMUSE): gratifying or gratification, regaling or regale (see corresponding verbs at PLEASE) delegate n Delegate, deputy, representative designate a person who stands in place of another or others. It is not always possible to distinguish these words, for they are all used in different places or at different times to designate persons whose offices and functions are much the same. Nevertheless there are broad or general differences in meaning which may be observed, although they will not always afford a clue as to why this person or that is called a delegate, a deputy, or a representative. Delegate applies to a person who is sent or is thought of as being sent with a commission to transact business for another or for others; it often specifically designates a person who is sent by an organized or unorganized body (as a branch of a larger organization or a group of employees) to a meeting where questions pertaining to the welfare of the entire organization or industry will be discussed and voted upon. Delegate usually implies powers that are not plenary but are somewhat modified (as by the delegate’s own power to influence or convince others and by the need of his bowing to the will of the majority) (a lay delegate to a Protestant Episcopal synod) (each branch of the American Legion sends two delegates to the national convention) (the workers and the employers each sent three delegates to the conference) Deputy applies to a person who is given authority to act for another or for others as a substitute or as an agent; it is particularly applicable to a person who has been chosen to perform a part or the whole of an official’s duties (the sheriff of each county appoints one or more deputies) (since he could not be present at the conference, he sent a deputy) Representative applies fundamentally to a person who takes the place of one or more persons in a situation where for some reason the latter cannot be. It may be used of a person engaged to do or to transact business for another or others (the firm’s legal representative) (the king’s representative at the peace conference) However it is more often employed in reference to one who takes the place of a larger group (as the electorate of a particular region) and therefore belongs to a body of men who as a whole are charged with making the laws for the state or nation (even in a democracy the people as a whole cannot make the laws but assign that work to their representatives in Congress or in Parliament) (the elected became true representatives of the electors—Steele) The terms are often used to imply the same or very similar functions in different places; thus, approximately the same body is called the House of Representatives in the United States and the Chamber of Deputies in the Republic of France; there is little difference except in voting powers between a representative from a state in the United States Congress and a delegate from a territory.

delete 223

delete, efface, obliterate, blot out, expunge, *erase ana  eliminate, *exclude, rule out: omit (see neglect vb) deleterious  detrimental, *pernicious, baneful, noxious ana  injuring or injurious, harming or harmful, hurting or hurtful (see corresponding verbs at injure): destroying or destructive (see corresponding verb destroy): ruining or ruinous (see corresponding verb ruin)

ant  salutary  —con  *beneficial, advantageous, profitable: wholesome, *healthful, healthy

Deliberate  adj  willful, intentional, *voluntary, willing ana  purposeful, intended (see intend): conscious, cognizant, *aware: mortal, *deadly ant  impulsive  —con  inadvertent, *careless, heedless, thoughtless

2 Deliberate, considered, advised, premeditated, designed, studied are comparable when applied to a person’s acts, words, or accomplishments with the meaning thought out in advance. Deliberate implies full awareness of the nature of what one says or does and often a careful and unhurried calculation of the intended effect or of the probable consequences (a deliberate lie) (a deliberate snub) (Poe’s consummate and deliberate technique—Lowes) (the deliberate insertion into a lyrical context of pieces of slang and “prosaic” words—Day Lewis) (the tone of most comment, whether casual or deliberate, implies that inepitude and inadequacy are the chief characteristics of government—Frankfurter) Considered, unlike deliberate, which it closely resembles in meaning, is seldom applied to questionable acts or practices; it suggests careful study from all angles rather than calculation and often, therefore, connotes soundness or maturity of judgment (there was no time for a considered reply) (the committee had before it many half-baked and a few considered proposals) (it [the press] is against Democrats, so far as I can see, not after a sober and considered review of the alternatives, but automatically, as dogs are against cats—A. E. Stevenson) (he saw no reason to parade his considered and decided loyalty—Wylie) Advised mostly is used with deprecatory or intensifying adverbial modifiers and denotes so well thought out and considered that possible criticisms and objections have been reviewed and answers to them prepared (she felt well advised to visit him before deciding to be his wife—Forster) (the public is well-advised to leave methodological decisions to members of the medical profession—Woodring) Its related adverb advisedly is often used to carry the implications of considered (which has no adverb) (he told them he used the offending word advisedly) (everything in this difficult situation has been done advisedly) (I often say that one must permit oneself, and that quite advisedly and deliberately, a certain margin of misstatement—Cardozo) Premeditated emphasizes forethought and planning but often falls short of deliberate in implying careful calculation and awareness of consequences (certain self-conscious preciosities in his premeditated style—Powys) It is applied especially to things (as crimes or insults) which are morally or socially unacceptable and for which only overwhelming impulse or overmastering passion (as of fear or rage) could reasonably be offered as extenuating circumstances; in such relation, then, premeditated implies wrongdoing unmitigated by circumstances (a premeditated murder) (plain that Thady’s presence on the scene at the moment was accidental and that the attack could not have been premeditated—Trollope) Designed and its adverb designedly are often applied to what has the appearance of being accidental, spontaneous, or natural but which is actually the result of intention (the designed failure of a project) (useless to seek to know whether he has been for years overlooked, or always designedly held prisoner—Dickens) Studied is applied chiefly to effects gained or qualities achieved as a result of painstaking effort or careful attention to detail; it connotes absence of spontaneity (a rather studied performance of a Beethoven symphony) (the studied dignity and anxious courtesy of the actor-manager—Shaw) It is also applied to offensive acts committed with cool deliberation and with attention to their probable effect (treat the opposition with studied discourtesy)

ana  planned, schemed, projected (see corresponding verbs under plan vb): calculated (see calculate): *careful, meticulous, scrupulous ant  casual  —con  haphazard, *random, hit-or-miss, desultory, happy-go-lucky, chance, chancy

3 leisurely, *slow, dilatory, laggard ana  *cautious, circumspect, wary, chary, calculating: *cool, collected, composed, imperturbable ant  precipitate, abrupt —con  impetuous, headlong, sudden, hasty (see precipitate) deliberate

vb reflect, cogitate, *think, reason, speculate

Ana *ponder, meditate, ruminate, muse delicate exquisite, dainty, rare, *choice, recherché, elegant

Ana delicable, —*delightful, delicious: *soft, gentle, mild, lenient, balmy: ethereal, *airy, aerial

Ant gross —Con *coarse, vulgar: rank, rancid, *malodorous delicious

delicate, luscious, *delightful

Ana *palatable, sapid, savoury, toothsome, appetizing: delicate, dainty, exquisite, *choice, rare

Con distasteful, obnoxious, *repugnant, repellent: *insipid, vapid, flat, wishy-washy, inane, jejunel, banal

delight

n pleasure, delectation, enjoyment, joy, fruition

Ana glee, *mirth, jollity, hilarity: rapture, transport, *ecstasy: satisfaction, contentment (see corresponding verbs at SATISFY)

Ant disappointment: discontent

delight

vb gratify, *please, rejoice, gladden, tickle, regale

Ana *satisfy, content: divert, *amuse, entertain: charm, enchant, fascinate, allure, *attract

Ant distress: bore —Con *trouble: afflict, try: grieve: *annoy, vex, irk, bother delightful, delicious, delectable, luscious mean extremely pleasing or gratifying to the senses or to aesthetic taste. Delightful, the least restricted in its application of these words, may refer to anything that affords keen, lively pleasure and sensations agreeably, whether the direct appeal is to the mind, the heart, or the senses (a delightful view) (a delightful talk) (a delightful companion) (my ears were never better fed with such delightful pleasing harmony—Shak. (the experience of overcoming fear is extraordinarily delightful—Russell) (the most charming and delightful book I have read in many a day—Canby) Delicious commonly refers to sensuous pleasures, especially those of taste and smell (delicious food) (a delicious sense of warmth) but may be applied to anything which is so delightful that one dwells upon it with sensuous gratification (her gestures delicious in their modest and sensitive grace—Bennett) (I am not staying here, but with the Blankers, in their delightful solitude at Portsmouth—Wharton) (there are people whose society I find delicious—L. P. Smith)

Delicatable in its implications is often indistinguishable from delightful and especially from delicious, though it often suggests more refined or discriminating enjoyment (the trees of God, delicable both to behold and taste—Milton) (a delicable tale) (the delicable fragrance of freesia) (its scoring is delicable, with the sublest of balances, mixed colors and shifting sonorities —Musical America) The term is more often used than either delightful or delicious with a humorous or ironical connotation (the spoken word of some delicable Sarah Gamp—Montague) Luscious adds to delicious an implication of richness (as of flavor, fragrance, coloring, or sound) (luscious music) As applied to fruits, it suggests fullness of flavor and rich ripe juiciness (luscious sunwarmed peaches) Like delicable it may be used humorously or ironically, but it then commonly adds the implication of extravagance, exaggeration, or, more specifically, voluptuousness (luscious passages of description) (those Don Juans, those melting beauties . . . those luscious adventuressex—Huxley)

Ana enchanting, charming, fascinating, alluring, attractive (see under ATTRACT): lovely, fair, *beautiful: ineffable (see UNUTTERABLE)

Ant distressing: boring: horrid —Con *miserable, wretched: distasteful, obnoxious, repellent, *repugnant delineate

1 trace, outline, *sketch, diagram, draft, plot, blueprint

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.
that he is being pursued) (he had hallucinations as a child. Mediaeval figures from the Faerie Queene had walked beside him on his way to school—Brooks) Mirage is comparable with the preceding terms only in its extended sense in which it usually applies to a vision, dream, hope, or aim which one takes as a guide, not realizing that it is merely an illusion (this hope to find your people...is a mirage, a delusion, which will lead to destruction if you will not abandon it—Hudson)

Ana delusion, deceptive, misleading

Delusive, delusory deceptive, misleading

Anna fantastic, chimerical, visionary, imaginary, fanciful, quixotic: fallacious, sophistical, casuistical (see under fallacy): illusory, seeming, ostensible, apparent

Delve dig, spade, grub, excavate

Demand vb Demand, claim, require, exact are comparable not as close synonyms but as sharing the basic meaning to ask or call for something as due or as necessary or as strongly desired. Demand strongly implies peremptoriness or insistency; if the subject is a person or sometimes an expression of his will (as a law), it usually implies that he possesses or believes he possesses the right or the authority not only to issue a peremptory request but also to expect its being regarded as a command (the physician demanded payment of his bill) (the court demands fair treatment of the accused by the prosecutor) (the father demanded knowledge of what had occurred during his absence from home) (can he [the keeper of a public record] refuse a copy thereof to a person demanding it on the terms prescribed by law?—John Marshall) (instincts which the conventions of good manners and the imperatives of morality demand that they should repress—Huxley) If the subject of the verb is a thing, the verb implies the call of necessity or of imperative need (the physician demands the right to tell this genius when and where and why he is best in his plays when he demands it on the terms prescribed by law)

Demur vb Demur, scruple, balk, jib, shy, boggle, stick, stickle, strain are comparable when they mean to hesitate or show reluctance because of difficulties in the way. One demurs to or at something when one raises objections to it, casts doubt upon it, or takes exception to it, thereby interposing obstacles which delay action, procedure, or decision (our colleagues in the university who demur on academic grounds to the inclusion of theology—Morberly) In older use the stress was on delay (notwithstanding he hoped that matters would have been long since brought to an issue, the fair one still demurred—Spectator) In modern use the emphasis is commonly on objection (Jerry...proposed that...we stretch a point) (in rank, grade)

Demur vb Demur, scruple, balk, jib, shy, boggle, stick, stickle, strain are comparable when they mean to hesitate or show reluctance because of difficulties in the way. One demurs to or at something when one raises objections to it, casts doubt upon it, or takes exception to it, thereby interposing obstacles which delay action, procedure, or decision (our colleagues in the university who demur on academic grounds to the inclusion of theology—Morberly) In older use the stress was on delay (notwithstanding he hoped that matters would have been long since brought to an issue, the fair one still demurred—Spectator) In modern use the emphasis is commonly on objection (Jerry...proposed that...we stretch a point) (in rank, grade)
the limit of strength, courage, credulity, or tolerance 〈the horse balked at the leap〉 〈he never balks at any task no matter how difficult it is〉 〈there is the opposite case of the man who yields his poetic faith too readily, who does not balk at any improbability—Babbit〉 〈one rather balks at the idea of synthetic roughage—excelsior, wood chips, or whatever may be at hand—Furnas〉 One jibs (often at something) when he balks like a horse and backs away or out 〈I had settled to finish the review, when, behold ... I jibbed—Scott〉 〈he jibbed at alliance with the Catholic League—Bellloc〉 〈his soldiers, many of whom had served with Antony, jibbed at the attack on their old leader—Buchan〉 One shies at, away from, or off from something when like a suddenly frightened horse he recoils or swerves aside in alarm or distaste or suspicion and is unable to proceed or act 〈shy at the sight of blood〉 〈these turns of speech ... have the old virtue in them; you see the old temperamental of the race still evincing itself; still shying away from the long abstract word—Montague〉 One boggles at, over, or about something from which he by temperament, instinct, or training shies away. In this, boggle often implies scrupuling or fussing 〈when a native begins perjury he recoils perjury he perjures himself thoroughly. He does not boggle over details—Kipling〉 〈we [lovers of poetry] do not balk at the sea-wave washing the rim of the sun, which we know it does not do, any more than we boggle at blackberries that are red when they are green—Lowes〉 〈it was in the essence a snobbish pleasure; why should I boggle at the world?—L. P. Smith〉 One sticks at something to which he demurs because of scruples, especially scruples of conscience; the term is used frequently in the idiom “stick at nothing,” which is another way of saying be absolutely unscrupulous 〈was in a hole and would stick at little to get out of it—Buchan〉 One stickles at, about, over or something to which he demurs or raises objections because it is offensive, distasteful, or contrary to his principles (the purist stickles at using clipped words such as gas for gasoline, phone for telephone, exam for examination) 〈there is no time in a serious emergency to stickle over means if they achieve the desired ends〉 〈presumably that is his method—so the reader, eager to get good things where he can, will not stickle at it—K. D. Burke〉 One strains at something when he demurs to it as beyond his power to believe, accept, understand, or do. This usage is chiefly dependent on the scriptural passage “ye blind guides, which strain at a gnat, and swallow a camel.” The object of at is commonly something which might without real difficulty be believed, accepted, understood, or done 〈persons who strain at the truth yet accept every wild rumor without question〉 〈I do not strain at the position,—it is familiar,—but at the author’s drift—Shak.〉

define denotation  connotation 〈see under DENOTE〉

Ana  *
- meaning, signification, significance, sense, acception, import denote 1 signify, *mean, import

Ana betoken, bespeak, *indicate, attest, argue, prove:
- *intend, mean: *suggest, imply, hint, intimate, insinuate

2 Denote, connote and their corresponding nouns denotation, connotation are complementary rather than synonymous. Taken together, the verbs as used in reference to terms equal mean 〈see MEAN vb 2〉. Taken singly, a term denotes or has as its denotation whatever is expressed in its definition: in a noun the thing or the definable class of things or ideas which it names, in a verb the act or state which is affirmed. A term connotes or has as its connotation the ideas or emotions that are added to it and cling to it, often as a result of experience but sometimes as a result of something extraneous (as a poet’s effective use of the term, or its constant association with another term or idea, or a connection between it and some historical event); thus, “home” denotes the place where one lives with one’s family, but it connotes comforts, intimacy, and privacy. What a term denotes (or the denotation of a term) can be definitely fixed; what a term connotes (or its connotation) often depends upon the experience or background of the person using it 〈I have used the term “post-war poets” to denote those who did not begin to write verse till after the war—Day Lewis〉 〈there is no word that has more sinister and terrible connotations in our snobbish society than the word promiscuity—Shaw〉

In logic denote and connote, though still complementary and still predicated of terms, carry very different implications. They are dependent on two highly technical terms, both collective nouns, denotation and connotation. A term denotes (or bears as denotation) the entire number of things or instances covered by it; thus, “plant” denotes the aggregate of all things that come under the definition of that word; the denotation of “plant” is far more inclusive than the denotation of “shrub.” A term connotes (or bears as connotation) the sum total of the qualities or characteristics that are implied by it and are necessarily or commonly associated with it; thus, “plant” connotes (or bears as connotation) life, growth and decay, lack of power of locomotion, and, commonly, roots and cellular structure invested with a cellulose wall.

denounce  condemn, censure, reprobate, reprehend, blame, *criticize

Ana accuse, charge, arraign, impeach, incriminate, indict: *decry, disapprove, depreciate: revile, vituperate 〈see SCOLD〉

Ant eulogize  —Con *commend, applaud, compliment, recommend: *praise, extol, laud, acclaim dense 1 compact, *close, thick

Ana consolidated, concentrated, compacted 〈see COMPACT vb〉: compressed, condensed 〈see CONTRACT vb〉: massed, heaped, piled, stacked 〈see HEAP vb〉

Ant sparse 〈of population, forests〉: tenuous 〈of clouds, air, masses〉 〈Con scattered, dispersed, dissipated 〈see SCATTER〉: *thin, rare: *meager, scanty, scant, exiguous 2 crass, *stupid, slow, dull, dumb

Ana obtuse, *dull: stolid, phlegmatic, *impassive

Ant subtle: bright 〈Con *intelligent, brilliant, clever, alert, quick-witted denude  bare, *strip, divest, dismantle

Ana clothe counter to what is true or to the facts as they are. Deny commonly implies a refusal and usually a firm or out-spoken refusal to accept as true, to grant or concede, or to acknowledge the existence or claims of deny the report that the British ambassador has resigned he is no vulgar and stupid cynic who denies the existence ... many feel-ings higher than the merely physical—Huxley deny citizenship to certain applicants deny a request for more books for he's a jolly good fellow, which nobody can deny! the necessities of his own life ... not any longer to be denied—Mary Austin it would seem that I was denying God—Meredith In the reflexive form deny usually implies abstinence or renunciation often, but not necessarily, for religious or moral reasons she denied herself all luxuries he resolved to deny himself the pleasure of smoking (compare self-denial at renun-ciation). Gainsay is somewhat formal or literary; it implies opposition, usually by way of disputing the truth of what another has said facts which cannot be gainsaid but she's a fine woman—that nobody can gainsay—Meredith his mother, whom he could not gainsay, was unconsciously but inflexibly set against his genius—Brooks no one would gainsay the right of anyone, the royal American right, to protest—White Contradict differs from gainsay not only in usually implying a more open or a flatter denial of the truth of an assertion but also in commonly suggesting that the contrary of the assertion is true or that the statement is utterly devoid of truth; thus, " to contradict a rumor" is a stronger expres-sion than " to deny a rumor"; one may contradict (never in this sense deny) a person, whereas one may deny or contradict (the stronger term) an assertion of his a report which highly incensed Mrs. Bennet, and which she never failed to contradict as a most scandalous falsehood—Austen) "Nobody contradicts me now,' wrote Queen Victoria after her husband's death, "and the salt has gone out of my life"—Ellis Contradict is also used without implication of a spoken or written denial: it then suggests that an assertion, a doctrine, or a teaching runs counter to something else, and therefore either it cannot be true or the other must be false all the protestations of the employers that they would be ruined by the Factory Acts were contradicted by experience—Shaw they insisted on teaching and enforcing an ideal that contradicted the realities—Henry Adams Negative is usually a much milder term than those which precede; often it implies merely a refusal to assent to something (as a suggestion, a proposition, a nomination, or a bill) the senate nega-tived the proposed taxation after a polite request that Elizabeth would lead the way, which the other as politely ... . . . negative—Austen Beaufort stood, hat in hand, saying something which his companion seemed to nega-tive—Wharton When the idea of going counter to is uppermost, negative usually implies disproof the omission or infrequency of such recitals does not negative the existence of miracles—Paley Traverse occurs chiefly in legal use and implies a formal denial (as of the truth of an allegation or the justice of an indictment) it traverses the theory of the Court—Corwin Impugn usually retains much of its basic implication of attacking and carries the strongest suggestion of any of these terms of directly disput-ting or questioning the existence, or full contradiction, of anything stated or proposition, or less often a person; it sometimes connotes prolonged argument in an attempt to refute or confute the idealists ... took up the challenge, but their reply was to disparage the significance, and even to impugn the reality, of the world as known to science—Inge the morality of our Restoration drama cannot be impugned. It assumes orthodox Christian morality, and laughs (in its comedy) at human nature for not living up to it—T. S. Eliot no one cares to impugn a fool; no one dares to impugn a captain of industry—Brooks Contravene implies strongly a coming into conflict but less strongly than the other terms an intentional opposition, suggesting rather some inherent incompatibility no state law may contravene the United States Constitution or federal laws enacted under its authority—Fitzsimmons steps toward the mitigation of racial segregation and discrimi-nation are often forestalled, since ... these contravene the dicta of Southern customs and tradition—R. E. Jackson Ana *decline, refuse, reject, repudiate: controvert, refute, rebut, confute, *disprove

Ant confirm: concede —Con aver, affirm, assert:

*acknowledge

depart 1 leave, withdraw, retire, *go, quit

Arrive remain, abide —Con *stay, tarry, linger, wait: *come

2 digress, deviate, *swerve, diverge, veer

Ant forsake, *abandon, desert: reject, repudiate (see DECLINE vb): *discard, cast departed deceased, late, *dead, defunct, lifeless, inanimate depend 1 *rely, trust, count, reckon, bank

2 Depend, hinge, hang, turn are comparable when they mean to rest or, especially, to be contingent upon some-thing uncertain or variable or indeterminable. All are normally followed by on or upon. Depend, which literally means to hang or be suspended, suggests an element of mental suspense which makes forecasting impossible. It often suggests uncertainty of a thing with reference to circumstances yet to take place, facts not yet known, or a decision yet to be made our trip depends upon the weather his going to college will depend on his ability to earn enough money to cover his living expenses another motive is the conviction that winning the best satisfaction of later life will depend on possessing this power to think—Eliot It may suggest also a variability that rests upon a difference in attitude or point of view the sterling morale of strikers. This may mean either a staunch fidelity to law and order, or willingness to over-turn a motor bus in the street. ... It is Leopold on who is speaking—Montague Hinge is sometimes used inter-changeably with depend; it may retain much of its literal suggestion of a movable part (as a door or a gate) that opens or closes upon hinges and then usually implies the cardinal (see under ESSENTIAL 2) point upon which a decision, a controversy, or an outcome ultimately rests. In such use it suggests not so much mental suspense as uncertainty tempered by the certainty that the matter will go one way or the other the outcome of the war hinges on the ability of our forces to outmove every strategic move of the enemy the point on which the decision must finally hinge—Thirlwall the whole case being built up by Mr. Kennon was going to hinge in large part upon a single issue—was Clifford under the influence of liquor—Basso Hang likewise may interchange with depend, but more precisely it suggests a point of support such as is characteristic of the literal action of hanging; the term therefore stresses not so much the uncertainty of the event as the weakness or the strength of what gives validity, authority, or credibility to something (as a doc-trine, a belief, or a course of action) or of what points the way to fulfillment or successful performance the truth of the testimony hangs on his word only the election hangs on a single vote a good deal ... hangs on the meaning, if any, of this short word full—T. S. Eliot Turn often comes close to hinge in its meaning great dependable 228  dependore events often turn upon very small circumstances—Swift

It as often differs from hinge in suggesting a rotation or pivoting rather than a going one way or the other and, therefore, in implying a dependence upon something that may be variable or casual 〈the action of the play turns upon a secret marriage〉 〈his plots turn on the vicissitudes of climbing the success-ladder—Fadiman〉 〈the great anxiety of each disputant seemed to turn upon striking the first blow—Thorp〉

dependable *reliable, trustworthy, trusted, tried Ana sure, assured, *confident: *responsible: staunch, steadfast, constant, *faithful Con *doubtful, questionable, dubious: capricious, fickle, unstable, *inconstant, mercurial

dependence reliance, *trust, confidence, faith

dependent adj 1 Dependent, contingent, conditional, relative mean having its existence or nature determined by something else. Something is dependent which cannot exist or come into existence by itself quite without aid or support 〈we are all dependent on one another, every soul of us on earth—Shaw〉 〈the color of the skin is dependent on an adequate supply of blood—Fishbein〉 What is contingent takes its character from something that already exists or may exist and therefore is limited or qualified by something extraneous or is incapable of existence apart from it 〈a person’s conception of love is contingent both on his past experience and on the nature of that experience〉 〈if propriety should die, there could be no impropriety, inasmuch as the continuance of the latter is wholly contingent on the presence of the former—Grandgent〉 〈war is contingent: even dictatorship is contingent. Both depend on ignorance—Pound〉 Something is conditional which depends for its realization, fulfillment, execution, or expression on what may or may not occur or on the performance or observance of certain terms or conditions. Conditional and contingent are often interchangeable, but the former is preferred when eventualities are in the power of the human will 〈the pardon is conditional on his behavior during probation〉 〈while the validity of conditional recognition is a matter of debate, it would be entirely novel . . . if the conditions for recognition were set forth by a new government—I-Kua Chou〉 Something is relative which cannot be known, considered, or determined apart from its reference to something else and which therefore is affected by the limitations, the instability, or the imperfections of the other thing 〈market values are always, relative to the demand〉 〈the idea of civilization is relative . . . any community and any age has its own civilization and its own ideals of civilization—Ellis〉 Ana subject, *liable, open, exposed, susceptible Ant absolute: infinite: original 〈—Con 〈ultimate, categorical: uncircumscribed, boundless, eternal, illimitable (see infinite): undervield (see affirmative verb at SPRING) 2 subject, tributary, *subordinate, secondary, collateral Ana relying, depending, trusting, reckoning, counting (see rely): subsidiary, subservient, *auxiliary: abstracted: humbled, debased (see ABASE)

depiect vb *represent, portray, delineate, picture, limn Ana describe, narrate, *relate: 〈sketch, draft, outline, trace

deplete vb Deplete, drain, exhaust, impoverish, bankrupt are comparable when they mean to deprive a thing in whole or in part of what is essential or necessary to its existence or potency. Deplete is often used as though it implied merely a reduction in numbers, in quantity, or in mass or volume; it may be used specifically to suggest the potential harm of such a reduction or the impossibility of restoring what has been lost before such consequences are evident; thus, bloodletting depletes the system, not only by reducing the quantity of blood but by depriving the system of elements essential to its vitality and vigor; an epidemic depletes an army when it reduces the army not only in size but in effective strength, especially at a time when that strength is needed 〈he would have us fill up our depleted curriculum with subjects whose worth has not even been tried—Grandgent〉 〈cattle herds depleted by the heavy slaughter last year—Time〉 Drain when precisely employed retains its basic implications of slow withdrawal of liquid (as by straining, seepage, or suction) until the substance which is drained becomes dry or the container which holds the liquid is emptied: hence it denotes a gradual depletion and ultimate deprivation of the figurative lifeblood of a thing or the essential element of its existence or well-being 〈the Thirty Years’ War nearly drained Germany of men and materials〉 〈their country’s wealth our mightier misers drain—Pope〉 〈a burden of arms draining the wealth and labor of all peoples—Eisenhower〉 Exhaust (see also tire) is very close to drain, but it stresses emptying or evacuation rather than gradual depletion. Unlike drain, which usually implies loss without compensating gain, exhaust need not suggest ultimate loss of what is removed; thus, a mine is exhausted when all its ore has been removed for refining: a soil is exhausted, or drained of nutrients, by growing crops on it without adequate fertilizing: but, a person is drained of vitality when overwork or illness reduces him to a weak vitality state 〈exhaust a subject by treating it so fully that nothing more can be said about it〉: emptyasses is exhausted when no further sugar can be extracted from it 〈the theme of mother and child has proved a theme which no age has ever exhausted or ever will exhaust—Binyon〉 〈evidently the old ideas had been exhausted and the time was ripe for new ideologies—R. W. Murray〉 〈seven hundred years of glorious and incessant creation seem to have exhausted the constructive genius of Europe—Clive Bell〉 Improvish means a depletion or a draining of something as essential to a thing as money or its equivalent is to a human being; it stresses the deprivation of qualities essential to a thing’s strength, richness, or productiveness 〈improvish the body by too meager a diet〉 〈a brilliant sun scorched the impoverished trees and sucked energy from the frail breezes—Farrell〉 Bankrupt stresses such impoverishment of a thing that it is destitute of qualities essential to its continued existence or productiveness; it connotes a complete or imminent collapse or breaking down 〈argued that science by inattention to immaterial phenomena is bankrupting itself〉 〈dainty bits make rich the ribs, but bankrupt quite the wits—Shak〉 Ana undermine, sap, debilitate, *weaken, enfeeble, cripple, disable: reduce, diminish, *decrease, lessen Ant augment, *increase, enlarge deplore, lament, bewail, bemoan mean to manifest grief or sorrow for something. All carry an implication of weeping or crying which is commonly purely figurative. Deplore implies keen and profound regret especially for what is regarded as irreparable, calamitous, or destructive of something good or worth keeping 〈ev’n rival wits did Voiture’s death deplore—Pope〉 〈deplore a quarrel between friends〉 〈they deplore the divorce between the language as spoken and the language as written—T. S. Eliot〉 Lament commonly implies a strong or demonstrative expression of sorrow or mourning. In contrast to deplore, it usually does imply utterance, sometimes passionate, sometimes fulsome 〈yet I lament what long has ceased to be—Shelley〉 〈he made the newly returned actress a tempting offer, instigating some journalist friends of his at the same time to lament over the decay of the grand school of acting—Shaw> Bewail and bemoan imply poignant sorrow finding an outlet in words or cries, bewail commonly suggesting the louder, bemoan, the more lugubrious expression of grief or, often, of a mere grievance or a complaint (the valet bewailing the loss of his wages—Alexander) (even at the time when our prose speech was as near to perfection as it is ever likely to be, its critics were bemoaning its corruption—Ellis) (and all wept, and bewailed her—Lk 8:52) (>the silver swans her hapless fate bemoan, in notes more sad than when they sing their own—Pope>

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

Ana depreciate, *disapprove: *grieve, mourn, sorrow: weep, wail, *cry

Con vaunt, crow, *boast, brag depert 1 demean, comport, *behave, conduct, acquit, quit

Ana see those at Demean

2 transport, *banish, exile, expatriate, ostracize, extradite

Ana see those at Behaviour

depertment 1 *behavior, conduct

Ana see those at Behaviour

2 demeanor, *bearing, mien, port, presence

Ana *from, formality, ceremony, ceremonial, ritual:

*culture, cultivation, breeding, refinement: dignity, grace, *elegance deposit n deposit, precipitate, sediment, dregs, lees, grounds mean matter which settles to the bottom of or is let fall from suspension in a fluid (as air or water). Deposit, the most comprehensive term, refers to matter let fall by a natural or mechanical process to remain where it settles until there is a visible layer or accumulation (*a deposit of soot in a chimney) (*a deposit of gravel on the bed of a river) (*rich deposits of coal) (*the walls of the houses are clean and less discolored by the deposit of carbon than usual in most towns—Jefferies) Precipitate denotes a usually solid substance separated from a solution or suspension by some chemical interaction or by some physical force (as heat, cold, or centrifugal force) (*camphor may be obtained as a precipitate from an alcoholic solution by precipitation or by some physical force (as heat, cold, or centrifugal force) (*camphor may be obtained as a precipitate from an alcoholic solution by precipitation or by some physical force) (*camphor may be obtained as a precipitate from an alcoholic solution by precipitation or by some physical force) (*camphor may be obtained as a precipitate from an alcoholic solution by precipitation or by some physical force)

Ana underestimate, undervalue, underrate (see base words at estimate): asperse, *malign

Ant appreciate —Con prize, cherish, treasure, value (see Appreciate): *understand, comprehend depreciative, depreciatory *derogatory, disparaging, slighting, pejorative

Ana decrying, belittling, minimizing (see decry): aspersing, maligning (see Malign) underrating, underestimating, undervaluing (see base words at estimate) depress, weigh, oppress mean to put such pressure or such a load upon a thing or person as to cause it or him to sink under the weight. Depression implies a lowering of something by the exertion of pressure or by an overburdening; it most commonly implies a lowering of spirits by physical or mental causes (>the long dull evenings in these dull lodgings when one is weary with work depress one sadly—J. R. Green) (>the mere volume of work was enough to crush the most diligent of rulers and depress the most vital—Buchan) (>he was depressed by his failure—Anderson) It may suggest lowering of bodily vigor or the power of certain organs to function (as by a drug, a disease, or an external condition) (>the drug aconite depresses heart action)

In reference to other things (as market prices or social or cultural states) depress often suggests a lowering in activity, intensity, or vigor (>the first effect of the World War was greatly to depress the prices of stocks) (>a grain market depressed by the existence of a large surplus) (>to depress the culture of the minority below the point at which a full understanding of poetry becomes possible—Day Lewis) Weigh in this relation is used with down, on, or upon and carries a weaker implication of the result or lowering than depress but a stronger implication of the difficulty or burdens imposed upon a person or thing (>he is weighed down with cares) (>the responsibility weighs heavily upon him) (>Walter's mind had cleared itself of the depression which had weighed him so heavily—Cостин) (>a melancholy damp . . . to weigh thy spirits down—Milton) Like weigh, oppress stresses the burden which is borne or is imposed and, like depress, the consequent ill effects (as the lowering of spirits or of power to function) or in its more common sense (see wrong), a trampling down, a harassing, or a subjection to heavy penalties (>the weary world of waters between us oppresses the imagination—Lamb) (>the butler, oppressed by the heat . . . was in a state of abstraction bordering on slumber—Shaw) (>she is so oppressed by fear that she may lose her mind)

Ana distress, *trouble, ail: *afflict, try, torment: *tire, weary, fatigued, exhaust, fag, jade, tucker

Ant elate: cheer —Con gladden, rejoice, delight, gratify, *please depressed dejected, dispirited, *downcast, disconsolate, woebegone

Ana analogous words

Ant antonyms

Con contrasted words

See also explanatory notes facing page 1 derogatory, depreciatory, depreciative, disparaging, slighting

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.
design vb forsake, *abandon

America meed, guerdon, reward (see PREMIUM); punishment, chastisement, chastening, disciplining or discipline (see corresponding verbs at PUNISH) desert vb leave, quit, depart (see GO)

*Ant stick to, cleave to deserter see under desert at ABANDON vb desertion 1 *defection, apostasy

*Ant perfidiousness or perfidy, treacherousness or treachery, disloyalty, faithlessness (see corresponding adjectives at FAITHLESS)

2 see under desert at ABANDON vb deserve, merit, earn, rate mean to be or become worthy of something as recompense whether by way of reward or punishment. Deserve implies a just claim which entitles one to something good or evil, usually on the ground of actions done or qualities shown; it does not necessarily imply that the claim has been won or recognized (when at your hands did I deserve this scorn?—Shak.) (it should be supported at the public expense as one who had deserved well of his country—Dickinson) (it is largely owing to his insight and enthusiasm, as well as to his editorial toil, that the Tudor translators have become recognized as they deserve—T. S. Eliot) Merit is so close a synonym of deserved and good that it is often used interchangeably with it without loss. Even so, slight differences in meaning may be detected. Merit, although it implies a just claim, seldom suggests that the claim has been urged by oneself or another, a connotation that is not essential to but may often be found in deserve; merit also more often implies qualities of character, of life, or of action that entitle one to reward or punishment (give him the words of praise that he merits) (he merited a reproof, but he did not deserve dismissal) (a compliment . . . to the grandeur of the family, merited by the manner in which the family has sustained its grandeur—Dickens) Earn may suggest a due correspondence between the efforts exerted or the time or energy spent and the recompense that ensues; it fundamentally implies a deserving or meritizing as well as a getting and therefore may suggest a return in evil as well as in good ("Indeed, he hath an excellent good name." "His excellence did earn it, ere he had it"—Shak.) (an active, ardent mind . . . a generous spirit, and a body strong . . . had earned for him sure welcome—Wordsworth) (his devotion to self-interest has earned him nothing but contempt) Rate implies recognition of deserts or merits usually upon a carefully calculated basis, but it does not carry any suggestion of whether what is deserved or merited has been given (he rates a promotion) (the magazine rates our support)

desiccate vb *dry, dehydrate, parch, bake design vb 1 mean, *intend, propose, purpose

*Ant aim, aspire

2 plan, plot, scheme, project (see under PLAN n)

*Ant sketch, outline, diagram, delineate, blueprint, draft: *invent, create

Con execute, fulfill, effect, accomplish, achieve, *perform design n 1 plan, plot, scheme, project

*Ant delineation, sketch, draft, outline, tracing, diagram (see under SKETCH vb): conception, *idea

Con execution, fulfillment, accomplishment, achievement, performance (see corresponding verbs at PERFORM)

2 *intention, intent, purpose, aim, end, object, objective, goal

*Ant will, volition, conation: deliberation, reflection, thinking or thought (see corresponding verbs at THINK): intrigue, machination, *plot character, of life, or of action that entitle one to reward or punishment (give him the words of praise that he merits) (he merited a reproof, but he did not deserve dismissal) (a compliment . . . to the grandeur of the family, merited by the manner in which the family has sustained its grandeur—Dickens) Earn may suggest a due correspondence between the efforts exerted or the time or energy spent and the recompense that ensues; it fundamentally implies a deserving or meritizing as well as a getting and therefore may suggest a return in evil as well as in good effect implies selection by the person or body having the power. Elect, as distinguished from nominate, implies a final selection (as by the electorate) from the candidates who have been previously nominated (all the liberal candidates were elected) (not one person on the nominating committee's slate was elected at today's meeting) Appoint always implies that the selection is determined without a general vote (as of an electorate) and represents the choice of the person or the body in whom such power is legally vested. Appoint may be used even when confirmation (as by the U. S. Senate) has been necessary to make the designation valid (three justices of the Supreme Court have been appointed by the president within twelve months) (he [the president] shall nominate, and by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, shall appoit ambassadors, other public ministers and consuls, judges of the Supreme Court—U. S. Constitution)

*Ant accident —Con impulse (see MOTIVE)

3 *figure, pattern, motif, device designate, name, nominate, elect, appoint are comparable in the sense to declare a person one's choice for incumbency of an office, position, post, or benefice. Designate implies selection by the person or body having the power to choose an incumbent or to detail a person to a certain post; it often connotes selection well in advance of incumbency (Harold contended that he had been designated by Edward the Confessor as the latter's successor to the English throne) (a clergyman who has been designated by the proper ecclesiastical authority as the incumbent of an episcopacy is usually called bishop-designate until he has been consecrated or has been installed) Name varies little in meaning from designate except that it stresses announcement rather than selection; it is more informal, however, and is usually preferred when the reference is to a political or government office within the gift of an executive or of an executive body (the mayor has not yet named the commissioner of public safety) (only one member of the incoming president's cabinet remains to be named) Nominate, though etymologically the equivalent of name, is rarely used as its equivalent in meaning (the House of Commons was crowded with members nominated by the Royal Council—J. R. Green) Usually it implies merely the presentation of the name of one's choice for an office for approval or rejection by others who have the final say; thus, a person from the floor at a convention may nominate his choice for a particular office; a state convention of a political party meets to nominate the party's candidates for governor and other state officers. Either nominate or name may be used when the executive's choice must be confirmed by a body having that power. Elect, as distinguished from nominate, implies a final selection (as by the electorate) from the candidates who have been previously nominated (all the liberal candidates were elected) (not one person on the nominating committee's slate was elected at today's meeting) Appoint always implies that the selection is determined without a general vote (as of an electorate) and represents the choice of the person or the body in whom such power is legally vested. Appoint may be used even when confirmation (as by the U. S. Senate) has been necessary to make the designation valid (three justices of the Supreme Court have been appointed by the president within twelve months) (he [the president] shall nominate, and by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, shall appoint ambassadors, other public ministers and consuls, judges of the Supreme Court—U. S. Constitution)

*Ant choose, select, single, opt, pick designation *name, denomination, appellation, title, style

*Ant identification, *recognition: classification, pigeonholing or pigeonhole (see corresponding verbs at ASSORT) designed premeditated, *deliberate, considered, advised, studied

*Ant intentional, *voluntary, willful, deliberate, willing: purposed, intended (see INTEND): resolved, determined, decided (see DECIDE) desire vb Desire, wish, want, crave, covet mean having a longing for something. Desire, wish, and want are often used with identical intent though in such situations (usually everyday ones) that the degree of intensity of longing or need is not at issue (help wanted) (we can order whichever model you wish) In such use desire is often felt as more formal and dignified, and it may even be decidedly pompous in effect (〈cleaning lady desires situation〉 Desire in more general use, however, emphasizes the strength or ardor of feeling and often implies strong intention or aim (〈more than any other thing on earth desired to fight for his country—White〉〈unions which desired to avail themselves of the benefits of the law—Collier's Yr. BK〉 Wish is less strong, often suggesting a not usually intense longing for an object unattained, unattainable, or questionably attainable (〈Newton's law of gravitation could not be wished into existence—Overstreet〉 〈not to have property, if one wished it, was almost a certain sign of shiftlessness—Brooks〉 Want (see also LACK) is a less formal term than wish and so is often interchangeable with it in situations where dignity of the subject or respectfulness is not at issue, though generally want implies that the longing is for something the attainment of which would fill a real need and which is actively hoped for (〈those who wanted to live long—Fishbein〉 (〈the French wanted European unity—N. Y. Times〉 Crave implies strongly the force of physical or mental appetite or need (as of hunger, thirst, love, or ambition) (〈crave peace and security after war—That eternal craving for amusement—Donn Byrne〉 (what he craved was books of poetry and chivalry—Weeks〉 Covet implies a strong, eager desire, often inordinate and envious and often for what belongs to another (〈where water is the most coveted essential resource because its supply is limited—Amer. Guide Series: Texas〉 〈we hate no people, and covet no people's land—Willkie〉

Ana *long, yearn, hanker, pine, hunger, thirst: aspire, pant, *aim

Con abhor, abominate, loathe, detest, *hate: spurn, repudiate, reject, refuse, *decline

desire n Desire, appetite, lust, passion, urge are comparable as meaning a longing for something regarded as essential to one's well-being or happiness or as meaning an impulse originating in a man's nature and driving him toward the object or the experience which promises him enjoyment or satisfaction in its attainment. Desire may be used of every conceivable longing that stirs one emotionally, whether that longing originates in man's physical or in his spiritual nature, whether it is natural and normal or unnatural and perverted, whether it is generally regarded as low or high in the scale of moral or spiritual values (〈the desire for food〉 (〈the desire for an education〉 (〈a desire for change〉 (〈the desire for peace〉 (〈his physical desire to sit in the sun and do nothing—Anderson〉 (〈the keen desire . . . to pay their debts—Repplier〉 (nothing dies harder than the desire to think well of oneself—T. S. Eliot) (〈Congreve's characters have inclinations, not desires; habits, not ecstasies—J. M. Brown〉 It may be used specifically to denote sexual longing, but it does not always convey derogatory connotations when so used meaning (〈like the flesh of animals distended by fear or desire—Cather〉 Desire is often used in implicit contrast to will or volition, for in itself it carries no implication of a determination or effort to possess or attain (〈she had the desire to do something which she objected to doing—Bennett〉 (guiltless even of a desire for any private possession or advantage of their own—Dickinson〉 Appetite is almost as extensive in its range of application as desire, and it invariably implies an imperative demand for satisfaction. It is specifically applied to the longings (as hunger, thirst, and sexual desire) which arise out of man's physical nature and which may be thwarted only by circumstances beyond one's control or by deliberate self-control (〈a slave to his appetite for drink〉 (the child is losing his appetite and only picks at his food) (〈impose restraints upon one's physical appetites〉 (he collected guns and women and his sexual appetite was awesome—E. D. Radin〉 The word may be applied also to equally exacting longings which drive one to their satisfaction, whether they originate in his nature or are acquired (man's distinguishing characteristic is the appetite for happiness) (〈an insatiable appetite for news〉 (almost pathological in his appetite for activity—Mencken) Lust combines the specific denotation of desire as a longing that stirs emotion and that of appetite as a longing that exacts satisfaction; often it implies domination by the emotion or insatiable longing (〈the lust of knowing〉 and ambition (the lust of power)—Preserved Smith) (<whose ruling passion was the lust of praise—Pope) When used specifically to denote sexual longing, lust unlike desire automatically carries derogatory connotations (in his morning litany he could pray to be kept from lasciviousness, but when night came lust might come with it—Van Doren) Passion is applied to any intense and preoccupying emotion which gives one a certain special bent or which serves as an outlet for and gives direction to one's energies. Though it comes close to lust in suggesting the energizing of desire by the vehemence of the emotions, passion is the better choice when personal predilection is implied; thus, he, too, knew the lust (better than passion) for power; but, his work reveals a passion (better than lust) for perfection (〈avarice, he assured them, was the one passion that grew stronger and sweeter in old age. He had the lust for money as Martinez had for women—Cather〉 (the dream, the ambition, the passion of Mr. Raycie's life was (as his son knew) to found a Family—Wharton) Urge, which basically means a force or motive which drives one to action, often more specifically denotes a strong, persistent, and compelling desire that has its origin in one's physical nature or one's peculiar temperament. The word is sometimes applied to the physical appetites (the sexual appetite is often called "the biological urge"), but it is more often used of a desire so strong and insistent that it must be satisfied or a sense of frustration ensues (〈an urge to travel〉 (an urge to marry) (〈that almost mystic urge to climb can dominate your whole life—Vaughan-Thomas〉

Ana longing, yearning, hankering, pining, hungering or hunger or thirsting or thirst (see long vb): *cupidity, greed, avarice, rapacity

Ant distaste —Con repugnance, repellency or repulsion, abhorrence (see corresponding adjectives at repugnant)

desist 〈discontinue, cease, *stop, quit

Ana *refrain, abstain, forbear: *relinquish, yield, abandon

Ant persist —Con *continue: *persevere desolate 〈forlorn, torn, lonesome, lone, solitary, lonely, *alone

Ana deserted, forsaken, abandoned (see abandOn): *miserable, wretched

Con cheerful, lighthearted, joyful, joyous, happy, *glad 2 *dismal, dreary, cheerless, dispiriting, bleak

Ana *bare, barren, bald: destitute, poverty-stricken, *poor

despair n hopelessness, desperation, despondency, forlornness (see under despondent adj)

Ana dejection, melancholy, *sadness, gloom, depression

Ant hope: optimism: beatitude —Con rapture, transdespairing 233 despondent

port, *ecstasy

despairing adj  hopeful, desperate, *despondent, forlorn Ana melancholy, *melancholic, attributive: pessimistic, misanthropic, *cynical: depressed, weighed down (see DEPRESS) Ant hopeful —Con optimistic, roseate, rose-colored (see HOPEFUL): sanguine, *confident, assured, sure desperate hopeless, despairing, *despondent, forlorn Ana reckless, rash, foolhardy, venturesome (see ADVENTUROUS): precipitate, headlong: thwarted, foiled, frustrated, outwitted, circumvented, baffled, balked (see FRUSTRATE) Con *cool, collected, composed, nonchalant: sanguine, assured, *confident, sure desperation hopelessness, despair, despondency, forlornness (see under DESPONDENT adj) Ana fury, frenzy (see INSPIRATION): grit, pluck, guts, sand, *fortitude: recklessness, rashness, foolhardiness (see corresponding adjectives at ADVENTUROUS): temerity, audacity Con *confidence, assurance, aplomb: *equanimity, composure, sangfroid, phlegm despicable *contemptible, pitiable, sorry, scurrvy, cheap, beggarly, shabby Ana *base, low, vile: ignominious, infamous, disgraceful (see corresponding nouns at DISGRACE): ignoble, *mean, abject, sordid Ant praiseworthy, laudable despise, contemn, scorn, disdain, scout mean to regard a person or thing as beneath one's notice or as unworthy of one's attention or interest. The same differences in implications and connotations are observable in the corresponding nouns despite, contempt, scorn, disdain when they denote such an attitude toward or such treatment of a person or thing. Despise and despise may imply an emotional reaction from strong disfavor to loathing, but in precise use it stresses a looking down upon a thing and its evaluation as mean, petty, weak, or worthless <he must learn, however, to despise petty adversaries.
No good sportsman ought to shoot at crows—Scott <br bird and beast despised my snares, which took me so many waking hours at night to invent—Hudson <receive thy friend, who, scorning flight, goes to meet danger with despise—Longfellow
<the despise in which runners are held is a convention—Yale Review

Con and contempt imply even a harsher judgment than despise or despite, for despise and despondency may connote mere derision, whereas contemn and especially contempt usually suggest vehement, though not necessarily vocal, condemnation of the person or thing as low or vile, feeble, or ignominious <contemn their low images of love—Bennett <accept an early drawings of moss roses and picturesque castles—things that he now mercilessly contemned—Bennett
<and in contempt of hell and heaven, dies rather than bear some yoke of priests or kings—Masefield
<it was to proclaim their utter contempt for the public and popular conceptions of art, that the Dadaists launched into a series of outrageous practical jokes—Day Lewis

Scorn implies quick, indignant, or profound contempt <instructed from her early years to scorn the art of female tears—Swift <I knew he'd scorn me. He hates frumps—Meredith <Voltaire, with his quick intellectual scorn and eager malice of the brain—Downen <common sense, rejecting with scorn all that can be called mysticism—Inge

Disdain suggests a visible manifestation of pride and arrogance or of aversion to what is base <a great mind disdains to hold anything by courtesy—Johnson
<the psychiatric patient is disdained and ridiculed by his fellow inmates—Banay <his disdain of affection and prudery was magnificent—Mencken

Scout stresses not only derision but a refusal to consider the person or thing concerned as of any value, efficacy, or truth. It therefore suggests rejection or dismissal <many great philosophers have not only been scouted while they were living, but forgotten as soon as they were dead—Hazlitt (Alice would have scouted ... any suggestion that her parent was more selfish than saintly—Shaw

Ana abominate, loathe, abhor, detest, *hate: spurn, repudiate (see DECLINE) Ant appreciate —Con admire, esteem, respect (see under REGARD n): value, prize, cherish, treasure (see APPRECIATE) despite n 1 spite, ill will, malevolence, spleen, grudge, *malice, malignity, malignity <contempt, scorn, disdain (see under DESPISE): abhorrence, loathing, detestation, hatred, fate (see under HATE vb)
Ant appreciation: regard —Con admiration, esteem, respect (see REGARD n): *reverence, awe, fear <2 contempt, scorn, disdain (see DESPISE) despite prep in spite of, *notwithstanding despoil *ravage, devastate, waste, sack, pillage, spoliage—Con plunder, *rob, rifle, loot: *strip, bare, denude

Despacency despair, despiration, hopelessness, forlornness (see under DESPONDENT adj)
Ana dejection, depression, melancholy, melancholia, *sadness, blues, dumps Ant light-heartedness —Con cheerfulness, gladness, happiness, joyfulness, joyousness (see corresponding adjectives at GLAD) despendant adj Despondent, despairing, desperate, hopeless, forlorn mean having lost all or practically all hope. The same distinctions in implications and connotations are to be found in their corresponding nouns despondency, despair, despiration, hopelessness, forlornness when they denote the state or feeling of a person who has lost hope.

Despondent and despondency imply dishheartenment or deep dejection arising out of a conviction that there is no longer any justification of hope or that further efforts are useless (a despondent lover) <whenever ... the repressed spirit of the artist ... perceived ... the full extent of its debacle, Mark Twain was filled with a despondent desire, a momentary purpose even, to stop writing altogether—Brooks
<we poets in our youth begin in gladness; but therefrom come in the end despondency and madness—Wordsworth

(England, they said, was wont to take her defeats without despondency, and her victories without elation—Repliery

Despairing and despair imply sometimes the passing of hope, sometimes the utter loss of hope, and often accompanying despondency
<the author ... ended with a despairing appeal to the democracy when his jeremiads evoked no response from the upper class ... or from the middle class—Inge <to fortify ourselves against the ultimate disaster—which is despair—Times Lit. Sup.
<despair of her ever understanding either the terms of a contract or the nature of working conditions—Mary Austin
<the bitter weariness of a fathomless resignation and despair—Wolf

Desperate and desperation imply despair but not the cessation of effort; rather, they often suggest violence and recklessness as a last resource especially in the face of anticipated defeat or frustration
<the bitter, desperate striving unto death of the oppressed race, the damned desperation of the rebel—Rose Macaulay
<a desperate determination that nothing should interfere with her marriage with Hugh had taken possession of her—Anderson
<he was fighting a fight of desperation, and knew it—Meredith <not knowing ... how near my pursuer might be, I turned in desperation to meet him—

_Hudson> Hopeless and hopelessness imply both the complete loss of hope and the cessation of effort (the hopeless look in the faces of the doomed men) The words do not necessarily suggest despondency, dejection, or gloom, for sometimes they imply acceptance or resignation ("Why should you say such desperate things?") "No, they are not desperate. They are only hopeless"—Hardy> not that Dr. Lavendar was hopeless; he was never hopeless of anybody... but he was wise; so he was deeply discouraged—Delaney> (the little hopeless community of beaten men and yellow defeated women—Anderson) Forlorn (see also ALONE 1) and forlornness stress utter hopelessness, but they differ from hopeless and hopelessness in implying hopelessness even in the act of undertaking something because its failure is all but certain (we sit down in a forlorn skepticism—Berkeley> poor prince, forlorn he steps... and proud in his despair—Keats> Desperate, hopeless, and forlorn and their corresponding nouns are applicable not only to men, their moods, words, and acts, but to the things which make men despairing or hopeless (desperate straits) (the hopeless situation of a beleaguered garrison) (desperate grime and greasiness—McFee> all the high arid and formidable force which the Celt has ever thrown into a forlorn and failing cause—Cyril Robinson>

_Ana mourning, mourning, sorrowing (see GRIEVE): depressed, dejected, melancholy, sad (see corresponding nouns at SADNESS) Ant> lighthearted—Con cheerful, joyful, joyous, happy, *glad: buoyant, volatile, resiliant, *elastic despotict tyrannical, tyrannous, arbitrary, autocratic, *absolute

_Ana domineering, imperious, *masterful, imperiative: *dictatorial, authoritarian, magisterial destiny *fate, lot, doom, portion

_Ana *end, termination, terminus, ending: goal, objective (see INTENTION) destitute 1 *devoid, void

_Ana lacking, wanting (see LACK vb): *deficient: empty: barren, *bare: depleted, drained, exhausted, bankrupted or bankrupt (see corresponding verbs at DEplete)

Con> *full, replete, complete

2 *poor, indigent, needy, penniless, impecunious, poverty-stricken, necessitous

Ant> opulent destitution want, indigence, *poverty, penury, privation

_Ana *need, necessity, exigency: *lack, absence, want, privation, dearth: adversity, *misfortune: strait (see JUNCTURE)

Ant> opulence destroy, demolish, raze mean to pull or tear down. Destroy is so general in its application that it may imply the operation of any force that wrecks, kills, crushes, or annihilates (destroy a nest of caterpillars) (destroy affection) (a building destroyed by fire) (grinding poverty that destroys vitality) Its opposition to construct is often apparent (it is proverbially easier to destroy than to construct—T. S. Eliot> very few well established institutions, governments and constitutions... are ever destroyed by their enemies until they have been corrupted and weakened by their friends—Lippmann> Demolish implies a pulling or smashing to pieces; when used in reference to buildings or other complex structures (as of wood, stone, or steel), it implies complete wreckage and often a heap of ruins (houses demolished by a hurricane) (the automobile was demolished in a collision with the train) The term implies the destruction of all coherency or integrity in a nonmaterial thing and, consequently, of all its usefulness (demolish an opponent's argument) people are inclined to believe that what Bradley did was to demolish the logic of Mill and the psychology of Bain—T. S. Eliot> his research has been painstaking, and he demolishes a good many legends—Pratt> Raze implies a bringing to the level of the ground; it may or may not imply an orderly process with no destruction of usable parts (several buildings were razed to make room for the new city hall) (in 1865 a Gulf hurricane razed the town—Amer. Guide Series: Texas) The term may imply obliteration or effacement, more, however, with reference to the implication of scraping than to the sense of pulling or tearing down (canst thou not minister to a mind diseased... raze out the written troubles of the brain...—Shak>

_Ana *ruin, wreck, dilapidate: *abolish, extinguish, annihilate: *ravage, devastate, sack

Con> *found, establish, institute, organize: *make, form, shape, fashion, fabricate, forge, manufacture: preserve, conserve, *save destruction *ruin, hovac, devastation

_Ana demolishing or demolition, razing (see corresponding verbs at DESTROY): annihilation, extinction (see corresponding verbs at ABOLISH) desultory casual, hit-or-miss, haphazard, *random, happy-go-lucky, chance, chance

_Ana* fitful, spasmodic: unsystematic, unmethodical, disorderly (see affirmative adjectives at ORDERLY): capricious, mercurial, *inconstant, fickle

Ant> assiduous (study, search, or other activity): methodical (something designed, planned, constructed) detach, disengage, abstract mean to remove one thing from another with which it is in union or association. One detaches something when one breaks a literal or figurative connection, tie, or bond and thereby isolates it or makes it independent (detach sheets from a loose-leaf book) (detach a ship from a fleet) (detach oneself from one's prejudices) (the mature critic whose loyalties quietly detached themselves from the gods of his generation—Parrington) One disengages something that is held by or involved with something else and thereby sets it free (she disengaged her hand) (it is hard for the mind to disengage itself from depressing thoughts) (I could not rest satisfied until I... had disengaged... his good work from the inferior work joined with it—Arnold) One abstracts something by withdrawing it from the place where it belongs or by separating it from a mass of like things so as to put it in another place or another relation (a vast cigar-shaped body of gas was raised and eventually abstracted from the surface of the sun—Swinton) (abstract papers from a file) _Abstract_ may imply furtiveness and theft (abstract eggs from a nest) (abstract money from a till) It may imply an intention of shortening (abstract the essential points from an argument) or of concentrating elsewhere (abstract one's attention from one's surroundings) (see also ABSTRACT adj)

Ant> attach, affix—Con* fasten, fix: *tie, bind: *unite, combine, conjoin detached aloof, uninterested, disinterested, *indifferent, unconcerned, incurious

_Ana impartial, dispassionate, objective, unbiased, *fair: altruistic (see CHARITABLE)

_Ant_ interested: selfish—Con* mercenary: concerned (see under CARE) detail n 1* item, particular

Con> *structure, framework, anatomy, skeleton: whole, aggregate, total, *sum: mass, *bulk: design, scheme, *plan, plot deterioration, arrest, apprehension, attachment (see under detention dissuade, discourage, divert) detain 1 arrest, apprehend, attach detain 2 itemized, particularized, circumstantial, minute, detailed [paragraph with technical terms related to deterioration and decline]

Detest disdaze, disgust, divert detest *prevent (sense 2): *hinder, impede, obstruct, block: debar, shut out (see EXCLUDE): *frighten, scare: restrain, inhibit detester *abet: actuate, motivate —Con *incite, instigate: stimulate, excite, provoke deterioration, degeneration, devolution, decadence, decline, declension are comparable as meaning either the process of falling from a higher to a lower level or the state of a thing when such a falling has occurred. Degeneration is the least specific of these terms and applies to any process or condition in which there are signs of impairment in quality, in character, or in value (chemicals that reduce the deterioration of rubber in aging) (the deterioration of his memory is marked in recent years) (man the toolmaker has made "inanimate instruments" ... do his manual work for him; he is now trying to make them do his mental work ...). The price may be the progressive deterioration of our faculties—inge to promise that warfare will be nuclear ... is to assure the further deterioration of our position throughout Asia—straight Degeneration usually implies retrogression and a return to a simpler or more primitive state or condition; when used in reference to plants, animals, or their parts, it usually suggests changes in physical structure, but it may imply a progressive degeneration in structure and function resulting from disease (the sea squirt in its adult stage evidences degeneration through the loss of the vertebrate characters apparent in its larval stage) (fatty degeneration of the heart) When applied to persons in groups or as individuals or to states or empires, it suggests physical, intellectual, and often moral degradation and a reversion toward barbarism or, in the case of individuals, bestiality (the degeneration of the American Indians confined to reservations) (the degeneration of the ancient Roman Empire) (of all the dangers that confront a nation at war, this degeneration of national purpose ... is the greatest—new republic) Devolution in technical use may take the place of degeneration (the devolution of the sea squirt) but in general use it carries even a stronger implication of opposition to evolution (the process of human evolution is nothing more than a process of sifting, and where that sifting ceases evolution ceases, becomes, indeed, devolution—Ellis) Decadence presupposes a previous maturing and usually a high degree of excellence; it implies that the falling takes place after a thing (as a people, a literature or other form of art, or a branch of knowledge) has reached the peak of its development (there seems to be no more pronounced mark of the decadence of a people and its literature than a servile and rigid subserviency to rule—Ellis) (a sharply falling rate of population growth, an abnormally high death rate, extensive illness and the like, are an indication of social decadence and ample cause for alarm on the part of political leaders—Roucek) In reference to matters of art decadence may imply no more than excessive refinement and studied attention to esthetic detail (at the turn of the century we all thought we knew what decadence meant—overpensiveness, overcivilization, a preoccupation with refined sensations ... the essence of decadence is an excessive subjectivism—Times Lit. Sup.) (Van Vechten produced a kind of mock decadence unique in American literature. His novels are hyperesthetic, perverse, and often devoted to esoteric or archaic lore—Lueders) Decline is often interchangeable with decadence because it, too, suggests a falling after the peak has been reached in power, prosperity, excellence, or achievement, but it usually suggests more momentum, more obvious evidences of deterioration, and less hope of a return to the earlier state (the rise and decline of the imperial power) (he is in the decline of life) (the association so often noted between the flowering of the intellect and the decline of national vigor—Krutch) Declension differs from decline only in connoting less precipitancy or a slower or more gradual falling toward extinction or destruction (seems to mark a declension in his career as an illustrator—Mather) (the moral change, the sad declension from the ancient proud spirit ... was painfully depressing—Bennett)

Ana impairment, spoiling (see corresponding verbs at INJURE): decaying or decay, decomposition, disintegration, rotting, crumbling (see corresponding verbs at DECAY): debasement, degradation (see corresponding verbs at ABASE)

Ant improvement, amelioration determinant antecedent, cause, reason, occasion determinant conclusive, decisive, definitive determinative *determining, deciding, settling (see DECIDE): influencing, affecting (see AFFECT): shaping, fashioning, forming or formative (see corresponding verbs at MAKE) * determine 1 settle, rule. decide, resolve determine 2 ascertain, discover, unearth, learn detest hate, abhor, abominate, loathe detest disipse, contemn, scorn, disdain: spurn, repudiate, reject (see DECLINE vb)

detract 1 belittle, minimize, disparage, derogate, decray, depreciate detract 2 asperse, *malign, traduce, defame, vilify, calumn—

Ant analogous words
Ant antonyms
Con contrasted words
See also explanatory notes facing page 1 detrimental, deleterious, noxious, *pernicious, baneful waste, *ravage, sack, pillage, despoil, spoliate *disadvantage, handicap, drawback
detriment

calamity, slander, scandal are comparable when they denote either the offense of one who defames another or casts aspersions upon him or what is uttered by way of defamation or aspersion. Detraction stresses the injurious effect of what is said and the loss through it of something (as the esteem of others or his credit, his deserts, or even his good name) precious to the person affected (bring candid eyes unto the perusal of men's works, and let not . . .

Anachronism, slander, calumny are

*disadvantage, handicap, drawback
detriment

calamity, slander, scandal are comparable when they denote either the offense of one who defames another or casts aspersions upon him or what is uttered by way of defamation or aspersion. Detraction stresses the injurious effect of what is said and the loss through it of something (as the esteem of others or his credit, his deserts, or even his good name) precious to the person affected (bring candid eyes unto the perusal of men's works, and let not . . .

Anachronism, slander, calumny are

*disadvantage, handicap, drawback
detriment

calamity, slander, scandal are comparable when they denote either the offense of one who defames another or casts aspersions upon him or what is uttered by way of defamation or aspersion. Detraction stresses the injurious effect of what is said and the loss through it of something (as the esteem of others or his credit, his deserts, or even his good name) precious to the person affected (bring candid eyes unto the perusal of men's works, and let not . . .

Anachronism, slander, calumny are

*disadvantage, handicap, drawback
detriment

calamity, slander, scandal are comparable when they denote either the offense of one who defames another or casts aspersions upon him or what is uttered by way of defamation or aspersion. Detraction stresses the injurious effect of what is said and the loss through it of something (as the esteem of others or his credit, his deserts, or even his good name) precious to the person affected (bring candid eyes unto the perusal of men's works, and let not . . .

Anachronism, slander, calumny are

*disadvantage, handicap, drawback
detriment

calamity, slander, scandal are comparable when they denote either the offense of one who defames another or casts aspersions upon him or what is uttered by way of defamation or aspersion. Detraction stresses the injurious effect of what is said and the loss through it of something (as the esteem of others or his credit, his deserts, or even his good name) precious to the person affected (bring candid eyes unto the perusal of men's works, and let not . . .

Anachronism, slander, calumny are

*disadvantage, handicap, drawback
detriment

calamity, slander, scandal are comparable when they denote either the offense of one who defames another or casts aspersions upon him or what is uttered by way of defamation or aspersion. Detraction stresses the injurious effect of what is said and the loss through it of something (as the esteem of others or his credit, his deserts, or even his good name) precious to the person affected (bring candid eyes unto the perusal of men's works, and let not . . .

Anachronism, slander, calumny are

*disadvantage, handicap, drawback
detriment

calamity, slander, scandal are comparable when they denote either the offense of one who defames another or casts aspersions upon him or what is uttered by way of defamation or aspersion. Detraction stresses the injurious effect of what is said and the loss through it of something (as the esteem of others or his credit, his deserts, or even his good name) precious to the person affected (bring candid eyes unto the perusal of men's works, and let not . . .

Anachronism, slander, calumny are

*disadvantage, handicap, drawback
detriment
applicable of these terms; it may be used of a thing that serves as a tool or instrument or as an effective part of a machine, especially one which shows some ingenuity in invention (a device for controlling the speed of a car) (he invented several handy household devices including one for whipping cream and one for hulling strawberries). It may be used also of an artifice or stratagem concocted as a means of accomplishing an end (her device for keeping the children quiet) (he will . . . entrap thee by some treacherous device—Shak.) or of a pattern or design that shows the play of fancy, especially of one that proves useful to the less inventive (first-person narrative is a common literary device) (that old stale and dull device [in painting] of a rustic bridge spanning a shallow stream—Jeffries) Contrivance stresses skill and dexterity in the adaptation of means and especially of the means at hand to an end; it sometimes carries a suggestion of crudity of or of contempt for the resulting device or system (a contrivance for frightening birds that were eating his corn) (all sorts of contrivances for saving more time and labor—Shaw) (he would look at none of the contrivances for his comfort—Conrad) Gadget is sometimes used of a device for which one does not know the name; more often it applies to a small and novel device and especially to an accessory or an appliance intended to add to a person's comfort, convenience, or pleasure (the garden tools and gadgets which make gardening so much more fun—Van der Spuy) (their new car has all the latest gadgets) Contraction is usually more deprecative than contrivance or gadget and often suggests a clumsy substitute rather than an ingenious invention (he has rigged up a contraption which he calls a radio) (her husband's little perch-in-the-sun . . . is a simple enough contraption—a wooden stump with the seat of an old kitchen chair nailed across the top of it—Glover) It also may denote something viewed with skepticism or mistrust primarily because new, unfamiliar, or unintended (the contraction ran so well that the Detroit Common Council was forced to pass the city's first motor traffic regulation—Amer. Guide Series: Mich.) (a seventy-two-foot-long, eleven-ton finless rocket . . . . In the nose of this contraption—Daniel Lang) Ana instrument, tool, *implement, appliance, utensil: apparatus, *machine, mechanism: expedient, *resource, shift, makeshift, resort: invention, creation (see corresponding verbs at INVENT): artifice, ruse, *trick, gambit, ploy 2 *figure, design, motif, pattern Ana *symbol, emblem, attribute, type devilish diabolical, diabolic, *fiendish, demoniac, demonic Ana *infernal, hellish: nefarious, iniquitous, villainous, *vicious Ana angelic devious *crooked, oblique Ana deviating, diverging, digressing (see SWERVE): aberrant, *abnormal: tricky, crafty, artful, cunning, foxy, insidious, *sly Ana straightforward—Con downright, *forthright devise 1 *contribute, invent, frame, concoct Ana create, discover (see INVENT): fashion, forge, fabricate, shape, form, *make: design, plan, scheme, plot (see under PLAN n) 2 *will, bequeath, leave, legate devoid, void, destitute are comparable when they are followed by of and mean showing entire want or lack. Devoid stresses the absence or the nonpossession of a particular quality, character, or tendency (I was not devoid of capacity or application—Gibbon) *they will steal from you before your very face, so devoid are they of all shame—Hudson (a human being devoid of hope is the most terrible object in the world—Heiser) Void (see also EMPTY 1) usually implies freedom from the slightest trace, vestige, tinge, or taint of something (a man void of honor) (a conscience void of offence—Acts 24:16) (a drama which, with all its preoccupation with sex, is really void of sexual interest—Shaw) Destitute stresses deprivation or privation; it therefore is seldom used with reference to what is evil or undesirable (a domestic life destitute of any hallowing charm—George Eliot) *men of genius . . . wholly destitute of any proper sense of form—J. R. Lowell) (no woman . . . so totally destitute of the sentiment of religion—J. R. Green) Ana barren, *bare: lacking, wanting (see LACK vb): *empty devolution decadence, decline, declension, *deterioration, degeneration Ana retrogressiveness or retrogression, regressiveness or regression (see corresponding adjectives at BACKWARD): receding or recession, retrograding or retrogradation (see corresponding verbs at RECEDE) Con *development: *progress, progression devote 1 Devote, dedicate, consecrate, hallow mean to set apart something or less often someone for a particular use or end. Devote often implies a giving up or setting apart because of motives almost as impelling as those that demand a vow (devotes her full time to the care of the unfortunate) (the administrative work . . . deprived him of the time and energy which he longed to devote to historical research—Callender) (eloquence, erudition, and philosophy . . . were humbly devoted to the service of religion—Gibbon) (he cared too little for diplomacy to devote himself to it—Commins) Dedicate implies solemn and exclusive devotion and often a ceremonial setting apart for a serious and often a sacred use (dedicate a memorial) (I will dedicate all the actions of my life to that one end—Belloe) (I had devoted the labor of my whole life, and had dedicated my intellect . . . to the slow and elaborate toil of constructing one single work—De Quincey) Consecrate implies the giving of a sacred or exalted character (his effect was to consecrate the Prussian State and to enshrine bureaucratic absolutism—Dewey) especially by rites (as those by which a building is set apart for the service or worship of God or by which a bishop or king is elevated to his throne or by which ground is set apart as a burial place of the dead) (kings of England are consecrated in Westminster Abbey) (the right of burial in consecrated ground) In more general applications consecrate while not implying such rites does carry a stronger connotation of almost religious devotion than dedicate (a night of memories and of sighs I consecrate to thee—Landor) Hallow is a still stronger term, partly because of its use in the Lord's Prayer ("Our Father which art in heaven, hallowed be thy name") and partly because it often implies an ascription of intrinsic sanctity. Unlike the foregoing terms hallow is not normally used of oneself; thus, one may devote or dedicate or occasionally consecrate oneself to something (as a duty, a responsibility, or an interest), but one hallows something or more rarely someone (his marriage was hallowed and made permanent by the Church—Barry) (but in a larger sense we cannot dedicate, we cannot consecrate, we cannot hallow this ground—Lincoln) Hallow may also be used to imply a mere respecting or making respectable (as by reason of age or custom) without suggesting a sacred character (you justify everything, hallow everything—Elizabeth Taylor) devoted, pious, religious, pietistic, sanctimonious apply devour devotion devotee devoted

Ana *commit, consign, confide, entrust: assign, *allot: *sentence, doom

2 apply, *direct, address

Ana endeavor, strive, struggle, try, *attempt devoted *loving, affectionate, fond, doting

Ana *faithful, loyal, true, constant: attentive, considerate, *thoughtful devotee *votary, *addict, habitué

Ana *enthusiast, zealot, fanatic devotion loyalty, fealty, *fidelity, piety, allegiance

Ana fervor, ardent, zeal, enthusiasm, *passion: love, affection, *attachment: dedication, consecration (see corresponding verbs at DEVOTE) devour *eat, swallow, ingest, consume

Ana *waste, squander, dissipate: *destroy, demolish: *wreck, *ruin devout, pious, religious, pietistic, sanctimonious apply mainly to persons, their acts, and their words and mean showing fervor and reverence in the practice of religion. Devout stresses an attitude of mind or a feeling that leads one to such fervor and reverence (a devout man, and one that feared God—Acts 10:2) all those various “offices” which, in Pontifical, Missal, and Breviary, devout imagination had elaborated from age to age—Pater

Pious emphaizes rather the faithful and dutiful performance of one’s religious obligations; although often used interchangeably with devout it tends to suggest outward acts which imply faithfulness and fervor rather than, as does devout, an attitude or feeling which can only be inferred (pious churchmen) happy, as a pious man is happy when after a long illness, he goes once more to church—Hichens were pious Christians, taking their Faith devoutly. But such religious emotion as was theirs, was reflected rather than spontaneous—H. O. Taylor’s The term often, however, carries a hint of depreciation, sometimes of hypocrisy (the saying that we are members one of another is not a mere pious formula to be repeated in church without any meaning—Shaw) a hypocrite—a thing all pious words and uncharitable deeds—Reade

Religious may and usually does imply both devoutness and piety, but it stresses faith in a God or gods and adherence to a way of life believed in consonance with that faith (a man may be moral without being religious, but he cannot be religious without being moral—Myers) they are not religious: they are only pew renters—Shaw In its basic meaning pietistic stresses the emotional rather than the intellectual aspects of religion (in the Catholic Church it [use of the Bible] is threefold, doctrinal, liturgical, and pietistic—New Catholic Dict.) while probably a very late psalm, it brings to a kind of spiritual climax the pietistic utterances found in earlier parts of the Bible—Bach an emotional person with pietistic inclinations that nearly carried him over at different times to the Plymouth Brethren—H. G. Wells

Often this opposition of the emotional to the intellectual is overlooked and pietistic is used derogatorily of someone or something felt to display overly sentimental or unduly emotional piety (Gibbon’s analysis of the causes of the growth of Christianity was very valuable, because he recognized the balance against a heavy weight of pietistic flapdoodle that passed for ecclesiastical history—Trevelyan) Sanctimonious has entirely lost its original connotation of a holy or sacred character and implies a mere pretension to or appearance of holiness or piety a sanctimonious hypocrite sanctimonious phrases

Often it connotes a hypocritical aloofness or superiority of manner (if it only takes some of the sanctimonious

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.
dialect

1 Dialect, vernacular, patois, linggo, jargon, cant, argot, slang denote a form of language or a style of speech which varies from that accepted as the literary standard. Dialect (see also LANGUAGE 1) is applied ordinarily to a form of a language that is confined to a locality or to a group, that differs from the standard form of the same language in peculiarities of vocabulary, pronunciation, usage, and morphology, and that persists for generations or even centuries. It may represent an independent development from the same origin as the standard form (as the Sussex dialect) or a survival (as the dialect of the Kentucky mountaineers). It is sometimes applied to any form of language differing from the standard (a Babylonish dialect which learned pedants much affect—Butler d. 1680) Vernacular (usually the vernacular) has several applications, though it always denotes the form of language spoken by the people in contrast that employed by learned or literary men. In the Middle Ages when the language of the church, of the universities, and of learned writings was Latin, the vernacular was the native language of the people whatever it might be in the locality in question (translate the Bible into the vernacular) (the first Christian missionaries from Rome did not teach their converts to pray and give praise in the vernacular—Quiller-Couch) When a contrast with the literary language rather than with Latin is implied, the vernacular is an underdatory designation for the spoken language, that language which represents the speech of the people as a whole, that is colloquial but not inherently vulgar, and that is marked chiefly by the spontaneous choice of familiar, often native as opposed to exotic words and phrases (Pope ... is absoleute master of the raciest, most familiar, most cogent and telling elements of the vernacular—Lowes) Vernacular often implies a contrast with scientific nomenclature (taxonomic and vernacular names for flowers) Patois is often used as if it were the equivalent of dialect. It tends, however, to be restricted especially in North America to designating a form of speech used by the uneducated people in a bilingual section or country; the word often specifically refers to the hybrid language (of mingled English and Canadian French) spoken in some parts of Canada. Lingo is a term of contempt applied to any language that is not easily or readily understood. It is applicable to a strange foreign language, a dialect, or a patois or to the peculiar speech of a class, cult, or group (I have often warned you not to talk the court gibberish to me. I tell you, I don't understand the lingo—Fielding) Jargon, which may be applied to an unintelligible or meaningless speech (as in a foreign tongue or a patois), is used chiefly in reference to the technical or esoteric language of a subject, a class, a profession, or a cult and usually expresses the point of view of one unfamiliar with it and confused or baffled by it (jocket, and docket, and drawbacks, and other jargon words of the customhouse—Swift) Whitman ... has a somwhat vulgar inclination for technical talk and the jargon of philosophy—Stevenson) Cant, related to chant, seems to have been applied first to the whining speech of beggars. It has been applied more or less specifically to several different forms of language (as the secret language of gypsies and thieves, the technical language of a trade or profession, and the peculiar phraseology of a religious sect or of its preachers). From the last of these applications a new sense has been developed (see HYPOCRISY). When referring to the peculiar language of a subject or profession cant usually suggests the hackneyed use of set words or phrases, often in a specialized sense, and, unlike jargon, does not usually imply unintelligibility; thus, the language of sportwriters is a cant rather than a jargon; the scientific nomenclature used by physicians in official reports may be called medical jargon rather than cant by those who do not understand it; a person who repeatedly calls an investigation a "probe," a large book a "tome," a preacher a "parson," or his wife "my better half" may be said to be given to cant. Argot is applicable chiefly to the cant of the underworld; it is now sometimes used of any form of peculiar language adopted by a clique, a set, or other closely knit group. Slang does not as often denote a form of language or a type of speech as it does a class of recently coined words or phrases or the type of word which belongs to that class (in the slang of college students a drudge is a "grind") (the characteristic differences between American slang and British slang) Slang implies comparatively recent invention, the appeal of the words or phrases to popular fancy because of their aptness, picturesqueness, grotesqueness, or humorousness, and usually an ephemeral character. 2 *language, tongue, speech, idiom dialectic *argumentation, dissertation, debate, forensic diaphanous limpid, pellicul, transparent, translucent, *clear, lucid distract n *tirade, jeremiad, philippic dictate vb Dictate, prescribe, ordain, decree, impose mean to lay down expressly something to be followed, observed, obeyed, or accepted. Dictate implies an authoritative direction by or as if by the spoken word which serves in governing or guiding one's course of action (they dictated the conditions of peace—Gibbon) (a man and woman who love each other and their children ought to be able to act spontaneously as the heart dictates—Russell) (all the other papers had traditions; their past principles dictated their future policy—Rose Macaulay) Prescribe (see also PRESCRIBE) implies a formulated rule, law, or order; it suggests an authoritative pronunciation which is clear, definite, and cannot be gainsaid (my teachers should have prescribed to me, 1st, sincerity; 2d, sincerity; 3d, sincerity—Thoreau) establishments maintained by general taxation and filled with children whose presence is prescribed by law—Grandgent) Ordain implies institution, establish ment, or enactment by a supreme or unquestioned authority or power; usually it suggests an inalterable settlement of a problem or question (we still accept, in theory at all events, the Mosaic conception of morality as a code of rigid and inflexible rules, arbitrarily ordained, and to be blindly obeyed—Ellis) (a blessed custom of my infancy ordained that every living room should be dominated by a good-sized center table—Rephrler) (nature inexcorably ordsins that the human race shall perish of famine if it stops working—Shaw) Decree implies a decision made and formally pronounced by absolute authority or by a power whose edicts are received with the same attention. It is used particularly of ecclesiastical, civil, or judicial power, whether absolute or limited in its scope, or more broadly of anything whose authoritative pronouncements are blindly obeyed (the king decreed that all foreigners should be excluded from the state) (fashion decrees that skirts be shorter and jackets somewhat longer than last year) (if statues were decreed in Britain, as in ancient Greece and Rome, to public benefactors—Dickens) old man was used to the order of his monastery, and though he slept on the ground, as the Rule decrees, preferred a decency in these things—Kipling. Impose implies a subjecting to what must be borne, endured, or submitted to. It may suggest infliction by a paramount authority (each time I attempted to speak he imposed silence—Hudson).

The ever more stringent regulations we found it necessary to impose—Heiser More often it suggests limitations intended to make for order, beauty, or efficiency (patience and industry . . . could only be secured . . . by the enforcement of good habits imposed by external authority—Russell). When the language, the stresses, the very structure of the sentences are imposed upon the writer by the special mood of the piece—Cather

Ana direct, control, manage (see conduct): guide, lead: govern, rule: tell, utter, say dictate n. behest, bidding, injunction, command, order, mandate

Ana law, rule, precept, canon, ordinance, statute, regulation dictatorial, magisterial, authoritarian, dogmatic, doctrinaire, oracular are comparable in the sense of imposing or having the manner or disposition of one who imposes his will or his opinions upon others. Dictatorial implies the powers of a dictator, but it has acquired so strong an implication of the assumption of such power that it often stresses an authoritative or high-handed methods and a domineering, overbearing temper (a captain who has been entrusted with dictatorial power—Macaoaly). He is . . . very learned, very dictatorial, very knock-me-down—Mitford.

Magisterial derives its chief implications from its reference to a magistrate or, more often, to a schoolmaster. It seldom implies an assumption of power, high-handedness, or a bad temper but does suggest excessive use or display of the powers or prerogatives associated with the offices of a magistrate or schoolmaster (as in controlling and disciplining or in enforcing the acceptance of one’s opinions) (we are not magisterial in opinions, nor . . . obtrude our notions on any man—Browne). Magisterial is applied also to opinions, especially when ideas which are so deeply impressed on the mind, or opinions, or ideas which are so deeply impressed on the mind, that they cannot easily be eradicated (the “possible,” as something less than the actual and more than the wholly unreal, is another of these magisterial notions of common sense—James).

Authoritarian is used chiefly in reference to states or governments (for this use see totalitarian), to churches, to bodies, persons, or their policies or attitudes. It implies assumption of one’s own (or another’s) power to exact obedience or of the right to determine what others should believe or do; often it suggests an opposition to liberal or libertarian and sometimes to anarchic or anarchistic (authoritarian system of education) (the authoritarian type of mind) (the decline of authoritarian control and the rapid changes in our ways of living have made changes in our education imperative—Christian Century) (in an authoritarian regime, on the other hand, it is usual to impose stringent tests of partisanship—Robson). Dogmatic implies the attitude of an authoritative or authoritarian teacher or preacher and the laying down of principles or dogmas as true and beyond dispute (art is never dogmatic; holds no brief for itself—you may take it or you may leave it—Galsworthy). (now physics is, or should be, undogmatic; mathematics is, and must be, dogmatic. No mathematician is infallible; he may make mistakes; but he must not hedges. Even in this age which dislikes dogma, there is no demand for an undogmatic edition of Euclid—Eddington). Dogmatic may imply overspecificity, an assertive and sometimes an arrogant attitude that discourages if it does not inhibit debate (Mr. Rayce made no pretence to book-learning. . . . But on matters of art he was dogmatic and explicit, prepared to justify his opinions—Wharton).

Doctrinaire usually implies a dogmatic disposition; it typically suggests an opposition to practical, for it emphasizes a disposition to be guided by one’s theories or the doctrines of one’s school of thought in teaching, in framing laws, or in policies or decisions, especially those affecting others (the rationalist mind . . . is of a doctrinaire and authoritative complexion: the phrase “must be” is ever on its lips—James). The most profound contribution to political thought in America, namely, the Federalist, was not the work of doctrinaire thinkers but of men of affairs—Frankfurter). Oracular, with its implied reference to an ancient oracle, suggests the possession of hidden knowledge and the manner of one who delivers his opinions or views in cryptic phrases or with pompous dogmatism (his habit of oracular utterance when and possibly whenever he had a conviction—Pound).

Ana masterful, domineering, imperative, imperious, peremptory: despotic, tyrannical, arbitrary, autocratic, absolute.

diction language, vocabulary, phraseology, phrasing, style Ana speech, tongue, idiom, language: enunciation, pronunciation, articulation (see corresponding verbs at articulate)

dido prank, caper, antic, monkeyshine differ, vary, disagree, dissent mean to be unlike or out of harmony. Differ stresses the fact of unlikeness in kind or nature or in opinion but does not indicate except through the context the extent or degree of divergence (the houses in the row differ only in small details) (minds differ, as rivers differ—Macaoaly). They differed sharply about the college to which their son should be sent. Vary (see also change) though often interchangeable with differ may call attention to readily apparent differences and sometimes suggests a range of differences. The term commonly introduces a statement of the points, the ways, or the degree in which the things or the persons under discussion differ (the two editions vary only in small particulars) (the northern and southern races vary chiefly in size) (the strength and direction of sea currents vary considerably at different times of the year—Dowdeswell). Disagree emphasizes lack of agreement and not only may imply differences between things or variance between persons or opinions, but often may suggest incompatibility, unfitness, or disharmony (the two accounts disagree in important details) (the verb should not disagree with the subject noun either in person or number) (who shall decide when Doctors disagree—Pope) (one can disagree with his views, but one can’t refuse them—Henry Miller). Of the words here compared only disagree is used in reference to lack of harmony between a thing and a person that results in mental or physical disorder of the latter (the climate disagreed with him) (fried foods disagree with many people). Dissent denotes a difference in opinion between persons or groups; it may imply refusal to assent to or the withholding of consent from something that is proposed or offered (dissenting to the most outrageous invasion of private right ever set forth as a decision of the court—Boyd) (it has . . . taken on the worst intolerance of ignorance and stupidity . . . . All who dissent from its orthodox doctrines are scoundrels—Mencken) or it may imply the expression of a difference in opinion from a person or persons holding an opposite view (a great number of people in England would dissent from that judgment—C. L. R. James).

Ana diverge, deviate, depart (see swerve)

Ant agree

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.
difference

1. unlikeness, dissimilarity, divergence, diversity, distinction
2. discrepancy, inconsistency, inconsonance, discordance (see corresponding adjectives at INCONSONANT); variation, modification (see under CHANGE vb); disparity, diversity (see corresponding adjectives at DIFFERENT)

Ant resemblance — Con similarity, likeness, similitude, analogy, affinity

2. discord, strife, conflict, contention, dissension, variance

distinguish, discriminate, demarcate

Hard, arduous

Difficulty, hardship, rigor

Difficulty, hardship, rigor, vicissitude are synonyms only

*Difficulty, the most widely applicable of these terms, applies to a hardship that is imposed upon one, sometimes by oneself (as through asceticism or ambition) but more often by an austere religion, a tyrannical government or other power, a trying climate, or an extremely exacting enterprise or undertaking (to undergo much pain, many hardships, and other rigors—Burnett)

The rigors of an explorer’s life (a vast deal of sympathy has been lavished upon the Puritan settlers because of the rigors of their religion—Repperd)

An European custom which nowhere survived the rigors of the frontier—W. P. Webb

The rigors of an arctic winter (Vicissitude (see also CHANGE n 2) applies to a difficulty or hardship incident to a way of life especially as it is subjected to extraneous influences, to a career, or to a course of action; it usually suggests reference to something that demands effort and endurance if it is to be overcome (the fierce vicissitudes of earthly combat—Leckey)

It is the work he performed during these years, often in illness, danger, and vicissitudes, that should earn him particular gratitude from his Church—T. S. Eliot (the dwarfing vicissitudes of poverty—Hackett)

Ana *obstacle, impediment, snag, obstruction: predicament, dilemma, quandary, plight, scrape, fix, jam, pickle: pinch, strait, emergency, exigency, pass (see JUNCTURE)

dig vb

Dig, delve, spade, grub, excavate mean to use a spade to dig a burrow in the field) or a bringing to the surface of something which demands effort and endurance if it is to be overcome (the work he performed during these years, often in illness, danger, and vicissitudes, that should earn him particular gratitude from his Church—T. S. Eliot)
the reading room of the British Museum—Rose Macaulay> Spade is often interchangeable with dig but even more frequently than the latter is applied to a turning of the earth in manual (as opposed to mechanical) preparation of soil for planting <spade up a garden> <she had spaded a pit in the backyard for barbecues—Joseph Mitchell> <has spent her writing career (28 years, eleven books) spading up the New England past—Time> Grub may denote a digging and turning of soil but more often implies a clearing of soil by digging out something (as roots, stumps, and stones); often it suggests the hard, dirty, exhausting nature of such work and with this feeling may be used of various tasks, labors, or duties <women and children helped to grub the land—Collier> <surviving on roots he grabbed from the soil> <shuffled among the ruins of their cities, and grabbed in the countryside for food and fuel—The Lamp> <fortunes were made in a day of grubbing and lost in a night of faro or red dog—Bilington> In some cases grub reflects the disorder of the land-clearing process and denotes a haphazard and laborious rummaging <I grabbed in the dark alone, groping among shoes and boots> . . . painfully garnering the scattered pictures—Phelan> <grubbers . . . grubbing about among a pile of human refuse—Times Lit. Sup.> <grubbing around cemeteries> Excavate suggests making a hollow in or through something (as the ground, a mass of rock, or a mountainside) by or as if by means of a spade or shovel or a machine which performs the operations of spading and shoveling <excavate the ground for a cellar> <excavate a tomb> <excavate a tunnel> <archaeologists engaged in excavating the site of an ancient city> Ana pierce, penetrate, probe, *enter digest n *compendium, syllabus, pandect, survey, sketch, précis, aperçu

Ana collection, assemblage, gathering (see under GATHER-ER): *abridgment, conspectus, abstract, brief, synopsis, epitome

digit n *number, numeral, figure, integer dignify, ennable, honor, glorify mean to invest a person or thing with something that elevates or uplifts his or its character or raises him or it in human estimation. Dignify distinctively implies the addition of something that adds to the worth of a person or thing or, more often, to the estimation in which he or it is held or should be held <from lowest place when virtuous things proceed, the place is dignified by the doer's deed—Shak.> <this true, no turbots dignify my boards, but gudgeons, flounders, what my Thames affords—Pope> <dignify crude verses by calling them poetry> (this "tea-party" diplomacy, if it may be dignified with that name—Salisbury) Ennoble, though closely akin to dignify, does not so much suggest an added grace or dignity as a grace or dignity that comes as a natural result; literally it denotes a raising to the nobility <the activities of the merely rich or the merely ennobled—Huxley> but typically it implies a raising in moral character or in moral esteem or in qualities that rid the person or thing of all suspicion of pettiness, mean-ness, or selfishness and exalt him or it above ordinary status <the Christian religion ennobled the mind—Berkeley>  Honor may imply the giving of reverence or of deep respect to that to which it is due <honour thy father and thy mother—Exod 20:12> <honour a man for his steadfastness of principle> It may imply also the giving of something to a person or sometimes a thing that increases the distinction or the esteem in which he or it is held: in neither sense, however, is there any suggestion of an effect that touches the one honored except in externals

<our feast shall be much honored in your marriage—Shak.> <several soldiers were honored by the president when he presented them with medals for bravery> <we that had loved him so, followed him, honored him—Browning> Glorify rarely except in religious use carries its basic implication of exalting a man to heavenly beatitude or of advancing the glory of God through prayer or good works <Jesus was not yet glorified—Jn 7:39> but it retains the suggestions of casting a transfiguring light upon or of honoring in such a way as to increase a person's or thing's glory. In general, it implies investing with a splendor or with a glory that lifts above the ugly, the commonplace, the ordinary, or, often, the true <in old days it was possible to glorify it [war] as a school of chivalry, courage, and self-sacrifice—Inge> <poetical truth becoming here . . . the servant of common honesty . . . so far from being cramped and degraded, is enlarged and glorified—Day Lewis> <knowing that the talent that had made them rich is but a secondary talent . . . they employ men to glorify it—Anderson> Ana elevate, raise, *lift: *exalt, magnify, aggrandize: heighten, enhance, *intensify

Con disparage, depreciate, belittle, minimize, detract, *decry, derogate: demean, *abase, debase dignity 1 *decoration, decency, propriety, etiquette

Ana *excellence, virtue, merit, perfection; nobleness or morality, ethicalness or ethics (see corresponding adjectives at BEAUTIFUL): grandness or grandeur, magnificence, stateliness, nobleness or nobility, majesty, augustness (see corresponding adjectives at GRAND digress deviate, diverge, depart, *swerve, veer

Ana *wander, stray

digression, episode, excursus, divagation are comparable when they denote a departure from the main course of development, especially of a narrative, a drama, or an exposition. Digression applies to a deviation, especially if at the expense of unity of effect, from the main subject of a discourse; it may or may not suggest intention or design <in this long digression which I was accidentally led into—Sterne>

Episode (see also OCCURRENCE) usually applies to an incidental narrative which, though separable from the main subject, arises naturally from it; sometimes an episode is definitely a purposeful digression (as for giving variety to the narration, heightening the illusion of reality, or elucidating a motive); thus, in Paradise Lost Raphael's account of the war in heaven is in this sense an episode because it breaks the chronological order of the poem and reverts to events which occurred prior to those told in the first book <descriptive poetry . . . may be interspersed with dramatic episodes—Alexander> Episode is used not only of a literary work but of other art forms or of life in reference to something that seems apart from the main subject or course of a thing <delight in the virginal beauty of fresh blossoms, in the dewy green of water-meadows . . . is evident in numberless pictures of the earlier schools of Europe; but there these amenities of nature are but an episode—Binyon> <Miss Dix's biographer . . . considers her war work an episode, not equal in quality to her lifework—Baker> Excursus applies to an avowed and usually formal digression elucidating at some length an incidental point <this started an ethnological excursus on swineherds, and drew from Pinecoffin long tables showing the proportion per thousand of the caste in the Derajat>
—Kipling> Divagation is often used in preference to digression when aimless wandering from the main course or inattentiveness to logic is implied (<Froissart’s style of poetry invites the widest . . . liberty of divagation, of dragging in anything that really interested him—Saintsbury>) (<the author of it would need to keep an extremely clear head, reject stuffing and divagation—Swinnerton>)

dilapidate *ruin, wreck
Ana *decay, disintegrate, crumble, decompose: *neglect, ignore, disregard, forget, slight, overlook Con repair, rebuild, *mend: *renew, restore, renovate, rejuvenate dilapidated *shabby, dingy, faded, seedy, threadbare Ana damaged, injured, impaired, marred (see INJURE): ruined, wrecked (see RUIN vb) dilate 1 *discourse, expatiate, descant Ana *relate, recount, rehearse, recite, narrate, describe: expound, *explain: *discuss, argue 2 *expand, distend, swell, amplify, inflate Ana enlarge, *increase, augment: *extend, protract, prolong, lengthen: widen, broaden (see corresponding adjectives at BROAD) Ant constrict: circumscribe: attenuate —Con *contract, shrink, compress, condense dilatory *slow, laggard, deliberate, leisurely Ana procrastinating, delaying, dawdling (see DELAY): *negligent, neglectful, lax, slack, remiss Ant diligent —Con *busy, assiduous, industrious: *quick, prompt, ready dilemma *predicament, quandary, plight, scrape, fix, jam, pickle Ana perplexity, bewilderment, mystification (see corresponding verbs at PUZZLE): *difficulty, vicissitude dilettante 1 *amateur, dabbler, tyro Con artist, *expert, adept 2 *aesthete, connoisseur Con *artist, artificer, architect: *writer, composer, author: craftsman, workman (see WORKER) diligent assiduous, sedulous, industrious, *busy Ana persevering, persisting or persistent (see corresponding verbs at PERSEVERE): *indefatigable, tireless, untiring, unwearied, unflagging Ant dilatory —Con *slow, laggard, deliberate, leisurely: desultory, casual, happy-go-lucky (see RANDOM) dilute vb attenuate, *thin, rarely Ana temper, *moderate, qualify: *weaken, enfeeble:*liquefy, deliquesce: *adulterate, sophisticate Ant condense: concentrate (in chemistry, especially in past participial form) dim adj dusky, *dark, obscure, murky, gloomy Ant bright: distinct —Con brilliant, radiant, luminous, effulgent (see BRIGHT): manifest, patent, *evident, plain, clear dim vb *obscure, bedim, darken, eclipse, cloud, becloud, fog, befog, obfuscate Ana screen, conceal, *hide: cloak, mask, camouflage, *disguise Ant illustrate dimensions extent, *size, area, magnitude, volume diminish reduce, *decrease, lessen, abate, dwindle Ana wane, ebb, *abate, subside: *moderate, temper: lighten, alleviate, mitigate (see RELIEVE): attenuate, extenuate (see THIN) Con enlarge, augment, *increase: *extend: *intensify, enhance, heighten, aggravate diminutive adj little, *small, wee, tiny, minute, miniture Con *large, big, great: enormous, immense, *huge, vast, colossal, mammoth

Ana analogous words
Ant antonyms
Con contrasted words
See also explanatory notes facing page 1

din n 1 Din, uproar, pandemonium, hulla-baloo, babel, hub-bub, clamor, racket mean a disturbing or confusing wave of sound or a scene or situation marked by such a welter of sounds. Din emphasizes the distress suffered by the ears and the completely distracting effect of the noise as a whole; it often suggests prolonged and deadening clangor or insistent ear-splitting metallic sounds (see the din of a machine shop) (<escape the din of heavy traffic> (<the din of a New Year’s Eve party>) (<think you a little din can daunt mine ears? . . . Have I not heard great ord-ine in the field, and heaven’s artillery thunder in the skies?—Shak>) (<the general had forbidden the tolling of funeral bells so that the incessant mournful din might not pound perpetually at our ears—Kenneth Roberts>)

Uproar and pandemonium both imply tumult or wild disorder, typically of a crowd of persons but often among wild animals or in the elements; when the reference is to men, uproar usually suggests the sound of a multi-tude vociferously, sometimes riotously, protesting, arguing, or defying and pandemonium, the din produced when a group or crowd usually under discipline breaks bounds and runs riot or becomes uncontrollably boister-ous (<often throw the parliamentary debates into an uproar—Blanshard>) (<pandemonium followed the announce-ment of the armistice>) (<draw not the sword; 'twould make an uproar. Duke, you would not hear the end of—Keats>) (<the modern parent . . . does not want a ficitious Sabbath calm while he is watching, succeeded by pandemonium as soon as he turns his back—Russell>)

Hulla-baloo is often interchangeable with din or uproar especially in a construction following make, but it seldom carries the suggestions of piercing, ear-splitting noise or of vociferation and turmoil which are respectively so strong in din and uproar. When it refers to a welter of sounds, it suggests great excitement and an interruption of peace or quiet (<the hulla-baloo was made by hunters and hounds in the chase>) (<the children are making a great hulla-baloo at their party>) When it refers to a situation, it suggests a storm of protest, an outburst of passion or wrath, or a torrent of comment or sensational gossip (<the current political hulla-baloo—New Republic>) (<the project was not again brought before the public until the hulla-baloo about it had died down>) (<the music stopped and the familiar hulla-baloo was reestablished in the room—Stafford>)

Babel stresses the confusion of sounds that results from a mingling of languages and vocal qualities and the seeming meaningless or purposeless quality of the sound (<young and old, fat and thin, all laughed and shouted in a babel of tongues—Bambrick>) (<must we fall into the din of heavy traffic> (<must we fall into the din of heavy traffic> (<must we fall into the din of heavy traffic>) (<the modern parent . . . does not want a fictitious Sabbath calm while he is watching, succeeded by pandemonium as soon as he turns his back—Russell>)

Hullabaloo is often interchangeable with din or uproar especially in a construction following make, but it seldom carries the suggestions of piercing, ear-splitting noise or of vociferation and turmoil which are respectively so strong in din and uproar. When it refers to a welter of sounds, it suggests great excitement and an interruption of peace or quiet (<the hulla-baloo was made by hunters and hounds in the chase>) (<the children are making a great hulla-baloo at their party>) When it refers to a situation, it suggests a storm of protest, an outburst of passion or wrath, or a torrent of comment or sensational gossip (<the current political hulla-baloo—New Republic>) (<the project was not again brought before the public until the hulla-baloo about it had died down>) (<the music stopped and the familiar hulla-baloo was reestablished in the room—Stafford>)

Babel stresses the confusion of sounds that results from a mingling of languages and vocal qualities and the seeming meaningless or purposeless quality of the sound (<young and old, fat and thin, all laughed and shouted in a babel of tongues—Bambrick>) (<must we fall into the jabber and babel of discord—Sir Winston Churchill>)

Hubbub denotes the confusing mixture of sounds charac-teristic of activities and business; it implies incessant movement or bustle rather than turmoil () (<strollers on the common could hear, at certain hours, a hubbub of voices and racing footsteps from within the boundary wall—Shaw>)<Clamor and racket, like din, stress the psychologi-cal effect of noises more than their origin or character. They usually imply annoyance or disturbance rather than distress and distraction and are applicable to any combina-tion of sounds or any scene that strikes one as excessively or inordinately noisy (see CLAMOR)>) dip vb 1 Dip, immerse, submerge, duck, souse, dunk are comparable when meaning to plunge a person or thing into or as if into liquid. Dip implies a momentary or partial plunging into a liquid or a slight or cursory entrance into a subject (the priest shall dip his finger in the blood—Lev 4:6) (dip a dress in cleansing fluid) (dip into a book) (she had dipped in the wells of bliss—Keats) (to share our marriage—father's club gave a banquet at the hotel—Britannia & Eve) (her [a boat] out—Dana) Scoop, ladle, spoon throw the emphasis on the kind of implement employed in an operation consisting usually of dipping, conveying, and pouring. Scoop suggests a shovellike implement, either a small kitchen utensil for dipping out loose dry material (as flour, sugar, or coffee beans) or for gouging out pieces of a soft substance (as cheese) or a much larger and heavier implement used in digging or excavating operations or in the removal of a heap of things from one place to another (scoop out three cups of sugar) (scoop up the catch of fish into barrels) (scooping gravel from the pit into waiting trucks) Ladle implies the use of a ladle, or long-handled implement with a bowl-shaped end and often a pouring lip; it is especially used of substances which are liable to be spilled (ladle soup into bowls) (ladle out the punch) The term sometimes implies the use of a mechanical device for removing and conveying liquid (as molten metal) from one container to another. Spoon implies the use of a spoon in lifting and depositing something (as food or medicine) (the girl who spoons out vegetables in the cafeteria) (slowly spooning up the hot soup) Dish implies transference to the individual plate or dish of a portion of food (as by ladling or spooning) (dish out the vegetables) (dish up the ice cream)

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group. A dipper is a spoon or ladle with a narrow end used for sifting or for scooping fine substances which are liable to be spilled. *Souse implies the use of a spoon in lifting and depositing something (as food or medicine) (the girl who spoons out vegetables in the cafeteria) (slowly spooning up the hot soup) Dish implies transference to the individual plate or dish of a portion of food (as by ladling or spooning) (dish out the vegetables) (dish up the ice cream)
dipsomaniac 245 dirty civil): artful, wily, guileful, crafty (see sly): tactful, posed (see corresponding nouns at tact) dipsomaniac alcoholic, inebriate, *drunkard, sot, soak, toper, tosspot, tippler direct vb 1 Direct, address, devote, apply are comparable direct, address, devote, apply are comparable dipsomaniac alcoholic, inebriate, *drunkard, sot, soak, toper, tosspot, tippler
direct vb 1 Direct, address, devote, apply are comparable

Dirty, filthy, foul, nasty, squalid mean conspicuously or unpleasantly offensive or noxious. Dirty suggests a condition in which dirt or filth is deposited, as in people and articles that are stained or defiled by dirt or blood. Filthy suggests a condition in which dirt or filth is deposited, as in people and articles that are stained or defiled by dirt or blood. Foul suggests a condition in which a foul or noxious substance is emitted or is in a container, as in a septic tank or a bathroom.

Con: immaculate, spotless, unsoiled, untrammeled, unvarnished.
dirty

fall) ⟨a nasty temper⟩ ⟨be nasty to someone⟩ Squalid adds to the idea of dirtiness or filth that of extreme slovenliness or neglect ⟨squalid poverty⟩ ⟨the East, so squalid and splendid, so pestilent and so poetic—Wharton⟩

All of these terms may imply moral uncleanness or base-ness or obscenity. Dirty, however, stresses meanness or despicability ⟨the creature's at his dirty work again—PoPe⟩ Filthy and foul imply disgusting obscenity, filthy stressing the presence of obscenity and foul, its ugliness ⟨filthy talk⟩ ⟨a foul jest⟩ Nasty implies a peculiarly offensive unpleasantness ⟨a nasty mind⟩ ⟨he hated it as a gentleman hates to hear a nasty story—E. E. Hale⟩ ⟨squadroned all their virile energy on greasy slave girls and nasty Asiatic-Greek prostitutes—Graves⟩ Squalid implies sordidness as well as baseness ⟨the squalid scenes and situations through which Thackeray portrays the malignant motives and unclean soul of Becky Sharp—Eliot⟩ The first four terms are used also of weather, meaning the opposite of clear and thereby implying rainy, snowy, stormy, or foggy weather.

Ant clean dirty vb *soil, sully, tarnish, foul, befoul, smear, besmirch, grime, begrime Ana pollute, defile, *contaminate; *spot, satter disability *inability disable *cripple, undermine, *weaken, enfeeble, debilitate, sap Ana *injure, damage, harm, hurt, impair, mar, spoil; *maim, mutilate, mangle, batter; *ruin, wreck Ant rehabilitate (a disabled person) disabuse *rid, clear, unburden, purge Ana *free, liberate, release: enlighten, *illuminate Con mislead, delude, *deceive: *dupe, gull disadvantage n Disadvantage, detriment, handicap, drawback mean something which interferes with the success or well-being of a person or thing. Disadvantage often implies an act, circumstance, or condition which threatens to affect or does actually affect a person or thing unfavorably or injuriously ⟨the best-known area of disadvantage is the transitional zone, or deteriorated area, adjacent to the main business district of growing American cities—Carr⟩ It may therefore suggest a mere deprival of advantage ⟨working at a disadvantage because the narrow space prevented complete freedom of movement⟩ ⟨I was brought here under the disadvantage of being unknown by sight to any of you—Burke⟩ or, more positively, an appreciable loss or injury ⟨his attempts to reach his enemy's face were greatly to the disadvantage of his own—Shaw⟩ ⟨spread rumors to a candidate's disadvantage⟩ Detriment usually implies a suffering of harm or a sustaining of damage or a cause of harm or damage but carries no direct indication of the extent of actual or probable harm or damage; it is therefore often used in the negative phrase "without detriment" assuring safety with regard either to the past or to the future ⟨the physiological machinery of the body is so adjusted that great variations of atmospheric temperature can be supported without detriment—Heiser⟩ ⟨rotation of farm crops .... may very well be a benefit rather than a drawback—Furnas⟩ ⟨it is not unfashionable to pit one form against another—holding up the naturalistic to the disadvantage of the epic .... the fantastic to the detriment of the naturalistic—Galsworthy⟩ Handicap retains a suggestion of its application to a competitive struggle (see advantage) but greatly extends that application to include various struggles into which an ordinary individual may be pushed by inclination or circumstances; it also refers to a disadvantage under which the person so placed must live or work (his lame-

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.
disaster, calamity, catastrophe, cataclysm are comparable when they denote an event or situation that is regarded as a terrible misfortune. A disaster is an unforeseen mishance or misadventure (as a shipwreck, a serious railroad accident, or the failure of a great enterprise) which happens either through culpable lack of foresight or through adverse external agency and brings with it destruction (as of life and property) or ruin (as of projects, careers, or great hopes) <such a war would be the final and supreme disaster to the world—MacLeish> Calamity is a grievous misfortune, particularly one which involves a great or far-reaching personal or public loss or which produces profound, often widespread distress; thus, the rout at Bull Run was a disaster for the North but the assassination of President Lincoln was a calamity; the wreck of the Don Juan was a disaster and, as involving the loss of Shelley, it was a calamity <we have heard of his decision . . . It is a disaster—for me a calamity—Galworthy> <Hamlet's bloody stage is now our world, and we are beginning to trace our own calamity back to its sources—Battenhouse> Catastrophe is used of a disastrous conclusion; it often emphasizes the idea of finality <the captain's folly hastened the catastrophe> <what had become of them [the inhabitants of a deserted village]? What catastrophe had overwhelmed them?—Cather> Cataclysm is often used of an event or situation that brings with it an overwhelming of the old order or a violent social or political upheaval <in the general upheaval of doctrine . . . during the Reformation cataclysm—Blunt>  Ana mishap, accident, casualty: adversity, misfortune, mischance disastrous *unlucky, ill-starred, ill-fated, unfortunate, calamitous, luckless, hapless Ana malign, sinister, baleful: unpropitious, inauspicious, ominous, portentous, fateful dissavow *disclaim, repudiate, disown, disallow Ana *deny, gainsay, traverse: disapprove, deprecate: reject, refuse (see decline) Anc avow —Con *maintain, assert, justify: express, voice: declare, proclaim disbark shut out, eliminate, rule out, suspend, debar, novel: *exclude, blackball disbelief *unbelief, incredulity Ana atheism, deism (compare nouns at atheist): rejection, repudiation, spurning (see corresponding verbs at decline) Anc belief —Con faith, credence, credit (see belief) disburse *spend, expend Ana *distribute, dispense: apportion, *allot, allocate: pay discard vb Discard, cast, shed, molten, slough, scrap, junk meant to get rid of as of no further use, value, or service. Discard literally denotes the getting rid of a card from one's hand in a card game, usually because they are worthless or can be replaced by better cards; in its more common general sense, it implies a getting rid of something which one can no longer use to advantage or which has become a burden, an annoyance, or an interference <he sorted and re-sorted his cargo, always finding a more necessary article for which a less necessary had to be discarded—Cather> <modern research, which discards obsolete hypotheses without scruple or sentiment—Inge> <in portrait painting, where a painter discards many trivial points of exactness, in order to heighten the truth of a few fundamentals—Montague> Cast (see also throw) may imply a seasonal process of discarding (as the throwing off of skin by a reptile) <creatures that cast their skin are the snake, the viper—Bacon> Especially when followed by off, away, or out, it more frequently implies a discarding, a rejection, a discharging, or a repudiation <his wife was casting him off, half regretfully, but relentlessly—D. H. Lawrence> <an Englishman like an Ethiopian cannot change his skin any more than a leopard can cast off his spots—Cloete> Shed is the ordinary, general term for the seasonal or periodic casting of skin, hair, antlers, or leaves <deciduous trees shed their leaves every autumn> <male deer shed their antlers annually> The term is used also to imply a throwing off or discarding of anything that is a burden to carry, that represents a past stage in one's development, or that is no longer useful or comfortable <found it warm enough to shed his overcoat> <statesmen may try to shed their responsibility by treating the situation as a natural phenomenon—Hobson> <James, who was acquiring new subtleties, complexities, and comprehensions, and shedding crudities—Rose Macaulay> Molt is the specific term for the periodic shedding of feathers, skin, shells, hair, or horns by various animals and the growth of new corresponding parts. It often suggests a process of a change in plumage including the shedding of feathers and their renewal <the eagle when he molts is sickly—Carlyle> <while hens are molting they do not lay eggs> In general use molt even more often than shed implies change, flux, or transition <England is molting. Opinions . . . are . . . in a state of flux—Goldwin Smith> <belief . . . that society can molt its outer covering and become new in shape and spirit—J. D. Hart> Slough implies the shedding of tissue (as the skin by a reptile or, especially in intransitive use, of necrotic or cicatricial tissue from the surface of a sore or wound) <the snake often sloughs its skin in mid-September> <the scab is sloughing off from the sore> The term is also common in the sense of to discard or throw off what has become objectionable, burdensome, or useless <slough a bad habit> <this talented author has sloughed off most of her more irritating sentimentalities—Times Lit. Sup.> <as though her gaunt and worldly air had been only a mockery she began to slough it off—Bromfield> The last two words, scrap and junk, have literal reference to the throwing away of fragments, parts, or pieces that are useless to the owner or can no longer be used by him. Scrap suggests a discarding as rubbish or refuse, but it may carry an implication of some use to another (as a processor or a dealer in parts or accessories) <scrap out-of-date machinery> <scrap a plan as impractical> <all the old ideas of combat have to be scrapped> <the English language that Shakespeare was born to had used up and scrapped a good deal of the English of Chaucer—Montague> Junk differs little from scrap except in stressing a throwing away and in carrying little implication of value to a second-hand dealer or to a processor of waste <junk all their old furniture before moving into their new home> <in its astonishing quest for perfection, can junk an entire system of ideas almost overnight—Davidson> Ana abandon, forsake, desert: reject, repudiate, spurn (see decline vb): dismiss, eject, out Con *adopt, embrace, espouse: utilize, employ, *use: retain, *keep, hold, hold back discern perceive, descry, observe, notice, remark, note, esp, behold, *see, view, survey, contemplate Ana *discover, ascertain: divine, apprehend, anticipate, *foresee: pierce, penetrate, probe (see enter) discrepancy, discrimination, perception, penetration, insight, acumen are comparable when they denote keen intellectual vision. All imply power to see below the surface and to understand what is not evident to the average mind. Discernment stresses accuracy (as in reading character or motives or in appreciation of art) (she had not had the discernment to discover the caliber of this young favorite—Bellow). Discrimination emphasizes the power to distinguish and select the excellent, the appropriate, or the true (there was a time when schools attempted . . . to cultivate discrimination and to furnish the material on which selection can be founded—Grandgent) (nobody should reproach them for reading indiscriminately. Only by so doing can they learn discrimination—Times Lit. Sup.). Perception implies quick discernment and delicate feeling (of a temperament to feel keenly the presence of subtleties; a man of clumsier perceptions would not have felt as he did—George Eliot) (persecutors were ordinary, reasonably well-intentioned people lacking in keen perception—Sykes). Penetration implies a searching mind and power to enter deeply into something beyond the reach of the senses (it did not require any great penetration to discover that what they wished was that their letters should be as kind as was consistent with proper maidenly pride—De Quincey) (good little novels, full of Gallic irony and penetration—Time). Insight emphasizes depth of discernment or of sympathetic understanding (throughout the years he has used . . . techniques or insights provided by abstract art, to express better his statements about men and the world—Current Biog.). Acumen suggests characteristic penetration and keenness and soundness of judgment (a paradox which your natural acumen, sharpened by habits of logical attention, will enable you to reconcile in a moment—Cowper).

Ana intuition, understanding, *reason: perspicaciousness or perspicacity, sagaciousness or sagacity, shrewdness, astuteness (see corresponding adjectives at shrewd). Con stupidity, slowness, dullness, density, crassness (see corresponding adjectives at stupid): blindness (see corresponding adjective blind).

discharge vb 1 *free, release, liberate, deliver, emancipate, manumit, enfranchise

Ana *eject, expel, oust, dismiss: eliminate, *exclude

2 *dismiss, cashier, drop, sack, fire, bounce

Ana *displace, supplant, supersede, *replace

3 *perform, execute, accomplish, achieve, effect, fulfill

Ana *finish, complete, *close, end, terminate disciple adherent, *follower, henchman, satellite, sectary, partisan

Ana votary, devotee (see addict n): *enthusiast, zealot, fanatic discipline n *morale, esprit de corps

Ana self-control, self-command (see base words at power): self-confidence, self-possession (see confidence): nerving, steeling (see encourage).

Ant anxiety, lawlessness—Con enervation (see corresponding verb at unnerve): disorder, disorder (see corresponding verbs at disorder).

discipline vb 1 train, educate, *teach, instruct, school

Ana lead, *guide: control, manage, direct, *conduct: drill, exercise, *practice

2 *punish, chastise, castigate, chasten, correct

Ana subdue, overcome, reduce, subjugate (see conquer): *restrain, curb, bridge, check, inhibit disclaim, disavow, repudiate, disown, disallow mean to refuse to admit, accept, or approve. Disclaim implies refusal to accept a claim, but it may apply specifically to a legal claim one has upon property or to a title (the son disclaimed all right to his father's small estate) or to the claim or imputation of something evil made by another to one's chagrin or dismay (this court disclaims all pretensions to such a power—John Marshall) (i entirely disclaim the hatred and hostility to Turks . . . which you ascribe to me—Gladstone) or, even more frequently, to the implied or expressed praise of oneself by another (Mark was embarrassed by the Rector's talking like this; but if he disclaimed the virtues attributed to him he should . . . give an impression of false modesty—Mackenzie). Disavow often comes close to disclaim in meaning, but it much less often implies reference to a legal claim and fastens the attention upon a vigorous denial either of personal responsibility for something or personal acceptance or approval of something (Melford never disavowed these papers—Macaulay) (the boys disavowed any intention to set the stable on fire) (this Court always had disavowed the right to intrude its judgment upon questions of policy or morals—Justice Holmes). Repudiate originally applied to a casting away of one's wife (see also repudiate under decline); it may also imply a casting off or a denial of responsibility for something that has been previously acknowledged, recognized, or accepted (they repudiated their heresies) (the state has repudiated its debts) (a law which everyone recognizes in fact, though everyone repudiates it in theory—Dickinson) (the liberal mind . . . had repudiated the doctrine of original sin—Straight). Disown usually stresses a repudiation or renunciation and often applies to something that has stood in close relationship to the person disowning; it may specifically imply disinheritance or abjuration (disowned his son) (disowned his allegiance to the country of his birth) (the prince . . . was . . . required to disown . . . the obligations contracted in his name—Froude). Disallow implies the withholding of sanction or approval and sometimes suggests complete rejection or condemnation (disallowed the jockey's claim of a foul) (disallow a bill for the entertainment of the officers) (it was known that the most eminent of those who professed his own principles, publicly disallowed his proceedings—Swift) (your claim upon her hand is already disallowed—G. P. R. James).

Ana *deny, gainsay, traverse, contradict: reject, refuse, spurn (see decline); deprecate (see disapprove): belittle, minimize, disparage (see decry).

Ant claim

disclose *reveal, divulge, tell, discover, betray

Ana confess, admit, own, *acknowledge, avow: *declare, proclaim, announce, publish, broadcast, advertise

Con conceal, *hide: cloak, mask, disseble, *disguise, camouflage discomfit disconcert, *embarrass, faze, abash, rattle

Ana *annoy, vex, irk, bother: perturb, *discompose, disturb, *discompose:

2 *disturb, perturb, upset, fluster, flurry, *discompose: check, *arrest, interrupt discommodo inconvenience, trouble

Ana disturb, perturb, upset, fluster, flurry, *discompose: vex, irk, bother (see annoy).

discompose, disquiet, disturb, perturb, agitate, upset, fluster, flurry are comparable when they mean to excite one so as to destroy one's capacity for clear or collected thought or prompt action. Discompose is sometimes only slightly more suggestive of mental confusion than disconcert or discomfit; usually, however, it implies greater emotional stress and an actual loss of self-control or self-confidence (he was still discomposed by the girl's bitter and sudden retort. It had cast a gloom over him—Joyce). Disquiet stresses the loss, not of composure, but of something deeper (as one's sense of security or of well-being or one's peace of mind) (why art thou cast down, O my soul? and why art thou disquieted within me?—Ps 42:11) (he was indubitably not happy at bottom, restless and disquiet. his disquietude sometimes amounting to agony—Arnold) why should we disquiet ourselves in vain in the attempt to direct our destiny—Crothers Disturb, unlike the preceding words, carries no implication of a loss of one’s balance or of an excess of emotion; usually it implies marked interference with one’s mental processes (as by worry, perplexity, disappointment, or interruption) (profundely disturbed) by the prospective dissolution of a bond which dated from the seventies—Bennett} no thing is more disturbing than the upsetting of a preconceived idea—Conrad Perturb implies deep disturbance and unset tlement of mind; it usually connotes a cause for disquiet or alarm (in this perturbed state of mind, with thoughts that could rest on nothing, she walked on—Austen) (perturbed by excursions into verbal coquetry, and later into political arguments—Hillyer) Agitate emphasizes the loss of calmness and self-control and implies obvious signs of nervous or emotional excitement. It does not, however, always suggest distress of mind or a cause of worry (so agitated that she was incoherent—Deland) (growing more and more irritated, more and more agitated—Woolf) (it was a happiness that agitated rather than soothed her—Crothers) Upset, like agitate, implies a nervous reaction, but it usually presupposes a cause that brings disappointment or distress or sorrow (they wouldn’t have believed they could be so upset by a hurt woodpecker—Cather) (what upset me in the . . . trial was not the conviction, but the methods of the defense—Laski) Fluster may carry a suggestion of the excitement and confusion induced by drinking intoxicants (flustered with new wine—Tennyson) but it usually suggests the agitation, bewilderment, and sometimes fright induced by sudden and often unexpected demands, commands, needs, or crises (the aged housekeeper was no less flustered and hurried in obeying the numerous . . . commands of her mistress—Scott) Flurry suggests the excitement, commotion, and confusion induced by great haste or alarm (they reached the station, hot and flurried, just as the train pulled out) (thoughts, with their attendant visions, which . . . flurried her too much to leave her any power of observation—Austen) (he recognized her and sat down immediately, flurried and confused by his display of excitement—O’Flaherty) Ana discomfit, disconcert, racket, faze, *embarrass: vex, irk, bother, *annoy: *worry, harass, plague, pester Con appease, *pacify, conciliate, mollify, placate, propitiate disconcert racket, faze, discomfit, *embarrass, abash Ana bewilder, nonplus, perplex, *puzzle: *discompose, fluster, flurry, disturb, perturb disconsolate woebegone, *downcast, dejected, depressed, dispirited Ana inconsolable, comfortless (see affirmative verbs at comfort): sorrowful, woeful (see corresponding nouns at sorrow): *melancholy, doleful Con alleviate, appease, pacify, soothe, sympathize, suit, accommodate, comfort discontinue desist, cease, *stop, quit Ana suspend, intermit, stay (see Defer): *arrest, check, interrupt Ant continue discord n Discord, strife, conflict, contention, dissension, difference, variance mean a state or condition marked by disagreement and lack of harmony or the acts or circum stances which manifest such a state or condition. Discord implies not only a want of harmony or of concord between persons or between things but also, usually, a positive clashing which manifests itself in personal relations by quarreling, factiousness, or antagonism, in relations between sounds by a resulting dissonance or unpleasant noise, and in relations between other things that are incon gruous or incompatible by creating unpleasant impressions or mental disturbance (they were firm and understanding friends. I know of but one approach to discord in their relations—Reppplier) (in this state of enlightenment there is no more discord between the will, the intellect, and the feelings, and the objects of our reverence—Inge) (the seeker after truth . . . must disclaim responsibility for the way in which his discoveries fit into the general scheme of things. For the moment they may seem to produce discord rather than harmony—Crothers Strife throws the empha sis on a struggle for superiority rather than on the incongruity or incompatibility of the persons or things that disagree. It applies chiefly to relations between persons, and when used in reference to things it is nearly always figurative. Also, the term may imply any of widely differ ent motives for the struggle (as rivalry, emulation, difference in opinion, disagreement, deep antagonism, or violent hostility) (domestic fury and fierce civil strife—Shak.) (yet live in hatred, enmity, and strife among themselves—Milton) (I strove with none, for none was worth my strife—Landor) (a face in which a strange strife of wishes, for and against, was apparent—Hardy) (the crowd swells, laughing and pushing toward the quays in friendly strife—Lowell) Conflict (see also Contest) implies a clashing and a struggle, but it stresses not the aim or end but the process, the uncertainty of the outcome, or the trials, difficulties, or torments it involves. In this sense the term may apply to actual battles or wars, but usually it applies to a mental, moral, or spiritual state of a person or group of persons or to its outward manifestations (with pale conflict of contending hopes and fears—Cowper) (no more for him life’s stormy conflicts—Whitman) (the conflict of passion, temper, or appetite with the external duties—T. S. Eliot) The term is also used in a milder sense to imply an incompatibility between or the impossibility of reconciling two things which come together at the same time or upon the one person (a conflict of engagements) (a conflict of duties) Contention may be used in place of strife in any of the senses of the latter word; more often it applies to strife that manifests itself in quarreling, disputing, or controversy; it may even be applied to a condition of affairs marked by altercations or brawls (cast out the scorners, and contention shall go out; yea, strife and reproach shall cease—Prov 22:10) (let the long contention cease! Geese are swans, and swans are geese, let them have it how they will—Arnold) (we were never friends. There was always a certain contention between us—Max Peacock) Dissension may imply discord or strife between persons or parties, but it lays greater stress on a breach between them than do any of the preceding words; thus, to say that there is dissension in a church or political party is to imply that it is broken up into contentious or discordant factions (France, torn by religious dissensions, was never a formidable opponent—Macaulay) (left the seeds of philosophic dissension vigorous in French soil—Belloch) Difference (often in the plural) and variance usually imply a clash between persons or things owing to dissimilarity in opinion, character, or nature that makes for discord or strife. The terms may also sug gest apparent or actual incompatibility or impossibility of reconciliation (nationalists have always used force to settle their differences—Fowler) (I might very possibly have quarreled and skirmished with anyone of less unvarying kindness and good temper. As it is, we have never had a word of thought of difference—Henley) (to remain at variance with his wife seemed to him . . . almost a disaster—Conrad) (I never saw a child with such an instinct for preventing variance, or so full of tact—Yonge) (sectarian variances in the town had delayed the erection of a house of worship—Amer. Guide Series: V1.

Ana

incompatibility, incongruity, inconsonance, inconsistence, uncongeniality, discrepancy (see corresponding adjectives at INCONSONANT): antagonism, hostility, *enmity, rancor, animosity, antipathy

Con

*harmony, consonance, accord

discordant

*inconsonant, incongruous, uncongenial, unsympathetic, incompatible, inconsistent, discrepant

Con

*consonant, congruous, congenial, sympathetic, compatible: harmonizing or harmonious, according or accordant, agreeing (see corresponding verbs at AGREE)

discount

*deduction, rebate, abatement

discourse

vb 1. *Discourage, dishearten, dispirit, deject mean to weaken in qualities that maintain interest, zeal, activity, or power to continue or to resist. Discourage implies not only the loss of courage and confidence but the entrance of fear and the marked diminution of all power to summon up one’s forces (the long winter and the lack of fuel discouraged the settlers) (his failure had completely discouraged his wife) Dishearten differs little from discoursed, but it stresses not so much a mood or a state of mind as a loss of heart or will to accomplish a purpose or to achieve an end (the slight response to their appeal disheartened the promoters of the fund) (his answers were at the same time so vague and equivocal, that her mother, though often disheartened, had never yet despaired of succeeding at last—Austen) Dispirit distinctively implies the loss of cheerfulness or hopefulness; it often suggests a prevailing gloom that casts a blight upon a gathering, a project, or whatever depends for its success upon the spirits of those who enter into it. It may also, more strongly than discourage, suggest the way an individual or group affects others (in quelling a local Armentian revolt he was badly wounded. Sick and dispirited, he gave up his Arabian plan—Buchan) (dispirited by their futile efforts—Grandgent) (the shabby, dispiriting spectacle of Versailles, with its base greeds and timidities—Montague) Deject, even more strongly than dispirit, implies a casting down, with resulting loss of cheerfulness or hopefulness, but, unlike dispirit, it refers usually to the individual alone (she has been much dejected lately) (nothing dejects a trader like the interruption of his profits—Johnson)

Ana

*depress, weigh: try, *afflict: vex, bother, irk (see ENCOURAGE)

Con

*depress, weigh: try, *afflict: vex, bother, irk (see ENCOURAGE)

discourse

typically economic—T. S. Eliot)

Monograph implies a learned treatise on a single topic (as a particular biological species, a clearly restricted literary genre, or an author). It typically refers to a work of this character published in a learned journal or as a pamphlet or small book (a monograph on ‘The Ballade in England’ (a monograph on the catfishes of the Great Lakes region)

Ana

paper, article, *essay: *speech, lecture, talk, sermon

discourse

vb Discourse, expatiate, dilate, dilate, dissect are comparable when meaning to talk or sometimes write more or less formally and at length upon a subject. Discourse frequently implies the manner or attitude of the lecturer, the monologist, or the preacher; it may suggest detailed or logical and sometimes profound, witty, or brilliant discussion (Jonson is a real figure—our imagination plays about him discoursing at the Mermaid, or laying down the law to Drummond of Hawthornden—T. S. Eliot) (we talk in the bosom of our family in a way different from that in which we discourse on state occasions—Lowes)

Expatiate implies ranging without restraint or wandering at will over a subject; it connotes more copiousness than discourse and often carries a hint of long-windedness (we will expatiate freely over the wide and varied field before us—Landon) (the promoter of the raffle ... was expatiating upon the value of the fabric as material for a summer dress—Hardy) (in another lecture I shall expatiate on the idea—James)

Dilate implies a discoursing that enlarges the possibilities of a subject (as by dwelling on each small detail) (she proceeded to dilate upon the transformations of Miss Nickleby—Dickens) (those joys on which Steenson dillates in that famous little essay in Virginibus Puerisque—Quiller-Couch) (he reverted to his conversation of the night before, and dilated upon the same subject with an easy mastery of his theme—Wylie)

Descant stresses free comment, but it often also connotes delight or pleasure in this free expression of one’s opinions or observations (to praise his stable, and descant upon his claret and cookery—Goldsmith) (he descanted to his heart’s content on his favorite topic of the [prize] ring—Shaw)

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.
discourteous

Ana *discuss, argue, dispute: converse, talk, *speak: lecture, harangue, orate, sermonize (see corresponding nouns at SPEECH)

discourteous impolite, uncivil, ungracious, *rude, ill-mannered

Ana brusque, curt, crusty, gruff, blunt (see BLUFF): boorish, churlish (see under BOOR)

Ant courteous —Con *civil, polite, courteously, gallant, chivalrous discover 1 *reveal, disclose, divulge, tell, betray

Ana impart, *communicate: *declare, announce, publish, advertise, proclaim

2 Discover, ascertain, determine, unearth, learn mean to find out something not previously known to one.

Discover may presuppose investigation or exploration, or it may presuppose accident, but it always implies that the thing existed, either actually or potentially, in fact or in principle but had not been hitherto seen or known or brought into view, action, use, or actual existence (discover an island) (discover a new writer) (discover uses for a weed) (discover the laws of heredity) (those rules of old discovered, not devised—Pope) (the historian of our times . . . will surely discover that the word reality is of central importance in his understanding of us—Trilling) (he was fifteen and beginning to become solid. This fall he'd discovered football—La Farge) Ascertain seldom if ever implies accidental discovery; it usually presupposes an awareness of one’s ignorance or uncertainty and conscious efforts (as by study, investigation, observation, and experiment) to find the truth or discover the facts (old paintings were compared to ascertain the dresses of the period—Shaw) (it has been ascertained by test borings that salt extends for 2200 feet below the surface—Amer. Guide Series: La.) Determine (see also DECIDE) differs from ascertain only in its greater emphasis upon the intent to establish the facts or the truth or to decide a dispute or controversy. Its use is largely legal and scientific (experts were called to determine the presence or absence of poison in the vital organs) (if the site of his birthplace can be determined, the memorial will be erected there) (determine the degree of reaction when ragweed pollen is injected beneath the skin) (the executor must assemble all available records to determine the decedent’s assets and liabilities—Gehman) Unearth is freely used in the sense of to bring to light or out into the open something that has been hidden, forgotten, or lost or that is exceedingly difficult to trace. Frequently it also suggests intensive or prolonged investigation preceding discovery (unearth old records) (unearth the evidence necessary for a conviction) (accurate scholarship can unearth the whole offense from Luther until now that has driven a culture mad—Audén) (an early-nineteenth-century globe that Dinah had unearthed in one of the basement rooms—Basso) Learn implies acquisition of knowledge; it commonly suggests little or no effort on the part of the one who discovers (it was only today that I learned his name) (Judy learned that the ayah must be left behind—Kipling) (they have not yet even learnt that “science” is not the accumulation of knowledge . . . but the active organization of knowledge—Ellis)

Ana discern, observe, perceive, espie (see SEE) 3 *invent, create discreet prudent, thoughtfulness, foresighted, provident (see under PRUDENCE)

Ana *cautious, circumspect, wary: politic, diplomatic (see SUAVE)

Ant indiscreet —Con rash, reckless, foolhardy (see

Ana analogous words Ant antonyms Con contrasted words See also explanatory notes facing page 1 dissaprove, disfavor (see DECLINE vb)

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.
disfigure

disfigure deface

Ana mangle, batter, main, mutilate: *deform, distort, contort, warp: injure, damage, mar, impair

Ant adorn — Con embellish, beautify (see ADORN) disgorge belch, burp, vomit, regurgitate, spew, throw up disguise n Disgrace, dishonor, disrepute, shame, infamy, ignominy, opprobrium, obloqui, odium mean the state, condition, character, or less often the cause of suffering disesteem and of enduring reproach or severe censure. Disgrace may imply no more than a loss of the favor or esteem one has enjoyed; Queen Elizabeth's favorites were constantly in danger of disgrace if they offended her in the slightest degree. Con he was shut up in an attic . . . and forbidden to speak to his sisters, who were told that he was in disgrace—Russell

The term, however, often implies complete humiliation and, sometimes, ostracism; Shaw Dishonor may imply no more than a loss of the favor or esteem one has enjoyed; the loss of one's good name or the loss of the honor that one has enjoyed or the loss of one's self-respect or self-esteem (prefer death to dishonor). Byron But now mischance hath trod my title down, and with dishonor laid me on the ground—Shak.

disrepute often attaches itself to the term of widespread or universal hatred or intense dislike of whatever odium or loss her maneuvers incurred she flung upon her counselors—J. R. Green (as a preliminary Augustus . . . revised the senatorial roll. This was always an invidious task . . . in the end he was compelled to make the nominations himself and face the odium—Buchan) many materialists . . . seek to eliminate the odium attaching to the word materialism, and even to eliminate the word itself—James

Anna degradation, debasement, abasement, humbling, humiliation (see corresponding verbs at ABASE): * stigma, brand, blot, stain*

Ant respect, esteem — Con admiration, *regard: reverence, awe, fear: honor, repute, glory, renown, fame

disguise vb Disguise, cloak, mask, disguise, camouflage are comparable when meaning to assume a dress, an appearance, or an expression that conceals one's identity, intention, or true feeling. Disguise, which basically implies an alteration in one's dress and appearance, frequently retains this implication with the added suggestion either of concealment of identity or of the assumption (as on the stage) of another identity (escape captivity disguised as a woman) (they disguise themselves as Turks for a joke)

The term, however, may apply to a feeling, an intention, or a motive when one's words, expression, or acts imply a contrary reaction (I disguised my impatience and suspicion of him and waited—Hudson) however we may disguise it by veiling words we do not and cannot carry out the distinction between legislative and executive action with mathematical precision—Justice Holmes (our author, disguised as Jonathan Oldstyle, contributed a series of letters . . . protesting with admirable chivalry against jesting at maiden ladies—Commins)

cloak implies the assumption of something which covers and conceals identity or nature (the appearance of goodwill cloaked a sinister intention) (intolerance and public irresponsibility cannot be cloaked in the shining armor of rectitude and righteousness—A. E. Stevenson) Mask implies a disguise, comparable to a covering for the face or head, which prevents recognition of a thing's true character, quality, or presence (icy spots masked by newly fallen snow) (masking with a smile the vain regrets that in their hearts arose—Morris) his pessimism . . . became an obvious pose, an attempt to mask his porky complacency—Hicks dissemble stresses simulation for the purpose of deceiving as well as disguising; it, therefore, is the preferred term when actual deception is achieved (Ross bears, or dissembles, his disappointment better than I expected of him—Gray) (the Scripture moveth us . . . to acknowledge and confess our manifold sins and wickedness; and that we should not dissemble nor cloak them before the face of Almighty God—Book of Common Prayer) Camouflage in its basic military use implies a disguising (as with paint, garnished nets, or foliage) that reduces the visibility or conceals the nature or location of a potential target (as a ship, a factory, or an airfield), and in its common extended use tends to imply a comparable disguising quality or element, often specifically one that tends to minimize some undesirable aspect (as of a person or his acts or attributes) (Soule is five feet five inches tall and . . . inclines to stoutness, but his erect bearing and quick movements tend to camouflage this—Wechsberg) the absolute character of these dictators was camouflaged somewhat by an elaborate parliamentary system—C. E. Black & E. C. Helmreich

Ana conceal, *hide: misrepresent, belive, falsify, garble: assume, pretend, feign, counterfeit, sham, simulate, affect

Con expose, exhibit, display, parade, flaunt (see show

---

Analogous Words

Disfigure

deface

Antonyms

*mangle, batter, main, mutilate: deform, distort, contort, warp: injure, damage, mar, impair

Contrasted Words

See also explanatory notes facing page 1
disgust vb: *reveal, disclose, discover, betray disgust vb Disgust, sicken, nauseate are comparable when meaning to arouse an extreme distaste in. Disgust implies a stomach that is revolted by food offered or taken; in its extended use it implies sensibilities which are revolted by something seen, heard, or otherwise known that creates strong repugnance or aversion (a disgusting medicine) (a disgusting smell) (disgusted by the vulgarity of men who ate noisily and greedily) (the very thought of such an occupation disgusted his fastidious nature) (the majority of women that he meets offend him, repel him, disgust him—Mencken) Sicken usually implies not only the existing of distaste but of actual physical distress (as faintness or a turning of the stomach); often, however, it is used merely as a more emphatic word for disgust, or it may suggest a disgust born of weariness or exhaustion (the smell of certain flowers is sicken'g in its sweetness) (mine eyes did sicken at the sight, and could not endure a further view—Shak.) (she was sicken'g by the girl's affectations) (for a few evenings it had interested the sisters ... but they had soon sicken'd of it and loathed it—Benett) (his uncanny morality, which sicken's later ages—Lewis & Maude) Nauseate carries a stronger implication than disgust or sicken of loathsome'sness (as to the taste, sight, or mind), and often suggests retching or vomiting (he always finds castor oil nauseating) (just now, even the thought of food nauseates the patient) (they were all nauseated by the foul odor) (nauseating behavior) (we also cannot bring ourselves to deny him that famous, if dangerous, charm of his, nauseased as we may be by the excesses into which it so often misled him—J. M. Brown)

Ana revolt, repulse, offend (see corresponding adjectives at OFFENSIVE)

Ant charm —Con tempt, en'tice (see LURE): gratify, delight, rejoice, *please dish vb ladle, spoon, *dip, bail, scoop dishhearten *discourage, dispirit, deject

Ana *depress, weigh: despair, despond (see corresponding adjectives at DESPONDENT)

Ant hearten —Con *encourage, inspire, embolden, cheer, nerve, steel dishveled unkempt, sloppy, *slipshod, slovenly

Ana *negligent, neglectful, lax, slack, remiss: *slatternly, blowsy, frowzy, dowdy dishonest, deceitful, mendacious, lying, untruthful are comparable especially when applying to persons, their utterances, and their acts and meaning deficient in honesty and unworthy of trust or belief. Dishonesty may apply to any breach of honesty or trust (as by lying, deceiving, stealing, cheating, or defrauding) (a dishonest statement) (a dishonest employee) (while it would be dishonest to gloss over this weakness, one must understand it in terms of the circumstances that conspired to produce it—Mumford) (years ago a few dishonest men traveled about the country, saying that they could make rain—Craig & Urban) Deceitful usually implies the intent to mislead or to impose upon another in order to obscure one's real nature or actual purpose or intention, or the true character of something offered, given, or sold; it therefore usually suggests a false or specious appearance, indulgence in falsehoods, cheating, defrauding, or double-dealing (deceitful propaganda) (deceitful testimony) (she was a deceitful, scheming little thing—Zangwill) Mendacious is typically more formal than, often less derogatory than, but otherwise closely equivalent to lying, the ordinary, direct, unequivocal word (sly newspapers and magazines for the circulation of lying advertisements—Shaw) (a lying account of the accident) (go aboard the ships that caught his interest where the masters ... set out wine and told him mendacious tales of their trade—Wheelwright) (while the communication was deceptive and so intended, it was not technically mendacious—S. H. Adams) As applied to persons mendacious more often suggests the habitude of deceit while lying suggests guilt in respect to a particular instance: thus, one might describe a person as mendacious with primary reference to his character or habit but would ordinarily prefer lying when a particular instance is in view (a mendacious child is doubted even when telling the truth) (only a lying scoundrel would tell such a tale) Untruthful is often used in place of mendacious or lying as a slightly less brutal word: however, the term distinctively implies lack of correspondence between what is said or represented and the facts of the case or the reality, and is often applied to statements, accounts, reports, or descriptions with little stress on dishonesty or intent to deceive (an untruthful account of an incident) (the artist's representation of the scene at Versailles was untruthful in many of its details)

Ana *crooked, devious, oblique: false, faithless, perfidious: cheating, cozening, defrauding, swindling (see CHEAT vb)

Ant honest —Con *upright, honorable, scrupulous, conscientious, just: *straightforward, forthright, above-board: candid, open, *frank, plain dishonor n *disgrace, disrepute, shame, infamy, ignominy, opprobrium, obloquy, odium

Ana humiliation, humbling, debasement, degradation, abasement (see corresponding verbs at ABASE): * stigma, brand, blot, stain

Ant honor —Con glory, renown, repute, *fame: reverence, veneration (see under REVERE): prestige, *influence, credit, authority, weight: esteem, respect, *regard, admiration

dissillusioned *sophisticated, worldly-wise, worldly, blasé

Ana unendeavored (see corresponding affirmative verb at DECEIVE): disenchanted (see corresponding affirmative verb at ATTRACT) disinclined adj Disinclined, indisposed, hesitant, reluctant, loath, aversive mean neither the will nor the desire to do or to have anything to do with something indicated or understood. Disinclined implies a lack of taste or inclination for something for which one has no natural bent or which meets one's disapproval (I should not be disinclined to go to London, did I know anybody there—Richardson) Disinclined to come to real grips with the vexed question of public control in industry—Cohen (he was preoccupied and disinclined for sociability) Indisposed implies an unfavorable or often a hostile or unsympathetic attitude (unfit to rule and indisposed to please—Crabbe) (indisposed to take part in the feasting and dancing—Hardy) Hesitant suggests a holding back through fear, distaste, uncertainty, or irresolution (she was hesitant to accept the invitation) (hesitant in seeking advice) (a hesitant suitor) (hesitant about spending the money required to build an experimental plant—Griffin) Reluctant adds to hesitant a definite resistance or sense of unwillingness (I was simply persuading a frightened and reluctant girl to do the straight and decent and difficult thing—Rose Macaulay) (people were reluctant to charge a dead man with an offense from which he could not clear himself—Wharton) (reluctant to expose those silent and beautiful places to vulgar curiosity—Cather) Reluctant is also applied directly to the thing which is done reluctantly or to a thing which seems reluctant (the constant strain of bringing back a reluctant and bored attention—Russell) (they wring from reluctant soil food enough to keep ... alive—Reppie) Loath stresses the lack of disinfect

harmony between something one anticipates doing and his likes or dislikes, tastes or distastes, or sympathies or antipathies; thus, a tender person may be loath to punish a refractory child but a strict disciplinarian would be loath to allow that child to go unpunished; one may be loath to believe a well-founded report that discards a friend and equally loath to disbelieve a rumor that confirms his bad opinion of a person <loath to publish translations of anything except our surefire sex-and-mayhem fiction—Whyte> Averse suggests a turning away from something distasteful or repugnant <averse to all advice> <his impulses were generous, trustful, aversely from cruelty—J. R. Greeny>

Ana *antipathetic, unsympathetic: opposing, resisting (see RESIST): balking, shying, boggling, stickling, stickling (see DEMUR): objecting, protesting (see OBJECT vb)

Con *eager, keen, anxious: inclined, disposed, predisposed (see INCLINE vb)

disinfect *sterilize, sanitize, fumigate

Ant infect disinfectant n *antiseptic, germicide, bactericide disinfectant adj antiseptic, germicidal, bactericidal (see antiseptic n) disintegrate crumble, decompose, *decay, rot, putrefy, spoil

Ana deliquesce (see LIQUEFY): *scatter, disperse, dissipate; break down, resolve, *analyze, dissect

Ant: integrate, combine, link, associate, *join, connect disinterested uninterested, detached, aloof, unconcerned, indifferent, incurious

Ana dispositionless, unbiased, impartial, *fair, just; *neutral, negative

Ant interested: prejudiced, biased dislike n Dislike, dislike, aversion, disfavor mean the state of mind of one who is not drawn to or turns from or avoids a person or thing; often these terms imply the manifestation of the state of mind. Dislike normally suggests the finding of something unpleasant or repugnant or of a kind one is unwilling to meet or to face; an aristocratic disdain and dislike of the bourgeoisie—Inge <differentiating between mere aversion and dislike and morbid unreasonable fear or dread—Armstrong> In itself dislike is rather neutral but it is readily intensified by context to the point of suggesting complete detestation 〈I was on fire with the dislike and contempt that burned in Hobart towards me—Rose Macaulay〉 Distaste, which implies a lack of taste for, usually stresses a squeamishness or a repugnance but allows a good deal of range in intensity to this squeamishness or repugnance; it may imply such other feelings as fear occasioned by the difficulties involved (a pronounced distaste for mathematics) or rebellion at constraint or confinement (for sheer pity of the repressed . . . distaste on Nettie’s face, you . . . drove her down to the movies—Mary Austin) or simply an unexplained reluctance (great as was his need of shelter, the Bishop . . . was struck by a reluctance, an extreme aversion for the place—Cather> Aversion suggests a disinclination for someone or something which manifests itself especially in attempts to avoid, evade, or escape. An aversion may be tempestuous or it may be the result of training; it may or may not suggest an accompanying feeling, but it consistently implies a definite reaction on the part of one manifesting it (he tried to take hold of her feet with his hands, but she shrank from him with aversion—Hudson) <unless we can give them an aversion from science, they will not abstain from it—Russell> (the natural human aversion to cold, noise, vibration, . . . and the unfriendly and lonesome environment at high altitude—Armstrong> Disfavor, the weakest of these words, usually suggests no more than a lack of liking or approval but it may imply contempt, lack of confidence, or disdain as motives (the proposal met with general disfavor) (the young prince had fallen into open disfavor at court) <Punch . . . eyed the house with disfavor—Kipling>

Ana hate, hatred, detestation (see under HATE vb): disapproval, depreciation (see corresponding verbs at DISAPPROVE)

Ant liking —Con affection, *attachment, love: *preference, partiality disloyal *faithless, false, pernicious, traitorous, treacherous

Ana disaffected, estranged, alienated (see estrange): *inconstant, fickle, unstable

Ant loyal —Con *faithful, constant, true, staunch, steadfast, resolute dismal, dreary, cheerless, dispiriting, bleak, desolate are comparable when they mean devoid of all that makes for cheer or comfort. Dismal and dreary are often interchangeable. Dismal may indicate extreme gloominess or somberness utterly depressing and dejecting (dismal acres of weed-filled cellars and gaping foundations—Felix Morley) <rain dripped . . . with a dismal insistence—Costain> (the most dismal prophets of calamity—Krutich> Dreary may differ in indicating what discourages or enervates through sustained gloom, dullness, terrorsomeness, or futility, and wants any cheering or enlivening characteristic (the most dreary solitary desert waste I had ever beheld—Bartram> (It was a hard dreary winter, and the old minister's heart was often heavy—Delany) <had the strength been there, the equipment was lacking. Harding's dreary appreciation of this was part of his tragedy—S. H. Adams> Cheerless stresses absence of anything cheering and is less explicit than but as forceful as the others in suggesting a pervasive disheartening joylessness or hopelessness (he would like to have done with life and its vanity altogether . . . so cheerless and dreary the prospect seemed to him—Thackeray> Dispiriting refers to anything that disheartens or takes away morale or resolution of spirit (it was such dispiriting effort. To throw one's whole strength and weight on the oars, and to feel the boat checked in its forward lunge—London> Bleak is likely to suggest chill, dull, barren characteristics that dishearten and militate against any notions of cheer, shelter, warmth, comfort, brightness, or ease (the bleak upland, still famous as a sheepwalk, though a scant herbage scarce veils the whinstone rock—J. R. Greeny> (the sawmill workers of the bleak mountain shack towns—Amer. Guide Series: Calif.) <the bleak years of the depression—J. D. Hicks> Desolate applies to what disheartens by being utterly barren, lifeless, uninhabitable or abandoned, and remote from anything cheering, comforting, or pleasant (a semibarren, rather desolate region, whose long dry seasons stunted its vegetation—Marvel) <some desolate polar region of the mind, where woman, even as an ideal, could not hope to survive—Glasgow> Ana murky, gloomy, *dark: forlorn, hopeless (see DEPONENT); barren, bare

Con gay, *lively, animated: cheerful, joyous (see GLAD) dismantle divest, *strip, denude, bare

Con *furnish, equip, outfit, appoint dismay vb Dismay, appall, horrify, daunt mean to unnerv and check or deter by causing fear, apprehension, or aversion. Dismay suggests a loss of power to proceed either because a prospect is terrifying or disheartening, or, more often, because one is balked and perplexed or at a loss concerning how to deal with a situation (be not afraid nor dismayed by reason of this great multitude; for the battle is not yours, but God's. Tomorrow go ye down against them—2 Chron 20:15-16} {here was an opponent that more than once puzzled Roosevelt, and in the end flatly dismayed him—Mencken} {who in one lifetime sees all causes lost, herself dismayed and helpless—Rukeseyr} Appall, in its most forceful use, implies an overwhelming and paralyzing dread or terror {the sight appalled the stoutest hearts} {"Are you a man?" "Ay, and a bold one, that dare look on that which might appall the devil"—Shak.} The word more often implies the sense of impotence aroused when one is confronted by something that perturbs, confounds, or shocks, yet is beyond one's power to alter {an appalling waste of human life} {appalled by the magnitude of the tragedy—Bowers} Horrify may emphasize a reaction of horror or of shuddering revulsion from what is ghastly or hideously offensive {to developed sensibilities the facts of war are revolting and horrifying—Huxley} {this theme—a man ready to prostitute his sister as payment for a debt of honor—is too grotesque even to horrify us—T. S. Eliot} Often horrify comes close to shock in meaning and implies momentary agitation occasioned by a surprising breach of the proprieties or decencies {they were horrified by his playing golf on Sunday} {she horrified London society by pouring hot tea on a gentleman who displeased her—Amer. Guide Series: Va.} Daunt presupposes an attempt to do something that requires courage and implies therefore a checking or scaring off by someone or something that crows or subdues {he had been completely daunted by what he had found} {the Revolution} {had been something against which self-assertion had been of no avail—Mary Austin} Daunt perhaps most often occurs in negative constructions {nothing can daunt the man whose last concern is for his own safety} {no adventure daunted her and risks stimulated her—Ellis} Ana perplex, confound, bewildcr, nonplus, dumbfound, mystify, *puzzle: disconcert, rattle, faze, abash, discomfit, *embarrass: alarm, *frighten, terrify Ant cheer—Con assure, secure, *ensure: pique, quicken, stimulate, galvanize, excite, *provoke dismay n alarm, consternation, panic, *fear, dread, fright, terror, horror, trepidation Ana perturbing or perturbation, agitation, disquieting or disquietude, discomposing or discompose, upsetting or upset (see corresponding verbs at DISCOMPOSE): *apprehension, foreboding Con *confidence, assurance, aplomb, self-possession: *courage, mettle, spirit, resolution dismiss 1 †Dismiss, discharge, cashier, drop, sack, fire, bounce are comparable when they mean to let go from one's employ or service. †Dismiss basically denotes a giving permission to go {he dismissed the assembly—Acts 19:41} †dismissed the night-watchers from the room, and remained with her alone—Meredith} When used in respect to employment it carries apart from the context no suggestion of the reason for the act and is, therefore, often preferred as the softer or as the more comprehensive term {with the upset in business, thousands of employees were dismissed} {the new governor dismissed the staff that served his predecessor and appointed members of his own party in their places} Discharge is usually a harsher term, implying dismissal for cause and little or no likelihood of being called back {discharge an employee for insubordination} {she has the habit of discharging her servants without notice} {a rich man can discharge anyone in his employment who displeases him—Shaw} Only in military and court use does it, when unqualified, carry no implication of dissatisfaction on the part of the employer {the enlisted man will be discharged after three years' service} {the three convicted soldiers were honorably discharged} {the judge discharged the jury with thanks} Cashier implies a summary or ignominious discharge from a position of trust or from a position that is high in the scale {cashier a suspected official} {many a duteous and knee-crooking knave ... wears out his time, much like his master's ass, for nought but provender, and when he's old, cashiered—Shak.} {the few sentimental fanatics who ... proceeded upon the assumption that academic freedom was yet inviolable, and so got themselves cashiered—Mencken} Drop, sack, fire, and bounce are all rather informal. Drop is a common and colorless synonym of dismiss {many employees were dropped when business slackened} Sack stresses a being discarded or thrown out of employ {he was sacked after long years of service} Blum had sacked him because he wore blue undershirts—Bennett} while fire stresses a dismissal as sudden and peremptory as the action of firing a gun {he fired his clerk one day in a fit of anger, but the next day he called him back} and bounce, a kicking out {he bounced the boy after one day of unsatisfactory service} 2 *eject, oust, expel, evict Ana *discard, cast, shed, slough: spurn, repudiate, reject, refuse (see decline vb): scorn, scout (see DESPISE) Con accept, *receive: admit: entertain, *harbor dismount alight, *descend Ant mount disorder vb Disorder, derange, disarrange, disorganize, unsettle, disturb are comparable when they mean to undo the fixed or proper order of something. Disorder is commonly used in reference to something that depends for its proper functioning or effectiveness upon being properly ordered (see ORDER vb 1) or in good order or array {tresses all disordered—Milton} {too rich a diet will disorder his digestive system} Derange implies a throwing out of proper arrangement of the parts, or of an important part, of something in which all the parts or elements are ordered with reference to each other or are so carefully adjusted or so closely related to each other that they work together as a unit. The term usually carries a strong implication of resulting confusion or a destruction of normal or healthy conditions {war deranges the life of a nation} {fear has deranged his mind} {within the power of man irreparably to derange the combinations of inorganic matter and organic life—Lord} Disarrange often implies little more than the changing of a fixed, neat, or perfect order of arrangement and may carry no suggestion of confusion {she ... would not let his chamber be disarranged just at present—Martineau} {someone had disarranged the papers on his desk} {the wind disarranged her hair} Disorganize implies usually the destruction of order and functioning in a body or whole all the parts of which have an organic connection with each other or have been so ordered with reference to each other that what affects one part affects every other part; the term therefore usually suggests a disordering that impedes the functioning or impairs the effectiveness of the affected system {subversive methods intended to disorganize the internal communications of the enemy's country} {the Whigs though defeated, disheartened, and disorganized, did not yield without an effort—Macaulay} {an expenditure which would disorganize his whole scheme of finance—Buchan} Unsettle implies a disordering or disarrangement that causes instability, unrest, inability to concentrate, or turbulence {the cold war has disparaging disparate

*decry, depreciate, derogate, detract, belittle, disturb, unsettle, disorder, derange, disorganize disclaim, disavow, repudiate, disallow disown

dispel dissipate, disperse, scatter n 1 speed, expedition, *haste, hurry dispatch

disparage

disorganize
disturb, unsettle, *disorder, derange, disarrange

Ant order — Con arrange, marshal, organize, methodize, systematize (see order vb); array, align, range, *line, line up: regulate, *adjust, fix disorder n 1 *confusion, disarray, clutter, jumble, chaos, snarl, muddle

Ana derangement, disarrangement, disorganization, disturbance, unsettlement (see corresponding verbs at disorder); *anarchy, chaos, lawlessness

Ant order — Con arrangement, organization, methodization, systematization (see corresponding verbs at order); system, *method

2 *disease, condition, ailment, malady, complaint, distemper, syndrome disorganize disturb, unsettle, *disorder, derange, disarrange

Ant organize — Con systematize, methodize, arrange, marshal, *order disown *disclaim, disavow, repudiate, disallow

Ana reject, spurn, refuse (see decline)

Ant own — Con *acknowledge, avow disparage *decry, depreciate, derogate, detract, belittle, minimize

Ana asperse, *malign, traduce, defame, slander, libel: depreciate, *disapprove

Ant applaud — Con *praise, laud, extol, eulogize, acclaim: *commend, compliment: *exalt, magnify, aggrandize disparaging *derogatory, depreciatory, deprecative, slighting, pejorative

Ana belittling, decrying, minimizing (see decry); underestimating, undervaluing, understating (see base words at estimate)

Con extolling, acclaiming, praising (see praise); magnifying, exalting (see exalt) disparate diverse, divergent, *different, various Ana *inconsonant, incompatible, incongruous, discrepant, discordant, inconsistent: *distinct, separate

Ant comparable, analogous — Con similar, *like, parallel dispersant unbiased, impartial, objective, uncolored, *fair, just, equitable

Ana disinterested, detached, aloof, *indifferent: *cool, collected, composed: candid, open, *frank

Ant passionate: intemperate dispatch vb 1 *send, forward, transmit, remit, route, ship

Ana hasten, quicken, *speed

2 *kill, slay, murder, assassinate, execute dispatch n 1 speed, expedition, *haste, hurry

Ana *celerity, alacrity, legerity: quickness, fleetness, swiftness, rapidity (see corresponding adjectives at fast): diligence (see corresponding adjective at busy)

Ant delay

2 message, note, *letter, epistle, report, memorandum, missive dispel dissipate, disperse, *scatter

Ana expel, *eject, oust, dismiss: disintegrate, crumble

(see decay)

Con *accumulate, amass: *gather, collect, assemble dispense 1 *distribute, divide, deal, dole

Ana *allot, assign, apportion, allocate: portion, parcel, ration, prorate, *apportion

2 *administer

dispense *scatter, dissipate, dispel

Ana *separate, part, divide: *dismiss, discharge

Ant assemblage, congregate (persons): collect (things)

— Con *summon, convene, converse, muster, cite, call dispirit *discourage, dishearten, deject

Ana *depress, weigh

Ant inspirit — Con *encourage, hearten, embolden, cheer, nerve, steel dispirited depressed, dejected, *downcast, disconsolate, woebegone

Ana sad, melancholy (see corresponding nouns at sadness): gloomy, glum, morose (see sullen): discouraged, dishheartened (see discouragement)

Ant high-spirited — Con encouraged, inspired, heartened (see encourage) dispiriting *dismal, dreary, cheerless, bleak, desolate

Ana disheartening, discouraging, dejecting (see discouragement): depressing, oppressing or oppressive (see corresponding verbs at depress)

Ant insipring — Con heartening, cheering, encouraging, emboldening (see encourage) displace supplant, *replace, supersede display vb exhibit, *show, expose, parade, flaunt

Ana manifest, evidence, evince, demonstrate, *show: *reveal, disclose, discover

Con *disguise, cloak, mask, dissemble, camouflage: *hide, conceal, secrete display n Display, parade, array, pomp are comparable when denoting a striking or spectacular show or exhibition for the sake of effect. Display commonly suggests a spreading out or an unfolding of something that is usually concealed or visible only in the mass or in individual instances, so that the observer is impressed by the extent, the detail, the beauty, or the lavishness of what is revealed to him (a display of meteors) (a parvenu's display of wealth) (a nation's display of military power) (fine editions that make an impressive display in an oilman's library — Green Peyton) Parade implies ostentation or flaunting exhibition; display may or may not suggest a conscious endeavor to impress, but parade definitely does carry such an implication (Mr. Cruncher could not be restrained from making rather an ostentatious parade of his liberality — Dickens) (he does not make the least parade of his wealth or his gentry — Snaithe) Array stresses order and brilliancy in display of or as if of marshaled ranks of armed soldiers and therefore may be used of displays that make one as beautiful, as terrible, or as merely astonishing (an array of tulips) (an array of silver on a sideboard) (the terrible array of evils around us and dangers in front of us — Shaw) (clouds . . . each lost in each, that marvelous array of temple, palace, citadel — Wordsworth) Pomp stresses ceremonial grandeur or splendor. Once often but now rarely used of a pageant or solemn procession it still suggests an outward spectacular show of magnificence or glory (it [Independence Day] ought to be solemnized with pomp and parade, with . . . bonfires, and illuminations — Adams) (pride, pomp and circumstance of glorious war — Shak.) (Io, all our pomp of yesterday is one with Nineveh and Tyre — Kipling) disport

An ostentatiousness or ostentation, pretentiousness or pretension, showiness or show (see corresponding adjectives at SHOWY) disport n sport, play, frolic, rollick, romp, gambol (see under PLAY vb)
disport vb sport, *play, frolic, rollick, romp, gambol

Ana recreation, diversion, amusement, entertainment (see under AMUSE); merriment, jollity (see corresponding adjectives at MERRY) disposition a proper or orderly distribution or utilization <the disposition of her jewels seemed necessary to pay her debts> <the disposition of the intestate's property has been agreed upon by the heirs> <incinerators used for the disposal of garbage> <I am happy that the speedy disposal of the pictures will enable you . . . to settle this unpleasant affair—Miford> <the donors have stipulated for the future disposition . . . of those funds—John Marshall> When the idea of arrangement or ordering or of making arrangements is stressed, disposition, rather than disposal, is the more accurate term <while the disposition of the branches is unsymmetrical, balance is maintained—Binyon>  The idiomatic phrases at one's disposal and at (or in) one's disposition differ in that, though both imply a placing under one's control, the former suggests use as one sees fit and the latter, subjection to one's direction, arrangement, or command <they put their summer home at the disposal of the bridal couple> <had at his disposition no considerable sums of money—Trench>

Ana destroying or destruction, demolishing or demolition (see corresponding verbs at DESTROY) dispose predispose, bias, *incline Ana influence, *affect, sway disposition 1 *disposal
Ana administering or administration, dispensing or dispensation (see corresponding verbs at ADMINISTER); management, direction, controlling or control, conducting or conduct (see corresponding verbs at CONDUCT); arrangement, ordering (see corresponding verbs at ORDER)

2 Disposition, temperament, temper, complexion, character, personality, individuality are comparable when they mean the prevailing and dominant quality or qualities which distinguish or identify a person or group. Disposition applies to the predominating bent or constitutional habit of one's mind or spirit <ages of fierceness have overlaid what is naturally kind in the dispositions of ordinary men and women—Russell> <the taint of his father's insanity perhaps appeared in his unbalanced disposition—E. S. Bates> Temperament applies to the sum total of characteristics that are innate or inherent and the result of one's physical, emotional, and mental organization  <I verily believe that nor you, nor any man of poetical temperament, can avoid a strong passion of some kind—Byron> <shall I ever be cheerful again, happy again? Yes. And soon. For I know my temperament—Mark Twain> Temper (compare temper under moderate vb) implies a combination of the qualities and especially those acquired through experience which determine the way one (as a person, a people, an age) meets the situations, difficulties, or problems that confront him <there was a general confidence in her instinctive knowledge of the national temper—J. R. Green> <the leaders of forlorn hopes are never found among men with dismal minds. There must be a natural resiliency of temper which makes them enjoy desperate ventures—Crothers> Unlike the foregoing terms temper may suggest an acquired or transient state of mind controlling one's acts and decisions <after four years of fighting, the temper of the victors was such that they were quite incapable of making a just settlement—Huxley> Complexion implies some fundamentally distinctive quality based on mood, attitude, and ways of thinking that determines the impression one produces on others <the rationalist mind . . . is of a doctrinaire and authoritative complexion: the phrase “must be” is ever on its lips—James> <great thinkers of various complexion, who, differing in many fundamental points, all alike assert the relativity of truth—Ellis> Character applies to the aggregate of qualities, especially moral qualities, which distinguish an individual at any one time in his development, which constantly tend to become more or less fixed, and which must be taken as a whole into consideration in any ethical judgment of him <he is a man of character> <in his youth his character was weak and unstable> <that inexorable law of human souls that we prepare ourselves for sudden deeds by the reiterated choice of good or evil that determines character—George Eliot> Often character means such an aggregate of qualities brought to a high state of moral excellence by right principles and right choices and by the rejection of anything that weakens or debases <when we say of such and such a man, whatever he has . . . character, we generally mean that he has disciplined his temperament, his disposition, into strict obedience to the behests of duty—Brownell> Personality also applies to the aggregate of qualities which distinguish an individual, but the term differs from character in that it implies his being distinguished as a person rather than as a moral being. In general personality may be said to be revealed in unconscious as well as in conscious acts or movements, in physical and emotional as well as in mental and moral behavior, and especially in a person's relations to others; thus, one may know very little about the character of an acquaintance, yet have a very definite idea of his personality. Therefore personality is qualified not as good or bad but by an adjective implying the extent to which it pleases, displeases, or otherwise impresses the observer <there was a pious and good man, but an utterly negligible personality—Mackenzie> <the mere presence of personality in a work of art is not sufficient, because the personality revealed may be lacking in charm—Benson> Hence personality often distinctively means personal magnetism or charm <personality is not something that can be sought; it is a radiance that is diffused spontaneously—Ellis> Individuality implies a personality that distinguishes one from all others; often it connotes the power of impressing one's personality on others  <she is a pleasant person but has no individuality> <Sophia quietened her by sheer force of individuality—Bennett> <an individuality, a style of its own—Cather> disprove, refute, confute, rebut, controvert mean to show or attempt to show by argument that a statement, a claim, a proposition, or a charge is not true. Disprove stresses the success of an argument in showing the falsity, erroneouness, or invalidity of what is attacked <he could not disprove the major contention of his opponents> <I speak not to disprove what Brutus spoke, but here I am to speak what I do know—Shak> <the final values of life, the ultimate meanings of experience, are just those that no man can prove, and that no man can disprove either—Hedley— Refute stresses the method more than the effect of argument in disproof; it therefore is preferred to disprove when one wishes to convey implications of the aduding of evidence, of a bringing forward of witnesses, experts, or authorities, and of close reasoning. It connotes an elaboration of arguments not present in disprove <with respect to that other, more weighty accusation, of having injured Mr. Wickham, I can only refute it by laying before you the whole of his connection with my family.—Austen > <there is great force in this argument, and the Court is not satisfied that it has been refuted—John Marshall > <one can disagree with his views but one can’t refute them. . . . Every particle of him asseverates the truth which is in him—Henry Miller—

Confute emphasizes a destruction of arguments or a reducing to silence of opponents by clearly revealing the falsity or the untenability of the points which have been made; the term usually implies refutation, but it may also suggest such methods as denunciation and sarcasm <Satan stood. . . . confuted and convinced of his weak arguing and fallacious drift—Milton > <Elijah. . . . confuted the prophets of Baal in precisely that way, with . . . bitter mockery of their god when he failed to send down fire from heaven—Shaw > <hypothesizes which may be confuted by experience—Ayer—
Rebut differs from refute, its closest synonym, in suggesting greater formality of method (as that used in organized debate or in courts of law). Although its aim is disproof of an opponent’s contentions, the term does not necessarily imply the achievement of one’s end, but it does suggest the offering of argument, evidence, or testimony given in support of the other side <at the end of the formal arguments, each member of the debating team was allowed three minutes for rebutting the arguments of his opponents—*the Tractarians were driven to formulate a theory of the Church . . . which should justify the exclusive claim of Anglicanism to be the Church of Christ in these islands, while rebutting the arguments of Rome—Inge—
<the author carefully examined and rebuted, point by point, many of the arguments—Ashley Montagu—
Controversy usually carries a dual implication of denying or contradicting a statement, proposition, or doctrine, or a set of these, and of refusing or attempting to refute it. It does not necessarily suggest disproof but it does connote a valiant effort to achieve that end <this doctrine has been controverted; it is, however, very ably defended by Mr. Hargrave—Crusoe > <I am glad that this year we are assembled not to controvert the opinions of others, nor even to defend ourselves—Inge— Ana negative, traverse, impugn, contravene (see deny— Ant prove, demonstrate disputation debate, forensic, argumentation, dialectic

Ana *argument, dispute, controversy

dispute v argue, debate, *discuss, agitate

Ana see those at debate

Ant concede — Con *grant, allow dispute n argument, controversy

Ana *argumentation, disputation, debate, forensic, dialectic: contention, dissection, strife, *discord, conflict

disquiet *discompose, disturb, agitate, perturb, upset, fluster, flurry

Ana *annoy, vex, irk, bother: worry, harass, harry: trouble, distress

Ant tranquilize, soothe

Ana paper, *essay, article: inquiry, investigation disrate *degrade, demote, reduce, declas

disregard *ignore, overlook, slight, forget, *neglect, omit

Con attend, mind, watch, *tend: observe, notice, note, remark (see see

disrepute *disgrace, dishonor, shame, infamy, ignominy, opprobrium, obloquy, odium

Ant repute — Con *fame, reputation, renown, honor, glory

dissect *analyze, break down, resolve

Ana *scrutinize, examine, inspect: pierce, penetrate, probe (see enter dissection breakdown, analysis, resolution (see under analyze

dissemble mask, cloak, *disguise, camouflage

Ana simulate, feign, counterfeit, *deny, refute, radiate

Ant accord (sense 1): comity — Con *harmony, concord, consonance: friendship, goodwill, amity

disdissent *disagree, variance, strife, conflict, contention, *discord

Ana alteration, wrangle, *quarrel, bickering: *argument, dispute, controversy

Ant accord (sense 2): concurrence — Con *assent, consent —

disentangle *differ, vary, disagree

Ana object, protest: *deny, balk, boggle, sly, stickle

Ant concur: assent: consent — Con acquiesce, subscribe, agree, accede (see *assent"

disenser nonconformist, sectarian, sectary, schismatic, *heretic

Ana exposition: *argumentation, disputation: article, paper, *essay

disimilarity, unlikeness, difference, divergence, divergency, distinction are comparable when they mean lack of agreement or correspondence (or an instance of such lack) in appearance, in qualities, or in nature brought out by a comparison of two or more things. Dissimilarity and unlikeness, the most general terms in this group, are often used interchangeably without loss, but when there is little basis for comparison and the contrast is obvious, dissimilarity is usually preferred <the effectiveness of a metaphor depends, in part, on the dissimilarity of the things which are compared> <the injunction that the most recent comers slough off all the traits of their dissimilarity also implied that homogeneity was itself socially desirable—Handlin— Unlikeness is commonly the preferred term, however, when the things contrasted belong to a common category, and there are fundamental likenesses between them <but he was rich where I was poor, and he supplied my want the more as his unlikeness fitted mine—Tennyson—
<the likenesses among human beings as well as the unlikenesses—Wiggam—
Difference suggests notice of a quality or feature which marks one thing as apart from another. The term may imply want of resemblance in one or more particulars <note the differences between the first poems of Keats and those written after he had achieved mastery of his art> <there are both resemblances and differences in the designs of these two cathedrals or want of identity difference of opinion is the one crime which kings never forgive—Emerson— <difference of religion breeds more quarrels than *difference of politics—Phillips or a disagreement or cause of disagreement which separates individuals or makes them hostile to each other <there have been differences between them for some time) Dissuasion or dissuasiveness applies to a difference between things or less often persons having the same origin, the same ends, or the same background or belonging to the same type or class; there is usually an implication of a difference that makes for cleavage or increasing unlikelihood (an illustration of the divergences between countries both highly democratic—Bryce) (the greatest divergence in the educational value of studies is due to the varying degree to which they require concentration, judgment, observation, and imagination—Grangent) (increasing divergencies between British and French policies—Welles) Distinction usually implies want of resemblance in detail, especially in some minute or not obvious detail; it therefore commonly applies to a difference that is brought out by close observation, study, or analysis or that marks the line of division between two like things (point out the distinction in meaning between two close synonyms) (a hairsplitting distinction between "original" and "creative" writing) (apprehend the vital distinction between religion and criticism—Arnold) (so intoxicated with dreams of fortune that he had lost all sense of the distinction between reality and illusion—Brooks) (this is not a distinction without a difference. It is not like the affair of "an old hat cooked") and "a cooked old hat" . . . but there is a difference here in the nature of things—Sterne) Ana difference, diversity, disparity (see corresponding adjectives at DIFFERENT): discrepancy, discordance, inconsonance (see corresponding adjectives at INCONSONANT) Ant similarity — Con * likeness, resemblance, similitude: correspondence, agreement, conformity (see corresponding verbs at AGREE) dissimulation duplicity, * deceit, cunning, guile Ana dissembling, cloaking, masking, disguising, camouflagging (see DISGUISE): hiding, concealing, secreting (see HIDE): pretending or pretense, feigning, shamming (see corresponding verbs at ASSUME): * hypocrisy, pharisaism, sanctimony Can candidness or candor, openness (see corresponding adjectives at FRANK): sincerity (see corresponding adjective at SINCERE) dissipate dispel, disperse, * scatter Ana disintegrate, crumble (see DECAY): separate, part, divide: deliquesce, melt (see LIQUEFY) Ant accumulate (possessions, wealth, a mass of things): absorb (one's energies, one's attention): concentrate (one's thoughts, powers, efforts) 2 * waste, squander, fritter, consume Ana * spend, expend, disburse: * scatter, disperse: * vanish, evanesce, disappear, evaporate dissolute profligate, profligate, * abandoned Ana * licentious, libertine, wanton, lewd: inebriated, intoxicated, drunken, * drunk: debauched, depraved, corrupt, debased, perverted (see under DEBASE) dissuade, deter, discourage, divert mean to turn one aside from a purpose, a project, or a plan. Dissuade carries the strongest implication of advice, argument, or exhortation; like the affirmative form persuade, it usually suggests gentle or effective methods and carries no suggestion of bullying or browbeating, though it equally carries little or no suggestion of coaxing or wheedling (Sir Walter had at first thought more of London; but Mr. Shepherd . . . had been skillful enough to dissuade him from it, and make Bath preferred—Austen) (wrote a book to dissuade people from the use of tobacco—Scudder) (Galton was eagerly interested and wanted to experiment on himself, though ultimately dissuaded on account of his advanced age—Ellis) While deter often implies the operation of fear as the cause of turning aside from the fulfillment of a project, it may suggest no more than a changing of purpose for cause rather than from mere caprice (the fear of reprisals deterred them from using poison gas) (he vowed that nothing should deter him from his purpose) (the Judge's remark about hanging around the stable did not deter Theophilus from playing there all that winter—Delaun) (Peter for a time abandoned both smoking and alcohol, and was only deterred from further abstinences by their impracticability—H. G. Wells) (he then hazards the conjecture that Aristotle wrote so obscurely in order that he might deter slow-witted and indolent men from reading him—Babbitt). In deterrent the implication that it is fear which is the cause of holding back is stronger than in the verb. Discourage (see also DISCOURAGE) implies a deterring by undermining spirit or enthusiasm or by weakening intent or sense of purpose (discouraged him from prosecuting the inquiry) (the incessant hurry and trivial activity of daily life . . . seem to prevent, or at least discourage, quiet and intense thinking—Eliot) (I definitely wished to discourage his intimacy with my family—Rose Macaulay) Divert (see also TURN AND AMUSE) implies a turning aside, but here the mind or some of its functions is usually the thing diverted or turned aside, and another object of interest or attention is generally expressed or understood as the alternative; in this sense divert is often used of the very young, or of the preoccupied or the worried (the attention was diverted to more important game) (thank God for colonels, thought Mrs. Miniver; sweet creatures, so easily entertained, so biddably diverted from senseless controversy into comfortable monologue—Jan Struther) Ana advise, counsel (see under ADVICE): * urge, exhort, prick Ant persuade — Con * induce, prevail, get; influence, touch, * affect distant, far, faraway, far-off, remote, removed mean not near or close but separated by an obvious interval especially in space or in time. Distant carries a stronger reference to the length of the interval (whether long or short) than the other terms; only when it directly qualifies a noun does it necessarily imply that the interval is markedly long (a book held six inches distant from the eyes) (the sun is about 93,000,000 miles distant from the earth) (a distant city) (the other item, on a distant page, was cheerfully headed “Food from Sewage”—Krutch) (at a distant date) (I do not ask to see the distant scene,—one step enough for me—Newman) Far, except for the possible reference to a short distance involved in the question “How far?” applies (as adverb as well as adjective) only to what is a long way off (he took his journey into a far country—Lk 15:13) (take a far view in planning for future needs of the city) (go back in the far past to a common origin—Kroeger) (across the hills, and far away beyond their utmost purple rim—Tennyson) Faraway and far-off not only mean extremely far but are preferred when distance in time is specifically implied (old, unhappy, far-off things, and battles long ago—Wordsworth) However, both may suggest distance in space (a cheer that started the echo in a faraway hill—Stevenson) (the far-off places in which he had been wandering—Dickens) Remote suggests a far removal, especially from something (as one's present location, one's point of view, or one's time) regarded as a center or vantage ground (some forlorn and naked hermitage, remote from all the pleasures of the world—Shak.) (the sands of a remote and lonely shore—Shelley) (whose nature it was to do more for immediate annoyances than for remote consequences—George Eliot) Removed, which is usually a predicate adjective, distaste 261
can be distinguished ⟨a nicety and force of touch, which is an endowment separate from pictorial genius, though indispensable to its exercise—Hawthorne⟩ ⟨the reestablishment of ethics and esthetics as separate and autonomous realms—Krucho⟩ Separate is also often used in preference to distinct when an opposition to common or shared is implied ⟨please give us separate rooms⟩ ⟨the children had separate toys and separate books⟩ Several (see also MANY) is somewhat formal or old-fashioned in this sense; it implies an existence, a character, a status, or a location separate or distinct from that of similar items. It may modify a singular noun, especially when “each” precedes, as well as a plural noun ⟨conduct these knights unto their several lodgings—Shak⟩ ⟨each individual seeks a sever'gal goal—Pope⟩ ⟨will call the members . . . for their several opinions—New Republic⟩ ⟨a network of concrete highways upon the several states—W. H. Hamilton⟩ Discrete, even more than separate, implies that the individuals are not the same and are not connected; it is often more precise than separate because it stresses numerical distinctness (that is, distinctness as individuals) rather than difference in kind, nature, or goal; thus, discrete things may be exactly the same in appearance, nature, or value, but they are not separate and are physically disconnected ⟨the dumb creation lives a life made up of discrete and mutually irrelevant episodes—Huxley⟩ ⟨[the phage] has been identified as existing in discrete units, that is, it is a particle like granulated sugar and not a continuum like molasses—Furnas⟩ ⟨the conclusion that gases are made up of discrete units (molecules)—Hogben⟩

Distinctive peculiar, individual, (see characteristic) ⟨*special, particular, specific, especial: *different, diverse, disparate, divergent⟩

Distinct 1 Distinct, separate, several, discrete are comparable when used in reference to two or more things (sometimes persons) and in the sense of not being individually the same. Distinct always implies a capacity for being distinguished by the eye or by the mind as apart from the other or others, sometimes in space or in time but more often in character, nature, or identity ⟨I see three distinct objects in the distance, but I cannot identify them⟩ ⟨the novel has two related, but nevertheless distinct, plots⟩ ⟨there has been endless discussion whether we have a distinct faculty for the knowledge of God—Inge⟩ ⟨for him the work of literature is not distinct or separable from its author—L. P. Smith⟩ Separate (see also single) is often used interchangeably with distinct and often in combination with it, as if one strengthened the other ⟨the power . . . is given in two separate and distinct sections of the constitution—John Marshall⟩ ⟨these two characteristics were not separate and distinct . . . they were held together in vital tension—Ellis⟩ But separate stresses, as distinct does not, the lack of a connection between the things considered, usually by reason of the distance in space or time or the difference in identity of the things in question; thus, a drama with two separate plots is not the same as one with two distinct plots, for separate implies no connection (or, often, only a factitious connection) between the plots, while distinct suggests only that they entiate implies either the possession of a distinguishing character or characters, or more commonly capacity to ascertain differences between things susceptible of confusion (we find in Chinese art a strong synthetic power, which differentiates it and lifts it beyond the art of Persia and the art of India—Binyon) (if poetry is art, it must produce its effects through a medium which differentiates it, without divorcing it, from reality—Loves) (we must have classes small enough to enable the teacher to differentiate the strong and the willing from the sluggards—Grandgent) Discriminate involves the idea of perception; it implies the power to perceive or discern differences; often slight differences, between things that are very much alike (discriminate synonyms) (irritated by the wasp's inability to discriminate a house from a tree—E. K. Brown) (whenever you have learned to discriminate the birds, or the plants, or the geographical features of a country, it is as if new and keener eyes were added—Burroughs) (to discriminate between true and false Aristotelianism—Babbit) Demarcate implies the setting of literal limits or the marking of literal boundaries, but it can be freely used to suggest a distinguishing between things as clear as if there were lines between them (how shall we demarcate? Reproduction from Growth?—Lewes) (only in periods when a common idea of style pervades the whole production of a people does... the work of the craftsmen merge, with no demarcating difference, in the art which expresses thought and emotion—Binyon)

Ana *separate, part, divide: *detach, disengage Ant confound —Con confuse, *mistake 2 *characterize, mark, qualify Ana individualize, peculiarize (see corresponding adjectives at CHARACTERISTIC) distort contort, warp, *deform Ana twist, bend, *curve: disfigure, *deface: *injure, damage, mar, impair: misinterpret, misconstrue (see affirmative verbs at EXPLAIN) distract bewilder, nonplus, confound, dumbfound, mystify, perplex, *puzzle Ana *confuse, muddle, addle, fuddle, befuddle: baffle, balk (see FRUSTRATE): agitate, upset, fluster, flurry, perturb, *discompose Ant collect (one's thoughts, one's powers) distraught absentminded, absent, *abstracted, preoccupied Ana distracted, bewildered, nonplused (see PUZZLE vb): muddled, addled, confused (see CONFUSE): agitated, perturbed, discomposed, flustered (see DISCOMPOSE) Ant collected —Con *cool, composed, unrumpled, im-perturbable, unflappable, nonchalant distress n Distress, suffering, misery, agony, dolor, passion are comparable when denoting the state of one that is in great trouble or in pain of mind or body. Distress commonly implies conditions or circumstances that cause physical or mental stress or strain; usually also it connotes the possibility of relief or the need of assistance (to pity distress is human; to relieve it is Godlike—Mann) The word is applicable to things as well as to persons; thus, a ship in distress is helpless and in peril because of some untoward circumstance (as a breakdown in machinery); a community's distress may be the result of a disaster or of an event imposing extreme hardships on the people. When used to designate a mental state, distress usually implies the stress or strain of fear, anxiety, or shame (the original shock and distress that were caused by the first serious work of scholars on the Bible—Montague) (it had evidently been a great distress to him, to have the days of his imprisonment recalled—Dickens) (she therefore dressed exclusively in black, to her husband's vast amusement and her mother's rumored distress—Wylie) Suffering is used especially in reference to human beings; often it implies conscious awareness of pain or distress and conscious endurance (extreme sensibility to physical suffering... characterizes modern civilization—Inge) (the losses and hardships and sufferings entailed by war—Russell) Misery stresses the unhappy or wretched conditions attending distress or suffering; it often connotes sordidness, or dolefulness, or abjectness (for bleak, unadulterated misery that dak bungalow was the worst... I had ever set foot in—Kipling) (she had... cheated and shamed herself... exchanged content for misery and pride for humiliation—Bennett) Agony suggests suffering so intense that both body and mind are involved in a struggle to endure the unbearable (fell with a scream of mortal agony—Mason) (the agony of being found wanting and exposed to the disapproval of others—Mead) Dolor is a somewhat literary word applied chiefly to mental suffering that involves sorrow, somber depression, or grinding anxiety (heaviness is upon them, and dolor thickens the air they walk through—Frank) Passion is now rare in this sense except in reference to the sufferings of Jesus in the garden at Gethsemane and culminating in his crucifixion.
Ana *afflict, *trial, tribulation: *sorrow, grief, anguish, woe, heartbreak: strain, pass, pinch, exigency (see JUNCTURE): hardship, *difficulty, rigor, vicissitude: *pain, pang, ache Con comforting or comfort, solacing or solace, consolation (see corresponding verbs at COMFORT): alleviation, assuagement, mitigation, allaying, relieving or relief (see corresponding verbs at RELIEVE) distress vb *trouble, ail Ana *afflict, try, torment, torture, rack: *worry, annoy, harass, harry, plague, pester: *depress, oppress, weigh Con *comfort, console, solace: *help, aid, assist: *re- relieve, alleviate, light, mitigate, assuage, allay distribute, dispense, divide, deal, dole are comparable when they mean to give out, usually in shares, to each member of a group. Distribute implies either an apportioning among many by separation of something into parts, units, or amounts, and by assigning each part, unit, or amount to the proper person or place, or a scattering or spreading more or less evenly over an area (distributed his possessions among his heirs) (distribute fertilizer by spreading or scattering it over a garden) (distribute profits among shareholders in the form of dividends) (distribute type by returning each piece of used type to its proper compartment in a case) (the old habit of centralizing a strain at one point, and then dividing and subdividing it, and distributing it on visible lines of support to a visible foundation—Henry Adams) (all modern societies aim... to distribute impartially to all the burdens and advantages of the state—Dickinson) Dispense (see also ADMINISTER 1) differs from distribute in not usually implying a spreading out that affects a large number or a separation that reduces the size or amount of each part or portion; rather, it suggests the giving of a carefully weighed or measured portion to each of a group as a right or as due, or as accordant to need (dispense aims to the needy) (if every just man that now pines with want had but a moderate and beseeching share... nature's full blessings would be well-dispensed—Milton) (let us... receive whatever good 'tis given thee to dispense—Wordsworth) (a pulsating, metallic, fluorescent world, in which Olympian judgments are dispensed by worried word fanciers from their thirty-ninth floor cubicles—Hilton) Divide (see also SEPARATE) stresses the separation of a whole into parts but it implies as the purpose of that separation a dispensing of those parts to, or a sharing of them by, each of a group; the term usually implies, if the context gives no further information, that the parts are equal 〈the three partners divide the profits of the business, the size of each share depending on the size of the partner's investment〉〈claimed that his confederates would not divide the booty fairly〉 〈of the rent, a large proportion was divided among the country gentlemen—Macaulay〉 〈if, for example, he is an evildoer, it is a great comfort to him to know that others likewise are evildoers. Dividing the blame lightens the load—Overstreet〉 Deal (usually followed by out) emphasizes the delivery of something piece by piece, or in suitable portions, especially to those who have a right to expect it 〈deal the cards for a game of bridge〉 〈deal out equipment and supplies to each soldier〉 〈our fellows were very methodical about the death they were dealing out. They dispensed it in the firm, tranquil-seeming way of clerks—Wolfert〉 Often, the term carries no suggestion of distribution, and means little more than to give or deliver 〈dealt his opponent a blow〉 〈should employ one special man whose sole job is to keep inventing fresh phrases of delight to be dealt out in regular doses to authors at work—Dawson & Wilson〉 Dole (also frequently followed by out) may imply a dispensing of alms to the needy 〈dole out daily one thousand loaves of bread〉 〈a prince doling out favors to a servile group of petitioners—Dreiser〉 but since in this sense it usually suggests a carefully measured portion, it often suggests scantiness or niggardliness in the amount dispensed and does not necessarily suggest a charitable intent 〈this comfort . . . she doled out to him in daily portions—Fielding〉 〈I can accept what is given in love and affection to me, but I could not accept what was doled out grudgingly or with conditions—Wilde〉

Dive vb 〈dive bomb, dive for, dive in, dive into, dive under〉

Distrust vb Distrust, mistrust are comparable both as verbs meaning to lack trust or confidence in someone or something and as nouns denoting such a lack of trust or confidence. Distrust, however, implies far more certitude that something is wrong than mistrust; often it suggests conviction of another's guilt, treachery, or weakness 〈Octavius had imbibed sufficient philosophy to distrust the world as a place for all ill—Buchan〉 〈the same distrust and horror of the unnatural forms into which life for the majority of people is being forced—Day Lewis〉 Mistrust suggests domination by suspicion and, usually, fear 〈he took me into a place so wild that a man less accustomed to these things might have mistrusted and feared for his life—Cather〉 〈something . . . roused in him a suspicion that in the near future he was not going to have matters quite so much his own way. However, he concealed his mistrust as well as he could—Mackenzie〉

Con *rely, trust, depend, count, bank, reckon: confide, entrust, *commit, consign

Distrust n mistrust (see under DISTRUST vb)

Ana doubt, *uncertainty, dubiety, dubiositas, suspicion: *apprehension, foreboding, misgiving, presentiment

Con confidence, *trust, reliance, dependence, faith

Disturb 1 unsettle, derange, *disorder, disarrange, disorganize

Ana analogous words  Ant antonyms  Con contrasted words  See also explanatory notes facing page 1
divide vb 1 *separate, part, sever, sunder, divorce Ana cleave, split, rend, rive (see TEAR): *cut, carve, chop Ant unite
   2 *distribute, dispense, deal, dole Ana *apportion, portion, prorate, ration, parcel: *share, participate, partake: *allot, assign, allocate divine adj *holy, sacred, spiritual, religious, blessed divive vb *foresee, foreknow, apprehend, anticipate Ana discern, perceive, descry (see SEE): predict, prophesy, prognosticate, presage (see FORETELL) division section, segment, sector, *part, portion, piece, detail, member, fraction, fragment, parcel divorce vb *separate, sever, sunder, part, divide Ana alienate, *strange, wean, disaffect divulge tell, disclose, *reveal, betray, discover vb *separate, sever, sunder, part, divide dizzy *giddy, vertiginous, swimming, dazzled Ana reeling, whirling (see REEL): confounded, bewildered, puzzled (see PUZZLE)

docile obedient, biddable, tractable, amenable Ana *compliant, acquiescent: pliant, pliable, adapt- (see PLASTIC): yielding, submitting or submissive (see corresponding verbs at YIELD) Ant indolent: unruly, ungovernable —Con intractable, refractory, recalcitrant, willful, headstrong (see UNRULY): stubborn, *obstinate dock wharf, pier, quay, slip, berth, jetty, levee doctor vb *adulterate, sophisticate, load, weight doctrinaire dogmatic, magisterial, oracular, *dictatorial, authoritarian doctrine, dogma, tenet are synonymous only when they mean a principle (usually one of a series or of a body of principles) accepted as authoritative (as by members of a church, a school of philosophers, or a branch of science).

   Doctrine is often used in a much broader sense to denote a formulated theory that is supported by evidence, backed by authority, and proposed for acceptance (the doctrine of evolution) <Einstein's doctrine of relativity>. In the narrower sense doctrine retains its basic implication of authoritative teaching, but it presupposes acceptance by a body of believers or adherents (a catechism of Christian doctrines) (a ... mathematical doctrine of waves which nowadays has almost come to dominate ... physics—Darrow) Dogma also stresses authoritative teaching but unlike doctrine it seldom implies proposal for acceptance. A dogma is not advanced as reasoned and worthy of acceptance but laid down as true and beyond dispute (the dogmas of a church are usually stated in a creed or confession) (in 1870 Pope Pius IX defined the dogma of papal infallibility) Dogma (or especially its derivative dogmatic) often connotes insistence, sometimes arrogant insistence, on authority or imposition by authority (the dogma that the king can do no wrong) Tenet emphasizes acceptance and belief rather than teaching. It is therefore thought of as a principle held or adhered to and implies a body of adherents (the tenets of modern Socialism are not in every instance identical with the doctrines of Karl Marx)
   Ana teaching, instruction (see corresponding verbs at TEACH): *principle, fundamental

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.
dogged

265 donation

doctrine, tenet boredom, ennui, •tedium allowance, pittance, * ration
doctrine, tenet

lugubrious, dolorous, *melancholy, plaintive,
dolor

sphere, province, *field, territory, bailiwick belief, conviction, persuasion, view (see OPINION):

apportioning or apportionment, parceling or parcel, portioning or portion (see corresponding verbs at AP-PORTION): sharing or share (see corresponding verb SHARE)
doctrine, tenet

suffering, passion, *distress, misery

mournful, sorrowing or sorrowful,
grieving (see corresponding verbs at GRIEVE); piteous,
•pitiful

cheerful, cheery
dolor

agony, suffering, passion, *distress, misery

mournful, sorrowing or sorrowful,
grieving (see corresponding verbs at GRIEVE); piteous,
•pitiful

cheerful, cheery
dolor

agony, suffering, passion, *distress, misery

mournful, sorrowing or sorrowful,
grieving (see corresponding verbs at GRIEVE); piteous,
•pitiful

cheerful, cheery
dolor

agony, suffering, passion, *distress, misery

mournful, sorrowing or sorrowful,
grieving (see corresponding verbs at GRIEVE); piteous,
•pitiful

cheerful, cheery
dolor

agony, suffering, passion, *distress, misery

mournful, sorrowing or sorrowful,
grieving (see corresponding verbs at GRIEVE); piteous,
•pitiful

cheerful, cheery
dolor

agony, suffering, passion, *distress, misery

mournful, sorrowing or sorrowful,
grieving (see corresponding verbs at GRIEVE); piteous,
•pitiful

cheerful, cheery
dolor

agony, suffering, passion, *distress, misery

mournful, sorrowing or sorrowful,
grieving (see corresponding verbs at GRIEVE); piteous,
•pitiful

cheerful, cheery
dolor

agony, suffering, passion, *distress, misery

mournful, sorrowing or sorrowful,
grieving (see corresponding verbs at GRIEVE); piteous,
•pitiful

cheerful, cheery
dolor

agony, suffering, passion, *distress, misery

mournful, sorrowing or sorrowful,
grieving (see corresponding verbs at GRIEVE); piteous,
•pitiful

cheerful, cheery
dolor

agony, suffering, passion, *distress, misery

mournful, sorrowing or sorrowful,
grieving (see corresponding verbs at GRIEVE); piteous,
•pitiful

cheerful, cheery
dolor

agony, suffering, passion, *distress, misery

mournful, sorrowing or sorrowful,
grieving (see corresponding verbs at GRIEVE); piteous,
•pitiful

cheerful, cheery
dolor

agony, suffering, passion, *distress, misery

mournful, sorrowing or sorrowful,
grieving (see corresponding verbs at GRIEVE); piteous,
•pitiful

cheerful, cheery
dolor

agony, suffering, passion, *distress, misery

mournful, sorrowing or sorrowful,
grieving (see corresponding verbs at GRIEVE); piteous,
•pitiful

cheerful, cheery
dolor

agony, suffering, passion, *distress, misery

mournful, sorrowing or sorrowful,
grieving (see corresponding verbs at GRIEVE); piteous,
•pitiful

cheerful, cheery
dolor

agony, suffering, passion, *distress, misery

mournful, sorrowing or sorrowful,
grieving (see corresponding verbs at GRIEVE); piteous,
•pitiful

cheerful, cheery
dolor

agony, suffering, passion, *distress, misery

mournful, sorrowing or sorrowful,
grieving (see corresponding verbs at GRIEVE); piteous,
•pitiful

cheerful, cheery
dolor

agony, suffering, passion, *distress, misery

mournful, sorrowing or sorrowful,
grieving (see corresponding verbs at GRIEVE); piteous,
•pitiful

cheerful, cheery
dolor

agony, suffering, passion, *distress, misery

mournful, sorrowing or sorrowful,
grieving (see corresponding verbs at GRIEVE); piteous,
•pitiful

cheerful, cheery
dolor

agony, suffering, passion, *distress, misery

mournful, sorrowing or sorrowful,
grieving (see corresponding verbs at GRIEVE); piteous,
•pitiful

cheerful, cheery
dolor

agony, suffering, passion, *distress, misery

mournful, sorrowing or sorrowful,
grieving (see corresponding verbs at GRIEVE); piteous,
•pitiful

cheerful, cheery
dolor

agony, suffering, passion, *distress, misery

mournful, sorrowing or sorrowful,
grieving (see corresponding verbs at GRIEVE); piteous,
•pitiful

cheerful, cheery
dolor

agony, suffering, passion, *distress, misery

mournful, sorrowing or sorrowful,
grieving (see corresponding verbs at GRIEVE); piteous,
•pitiful

cheerful, cheery
dolor

agony, suffering, passion, *distress, misery

mournful, sorrowing or sorrowful,
grieving (see corresponding verbs at GRIEVE); piteous,
•pitiful

cheerful, cheery
dolor

agony, suffering, passion, *distress, misery

mournful, sorrowing or sorrowful,
grieving (see corresponding verbs at GRIEVE); piteous,
•pitiful

cheerful, cheery
dolor

agony, suffering, passion, *distress, misery

mournful, sorrowing or sorrowful,
grieving (see corresponding verbs at GRIEVE); piteous,
•pitiful

cheerful, cheery
dolor

agony, suffering, passion, *distress, misery

mournful, sorrowing or sorrowful,
grieving (see corresponding verbs at GRIEVE); piteous,
or less publicly, and usually without reference to other givers or gifts (the endowment funds of the great universities are increased mainly by donations and bequests) a list of the Rockefeller donations Benefit is often used in place of donation, especially when there is the intent to compliment the donor and to imply his benevolence or the beneficence of his gift. The latter, however, is the basic implication and the word may be appropriately used of any benefit conferred or received whether it has money value or not (her benefactions are remembered by many philanthropic agencies) the benefactions of the American GIs to the children of Korea—Harford Times this benefaction totals almost $5 million—Americana Annual Contribution implies participation in giving; it is applicable as small as well as large amounts of money; it is the modest term which one may apply to his own gift, though others may rightly call it a donation or benefaction (please accept my contribution to the endowment fund of your institution) a community chest contribution (but the Government quickly came to the rescue, and, aided by private contribution, built a cutoff wall—Amer. Guide Series: Minn.) Alms implies the aim of relieving poverty either in former times as the fulfillment of a religious obligation or as a practical manifestation of the virtue of charity the gift without any proviso: who gives himself with his alms feeds three, himself, his hungering neighbor, and me [Christ]—J. R. Lowell or in more recent times as an indication of casual benevolence displayed chiefly in the giving of petty sums to beggars or paupers (though poor and forced to live on alms—Wordsworth a few filthy . . . children, waiting for stray tourists, cried for alms—Harper's) Ana grant, subvention appropriation, subsidy doom n fate, destiny, lot, portion doom vb damn, condemn sentence, proscribe door n doorway, portal, postern, gate, gateway are comparable chiefly as meaning an entrance to a place. Door applies chiefly to the movable and usually swinging barrier which is set in the opening which serves as an entrance to a building or to a room or apartment in a building an oak door the front door of a house sometimes door is used also of the opening children came running through the door gate may apply to an opening in a wall, fence, or enclosure but it more commonly denotes a movable and often swinging barrier (especially one made of a grating or open frame or a heavy or rough structure) set in such an opening and closed or opened at will the north gate to the campus the opening the garden gate Portal applies usually to an elaborate and stately door or gate, with its surrounding framework the portal to the temple the knights were admitted through the portal to the palace Postern denotes a private or retired door or gate (as at the back of a castle or fortress). Doorway and gateway apply not to the structure but to the passage when a door (in a doorway) or a gate (in a gateway) is opened for ingress or egress (stand in the doorway awaiting the postman) (automobiles passed through the gateway in constant succession) In their extended use these words are still more sharply distinguished. Door usually applies to what provides opportunity to enter or withdraw or makes possible an entrance or exit (the love of books, the golden key that opens the enchanted door—Long) i know death hath ten thousand several doors for men to take their exit—John Webster Gate differs from door chiefly in its connotations of facility in admission or of entrance into something large, impressive, wide, or even infinite (what sweet contentments doth the soul enjoy by the senses! They are the gates and windows of its knowledge—William Drummond) to wade through slaughter to a throne and shut the gates of mercy on mankind—Gray Portal often carries similar connotations, but it usually applies to a definite place or thing which is itself splendid or magnificent and through which something (as the sun at rising and at setting) is admitted or allowed exit (Heaven, that opened wide her blazing portals—Milton) since your name will grow with time . . . have I made the name a golden portal to my rhyme—Tennyson Postern, on the other hand, implies an inconspicuous or even a hidden means of entrance or escape it finds a reader way to our sympathy through a postern which we cannot help leaving sometimes on the latch, than through the ceremonious portal of classical prescription—J. R. Lowell Gateway is usually preferred to doorway in figurative use because it more strongly suggests a passage through which entrance is gained to something desirable or difficult (the city was once more the gateway to half a continent—Harold Sinclair) the senses were regarded as gateways or avenues of knowledge—Dewey Ana entrance, entry, entrance, ingress, access doorway door, portal, postern, gate, gateway dormant 1 quiescent, latent, abeyant, potential Ana inactivable, inert, passive, idle Ant active, alive, 2 couchant, prone, recumbent, supine, prostrate dormer n window, casement, oriel dotage senility, age, senescence Ant infancy dote love, relish, enjoy, fancy, like Ant loathe —Con abhor, abominate, detest, hate despise, contemn, scorn dotting fond, devoted, affectionate Ana infuriated, enamored: fatuous, foolish, silly, asinine, simple double n understudy, stand-in substitute, supply, locum tenens, alternate, pinch hitter double-cross delude, betray, beguile, deceive, mislead double-dealing n chicanery, chicane, trickery, deception, fraud Ana duplicity, dissimulation, deceit, guile, cunning double entendre equivocation, ambiguity, tergiversation doubt n uncertainty, skepticism, suspicion, mistrust, dubiety, dubiosities Ana dubiousness, doubtfulness, questionableness (see corresponding adjectives at DOUBTFUL) incredulity, unbelief, disbelief Ant certitude confidence —Con certainty conviction, assurance trust, reliance, dependence, faith doubtful, dubious, problematic, questionable are comparable when they mean not affording assurance of the worth, soundness, success, or certainty of something or someone. Doubtful and dubious are sometimes used with little distinction. Doubtful, however, is commonly so positive in its implication as almost to imply worthlessness, unsoundness, failure, or uncertainty to the thing in question (it is doubtful whether the captain had ever had so much fun—Steinbeck) Dubious stresses suspicion, mistrust, or hesitation (as in accepting, believing, following, or choosing); thus, a man of doubtful repute is by implication more distrusted than one of dubious repute; one who is doubtful of the outcome of a project has by implication better grounds for fearing its failure than one dubious about it, for the latter may imply mere vague suspicions and fears and little evidence (a doubtful prospect) (a dubious transaction) (a dubious title to an estate) (dubious friends) whispers and glances were interchanged, accompanied by shrugs and dubious shakes of the head—Irving> <she takes me in, telling me there’s nobody there. I’m doubtful, but she swears she’s alone—Hammett> Problematic is the only one of the terms here considered that is free from a suggestion of a moral judgment or suspicion; it is especially applicable to things whose existence, meaning, fulfillment, or realization is very uncertain, sometimes so uncertain that the probabilities of truth and of falsehood or of success and of failure are nearly equal (the very existence of any such individual [Homer] . . . is more than problematic—Coleridge> <excellent acoustics, always so problematic a quality in halls built for the hearing of music—Wharton> <publishing is now in a very problematic state—Farrell> Questionable may imply little more than the existence of doubt respecting the thing so qualified (the legality of this action is questionable)  It more commonly suggests doubt about propriety and may imply well-grounded suspicions (as of immorality, crudity, or dishonesty) that for one reason or another need to be expressed in guarded terms; thus, to say that a man is a questionable character is to cast a reflection on his honesty or morality; questionable dealing suggests underhandedness and dishonesty (women of questionable virtue) <the propriety of Lydia’s manners was at least questionable—Shaw> <the illustration is questionable, but the notion implied may be sound—Alexander>

Ana distrusting or distrustful, mistrusting or mistrustful (see corresponding verbs at DISTRACT): *fearful, apprehensive, afraid

Ant cocksure, positive dough, batter, paste are quasi-synonyms often confused in their modern cookery senses. All denote a mixture of flour, liquid, salt, and supplementary ingredients, but each suggests a difference both in consistency as a result of the variety and proportion of ingredients and in use. Dough applies to a mixture with only enough liquid in relation to the flour to bind the ingredients while leaving the mixture sufficiently stiff to knead or to shape before baking. Ordinarily other ingredients (as a kneading agent, fat, and sugar) are included to improve the texture, flavor, and nutritive qualities of the ultimate product which includes such items as bread, biscuit, rolls, and some kinds of cake and cookies. Batter applies to a thinner mass in which the proportion of liquid is much greater than in dough; characteristically, also, it contains eggs, and often baking powder, sugar, and fat. It may be used for cakes that are shaped by the pan in which they are baked or for those that are poured in small amounts on a hot griddle or pan and quickly cooked. Batter also designates a similar mixture of flour, liquid, and eggs into which raw food (as fish or meat) may be sound—Alexander downturn

Problematic is the only one of the terms here considered that is free from a suggestion of a moral judgment or suspicion; it is especially applicable to things whose existence, meaning, fulfillment, or realization is very uncertain, sometimes so uncertain that the probabilities of truth and of falsehood or of success and of failure are nearly equal (the very existence of any such individual [Homer] . . . is more than problematic—Coleridge> <excellent acoustics, always so problematic a quality in halls built for the hearing of music—Wharton> <publishing is now in a very problematic state—Farrell> Questionable may imply little more than the existence of doubt respecting the thing so qualified (the legality of this action is questionable)  It more commonly suggests doubt about propriety and may imply well-grounded suspicions (as of immorality, crudity, or dishonesty) that for one reason or another need to be expressed in guarded terms; thus, to say that a man is a questionable character is to cast a reflection on his honesty or morality; questionable dealing suggests underhandedness and dishonesty (women of questionable virtue) <the propriety of Lydia’s manners was at least questionable—Shaw> <the illustration is questionable, but the notion implied may be sound—Alexander> of being insupportable or exceptionally uncomfortable; it may sometimes suggest no more than a frame of mind in which depression and disappointment are associated with discomfort or grief (the Jews sat disconsolate on the poop); they complained much of the cold they had suffered in their exposed situation.—Borrow) (Adrian hurried after Richard in an extremely disconsolate state of mind. Not to be at the breakfast and see the best of the fun, disgusted him—Meredith) Woebegone usually suggests a frame of mind but it emphasizes the impression of dejection and defeat produced on an observer not only by the facial expression and posture of the one observed but also by his surroundings or quarters: it may imply dejection, depression, or merely discouragement in the persons affected or desolation or dilapidation in their surroundings, but the overall impression is that of a defeated, spiritless condition (it was the most woebegone farm I had ever seen) (the woebegone expression on the countenances of the little children) (a poor mendicant approached, old and woebegone—Lockhart) Ana weighed down, oppressed (see DEPRESS); distressed, troubled, unhappy, in trouble, double vbl; *troubled; adj: double vb; *troubled, forlorn Ant elated —Con cheerful, happy, joyous (see GLAD) downtright adj also adv *forthright Ana blunt, *bluff, brusque, curt: candid, plain, open, *frank: *straightforward, aboveboard Con devious, oblique, *crooked doze vb drowse, snooze, *sleep, slumber, nap, catnap draft n outline, diagram, sketch, delineation, tracing, plot, blueprint (see under SKETCH vb) draft vb outline, diagram, *sketch, delineate, trace, plot, blueprint draw vb draw, *pull, tug, tow, haul, hale Ana *bring, fetch: *attract, allure: *lure, entice: extract, elicit, evoke, *educe Con see those at DRAG draw n Draw, tie, stalematedeadlock, standoff mean an indecisive ending to a contest or competition or a contest or competition ending indecisively. Draw usually implies equally matched contestants who compete (as in fighting, performing, or playing) with equal skill and between whom there can be no clear decision as to the superiority of one or the other (the prizefight ended in a draw) (the chess match was a draw) Tie implies a numerical equality (as in the scores attained by competitors or contestants, or in the votes obtained by candidates for office); usually a tie does not remain indecisive, since provisions are often made (as by law or by the rules of a game) for reaching a decision when a tie occurs (there was a tie between the two candidates for governor, which was decided by a vote of the legislature) (when a contest ends in a tie, a further match is often played to determine the winner) Stalemate is fundamentally a term of chess which designates the position of a player when his king, although not in check, cannot be moved without being placed in check and the game is thereby drawn; in extended use, stalemate represents a condition from which neither contestant can derive an advantage (was advised to cut his losses by withdrawing . . . but refused, and expended much precious material there in a costly stalemate—D. N. Rowe) (they believed that they could hold the triumvirs to a stalemate till hunger or sedition broke down their armies—Buchan) Deadlock implies a counteraction or neutralization of the efforts of contending elements (as parties, forces, or factions) that leads to a stoppage of action; it connotes an immobilization because of the equal power of the opposing elements usually in a situation other than a formal competition or contest (it often happens that one party has a majority in the Senate, another party in the House, and then . . . a deadlock results—Bryce) (so the deadlock continues, and neither side is prepared to yield—Blanshard) Standoff is an informal term usually for a draw or tie but sometimes for a situation where two opponents counteract or neutralize each other, so evenly are they matched (they fought several hours to a standoff) (the availability of the bomb to the two greatest powers may mean a standoff as far as atomic war is concerned—Atlantic) dramatic, theatrical, dramaturgic, melodramatic, histrionic are not close synonyms although all imply special reference to plays as performed by actors or to the effects which are produced by acted plays. Dramatic basically denotes relationship to the drama as written or as produced (a dramatic critic) (a dramatic performance) It may imply an effect or a combination of effects appropriate to the drama (as a stirring of the imagination and emotions by vivid and expressive action, speech, and gesture, or by the exciting complications of a plot) (the dramatic appeal of a great orator) (the dramatic storytelling . . . of incidents which have a sympathetic hero—Russell) (an idyll of Theocritus . . . is today as much alive as the most dramatic passages of the Iliad—stirs the reader's feeling quite as much—Cather) Theatrical denotes relationship to the theater (a theatrical office) (a theatrical agent) It may imply effects appropriate to the theater as the place where plays are produced, and to the demands which its limitations, its convention, and, often, its need of financial success make both upon a play and its performance; the term therefore usually implies a marked degree of artificiality or conventionality, a direct and sometimes a blatant appeal to the senses and emotions, and often an overdoing or exaggeration in gesture, in speech, or in action (the situations are in the most effective sense theatrical, without being in the profounder sense dramatic—T. S. Eliot) (he had already learned that with this people religion was necessarily theatrical—Cather) Dramaturgic, which stresses the technical aspects of the drama and its presentation, may be used in place of theatrical when the more or less derogatory connotations of that word are to be avoided and the emphasis is upon those elements in a play which fit it for representation in a theater (poetic plays are often lacking in dramaturgic quality) (a play that is said to be "good theater" is both dramatic and dramaturgic in its character) (every dramaturgic practice that subordinates the words to any other medium has trivialized the drama—Bentley) Melodramatic implies a manner characteristic of melodrama; it, therefore, usually connotes exaggerated emotionalism or inappropriate theatricalism (make a melodramatic speech) (employ melodramatic gestures) (for the first time in his centuries of debate with the Tozers, he was melodramatic. He shook his fist under Bert's nose—Sinclair Lewis) (but suppose . . . the most lurid or melodramatic solution you like. Suppose the servant really killed the master—Chesterston) Histrionic is more limited than theatrical for it implies reference to the tones of voice, gestures, movements, and appearance characteristic of actors, especially in times before realism was attempted in dramatic performances (good looks are more desired than histrionic skill—Shaw) (a tall, histrionic, dark man with a tossing mane—S. E. White) dramaturgic theatrical, *dramatic, histrionic, melodramatic draw vb draw, *pull, tug, tow, haul, hale Ana *bring, fetch: *attract, allure: *lure, entice: extract, elicit, evoke, *educe Con see those at DRAG drawback 269

\(

\(\text{drawback} \quad *\text{disadvantage, detriment, handicap}\)

\(\text{Ana} \quad *\text{evil, ill: inconvenience, trouble (see INCONVENIENCE): obstruction, hindrance (see corresponding verbs at HINDER)}\)

\(\text{dread} \quad n \quad *\text{fear, horror, terror, fright, alarm, trepidation, panic, consternation, dismay}\)

\(\text{Ana} \quad *\text{apprehension, foreboding, misgiving, presentiment: timidity, timorousness (see corresponding adjectives at TIMID)}\)

\(\text{dreadful} \quad \text{horrible, horrific, appalling, *fearful, awful, frightened, terrible, terrific, shocking}\)

\(\text{dream} \quad n \quad *\text{fancy, fantasy, phantasy, phantasm, vision, daydream, nightmare}\)

\(\text{Ana} \quad *\text{delusion, illusion, hallucination}\)

\(\text{dreary} \quad 1 \quad *\text{dismal, cheerless, dispiriting, bleak, desolate}\)

\(\text{Ana} \quad *\text{disheartening (see DISCOURAGE): barren, *bare: forlorn, hopeless (see DESPONDENT)}\)

\(\text{2} \quad *\text{dull, humdrum, monotonous, pedestrian, stodgy}\)

\(\text{Ana} \quad *\text{irksome, tiresome, wearsome, tedious, boring: fatiguing, exhausting, fagging, tiring (see TIRE vb)}\)

\(\text{dregs} \quad \text{sediment, *deposit, precipitate, lees, grounds}\)

\(\text{drench} \quad *\text{soak, saturate, sop, steep, impregnate, waterlog}\)

\(\text{Ana} \quad *\text{permeate, pervade, penetrate, impenetrate}\)

\(\text{dress} \quad vb \quad *\text{clothe, attire, apparel, array, robe}\)

\(\text{Ana} \quad \text{undress}\)

\(\text{dress} \quad n \quad *\text{clothes, clothing, attire, apparel, raiment}\)

\(\text{drift} \quad n \quad *\text{trend, tenancy, tenor}\)

\(\text{Ana} \quad *\text{flow, stream, current: movement, *motion, progression, *progress: *intention, purpose, end, objective, goal, intent, aim}\)

\(\text{drill} \quad vb \quad 1 \quad *\text{bore, perforate, punch, puncture, prick}\)

\(\text{Ana} \quad *\text{pierce, penetrate, *enter, probe}\)

\(\text{2} \quad *\text{practice, exercise}\)

\(\text{Ana} \quad *\text{train, discipline, *teach, instruct, school: *habituate, accustom}\)

\(\text{drill} \quad n \quad *\text{practice, exercise (see under PRACTICE vb)}\)

\(\text{drive} \quad vb \quad 1 \quad *\text{impel, move, actuate}\)

\(\text{Ana} \quad *\text{push, shove, propel: compel, *force, coerce: *incite, instigate}\)

\(\text{Con} \quad *\text{restrain, curb, check, inhibit: lead, *guide, pilot, steer}\)

\(\text{2} \quad *\text{ride}\)

\(\text{drive} \quad n \quad 1 \quad *\text{ride (see under RIDE vb)}\)

\(\text{2} \quad *\text{vigor, vim, spirit, dash, esprit, verve, punch, élan}\)

\(\text{Ana} \quad *\text{power, force, energy, strength, might: impetus, momentum, *speed, velocity}\)

\(\text{drivel} \quad *\text{nonsense, twaddle, bumb, balderdash, poppycock, gobbledygook, trash, rot, bull}\)

\(\text{Ana} \quad *\text{gibberish, mummmery, abracadabra}\)

\(\text{droll} \quad *\text{laughable, risible, comic, comical, funny, ludicrous, ridiculous, farcical}\)

\(\text{Ana} \quad *\text{amusing, diverting, entertaining (see AMUSE): absurd, preposterous (see FOOLISH): humorous, *witty, facetious}\)

\(\text{droop vb} \quad \text{Droop, wilt, flag, sag} \quad *\text{are comparable when they mean to sink or to lose in vigor, firmness, or freshness.} \quad \text{Droop} \quad *\text{stresses a hanging or bending downward (as through exhaustion, discouragement, or lack of nourishment: *some of the watchers were drooping from weariness—Cather} \quad *\text{he sat down heavily, his shoulders drooping, his arms falling between his outspread legs —Caldwell} \quad \text{In extended use it implies a languishing or a subsiding of something previously thriving or flourishing <oh, ye so fiercely tended, ye little seeds of hate! I bent above your growing early and noon and late, yet are ye drooped and pitiful, —I cannot rear ye straight!—Miller}\)

\(\text{Ana} \quad \text{analogous words} \quad \text{Ana} \quad \text{antonyms} \quad \text{Con} \quad \text{contrasted words} \quad \text{See also explanatory notes facing page 1}\)

\(\text{Wilt} \quad *\text{applies especially to plants and suggests a loss of freshness or firmness in flower, leaves, or stems through lack of water or through excessive heat <most cut flowers wilt quickly unless given plenty of fresh water> The term often may be extended to various things that grow flaccid or weak in response to some stress (as fear, exhaustion, boredom, or a physical agent) <collars wilted in the damp heat> <the witness wilted under the cross-examiner’s sarcasm> <nor did I ever see the nation droop and wilt as we saw it wither under the panic of 1907—White> <the romance ... blossomed for six or seven months and then wilted—Commins} \quad \text{Flag} \quad *\text{may be used of flexible things that hang loosely and limply and, with reference to plants, may be interchangeable with droop <leaves flagging in the heat> more often it is used of something that loses in vigor or in force so that it suggests dullness, weariness, or languor <the conversation flagged> <Tristan and Isolde: it’s wonderful beyond words—a sustained ecstasy of love that never flags or grows monotonous—Ellis} \quad \text{This effect of wearying or boring may be attributed not to the thing which drops in interest or stimulating power but to the energy, spirits, interest, or attention that are concentrated on that thing (for a couple of hours he wrote with energy, and then his energy flagged—H. G. Wells) <these devices succeed ... in stimulating our interest afresh just at the moment when it was about to flag—T. S. Eliot} \quad \text{Sag} \quad *\text{implies a sinking or subsiding, especially at one point, through undue weight, pressure, or improper distribution of stresses <the ceiling shows signs of sagging> <the bridge sagged under the weight of the truck> In extended uses it implies a loss of firmness, resiliency, or power to stand up against pressure, and a consequent drooping or decline <though it sags in the middle, the novel is readable throughout—Havighurst> <his heart sagged with disappointment—Mason> <prices on the market sagged> \quad \text{Ana} \quad *\text{sink, slump, subside, *fall, drop: languish (see languishing under Languid): *wither, shrivel, wizen}

\(\text{Ana} \quad \text{undress}\)

\(\text{Ana} \quad *\text{clothes, clothing, attire, apparel, raiment}\)

\(\text{Ana} \quad *\text{train, discipline, *teach, instruct, school: *habituate, accustom}\)

\(\text{Ana} \quad *\text{push, shove, propel: compel, *force, coerce: *incite, instigate}\)

\(\text{Ana} \quad *\text{restrain, curb, check, inhibit: lead, *guide, pilot, steer}\)

\(\text{Ana} \quad *\text{power, force, energy, strength, might: impetus, momentum, *speed, velocity}\)

\(\text{Ana} \quad *\text{nonsense, twaddle, bumb, balderdash, poppycock, gobbledygook, trash, rot, bull}\)

\(\text{Ana} \quad *\text{gibberish, mummmery, abracadabra}\)

\(\text{Ana} \quad *\text{amusing, diverting, entertaining (see AMUSE): absurd, preposterous (see FOOLISH): humorous, *witty, facetious}\)

\(\text{Ana} \quad *\text{sloppy, somnolent, slumberous}\)

\(\text{Ana} \quad *\text{alert, vigilant, *watchful: *active, live, dynamic: animate, *lively, vivacious}\)

\(\text{Ana} \quad *\text{sleepy, somnolent, slumberous}\)

\(\text{Ana} \quad *\text{sleepy, somnolent, slumberous}\)

\(\text{Ana} \quad *\text{alert, vigilant, *watchful: *active, live, dynamic: animate, *lively, vivacious}\)

\(\text{Ana} \quad *\text{sleepy, somnolent, slumberous}\)

\(\text{Ana} \quad *\text{alert, vigilant, *watchful: *active, live, dynamic: animate, *lively, vivacious}\)

druggist

〈exports of medicinals to China〉〈medicinals are not contraband〉

Pharmaceutical is also often preferred to drug by pharmacists and manufacturers, especially as a designation of drugs (as quinine, cod-liver oil, and aspirin) which are commercially refined or prepared or synthetically manufactured. The term is also used to distinguish strictly therapeutic substances from other substances of similar origin or composition (the company produces pharmaceuticals, dyes, and cosmetics) Biological is the increasingly frequent designation for a therapeutic product (as a globulin, serum, vaccine, or antibody) that is ultimately a product of living organisms. Simple usually denotes a plant product used for its real or fancied medicinal value especially in primitive or folk medicine 〈boneseed, tansy, and other homely simples〉 It may also be used of a plant drug or medicinal preparation containing only one active ingredient.

Ana

medicine, medicament, medication, *remedy, physic, Ana druggist, pharmacist, apothecary, chemist denote one who deals in medicinal drugs. Druggist is the broadest of these terms and may designate a seller of drugs or medicinal preparations at wholesale or retail and as owner, manager, or employee of the sales establishment; it may often replace the more precise pharmacist to denote one who is skilled in compounding drugs and dispensing medicines prescribed by a physician especially when he is thought of primarily as selling these. Pharmacist, however, specifically implies, as druggist does not, special training in pharmacy, professional standing, and usually licensing following a test of qualifications. Apothecary in early use was distinguished from druggist, which then designated one who sold crude drugs (as herbs, roots, and other ingredients of medicines) while apothecary designated one who compounded these ingredients or made them up into medicines and was, therefore, equivalent to pharmacist. The distinction has tended to disappear and apothecary may be interchangeable with either druggist or pharmacist although it is increasingly rare except in historical situations. In England chemist is the preferred term.

drunk, drunken, intoxicated, inebriated, tipsy, tight are comparable when they mean being conspicuously drunkard, alcoholic, dipsomaniac, sot, soak, tipper, tosspot, tippler designate one who drinks to excess. Drunkard and inebriate suggest the habituation of intoxication but in themselves imply nothing about the causes or effects of such intoxication. Alcoholic and dipsomaniac both denote a person with defective ability to control his use of intoxicants. In technical usage alcoholic is the usual term and often specifically distinguishes the person physically and mentally impaired by compulsive drinking; in more general and often distinctly derogatory use it may approach drunkard and inebriate but normally carries at least some suggestion of loss of control. Dipsomaniac, once nearly coextensive with alcoholic, is now little used except to denote a person subject to periodic bouts of compulsive drinking. Sot and soak are closely comparable in implying excessive and habitual drinking. Sot in addition suggests the dulling of faculties and degradation of habits that accompany such drinking. Soak, on the other hand, may stress a spongeliike capacity for intoxicants and even carry a hint of wry admiration; like the next two terms but unlike sot it may be used as a casual or even friendly epithet without connoting any strong disparagement. Tipper, tosspot, and tippler all imply habitual drinking but carry no inherent implication of intoxication. Toper and tosspot commonly stress the conviviality and jovialness of group drinking (as in taverns and bars) and may suggest a capacity for heavy drinking without obvious intoxication. Tippler carries the idea of light but constant and often secret drinking.

Ant teetotaller
drunken *drunk, intoxicated, inebriated, tipsy, tight drunk

dry adj

1 Dry, arid mean devoid of moisture. Dry may suggest freedom from noticeable moisture either as a characteristic or as a desirable state (a dry climate) (dry clothing) (dry land) (dry provisions) (dry floors) or it may suggest deficiency of moisture or the lack of normal or necessary moisture (dry soil) (a dry summer) (dry seaside) or, again, it may suggest exhaustion or dissipation of water or other liquid (a dry fountain pen) (dry pond) (dry well) (dry bones) Arid implies destitution or deprivation of moisture and therefore extreme rather than relative dryness. In its chief applications to regions or territory, it suggests waste or desert land (an arid condition of soil) In extended use, as applied to such matters as subjects, books, or sermons, dry suggests the lack of qualities which compel interest or attention (the course is dry but useful) (in the driest passages of her historical summaries these delightful descriptions come running to the rescue—Payne) Arid, on the other hand, connotes absence of all qualities which mark the thing so this led Novalis to characterize him as the God-intoxicat ed—Ginnetti〉〈intoxicated poetry, difficult and dense but flashing sparks of overwhelming insight—Time〉〈a sweet inebriated ecstasy—Crashaw〉 Tipsy implies a degree of intoxication that deprives one of muscular or sometimes of mental control 〈drinking steadily, until just manageably tipsy, he contrived to continue so—Melville〉 Tight usually implies obvious intoxication, but does not suggest loss of power over one's muscles 〈he was tight, and, as was characteristic of him, he soon dropped any professional discretion that he might have been supposed to exercise— Edmund Wilson〉

Ana fuddled, befuddled, confused (see CONFUSE): maudlin, soppy (see SENTIMENTAL) Ant sober drunkard, inebriate, alcoholic, dipsomaniac, sot, soak, toper, tosspot, tippler designate one who drinks to excess. Drunkard and inebriate suggest the habituation of intoxication but in themselves imply nothing about the causes or effects of such intoxication. Alcoholic and dipsomaniac both denote a person with defective ability to control his use of intoxicants. In technical usage alcoholic is the usual term and often specifically distinguishes the person physically and mentally impaired by compulsive drinking; in more general and often distinctly derogatory use it may approach drunkard and inebriate but normally carries at least some suggestion of loss of control. Dipsomaniac, once nearly coextensive with alcoholic, is now little used except to denote a person subject to periodic bouts of compulsive drinking. Sot and soak are closely comparable in implying excessive and habitual drinking. Sot in addition suggests the dulling of faculties and degradation of habits that accompany such drinking. Soak, on the other hand, may stress a spongeliike capacity for intoxicants and even carry a hint of wry admiration; like the next two terms but unlike sot it may be used as a casual or even friendly epithet without connoting any strong disparagement. Tipper, tosspot, and tippler all imply habitual drinking but carry no inherent implication of intoxication. Toper and tosspot commonly stress the conviviality and jovialness of group drinking (as in taverns and bars) and may suggest a capacity for heavy drinking without obvious intoxication. Tippler carries the idea of light but constant and often secret drinking.

Ant teetotaller
drunken *drunk, intoxicated, inebriated, tipsy, tight drunk

dry adj

1 Dry, arid mean devoid of moisture. Dry may suggest freedom from noticeable moisture either as a characteristic or as a desirable state (a dry climate) (dry clothing) (dry land) (dry provisions) (dry floors) or it may suggest deficiency of moisture or the lack of normal or necessary moisture (dry soil) (a dry summer) (dry seaside) or, again, it may suggest exhaustion or dissipation of water or other liquid (a dry fountain pen) (dry pond) (dry well) (dry bones) Arid implies destitution or deprivation of moisture and therefore extreme rather than relative dryness. In its chief applications to regions or territory, it suggests waste or desert land (an arid condition of soil) In extended use, as applied to such matters as subjects, books, or sermons, dry suggests the lack of qualities which compel interest or attention (the course is dry but useful) (in the driest passages of her historical summaries these delightful descriptions come running to the rescue—Payne) Arid, on the other hand, connotes absence of all qualities which mark the thing so qualified as worthwhile, fruitful, or significant (an arid treatise on poetry) (the frank elucidation of such a principle ... might imply only bleak and arid results—Holbrook Jackson) As applied to persons, their manner, or their words and expressions, dry implies a loss of normal or often of youthful human warmth, freshness, responsiveness, or enthusiasm; arid, an absence of these qualities or an incapacity for them (his dry schoolmaster temperament, the husky-gurdy monotony of him—James) (some arid matron made her rounds at dawn sniffing, peering, causing blue-nosed maids to scowl—Woolf) Specifically, dry often suggests the repression of feeling for the sake of outwardly appearing aloof or imperturbed (a dry comic style) (comments which did not seem to be censures because uttered in a dry tone of voice) Arid, on the other hand, often connotes a deadening of feeling, especially as shown by a loss of fervor or hope (if Shakespeare himself ever had that "dark period"... it was at least no darkness like that bleak and arid despair which sometimes settles over modern spirits—Krutch)

Dry, desiccate, dehydrate, bake, parch are compared when meaning to treat or to affect so as to deprive of moisture. Dry is the comprehensive word and may be used whatever the process (as evaporation, absorption, or solidification) or method (as heating, draining, or aerating) by which the result is attained (clothes dried in the wind) (dry up a ditch) (dry dishes with a towel) (dry bricks in a kiln) Desiccate is narrower in its range of reference and implies a complete deprivation of moisture, especially of vital juices, and often therefore, in its common extended use, a withering or shriveling. It is applicable to animal and vegetable products preserved by thorough drying (desiccated fish) or it may be applied to persons or to their attitudes, activities, or expression which have lost all their spiritual or emotional freshness or vitality (analysis is desiccating and takes the bloom off things—Babbitt) (they were all... living on the edge of their nerves, a harsh, angular, desiccated existence—Brooks) Dehydrate implies extraction or elimination of water; it is often preferred to desiccate, of which it is a close synonym, when the reference is to foods (dehydrate vegetables) It is the usual word when the removal of water (or hydrogen and oxygen in the proportion to form water) is by chemical rather than physical means (dehydrated alums) and in extended use suggests a removal of what strengthens, inspires, or makes meaningful or pleasing (ouches nothing that he does not dehydrate—Economist) Bake implies not only dehydrating by means of heat, but a hardening or caking of what is dried (sunbaked earth) (bake bricks) Parch stresses the damaging effect of drying by intense heat or drought; it is preferred to bake, therefore, when the restoration of the proper amount of water is necessary or highly desirable (a parched throat) (record heat waves which have parched mid-America’s usually productive plains—N. Y. Times Mag.)

Dry v/h Dry, desiccate, dehydrate, bake, parch are comparable when meaning to treat or to affect so as to deprive of moisture. Dry is the comprehensive word and may be used whatever the process (as evaporation, absorption, or solidification) or method (as heating, draining, or aerating) by which the result is attained (clothes dried in the wind) (dry up a ditch) (dry dishes with a towel) (dry bricks in a kiln) Desiccate is narrower in its range of reference and implies a complete deprivation of moisture, especially of vital juices, and often therefore, in its common extended use, a withering or shriveling. It is applicable to animal and vegetable products preserved by thorough drying (desiccated fish) or it may be applied to persons or to their attitudes, activities, or expression which have lost all their spiritual or emotional freshness or vitality (analysis is desiccating and takes the bloom off things—Babbitt) (they were all... living on the edge of their nerves, a harsh, angular, desiccated existence—Brooks) Dehydrate implies extraction or elimination of water; it is often preferred to desiccate, of which it is a close synonym, when the reference is to foods (dehydrate vegetables) It is the usual word when the removal of water (or hydrogen and oxygen in the proportion to form water) is by chemical rather than physical means (dehydrated alums) and in extended use suggests a removal of what strengthens, inspires, or makes meaningful or pleasing (ouches nothing that he does not dehydrate—Economist) Bake implies not only dehydrating by means of heat, but a hardening or caking of what is dried (sunbaked earth) (bake bricks) Parch stresses the damaging effect of drying by intense heat or drought; it is preferred to bake, therefore, when the restoration of the proper amount of water is necessary or highly desirable (a parched throat) (record heat waves which have parched mid-America’s usually productive plains—N. Y. Times Mag.)

Due adj Due, rightful, condign are comparable when they mean being in accordance with what is just and appropriate. Due, which basically means owed or owing as a debt, carries over in the sense here considered a strong implication that the thing so described is grounded upon an obligation, duty, or debt which should not or cannot be ignored; thus, one who takes due precautions uses the care that is required by his obligation to look out for his own or for others’ safety or well-being; one who has a due sense of another person’s rights accords to that person all that belongs to him by natural or moral right; one who has due respect for the law observes the individual laws as the duty of a responsible citizen. Often the term implies little more than an accordance with what is right, reasonable, or necessary (the due relation of one thing with another—Galsworthy) (your due and proper portion—Meredith) (many noncommissioned officers have a firm belief that without a due admixture of curses, an order is inaudible to a private—Montague) Rightful carries a much stronger and more consistent implication than due of a ground in right and justice, and usually suggests a moral or legal claim (the rightful heir to the estate) (possess the rightful authority) (looked askance, jealous of an encroacher on his rightful domain—Hawthorne) (the disloyal subject who had fought against his rightful sovereign—Macaulay) Condign applies to something that is distinctly deserved or merited and usually something that neither exceeds nor falls below one’s deserts or merits; the term is used chiefly of punishment, often with the implication of severity (he had been brought to condign punishment as a traitor—Macaulay) (the particular troubles which involved Messrs. Buecheler and Vahlen in such condign castigation—Housman) See also explanatory notes facing page 1 dull

punishments set up for violations of the rules of culture—Baruch)

Appropriate, meet, suitable, fit, fitting, proper: right, good: just, fair, equitable

Excessive, inordinate, immediate, extravagant, exorbitant: deficient dull adj 1 *stupid, slow, dumb, dense, crass

Dull, blunt, obtuse are comparable when they mean what is justly owed to a person (sometimes a thing), especially as a recompense or compensation. Due usually implies a legal or moral right on the part of the person or thing that makes the claim or is in a position to make the claim and suggests a determination of what is owed by strict justice. *More is thy due than more than all can pay —Shak. *Carve to all but just enough, let them neither starve nor stuff, and that you may have your due, let your neighbor carve for you—Swift) *Giving each man his due ... impartial as the rain from Heaven's face—Lindsay)

Desert (often in plural deserts) suggests not a legal right but a moral right based upon what one actually deserves, whether it be a reward or a penalty. *"My lord, I will use them according to their desert." *"God's bodykins, man, man, much better: use every man after his desert, and who should 'scape whipping?"—Shak. *You have deprived the best years of his life of that independence which was no less his due than his desert—Austen) *Any federal officer, regardless of his deserts, has much prestige—Heiser)

Merit is a somewhat complex term, often shifting in its major implication but (see also EXCELLENCE) commonly implying a deserving either of reward or punishment on the ground of what has been accomplished or of commendation, esteem, or acceptance on the ground of intrinsic and usually excellent qualities. *No tribute can be paid to them which exceeds their merit—John Marshall) *Deal with every case on its merits) *As a pilgrim to the Holy Places I acquire merit—Kipling

Compensation, recompensing or recompense, repayment, satisfaction, payment (see corresponding verbs at PAY): retribution, retaliation, reprisal, vengeance, revenge: reward, meed, guerdon (see PREMIUM)

Grating

Dull, humdrum, dreary, monotonous, pedestrian, stodgy mean so unvaried and uninteresting as to provoke boredom or tedium. Dull (see also STUPID) implies the lack of all gives brightness, edge, or point to the person or thing; it need not imply inferiority, but it does suggest, from the point of view of one who judges, a want of interesting character compared with her, other women were ... dull; even the pretty ones seemed lifeless—Cather) *For instance, you draw no inference from your facts. It's dull. Why not round the thing off into a good article?— Rose Macaulay) *Humdrum implies a commonplace and routine character; it suggests a lack of variation that persists and colors the life or the people who lead that life *a plain, humdrum domestic life, with eight hundred a year, and a small house, full of babies—Trollope) *They regarded their adversaries as humdrum people, slaves to routine, enemies to light—Arnold) *Dreary (see also DIS-MAL) applies to something that from the writer's or speaker's point of view seems uninteresting and dull; the word may imply an absence of enlivening character in the thing itself but more often it reveals an attitude of mind
*I see that many people find the world dreary—and, indeed, there must be spaces of dreaminess in it for us all —some find it interesting—Benson) *Monotonous implies an irksome sameness (as of what never changes in quality, character, or appearance); it may be widely applied (as to work, to play, to persons, to scenes, or to noises) *Inestant recurrence without variety breeds tedium; the overiterated becomes the monotonous—Lowes) *We may thus bring a little poetry and romance into the monotonous lives of our handworkers—Inge) *The sky was as full of motion and change as the desert beneath it was monotonous and still—Cather) *Pedestrian, which basically means walking on foot, is applied chiefly to something written, especially in verse, that lacks any quality (as originality in thought or freshness in expression or in imagery) which raises the spirits and that, therefore, is monotonous and uninspired; the term may connote a dull prosaic quality and implies the impossibility of lifting the reader's thoughts, emotions, or imagination *Who wandering with pedestrian muses, content not with you on the winged steed—Byron) *Crane's verse is of a very pedestrian order—Sidney Lee) *Stodgy, which also implies the lack of a quality which inspires or inspires, is wider in its application, for it emphasizes the heaviness, the solidity, or the lumpiness of something (as a person, a book, or an affair) that should be lighter, brighter, or gayer (a

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.
dumb 273 durable

stodgy discussion <the reception was a stodgy affair> <in England, art must be obvious and stodgy before people think it's respectable—Guy Thorne> Anaxirksome, tiresome, wearisome, tedious, boring: prosy, *prosaic, matter-of-fact Ant lively —Con gay, animated, sprightly (see LIVELY): exciting, stimulating (see PROVOKE) dumb adj 1 Dumb, mute, speechless, inarticulate mean lacking the power to speak. Dumb and mute are often used interchangeably, but when used in distinction from each other, dumb implies an incapacity for speech (as in the case of animals and inanimate objects or of human beings whose organs of speech are defective); mute implies an inability to speak, owing to one's never having heard speech sounds (as in the case of one who is deaf congenitally or has lost his hearing before being old enough to reproduce heard sounds); thus, persons once called deaf and dumb are usually deaf-mutes who have healthy speech organs and can be trained to speak through the senses of sight and touch <dumb stones whereon to vent their rage—Arnold>  When used of persons who are normally able to speak, dumb (see also STUPID) usually signifies duped of the power to speak: mute stresses a compelling cause for keeping or maintaining silence <deep shame had struck me dumb—Shak.> (how terrible is that dumb grief which has never learned to moan—Galsworthy) <all sat mute, pondering the danger with deep thoughts—Milton> <some mute inglorious Milton—Gray> Speechless commonly implies momentary deprivation of the power of speech <struck speechless with terror> <Can I remember, across the years, standing there with that paper in my hand; dumb, speechless, and probably tearful—White> Inarticulate implies either lack of the power to speak at all <the inarticulate people of the dead—Shelley> <the inarticulate hunger of the heart—Sherman> or, especially, inability to speak intelligibly or clearly, usually on account of some powerful emotion but sometimes because of lack of power to express one's thoughts or feelings <inarticulate with rage> <stood looking down on her in inarticulate despair—Wharton> 2 dull, *stupid, slow, dense, crass Anax & Con see those at DULL 1 Ant articulate (sense 2) dumbfound confound, nonplus, bewilder, distract, mystify, perplex, *puzzle Anax astound, flabbergast, amazed, astonish, *surprise: *confuse, muddle, addle, fuddle: disconcert, rattle, faze, discomfit (see EMBARRASS) dumps dejection, gloom, blues, depression, melancholy, melancholia, *saddness Anax despondency, forlornness, hopelessness, despair (see under DESPONDENT): doldrums, ennui, boredom, *tedium dumpy stocky, thickset, thick, chunky, stubby, squat dunk vb *dip, immerse, souse, submerge, duck Anax *soak, saturate, sop dupe vb Dupe, gull, befoul, trick, hoax, hoodwink, bamboozle mean to delude a person by underhand means or for one's own ends. Dope suggests unwariness or unsuspicuousness on the part of the person or persons deluded and the acceptance of what is false as true, what is counterfeit as genuine, or what is worthless as valuable <the public is easily duped by extravagant claims in advertising> <he was so soothed he was constantly being duped into helping impostors> <William had had too much sense to be duped—Macaulay> Gull implies great credulousness or a disposition that leads itself to one's being easily imposed upon or made a laughingstock of <if I do not gull him into a mayword, and make him a common recreation, do not think I have wit enough to lie straight in my bed—Shak.>

Anax analogous words Ant antonyms Con contrasted words See also explanatory notes facing page 1

<if the world will be gulléd, let it be gulled—Burton> <gull who may, they will be gulléd! They will not look nor think—Browning> Befool stresses the effect on the victim, that of being made a fool of in his own eyes or in those of others; it does not so strongly suggest a temperamental weakness in the victim as the preceding words, nor so clearly imply an intent to delude on the part of the agent, as most of the words that follow <confess themselves befooled by the candidate, his personable appearance, and his promises> <innocent philosophic critics, too easily befooled by words—Ellis> (pictures supplant one another so swiftly as to befool the eye with the illusion of continuity—S. H. Adams> Trick implies the intent to delude on the part of the agent by means of a stratagem or ruse, by wiles, or by fraud; it suggests the deliberate intent to deceive, but it need not imply a base end. It may, for example, imply illusion as the end   It more often suggests deliberate misleading and the use of cunning or craft <pills are coated with sugar or chocolate in order to trick children into taking them> <he was tricked out of his savings by the promises of large returns on an investment> (the people felt that they had been tricked into approval of the project> <it enables some lawyers to trick us into bringing in the wrong verdict—Reilly> Hoax may imply indulgence in tricking as a sport or for the purpose of proving how gullible a person or persons can be when a skilful imposition or fabrication is presented to them; it more often suggests a fraud intended to deceive even the most skeptical and often, also, to work for one's own profit or personal advantage <after having been hoaxèd for the past 40 years, British scientists have discovered that the jaw and teeth of the world-famous "Pitman man" belong to a modern ape—Farmer's Weekly>  <did Mark Twain intend to hoax people by his Personal Recollections of Joan of Arc, published without his name and as the work of one of her contemporaries?> Hoodwink connotes either a deliberate confusing intended to blind the mind of another to the truth, or, less often, self-delusion arising from one's inability to distinguish the false from the true <he will not be hoodwinked by sentimental platitudes into doing things that are against reason> <to hoodwink everybody by pretending to conform—Cabell> <since she'd hoodwinked your uncle, she thought she could pull the wool over my eyes, too—Kenneth Roberts> Bamboozle usually implies the use of such methods as cajolery, humbug, or illusion to dupe or confuse; the word is often used interchangeably with trick, hoax, or hoodwink, but it is less definite or fixed in its implications <bamboozled into a belief that he was a great man> <what Oriental tomfoolery is bamboozling you—Newman> Anax *deceive, beguile, delude, mislead, double-cross, betray: *cheat, cozen, defraud, overreach: outset, baffle, circumvent (see FRAUDULATE) duplicate n *reproduction, facsimile, copy, carbon copy, transcript, replica Anax counterpart, *parallel, analogue duplicity *deceit, dissimulation, cunning, guile Anax double-dealing, chicanery, chicane, trickery, *deception, fraud: treacherousness or treachery, perfidiousness or perfidy, faithlessness (see corresponding adjectives at FAITHLESS) Con straightforwardness, forthrightness (see corresponding adjectives at STRAIGHTFORWARD) durable *lasting, perdurable, permanent, stable, perpetual Anax enduring, abiding, persisting (see CONTINUE) dusky dim., *dark, obscure, murky, gloomy duty 1 *obligation

Ana responsibility, accountability, amenability, answerability, liability (see corresponding adjectives at RESPONSIBLE)

2 office, *function, province

Ana concern, business, *affair

3 *task, assignment, job, stint, chore

Ana *work, business, employment, occupation, calling:

trade, craft, art, profession

dwarf Dwarf, pygmy, midget, manikin, homunculus, runt

are comparable when they mean an individual and usually a person of diminutive size. Dwarf is the general term not only for a human being but for any animal or plant that is definitely below the normal size of its kind; often the term suggests stunted development. This [the fool’s] value was trebled in the eyes of the king by the fact of his being also a dwarf and a cripple—Poe

Pygmy originally was applied to one of a race of fabled dwarfs mentioned by Homer and others; now it is used especially of one of a people of small stature found in central Africa. In general application the term carries a stronger connotation of diminutiveness and a weaker suggestion of arrested development than dwarf; when used in reference to a person, it often implies relative tininess, sometimes in body but more often in intellect

<to him all the men I ever knew were pygmies. He was an intellectual giant—Byron>

Midget stresses abnormal diminutiveness but, unlike dwarf, carries little suggestion of malformation or deformity; the term is applied usually to a tiny but otherwise more or less normally shaped person exhibited in a circus or employed in place of a child in theatrical performances

<*P. T. Barnum’s famous midget, Tom Thumb>*

Manikin is often applied not only to a dwarf but to any human being who for one reason or another seems dispensably small or weak

<can it be fancied that Deity ever vindictively made in his image a manikin merely to madden it?>—Poe

Often it suggests an animated doll

<of a bright-eyed little manikin, naked like all his people—Forester>*

Homunculus usually suggests even greater diminutiveness and often greater perfection in form than midget; it is the specific term for an exceedingly small artificial human being such as was supposedly developed by Paracelsus, a famous Renaissance alchemist.

Runt, usually a contemptuous designation, applies to a dwarf or undersized person, especially to one who is conspicuously puny or undeveloped <always I always did admire a good, sizable, stout man. I hate a runt—McClure’s Mag.)

The term is also applied to an animal, especially a domestic animal, small of its kind; and it is used specifically of the undersized one of a litter (as of pigs).

dwindle dwell reside, live, lodge, sojourn, stay, put up, stop dwelling abode, residence, domicile, home, house, habitation

dwindle diminish, lessen, decrease, reduce, abate

Ana wane, ebb, *abate, subside: attenuate, extenuate, *thin: *moderate: disappear (see affirmative verb at APPEAR 1)

dynamic live, active, operative

Ana potent, forceful, forcible, *powerful: *intense, vehement, fierce, exquisite, violent; vitalizing, energizing, activating (see VITALIZE)

---

eager, avid, keen, anxious, agog, athirst mean actuated by a strong and urgent desire or interest. Eager implies ardor and, often, enthusiasm; it frequently also connotes impatience (it is not a life for fiery and dominant natures, eager to conquer—Benson)

Avid adds to the implication of greed or of unbounded desire (*a too avid thirst for pleasure—E)

*Cultivated, excited, avid of new things—Buchan*

<he was convivial, bawdy, robustly avid for pleasure—F. S. Fitzgerald>*

Keen suggests intensity of interest and quick responsiveness in action (*boys in white flannels—all keen as mustard, and each occupied with his own game, and playing it to the best of his powers—Quiller-Couch)*

*Tories who are as keen on State interference with everything and everybody as the Socialists—Shaw>

Anxious emphasizes fear lest one’s desires be frustrated or one’s hopes not realized; it often additionally connotes insistence or perseverance in making one’s desires known (visibly anxious that his wife should be on easy terms with us all—Reppieri)*

Schoolmasters may be pathetically anxious to guide boys right, and to guard them from evil—Benson>

Agog suggests being caught up in the excitement and bustle attending something interesting about to be begun or an event eagerly awaited (*six precious souls, and all agog to dash through thick and thin—*
Cower} {the abrupt announcement . . . left everybody . . . oog—Cref} Athirst implies yearning or longing more vividly than the others; it seldom connotes readiness for action {I that forever feel athirst for glory—Keats} {one or two great souls athirst for pure aesthetic rapture—Clive Bell}

Ana desiring, coveting, craving (see DESIRE vb): longing, yearning, hungering, thirsting (see LONG vb): *impatient, restless, restive

Ant listless—Con *indifferent, unconcerned, incurious, aloof, uninterested: apathetic, *impassive, stolid

early adv Early, soon, beforehand, betimes share the meaning of at or nearly at a given point of time or around the beginning of a specified or implied period of time. Early is used chiefly in reference to a period of time (as a day, a lifetime, an age, or a term) and in dating a happening with reference to the beginning of that period. In such use it implies occurrence shortly after the time at which the period is set to begin or is regarded as beginning {crocuses blossomed early this spring} {migrations took place early in the Middle Ages} {early to bed and early to rise, makes a man healthy, wealthy, and wise—Franklin} {Voltairre perceived very early in life that to be needy was to be dependent—John Morley} Sometimes, especially when the reference is to a point of time, early may mean in advance of the time set or expected or of the usual time; thus, a person who arrives early at a meeting and leaves early comes slightly before (sometimes just at) the time set or noticeably ahead of the others and leaves before the gathering breaks up; winter came early (that is, ahead of the expected or normal time) this year. Soon usually refers to a definite point of time (as the present or the beginning of a period, a process, or a course), but it commonly implies occurrence after the moment in mind; thus, when a physician tells a patient to come early, he by implication asks that patient to come in advance of that time set for the beginning of his office hours so that the patient may be attended to soon, or shortly after the office hours begin: on the other hand, when he asks a patient to come soon, he by implication requests another visit shortly after the present one. But soon carries not only the implication of occurrence to a specified or implied point of time but also, even more strongly, that of quickness or promptness or lack of delay {I called, and he soon appeared} {the absconder was apprehended soon after his disappearance} {I hope you will find your ring very soon} {soon, however, is sometimes used in place of early, though with greater emphasis on promptness, in poetry, in some idiomatic expressions, and in the comparative and superlative degrees {late and soon, getting and spending, we lay waste our powers—Wordsworth} {must you go so soon?} {excuse my not writing sooner} {the spirit . . . may know how soonest to accomplish the great end—Shelley} {Beforehand sometimes implies a time in advance of that set or expected or customary} {he promised to be here beforehand}

More often it refers to a time in advance of a possible, certain occurrence, and it then usually implies anticipation or anticipatory measures {if one knows a thing beforehand one can be prepared} {try to be beforehand in dealing with an enemy} {had . . . taken unusual pains to inform himself beforehand concerning the subject may perhaps} {betimes, he was able to give perfect satisfaction afterwards} {if we had taken steps betimes to create an air force half as strong again . . . we should have kept control of the future—Sir Winston Churchill}

Ant late

earn *deserve, merit, rate

Ana gain, win (see GET) earnest adj *serious, solemn, grave, sober, sedate, staid

Ana zealous, enthusiastic, passionate (see corresponding nouns at PASSION): diligent, *busy, industrious, assiduous, sedulous: *sincere, wholehearted, whole-souled

Ant frivolous—Con volatile, effervescent, buoyant, *elastic: flippant, flighty, light (see corresponding nouns at LIGHTNESS)

earnest n token, *pledge, pawn, hostage earsplitting *loud, stentorian, hoarse, raucous, strident, stertorous earth n Earth, world, universe, cosmos, macrocosm are comparable when they mean the entire area or extent of space in which man thinks of himself and of his fellow men as living and acting. Earth applies, however, only to part of what he knows by sight or by faith to exist; the term usually suggests a distinction between the sphere or globe called astronomically the earth, which he knows to be composed of land and water, and the bodies which he sees in the heavens {this goodly frame, the earth—Shak} {land is part of Earth's surface which stands at a given time above sea level—Lord} It may imply a distinction from heaven and hell {Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven—Mt 6:10} {the infinite loftiness of Mary's nature, among the things of earth, and above the clamon of kings—Henry Adams} World is a far less definite term than earth. When applied to a physical entity, it may denote all that allimitable area which to man's senses, at least, includes not only the earth and other planets but all the space surrounding the earth and all the bodies contained within it {it is not accident that wherever we point the telescope . . . wherever we look with the microscope there we find beauty. It beats in through every nook and cranny of the mighty world—R. M. Jones} To persons who accept the account of creation in Genesis the term denotes the entire system that was brought into being by the word of God {God made the world} {expect the destruction of the world} The term, nevertheless, is usually used as equivalent to earth, the globe {a trip around the world} {he wanted to visit every corner of the world} As applied to an immaterial entity, world may imply the sum total of all the inhabitants of earth and of their interests and concerns {all the world loves a lover} {the world was one in desiring peace} {the doctrine of imperialism which condemns the world to endless war—Willkie} or that section or part of this larger world which comes within the knowledge of the individual {man's relation to the world about him} {his family and his business comprised his world} {among the friends of his three worlds, the intellectuals, the Concord family circle, and the farmers, he was always a little on edge with the first—Canby} or the section or part of the larger world which is devoted to secular, as distinct from religious or spiritual, concerns {retire from the world} {the world, the flesh, and the devil}{the world too much with us—Wordsworth} {I too love the earth and hate the world. God made the first, and man . . . has made the second—Santayana} University, in its most precise sense, denotes the entire system of created things or of physical phenomena, regarded as a unit both in its organization and in its operation {ancient and medieval astronomers regarded the earth as the fixed center of the universe} {the astronomers of today teach that the universe is finite but that it is constantly expanding) (what was true for the development of man, the microcosm, must have been true for the genesis of the universe as a whole, the macrocosm—S. F. Mason) Universe, however, is also used in reference to an entire system of phenomenal things as that system appears to the limited vision of the typical man or of the individual (from the universe as we see it both the Glory of God and the Glory of Man have departed—Kruitch) (he inhabited a different universe from that of common men—Huxley) Cosmos, because of its opposition to chaos, carries a stronger implication of order and harmony in operation than universe, which it otherwise closely resembles in meaning (were it not for the indwelling reason the world would be a chaos and not a cosmos—Blackie) Macrocosm applies to the universe thought of as a great whole characterized by perfect organic unity exhibited elsewhere only in the small whole, the individual man or microcosm (the microcosm repeats the macrocosm—T. H. Huxley) (should these ephemera [flying disks] exist in the macrocosm, it is likely . . . that they would be known to . . . observers of the atmosphere—Mauer)

earthly, terrestrial, earthly, mundane, worldly, sublunary are comparable when they mean of, belonging to, or characteristic of the earth. Earthly is used chiefly in opposition to heavenly (earthly love) (the earthly paradise) (if I have told you earthly things, and ye believe not, how shall ye believe, if I tell you of heavenly things?—Jn 3:12) (a peace above all earthly dignities, a still and quiet conscience—Shak) (there could be a new order, based on vital harmony, and the earthly millennium might approach—Forster) Terrestrial is sometimes used in place of earthly as a more sonorous term; frequently, however, it implies an opposition to celestial rather than to heavenly (see celestial) (a terrestrial globe) (a terrestrial telescope) or it may imply a distinction of earth from the other planets (terrestrial magnetism) (whose vision is cosmic, not terrestrial—Lowes) (carbon dioxide is, of course, of great importance in long-wave terrestrial radiation, but plays a minor role in solar radiation absorption—Compendium of Meteorology) or more specifically in astronomy, a distinction of certain planets assumed to be like the earth from others assumed to be unlike the earth (the terrestrial planets are Earth, Mars, Venus, and Mercury) (there are also celestial bodies, and bodies terrestrial: but the glory of the celestial is one, and the glory of the terrestrial is another—1 Cor 15:40) (when from under this terrestrial ball he fires the proud tops of the eastern pines—Shak) Terrestrial in some use suggests land as a habitat, rather than water or trees (terrestrial reptiles) (terrestrial plants) (they will still obey natural laws and, if manned, they will still be manned by normal, terrestrial airmen—Time) Earthy, in the historical development of its senses, has stressed a connection with the earth as soil rather than with the earth as the abode of men (an earthly smell) (even when it comes close to earthly in its meaning, it carries a stronger implication of grossness of substance or of material interests than earthly and is opposed more to spiritual than to heavenly (the first man is of the earth, earthly: the second man is the Lord from heaven—1 Cor 15:47) (my anger and disgust at his gross earthly egoism had vanished—Hudson) (with much earthly dross in her, she was yet preeminently a creature of “fire and air”—Buchan) Mundane and worldly both imply a relationship to the world thought of as the affairs, concerns, and activities of human beings especially as they are concentrated on practical ends or on immediate pleasures. Mundane specifically suggests an opposition to what is eternal and stresses transitoriness or impermanence (mundane glory) (there I quaff the elixir and sweet essence of mundane triumph—L. P. Smith) (Tony knew that she did not allow them to talk of mundane affairs on these expeditions to and from church—Archibald Marshall) (the occupations and distractions of mundane life—Harold Nicolson) Worldly, which is applied chiefly to persons and their interests, specifically implies indifference to things of the spirit and concentration on whatever satisfies one’s love of success, one’s desire for pleasure, or one’s self-esteem (the obvious thing to say of her was that she was worldly: cared too much for rank and society and getting on in the world—Woolf) (the most worldly of the eighteenth-century ecclesiastics—Bello) Sublunary is a distinctly literary or poetic term variously interchangeable with earthly, mundane, and terrestrial (all things sublunary are subject to change—Dryden) (what then would matter the quakes and sublunary conflicts of this negligible earth?—L. P. Smith)

Ana temporal, *profane, secular: material, physical, corporeal

Con *celestial, heavenly, empyrean, empyreal: spiritual, divine (see HOLY) earthly mundane, worldly, earthly, terrestrial, sublunary

Ana *material, physical, corporeal: fleshly, *carnal, sensual: gross, *coarse ease n 1 comfort, relaxation, *rest, repose, leisure

Ana inactivity, idleness, inertness, passiveness, supineness (see corresponding adjectives at INACTIVE); tranquillity, serenity, placidity, calmness, peacefulness (see corresponding adjectives at CALM)

Con toil, travail, *work, labor: *distress, suffering, misery

2 facility, dexterity, *readiness

Ana effortlessness, smoothness, easiness (see corresponding adjectives at EASY): grace (see ELEGANCE): expertness, adeptness, skillfulness, proficiency (see corresponding adjectives at PROFICIENT): definiteness, adroitness (see corresponding adjectives at DEXTEROUS)

Ant effort —Con exertion, pains, trouble (see EFFORT): awkwardness, clumsiness, ineptness, maladroitness (see corresponding adjectives at AWKWARD)

easy adj 1 *comfortable, restful, cozy, snug

Ana *soft, lenient, gentle: commodious, *spacious: *calm, tranquil, serene, placid: unconstrained, spontaneous (see corresponding nouns at UNCONSTRAINT)

Ant disquieting or disquieted —Con disturbed, perturbed, agitated, upset, discomposed (see DISCOMPOSE): anxious, worried, concerned (see under CARE n)

2 Easy, facile, simple, light, effortless, smooth are comparable when meaning not involving undue effort or difficulty (as in doing, making, giving, or understanding). Easy is applicable both to persons and things that make demands for physical or mental effort or that impose a task upon a person and to the acts or activities involved in satisfying such demands or in accomplishing such a task (the book was easy to read) (I would like some more easy readings) (our teacher was easy today: her assignment for tomorrow is short and easy) (can easy riddle) (the place is easy to reach) (the place is within easy reach of the city) (it will not be easy for him to understand your breaking of your promise) (take my yoke upon you, and learn of me . . . for my yoke is easy, and my burden is light—Mt 11:29-30) (I have been a dreamer and an artist, a great dreamer, for that is easy, not a great artist, for that is hard—Ellis) (it was easy to sit on a camel's back without falling off, but very difficult to . . . get the best out of her—T. E. Lawrence) Facile was once and to some extent is still used as a very close synonym of easy (having won . . . his facile victory—Froude) (the facile modes of measurement which we now employ—Tyn dall) But it now chiefly applies to something which comes, or moves, or works, or gains its ends seemingly without effort or at call; it therefore is often used in derogation implying lack of constraint or restraint, undue haste, dexterity rather than meticulousness, or fluency with shallowness (a writer's facile pen) (a woman's facile tears) (I am not concerned with... offering any facile solution for so complex a problem—T. S. Eliot) (she was a prey to shoddy, facile emotions and moods, none of which had power to impel her to any action—Rose Macaulay) (Chrétien was a facile narrator, with little sense of the significance that might be given to the stories—H. O. Taylor) (Simple stresses ease in apprehending or understanding; it implies freedom from complication, intricacy, elaboration, or other involvements which render a thing difficult to see through (problems in arithmetic too simple to hold the interest of pupils of that age) (true poetry, however simple it may appear on the surface, accumulates meaning every time it is read—Day Lewis) (the English mother or the English nurse has a simpler job. She must teach her charge to start as few fights as possible and that there are rules—Mead) (Light implies an opposition to heavy in nearly all of its senses, but in the one here considered it suggests freedom from burdensomeness or from exacting demands on one (a light task) (his work is very light) (one generation's light reading often becomes another's heavy text—J. D. Hart) (light punishment) Effortless, though it carries many of the connotations characteristic of facile, suggests more the appearance of ease than actual absence of effort; often it implies mastery, skill, or artistry, and the attainment of such perfection that the movements or techniques seem to involve no strain (the effortless dancing of a Pavlova) (that effortless grace with which only a true poet can endow his work—M. O. Smith) (a natural, effortless style) (the swallows... glided in an effortless way through the busy air—Jeffries) Smooth suggests an absence of, or the removal of, all difficulties or obstacles that makes a course or a career easy to follow or to pursue (the car sped along over the smooth road) (floated over the expanse within, which was smooth as a young girl's brow—Melville) (making the lives of the needy a little more smooth—Shields) (Ant hard—Con difficult, arduous (see HARD): exacting, onerous, burdensome, oppressive eat, swallow, ingest, devour, consume mean to take food into the stomach through the mouth and throat. Eat, the common and ordinary term, implies the process of chewing as well as of taking into the stomach and therefore distinguishes itself from swallow, which implies merely the passing from the mouth through the throat to the stomach. Eat is often used, however, without any clear reference to chewing or swallowing (cattle do not eat meat) (the worms have eaten into the timber) and, especially in extended use, without implying anything but a slow, gradual process that is comparable to the biting or gnawing that precedes eating in that it wastes or wears away the substance (the waves have eaten a channel through the rocks) (a knife eaten by rust) (the acid eats into the metal) In many idiomatic expressions the literal phrasing recalls the implications of the original meaning but nothing more (eat one's heart out (grieve in silence) (eat one's words (take back what one has said)) Swallow basically implies the second part of the eating process (he has difficulty in swallowing) (the tablets are to be swallowed without chewing) More often it is used of hurried eating without proper mastication of food (he swallowed his breakfast and rushed for the train) In extended use it implies a seizing and taking in or a being seized and taken in (as by engulfment, engrossment, or suppression) (the ship was swallowed up by the sea) (swallow one's resentment) Ingest is a physiological term that implies a taking in through the mouth and throat into the stomach and is commonly opposed to egest (does a man dine well because he ingests the requisite number of calories?—Lippmann) Devour throws the emphasis on greediness; it suggests intense hunger or gluttony in man and voracity in a wild animal (the tramp rapidly devoured the food that was set before him) (they saw the tiger rushing on them as if it would devour them) In extended use devour implies to something (as fire or disease) which destroys or wastes completely (the flames devoured the houses one by one) (he that is in the city, famine and pestilence shall devour him—Ezek 7:15) or to something which preys upon one as insistently as a beast or bird of prey (devoured by fear) Sometimes, however, it approaches swallow in its reference to something which engrosses the mind, but it heightens the implications of avidity and zest in taking in (devoured all the books on aviation that he could get) (devoured the scene before him) Consume (see also WASTE, MONOPOLIZE) usually means little more than eat and drink, for which it serves as a term including both or either (whoever came late had to start with the course which the captain was then... consuming—Heiser) (after taking a piece of asparagus in her hand, she was deeply mortified at seeing her hostess consume the vegetable with the aid of a knife and fork—Shaw) Very often, however, it adds to eat the implications of using up (my stock of provisions had been so long consumed that I had forgotten the flavor of pulse and maize and pumpkins and purple and sweet potatoes—Hudson) eclipses obscure, dim, bedim, darken, cloud, becloud, ecstasy
n Ecstasy, rapture, transport denote a feeling or a economy *system, scheme, network, complex, organism

echo *deviation, aberration, divergence: peculiarity, oddity, queerness, singularity (see corresponding adjectives at STRANGE): freak, conceit, vagary, crotchety, *ca-price, fancy, whim, whimsy echelon *line, row, rank, file, tier eclat renown, glory, celebrity, notoriety, repute, reputation, *fame, honor

Ana prominence, conspicuousness, remarkableness, noticeableness (see corresponding adjectives at NOTICEABLE); illustriousness or luster, eminence (see corresponding adjectives at FAMOUS) eclipse vb obscure, dim, bedim, darken, cloud, becloud, economy *frugal, thrifty, *sparing

Ana prudent, provident (see under PRUDENCE): close, cheeseparing, parsimonious, penurious (see STINGY)

Ant extravagant — Con lavish, prodigal, exuberant, *profuse

economy *system, scheme, network, complex, organism

Ana organization, institution, establishment, foundation (see corresponding verbs at FOUND)

ecstasy n Ecstasy, rapture, transport denote a feeling or a state of intense, sometimes excessive or extreme, mental and emotional exaltation. Ecstasy in its earlier sense, which is now found chiefly in religious and poetical writings, implies a trancelike state in which consciousness of one’s surroundings is lost and the mind is intent either on what it contemplates (as does the mystic) or on what it conceives and creates (as does the inspired poet or artist) (like a mad prophet in an ecstasy — Dryden) anthsoms clear, as may with sweetness, through mine ear, dissolve me into ecstasies, and bring all Heaven before mine eyes — Milton (to later and now general use the term implies overmastering, entrancing joy, or other emotion that exalts the mind and overcomes the senses (men in whom the manual exercise of combat seems to light a wonderful fire in the blood. To them battle brings ecstasy. They are ravished above pain and fear — Montague) she loved him with an acute, painful ecstasy that made her dizzy and blinded her to all the world besides — Rose Macaulay (their faces were fixed in a calm ecstasy of malevolence — Wylte) Rapture in its early religious use and still occasionally in theology, mysticism, and poetry differs from ecstasy in implying a lifting of the mind or soul out of itself by divine power, so that it may see things beyond the reach of human vision; the experiences narrated by the Apostle Paul of being caught up to the third heaven are in this sense raptures. In its chief current sense rapture merely implies intense bliss or beatitude with or without the connotation of accompanying ecstasy or loss of perception of everything else (I drank it in, in a speechless rapture — Mark Twain) (as a child I first read Pope’s Homer with a rapture which no subsequent work could ever afford — Byron) (she burned again with the same ecstasy, the same exaltation. How fine it had been, to live in that state of rapture! — Sackville-West) (continual ups and downs of rapture and depression — Warton) Transport applies to any violent or powerful emotion that lifts one out of oneself and, usually, provokes enthusiastic or vehement expression (I mean to . . . support with an even temper, and without any violent transports . . . a sudden gust of prosperity — Fielding) (transports of rage — Austen) what a transport of enthusiasm! — Landor (in art, as in poetry, there are the transports which lift the artist out of . . . himself — Pater) (a periodical that is weekly moved to transports of delight about contemporary America — Bliven b. 1889)

Ana bliss, beatitude, blessedness, felicity, happiness joy, delectation, delight, *pleasure: *inspiration, fury, frenzy, afflatus

ecuminal *universal, cosmic, catholic, cosmopolitan

Ant provincial: diocesan eddy n Eddy, whirlpool, maelstrom, vortex mean a swirling mass especially of water. Eddy implies swift circular movement (as in water, wind, dust, or mist) caused by a countercurrent or, more often, by something that obstructs; it is usually thought of less as dangerous than as annoying or confusing (it is blunt tails [of ships] rather than blunt noses that cause eddies — W. H. White) (a thick brown fog, whirled into eddies by the wind . . .) abolished the landscape from before our smarting eyes — Huxley Whirlpool suggests a more extensive and more violent eddy in water; usually it implies a force of swirling water (as at a meeting of countercurrents) so great as to send whatever enters whirling toward a center where it is sucked down (pass safely through the whirlpool of the Niagara River in a barrel) but it may also be extended to other things that draw or suck one in like a swirl of raging water (live in a whirlpool of excitement) (Europeans . . . have assumed . . . that public life will draw . . . enough of the highest ability into its whirlpool — Bryce) Maelstrom is basically the name of a very powerful whirlpool off the west coast of Norway which was supposed to suck in all vessels that passed within a wide radius; the term is extended to any great turmoil that resistlessly drags men into it (in one wild maelstrom of afflicted men — J. S. C. Abbott) (in the maelstrom of wild controversy (the ancient taboos were gone, lost in the maelstrom of war — Coulton Waugh) Vortex usually suggests a mass of liquid (as water) or gas (as air) rapidly circulating around a hollow center; it is visualized principally as something which draws all that become involved in the swirling into its center (the cleansing power of the vortex of water in a washing machine) (the noise of the vortex of soapy water draining from the bathtub) (conventions are shifting, and undergoing metamorphosis . . .) but it is hard to estimate justly the significance of their contemporary behavior, because we are caught in the vortex — Lowes) (it is Koestler and Silone, who went deepest into the vortex of revolutionary activity, who emerge with the profoundest insights — Time) (drawn back into the emotional vortex of a youthful love affair — Geismar)

eddy vb rotate, gyrate, circle, spin, whirl, revolve, *turn, twirl, wheel, swirl, pirouette edge n 1 verge, rim, brink, margin, *border, brim Ana *limit, end, bound, confine: *circumference, periphery, compass 2 odds, *advantage, handicap, allowance edifice n structure, pile, *building edit vb Edit, compile, revise, redact, rewrite, adapt, though not strict synonyms, are sometimes confused when used of the preparation of material for publication. Edit covers a wide range of meaning, sometimes stressing one implication, sometimes another. It fundamentally implies preparation for publication of a work, often the work of another or of others; thus, to edit a text (as a play of Shakespeare) usually means to present the text as nearly as possible in the form intended by the author, but it often suggests the modernization of spelling, the giving of variant readings, or the addition of comments or glosses; to edit a newspaper or magazine means, in general, to become responsible for the contents and policy of the periodical as a whole, sometimes by doing all or most of the work involved but far oftener by supervising the work of a staff, by exercising surveillance of all outside writers or of the articles they write, and sometimes by writing editorials or leaders; to edit a work of reference (as a dictionary or encyclopedia) means to plan and execute a new work or one of its later editions, or, more often, to supervise the work of subordinates charged with the execution of those plans. Because the details of editing vary according to the nature of the work edited, the verb is often used narrowly with a stress on one of these implications; thus, to edit often currently implies the cutting out of material for the sake of improvement or to meet limitations of space but often for other reasons that concern the person or the institution involved (edit a classic for high school use). Compile in reference to literary material stresses a gathering together of material, whether written by oneself or obtained from varied sources, to form a collection, an anthology, or a work of reference; often, in addition, it implies the performance of the tasks of an editor, for it suggests need of skill in arrangement, in interpretation, and in dealing with textual problems (Palgrave compiled in the first volume of the Golden Treasury one of the best anthologies of English poetry). "the French Academy . . . took forty years to compile their Dictionary—William Adams) Revise (see also correct) implies a review of an earlier draft or edition to see where it can be improved and the actual work of improving (twenty years after Dr. Smith's death his standard work on this subject was revised and brought up-to-date by Dr. Jones) (the society finally decided to revise its bylaws). Redact is used mostly by literary and historical scholars, especially in its derivative forms redaction and redactor, to imply the presentation of something in form for use or for publication. It may imply careful framing of or giving expression to some material (of his earlier work . . . was ultimately confided to Diderot—Jeffreys) or even, especially in the form redactor, the giving of a new form to an old work (as by revision, rearrangement, or addition) (the visit of Julius Caesar to Egypt in the Pharsalia is seized upon by its [medieval] redactor to introduce . . . the liaison between Caesar and Cleopatra—Loves) (whatever delicacy and poignancy the tale has in Ovid's version eludes the Elizabethan redactor—PMLA) Rewrite implies a putting into a form suitable for publication of a set of facts or of material gathered by another (as a reporter). The verb often occurs in this sense but is not so common as the noun rewrite designating such an article (made a complete rewrite of his earlier draft) (it is this journalist's function to rewrite stories sent in by local representatives in nearby towns) (an old song which Burns has simply rewritten—Kilby) (the reporter at the scene of the catastrophe telephoned his story to a rewrite man in his editorial office) Adapt (for fuller treatment see adapt) implies a free alteration of the work of someone else to make it suitable for other readers or for another medium (the play was adapted from a French farce) (the book was adapted with success for the stage—J. D. Hart) (the tunes he adapted freely from French vaudeville—Edward Sackville-West & Desmond Shawe-Taylor) Ana *make, fabricate, fashion, form edition, impression, reprinting, printing, reissue are capable of being distinguished when used to designate the total number of copies of the same work printed during a stretch of time. Edition, as now used by publishers and to some extent by printers, applies to all the books and also to all the newspapers printed from the same type or plates made from it. Terms such as special edition, limited edition, and anniversary edition are sometimes used to indicate the particular form or format in which a fixed text is presented; but in United States copyright law a different edition must incorporate some material addition to or revision of the original material. Hence, when the first edition gives way to the second edition, the second edition to the third edition, and so on, a definite change in content is implied. The work may have been revised in whole or in part, whether by bringing it up-to-date or by varying it (this is especially true of newspapers) to suit a particular clientele, but in all cases there must have been changes involving an entire or partial resetting of type before a work can be said to go into a new edition (the 14th edition of the Encyclopedia Britannica) (you will find it in the city edition of the New York Times for January 17th) Impression applies to all of the books (also prints or engravings) run off by the press at one time. The standing type or plates are then stored until a later impression (often called a reprinting) is needed. It is now the general practice among publishers to speak of the aggregate number of copies of a new book run off from the press in a large number and at one time (or, in technical language, printed in a continuous run from a single make-ready) as an impression rather than an edition, thereby respecting the latter word's implication of substantial changes in content (a work which went through several impressions) Printing is often used as practically equivalent to impression or reprinting but it is sometimes preferred as implying some minor corrections (the book is already in its tenth printing) Reissue is used to denote a republication, usually after some time, of a work which is out of print. The reissue may differ in price from the original edition or impression owing to changes in paper or in binding, and it may differ in further ways requiring a resetting of type in whole or in part. Educate train, discipline, school, *teach, instruct educe, evoke, elicit, extract, extort mean to bring or draw out what is hidden, latent, or reserved. Educate usually implies the development and outward manifestation of something potential or latent (get, with the help of mind and soul of a genuine poet . . . could not fully educe and enjoy them—Arnold) (seem to be able to educe from common sense a more or less clear reply to the questions raised—Sidwich) Evoke basically suggests the voice or the words of a magician compelling spirits to leave the other world or the dead to arise from their graves (evoke a demon) (evoked the ghost of his father) In current use the term ordinarily implies the operation of a powerful agency that produces an effect instantly or that serves as a stimulus in arousing an emotion, a passion, or an interest (the delight which growing flowers evoke—Binyon) (it is useless to obtrude moral ideas [upon children] at an age at which they can evoke no response—Russell) (all harmonies . . . are latent in the complex mechanism of an organ, but a master's hand is necessary to evoke them—Loves) Elicit usually implies pains, trouble, or skill in drawing something forth or out; it often implies resistance either in the person or thing that is the object of effort (elicit important information from a witness by cross-examination) (it is the trouble we take over our children that elicits the stronger forms of parental affection—Russell) Extract implies the action of a force (as pressure or suction) (extract the juice of an orange) (extract a tooth) (to extract all the dramatic value possible from the situation—T. S. Eliot) (he had not that faculty of extracting the essence from a heap of statements—Dickens) (to make the comparison at all was . . . to return to it often, to brood upon it, to extract from it the last dregs of its interest—Henry James> Extort implies a wringing especially from one who is reluctant or resisting <extort> money from one's relatives <extort> a promise <the she did at last extort from her father an acknowledgment that the horses were engaged—Austen> whose income is ample enough to extort obsequiously from the vulgar of all ranks—Bennett>

Ana analogous words Ant antonyms Con contrasted words See also explanatory notes facing page 1

Ana draw, drag (see pull): produce, *bear, yield, turn out: *summon, call eerie *weird, uncanny Ana *fantastic, bizarre, grotesque: *mysterious, in- scrutinable, arcane: *fearful, awful, dreadful, horrific: *strange, odd, queer, curious, peculiar efface obliterate, *erase, expunge, blot out, delete, cancel

Effect, result, consequence, upshot, aftermath, sequel, issue, outcome, event are comparable in signifying something, usually a condition, situation, or occurrence, ascribable to a cause or combination of causes. Effect is the correlative of the word cause and in general use implies something (as a bodily or social condition or a state of mind) necessarily and directly following upon or occurring by reason of a cause <the effect of the medicine was an intermittent dizziness> <tanning is the effect of exposure to sunlight> <low mortality, the effect of excellent social services available in every village—Petersen> Result, close to effect in meaning, implies a direct relationship with an antecedent action or condition, usually suggests an effect that terminates the operation of a cause, and applies more commonly than effect to tangible objects <his limp was the result of an automobile accident> <the subsiding flood or surface waters cause mineral deposits and the result is a mound—Duncan-Kemp> Consequence may suggest a direct but looser or more remote connection with a cause than either effect or result, sometimes implying an adverse or calamitous effect and often suggesting a chain of intermediate causes or a complexity of effect <one of the consequences of his ill-advised conduct was a loss of prestige> <this refined taste is the consequence of education and habit—Reynolds> Upshot often implies a climax or conclusion in a series of consequent occurrences or the most conclusive point of a single complex gradual consequence <we spent the time swimming at Glenelg and dancing at the Palais Royal in the city. The upshot was that, before we left ... we were engaged—Ingamells> they won the battle, and the upshot was a short-lived bourgeois republic—Lewis & Maude> <the upshot of the whole matter was that there was no wedding—Colm> Aftereffect and aftermath both usually designate secondary rather than direct or immediate effects. Aftereffect beside designating a secondary effect sometimes suggests a side effect but more generally implies an effect ascribable to a previous effect that has become a cause <the aftereffects of an atomic-bomb explosion—Current Biog.> <although the pioneer effort had reached a dead end, its aftereffects were all too apparent—Kohler> <the left of the highway the blackened appearance is the aftereffect of a fire that has recently swept across the flat—G. R. Stewart>

Aftermath often suggests a more complex effect or generalized condition than aftereffect and usually carries the notion of belated consequences that appear after the effects, especially disastrous effects, seem to have passed <the serious dislocations in the world as an aftermath of war—U. S. Code> <the aftermath of the epidemic in Memphis was worse than the dismal days of Reconstruction—Amer. Guide Series: Tenn.> Sequel usually signifies a result that follows after an interval <spinal curvature ... may be a symptom or a sequel to many different diseases—Fishein> <she lay rigid experiencing the sequel to the pain, an ideal terror—Stafford> Issue adds to result the implication of exit or escape (as from difficulties); it therefore usually designates a result that is a solution or a resolution  <the war was by then obviously proceeding towards a successful issue—F. M. Ford> Outcome, though often interchangeable with result or issue, may put less stress on the notion of finality than does issue <the outcome of the presidential election> <the enduring organisms are now the outcome of evolution—Whitehead> <one outcome of this report was the formation of the Southern Conference for Human Welfare—Current Biog.> Event, which is both uncommon and somewhat archaic in this relation, usually carries the notion of an unpredictable or unforeseeable outcome and comes very close to the related eventuality in its implication of a possible or contingent effect or result <the happiness of Rome appeared to hang on the event of a race—Gibbon> the employed himself at Edinburgh till the event of the conflict between the court and the Whigs was no longer doubtful—Mackay> <the calm assumption that I should live long enough to carry out my extensive plan at leisure ... has in the event been justified—Ellis>

Ant cause —Con determinant, antecedent, reason, occasion (see cause): basis, ground, *base, foundation, groundwork

2 in plural form effects *possessions, belongings, means, resources, assets effect vb I accomplish, achieve, *perform, execute, discharge, fulfill Ana *reach, attain, achieve, compass, gain: finish, complete, conclude, end, terminate, *close: implement, *enforce: *realize, actualize 2 *affect effective, effectual, efficient, efficacious all mean producing or capable of producing a result or results, but they are not freely interchangeable in idiomatic use. Effective emphasizes the actual production of an effect or the power to produce a given effect (effective speaker) (an effective rebuke) (the law becomes effective on the 1st of next month) (research chemists are actively investigating to learn why particular materials are effective and to make them more so—Morrison) (persons who will do nothing unless they get something out of it for themselves are often highly effective persons of action—Shaw) Effectual suggests the accomplishment of a desired result or the fulfillment of a purpose or intention, so that the term frequently becomes synonymous with decisive or final and looks backward after the event (an effectual measure) (an effectual refutation) (his recommendation was effectual, and I was ... chosen—Gibbon) (an appeal to the emotions is little likely to be effective before lunch—Maugham) Efficient may apply to what is actively operative and producing a result and then comes close to operant in meaning (<it should be obvious that it is the conditions producing the end effects which must be regarded as the efficient causes of them—Ashley Montagu>) More often it suggests an acting or a capacity or potential for action or use in such a manner as to minimize the loss or waste of energy in effecting, producing, or functioning (an efficient apparatus) (a setup designed for the efficient production of small parts) (a strong tendency to break up cumbersome estates into small, efficient farms—Nevins) & Commager) As used of human beings with this denotation, efficacious suggests the exercise of such qualities as skill, pains, and vigilance and often becomes synonymous with capable and competent (an efficient housewife takes care of her equipment) (because pasturage is the best and cheapest feed for dairy cows, the efficient dairyman takes the best possible care of his pastures—R. E. Hodgson & W. J. Sweetman) (an small seedy village grocer is more efficient for the limited task he must perform than a supermarket—Wiles) (Efficacious implies the possession of the quality or virtue that gives a thing the potency or power that makes it effective (quinine is efficacious in cases of malaria) (good wishes being so cheap, though possibly not very efficacious—Hawthorne) (certain formulae of blessing especially efficacious against devils—Wylie) (Ana) *(forceful, forcible, potent, *powerful: producing or productive, bearing, turning out (see corresponding verbs at BEAR): telling, cogent, convincing, compelling (see VALID): operative, active, dynamic) (Ant) *(ineffectual: futile —Con vain, fruitless, bootless, abortive (see futile): nugatory, idle, otiose, vain, empty, hollow) (effectual (effective, efficacious, efficient) *(effecting, accomplishing, achieving, fulfilling (see PERFORM): operative, dynamic, *active: decisive, determinative, conclusive) (Ant) (ineffectual: fruitless —Con ( futile, vain, bootless, abortive) (effeminate (adj *(womanish, womanlike, womanly, feminine, female, ladylike) (Ana) *(emasculated, enervated, unmanned (see UNNERVE): epicene (BISEXUAL): soft, mild, gentle, lenient, bland: pampered, indulged, humored, mollycoddled (see INDULGE) (Ant) (virile —Con mannish (see MALE) (effervescent *(volatile, buoyant, expansive, resilient, elastic) (Ana) (lively, vivacious, sprightly, gay, animated; hilarious, jolly, gleeful, mirthful (see corresponding nouns at MIRTH) (Ant) (subdued) (efficacious *(effectual, effective, efficient) *(potent, *powerful: producing or productive, bearing, turning out (see corresponding verbs at BEAR): telling, cogent, convincing, compelling (see VALID): operative, active, dynamic) (Ant) (inefficacious: powerless) (efficient (effective, effectual, efficacious) (Ana) *(competent, qualified, *able: capable, expert, skillful, skilled, proficient, adept, masterly) (Ant) (inefficient) (effigy (image, statue, icon, portrait, photograph, mask) (effort, exertion, pains, trouble *(mean the active use or expenditure of physical or mental power in producing or attempting to produce a desired result. Effort may suggest either a single action or continued activity, but it usually implies consciousness that one is making an attempt or sometimes, even, is laboring or striving to achieve an end (make a final supreme effort) (the constant *effort of the dreamer to attain his ideal—Henry Adams) (utterly absorbed in the writing of a private letter—how you lose count of time and have no sense of disagreeable effort—Montague) *(Exertion in general stresses the active, often vigorous, exercise of a power or faculty (the continued exertion of vigilance) (wearyed by overexertion (a . . man, capable of close application of mind, and great exertion of body—Dickens) (Often, however, especially when not followed by of (exertion means a laborious effort (his work was done with remarkable grace, but with exertions which it was painful to witness; for he had but one leg, and had to use a crutch—Deland) *(Pains implies toilsome or solic-itous effort; trouble implies exertion that inconveniences or wastes time and patience (was at pains to emphasize the nonpolitical character of the visit—Morgenthaum) (the Indians had exhaustual patience; upon their blankets and belts and ceremonial robes they lavished their skill and pains—Cather) (is twenty hundred kisses such a trouble?—Shak) (I feel that I am beginning to get a grip of the people . . . .” “I should hope so, after the amount of time and trouble you’ve taken”—Mackenzie) (Ana) *(work, labor, toil, travail: energy, force, power, might, puissance: endeavor, essay (see under ATTEMPT vb) (Ant) (eas (effortless (easy, smooth, facile, simple, light) (Ana) (proficient, skilled, skillful, expert, adept, masterly) (Ant) (painstaking) (effrontery (temerity, audacity, hardness, nerve, cheek, gall) (Ana) (impudence, brazeness, brashness (see corresponding adjectives at SHAMELESS): impertinence, intrusiveness, officiousness (see corresponding adjectives at IMPERTINENT) (effulgent *(radiant, luminous, brilliant, bright, lustrous, refulgent, beaming, lambent, lucent, incandescent (Ana) *(flaming, blazing, glowing, flaring (see BLAZE vb): flashing, gleaming (see FLASH vb): resplendent, splendid, glorious) (Con) *(mucky, gloomy, dark, dim, obscure, dusky) (egg (urge, exhort, goad, spur, prod, prick, sic (Ana) *(stimulate, excite, *provoke, pique: *incite, instigate: rally, arouse, rouse, stir) (egoism *(egotism, conceit, amour propre, self-love, self-esteem) (Con) (confidence, self-assurance, self-possession (see CONFIDENCE): self-satisfaction, self-complacency, complacency, smugness, priggishness (see corresponding adjectives at COMPLACENT) (Ant) (altruism —Con humility, meekness, modesty, lowliness (see corresponding adjectives at HUMBLE) (egotism *(egoism, conceit, amour propre, self-love, self-esteem) (Ana) *(vanity, vainglory, pride: boastful or boastfulness, vaunting or vauntfulness, gasconading (see corresponding verbs at BOAST): pluming, piquing, priding, preening (see PRIDE vb) (Ant) (modesty —Con humility, meekness, modesty, lowliness (see corresponding adjectives at HUMBLE): diffidence, bashfulness, shyness (see corresponding adjectives at SHY) (eject *(Eject, expel, oust, evict, dismiss mean to force or thrust something or someone out. Eject, although it is the comprehensive term of this group and is often interchangeable with any of the others, carries the strongest implication of throwing out from within. So emphatic is this suggestion that the term covers actions so far apart as those implied by *dislodge, disgorge, vomit, emit, discharge, and many other terms (the volcano ejected lava for three days in succession) *(eject an intruder from one’s house) *(the chimney ejected flames rather than smoke) (he was being ejected for taunting the pianist—Akinson) (Expel stresses a thrusting out or a driving away; it therefore more regularly implies the use of voluntary force or compulsion than does eject and indicates more clearly than eject an intent to get rid of for all time; thus, the stomach ejects (rather than expels) material in vomiting since the emphasis is on casting out from within; one expels (rather than ejects) air from the lungs since in this case a degree of voluntary force and permanent ridding are both implicit expel) (Ana) (analogous words) (Ant) (antonyms) (Con) (contrasted words) (See also explanatory notes facing page 1)

a student from college) to a curse . . . in his blood . . . which no life of purity could expel—Meredith) Octavian . . . forbade the practice of certain eastern cults, and expelled from Rome Greek and Asiatic magicians— Buchan) Oust implies a removal or dispossession by the power of the law or, in more general use, by the exercise of force or by the compulsion of necessity (in America . . . a new set of officials ousted the old ones whenever the Opposition ousted the Government—Shaw) (insidious attempts to disarm the findings of Reason, or to oust it from its proper province—Inge) Evict means to turn out (as from house or home or one’s place of business) by legal or equally effective process, commonly for non-payment of rent (after not paying their rent for six months, they were evicted by the sheriff) (the revolutionary artists . . . in the first flush of victory . . . literally evicted the members and officers of the Imperial Academy—Read) (he volunteered to become foster father to a 400-pot family [of orchids] temporarily evicted from a nearby greenhouse—JAMA) Dismiss (see also DISMISS) stresses a getting rid of something such as a legal case by rejecting a claim or prayer and refusing it further consideration (this court reversed the judgement given in favor of the defendant, and remanded the case with directions to dismiss it—Taney) or a fear, a grudge, or a hatred by ejecting it from the mind or thoughts (I declare to you . . . that I have long dismissed it from my mind—Dickens) or an unwelcome subject, duty, or prospect by taking adequate measures to ensure its no longer annoying or confronting one (the Judge was sharply angry . . . because he found himself unable to dismiss the whole thing by packing the child off—Deland) Ana *exclude, eliminate, shut out, rule out, debar, disbar: *discard, cast, shed: reject, repudiate, spurn (see DECLINE) Ant admit (sense 1) elaborate vb *unfold, evolve, develop, perfect Ana *expand, amplify, dilate: enlarge, augment (see INCREASE): heighten, enhance (see INTENSIFY) clam *vigor, vim, spirit, dash, esprit, verge, punch, drive elapse *pass, pass away, expire Ana slip, *slide, glide: end, terminate (see CLOSE) elastic adj 1 Elastic, resilient, springy, flexible, supple are comparable when they mean able to endure strain (as extension, compression, twisting, or bending) without being permanently affected or injured. Elastic and resilient are both general and scientific terms; the scientific senses are later and are in part derived from the earlier meanings. Elastic in nontechnical use is applied chiefly to substances or materials that are easy to stretch or expand and that quickly recover their shape or size when the pressure is removed (a rubber band is elastic) (elastic cord for hats) (a toy balloon is an elastic bag which can be blown up greatly beyond its original size) In scientific use elastic is applicable to a solid that may be changed in volume or shape, or to a fluid (gas or liquid) that may be changed in volume, when in the course of the deformation of such a solid or fluid forces come into play which tend to make it recover its original volume or shape once the deforming force or forces are removed. The term in such use describes a property (elasticity) which a substance possesses up to the point (the elastic limit) beyond which it cannot be deformed without permanent injury (a body . . . is elastic when, and only when, it tends to recover its initial condition when the distorting force is removed . . . Steel, rubber, air . . . are more or less elastic—Foley) Resilient in nontechnical use is applicable to whatever springs back into place or into shape especially after compression; thus, rising bread dough is said to be resilient because it quickly recovers from a deforming pressure by the hand; a tree’s branch may be described as resilient when it snaps back into its former position once a pull is released. Scientifically, resilient is not the equivalent of elastic, but it may be used as its counterpart; elastic stresses the capacity for deformation without permanent injury, resilient the capacity for recovering shape or position after strain or pressure has been removed; thus, when an elastic substance is stretched or compressed, it shows itself resilient: as arteries gradually become less elastic with age, to the same extent they become less resilient. Springy is a nontechnical term that carries the meanings and suggestions of both elastic and resilient and stresses at once the ease with which a thing yields to pressure or strain and the quickness of its return (walk on springy turf) (firm, springy muscles) (a laughing schoolboy . . . riding the springy branches of an elm—Keats) Flexible is applicable to whatever can be bent or turned without breaking; the term may or may not imply resiliency, or quick recovery of shape (lead pipe is flexible and may be bent into shape) (a flexible young tree often endures a heavy windstorm better than a rigid, fully developed one) (flexible and gracious are the willows—Binyon) Supple applies to things which are, in general, not as solid or firm as substances which may be described as flexible: it also implies ease in bending, twisting, or folding or flexing, together with resistance to accompanying injury (as from breaking, cracking, or splitting) (supple joints and muscles) (a supple leather) (mere manual labor stiffens the limbs, gymnastic exercises render them supple—Jefferies)

In extended use these words often carry the implications of their literal senses. Elastic stresses ease in stretching or expanding beyond the normal or appointed limits (an elastic conscience) (some principles there must be, however elastic—Buchan) (an elastic term) Resilient implies a tendency to rebound or recover quickly (as in health or spirits) especially after subjection to stress or strain (see ELASTIC 2) (a resilient constitution) Springy, which is less common in extended use, may suggest youth, freshness, or buoyancy (a springy step) Flexible implies an adaptable or accommodating quality or, when applied to persons, pliancy or tractability (a flexible scheme) (a flexible arrangement) (his mind became more flexible with age—Crothers) Supple, in its extended use, is applied chiefly to persons or their utterances. Sometimes it suggests little more than flexibility; at other times it implies obsequiousness or complaisance or a show of these with what is actually astute mastery of a situation (in . . . Bismarck, the supple spirit is hidden under an external directness and rough assertion—Bello) Ana pliable, pliant, ductile, *plastic, malleable: limber, lithe, *supple Ant rigid—Con *stiff, inflexible, tense

2 Elastic, expansive, resilient, buoyant, volatile, effervescent are comparable when describing persons, their temperaments, moods, acts, or words and meaning indicative of or characterized by ease or readiness in the stimulation of spirit and especially of high spirits. Elastic implies an incapacity for being kept down in spirits, specifically it may suggest an ability to recover quickly from a state of depression (those elastic spirits . . . had borne up against defeat—Macaulay) or a tendency to moods of exaltation, elation, or optimism (there are times when one’s vitality is too high to be clouded, too elastic to stay down—Cather) (not an elastic or optimistic nature—on the contrary, rigid and circumscribed, depressed by a melancholy temperament—Symonds) (to him whose elastic and vigorous thought keeps pace with the sun, A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.
the day is a perpetual morning—Thoreau

Expansive

implies exaltation of spirit that tends to make a person unusually genial, communicative, or sociable <he had an expansive temperament, a brilliant personality, a widely sympathetic disposition, troops of friends—Ellis> (in an expansive temper) not and very sober moment, she had told Tod about her adventure—Sayers <while not expansive toward visitors, she received them with courtesy—Raymond Weeks

Resilient usually implies a return to normal good spirits, which may or may not be high spirits <he was as resilient as ever, one day utterly exhausted, and the next day ready for fresh labors> (evidently her resilient strength was going; she could no longer react normally to the refreshment of food—Ellis) <already the shock and horror of it was fading from her resilient mind—Ruth Park>

Buoyant implies such lightness or vivacity of heart or spirits as is either incapable of depression or that readily shakes it off <no such material burden could depress that buoyant-hearted young gentleman for many hours together—George Eliot> (his buoyant spirits were continually breaking out in troublesome frowls—Prescott)

Volatile implies diaphanous opposition all to that is serious, sedate, or settled; it therefore suggests lightness, levity, or excessive buoyancy of spirits and often flightiness or instability <as giddy and volatile as ever—Swift> (he seemed to them so volatile and unstable.

He was an enigma to which they never secured the key—Ellis>

Effervescent implies liveliness, often boisterousness of spirits: it often suggests the effect of release after restraint and even more than buoyant implies the impossibility of suppression so long as the mood or temper lasts <an effervescent sort of chap with an enthusiasm that takes off like a rocket—Joseph>

Ana *spirited, high-spirited, mettlesome: lively, vivacious, sprightly, animated, gay

Ana depressed —Con deserted, gloomy, melancholy, sad, blue (see corresponding nouns at SADNESS): flaccid, limp

elbowroom

room, berth, play, leeway, margin, clearance elderly old, aged, superannuated

Ana youthful elect adj picked, select, exclusive

Ana *choice, exquisite, rare: selected, preferred, chosen, singled out (see CHOOSE): redeemed, saved, delivered (see RESCUE vb)

Ant reprobate (in theology) —Con rejected, repudiated, spurned, refused (see DECLINE vb): scorned, disdained (see DESPISE): doomed, damned (see SENTENCE vb)

elect vb I select, pick, prefer, single, opt, *choose, cull

Ana *decide, determine, settle, resolve: conclude, judge (see INFER): *receive, accept, admit, take

Ant abjure —Con reject, spurn, repudiate, refuse, *decline: dismiss, *ject, oust, expel

2 *designate, name, nominate, appoint election

option, choice, preference, alternative

Ana deciding or decision, determining or determination, settling or settlement (see corresponding verbs at DECIDE)

electrify *thrust, enthuse

Ana galvanize, excite, stimulate, quicken, *provoke: *stir, rouse, arouse, rally elemosnary

charitable, benevolent, humane, humanitarian, philanthropic, altruistic elegance, grace, dignity are comparable only when they denote an impressive beauty of form, appearance, or behavior. Elegance is used in reference to persons chiefly when their grooming, their clothes, and the way they wear them are specifically considered; it then often implies fashionableness and good taste, but it stresses perfection of detail and exquisiteness or, sometimes, overexquisiteness (as in materials, lines, and ornamentation) <the elegance in dress of a Beau Brummell> When used in reference to such things as the furnishings of a home, the details of a dinner, or a literary style, the term also implies the perfection and propriety in detail that indicate excellence of taste, a nice selective instinct, and often a restrained luxuriousness

Grace is more commonly applied to what is inward and native than to what is outward and acquired, especially when used in reference to persons; it always suggests a quality or a harmonious combination of qualities that gives aesthetic pleasure through a natural or simple beauty such as is shown in suppleness or rhythm of movement, in clean-flowing lines or contours, or in spontaneity and felicitousness of manner, mood, expression, or style  (the effect upon the observer of this exquisite little edifice . . . was of an unparagoned lightness and grace—Mackenzie> (she took the congratulations of her rivals and of the rest of the company with the simplicity that was her crowning grace—Wharton>

Dignity applies to what compels respect and honor. The term often suggests stakeness, majesty, and elevation of character or style as the compelling cause <the qualifications which frequently invest the facade of a prison with far more dignity than is found in the facade of a palace double its size—Hardy> (there was a dignity in his Client, an impressiveness in his speech, that silenced demonstating Reason—Meredith> (those who are just beginning to appreciate the idea of lending greater dignity to the worship of Almighty God—Mackenzie>

Very frequently in modern use the term suggests the compulsion of intrinsic worth or merit apart from any superficial characteristics that give it external beauty <the dignity of work> <the dignity of motherhood> (it matters not how trivial the occupation, if the man or woman be wholly given to it, there will be a natural compelling dignity in the figure—Binyon>

Ana *beautifulness or beauty, handsomeness, comeliness (see corresponding adjectives at BEAUTIFUL): fastidiousness, niceness or nicety, daintiness (see corresponding adjectives at NICE): perfection, *excellence: *taste (sense 2) elegant adj exquisite, *choice, recherché, rare, dainty, delicate element, component, constituent, ingredient, factor are comparable when they mean one of the parts, substances, or principles which make up a compound or complex thing. Element is, except in its specific sense in science, the most widely applicable of these terms, being referable both to material and immaterial and to tangible and intangible things <the native and foreign elements in English> <words are the elements of a sentence> <the basic element of his character> (his life was gentle, and the elements so mixed in him that Nature might stand up and say to all the world "This was a man!"—Shak> Always in its scientific sense, often in its general sense, the term implies irreducible simplicity or, if applied to a substance, incapacity for separation into simpler substances <gold, silver, carbon, lead are among the chemical elements, or ultimate building units of matter} ⟨analyze the elements of a situation⟩ ⟨another element common to all novels is characterization—Jacob's⟩ Component and constituent are often used interchangeably for any of the substances (whether elements or compounds) which enter into the makeup of a mixed thing or for any of the principles or qualities which comprise an intangible composite. Component, however, stresses the separate identity or distinguishable character of the substance; constituent stresses its essential and formative character ⟨springs, gears, levers, pivots, and other components of a watch mechanism⟩ ⟨hydrogen and oxygen are the constituents of water⟩ ⟨the components of the typical novel are its plot, its characters, and its setting⟩ ⟨the components of knowledge can never be harmonized until all the relevant facts are in—De Voto⟩ ⟨break a ray of light into the colors which are its constituents⟩ ⟨the constituents of a perfume⟩ Ingredient applies basically to any of the substances or materials which when combined form a particular mixture (as a drink, a medicine, a food, an alloy, or an amalgam) ⟨the ingredients of a cocktail⟩ ⟨iron and carbon are the ingredients of steel⟩ The term, however, may be extended to any component or constituent that can be thought of as added or as left out ⟨in this transaction every ingredient of a complete and legitimate contract is to be found—John Marshall⟩ ⟨two very necessary ingredients of the scientific process are curiosity and lack of haste—Sears⟩ Factor is somewhat remotely synonymous with the foregoing words. The term is applicable to a constituent, element, or component only when the latter exerts an effectuating force enabling the whole of which it is a part to perform a certain kind of work, to produce a specific and definite result, or to move or trend in a particular direction ⟨God is not one of the factors for which science has to account—Inge⟩ ⟨various factors entered the inception of the American enterprise—Ellis⟩ ⟨the word vitamins was coined to designate these essential food factors—Morrisson⟩

Ana *principle, fundamental: *part, portion, member: *item, detail, particular

Ant compound ⟨in science⟩: composite —Con mass, *bulk, volume: aggregate, whole, total, *sum elemental *elementary

Ana *ultimate, categorical, absolute: *primary, prime, primordial elementary, elemental are often confused. Something is elementary which pertains to rudiments or beginnings; something is elemental which pertains to the elements, especially to the ultimate and basic constituents or forces ⟨an elementary treatise⟩ ⟨an elementary knowledge of physics⟩ ⟨an elementary virtue⟩ ⟨an elementary school⟩ ⟨the elemental sounds of language⟩ ⟨an elemental substance⟩ ⟨they . . . busied themselves with the elemental, enduring things: sex, fatherhood, work—Rose Macaulay⟩

Ana basic, *fundamental: primal, *primary

Ant advanced elephantine *huge, vast, immense, enormous, mammoth, giant, gigantic, gigantean, colossal, gargantuan, Herculean, cyclopean, titanic, Brobdingnagian elevate *lift, raise, rear, hoist, heave, boost

Ana exalt, agrandize, magnify; heighten, enhance ⟨see also INTENSIFY⟩: *rise, mount, ascend, tower, soar, rocket

Ant lower —Con *abase, debase, degrade, demean, humble elevation 1 altitude, *height

Ana *ascension, ascent

2 promotion, *advancement, preferment

Ana exaltation, agrandizement ⟨see corresponding verbs at EXALT⟩

Ant degradation elicit vb evoke, *educate, extract, extort

Ana draw, drag, *pull: *bring, fetch eliminate rule out, *exclude, debar, blackball, disbar, suspend, shut out

Ana *ject, oust, dismiss, expel, evict: eradicate, extirpate, *exterminate, upright, wipe: expunge, *erase, delete, efface elite society, *aristocracy, nobility, gentility, county

Ant rabble eell wing, extension, *annex

elongate lengthen, *extend, prolong, protract

Ant abbreviate, shorten —Con abridge, curtail, re-trench (see SHORTEN): shrink, compress, *contract

elloquent 1 articulate, voluble, *vocal, fluent, glib

Ana *impassioned, passionate, fervid, perfervid, ardent, fervent: expressing, voicing, venting, uttering (see EXPRESS vb): forceful, forcible, potent, *powerful

2 *expressive, significant, meaningful, pregnant, sententious elevate *rise, mount, ascend, tower, soar, rocket

Con *follow, pursue, chase, trail, tag, tail emanate issue, proceed, *spring, rise, arise, originate, derive, flow, stem

Ana emerge, loom, *appear: *begin, commence, start, initiate emancipate manumit, enfanchise, *free, liberate, release, deliver, discharge emasculate 1 *sterilize, castrate, spay, alter, mutilate, geld, cauponize

2 enervate, unman, *unnerve

Ana *weaken, enfeebble, debilitate, sap, undermine

Con energize, *vitalize embarrass, discomfit, abash, disconcert, rattle, faze mean to balk by confusing or confounding, but each word is capable of expressing precise and distinctive shades of meaning. Embarrass characteristically implies some influence which impedes freedom of thought, speech, or action and may be used with reference not only to persons but also to the things they plan or desire to do ⟨a course of legislation . . . which . . . embarrassed all transactions between individuals, by dispensing with a faithful performance of engagements—John Marshall⟩ When said of persons it commonly implies and often stresses resulting uneasiness or constraint ⟨He had, he knew, a sort of charm—it embarrassed him even to admit it—Mary Austin⟩ ⟨I was upset . . . and embarrassed by the crude and childish manner in which the townspeople were reduced to caricatures—J. M. BROWN⟩ Discomfit in this sense typically retains some of its basic denotation of to put to rout; in such use it implies opposition and the competence with which one opponent routs the other and crushes his self-esteem or self-complacency ⟨an answer that completely discomfited the brash young man⟩ or throws him into confusion ⟨Bradley's polemical irony and his obvious zest in using it, his habit of discomfiting an opponent with a sudden profession of ignorance, of inability to understand, or of incapacity for abstruse thought—T. S. Eliot⟩ ⟨the Prime Minister began badly. Discomfited by Labor heckling from the front bench opposite, Eden lost his usual urbanity—Time⟩ or, sometimes, thwarts his wishes, his hopes, or his plans ⟨thieves discomfited by a wakeful dog⟩ (he practiced the Socratic method . . . and earned among generations of embellished students the designation Stinker Taussig—Lovett> At times discomfit is used with much weakened force and then loses its suggestion of active opponency and implies no more than to make uncomfortable or embarrass <it is discomfitting to recall the high hopes with which the states that had joined hands to defeat Fascism founded the United Nations—Sat. Review> <he drew discomfited chuckles from them in response to his garish laughter—Straight> <she may heckle the dealer, add a running commentary to the demonstrations, or just assume a discomfitting smugness—Fortune> Abash presupposes self-confidence or self-possession and implies a usually sudden check to that mood by some influence that awakens shyness or a conviction of error or inferiority or, sometimes, of shame  abashed by the base motives she found herself attributing to Charlotte—Wharton> Disconcert, like embarrass, may be used in reference to actions and plans, but it is more frequently referred to persons. In either case it implies an upsetting or derangement; in the latter it suggests temporary loss of equanimity or of assurance <when she saw him there came that flicker of fun into her eyes that was so disconcerting to Mr. Ezra—Deland> Rattle more than disconcert stresses the emotional agitation accompanying the upset and implies a more complete disorganization of one's mental processes <the jeering rattled the team and caused them to play badly> <rattled by hypothetical eyes spying on her—Stafford> Faze is found chiefly in negative expressions, where it comes close to disconcert but sometimes carries the implications of abash and rattle <neither rebuffs nor threats faze him in the least> <it hit Marciano flush on the right side of the jaw, but it didn't seem to faze him a bit—Liebling> Ana *discompose, disturb, perturb, fluster, flurfy: be-wilder, nonplus, perplex (see PUZZLE): trouble, distress: vex, * annoy, bother, irk: impede, obstruct, block, * hinder: * hamper, fetter, shackle, hog-tie Ant relieve: facilitate embellish beautiful, deck, bedeck, garnish, * adorn, decorate, ornament Ana enhance, heighten, * intensify: apparel, array (see CLOTHE) Con denude, * strip, bare, divest embers * ash, cinders, clinkers emblem attribute, * symbol, type Ana device, motif, design, * figure, pattern: * sign, mark, token, badge embody 1 incarnate, materialize, externalize, objectify, * realize, actualize, hypostatize, refit Ana invest, * clothe: illustrate, * exemplify: manifest, demonstrate, evidence, evince, * show Ant disembode 2 incorporate, assimilate, * identify Ana * add, annex, superadd, append: * introduce, insert, interpolate, interject: comprehend, * include, embrace, involve, imply embolden * encourage, inspire, hearten, cheer, nerve, steel Ana * strengthen, fortify: * venture, chance, hazard Ant abash —Con discourse, deter (see DISSUADE); dishearten, dispirit, deject (see DISCOURAGE) embrace vb 1 * adopt, espouse Ana accept, * receive: seize, grasp, * take Ant spurn —Con reject, refuse, repudiate, * decline: scorn, disdain (see DESPISE) 2 cuddle, encircle, * include, involve, imply, subsume Ana * contain, hold, accommodate: embody, incorporate (see IDENTIFY) Con * exclude, rule out, shut out, debar, eliminate mend * correct, rectify, revive, amend, remedy, redress, reform Ana * mend, repair: * improve, better, ameliorate Ant corrupt (a text, passage) emerge * appear, loom Ana issue, emanate, * spring, flow, arise, rise, proceed, stem, derive, originate emergency exigency, contingency, crisis, pass, * juncture, pinch, strain Ana situation, condition, posture, * state: * difficulty, vicissitude emigrant, immigrant are comparable but not interchangeable when denoting a person who leaves one country in order to settle in another. Emigrant (so also emigrate and emigration) is used with reference to the country from which, immigrant (so also immigrate and immigration) with reference to the country into which, migration is made. The former marks the going out from a country; the latter, the entrance into a country  <Ireland lost heavily through emigration in the middle of the nineteenth century> <our surplus cottage children emigrate to Australia and Canada—H. G. Wells> <Scandinavian immigrants settled large parts of the Middle Western United States> <immigration from Europe into the United States has gradually decreased> emigrate immigrate (see under EMIGRANT) emigration immigration (see under EMIGRANT) émigré immigrant, alien, foreigner, outlaw, outsider, * stranger eminent illustrious, renowned, celebrated, * famous, famed Ana signal, outstanding, prominent, remarkable, conspicuous, * noticeable emolument stipend, salary, fee, * wage or wages, pay, hire Ana compensation, remuneration, recompensing or recompense (see corresponding verbs at PAY): reward, meed, guerdon (see PREMIUM) emotion * feeling, affection, passion, sentiment empathy * sympathy, pity, compassion, commiseration, ruth, condolence Ana * imagination, fancy, fantasy: appreciation, understanding, comprehension (see corresponding verbs at UNDERSTAND) emphasis, stress, accent, accentuation denote exerted force by which one thing stands out conspicuously among other things; they also often designate the effect produced or the means used in gaining this effect. Emphasis implies effort to bring out what is significant or important <he puts the emphasis on discipline in his teaching> <an effective orator knows how to be sparing in his use of emphasis> Sometimes it also suggests vigor or intensity of feeling <anyone, however ignorant, can feel the sustained dignity of the sculptor's work, which is asserted with all the emphasis he could put into it—Henry Adams> Stress, though often used interchangeably with emphasis, is distinguishable from it both in some of its implications and in its association with particular arts, where it has acquired specific meanings. It rarely loses entirely its original implication of weight that causes pressure or strain, though this is often merely suggested <I wouldn't lay too much stress on what you have been telling me.> I observed quietly—Conrad> At times stress strongly implies urgency or insistency <Jane secretly approved his discernment. But all she said was, with her cool lack of stress, "It's not so bad"—Roark Macaulay> In phonetics and prosody stress is the general term referring to the prominence given to certain syllables by force of utterance. It may also be used of the natural emphasis on certain words in a sentence. It may even suggest degree of emphasis (there were volumes of innuendo in the way the “eventually” was spaced, and each syllable given its due stress—Wharton) Accent implies contrast for the sake of effect, very frequently an aesthetic effect. Accent carries no connotation of weight, but it strongly suggests relief in both senses, that of relieving monotony and that of bringing out sharply or into relief (the room was quiet and neutral in coloring, but it was given accent by bowls of bright flowers) (sun and sea, the heady fragrance of the plane trees, the tropical accent of palms—Cassidy) In prosody accent is the form of stress characteristic of English verse, akin to the beat in music and involving force in utterance. In English phonetics accent and stress are commonly used interchangeably. Since force of utterance (stress) is the principal means by which a syllable, a word, or a group of words is accentuated or brought into sharp contrast with the others, one may speak of syllabic accent or stress, or word accent or stress. Accentuation, though close to accent (except in technical senses), often goes beyond it in its emphasis on increased conspicuousness; it also often suggests disagreeableness in the contrast (the essential defect of their polity . . . . its excessive accentuation of the corporate aspect of life—Dickinson)

employ vb *use, utilize, apply, avail

Ana *practice, exercise, drill: engross, absorb, *monopolize: *choose, select, pick employment *work, occupation, business, calling, pursuit

Ana *trade, craft, handicraft, art, profession empower *enable

Ana *authorize, commission, accredit, license: train, instruct, discipline, *teach: endow, endue (see DOWER)

Con debar, disbar, shut out, rule out, *exclude empty adj 1 Empty, vacant, blank, void, vacuous mean lacking the contents that could or should be present. Something is empty which has nothing in it; something is vacant which is without an occupant, incumbent, tenant, inmate, or the person or thing it appropriately contains (an empty bucket) (his purse was empty) (empty-handed) (a vacant professorship) (a vacant apartment) When qualifying the same nouns the words usually suggest distinctly different ideas; thus, an empty house has neither furniture nor occupants; a vacant house is without inmates and presumably for rent or for sale; an empty chair has no one sitting in it at the time; a vacant chair is one that has lost its usual occupant by death or other cause; an empty space has nothing in it; a vacant space is one left to be filled with what is appropriate ([it] enabled him to fill a place which would else have been vacant—Hawthorne) Something, especially a surface, is blank which is free from writing or marks or which has vacant spaces that are left to be filled in (a blank page) (a blank application) Something is void which is absolutely empty so far as the senses can discover (a conscience void of offense) (sandy wilderness, all black and void—Wordsworth) (the void, hollow, universal air—Shelley) Something is vacuous which exhibits the absolute emptiness of a vacuum (the vacuous globe of an incandescent lamp)

In extended use the same distinctions hold: an empty mind is destitute of worthwhile ideas or knowledge: a vacant mind lacks its usual occupant, the soul or intellect; a blank look is without expression; a person is said to be void of learning or of common sense when not the slightest evidence of either one can be detected; a vacuous mind, look, or expression is so deficient in alertness or spirit as to suggest a vacuum in its inanity (the unthinking mind is not necessarily dull, rude, or impervious; it is probably simply empty—Elliot) (the loud laugh that spoke the vacant mind—Goldsmith) (his eyes had that blank fixed gaze . . . that babies’ eyes have—M. E. Freeman) (it is dull and void as a work of art—Montague) (there was nothing to be read in the vacuous face, blank as a school notice board out of term—Greene)

Ana *devoid, destitute, void: *bare, barren: exhausted, drained, dejected (see DEPLETE)

Ant full —Con replete, complete (see FULL)

2 idle, hollow, *vain, nugatory, otiose

Con significant, meaningful, pregnant (see EXPRESSIVE): genuine, *authentic, veritable, bona fide empyrean, empyreal *cestial, heavenly evaluate *rival, compete, vie

Ana imitate, *copy, ape: *match, equal, approach, touch evulous *ambitious

Ana aspiring, aiming, panting (see AIM vb): *eager, avid, keen, anxious, athirst, agog enable, empower are comparable when meaning to make one able to do something. In ordinary usage enable implies provision of the means or opportunity, empower, full, granting of the power or the delegation of the authority, to do something (an income that enables him to live with dignity) (a letter empowering him to act in his father’s behalf) (to give to the Cathedral fund a sum sufficient to enable Father Latour to carry out his purpose—Cather) (these courts of appeal are also empowered to review and enforce orders of federal administrative bodies—Sayre)

Ana permit, allow, *let

Con *forbid, prohibit, inhibit: *prevent, preclude enamored, infatuated are very frequently used interchangeably, though with a loss in precision, in the sense of being passionately in love. Enamored usually connotes complete absorption in the passion (Elisabeth-Jane . . . did not fail to perceive that her father . . . and Donald Farfrae became more desperately enamored of her friend every day—Hardy) Infatuated, when applied to lovers and their acts, carries much the same implications as enamored but may add the implications of its primary sense (see FOND 1) of blind folly and unreasonable ardor (you, Scythrop Glowry, of Nightmare Abbey . . . infatuated with such a dancing . . . thoughtless, careless . . . thing as Marionetta—Peacock)

Ana bewitched, captivated, fascinated (see ATTRACT): fond, devoted, doting, *loving enchant charm, captivate, allure, fascinate, bewitch, *attract

Ana delight, rejoice, gladden, gratify, *please

Ant disenchant

enchanting charming, captivating, alluring, fascinating, bewitching, attractive (see under ATTRACT)

Ana *delightful, delectable: *pleasant, pleasing, grateful, gratifying

Con *repressive, repugnant, revolting, loathsome, *offensive: distasteful, obnoxious, repellent, abhorrent, *repugnant encircle *surround, environ, circle, encompass, compass, hem, gird, girdle, ring

Ana *enclose, envelop: circumscribe, confine, *limit enclose vb Enclose, envelop, fence, pen, coop, corral, cage, wall mean to surround so as to shut in or confine actually or apparently. Enclose implies a shutting in by barriers (as walls) or in an enveloping cover (as a case); the term may be used without connotations, or it may suggest protection, defense, privacy, or monastic seclusion (a high hedge encloses the garden) (the larger fir copes, when they are enclosed, are the resort of all kinds of birds of prey yet left in the south—Jefferies you will find enclosed our price list walked across the enclosed porch, knocked, and opened the inside door—Bradbury Envelop (see also COVER) implies enclosure in or by something usually yielding or penetrable that surrounds it on all sides and serves to screen it, to protect it, or to separate it from others (each specimen was enveloped in cotton and packed in a box) (the heart is enveloped by a serous sac, called the pericardium) clouds envelop the mountaintops <rewind his coat and enveloped him in a white robe—Krey>

Fence in this sense is usually followed by in or about and means only to enclose with or as if with a fence (as by a row of palings, a wall, or a hedge); the term usually connotes a means of barring trespassers, of keeping animals from wandering about or intruding, or of securing privacy (the farm was fenced about with a stone wall) (we will have to fence in the garden with wire netting to keep out the rabbits) (the chickens were not fenced in) (a tall hedge of hemlocks fenced in the estate) In extended use the term is a synonym of enclose only when that by which a thing is shut in is a man-made limitation (the men themselves were . . . fenced by etiquette—Emerson) (fenced by your careful fathers, ringed by your leaden seas, long did ye wake in quiet and long lie down at ease—Kipling)
Pen, usually followed by up or in, implies confinement in or as in an enclosure with narrow limits and suggests irksome restraint (the troops were penned up for days in inadequate barracks) (where shepherds pen their flocks at eve, in hurried cotes—Milton) (practically the whole of the population is penned in on a narrow coastal strip—W. A. Lewis) Coop, usually followed by up, also implies confinement in a limited enclosure but it carries even a stronger implication of cramming limitations (coop up the chickens only at night) (they are at present coopied up in a very small apartment) (her illness has kept her coopied in for a week) Corral implies a shutting up in or as if in a strongly fenced enclosure and is used primarily of animals or persons who would scatter, escape, or flee if not securely confined (at night they corralled their horses) (here they corralled us [prisoners] to the number of seven or eight thousand—Century) In extended use corral may largely lose its basic notion of shutting up and stress, rather, the difficulty of catching or bringing under control (the vitamins are being corralled one by one and the proteins are being brought under control—Furnas) Cage is often used, especially with in or up, to imply confinement with severe or humiliating restrictions (I don’t stay caged in my shop all day—George Eliot) (the feeling of caged muscular tightness has provoked a fairly widespread desire to emigrate from Britain—Chamberlain) Wall means enclosed by a wall which may be material or may be made up of harsh or rigid and impenetrable restraints (walled round with rocks as an inland island, the ghost of a garden fronts the sea—Swinburne) (walled in by conventions)
Ana confine, circumscribe, limit, restrict Encomium, eulogy, panegyric, tribute, citation denote a more or less formal and public expression of praise. Encomium implies enthusiasm or warmth in praising this character (great minds should only criticize the great who have passed beyond the reach of eulogy or faultfinding—Lang) (I would rather have a plain coffin without a flower, a funeral without a eulogy, than a life without . . . love and sympathy—Childs) Panegyric carries a far stronger implication of elaborate, high-flown, often poetical or rhetorical compliment than either of the preceding terms but it does not now emphasize publicity as much as it once did (but verse, alas! your Majesty disdains; and I’m not used to panegyric strains—Pope) (all panegyrics are mingled with an infusion of poppy—Swift) Tribute applies not only to spoken or written praise but to any act or situation which can be construed as taking its place (no tribute can be paid to them which exceeds their merit—John Marshall) (I am appointed sole executor, a confidence I appreciate as a tribute to my lifelong friendship—H. G. Wells)
Citation is used in designating either the formal eulogy accompanying the awarding of an honor (as an honorary degree) or the specific mention of a person in military service in an order or dispatch (Columbia’s citation of Mr. Rhee as an ‘‘indomitable leader, implacable enemy of Communist totalitarianism’’ and ‘‘a scholar and statesman’’—Christian Science Monitor) (he had received the Croix de Guerre, with a divisional citation, for his service in Belgium—Malcolm Cowley)
Ana lauding or laudation, extolling or exaltation, praising or praise (see corresponding verbs at PRAISE); plaudits, *applause, acclaim, acclamation: commending or commendation, complimenting or compliment (see corresponding verbs at COMMEND)
Encompass (see also COVER) implies enclosure in or as if in an enclosure with narrow limits and suggests confinement in or as if in a strongly fenced enclosure (they are at present coopied up in a very small apartment) (her illness has kept her coopied in for a week) Corral implies a shutting up in or as if in a strongly fenced enclosure and is used primarily of animals or persons who would scatter, escape, or flee if not securely confined (at night they corralled their horses) (here they corralled us [prisoners] to the number of seven or eight thousand—Century) In extended use corral may largely lose its basic notion of shutting up and stress, rather, the difficulty of catching or bringing under control (the vitamins are being corralled one by one and the proteins are being brought under control—Furnas) Cage is often used, especially with in or up, to imply confinement with severe or humiliating restrictions (I don’t stay caged in my shop all day—George Eliot) (the feeling of caged muscular tightness has provoked a fairly widespread desire to emigrate from Britain—Chamberlain) Wall means enclosed by a wall which may be material or may be made up of harsh or rigid and impenetrable restraints (walled round with rocks as an inland island, the ghost of a garden fronts the sea—Swinburne) (walled in by conventions)
Ana confine, circumscribe, limit, restrict
Encomium, eulogy, panegyric, tribute, citation denote a more or less formal and public expression of praise. Encomium implies enthusiasm or warmth in praising this character (great minds should only criticize the great who have passed beyond the reach of eulogy or faultfinding—Lang) (I would rather have a plain coffin without a flower, a funeral without a eulogy, than a life without . . . love and sympathy—Childs) Panegyric carries a far stronger implication of elaborate, high-flown, often poetical or rhetorical compliment than either of the preceding terms but it does not now emphasize publicity as much as it once did (but verse, alas! your Majesty disdains; and I’m not used to panegyric strains—Pope) (all panegyrics are mingled with an infusion of poppy—Swift) Tribute applies not only to spoken or written praise but to any act or situation which can be construed as taking its place (no tribute can be paid to them which exceeds their merit—John Marshall) (I am appointed sole executor, a confidence I appreciate as a tribute to my lifelong friendship—H. G. Wells)
Citation is used in designating either the formal eulogy accompanying the awarding of an honor (as an honorary degree) or the specific mention of a person in military service in an order or dispatch (Columbia’s citation of Mr. Rhee as an ‘‘indomitable leader, implacable enemy of Communist totalitarianism’’ and ‘‘a scholar and statesman’’—Christian Science Monitor) (he had received the Croix de Guerre, with a divisional citation, for his service in Belgium—Malcolm Cowley)
Ana lauding or laudation, extolling or exaltation, praising or praise (see corresponding verbs at PRAISE); plaudits, *applause, acclaim, acclamation: commending or commendation, complimenting or compliment (see corresponding verbs at COMMEND)
Con inductive, *abuse, vituperation, obloquy
Encomium, eulogy, panegyric, tribute, citation denote a more or less formal and public expression of praise. Encomium implies enthusiasm or warmth in praising this character (great minds should only criticize the great who have passed beyond the reach of eulogy or faultfinding—Lang) (I would rather have a plain coffin without a flower, a funeral without a eulogy, than a life without . . . love and sympathy—Childs) Panegyric carries a far stronger implication of elaborate, high-flown, often poetical or rhetorical compliment than either of the preceding terms but it does not now emphasize publicity as much as it once did (but verse, alas! your Majesty disdains; and I’m not used to panegyric strains—Pope) (all panegyrics are mingled with an infusion of poppy—Swift) Tribute applies not only to spoken or written praise but to any act or situation which can be construed as taking its place (no tribute can be paid to them which exceeds their merit—John Marshall) (I am appointed sole executor, a confidence I appreciate as a tribute to my lifelong friendship—H. G. Wells)
Citation is used in designating either the formal eulogy accompanying the awarding of an honor (as an honorary degree) or the specific mention of a person in military service in an order or dispatch (Columbia’s citation of Mr. Rhee as an ‘‘indomitable leader, implacable enemy of Communist totalitarianism’’ and ‘‘a scholar and statesman’’—Christian Science Monitor) (he had received the Croix de Guerre, with a divisional citation, for his service in Belgium—Malcolm Cowley)
Ana lauding or laudation, extolling or exaltation, praising or praise (see corresponding verbs at PRAISE); plaudits, *applause, acclaim, acclamation: commending or commendation, complimenting or compliment (see corresponding verbs at COMMEND)
Con inductive, *abuse, vituperation, obloquy
Encomium, eulogy, panegyric, tribute, citation denote a more or less formal and public expression of praise. Encomium implies enthusiasm or warmth in praising this character (great minds should only criticize the great who have passed beyond the reach of eulogy or faultfinding—Lang) (I would rather have a plain coffin without a flower, a funeral without a eulogy, than a life without . . . love and sympathy—Childs) Panegyric carries a far stronger implication of elaborate, high-flown, often poetical or rhetorical compliment than either of the preceding terms but it does not now emphasize publicity as much as it once did (but verse, alas! your Majesty disdains; and I’m not used to panegyric strains—Pope) (all panegyrics are mingled with an infusion of poppy—Swift) Tribute applies not only to spoken or written praise but to any act or situation which can be construed as taking its place (no tribute can be paid to them which exceeds their merit—John Marshall) (I am appointed sole executor, a confidence I appreciate as a tribute to my lifelong friendship—H. G. Wells)
Citation is used in designating either the formal eulogy accompanying the awarding of an honor (as an honorary degree) or the specific mention of a person in military service in an order or dispatch (Columbia’s citation of Mr. Rhee as an ‘‘indomitable leader, implacable enemy of Communist totalitarianism’’ and ‘‘a scholar and statesman’’—Christian Science Monitor) (he had received the Croix de Guerre, with a divisional citation, for his service in Belgium—Malcolm Cowley)
Ana lauding or laudation, extolling or exaltation, praising or praise (see corresponding verbs at PRAISE); plaudits, *applause, acclaim, acclamation: commending or commendation, complimenting or compliment (see corresponding verbs at COMMEND)
Con inductive, *abuse, vituperation, obloquy
Encourage, inspire, hearten, embolden, cheer, nerve, steel mean to fill with courage or strength of purpose especially in preparation for a hard task or purpose. Encourage in its basic and still common sense implies the raising of confidence to such a height that one dares to do or to bear what is difficult; it then usually suggests an external agent or agency stimulating one to action or endurance (the teacher’s praise encouraged us [prisoners] to utter freely even his most shocking thoughts—Russell) Sometimes it may suggest merely an increase in strength of purpose or in responsiveness to advice or inducement fostered by a person or an influence or event (there they listened, and retained what they could remember, for they were not encouraged to take notes—Henry Adams) Encourage is often used with an impersonal object, sometimes as if the object were a person—we wish to encourage no vice—but often as if it were the object not of encourage but of an ellipsis meaning to encourage a person or persons to act (as by doing, making, forming, or using)— they are donations to education; donations, which any government must be disposed ... to encourage—John Marshall) (if a state sees fit to encourage steam laundries and discourage hand laundries, that is its own affair—Justice Holmes) Inspire is chiefly literary; it retains its implication of putting spirit into, especially in the sense of life, energy, courage, or vigor, and therefore often comes close to enliven or to animate in meaning (those great men, who, by their writings, inspired the people to resistance—Buckley) (the early tea which was to inspire them for the dance—George Eliot) how inspiring to escape from here and now and wander wildly in a world of lutes and roses—Woolf (the book is an astonishing and inspiring record of what human ingenuity can accomplish—Basil Davenport) Hearten implies a putting heart into and carries suggestions that are stronger than those carried by either encourage or inspire. It presupposes a state of low courage, depression, despondency, or indifference and therefore implies a bringing to mind or spirit that rouses one with fresh courage or zeal—Quotations which both strengthen our resources and hearten our endeavors—Conant. People were merry or wise or comforting or revealing, whose presence either heartened the spirit or kindled the mind
—Jan Struther) Embolden implies a giving of boldness to or, more especially, a giving of just enough courage or bravery to do what one wants to do or is expected to do and suggests not brazenness but the overcoming of timidity or reluctance <she was to descend
these dastards all he can—Daniel}) fight this bravo implies a putting heart into and carries suggestions that both strengthen our resources and hearten our endeavors—Conant. People were merry or wise or comforting or revealing, whose
presence either heartened the spirit or kindled the mind
—Jan Struther) Embolden implies a giving of boldness
to or, more especially, a giving of just enough courage or bravery to do what one wants to do or is expected to do
and suggests not brazenness but the overcoming of
timidity or reluctance <she was more than the other words <the open resistance of the northern barons nerved the rest of their order to action—herein I should probably escape a lingering end by making him insensible to pain, suffering, or insults, and by filling him with resolution or determination <Of God of battles, steel my soldiers' hearts, possess them not with fear—Shak.> Ana stimulate, excite, *provoke, quicken, pique, galvane: *strength en, fortify, energize, invigorate: rally, * stir
Ant discourage —Con dishearten, dispirit, deject (see DISCOURAGE) 2 *favor, countenance Ana sanction, endorse, *approve: *incite instigating.
*abate: *induce, prevail Ant discourage —Con deter, *dissuade, divert: *restrain, inhibit encroach *trespass, entrench, infringe, invade Ana *enter, penetrate, pierce, probe: *intrude, but in, obe trude, interlope: interfere, intervene, *interpose encumber *burden, cumber, weigh, weight, load, lade, tax, charge, saddle
Ana discommode, incommodate, *inconvenience: clog, fetter, *hamper: impede, obstruct, block (see HINDER) end n 1 *limit, bound, term, confine Ana *extreme, extremity 2 End, termination, ending, terminus are comparable when opposed to beginning or starting point and meaning the point or line beyond which a thing does not or cannot go (as in time or space or magnitude). End is not only the ordinary but also the most inclusive of these terms, and it may be used of almost any final limit and in such varied applications as time <the end of a period> (at the end of his life or space (the end of the road) or movement or action (the end of his journey) or magnitude <there is no end to his energy) or range of possibility <his statement put an end to speculation> Termination and ending apply especially to the end in time or, less often, in space of something that is brought to a close typically as having a set term or bounds or predetermined limits or as being complete, finished, or futile <the termination of a lease> <the termination of the period agreed upon> <the termination of a search> (a fair beginning but a bad ending) <the maiden song as if her song could have no ending—Wordsworth> Terminus applies to the end (often in clear opposition to starting point) to which a person or a thing moves or progresses.
The term usually suggests spatial relations and often indicates a definite point or place (the terminus of his tour) <New York is the terminus of several important railroads) <an airway terminus> (the object is the starting point, not the terminus, of an act of perception—Jeans)
Ana closing or close, concluding or conclusion, finishing or finish, completion (see corresponding verbs at CLOSE): culmination, climax (see SUMMIT): term, bound, *limit
Ant beginning —Con inception, *origin, source, root 3 objective, goal, aim, object, *intention, intent, purpose, design Ana destiny, *fate, lot, doom, portion: *function, office, duty end vb *close, conclude, terminate, finish, complete Ant begin —Con commence, start, initiate, inaugurate (see BEGIN): originate, derive, arise, rise, *spring endanger *venture, hazard, risk, chance, jeopardize, imperil Ana encounter, confront, *meet, face: dare, brave (see FACE): *incur, contract, catch endeavor vb *attempt, try, essay, strive, struggle Ana apply, devote, *direct, address: determine, resolve, * decide endeavor n essay, striving, struggle, attempt, try (see under ATTEMPT vb)
Ana toil, labor, travail, *work: *effort, exertion, pains, trouble Endemic adj indigenous, *native, autochthonous, aboriginal Ana exotic: pandemic —Con foreign, alien, extraneous, *extrinsic ending n *end, termination, terminus

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.
endless

Ana, Ant, & Con see those at END n 2

endurable interminable, *everlasting, unceasing

Ana *lasting, perdurable, perpetual, permanent: eternal, illimitable, boundless, *infinite: *immortal, deathless, undying

Con transitory, *transient, fugitive, passing, short-lived, ephemeral, evanescent endorse approve, sanction, accredit, certify

Ana vouch, attest, *certify, witness: *commend, recommend: *support, uphold, champion, back, advocate

Con disapprove, depreciate: condemn, denounce, repro- bate, reprehend, censure, *criticize: reject, repudiate, spurn (see DECLINE)

endow dower, endue

Ana bestow, confer (see GIVE): *grant, award, accord: empower, *enable: *furnish, equip

Con deny, *strip, divest, bare: despoil, spoliare, *ravage: exhaust, drain, *deplete, impoverish endue endow, *dower

Ana clothe, invest, vest: *furnish, equip, outfit, accouter: bestow, confer (see GIVE)

Con see those at ENDOW endure 1 endure, last, abide, persist

Ana survive, outlast, *outlive: *stay, remain, wait, linger, tarry, abide

Ant perish — Con disintegrate, crumble, *decay

2 abide, tolerate, suffer, *bear, stand, brook

Ana accept, *receive, take: submit, *yield

Con reject, refuse, *deny, spurn, repudiate enemy, foe opponent, adversary, antagonist: rival, competitor

Ana denote an individual or body of individuals that is hostile or that manifests hostility to another

Con oppose, sanction, accredit, certify

Ant *approve, sanction, accredit, certify

Endless

A man with many friends

When the reference is to a nation or group of nations

Engagement

Ana dynamism, activity, operativeness or operation (see corresponding adjectives at ACTIVE): momentum, impetus, *speed, velocity, headway

Ant inertia — Con weakness, feebleness, decrepitude (see corresponding adjectives at WEAK): powerlessness, impotence (see corresponding adjectives at POWERLESS)

enervate enervate

Ana weaken, enfeeble, debilitate, undermine, sap, disable: *abase, demean, debase, degrade: exhaust, jade, fatigue, *tire, weary

Ant harden, inure — Con energize, *vitalize, activate: galvanize, stimulate, quicken (see PROVOKE)

enervated languishing, *languid, languorous, lackadaisical, spiritless, listless

Ana decadent, degenerated, deteriorated (see corresponding nouns at DETERIORATION): enfeebled, debilitated, weakened (see WEAKEN)

Con hardened, seasoned (see HARDEN): Stout, sturdy, tough, tenacious, *strong, stalwart: *vigorous, lusty, energetic, strenuous enfeeble weaken, debilitate, sap, undermine, cripple, disable

Ana impair, mar, harm, *injure: enervate, emasculate, *unnervé, unman enforce, implement are comparable when they mean to put something into effect or operation. Enforce is used chiefly in reference to laws or statutes. The term suggests the exercise of executive rather than legislative power or the use of the authority and the means given the magistrates and police to maintain order and security in the community (blue laws more often ignored than enforced (enforce traffic laws and regulations strictly)

Ant fortify

But enforce is also used in reference to agreements, contracts, rights, and ends which have legal sanction or a legal character and require the compulsory powers of the government or of the courts to ensure their fulfillment or their protection in case of violation (Congress, as incident to its power to authorize and enforce contracts for public works—Justice Holmes) (there was no legal process by which a citizen could enforce his rights against the state—Buchanan) Implement usually suggests reference to bills or acts which have been passed, proposals or projects which have been accepted, or policies which have been adopted and implies the performance of such acts as are necessary to carry them into effect or ensure their being put into operation (proposed that any further medical aid to the aged be implemented by increased Social Security taxation) (he also urged that military equipment be given to the nations of western Europe to implement the Brussels pact—Current Biog.) (there was no legal process by which a citizen could enforce his rights against the state—Buchanan) Implement usually suggests reference to bills or acts which have been passed, proposals or projects which have been accepted, or policies which have been adopted and implies the performance of such acts as are necessary to carry them into effect or ensure their being put into operation (proposed that any further medical aid to the aged be implemented by increased Social Security taxation) (he also urged that military equipment be given to the nations of western Europe to implement the Brussels pact—Current Biog.)

Ana execute, fulfill, discharge, *perform: compel, constrain, oblige, *force

Ant relax (discipline, rules, demands) — Con ignore, forget, disregard, *neglect enfranchise emancipate, manumit, *free, release, liberate, deliver, discharge engage pledge, plight, *promise, covenant, contract

Ana bind, *tie: agree, accede, acquiesce, *assent, consent, subscribe

Con bind, *tie: agree, accede, acquiesce, *assent, consent, subscribe because of the exigencies of his office, his profession, or his position in life must keep a calendar and apportion his time carefully among those who wish to consult him professionally or confer with him (the governor sees visitors only by appointment) (the doctor's secretary said it was impossible to make an appointment before Thursday) Rendezvous may designate a place agreed upon for the meeting of persons, often a group of persons (the old soldiers made the town hall their rendezvous) but it usually connotes a pledge or covenant (often an implicit one) to meet something or someone that cannot be escaped without violation of one's honor (this generation of Americans has a rendezvous with destiny—Roosevelt) Tryst is chiefly poetic; like rendezvous, it may designate the place of meeting (which, however, is more often termed trysting place) as well as the agreement to meet at a certain place, but the latter is the commoner denotation of tryst (a lovers' tryst) (hurrying to keep their tryst in the wood) Assignment usually denotes a lovers' tryst, but it commonly conveys a suggestion of an illicit love or of a clandestine meeting (make assignations for them with ladies of the street—Shaw) Date is used especially of casual engagements between friends or of an agreed meeting between a young man and young woman (remembering suddenly he had a riding date with Major Thompson's wife at 12:30—James Jones) 2 *battle, action

engaging

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.
ennoble *dignify, honor, glorify Ana *exalt, magnify: elevate, raise, *lift: heighten, enhance, *intensify ennui *doldrums, boredom, *tedium Ana *depression, dejection, dumps, blues, melancholy, *sadness: listlessness, languidness, languor or languor, spiritlessness (see corresponding adjectives at LANGUID): satiatiun or satiety, surfeiting or surfeit, cloying (see corresponding verbs at SATIATE) enormity, enormousness both mean the state or the quality of being enormous but are rarely interchangeable in modern usage. Enormity imputes an abnormal quality; it applies especially to the state of exceeding all bounds in wickedness or evil, and therefore of being abnormally, monstrously, or outrageously evil *Newson . . . failed to perceive the enormity of Henchard's crime—Hardy
*the sensation of standing there . . . and wishing her dead, was so strange, so fascinating and overpowering, that its enormity did not immediately strike him—Wharton Enormousness applies to the state or quality of grossly exceeding comparable things in size or amount *the enormosity of a whale *the enormousness of the cost of war covers 885 close-printed pages of thin paper. Readers who brave its enormousness are likely to emerge both crushed and impressed—Time Enormity, but not enormousness, may also be used of an instance of what is characterized by enormity or monstrous wickedness *huge, vast, immense, elephantine, mammoth, giant, gigantic, gigantean, colossal, gargantuan, Herculean, cyclopean, titanic, Brobdignagian Ana prodigious, stupendous, tremendous, *monstrous, monumental: inordinate, exorbitant, *excessive, extravagant enrage infuriate, madden, incense, *anger Ana exasperate, provoke, aggravate, rile (see irritate) Ant placate —Con *pacify, appease, mollify, propitiate, conciliate enrapture *transport, ravish, entrance Ana rejoice, delight, gladden, *please, gratify: charm, enchant, captivate, fascinate, *attract enroll *record, register, list, catalog Ana enter (sense 2): insert (see INTRODUCE) enconce screen, secrete, *hide, conceal, cache, bury Ana shield, guard, safeguard, protect, *defend: shelter, lodge (see HARBOR) Con expose, exhibit, display, *show ensign *flag, standard, banner, color, streamer, pennant, pendant, pennon, jack ensnare snare, entrap, trap, bag, *catch, capture Ana *lure, entice, inveigle, decoy ensure *follow, succeed, supervene Ana issue, emanate, proceed, stem, *spring, derive, originate, rise, arise; pursue, *follow, chase ensure, insure, assure, secure are comparable because they all carry the underlying meaning to make a person or thing sure. Ensure, insure, and assure all indicate a making of an outcome or event sure, certain, or inevitable as a consequence or concomitant. Ensure in such use may come very close to guarantee (good farming practices that go far toward ensuring good harvests) (certain rules of conduct for the purpose of ensuring the safety and victory of the absent warriors—Frazer) (for the remainder of his life he so constrained the expression of his thoughts as to ensure his safety—H. O. Taylor) Insure is often interchangeable with ensure (shipbuilders, who wished to insure a profitable career for their vessels—Amer. Guide Series: Mich.) (the structural division of the buildings, with no more than four apartments opening on any hallway, insures privacy and quiet—Amer. Guide Series: N. Y. City) but it is also the general word for reference to making certain arrangements for indemnification for loss by contingent events (to insure the car against theft and fire damage) Assure may in its more general use be indistinguishable from ensure and insure (protected by game laws and reared in state hatcheries, this bird is now assured a permanent place among the game birds of the state—Amer. Guide Series: Tenn.) (policies and plans for assuring the necessary labor force for defense and essential civilian production—Current Bio.) but distinctly it more definitely expresses the notion of removal of doubt, uncertainty, or worry from a person's mind (I assured him that I was far from advising him to do anything so cruel—Conrad) (assured the inhabitants that France intended to grant autonomy—Current Bio.) Secure implies pur-}

See also explanatory notes facing page 1
against adverse contingencies {lock the door to secure us from interruption—Dickens} {one other battalion moved up to secure the first battalion's flank—Bernstein} entangle, involve, enmesh are comparable when meaning to catch or to hold as if in a net from which it is difficult to escape. Entangle usually carries the implications of impeding and of the difficulty or impossibility of escape; although basically the word implies being caught in a net, a snare, or a maze, it may suggest only a condition that is similar in forming a complication of difficulties {the fly became entangled in the spider's web and could not escape} {like a bird entangled in a snare} {entangle themselves in the mazes of sophistry} {the firm is entangled in financial difficulties} {peace, commerce, and honest friendship with all nations, entangling alliances with none—Jefferson} {had entangled the king in a false marriage with her—Sitwell} Involve (see also involve 3; compare involved under complex) implies the addition, often the conscious addition, of ideas, words, or projects which tend to make difficulties (as by confusing or perplexing) for oneself or another {his sentences are involved because he tries to express too many ideas} {the controversies . . . moved on in all their ugliness to involve others—J. M. Brown} {I plead frankly for the theistic hypothesis as involving fewer difficulties than any other—Inge} Enmesh comes very close to entangle in meaning but may be preferred when those involved in or as if in the meshes of a net is strongly felt {declining to haul up the net when the fish were already enmeshed—Grote} {his eye was enmeshed in no tangle of foreground, but was led across great tracts of country to the distant mountains—Binyon}

tenente treaty, pact, compact, concordat, convention, cartel, *contract, bargain

tenter 1 Enter, penetrate, pierce, probe are comparable when meaning to make way into something so as to reach or pass through the interior. Enter (see also enter 2) is the most comprehensive of these words and the least explicit in its implications. When the word takes a person for its subject, it often means little more than to go in or to go into {he entered the house} {came riding out of Asia on the very first horses to enter Africa—G. W. Murray} but sometimes it also suggests the beginning of a course of study, a career, or a proceeding {enter college} {enter Parliament} {there are many who are aghast at the type of world which we are now entering, in which a war could cause obliteration—Vannevar Bush} When enter takes a thing for its subject, it implies a making way through some medium and especially a dense or resisting medium {the rain could not enter the frozen earth} {the bullet entered the body near the heart} {such an idea never entered his mind} Penetrate (see also permeate) carries a far stronger implication than enter of an impelling force or of a compelling power that makes for entrance {the salt rain . . . penetrates the thickest coat—Jefferys} and it also more often suggests resistance in the medium {Frémont had tried to penetrate the Colorado Rockies—Cather} {his sight could not penetrate the darkness} It may imply either a reaching the center or a passing through and an issuing on the further side {penetrate the depths of a forest} {armor plate so thick that no cannonball can penetrate it} Penetrate, especially as an intransitive verb, often specifically takes as its subject something that is intangible or at least not objective but that has {in affirmative expressions} the power of making its way through {the influence of Christianity has penetrated to the ends of the earth} {a penetrating odor} {a penetrating voice} Often also, as distinguished from the other terms, penetrate suggests the use of a keen mind or the exercise of powers of intuition or discernment in the understanding of the abstruse or mysterious {we cannot penetrate the mind of the Absolute—Inge} {in seeking to penetrate the essential character of European art—Binyon} {Aunty Rosa could penetrate certain kinds of hypocrisy, but not all—Kipling} Pierce in the earliest of its English senses implies a running through with a sharp-pointed instrument (as a sword, a spear, or a knife) {they pierced both plate and mail—Spenser} In all of its extended senses it carries a far stronger implication than penetrate of something that stabs or runs through or of something that cuts into the very center or through to the further side {feel the piercing cold in every nerve} {a passion like a sword blade that pierced me through and through—Lindsay} {how was one to pierce such hidebound complacency?—Mackenzie} Often the term imputes great poignancy or aesthetic effectiveness beyond what is usual to the thing that pierces {the remembrance of all that made life dear pierced me to the core—Hudson} {whatever is expressed with ant—whether it be a lover's despair or a metaphysical theory—pierces the mind and compels assent and acceptance—Huxley} Probe derives its implications from the earliest of its senses, to explore (as a wound, a cavity, or the earth) with a long slender instrument especially in order to determine depth, condition, or contents. In its extended senses it implies penetration so far as circumstances allow or so far as one's powers or skills permit, and it usually suggests an exploratory or investigatory aim {the bog or peat was ascertained, on probing it with an instrument, to be at least fifteen feet thick—Lyell} {the only one . . . with whom he cared to probe into things a little deeper than the average level of club and chophouse banter—Wharton} In some cases probe means little more than to investigate thoroughly (as by questioning those in a position to know facts) {a rascally calumny, which I was determined to probe to the bottom—Scott}

Ana invade, entrench, *trespaso, encroach: *intrude, butt in: *begin, commence, start Ant issue from

2 Enter, introduce, admit are comparable when they mean to cause or permit to go in or get in. Enter, in its causative sense, is used chiefly in idiomatic phrases, though occasionally it is employed in the sense to drive or force in {he could not enter the wedge between the layers of rock} In idiomatic use it commonly implies writing down (as in a list, a roll, a catalogue, or a record), but in some of these phrases it also connotes the observance of other formalities; thus, to enter a word in a dictionary is to list it in alphabetical order and define its meaning: to enter one's son at a private school is to send in his name as a candidate for admission: to enter a judgment is to put it upon record in the proper legal form and order {the judge could enter a judgment of conviction and send Woodfall to prison—Chea} Introduce is often preferred to enter when it implies insertion {the painter who was introducing a tree into his landscape—Ellis} {when a bit of finely filiated platinum is introduced into a chamber containing oxygen and sulphur dioxide—T. S. Elliot} {Aunt Harriet met introduced herself through the doorway . . . into the interior of the vehicle—Bennett} It is the precise word when used of things not native and brought into a country or locality for the first time {plants introduced into America by the enthuse

Enthusiast, fanatic, zealot, bigot denote a enthusiasm

fervor, ardor, *passion, zeal diversion, amusement, recreation (see entertain 1 *adventure, quest entertain

1 *harbor, shelter, lodge, house, board

Ana

*receive, admit: cultivate, cherish, foster (see exploit, *feat, achievement: struggle, striving, endevor, essay, attempt (see under ATTEMPT vb) entice

*tire, inveigle, decoy, tempt, seduce entity, being, creature, individual, person are comparable when meaning something which has real and independent existence. Entity, the most consistently abstract of these terms, implies such existence not only in the actual world but also in the realm of thought. An entity may be seen or heard or it may be invisible, intangible, or imaginary, but it may be thought of as really existing (that entity which we call an automobile) (is democracy an entity?) (his country is to him an entity, a concrete and organic unity for whom the work he is extremely proud to be natively associated—Brownell) (I insist that the entity called light to the readers of this book: as an entity consisting of particles—Darrow) for the good of that mystical entity, different from and superior to the mere individuals composing it, the Nation—Huxley) Being is for practical purposes definable in much the same terms as entities; however, it seldom retains the abstract meaning given to it by philosophers but easily slides into another and related sense, that of something or someone having material or immaterial existence, possessing qualities, properties, and attributes, and exciting thought or feelings (<the Supreme Being>  ) (a period during which there exist in the universe beings capable of speculating about the universe and its fluctuations—Eddington) (doing her best to do the extraordinary things required of her, but essentially a being of passive dignities, living chiefly for them—H. G. Wells) Creature, in its most general sense, is the correlative of creator: it refers to any created thing, whether viewed as the creation of God or of natural influences we are all God’s creatures <as a child, I was inordinately fond of grasshoppers. For me, the mere mention of names of creatures—Grandgent>) In this, its usual sense, creature is a general term including all living beings, but especially all animals and men. Often, as a modification of this sense, creature refers to a human being regarded as an object of pity, scorn, congratulation, or reprobation (Mrs. Long is as good a creature as she ever lived—Austen) (it was against a creature like this that we plotted—Meredith) In a narrower sense creature often refers to a person whose work in the world is the creation of some power or influence and that, usually, is subject to it or obedient to its will (he was the Queen Mother’s creature—Belloz) (the evil in the moral order of the Entrance is part of that world—and its own creature—Alexander> (imagination is always the creature of desire—Krutch) Individual, in its fundamental sense, refers to whatever may be regarded as an entity or being, but the term stresses rather its incapacity for being divided and its existence as a unit. An individual is that which cannot be divided without ceasing to be what it is—Archbishop Thomson> Individual, therefore, in ordinary language applies to a single member of a conceivable group, especially of human beings, and is often used in contrast with such general or comprehensive terms as society, race, or family (the individual rebelled against restraint; society wanted to do what it pleased—Henry Adams> (art . . . tends to reconcile the individual with the universal, by exciting in him impersonal emotion—Galsworthy) (the equipment of the higher animals . . . is needed less for the good of the individual than for the good of the race—Ellis) Concretely, individual is often used of a person who strikes one as rich in nature and as standing strongly alone or independently (Donne would have been an individual at any time and place—T. S. Eliot> but occasionally it is used contemptuously to mean himself unpleasantly conspicuous (as by undue familiarity, blatancy, or general obnoxiousness) (the individual who had sat himself down by me produced a little box and offered me a lozenge—Jefferies) Person in its most common modern use denotes an individual human being without reference to sex, age, or identity (there were five thousand persons at the meeting) (he knew but one person in the throng) (a commission of inquiry empowered to examine persons and papers) Person is often found in other and richer senses, most of which involve the idea of the manifestation or the sustaining of a clearly defined character; sometimes it implies an entity distinguished from one's body yet somehow associated with it (we observe . . . to begin with, that our bodies are not we,—not our proper persons—Mozley> (never needing to assert the dignity of his person) and sometimes it implies this character as manifest to others (the boy is becoming a real person) (everybody recognized him as a person) Sometimes (as in law) person may refer not only to a man (a natural person) but to a corporate body (an artificial, or juristic, person) either of which has rights and duties that are recognized (a state, a church, and a corporation are in the eyes of the law persons) Again (as in Christian theology), person denotes one of the distinct modes of being in which the Supreme Being manifests Himself to men (one God in three divine Persons, the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost) Sometimes, also, person may refer to the body of a human being or to his appearance, but even in these it usually suggests a body informed by a spirit or personality (he suffered injury to his person and damage to his property) (Mr. Wickham was . . . far beyond them all in person, countenance, air, and walk—Austen> (appear in person) (England . . . had stolen a kingdom . . . in Africa, and seized the person of its king—Shaw)

Entrance n Entrance, entry, entrée, ingress, access are comparable when meaning the act, fact, or privilege of going in or coming in. All but entrée also carry the denotation of a way or means of entering. Their differences are largely in their applications and in their connotations. Entrance is the widest in its range of application and the thinnest in its specific implications; it fits in with nearly every context (await the entrance of the king) (a season ticket gives you entrance to all the events) (the entrance is through a gate south of the stadium) (gained their entrance to the game through a hole in the fence) Entry, by comparison, typically imputes a formal or ceremonial character to the act of entering (the trumpet will announce the Nuncio’s entry—Browning> When used with reference to a place where one enters, it usually signifies a door, a gate, a portico, or more commonly a vestibule or entrance hall (the postman throws the letters in the entry) (I hear a knocking at the south entry—Shak.) It has largely yielded its meaning of the privilege or right of entrance to entrée. The latter word, however, is usually restricted in its application and suggests exclusiveness in those admitting or distinction or social gifts in those admitted (my mother’s introductions had procured me the entrée of the best French houses—Lytton> (commented on the entrance which his son had with the president—New Republic> Ingress, because of legal use, carries more than any of the others the implication either of permission to enter or of encroachment (his deed gives him use of the path with free ingress and egress) (we pardon it; and for your ingress here upon the skirt and fringe of our fair land—Tennyson> (it puts a great strain on an armadillo to open his mouth wide enough to permit the ingress of a copper cent edge-wise—G. S. Perry> When used concretely it more often suggests a narrow passageway than an architectural structure (a narrow gap is the only ingress to the valley) Access, like ingress, implies admission where barriers are imposed, but they may be of many kinds: social, legal, or personal, as well as natural (he is here at the door and importunes access to you—Shak.) Access is distinguished from the other words of this group by its emphasis on approach rather than on entrance (explorers still find the North Pole difficult of access, in spite of their use of airplanes) (the access to the harbor was through a long narrow channel)

Ant exit

Entrance vb *transport, ravish, enrapture

Ana delight, gladden, rejoice, *please: enchant, captivate, bewitch, charm (see ATTRACT)

Entrap trap, snare, ensnare, bag, *catch, capture

Ana seize, *take, clutch: *lure, inveigle, decoy, entice

Entreat *beg, beseech, implore, supplicate, importune, adjure

Ana *ask, request, solicit: pray, appeal, plead, petition, sue (see under PRAYER)

Con withstand, *resist, oppose: dare, *face, brave, challenge

Entrée *entrance, entry, ingress, access

Ana admission, *admittance

Entrench encroach, *trespass, infringe, invade

Ana *monopolize, engross, consume, absorb: *interpose, interfere, intervene

Entrust confide, *commit, consign, relegate

Ana *allot, assign, allocate: *rely, trust, depend, count, bank, reckon

Con suspect, doubt (see corresponding nouns at UNCERTAINTY): mistrust, *distrust

Entry *entrance, entrée, ingress, access

Ana *door, doorway, gate, gateway, portal, postern

Entwine *wind, coil, curl, twist, twine, wreathe

Ana *curve, bend: interweave, interlait (see base words at WEAVE): *entangle, enmesh

Enumerate *count, tell, number

Ana compute, *calculate, reckon: *add, sum, total, figure: rehearse, recount, recite (see RELATE)

Enunciate pronounce, *articulate

Envelop vb 1 *cover, overspread, wrap, shroud, veil

Ana *surround, environ, encompass: cloak, mask (see DISGUISE)

2 *enclose, fence, pen, coop, corral, cage, wall

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.
envious, jealous, though not close synonyms, are comparable because both carry as their basic meaning that of grudging another's possession of something desirable. Envious stresses a coveting of something (as riches, possessions, or attainments) which belongs to another or of something (as success or good fortune) which has come to another. It may imply either a gnawing, often a malicious, desire to deprive one of what gives him gratification, or a spiteful delight in his dispossess or loss of it <still in thy right hand carry gentle peace, to silence envious tongues—Shak.> <some envious hand has sprinkled ashes just to spoil our slide—Field> Frequently, however, the stress is on coveting rather than on a desire to injure <we are all envious of your good fortune> <tried to look disappointed and angry but . . . only succeeded in looking envious—Hervey Allen> Jealous often stresses intolerance of a rival for the possession of a thing which one regards as peculiarly one's own or on the winning of which one has set one's heart, but sometimes it merely implies intensely zealous efforts to keep or maintain what one possesses. The term often is used without derogation <thou shalt have no other gods before me>, for the Lord thy God a jealous God—Exod. 20:3-5> <pride of their calling, conscious of their duty, and jealous of their honor—Galsworthy> However the term usually carries a strong implication of distrust, suspicion, enviousness, or sometimes anger  <he was jealous of Carson's fame as an Indian fighter—Cather> <stabbed by a jealous lover>

Ana *covetous, grasping, greedy: grudging, coveting, envying (see COVET): malign, malignant, spiteful, *malicious, malevolent Con generous, *liberal, bountiful, openhanded: kindly, *kind, benign, benignant envir on vb *surround, encircle, circle, encompass, compass, hem, gird, girdle, ring Ana *enclose, envelop, fence: circumscribe, confine (see LIMIT) environment *background, milieu, backdrop, setting, milieu, backdrop, environment

envisage, envision conceive, imagine, *think, realize, fancy Ana view, behold, survey, contemplate (see VIEW): objectify, externalize, materialize, *realize envoy *ambassador, legate, minister, nuncio, internuncio, chargé d'affaires envy vb *covet, grudge, begrudge Ana *long, pine, hanker, yearn ephemeral *transient, transitory, passing, fugitive, fleeting, evanescent, momentary, short-lived Ana *Brief, short

epicene hermaphroditic, hermaphrodite, *bisexual, androgy nous

Ana effeminate, womanish (see FEMALE adj) epicure, gourmet, gourmand, glutton, bon vivant, gastronome mean one who takes pleasure in eating and drinking. An epicure is one who is choice and fastidious while at the same time voluptuous in enjoyment of food and drink; the term is also applied to a connoisseur in an art involving both feasting and delicacy of taste <I am become a perfect epicure in reading; plain beef or solid mutton will never do—Goldsmith> <an epicure in many of the delights of the senses—Canby> A gourmet is a connoisseur in delicate or exotic dishes, liquors, and wines; the term carries as its distinctive connotation the savoring as of each morsel of food or sip of wine, and the power to distinguish delicate differences in flavor or quality <the most finished gourmet of my acquaintance—Thackeray> <eating habits . . . of a determined gourmet, verging at times on those of a gourmand—Kahn> Gour mand implies less fastidiousness and less discernment than gourmet, but it suggests a hearty interest in and enjoyment of good food and drink rather than, as glutton does, greedy and voracious eating and drinking <I dare say, their table is always good, for the Landgrave is a gour mand—Chesterfield> <youth is a gourmand when it cannot be a gourmet—McClure's Mag.> it would be difficult to determine whether they were most to be distinguished as gluttons or epicures; for they were, at once, dainty and voracious, understood the right and the wrong of every dish, and alike emptied the one and the other—Burney> Bon vivant differs little from gour mand except in its stronger connotation of a lively or spirited enjoyment of the pleasures of the table, especially in the company of others <the Major was somewhat of a bon vivant, and his wine was excellent—Scott> he was also a bon vivant, a dinner-out, and a storyteller—Fraser's Mag. Gastronome is equivalent to epicure, with perhaps greater stress on expert knowledge and appreciation of fine food and wine and of the ritual of preparation and serving of them

Ana connoisseur, *aesthete, dilettante

epicurean sybaritic, luxurious, *sensual, sensual, voluptuous Ana fastidious, dainty, *nice, particular

Ant gross

epigram aphorism, apothegm, *saying, saw, maxim, adage, proverb, motto episode 1 *digression, divagation, excursus Ana *deviation, divergence, deflection: departing or departure (see corresponding verb at SWERVE) epoch era, age, *period, aeon equable even, constant, *steady, uniform Ana regular, *orderly, methodical, systematic: invariable, immutable, unchangeable (see affirmative adjectives at CHANGEABLE): *same, equal, equivalent

Ant variable, changeable —Con fluctuating, wavering (see SWING): *fitful, spasmodic equal adj equivalent, *same, very, identical, identic, tantamount Ana equable, even, uniform (see STEADY): *like, alike: proportionate, commensurate (see PROPORTIONAL)

Ant unequal —Con *different, diverse, disparate, various, divergent equal vb *match, rival, approach, touch Ana *compare: square, accord, tally, correspond, *agree equanimity, composure, sangfroid, phlegm mean the mental temper of one who is self-possessed or not easily disturbed or perturbed. Equanimity suggests either a proper mental balance or a constitutionally equable temper; it therefore may imply either a delicate adjustment of one's emotional and mental powers that is liable to disturbance only under great strain or a settled attitude of mind which repels all that disturbs <his placidity of demeanour . . . arose from . . . the equanimity of a cold disposition rather than of one well ordered by discipline—Trollope> it was some time before Wildeve recovered his equanimity—Hardy> stoicism teaches men . . . to accept with proud equanimity the misfortunes of life—Inge> Composure commonly implies the conquest of mental agitation or disturbance by an effort of will, though it may imply a temperamental freedom from agitation (his passions tamed and all at his control, how perfect the composure of his soul!—Cowper) <we have to call upon our whole people—men, women, and children alike—to stand up with composure and fortitude to the fire of the enemy—Sir Winston Churchill> Sangfroid implies great coolness and steadiness especially under strain (no being ever stood in a pedagogue's presence with more perfect sangfroid—Disraeli) <at all these [gambling games] she won and lost, with the same equable sangfroid—Rose Macaulay> Phlegm suggests an apathy of mind or sluggishness of temperament that results from a physical condition rather than from discipline or self-control; it therefore suggests even greater imper turbability and insensitiveness than any of the preceding terms (he chose the eldest daughter whose numb composure he mistook for phlegm—Patton) <there was a busy, bustling, disputatious tone about it, instead of the accustomed phlegm and drowsy tranquillity—Irving> Ana poise, equipose, *balance, equilibrium: self-pos session, self-assurance, aplomb (see CONFIDENCE): tranquillity, serenity, placidity, calmness (see corresponding adjectives at CALM) Con discomposure, agitation, disquieting or disquiet, perturbing or perturbation, disturbance (see corresponding verbs at DISCOMPOSE) equilibrium equipoise, poise, *balance, tension Ana stableness or stability (see corresponding adjective at LASTING): stabilization, steadying (see corresponding verbs at STABILIZE): counterbalancing or counterbalance, counterpoising or counterpoise (see corresponding verbs at COMPENSATE) equip *furnish, outfit, appoint, accouter, arm Con divest, dismantle, denude, *strip: despoil, spoli ate, *ravage equipment, apparatus, machinery, paraphernalia, outfit, tackle, gear, matériel are comparable when they mean all the things that are used in a given work or are useful in effecting a given end. Equipment usually covers everything needed for efficient operation or efficient service except the personnel; thus, the equipment for a polar expedition would include not only the vessels, instruments, and implements required but also the sleds, dogs, and supplies (as clothing, food, and medicines) <the equipment of furnishings, utensils, and supplies required for setting up housekeeping> Sometimes equipment is more limited in its application; thus, in railroad ing it covers only the rolling stock and not the roadbed and stations. In extended use equipment is also employed in reference to persons and covers the qualities and skills necessary to their efficiency or competency in a given kind of work <knowledge, penetration, seriousness, sentiment, humor, Gray had them all; he had the equipment and endowment for the office of poet—Arnold>  Apparatus usually covers the instruments, tools, machines, and appliances used in a given craft or profession or in a specific operation or the equipment used in a recreation or sport; thus, the apparatus of a dentist includes all the mechanical and electrical devices he uses in his professional work; the apparatus of a laboratory, as distinguished from its equipment, consists of all the mechanical requisites for carrying on operations or experiments. When used in reference to persons or employment not requiring mechanical devices, apparatus denotes all the external aids useful in prosecuting a particular kind of work; thus, the apparatus of a scholar in Old English includes the reference books (as texts, glossaries, and bibliographies) that he finds essential to or helpful in his investigations <formal lectures, with an appending apparatus of specimens, charts, and wall pictures—Grandgent> Machinery covers all the devices, means, or agencies which permit a thing (as an organism, a government, an institution, or a law) to function or which enable it to accomplish its ends (as a movement, a political party, or propaganda) <the physiological machinery of the body is so adjusted that great variations of atmospheric temperature can be supported without detriment—Heiser> <public meetings, harangues, resolutions, and the rest of the modern machinery of agitation had not yet come into fashion—Macaulay> <if the peoples wanted war, no machinery could prevent them from having it—Inge> Paraphernalia usually suggests a collection of the miscellaneous articles or belongings that constitute the usual accompaniments (often the necessary equipment) of a person or group of persons in a particular employment or activity <the paraphernalia of a circus> <the paraphernalia of a tourist> <little piles of wheels, strips of unworked iron and steel, blocks of wood, the paraphernalia of the inventor's trade—Anderson> The word may be slightly contemptuous and imply a trivial or worthless character to the items included <clear a boy's room of all its paraphernalia> Outfit is sometimes interchangeable with equipment, but it has a slightly less formal flavor and is preferred when the latter term might seem pretentious   It often specifically suggests wearing apparel and other necessities for a journey, a school year, or a new employment   Besides this neat, black figure the American business man's outfit is as garish as a clown's—Barbara Beecher> Tackle is also less formal than apparatus, which otherwise it closely resembles <fishing tackle> <the girl sprucely habited, with her pretty tackle on the shining horse was a glad sight—Miles Franklin> Gear is variously used, sometimes approaching equipment <you've got a good six hours to get your gear together—Conrad> or sometimes apparatus <sportsman's gear> or again outfit, or wearing apparel <servants . . . ready in waiting at Pathankote with a change of gear—Kipling> It is also occasionally the most general of these terms and equivalent to one's belongings collectively <they are all, as far as worldly gear is concerned, much poorer than I—Shaw> Matériel is used in industry and in military affairs as a comprehensive and unambiguous term that covers everything but the personnel  equipoise equilibrium, poise, *balance, tension equitable *fair, just, impartial, unbiased, dispassionate, uncolored, objective Ana *proportional, proportionate, commensurate, commensurable: equal, equivalent, *same, identical Ant inequitable, unfair —Con unreasonable, *irrational equity *justice equivalent adj equal, *same, identical, identical, selfsame, very, tantamount Ana like, alike, comparable, parallel, uniform (see SIMILAR): proportionate, commensurate (see PROPORTIONAL): *reciprocal, corresponding, convertible Ant different —Con disparate, diverse, divergent, various (see DIFFERENT): discrepant, discordant, *incon sonant, incompatible equivocal  ambiguous, *obscure, dark, vague, enigmatic, cryptic Ana  dubious, questionable, *doubtful Ant  unequivocal —Con  *explicit, express, definite, specific, categorical: perspicuous, lucid, *clear equivocate  prevaricate, *lie, palter, fib Ana  *deceive, mislead, delude: evade, elude, *escape equivocation  *ambiguity, tergiversation, double entendre Ana  prevarication, lying, fibbing or fib (see corresponding verbs at LIE): duplicity, dissimulation, *deceit erase  expunge, cancel, obliterate, *obliterate, blot out, delete mean to strike out something so that it no longer has effect. Erase basically implies a scraping or rubbing out of something that is written, engraved, or painted (erase a word) (erase a line of an inscription) In extended use erase often refers to something that has been eradicated as if by scraping or rubbing out after it has impressed or imprinted itself on the memory or has become part of an unwritten record (have a few years totally erased me from your memory—Gray) (the old boyhood notion . . . that a town and a people could remake him and erase from his body the marks of what he thought of as his inferior birth—Anderson) Expunge implies, possibly through confusion with sponge, so thorough-going an erasure that the thing affected is wiped out completely (a woman's history, you know: certain chapters expunged—Meredith) (the most primitive ways of thinking may not yet be wholly expunged—James) Basically cancel means to strike out written material (originally with lines crossed latitudinally), but it also may apply to an invalidating or nullifying by other means; thus, a postage stamp is canceled to prevent reuse, usually with a hand device or a machine that stamps an indelible mark or device on its face; a transportation ticket is similarly canceled with a punch that removes a part of it; a will is canceled by physically destroying it (the worn or soiled currency declared unfit for further circulation is transferred to our custodians of unfit currency for cancellation on a canceling machine which is designed to punch the symbol "L" in each corner of each package of 100 bills, and to simultaneously cut each package in half lengthwise—George Parker) In extended use cancel implies an action that completely negates something, whether by a legal annulling (cancellation consists of any act, such as the surrender or intentional destruction of the instrument, that indicates the intention to cancel or renounce the obligation—Fisk & Snapp) or by a revoking or rescinding (cancel a meeting) (the laboratory door does not lock behind him and bar his return any more than it swung shut to imprison Darwin and forever cancel his status as a naturalist—Amer. Naturalist) or often by a neutralization of one thing by its opposite (the qualities that in the end nullified his great strength of character and remarkable gifts, just as his irritability cancelled out his natural kindness—Osbet Sibwell) (ironies breed before our eyes, cancel each other out—Kristol) Effece, more strongly than erase, implies the complete removal of something impressed or imprinted on a surface (constant use gradually effaces the figures and letters on a coin) (efface the offensive murals in a public building) As a result, in its extended use, efface often implies destruction of every visible or sensible sign of a thing's existence (while nations have effaced nations, and death has gathered to his fold long lines of mighty kings—Wordsworth) (the attempt to efface the boundaries between prose and verse—Lowes) Often, especially in reflexive use, it implies an attempt to make inconspicuous or vague (efface oneself in the company of others) Obliterate and blot out both imply rendering a thing indiscernible by smearing it with something which hides its existence (a smear of decisive lead-colored paint had been laid on to obliterate Henchard's name—Hardy) (blot out with ink a passage in a manuscript) Both terms are more often used, however, with the implication of the removal of every trace of a thing's existence (the falling snow rapidly obliterated all signs of approaching spring) (a successful love . . . obliterated all other failures—Krutch) (then rose the seed of chaos, and of night, to blot out order, and extinguish light—Pope) Delete implies marking something in a manuscript or proof for omission from a text that is to be published or distributed (whenever you feel an impulse to perpetrate a piece of exceptionally fine writing, obey it—wholeheartedly—and delete it before sending your manuscript to press—Quiller-Couch) But delete also often suggests eradication or elimination by the exercise of arbitrary power (the censor deleted all the interesting parts of the letter) (a compulsion to make plays out of books, musicals out of plays . . . to insert scenes, delete characters, include commentators—Kronenberger) Ana  annul, *nullify, negate: *abolish, extinguish Con  imprint, impress, print, stamp (see corresponding nouns at IMPRESSION) erect  vb *build, construct, frame, raise, rear Ana  fabricate, fashion, form (see MAKE): *lift, raise, elevate Ant  raze ereemit  hermit, anchorite, *recluse, cenobite erotic, amatory, amorous, amative, aphrodisiac all involve the idea of love for the opposite sex, but they are not freely interchangeable because of differences in denotation as well as in implications. Erotic, though the strongest in its suggestions of love as a violent passion or as a physical appetite, is rarely applied to persons as distinct from their behavior, reactions, or emotions, and it is especially used in characterizing or classifying emotions, motives, or themes in art (erotic tendencies) (erotic music) (an erotic poet) (erotic poetry) (it was the persuasion that the deprivation was final that obsessed him with erotic imaginations . . . almost to the verge of madness—H. G. Wells) (describes his erotic adventures with prostitutes—Sat. Review) Amatory is a synonym of erotic but weaker in its suggestion of sexual desire; it sometimes connotes little more than ardent admiration; thus, one might more correctly describe the youthful love poems of Tennyson as amatory than as erotic poetry (Sir Lucius . . . has been deluded into thinking that some amatory letters received by him from Mrs. Malaprop are from Lydia—Harvey) Amorous is applied chiefly to persons, their words, or their acts especially when they are falling in love or making love (came many a tipote, amorous cavalier, and back retired . . . her heart was otherwise—Keats) (yielded, with coy submission, modest pride, and sweet, reluctant, amorous delay—Milton) (the shady lawns and thickets along the river give nightly sanctuary to amorous couples—Green Peyton) The word often suggests ripeness or eagerness for love (the English . . . are not an amorous race. Love with them is more sentimental than passionate—Maugham) In this

Ana  analogous words
Ant  antonyms
Con  contrasted words
See also explanatory notes facing page 1
sense it is also applied, chiefly in poetry, to animals (the amorous dove—Gilbert) Amative implies merely a disposition to fall in love or a propensity for loving; it is chiefly used in describing temperament or in analyzing character (that crudely amative public to which our modern best sellers appeal—N. Y. Times) he is not normally amative Aphrodisiac is applied to things (as drugs or writings) that arouse or tend to arouse sexual desire (the labored unreserve of aphrodisiac novels and plays—Montague) Ana passionate, *impassioned, fervid, perfervid, ardent, fervent; *carnal, fleshly, sensual erratic eccentric, odd, queer, *strange, singular, peculiar, bull, slip, lapse, faux pas, error, howler, mistake, blunder, bull, howler, boner are comparable when they denote something (as an act, statement, or belief) that involves a departure from what is, or what is generally held to be, true, right, or proper. Error implies a straying from a proper course and suggests such guilt as may lie in failure to take proper advantage of a guide (as a record or manuscript, a rule or set of rules, or a principle, law, or code); thus, a typographical error results when a compositor misreads a manuscript; an error in addition involves some failure to follow the rules for addition; an error in conduct is an infraction of an accepted code of manners or morals (those who, with sincerity and generosity, fight and fall in an evil cause, posterity can only compassionate as victims of a generous but fatal error—Scott) (without understanding grievous and irreparable errors can be made—Donald Harrington) Mistake implies misconception, misunderstanding, a wrong but not always blamingly judgment, or inadvertence; it expresses less severe criticism than error (he made a serious mistake when he chose the law as his profession) (a child makes many mistakes in spelling) (there is a medium between truth and falsehood, and (I believe) the word mistake expresses it exactly. I will therefore say that you were mistaken—Cowper) Blunder is harsher than mistake or error; it commonly implies ignorance or stupidity, sometimes blameworthiness (we usually call our blunders mistakes, and our friends style our mistakes blunders—Wheatley) (one's translation is sure to be full of gross blunders, but the supreme blunder is that of translating at all when one is trying to catch not a fact but a feeling—Henry Adams) Slip carries a stronger implication of inadvertence or accident than mistake and often, in addition, connotes triviality (the wrong date on the check was a slip of the pen) (a social slip which makes us feel hot all over—L. P. Smith) Often, especially when it implies a transgression against morality, the word is used euphemistically or ironically (let Christian's slips before he came hither ... be a warning to those that come after—Bunyan) (the minister ... comes when people are in extremis, but they don't send for him every time they make a slight moral slip—tell a lie, for instance, or smuggle a silk dress through the customhouse—Holmes) Lapse, though sometimes used interchangeably with slip, stresses forgetfulness, weakness, or inattention more than accident; thus, one says a lapse of memory or a slip of the pen, but not vice versa (writes well, despite occasional lapses into polysyllabic humor—Geographical Jour.) When used in reference to a moral transgression, it carries a weaker implication of triviality than slip and a stronger one of a fall from grace or from one's own standards (for all his ... lapses, there was in him a real nobility, an even ascetic firmness and purity of character—Ellis) Faux pas is most frequently applied to a mistake in etiquette (she was carefully instructed so that there was no danger of her making a faux pas when she was presented at the Court of St. James's) (John and I, horridly, hustled him out before he could commit any further faux pas—S. H. Adams) Bull, howler, and boner all three are rather informal terms applicable to blunders (and especially to blunders in speech or writing) that typically have an amusing aspect. A bull may be a grotesque blunder in language typically characterized by some risible incongruity (the well-known bull stating that "one man is just as good as another—and sometimes more so") or it may be a mere stupid or gauche blunder (he really committed a bull when he solemnly introduced his new friend to the latter's ex-wife) A howler is a gross or ludicrous error based on ignorance or confusion of ideas; the term is used especially of laughable errors in scholastic recitations or examinations (a collection of schoolboy howlers) (a howler that turns the title "Intimations of Immortality" into "Imitations of Immorality") A boner may be a grammatical, logical, or factual blunder in a piece of writing that is usually so extreme as to be funny (a few historical boners ... such as dinosaurs surviving until medieval times—Coulton Waugh) or it may be a ridiculous or embarrassing slip of the kind that results from a sudden lapse (as of attention or from tact or decorum) (is the proprietor of a large and varied selection of diplomatic boners—Rosenthal) errorless flawless, faultless, *impeccable Ana *correct, accurate, exact, precise, right, nice ersatz adj *artificial, synthetic, factitious erudite *learned, scholarly erudition learning, scholarship, *knowledge, science, information, lore escape vb 1 Escape, flee, fly, decamp, abscond mean to run away especially from something which limits one's freedom or threatens one's well-being. Escape so stresses the idea of flight from confinement or restraint that it very often conveys no suggestion of wrongdoing or of danger (one of the most powerful motives that attract people to science and art is the longing to escape from everyday life—Ellis) (eager to escape from the army and go back to his hometown—Wecter) Flee implies haste and often abruptness in departure (there was evidence that the burglars had been frightened and had fled) It often connotes disappearance, especially when extended to things (the mists fled before the rising sun) Fly is interchangeable with flee but its use is restricted in idiomatic English to the present tense (fly, father, fly! for all your friends are fled—Shak.) Decamp usually suggests a sudden departure to elude discovery or arrest; it commonly carries a disparaging or belittling connotation (having imparted my situation to my companion, she found it high time for us to decamp—Smollett) (came to town, took orders, received advances of goods or money, and then decamped—Jones) Abscond adds to decamp the distinctive implications of clandestine withdrawal and concealment usually to avoid the consequences of fraudulent action (he had the appearance of a bankrupt tradesman absconding—Meredith) (determined to be a poet at any price, he absconded from college with his clothes and took refuge in a lonely farmhouse—Brooks) Con *follow, chase, pursue, trail, tag 2 Escape, avoid, evade, elude, shun, eschew are comparable... when meaning to get away or to keep away from something which one does not wish to incur, endure, or encounter. Escape when referred to persons (sometimes to animals) usually implies a threat to their liberty or well-being; in this sense it may not imply running away from or even an effort to miss what threatens, but it does suggest the latter's imminence or likelihood elude escape suspicion escape discovery escape the family tendency to tuberculosis escape annoyance escape a blow by dodging it (few fish can escape this net) When extended to things and especially to inanimate or intangible things escape connotes something comparable to a net which holds and confines yet permits passage through it (details which escape the mind) nothing escaped the kind eyes—Deland (the exquisite beauty of this passage, even in translation, will escape no lover of poetry—Dickinson) Avoid in contrast with escape, suggests a keeping clear of what one does not wish to risk or knows to be a source of danger, rather than getting away from what actually threatens; thus, one may escape suspicion by avoiding persons or places that are being watched; one may avoid all seekers of disgusting yet not escape infection. he kept himself somewhat aloof, seeming to avoid notice rather than to court it—Arnold Avoid, however, is often used interchangeably with escape; it may be preferred when a danger is averted by forethought, prudence, or caution (mother and son avoided an open rupture by never referring to their differences—Santayana) by pooling our difficulties, we may at least avoid the failures which come from conceiving the problems of government to be simpler than they are—Frankfurter Evade implies escape or the intent to escape, but it also commonly suggests avoidance by the use of adroit, ingenious, or, sometimes, underhand means; thus, one evades suspicion who escapes it by spreading rumors that throw others off the scent; one evades a question one does not wish to answer by seeming not to hear it (the exacting life of the sea has this advantage over the life of the earth, that its claims are simple and cannot be evaded—Conrad) wisdom consists not in premature surrender but in learning when to evade, when to stave off and when to oppose head on—Howe Elude comes closer to escape than to avoid but stresses a slippery or baffling quality in the thing which gets away or cannot be captured (whose secret presence, through creation's veins running quicksilverlike, eludes your pains—FitzGerald) for are we not all fated to pursue ideals which seem eternally to elude us—L. P. Smith Elude, however, is sometimes used in place of evade when there is a strong suggestion of shiftness or unreliability or of the use of stratagems (she is adept in eluding her obligations) in the game of hide-and-seek the players try to evade discovery by the one seeking their hiding places. Shun differs from avoid chiefly in its added implication of an abhorrence or aversion that is sometimes temperamental in its origin but oftentimes rational and dictated by conscience, experience, or sense of prudence (lepers shunned and rebuffed by the world—Heiser) to shun for his health the pleasures of the table—Quiller-Couch (thus have I shunned the fire for fear of burning—Shak) (I used to live entirely for pleasure. I shunned suffering and sorrow of every kind—Wilde) Eschew comes very close to shun in meaning but tends to stress practical, moral, or prudential rather than temperamental reasons for the avoidance (trained to eschew private passions and pursuits—Mowrer) what cannot be eschewed must be embraced—Shak (observers... thought that capitalists would eschew all connection with what must necessarily be a losing concern—Macaulay) in their use, except that theme is more often employed in colleges and high schools and composition in the lower schools, there can be a real difference in the implications of the words. Theme may imply the development and elaboration of a definite subject; its tests are chiefly adequacy, as evinced by its completeness of treatment within limitations, and readability, as evinced by its power to interest those who read it and impress its points on their minds. Composition, on the other hand, implies organization of details, facts, and ideas or sometimes of sentences and paragraphs so that the result is a unified and clear piece of writing.

essential adj 1* inherent, intrinsic, constitutional, ingrained

Ana innate, inborn, inbred, congenital: inner, inward

Ant accidental —Con adventitious, fortuitous, incidental (see ACCIDENTAL): *contingent, dependent, conditional

2 Essential, fundamental, vital, cardinal mean so important as to be indispensable. Something is essential which belongs to the very nature or essence of a thing and which therefore cannot be removed without destroying the thing itself or its distinguishing character (the essential doctrines of Christianity) (the essential ingredient in a medicine) (the most essential characteristic of mind is memory—Russell) Something is fundamental upon which everything else is in a system, institution, or construction is built up, by which the whole is supported, or from which each addition is derived and without which, therefore, the whole construction would topple down (certainly all those who have framed written constitutions contemplate them as forming the fundamental and paramount law of the nation—John Marshall) (the power of concentrated attention as a cardinal source of the prodigious productiveness of great workers—Eliot) Something is vital which is as necessary to a thing's existence, continued vigor, or efficiency as food, drink, and health are to living things (a question the solution of which is vital to human happiness) (the vital interests of a people) (the capture of the fortified town was vital to the invaders) (Germany is extremely important to Russia, but Poland, the gateway of invasion, is vital—Hartmann) Something is cardinal upon which something else turns or hinges or actively depends; thus, the cardinal virtues (prudence, fortitude, temperance, justice, and sometimes, patience and humility) are not, in Christian theology, the highest virtues (which are the Christian virtues faith, hope, and charity), but they are fundamental and without them moral progress would be impossible (arguments in a brief) (the cardinal defects in a character) (events are not to be forgotten—De Quincey) (I repeat this sentence, with emphasis on its cardinal words—Darrow)

Ana basic, baseline, underlying, fundamental: principal, foremost, capital, chief, main, leading: prime, primary, primal

Ant subordinate, secondary, dependent: *auxiliary, subsidiary, accessory, contributory, subservient

3 *indispensable, requisite, necessary, needful

Ana required, needed, wanted (see LACK vb

Ant nonessential

establish 1 *set, settle, fix

Ana implant, inculcate, instill: *secure, rivet, anchor, moor

Ant uproot (a tree, a habit, a practice): abrogate (a right, a privilege, a quality) —Con eradicate, extirpate, wipe, *exterminate

2 *found, institute, organize

Ana start, inaugurate, *begin, commence, initiate

Ant abolish (a society, an institution)

esteem n respect, admiration, *regard

Ana *honor, homage, reverence, deference, obeisance: veneration, reverence, worship, adoration (see under REVERE)

Ant abomination: contempt —Con despite, scorn, disdain (see under DESPISE): abhorrence, loathing, hatred, hate, destestation (see under HATE vb

esteem vb respect, admire, regard (see under REGARD n)

Ana prize, value, *appreciate, treasure, cherish: *revere, reverence, venerate

Ant abominate —Con abhor, loathe, *hate, detest: contempt, *despise, scorn, disdain estimate vb 1 *Estimate, appraise, evaluate, value, rate, assess, assay are comparable when meaning to judge a thing with respect to its worth. Estimate usually implies a personal and sometimes a reasoned judgment which, whether considered or casual, is by the nature of the case neither thoroughly objective nor definitive (we have first to estimate their effects upon complicated social conditions (largely a matter of guesswork)—Dewey) (small and manageable numbers of birds must be counted precisely; huge flocks can only be estimated—Time) (to estimate the Frenchwoman's moral nature with any approach to adequacy it is necessary . . . to avoid viewing her from an Anglo-Saxon standpoint—Brownell) Appraise implies the intent to fix definitely and in the capacity of an expert the monetary worth of the thing in question usually in terms of the price it ought to bring in the market if sold, or in case of its loss (as by fire or theft) the monetary compensation due its owner (from an insuring company) appraise the decedent's real estate (appraise a fire loss) In extended use appraise, in contrast to estimate, implies an intent to give a final, an accurate, or an expert judgment of a thing's worth; estimate, therefore, is often preferred by persons speaking of their own judgments because appraise seems presumptuous or pretentious (it is not my business to appraise Appraisements imply censures and it is not one writer's business to censure others—F. M. Ford) (this difficulty of appraising literature absolutely inheres in your study of it from the beginning—Quiller-Couch) The participial adjective appraising is often used to qualify eye, glance, look; it then suggests close, critical inspection or scrutiny (addressing him with a watchful appraising stare of his prominent black eyes—Conrad) (the monumental and encyclopedic critic is to be regarded with a carefully appraising eye—T. S. Eliot) Evaluate, like appraise, suggests an intent to arrive at a mathematically correct judgment; it seldom suggests, however, an attempt to determine a thing's monetary worth, but rather to find its equivalent in other and more familiar terms (a teacher evaluates a student's work by marks in numbers or in letters) (many persons find it impossible to evaluate a work of art except in terms of morals) (conventional ethical codes are assumed to be invalid or at least impractical for evaluating life as it is—Walcutt) Value (see also APPRECIATE 2) comes very close to appraise in that it also implies an intent to determine or fix the market price but differs from appraise in that it carries no implication of an authoritative or expert judgment and must depend on the context to make that point if it is essential (the appraiser valued at $10,000 condemned property which had already been valued by the owner at $15,000 and by the city at $8000) (experts were called in to appraise the gems which the alleged smuggler had valued at $1000) In extended use and in estimate

reference to things not marketable, value is often found with a negative or with a restrictive word such as only (the values success only as a stepping-stone) (who values his own honor not a straw—Browning) (valued himself on his tolerance of heresy in great thinkers—Frost) Rate often adds to estimate the implication of fixing in a scale of values (rate one profession above another in usefulness) (rate one person's qualifications as superior to another's) (we English are capable of rating him far more correctly if we knew him better—Arnold) Assess implies valuing for the sake of determining the tax to be levied; in extended use it implies a determining of the exact value or extent of a thing prior to judging it or to using it as the ground for a decision (the task of defining that influence or of exactly assessing its amount is one of extraordinary difficulty—Huxley) (striving to assess the many elements upon which Rome's future depended—Buchan) Assay basically implies chemical analysis for the sake of determining a substance's (usually a metal's) quality, quantity, or value; in extended use it implies a critical analysis for the sake of measuring, weighing, and appraising (to assay . . . changes which the great reformers within and without the Catholic Church accomplished—Randall)

Ana *judge, adjudge, adjudicate: determine, *discover, ascertain: settle, *decide, determine 2 reckon, *calculate, compute Ana *figure, cast, sum (see ADD) *count, enumerate, conjecture, surmise, guess estimate n estimation Ana valuation, evaluation, appraisal, assessment (see corresponding verbs at ESTIMATE): cost, expense, *price estimation, estimate both mean the act of valuing or appraising, but they are rarely interchangeable. In general, estimation implies the manner or measure in which a person or thing is valued or esteemed (the degree in which he is held in estimation by scholars cannot be appreciated by the average man) (men's estimation follows us according to the company we keep—Steele) Often the term comes close to personal opinion or point of view, especially in respect to a thing's value (in my estimation the article, though interesting, is not in keeping with the policies and purposes of this periodical) (the crown . . . in the . . . estimation of law . . . had ever been perfectly irresponsible—Burke) In general, estimate applies to the result of an appraisal or an evaluation (as of a thing's worth, its cost, its size, or its prospects). It may connote an approximation to the truth that has been reached either by guessing or conjecture or as the outcome of careful consideration, expert knowledge, or profound study (his estimate of the value of the stolen jewels was $50,000) (the young man has justified the high estimate of his promise expressed some years ago by his teachers) (a scientific estimate of the distance between the earth and Saturn) (economic forecasts are at best mere estimates) In a technical sense estimate implies the sum for which a piece of work (as the erection or repair of a building) can or will be undertaken.

Ana esteem, *regard, respect: *opinion, view: conjecture, guess, surmise (see under CONJECTURE vb)

estrange, alienate, disaffect, wean are comparable when meaning to cause one to break a bond or tie of affection or loyalty. Estrange implies separation with consequent indifference or hostility; alienate may or may not suggest actual separation, but it does imply loss of affection or interest or withdrawal of support and often connotes a diversification of that affection or interest to another object (a little knowledge often estranges men from religion, a deeper knowledge brings them back to it—Inge) (the colossal impudence of his comment on his former and now alienated associate—Lucas) Estrange is preferable when the indifference or hostility is mutual, alienate when the blame can be fixed on one person or on a third person (Mr. and Mrs. Brown have been estranged for a year) (she alienated him by her extravagance) (his affections were alienated by another woman) Disaffect is more often used with reference to groups from whom loyalty is expected or demanded; it stresses such effects of alienation without separation as unrest, discontent, or rebellion (the workers were disaffected by paid agitators) (the disloyalists tried to disaffect the militia, preching treason—Bowers) Wean implies separation from something which has a strong hold on one or on which one depends in the manner of a nursling on its mother. Unlike the other words, it often suggests merit rather than fault in the person who breaks the bond (wean a person from a bad habit) (to wean your minds from hankering after false Germanic standards—Quiller-Couch) (low prices of movies may have weaned large sections of the public away from the legitimate theater—Messenger)

Ana *separate, part, divide, sunder, sever, divorce

Ant reconcile —Con conciliate, propitiate, appease, *pacify: unite, *join, link etch vb incise, engrave, *carve, chisel, sculpture, sculpt, sculpt ethereal semipernal, *infinite, boundless, illimitable, unconfined—

Ana *everlasting, endless, unceasing, interminable: lastimg, perdurable, perpetual, permanent: *immortal, deathless, undying

Ant mortal

ether atmosphere, *air, ozone ethereal *airy, aerial

Ana *celestial, heavenly, empyrean, empyreal: tenuous, rare, *thin

Ant substantial ethical *moral, virtuous, noble

Ant unethical —Con iniquitous, nefarious, flagitious (see VICIOUS): unbecoming, improper, unseemly, *indecorous, indecent ethnology *anthropology, archaeology evitolate vb decolorize, bleach, *whiten etiquette propriety, *decorum, decency, dignity

Ana deportment, demeanor, mien, *bearing euologize extol, acclaim, laud, *praise

Ana *exalt, magnify, aggrandize: commend, applaud, compliment

Ant calumniate, vilify —Con *malgn, traduce, asperse, defame, slander, libel eulogy *encomium, panegyric, tribute, citation

Ana *compliment, flattery, adulation: lauding (see corresponding verbs at PRAISE)

Ant calumnny: tirade —Con *abuse, invective, obloquy

Ana *compliment defame, slander, libel

Ana *exalt, magnify, aggrandize: commend, applaud, compliment

Ant calumniate, vilify —Con *malign, traduce, asperse, defame, slander, libel

eulogy *encomium, panegyric, tribute, citation

Ana *compliment, flattery, adulation: lauding (see corresponding verbs at PRAISE)

Ant calumnny: tirade —Con *abuse, invective, obloquy

Ana *compliment defame, slander, libel

Ana analogous words Ant antonyms Con contrasted words See also explanatory notes facing page 1
even adj 1 smooth, *level, flat, plane, plain, flush event 1 incident, *occurrence, episode, circumstance everlasting adj Everlasting, endless, *interminable, unceasing are comparable when they mean continuing on and on without end. Unlike *eternal, infinite, and similar words (see *INFINITE), these terms do not presuppose the absence of a beginning, and therefore usually have reference only to continued extent or duration. However, everlasting is often used interchangeably with *eternal, differing from it only in placing more stress on the fact of enduring throughout time than on the quality of being independent of time or of all similar human limitations *(the eternal God is thy refuge, and underneath are the everlasting arms—Deut 33:27) and these shall go away into everlasting punishment: but the righteous into life eternal—Mt 25:46) Therefore, in serious use, everlasting, rather than eternal, is applied to material things or earthly conditions which endure, or seem to endure, forever *(see Cromwell damned to everlasting fame—Pope) these mighty gates of everlasting rock—De Quincey) each man dreamed of a square meal, new boots, a full powder horn, an end to the everlasting shortages—Mason) In lighter use the word is little more than a hyperbolic term expressing loss of patience or extreme boredom and more often applying to recurrence than to duration or extent *(these everlasting headaches) *(his everlasting stupidity) Endless is applicable not only to things which continue in time but also in extent; the word is used especially when a circular form or construction is implied *(endless belt) or it may imply no known or apparent or determinable end *(an endless chain of letters) *(an endless road through the mountains) *(there has been endless discussion whether we have a distinct faculty for the knowledge of God—Inge) *(endless masses of hills on three sides, endless weald or valley on the fourth—Jeffries) *Interminable is somewhat uncommon in its sense of having no end or incapable of being brought to an end or termination *(the forest trees above were wild with the wind, but the interminable thickets below were never still—Thope) More often it applies to something so extended or prolonged or protracted that it is exceedingly wearisome or exhausting one's patience *(the weeks were interminable, and papa and mamma were clean forgotten—Kipling) *(spleen, chagrin, . . . discontent, misanthropy, and all their interminable train of fretfulness, querulousness, suspicions, jealousies—Peacock) *Unceasing, like interminable, suggests undue prolonging or protracting, but it emphasizes the extraordinary capacity for going on and on rather than the psychological effect produced (usually on others) by long-continuing activity or continual recurrence *(unceasing effort) *(Jules de Goncourt . . . died from the mental exhaustion of his unceasing struggle to attain an objective style adequate to express the subtle texture of the world as he saw it—Ellis)

evidence n Evidence, testimony, deposition, affidavit are, in their legal senses, closely related but not synonymous terms. The last three designate forms of evidence, or material submitted to a competent legal tribunal as a means of ascertaining where the truth lies in a question of fact. Evidence also implies the intention of the side offering the material to use it as a basis for inference and argument and as a medium of proof. Testimony is evidence offered by persons (as eyewitnesses or experts) who are in a position to provide pertinent information. It implies declaration under oath or affirmation, usually on the stand in open court. Testimony does not necessarily constitute favorable evidence for the side that calls the witness, for its effect may vary with such matters as inferences that may be drawn from the words used, the opposition's reactions and emphases elicited by cross-examination. Deposition, though occasionally used interchangeably with testimony, is more usually used to designate a form of testimony that replaces testimony in open court or, more often, provides information for pretrial procedures and is given orally in response to questioning by competent officers, taken down in writing, and sworn to or properly affirmed. Affidavit designates a written declaration made upon solemn oath before a recognized magistrate or officer. An affidavit may sometimes be used as testimony, but when so used it is as a rule because a witness cannot take the stand. An affidavit submitted as testimony may be distinguished from a deposition; when used specifically and in contrast with deposition, affidavit always implies that the declaration has been obtained by one side to the dispute and that there has been no cross-examination.

evident adj evince, manifest, demonstrate, *show

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.
error is patent on the face of the record, as when he is tried on a defective indictment—Justice Holmes} \{three very patent reasons for the comparatively slow advance of our children—Grandgent} Distinct (see also DISTINCT) implies such sharpness of outline or of definition that the thing requires no effort of the eyes to see or discern \{DISTINCT features\} \{his handwriting is unusually distinct\} or of the ears to hear or interpret \{DISTINCT utterance\} \{DISTINCT enunciation\} or of the mind to apprehend or comprehend without confusion \{the course of his reasoning is not only evident, it is distinct\} \{he gave a distinct account of everything that occurred\} Obvious stresses ease in discovery or, sometimes, in accounting for and often connotes conspicuousness in what is discovered or little need of perspicacity in the discoverer; it is therefore often applied to something not successfully concealed or something crudely manifest *obvious heirs he had none, any more than he had obvious progenitors—Sackville-West\} \{the avidity with which he surrendered himself to the perfectly obvious methods—Mary Austin\} \{acting on the conviction of Mr. Justice Holmes that "at this time we need education in the obvious more than investigation of the obscure"—Frankfurter\} Apparent (see also APPARENT 2) is often so close to evident in meaning that the two words are difficult to distinguish. But evident usually implies inference directly from visible signs or effects, and apparent from evidence plus more or less elaborate reasoning; therefore apparent is especially applicable to something which is apprehended through an induction, a deduction, or a similar course of reasoning \{the absurdity of their contention is apparent to one who knows the effects produced by the same causes in the past\} *as experience accumulated it gradually became apparent that the oils of any of the trees... were equally efficacious—Heiser\} *deposits of transported material... are perhaps the most widely apparent results of the glaciation—Amer. Guide Series: N. H.\} Palpable (see also PERCEPTIBLE) basically implies perceptibility through the sense of touch; it is often extended to perception by the other senses, excluding sight, or by the mind and typically suggests ease of perception or readiness of interpretation *tis probable that you hast never lived, and palpable that thou hast never loved—Garnett\} *yet, despite these precautions, a palpable un easiness persists—Moorehead\} *beneath it all was a hush, almost palpable—Mailer\} Plain and clear are less formal than literal and preceding terms. Both are applied to something that is immediately apprehended or unmistakably understood, but plain implies familiarity or distinctionness or a lack of intricacy or complexity, while clear suggests an absence of whatever confuses or muddles the mind or obscures the issues *a plain answer to a direct question—Crothers\} *yes, that makes much which was dark quite clear to me—Galsworthy\} *proof as sharp and clear as anything which is known—Darrow\} Ana *perceptible, sensible, palpable, tangible, appreciable, palpable: conspicuous, prominent, *noticeable *evil adjective *bad, ill, wicked, naughty Ana *base, low, vile: iniquitous, nefarious, flagitious, vicious, villainous, infamous: *pernicious, baneful: *ex ceivable, damnable Ant *empyrial: salutary vil n Evil, ill are comparable when they mean whatever is harmful or disastrous to morals or well-being. Evil is the ordinary term capable of use in all contexts and referable not only to deeds and practices actually indulged in or to conditions actually suffered *lead a life of evil\} *the evils of war\} *correct the evils in a system of government\} but also to motivating desires or acting causes of such deeds, practices, or conditions *think no evil\} shun evil and to their harmful effects or consequences *the evil that men do lives after them—Shak.\} *evils which our own misdeeds have wrought—Milton\} Evil is also the term in general use for the abstract conception of whatever is the reverse of good, especially of the morally good, or as a designation of whatever is thought of as the reverse of a blessing *able to distinguish good from evil\} *the origin of evil\} *St. Francis of Assisi accounted poverty a blessing rather than an evil\} *evil no nature hath; the loss of good is that which gives to sin a livelihood—Herrick\} *evil is not a quality of things as such. It is a quality of our relation to them—Lippmann\} *Although ill, like evil, may imply an antithesis to good, it is seldom used to designate the abstraction except in a poetic context and in direct contrast to good—O, yet we trust that somehow good will be the final goal of ill—Tennyson\} Also, it is now rare in the sense of moral evil. In present use, as in the past, ill is applied chiefly to whatever is distressing, painful, or injurious and is more often used in reference to what is actually suffered or endured than to what may be inflicted or imposed on one *and makes us rather bear those ills we have than fly to others that we know not of—Shak.\} *they could never in such a Utopian State feel any other ills than those which arise from bodily sickness—Hume\} *there mark what ills the scholar's life assail—toll, envy, want, the patron, and the jail—Johnson\} *servitude, the worst of ills—Cowper\} Ant good evince manifest, evidence, demonstrate, *show Ana betoken, *indicate, attest, prove, argue, bespeak: display, exhibit, expose, *shows: disclose, reveal, discover, betray Con *suppress, repress: hide, conceal * evoke* elicit, *educate, extract, export Ana *provoke, excite, stimulate: arouse, rouse, rally, awaken, waken, *stir evolution *development evolve *unfold, develop, elaborate, perfect Ana progress, *advance: mature, develop, ripen exact *require, *demand, claim Ana *ask, request, solicit: compel, *force, constrain, coerce, oblige exact *accurate, *correct, right, precise, nice Ana *careful, meticulous, scrupulous, punctilious: agreeing, squaring, tallying, jibing, conforming (see AGREE) exacting *onerous, burdensome, oppressive Ana *severe, stern: rigid, rigorous, strict, stringent: arduous, difficult, *hard Ant *easy* lenient exaggeration, overstatement, hyperbole all mean an overstepping of the bounds of truth, especially in describing the goodness or badness or the greatness or the smallness of something. Exaggeration does not always or even often imply dishonesty or an intent to deceive on the part of one making a statement, a representation, or a claim; it may merely imply an often temperamental unwillingness to be held down by the facts or a bias, whether favorable or unfavorable, so great that one cannot clearly see or accurately estimate the exact state of affairs depicted *men of great conversational powers almost universally practise a sort of lively sophistry and exaggeration which deceives for the moment both themselves and their auditors—Macaulay\} *to say that Mrs. Ralston's son and daughter were pleased with the idea of Tina's adoption would be an exaggeration—Wharton\} Unlike exaggeration, overstatement rarely carries any hint of depreciation; it is therefore often the term chosen by one desiring to stress the fact of exceeding the truth without any additional implications \this... is one of those overstatements of a true principle, Ana analogous words Ant antonyms Con contrasted words See also explanatory notes facing page 1 often met with in Adam Smith—J. S. Mill) (if all costs applicable to revenue are charged thereto, overstatement of net income . . . is avoided—Paton & Littleton) (he invariably avoids overstatement; not for him is the heavy underlining of a musical phrase—N. Y. Times) Hyperbole implies the use of exaggeration as a literary device. Though such use may arise from overpowering emotion, it more often suggests a desire to create a planned impression or particular effect; in either case hyperbole implies obvious extravagance in statement often producing a rhetorical effect that could not be gained otherwise (the speaking in a perpetual hyperbole is comely in nothing but in love—Bacon) (an Arabic interpreter expatiated, in florid hyperbole, on the magnanimity and princely qualities of the Spanish king—Prescott) (that rather startling "terrible" is not hyperbole; it is precisely what Mr. Blackmur means—Mizener) Hyperbole is often used as the name of a figure of speech that produces its effect by overstatement as its opposite, litotes, does by understatement.

Ana misrepresentation, untruth (see LIE): *fallacy, sophistry exalt, magnify, aggrandize are comparable when meaning to increase in importance or in prestige. Exalt and magnify above view in comparison their older sense of to exalt or to glorify (O magnify the Lord with me, and let us exalt his name together—Ps 34:3) In modern general use exalt retains its implication of lifting up but emphasizes a raising in a scale of values without necessarily affecting the quality of the thing raised. Therefore one exalts something above another or at the expense of another (Rousseau's readiness to exalt spontaneity even at the expense of rationality—Babbitt) (there is a valid reason for not preventing games, but . . . not . . . for exalting them into a leading position in the school curriculum—Russell) Magnify stresses increase in size; it commonly suggests an agency (as an optical device) which affects the vision and causes enlargement of apparent size or one (as a vivid imagination) which affects the judgment and leads to exaggregation (kind, quiet, nearsighted eyes, which his round spectacles magnified into lambent moons—Deland) (the public opinion which . . . magnifies patriotism into a religion—Brownell) Aggrandize emphasizes increase in greatness or mightiness; it implies efforts, usually selfish efforts, directed to the attainment of power, authority, or worldly eminence (if we aggrandize ourselves at the expense of the Maharrattas—Wellington) (have we a satisfaction in aggrandizing our families . . . ?—Fielding) (to those of us who are engaged in constructive research and in invention, there is serious moral risk of aggrandizing what we have accomplished—Wiener)

Ant base—Con demean, debase, degrade, humble, humble, humble (see ABASE): disparage, depreciate, detract, derogate, *decry, belittle, minimize examination inspection, scrutiny, scanning, audit (see under SCRUTINIZE vb)

Ana questioning, interrogation, inquiry, catechism, quizzing or quiz (see corresponding verbs at ASK) examine 1 inspect, *scrutinize, scan, audit

Ana *analyze, dissect, resolve: contemplate, observe, survey *view, notice, note (see SEE)

2 question, interrogate, quiz, catechize, *ask, query, inquire

Ana penetrate, probe (see ENTER): test, try (see PROVE) example 1 sample, specimen, *instance, case, illustration

Con anomaly, *paradox

2 *model, exemplar, pattern, ideal, standard, beau ideal, mirror

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.
exceptional, exceptionable, although not synonyms, are displayed against bad points (defects or faults) (Mr. Wright's version of the Iliad, repeating in the main the merits and defects of Cowper's version—Arnold) (the faculty of discerning and using conspicuous merit in other people distinguishes the most successful administrators, rulers, and men of business—Eliot) Virtue, because of the long association of the term with moral goodness (for this sense see goodness) is chiefly applied to a moral excellence or a conspicuous merit of character (one is inclined to ask whether, when the right path is so easy to them, they really have any virtues—Ellis) (reverence for age and authority, even for law, has disappeared; and in the train of these have gone the virtues they engendered and nurtured—Dickinson) But the term may also apply to the quality or feature that is the source of a person's or thing's peculiar or distinctive strength, power, or efficacy (the special virtue of a newly discovered remedy for pneumonia) (that unspiring impartiality which is his most distinguishing virtue—Macaulay) Perfection suggests an attainment of the ideal and is usually found in less restrained writing or speech than the other terms when it applies to an excellence in the highest degree (but eyes, and ears, and ev'ry thought, were with his sweet perfections caught—Spenser) (what tongue can her perfections tell?—Sidney) (Fitzgerald's perfection of style and form, as in The Great Gatsby, has a way of making something that lies between your stomach and your heart quiver a little—Thurber) Ana value, *worth: property, *quality, character Ant fault —Con *blemish, defect, flaw: failing, frailty, foible, vice (see FAULT) exceptional *exceptional Ana *offensive, repugnant, loathsome, repulsive, revolting: repellant, distasteful, obnoxious, invidious, *repugnant Ant unexceptionable: exemplary —Con pleasing, agreeable, gratifying, *pleasant, grateful, welcome exceptional, exceptionable, although not synonyms, are liable to confusion. Something is exceptional which is itself an exception, and so is out of the ordinary, being either extraordinary or unusual (this is an exceptional opportunity) (the bath was habitual in the twelfth century and exceptional at the Renaissance—Henry Adams) Something is exceptional to which exception may be taken (that is, to which an objection may be made) and which is therefore displeasing or offensive to others (there was nothing exceptionable in his comment) (this is something of a tour de force, in which the only exceptional thing is a schoolboy brand of mild vulgarity—Times Lit. Sup.) Ana outstanding, remarkable, *noticeable, conspicuous, prominent, salient, signal: rare, *infrequent, uncommon, scarce: singular, unique, *strange: anomalous, *irregular Ant common (sense 3): average —Con ordinary, familiar, popular, vulgar (see COMMON) excerpt n *extract excess n Excess, superfluity, surplus, surplusage, overplus denote something which goes beyond a limit or bound. Excess applies to whatever exceeds a limit, measure, bound, or accustomed degree (in measure rein thy joy; scant this excess—Shak.) (the proper point between sufficiency and excess—Henry James) (I think poetry should surprise by a fine excess—Keats) Often it specifically implies intemperance or immoderation (early excesses the frame will recover from—Meredith) (restrain the excesses of the possessive instinct—Ellis) Superfluity applies to an excess (as of money, clothes, or possessions) that is above or beyond what is needed or desired (the inventory of thy shirts, as, one for superfluity, and another for use!—Shak.) (I succumb easily to anyone who asks me to buy superfluities and luxuries—Huxley) Surplus applies to the amount or quantity of something that remains when all that has been needed has been disposed of (as by using, spending, or selling) (his salary was so small that there was no surplus for investment) (the problem is how to dispose of the large surplus in this year's cotton crop) (huge unused surpluses pile up beyond the reach of consumers—La Barre) Surplusage may be used in place of surplus but may especially imply wasteful or useless excess (the subsequent part of the section is mere surplusage, is entirely without meaning, if such is to be the construction—John Marshall) (say what you have to say . . . with no surplusage—Pater) Overplus is often used in place of surplus, but it less often implies a remainder than an addition to what is needed (the overplus of a great fortune—Adams) (there was no overplus this year) (the wild overplus of vegetation which was certainly not that of a normal garden—Wyndham Lewis) Ana lavishness, prodigality, profuseness or profusion, luxuriance, exuberance (see corresponding adjectives at PROFUSE): inordinateness, immoderation, extravagance (see corresponding adjectives at EXCESSIVE) Ant deficiency: dearth, paucity —Con meagerness, scantiness, scantiness, exiguousness (see corresponding adjectives at MEAGER) excessive, immoderate, inordinate, extravagant, exorbitant, extreme are comparable when meaning characterized by going beyond or above its proper, just, or right limit. Excessive implies an amount, quantity, or extent too great to be just, reasonable, or endurable (the excessive heat of a midsummer afternoon) (excessive lenity and indulgence are ultimately excessive rigor—John Knox) (an excessive penchant for intellectual and verbal hairsplitting —Beach) Immoderate is often used interchangeably with excessive (immoderate heat) but, distinctively, it may imply lack of restraint especially in the feelings or their expression (immoderate zeal) (immoderate laughter) (Mass gave him extreme, I may even say immoderate, satisfaction. It was almost orgiastic—T. S. Eliot) Inordinate implies an exceeding of the bounds or limits prescribed by authority or dictated by good judgment (the great difficulty of living content is the cherishing of inordinate and unreasonable expectations—T. E. Brown) (I am always staggered . . . by the inordinate snobbery of the English press—Huxley) Extravagant often adds to excessive or immoderate the implications of a wild, lawless, prodigal, or foolish wandering from proper restraints and accustomed bounds (make extravagant claims for an invention) (abandoned herself to all the violations of extravagant emotion—Stoker) (went off in a second extravagant roar of laughter—Hudson) The term often specifically implies prodigality in expenditure (she was rapacious of money, extravagant to excess—Fielding) Exorbitant implies excessiveness marked by a departure from what is the customary or established amount or degree; it typically connotes extortion or excessive demands on the part of the agent or the infliction of hardships on the person affected (a resolution to contract none of the exorbitant desires by which others are enslaved—<Spectator> (the men who worked in the brick-kilns lived in this settlement, and paid an exorbitant rent to the Judge—<Deland>) (the law for the renegotiation of war contracts—which will prevent exorbitant profits and assure fair prices to the government—<Roosevelt>) Extreme implies an excessiveness or extra-ganism that seems to reach the end of what is possible; it is often hyperbolic in actual use (the result gave him extreme satisfaction) (the extreme oddness of existence is what reconciles me to it—<L. P. Smith>) (the most extreme . . . statement of such an attitude would be: nothing is poetry which can be formulated in prose—<Day Lewis>) (the fascination of crime is perpetual, especially in its extreme form as murder—<A. C. Ward>)

exchange vb Exchange, interchange, bandy mean to give a thing to another in return for another thing from him. Exchange may imply a disposing of one thing for another by or as if by the methods of bartering or trading (exchange horses) (the hostile forces exchanged prisoners of war) (exchange farm products for manufactured goods) Sometimes the term specifically implies a substitution of one thing for another without any definite suggestion of bartering or trading (wedding presents are often exchanged by the bride for things of which she has greater need) (well satisfied to exchange the stratified suburb of Hyde Park for the amorphous neighborhood of Halsted Street—<Lovett>) or an alternation of things by two, sometimes more, persons (exchange letters) (exchange a few words with each other) Interchange is rarely used in place of exchange except when alternation (as in reciprocal giving and receiving) is implied, often with the connotation of a continuous succession (the townspeople and the summer residents interchanged courtesies with each other) (there were repeated cheeerings and salutations interchanged between the shore and the ship—<Irving>) Bandy may imply a careless or casual tossing back and forth or from one to another (a firearm is no toy to be bandied about) and it is often used in place of interchange when vigorous, rapid, and more or less prolonged action is implied (bandy hasty words) (bandy compliments) The term also may imply heated or active discussion or a passing of information from one to another (your name is . . . frequently bandied at table among us—<Irving>) (the stories they invent . . . and bandied from mouth to mouth!—<Dickens>)

excita—sufficient, surplus, supernumerary, extra, spare: *intense, vehement, fierce, exquisite, violent: redundant (see WORDY)

Ant deficient—<Con> (meager, scanty, scant, skimpy, deficient)

exchange vb Exchange, interchange, bandy mean to give a thing to another in return for another thing from him. Exchange may imply a disposing of one thing for another by or as if by the methods of bartering or trading (exchange horses) (the hostile forces exchanged prisoners of war) (exchange farm products for manufactured goods) Sometimes the term specifically implies a substitution of one thing for another without any definite suggestion of bartering or trading (wedding presents are often exchanged by the bride for things of which she has greater need) (well satisfied to exchange the stratified suburb of Hyde Park for the amorphous neighborhood of Halsted Street—<Lovett>) or an alternation of things by two, sometimes more, persons (exchange letters) (exchange a few words with each other) Interchange is rarely used in place of exchange except when alternation (as in reciprocal giving and receiving) is implied, often with the connotation of a continuous succession (the townspeople and the summer residents interchanged courtesies with each other) (there were repeated cheeerings and salutations interchanged between the shore and the ship—<Irving>) Bandy may imply a careless or casual tossing back and forth or from one to another (a firearm is no toy to be bandied about) and it is often used in place of interchange when vigorous, rapid, and more or less prolonged action is implied (bandy hasty words) (bandy compliments) The term also may imply heated or active discussion or a passing of information from one to another (your name is . . . frequently bandied at table among us—<Irving>) (the stories they invent . . . and bandied from mouth to mouth!—<Dickens>)

excite *stimulus, stimulant, incitement, impetus

Excite *provoke, stimulate, pique, quicken, galvanize

Ant soothe, quiet (persons): allay (fears, anxiety)

exclude, debar, blackball, eliminate, rule out, shut out, suspend are comparable when meaning to prevent someone or something from forming part of something else as a member, a constituent, or a factor. Exclude implies a keeping out of what is already outside; it therefore suggests a prevention of entrance or admission (exclude light from a room by closing the shutters) (exclude a subject from consideration) (exclude a class from certain privileges) Debar implies the existence of a barrier which is effectual in excluding someone or something on the outside from entering into a group, body, or system, from enjoying certain privileges, powers, or prerogatives, or from doing what those not so restrained do naturally or easily (<high wall debarred boys from entering>) (the qualifications demanded . . . would be likely to debar 99 percent of the secondary school instructors in America—<Grandgent>) (the Japanese designer was debarred by instinct and tradition from using the resources of texture and of light and shade—<Binyon>) Blackball basically implies exclusion from a club or society by vote of its members (originally by putting a black ball into a ballot box) (<he was very nearly blackballed at a West End club of which his birth and social position fully entitled him to become a member—<Wilde>) The term has some extended use, but it usually implies a deliberate decision or effort to exclude a person from social, professional, or economic intercourse. Eliminate differs from the preceding words in implying a getting rid of, or a removal of what is already in, especially as a constituent element or part (eliminate a quantity from an equation) (eliminate a subject from a curriculum) (eliminate a poison from the system) (<it is always wise to eliminate the personal equation from our judgments of literature—<J. R. Lowell>) (in most poets there is an intermittent conflict between . . . the critic self and the rest of the thing) and it is by reconciling the two, not by eliminating the one, that they can reach their full stature—<Day Lewis>) Rule out may imply either exclusion or elimination, but it usually suggests a formal or authoritative decision (<rule a horse out of a race) (rule out certain candidates for a position) (<rule such subjective and moral judgments out of our biology—<Kroeker>) Shut out may imply exclusion of something by preventing its entrance or admission (<close the windows to shut out the rain) or, in sports use, to prevent from scoring (<the home team was shut out in the second game>) Disbar (often confused with debar) implies the elimination by a legal process of a lawyer from the group of those already admitted to practice, thereby depriving him for cause of his status and privileges. Suspend implies the elimination of a person who is a member of an organization or a student at a school or college, often for a definite period of time and, usually, because of some offense or serious infraction of the rules; the term seldom if ever implies that the case is closed or that readmission is impossible (<suspend ten members of a club for nonpayment of dues) (<there was but one course: to suspend the man from the exercise of all priestly functions—<Cather>)

Ana hinder, bar, block: preclude, obviate, ward, prevent (<banish, exile, ostracize, deport

Ant admit (persons): include (things)—<Con> comprehend, embrace, involve (see INCLUDE)

exclusive *select, elect, picked

Exclusive excluding, eliminating, debarring, shutting out, ruling out (see EXCLUDE): aristocratic, patrician (see corresponding nouns at GENTLEMAN)

Ant inclusive—<Con> cosmopolitan, universal: *common, ordinary, familiar, popular, vulgar

exccitate weigh, *consider, study, contemplate

Ant ponder, meditate, ruminate, muse: cogitate, reflect, deliberate, speculate, *think

excoriate abrade, chafe, fret, gall

Ant strip, divest, denude, bare: flay, *skin: torture, torment, rack (see AFFLICIT): tongue-lash, revile, berate (see SCOLD)

excruciating agonizing, racking mean intensely and, usually, unbearably painful. All are commonly used as strong intensives and applied to pain, suffering, and torture. When used to qualify other things, they mean causing intense pain or suffering. Excruciating carries strong suggestions of acute physical torture or of exquisitely A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.
painful sensation (suffered excruciating pain from an abscessed tooth) | (excruciating noises) (the hearty merrymakings of the population at large were an excruciating torment to narrow-minded folk—Amer. Guide Series: Md.) | Agonizing stresses anguish of mind even when it strongly implies physical suffering (an agonizing spasm of pain—a memento mori—shot through me and passed away—W. J. Locke) | (lives there a man so firm, who, while his heart feels all the bitter horror of his crime, can reason down its agonizing throbs—Burns)

Racking suggests sensations of pulling and straining and tearing comparable to those suffered by a person on the rack (racking pains in the chest) | (a racking headache) | (racking doubts)

Ana torturing, tormenting, racking (see AFFLICTION): *intense, vehement, fierce, exquisite, violent

exculpate, absolve, exonerate, acquit, vindicate mean to free from a charge or burden. Exculpate implies simply a clearing from blame, often in a matter of small importance (exculpate oneself from a charge of inconsistency) | (directly Harding was blameless for what was going on. Indirectly he cannot be wholly exculpated—S. H. Adams)

Absolve implies a release, often a formal release, either from obligations or responsibilities that bind the conscience or from the consequences or penalties of their violation (absolve a person from a promise) | (society cannot be absolved of responsibility for its slums) | (exonerate implies relief, often in a moral sense, from what is regarded as a load or burden | (no reason for exonerating him [a judge] from the ordinary duties of a citizen—Justice Holmes)

In general exonerate more frequently suggests such relief from a definite charge that not even the suspicion of wrongdoing remains (exonerate a person charged with theft) | (you do acquit me then of anything wrong? You are convinced that I never meant to deceive your brother . . . ?—Austen)

Vindicate, unlike the preceding words, may have reference to things as well as to persons that have been subjected to attack, suspicion, censure, or ridicule. As here compared (see also MAINTAIN) it implies a clearing from blame, often in a matter of small importance (vindicate his act from suspicion, censure, reprobation, reprehension, blame, *criticize: chastise, castigate, discipline, chasten, correct (see PUNISH))

excuse n plea, pretext, *apology, apologia, alibi | (Ana explanation, justification, rationalization (see corresponding verbs at EXPLAIN): palliation, extenuation, whitewashing, glossing (see corresponding verbs at PALLIATE))

execrable, damnable, accursed, cursed mean so odious as to deserve cursing or condemning. In actual use they vary little if any in force and only slightly in implications, although usage to a certain extent limits their applications. Execrable is applied chiefly to what is bad beyond description (execrable poetry) | (an execrable performance of Hamlet) | (the concurrent possession of great wealth and execrable taste—Wylie)

Dannable and accursed are applied most often either to persons, their acts, and their vices or to things that excite righteous indignation and strong condemnation (unless that man in there is to be given a chance of expiation in another life, then capital punishment is a dannable horror—Mackenzie) | (accursed tower! accursed fatal hand that hath contrived this woeful tragedy!—Shak.)

Cursed varies in dignity, sometimes being applied to what merely excites profanity and sometimes to what is intrinsically worthy of imprecation (merciful powers, restrain in me the cursed thoughts that nature gives way to in repose!—Shak.)

Ana *outrageous, atrocious, heinous, monstrous: *base, low, vile: loathsome, revolting, repulsive, *offensive, repugnant execute, curse, damn, anathematize, objure are comparable when meaning to denote violently and indigantly. Execute implies intense loathing or hatred and, usually, a fury of passion (they execute . . . their lot—Cowper) | (execrated the men who were responsible for their misery) It often suggests acts as well as words which give an outlet to these emotions (for a little while he was executed in Rome; his statues were overthrown, and his name was blotted from the records—Buchan)

Curse in reference to earlier custom may imply an invocation to the Supreme Being to visit deserved punish—execute 308

exhibition

ment upon a person or to affright him for his sins (the that withholdeth corn, the people shall curse him: but blessing shall be upon the head of him that selleth it—Prov 11:26) In more general use curse and damn (see also sentence) do not markedly differ in meaning. Both usually imply angry denunciation by blasphemous oaths or profane imprecations (I heard my brother damn the coachman, and curse the maids—Defoe) Anathematize implies solemn denunciation (as of an evil, a heresy, or an injustice). It is used chiefly in reference to the impassioned denunciations of preachers or moralists (anathematize the violation of a treaty—<anathematize graft in politics—a quasi idealism which has been anathematized by the empirical foundations and purposes of realistic philosophy—Nemeth) Objureate implies a vehement decrimal or criticism (objurgated the custom of garnishing poems with archaisms—T. R. Weiss) and often suggests the use of harsh or violent language in the expression of one's views so that it may approach curse or damn in some of its uses (command all to do their duty. Command, but not objureate—Taylor) (violently had he objureated that wretch of a groom—Vaughan) Ana denounce, condemn, reprobate, censure, reprehend (see criticize); revile, berate, rate (see scold) Cure *commend, approve, compliment, recommend: *praise, laud, extol, acclaim, eulogize execute 1 effect, fulfill, discharge, *perform, accomplish, achieve Ana complete, finish, conclude, *close: *realize, actualize, externalize, objectify 2 *kill, dispatch, slay, murder, assassinate exemplar pattern, ideal, beau ideal, example, *model, mirror, standard Ana apotheosis, *paragon, nonpareil, nonesuch: type, *symbol exemplify, illustrate are comparable when they mean to use in speaking or writing concrete instances or cases to make clear something which is difficult, abstract, general, or remote from experience or to serve as an instance, case, or demonstration of a point or matter under examination. Exemplify implies the use of examples for clarification of a general or abstract statement or as aid in revealing the truth of a proposition or assertion (a good preacher usually exemplifies each point that he seeks to impress upon his congregation) (the notes of Coleridge exemplify Coleridge's fragmentary and fine perceptions—T. S. Eliot) (each, in his way, exemplifies the peril that besets a highly gifted poetic nature—Lowers) Illustrate implies the use not only of concrete examples but also sometimes of pictures or sketches and the intent not only to clarify but to make vivid or real what is being explained or to drive home most effectively a point that is being made (the textbook is adequately illustrated with photographs and diagrams) (I will illustrate the word a little further—J. R. Lowell) (the assertion . . . leans for support . . . upon the truth conveyed in those words of Cicero, and wonderfully illustrates and confirms them—Arnold) (the world was no more made to serve us by illustrating our philosophy than we were made to serve the world by licking its boots—Santayana) exemption, immunity are comparable when meaning the act or fact of freeing or the state of being free or freed from something burdensome, disagreeable, or painful. Exemption is more restricted in its meaning, for it applies usually to a release from some legal or similarly imposed obligation or burden to which others in the same circumstances and not similarly freed are liable (married men with families may apply for exemption from military service) [(they] have no vices, but they buy that exemption at a price, for one is inclined to ask whether . . . they really have any virtues—Ellis) Immunity covers all cases for which an exemption may be given or obtained, but the term carries so strong an implication of privilege and of freedom from certain common restrictions that it is often used in reference to persons or classes of persons especially favored by the law or by nature (entitled to the rights of a citizen, and clothed with all the rights and immunities which the Constitution and laws of the State attached to that character—Tane) (the question of the immunities of the clergy had been publicly raised—Froude) (the man of creative imagination pays a ghastly price for all his superiorities and immunities—Mencken)

exercise n practice, drill (see under practice vb) Ana *action, act, deed: using or use, employment, utilization, application (see corresponding verbs at use): operation, functioning, behavior (see corresponding verbs at act)

exercise vb *practice, drill Ana *use, employ, utilize: display, exhibit, *show: wield, ply, manipulate, *handle exertion *effort, pains, trouble Ana labor, toil, travail, *work, grind, drudgery: struggle, striving, endeavor (see under attempt vb) Con relaxation, *rest, repose, leisure, ease: inactivity, inertia or inertia, idleness (see corresponding adjectives at inactive) exhibit vb display, expose, *show, parade, flaunt Ana *reveal, disclose, discover, divulge: *show, manifest, evidence, evince, demonstrate Con *suppress, repress: *hide, conceal, secrete, bury exhibit n *exhibition, show, exposition, fair are comparable when meaning a public display of objects of interest. Exhibition and, less often in strictly formal use except in art circles, show are applicable to any such display of objects of art, manufacture, commerce, or agriculture or to a display (as by pupils, members, or associates) of prowess or skill (as in gymnastics, oratory, or music) (the annual exhibition of the Academy of Fine Arts) (an exhibition of Navaho blankets) (a one-man show of paintings) (a gymnastic exhibition) (a cattle show) (an industrial exhibition) Exhibit typically denotes an object or collection displayed by a single person, group, or organization in an exhibition (our club had a fine exhibit in the school fair) but in some uses it is not clearly distinct from exhibition or show, since the scope of an exhibit may vary from a single object to a collection coextensive with an exhibition; thus, an artist might present a one-man show which would be at once an exhibition and an exhibit of his work. Exposition is the usual term for a very large exhibition, especially one involving the participation of many states and countries (the World's Columbian Exposition at Chicago in 1893) (the annual Eastern States Exposition at West Springfield, Massachussets) Fair may be equivalent to exposition (a world's fair) or it may apply to a small exhibition of wares, produce, or stock sometimes for the promotion of sales, sometimes in competition for prizes for excellence; it suggests a variety of kinds of display and entertainment

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.
and usually an outdoor setting (a county fair)

exhort urge, egg, goad, spur, prod, prick, sic

Ana plead, appeal (see under PRAYER); entreat, implore, beseech (see BEG); stimulate, excite, provoke; advise, counsel (see under ADVICE n)

exigency 1 pass, emergency, pinch, strait, crisis, contingency, juncture

Ana difficulty, vicissitude, rigor, hardship; *predicament, plight, fix, quandary, dilemma, jam, pickle, scrape 2 necessity, *need

Ana demanding or demand, requirement, exacting or exactation, claiming or claim (see corresponding verbs at DEMAND); compulsion, coercion, constraint, duress (see FORCE n)

exigent pressing, urgent, imperative, crying, imperative, *imperative, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing, pressing,第三节 ness (as in character or quality) (he displayed a Miltonic amplitude of ambition and style—Bush) (a red-curtained English inn . . . stood sideways in the road, as if standing aside in the amplitude of hospitality—Chesterton) but in technical contexts in which the word is specifically applied to the range of a variable (as wavelength or a statistical array) the notion of amplitude has given way to that of magnitude, and amplitude means no more than size or extent (the size or extent of the swing is known as the amplitude of the pendulum—Taffel) (the maximum distance the curve rises above or falls below the horizontal axis . . . is known as its amplitude—F. E. Seymour & P. J. Smith) Spread is applied to an expance drawn out in all directions (the water . . . a ripply spread of sun and sea—Browning) (a trackless spread of moor—Blackmore) (under the immense spread of the starry heavens—Stevenson) Stretch is applied to an expance in one of its two dimensions (the beach was a narrow stretch of sand) (a stretch of farmland extending as far as the distant mountains) (the great stretches of fields that lay beside the road—Anderson) Ana *range, reach, scope, compass, sweep, orbit: domain, territory, sphere, *field expansive *elastic, resilient, buoyant, volatile, effervescent Ana exuberant, luxuriant, lavish, prodigal (see prosperous) generous: *liberal, bountiful, bounteous, open-handed: exalted, magnified, aggrandized (see exalt) Ant tense: reserved—Con *stiff, inflexible, rigid: stern, austere, *severe: taciturn, *silent, reticent expatiate *discourse, descant, dilate Ana *speak, talk, converse: *expand, amplify: *discuss, argue, dispute: expand: *explain: *relate, narrate, recount, recite, rehearse expatiate vb exile, *banish, ostracize, deport, transport, extradite Ana *repatriate expect, hope, look, await are comparable when they mean to have something in mind as more or less certain to happen or come about. They vary, however, so greatly in their implications and in their constructions that they are seldom interchangeable. Expect usually implies a high degree of certainty, but it also involves the idea of anticipation (as by making preparations or by envisioning what will happen, what one will find, or what emotions one will feel) (he told his mother not to expect him for dinner) (she had reason to expect that the trip would be exciting) (he seems to require and expect goodness in one—Anderson) hope (often with for) implies some degree of belief in the idea that one may expect what one desires or longs for; although it seldom implies certainty, it usually connotes confidence and often especially in religious use implies profound assurance (he dared not hope that he would succeed in his venture, for he feared disappointment) (what I hope for and work for today is for a mess more favorable to artists than is the present one—Forster) (encouraged to hope for a college education—Scudder) look (usually followed by to with an infinitive and sometimes also by to with a personal object) is less literary than expect: it often also suggests more strongly than expect a counting upon or a freedom from doubt (they look to profit by their investment) (they looked to their son to help them in their old age) (I never look to have a mistress that I shall love half as well—Brooke) With for, on the other hand, look does not imply as much assurance; it suggests rather an attitude of expectancy and watchfulness (they are looking for news in the next post) (there is no use looking for their return tonight) (finality is not to be looked for in . . . translation—Swaim) await often adds to look for the implication of being ready mentally or, sometimes, physically for the event; it also suggests waiting, often patient waiting (we await your reply with interest) (the two armies are eager for action, each awaiting an attack by the other) (I . . . had known it would happen to me, and now it was there with all the strangeness and dark mystery of an awaited thing—Wolfe) await also differs from the other words in this group in its capacity for taking as subject the thing expected and as object the person who is expecting (good fortune awaits you) (death awaits all men) Ana *foresee, foreknow, anticipate, apprehend, divine Ant despair of expedient adj Expedient, politic, advisable are comparable when they are used to imply a choice (as of course, action, or method) and to mean dictated by practical wisdom or by motives of prudence. Something is expedient from which definite and usually immediate advantages accrue. Originally and still occasionally the word carries no derogatory implication (it is expedient for you that I go away: for if I go not away, the Comforter will not come unto you; but if I depart, I will send him unto you—Jn 16:7) In its sense development expedient came to imply determination by immediate conditions and to mean necessary or suitable under present circumstances (there shall be appointed . . . such number of . . . justices of the peace as the president of the United States shall, from time to time, think expedient—John Marshall) As a result expedient now commonly implies opportuneness (sometimes with a strong hint of timeserving) as well as advantageousness (they decided that it was not expedient (that is, neither opportune nor of advantage) to interfere now) Very frequently also it connotes such an ulterior motive as self-interest (purely for expedient reasons he let the Iroquois alone—Hervey Allen) Consequently expedient is often opposed to right, the former suggesting a choice determined by temporal ends, the latter one determined by ethical principles (too fond of the right to pursue the expedient—Goldsmith) Something is politic which is the judicious course, action, or method from the practical point of view. Though often used interchangeably with expedient, politic may be applied discriminatively to choices involving tactics or the effective handling of persons, and expedient to choices involving strategy, or the gaining of objectives (the move was a politic one, for it served to win friends to the cause and to placate its enemies) (community of race . . . is mainly a politic fiction, at least in countries of European civilization, in which the races are inextricably mixed up—Encyc. Brit.) Like expedient, however, politic often implies material motives (whether it is not your interest to make them happy . . . —Burke) Is a politic act the worse for being a generous one?—Burke) Something is advisable which is expedient in the original, underwigious sense of that word. Advisable has now nearly lost its original derivative sense and is preferred by writers or speakers who wish to avoid any of the unpleasant implications of expedient or of politic (I don't think that it's altogether advisable to mention Dickens in a sermon . . . . Some people might be offended at mentioning a novelist in church—Mackenzie) (he was told it was not advisable to drive on through the mountains because of the night fogs—Sylvester) Ana advantageous, *beneficial, profitable: useful, utilitarian (see corresponding nouns at use): seasonable, opportune, timely, well-timed: feasible, practicable, A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk () indicates place of treatment of each group.
expedient

possible

Ant inexpedient — Con detriment, deleterious (see PERNOCIOUS): harming or harmful, hurting or hurtful, injuring or injuries (see corresponding verbs at INJURE)

*futile, vain, fruitless

expedient

n resource, resort, shift, makeshift, stopgap, substitute, surrogate

Ana device, contrivance, contraption: *mean, agency, instrument, instrumentality, medium

expedition

1 dispatch, speed, haste, hurry

Ana celerity, legerity, alacrity: agility, nimbleness, briskness (see corresponding adjectives at AGILE)

Ant procrastination — Con delaying or delay, retarding or retardation, slowing, slackening (see corresponding verbs at DELAY)

2 journey, voyage, tour, trip, jaunt, excursion, cruise, pilgrimage

expedient

*device, contrivance, contraption: *mean, agency, instrument, instrumentality, medium

expert

*device, contrivance, contraption: *mean, agency, instrument, instrumentality, medium

experience

*spend, disburse, expend

*eject, oust, dismiss, evict

*expel

expedient resource, resort, shift, makeshift, stopgap, surrogate

Ana analogous words

analogous words

Ana

antonyms

Ant inexpedient

contrasted words

Con
expiate vb Expiate, atone mean to make amends or give satisfaction for an offense, a sin, a crime, or a wrong. The same distinctions in implications and connotations are observable in their derivative nouns expiation and atonement. Expiate and expiation imply an attempt to undo the wrong one has done by suffering a penalty, by doing penance, or by making reparation or redress (let me here, as I deserve, pay on my punishment, and expiate, if possible, my crime—Milton) (unless that man in there is to be given a chance of expiation in another life, then capital punishment is a damnable horror—Mackenzie) Aton e and atonement have been greatly colored in their meanings by theological controversies. The basic implication of reconciliation became mixed with and sometimes subordinated to other implications (as appeasement, propitiation, or reparation). In general use atone (usually with for) and atonement emphasize a restoration through some compensation of a balance that has been lost. When the reference is to an offense, sin, or crime the words usually imply expiation, but they stress the rendering of satisfaction for the evil that has been done by acts that are good or meritorious. Thus, one expiates a sin by doing penance for it, but one atones for it by leading a good life afterwards (she hated herself for this movement of envy . . . and tried to atone for it by a softened manner and a more anxious regard for Charlotte's feelings—Wharton) Sometimes a deficiency or a default rather than an offense may be atoned for (as by an excess of something else that is equally desirable) (for those who knew beside us at altars not Thine own, who lack the lights that guide us, Lord, let their faith atone!—Kipling) A redress, remedy, rectify, *correct, amend: redeem, expiate, atone for by leading a good life afterwards (construe are comparable when they mean to make oneself plain or intelligible to someone by whom it was previously not known or clearly understood (explain a to a boy the mechanism of an engine (the teacher explained the meanings of the new words in the poem) (a poet whose words intimate rather than define, suggest rather than . . . explain—Edman) Expound implies careful, elaborate, often learned setting forth of a subject in order to explain it (as in a lecture, a book, or a treatise) (a clergyman expounding a biblical text) (explain a point of law (Sir A. Eddington in two masterly chapters . . . expounds the law of gravitation—Alexander) Expound the duties of the citizen (a poem) Explicate, a somewhat learned term, adds to expound the idea of development or detailed analysis (the mind of a doctor of the Church who could . . . explicate the meaning of a dogma—T. S. Eliot) Elucidate implies a throwing light upon something obscure (as a subject, a work, or a passage) especially by clear or luminous exposition or illustration (elucidate an obscure passage in the text) (the simplicity of the case can be added . . . when the object is to addle and not to elucidate—Shaw) (the author's linguistic erudition has allowed him to consult the original sources and to elucidate and interpret them authentically—Reinhardt) Interpret implies the making clear to oneself or to another the meaning of something (as a poem, a dream, an abstraction, or a work in a foreign language) which presents more than intellectual difficulties and requires special knowledge, imagination, or sympathy in the person who would understand it or make it understood (I have tried in this all too hasty sketch to interpret . . . the indwelling spirit and ideal of the art of the Far East—Binyon) (it is a sophistry to interpret experience in terms of illusion—Sullivan) (an inscription which no one could understand or rightly interpret—Hudson) Construe is preferred to interpret when the difficulties are textual either because of the strangeness of the language (as being foreign, ancient, dialectal, or technical) or because of ambiguities or equivocations in it. It therefore may suggest either translation involving careful analysis of grammatical structure (construe ten lines of Vergil) or a highly individual or particular interpretation (the phrase "every common carrier engaged in trade or commerce" may be construed to mean "while engaged in trade or commerce" without violence to the habits of English speech—Justice Holmes) (had construed the ordinarily polite terms of his letter of engagement into a belief that the Directors had chosen him on account of his special and brilliant talents—Kipling) As I deserve, pay on my punishment, and expiate, if possible, my crime (often implied an attempt to excuse or to set oneself right with others (one can do almost anything . . . if one does not attempt to explain it—Wharton) One accounts for something, rather than explains it, when one shows how it fits into a natural order or a logically consistent pattern (we fail, we are told, to account for the world. Well, the world is a solid fact, which we have to accept, not to account for—Inge) (going about her business as if nothing had happened that needed to be accounted for—Wharton) (their presence could not be accounted for by some temporary catastrophe, such as the Mosaic Flood—S. F. Mason) One justifies himself or another when he explains certain acts or behavior in an attempt to free himself or another from blame. It may or may not imply consciousness of guilt or a definite accusation (Powell . . . began to justify himself. "I couldn't stop him," he whispered shakily. "He was too quick for me"—Conrad) (so far is he from feeling the pangs of conscience that he constantly justifies his act—Dickinson) (in her heart she did not at all justify or excuse Cyril—Bennett) One rationalizes something that is or seems to be contrary to reason when he attempts an explanation that is in accord with scientific principles or with reality as known to the senses (rationalize the Greek myths) (rationalize the Genesis story of creation) Rationalize may come close to justify without, however, so strong an implication of blame and with the added implication of self-deception and, at times, of hypocrisy (in other countries the plutocracy has often produced men of reflective and analytical habit, eager to rationalize its instincts—Mencken) (easy for men of principle to rationalize lapses from high standards where the cause seems to them good—Pimlott) Ana *excuse, condone: *exculpate, exonerate, acquit, absolve explicate vb *explain, expound, elucidate, interpret, explicit

explicit, express, specific, definite, categorical are comparable when applied to statements, utterances, and language and when meaning perfectly clear in significance or reference. Something is explicit which is stated so plainly and distinctly that nothing is left to be inferred or to cause difficulty by being vague, equivocal, or ambiguous (\textit{explicit} directions or promises) \{to give an explicit and determinate account of what is meant—Bentham\}. Something is express which is both explicit and is uttered or expressed with directness, pointedness, or force (\textit{an express prohibition}) \{the defendant should be enjoined from publishing news obtained from the Associated Press for—hours after publication by the plaintiff unless it gives \textit{express} credit to the Associated Press; the number of hours . . . to be settled by the District Court—Justice Holmes\} \{she sent me the now famous drawings, with the \textit{express} injunction that I was to show them to no one—Pollitzer\}. Something is specific which is perfectly precise in its reference to a particular thing or in its statement of the details covered or comprehended. \{he made two specific criticisms of the school, one deal with its lack of a playground, the other with the defective ventilation of certain rooms\} \{government workers, by specific law, must be fired if they resort to the Fifth Amendment—Time\}. Something is definite which leaves no doubt as to its reference or to its details or as to what is excluded; definite, far more than specific, suggests precise and determinate limitations \{he was asked to make a definite statement concerning the young man's prospects with the company\} \{it was a simple, clear, definite question—Sinclair Lewis\}. In practice specific and definite are often used interchangeably without loss; but specific may be preferred when the intent is to stress particularization of reference or specification of details, and definite when it is to emphasize clear limitations; thus, a worker may be given specific instructions about the sequence in which his tasks are to be performed but a definite order not to smoke on the job. \textit{Categorical} (see also \textit{Ultimate 2}) implies explicitness without the least suggestion of a qualification or condition; thus, a categorical answer is demanded of a person testifying in court when he is compelled to answer yes or no; a categorical denial is a denial that is complete and contains not the slightest reservations \{it is perilous to make categorical assertions—Lowers\}.

\textit{Ana} precise, exact, accurate (see \textit{Correct}): \{clear, lucid, perspicuous\}

\textit{Ant} ambiguous —\textit{Con} equivocal, vague, enigmatic, cryptic, dark, \{obscure: \{implicit, virtual, constructive\}

\textit{exploit} \{feat, achievement\}

\textit{Ana} act, deed, \{action: \{adventure, enterprise, quest\}

\textit{expose} display, exhibit, \{show, parade, flaunt\}

\textit{Ana} reveal, disclose, discover, divulge: demonstrate, evince, manifest, evidence, \{show: air, ventilate, vent, voice, utter, \{express: publish, advertise, proclaim, broadcast, \{declare\}

\textit{expose} \{exposure, *exposition\}

\textit{exposed} open, \{liable, subject, prone, susceptible, sensitive\}

\textit{Ana} threatened, menaced (see \textit{Threaten})

\textit{Con} protected, shielded, guarded, safeguarded, defended (see \textit{Defend})

\textit{exposition} \{fair, *exhibition, exhibit, show\}

2 \textit{Exposition, exposure, exposé} are comparable when they mean a setting forth or laying open of a thing or things hitherto not known or fully understood. \textit{Exposition} (see also \textit{Exhibition}) often implies a display of something (as wares, manufactures, or a collection of rarities or antiquities); more often it implies a setting forth of something which is necessary for the elucidation or explanation of something else such as a theory, a dogma, or the law \{you know the law, your \textit{exposition} hath been most sound—Shak\} or the events or situations preceding a story or play \{the first quarter of the first act is devoted to the \textit{exposition}\}. In a more general sense, especially in academic use, \textit{exposition} applies to the type of writing which has explanation for its end or aim and is thereby distinguished from other types in which the aim is to describe, to narrate, or to prove a contention. \textit{Exposure} is now preferred to \textit{exposition} as a term implying a laying bare or open especially to detrimental or injurious influences or to reprobation, contempt, or severe censure \{fabrics faded by \textit{exposure} to the sun\} \{\textit{exposure} to a contagious disease\} \{the \textit{exposure} of a candidate's unsavory past\} \{the \textit{exposure} of a person's motives\}. \textit{Exposure} is the term for the time during which the sensitive surface of a photographic film is laid open to the influence of light \{an \textit{exposure} of two seconds\} \textit{Exposé} is often used in place of \textit{exposure} for a revealing and especially a formal or deliberate revealing of something that is discreditable to a person or group \{an \textit{exposé} of an allegedly charitable association\} \{an \textit{exposé} of the judge's graft\}.

\textit{expostulate} remonstrate, protest, \{object, kick\}

\textit{Ana} oppose, \{resist, combat, fight: argue, debate, dispute, *discuss\}

\textit{exposure} \{exposed, *exposition\}

\textit{Ant} cover: covering —\textit{Con} shelter, refuge, asylum, retreat

\textit{exposed} \{explain, explicate, elucidate, interpret, construct\}

\textit{Ana} dissociate, break down, \{analyze, resolve: illustrate, \{exemplify\}

\textit{express} \{adj: \{explicit, definite, specific, categorical\}

\textit{Ana} expressed, voiced, uttered (see \textit{Express vb}); lucid, \{clear, perspicuous: distinct, plain (see \textit{Evident})\}; precise, exact, accurate (see \textit{Correct})

\textit{Con} \{implicit, constructive, virtual: vague, \{obscure, cryptic, enigmatic, ambiguous, equivocal\}

\textit{express vb} \{Express, vent, utter, voice, broach, air, ventilate\}

\textit{Ana} comparable when they mean to let out what one feels or thinks. \textit{Express}, the most comprehensive of these words, implies an impulse to reveal not only thoughts or feelings but also experiences, imaginative conceptions, and personality; it implies revelation not only in words but also in gestures, in action, in dress, or in what one makes or produces, especially as works of art \{once again I have to \textit{express} surprise and satisfaction—Lucas\} \{in speaking or writing we have an obligation to put ourselves into the hearer's or reader's place . . . .\}. \textit{To express ourselves is a very small part of the business—Quiller-Couch}\} \{there were so many different moods and impressions that he wished to \textit{express} in verse—Joyce\}

\textit{Vent} stresses such an inner compulsion to expression as a pent-up emotion that seeks an outlet or a powerful passion that cannot be controlled \{he \textit{vented} his spleen in libelous caricatures\}; \{his heart's his mouth: what his breast forges, that his tongue must \textit{vent}—Shak\}. \{by means of mercurial jokers . . . he could \textit{vent} his hatred of pioneer life and all its conditions—Brooks\}. \textit{Utter} stresses the use of 'voice; it does not, however, always imply speech \{\textit{utter} a yell\}; \{\textit{utter} one's relief by sobbing\}. When speech is implied, it is typically both short and significant \{\textit{utter} a command\} \{his tongue and pen \textit{uttered} heavenly mysteries—Walton\} and the context may suggest a reason for secrecy as well as for revelation \{he was caught up into paradise, and heard unspeakable words, which it is not lawful for a man to \textit{utter}—2 Cor 12:4\} \{begin by encouraging him to \textit{utter}\}

\textit{Ana} analogous words \textit{Ant} antonyms \textit{Con} contrasted words

See also explanatory notes facing page 1
freely even his most shocking thoughts—Russell> Voice does not necessarily imply vocal utterance, but it invariibly suggests expression in words (I revealed in being able to voice my opinions without being regarded as a dangerous lunatic—MacKenzie> Very often voice suggests that the writer or speaker serves as a spokesman expressing a shared view (the editorial voices the universal longing for peace) (one, bolder than the rest, voiced their disapproval of the proposal) (Webster contributed a pamphlet . . . which effectively voiced the Federalist opposition—Cole) Broach stresses mention for the first time, especially of something long thought over and awaiting an opportune moment for disclosure (the mayor did not broach the project until he felt that public opinion was in its favor) (the idea of religious radio broadcasts was first broached in 1923—Current Bio.) Air implies exposure, often in the desire to parade one's views, sometimes in the hope of attracting attention or sympathy (air one's opinions of the government) (air a grievance) (he did not air his politics in the pulpit—Murdoch) Ventilate implies exposure also but usually suggests a desire to get at the truth by discovering the real issues or by weighing the evidence pro and con; it often means to investigate freely, openly, and thoroughly (the question [the future of literature] has thus been ventilated from every point of view—Times Lit.
Sup.)

Amp. *speak, talk; pronounce, *articulate, enunciate: *reveal, disclose, divulge, tell: *declare, proclaim, announce Ant imply —Con hint, intimate, *suggest, insinuate eexpression *phrase, locution, idiom expressive, eloquent, significant, meaningful, pregnant, sententious mean clearly conveying or manifesting a thought, idea, or feeling or a combination of these. Something is expressive which vividly or strikingly represents the thoughts, feelings, or ideas by which it intends to convey or when in form or animate it; the term is applicable not only to language but to works of art, to performances (as of music or drama), and to looks, features, or inarticulate sounds (a forcible and expressive word) (an expressive face) (he laid great stress on the painting of the eyes, as the most expressive and dominating feature—Binyon) (a growing emphasis on the element [in beauty] that is described by such epithets as vital, characteristic, picturesque, individual—in short, on the element that may be summed up by the epithet expressive—Babbitt) Something is eloquent (see also vocal 2) which reveals with great or impressive force one's thoughts, ideas, or feelings (there was a burst of applause, and a deep silence which was even more eloquent than the applause—Hardy) (I could scarcely remove my eyes from her eloquent countenance: I seemed to read in it relief and gladness mingled with surprise and something like vexation—Hudson) or which gives a definite and clear suggestion of a condition, situation, or character (a tremulous little man, in greenish-black broadcloth, eloquent of continued depression in some village retail trade—Quiller-Couch) (a sidewalk eloquent of official neglect—Brownell) Eloquent is also applicable to words, style, and speech when a power to arouse deep feeling or to evoke images or ideas charged with emotion is implied (words eloquent of feeling) (a simple but deeply eloquent style) Something is significant which is not empty of ideas, thoughts, or purpose but conveys a meaning to the auditor, observer, or reader. The term sometimes is applied to words that express a clearly ascertainable idea as distinguished from those words (as prepositions and conjunctions) that merely express a relation or wholeness. This honored client had a meaning and so deep it was, so subtle, that no wonder he experienced a difficulty in giving it fitly significant words—

Meredith> (those who lay down that every sentence must end on a significant word, never on a preposition—Ellis) or to works of art or literature that similarly express a clearly ascertainable idea (as a moral, a lesson, or a thesis) as distinguished from works that exist purely for their beauty or perfection of form and have no obvious purpose or import (art-for-art's-sake men deny that any work of art is necessarily significant) More often, significant applies to something (as a look, gesture, or act) that suggests a covert or hidden meaning or intention (by many significant looks and silent entreaties, did she endeavor to prevent such a proof of complaisance—Austen) (she could not feel that there was anything significant in his attentions—Deland) Something is meaningful which is significant in the sense just defined; the term is often preferred when nothing more than the presence of meaning or intention is implied and any hint of the importance or momentousness sometimes associated with significicant would be confusing (of two close synonyms one word may be more meaningful because of its greater richness in connotations than the other) (it was a . . . meaningful smile—Macdonald) (I suppose the most meaningful thing that can be said of her is that she has restored delight (repeat, delight) to poetry—Charles Jackson) Something is pregnant which conveys its meaning with richness or with weightiness and often with extreme consciousness or power (it is pretty and graceful, but how different from the grave and pregnant strokes of Maurice's pencil—Arnold) (the pregnant maxim of Bacon that the right question is the half of knowledge—Ellis) (he had no talent for revealing a character or resuming the significance of an episode in a single pregnant phrase—Maugham) Something is sententious which is full of significance:

when applied, as is usual, to expressions, the word basically connotes the force and the pithiness of an aphorism (sententious and oracular brevity—Gibbon) (sententious maxims) But even as an aphorism may become hackneyed, so has sententious come to often connote platitude ousness or triteness ("Contentment breeds happiness"
. . . a proposition . . . sententious, sedate, obviously true—Quiller-Couch)

Ana revealing or revelatory, disclosing, divulging (see corresponding verbs at reveal): *graphic, vivid, picturesque, pictorial: suggesting or suggestive, adumbrating, shadowing (see corresponding verbs at suggest) Con *stiff, wooden, rigid, tense, stark: stern, austere, *severe: inane, jejune, flat, banal, rapid, *insipid: vacuous, empty

expunge *erase, cancel, efface, obliterate, blot out, delete Ant wipe, eradicate, extirpate (see exterminate) exquisite adj 1 *choice, recherché, rare, dainty, delicate, elegant

Ant precious, valuable, priceless, *costly: *consume, finished: flawless, *impeccable, faultless: *perfect, intact, whole, entire

2 *intense, vehement, fierce, violent

Ant *consummate: *perfect: *supreme, superlative: heightened, aggravated, intensified, enhanced (see intensify): exalted, magnified (see exalt) exquisite n *fop, coxcomb, beau, dandy, dude, buck temporaneous, extempore, temporary, improvised, impromptu, offhand, unpremeditated mean composed, concocted, devised, or done at the moment rather than beforehand. Extemporaneous, extempore, and temporary in their more general applications stress something made necessary by the occasion or situation and may suggest skepticism or crudity in the thing modified (extemporaneous cover during the snowstorm) (the old woman who had erected a clothesline as a sort of extemporar-extemporary, extempore

*extemporaneous, improvised, lengthen, elongate, prolong, protract all mean to extend in duration beyond usual or normal limits: <prolong one’s childhood> <prolong the process of digestion> <exercise prolongs life> Protract (opposed to curtail) adds to the denotation of prolong the connotations of indeterminateness, needlessness, or boredom <protracted debate> (an unduly protracted visit)

Anu *increase, enlarge, augment; *expand, amplify, distend, dilate

Ant abridge, shorten —Con abbreviate, curtail, reduce (see shorten): *contract, shrink, condense extension wing, ell, *annex tent *size, dimensions, area, magnitude, volume *range, scope, compass, sweep, reach, radius: stretch, spread, amplitude, *expanse extenuate vb 1 attenuate, *thin, dilute, *sharpen, rarefy *diminish, lessen, reduce, *decrease: *weaken, enfeebles, debilitate: *moderate, temper, qualify

Ant intensify —Con aggravate, heighten, enhance (see intensify)

2 *palliate, glaze, gloss, whitewash, whiten

Ana condone, *excuse: rationalize, *explain, justify *condone, *excuse: *rationalize, *explain, justify exterior adj *outer, external, outward, outside

Ana *extrinsic, extraneous, foreign, alien

Ant interior —Con *inner, inward, internal, inside: intestinal: intrinsic, *inherent, ingrained exterminate, extirpate, eradicate, uproot, deracinate, wipe are comparable when they mean to effect the destruction of or abolition of something. Extirminate implies utter extinction; it therefore usually implies a killing off (efforts to exterminate such pests as mosquitoes, rats, and ragweed have been only partly successful) <the tribe had been exterminated, not here in their stronghold, but in their summer camp . . . across the river—Cather> Extirpate implies extinction of a group, kind, or growth, but it may carry less an implication of killing off, as exterminate carries, than one of the destruction or removal of the things essential to survival and reproduction; thus, wolves might be exterminated by hunting in a particular area, but large carnivores in general are extirpated by changed conditions in thickly settled regions; a heresy is often extirpated, rather than exterminated, by the removal of the leaders from a position of influence; a vice cannot easily be extirpated so long as the conditions which promote it remain in existence <the ancient Athenians had been extirpated by repeated wars and massacres—Graves> Eradicate stresses the driving out or elimination of something that has taken root or has established itself <diphtheria has been nearly eradicated from the United States> (it is difficult to eradicate popular superstitions) <he must gradually eradicate his settled conviction that the Italians and the French are wrong—Grandon> Uproot differs from eradicate chiefly in being more definitely figurative and in suggesting forcible and violent methods similar to those of a tempest that tears trees out by their roots (hands . . . red with guiltless blood . . . uprooting every germ of truth —Shelley) (end forthwith the ruin of a life uprooted thus —Browning) <refugees from the peoples uprooted by war>

Deracinate basically is very close to uproot <disemboweling mountains and deracinating pines—Steven- son> (he fascinated the young Anderson’s intellect and deracinate certain convictions—Benson) but in much recent use it denotes specifically to separate (as oneself or one’s work) from a natural or traditional racial, social, or intellectual group <although the author is himself a Negro, his book is . . . deracinated, without any of the lively qualities of the imagination peculiar to his people —Commentary> Wipe (in this sense used with out) often implies extermination (the entire battery was wiped out by shellfire) but it equally often suggests a canceling or obliterating (as by payment, retaliation, or exhaustion of supply) <wipe out a debt> <wipe out an old score> <wipe out a disgrace> (the fall in share prices wiped out his margin)

Ana *abolish, extinguish, annihilate, abate: obliterate, efface, expunge, blot out, erase: destroy, demolish, raze

external adj outer, exterior, outward, outside

Ant extrinsic, extraneous, foreign, alien exteriorize materialize, actualize, *realize, embody, incarnate, objectify, hypothesize, reify extinction see under extinguish at abolish exterminate 1 crush, quell, suppress, quench, quash extinguish see under extinguish at abolish extol laud, praise, eulogize, acclaim

extreme crush, quell, suppress, quench, quash

extinguish *abolish, annihilate: obliterate, efface, expunge, erase: destroy, demolish, raze extremity *inner, inward, inside: intrinsic, ingrained, inherent extract, *educe, elicit, evoke externalize, disentangle, untangle, disencumber are comparable when meaning to free or release from what binds or holds back. Extricate, the most widely useful of these words, implies a situation in which someone or something is so entangled (as in difficulties or perplexities) or so restrained (as from freedom of action or movement) that great force or ingenuity is required to bring about a release (the fly was not able to extricate itself from the spider’s web) <extract himself from financial difficulties> (extricate his car from the mud into which its wheels had sunk) <my success in having extricated myself from an awkward predicament—Heiser> Disentangle adheres far more closely than extricate to its basic sense of to free from what entangles; also, it is used typically of things rather than of persons and therefore seldom involves the ideas of difficulty or perplexity except for the person who seeks to free the thing entangled or to unravel what is intricately complicated <dismantle a strand from a twisted skein> (Seneca) (drank, set down his glass, and untangled his legs—Basso) Disencumber implies a freeing from what weighs down, clogs, or imposes a very heavy burden <he called a spade a spade, and knows how to disencumber ideas of their worldly frippery—George Eliot> (the trees, laden heavily with their new and humid leaves, were now suffering more damage than during the highest winds of winter, when the boughs were specially disencumbered to do battle with the storm—Hardy) Dismembarrass implies a release from what embarrasses by or as if by impeding, hampering, or hindering (dismembarrass himself of his companion—Scott) <dismembarrass ourselves of the curse of ignorance and learn to work together—Alvin Johnson> (Chamberlain, at several critical junctures, preferred to disembarrass himself of trained, expert advisers—Naextrinsic

mier) *disengage, *detach, abstract: liberate, release, *free: *rescue, deliver Con *hamper, fetter, trammel, shackles, clog, hog-tie, manacle: impede, obstruct, *hinder, block extrinsic, extraneous, foreign, alien are comparable when they mean external to something or someone or to the true nature or original character of such thing or person. Extrinsic applies to something which is distinctly outside the thing in question or is derived from something apart from it; thus, a ring may have extrinsic value because of sentimental or historical associations; such extrinsic influences as chance or the assistance of friends may help a man to succeed (those who would persuade us . . . that style is something extrinsic to the subject, a kind of ornamentation laid on—Quiller-Couch) (even life itself might arise from lifeless matter through the influence of favorable extrinsic conditions—Conklin) Extrinsic, though often used interchangeably with extrinsic, applies more specifically to something which is introduced from outside and may or may not be capable of becoming an integral part of the thing (advance arguments extraneous to the real issue) (style . . . is not—can never be—extraneous ornament—Quiller-Couch) (whatever we gain comprehension of, we seize upon and assimilate into our own being . . .; that which had been extraneous is become a part of ourselves—H. B. Alexander) Foreign applies to something which is so different from the thing under consideration that it is either inadmissible because repellent or, if admitted, incapable of becoming identified with it, assimilated by it, or related to it (much coal contains foreign matter) (inflammation caused by a foreign body in the eye) (the mysticism so foreign to the French mind and temper—Brownell) (look round our world . . . Nothing is foreign: parts relate to whole . . .; all served, all serving: nothing stands alone—Pope) Alien applies to something which is so foreign that it can never be made an inherent or an integral part of a thing. The word often suggests repugnance or at least incompatibility or irreconcilability (a voluptuous devotionality . . . totally alien to the austerity and penetrating sincerity of the Gospel—Inge) (he would often adopt certain modes of thought that he knew to be really alien to his nature—Wilde)

Ana external, *outer, outside, exterior, outward: acquired, gained (see get) Ant intrinsic—Con internal, *inner, inside, inward, interior intestine exuberant lavish, *profuse, prodigal, luxuriant, lush Ana prolific, *fertile, fruitful, fecund: *vigorous, lusty, energetic, nervous: rampant, *rank: copious (see plentiful) Ant austere: sterile eyewitness witness, onlooker, looker-on, *spectator, observer, beholder, bystander, kibitzer

The term denotes the normal, composed facial expression of one free from mental distress. Sometimes the word is used in place of face when a formal term is desired (that vile representation of the royal countenance—Swift) Both face and countenance may be used in personifications when the outward aspect or appearance of anything is denoted (startling transformations in the outward face of society are taking place under our very eyes—Frankfurter) (beholding the bright countenance of truth in the quiet and still air of delightful studies—Milton) Visage is a more literary term than the preceding words; it often suggests attention to the shape and proportions of the face, but sometimes to the impression it gives or the changes in mood which it reflects (black hair; complexion dark; generally, rather handsome visage—Dickens) (his visage all agrav—Tennyson) (the very visage of a man in love—Millay) Physiognomy may be preferred when the reference is to the contours of the face, the shape of the features, and the characteristic expression as indicative of race, character, temperament, or disease (he has the physiognomy of an ascetic) (nor is there in the physiognomy of the people the slightest indication of the Gaul—Landor) The term may be extended to the significant or sharply defined aspect of things (not exactly one of those styles which have a physiognomy . . . which stamp an indelible impression of him on the reader's mind—Arnold) (the changing yet abiding physiognomy of earth and sky—Lowery) Mug, used in informal context, usually carries a suggestion of an ugly but not necessarily displeasing physiognomy (getting your mug in the papers is one of the shameful ways of making a living—Mailer) (among all the ugly mugs of the world we see now and then a face made after the divine pattern—L. P. Smith>

F

See also explanatory notes facing page

Puss sometimes denotes a facial expression (as of anger or pouting) (she put on a very sour puss when she saw the priest along with me—Frank O'Connor) but it more often denotes the physiognomy (it had the head of a bear, the very head and puss of a bear—Gregory)

face vb 1 *meet, encounter, confront

2 Face, brave, challenge, dare, defy, beard are comparable because all carry the meaning to confront with courage or boldness. Face carries no more than this general sense; basically it suggests the confrontation of an enemy or adversary (here we are together facing a group of mighty foes—Sir Winston Churchill) but in its extended use it implies a recognition of the power of a force, a fact, or a situation which cannot be escaped to harm as well as to help and a willingness to accept the consequences (must face the consequences of your own wrongdoing) (strict justice, either on earth or in heaven, was the last thing that society cared to face—Henry Adams) (like . . . a tailor's bill, something that has to be faced as it stands and got rid of—Montague) Brave may imply a show of courage or bravado in facing or encountering (i must hence to brave the Pope, King Louis, and this turbulent priest—Tennyson). More often, however, it implies fortitude in facing and in enduring forces which ordinarily would strike the spirit with terror (firemen braving danger and death to rescue persons trapped in the blazing hotel) (women . . . for his sake had braved all social censure— Wilde) (the search for truth . . . makes men and women content to undergo hardships and to brave perils—Eliot) (if you find yourself in trouble before then, call on your courage and resolution: brave out every difficulty—Kenneth Roberts) Challenge generally implies a confrontation of a person or thing opposed in such a way that one seems an accuser implying weakness or fault in the one confronted. Often it may lose the feeling of accusation and then may mean no more than to dispute or question (our thoughts and beliefs "pass," so long as nothing challenges them—James) (that "Testament" the authenticity of which, foolishly challenged by Voltaire, is sufficiently established—Bellow) or, on the other hand, it may go farther and suggest a bold invitation to a contest (as a duel or other test of rightness or skill) which the one challenged cannot refuse (the degree of courage displayed by Malakai, the best medical practitioner turned out by the School, who once dared to challenge the power of the chief of the witch doctors—Heiser) or it may suggest bold measures inviting a response or retaliation (challenge criticism) (challenge attention) Dare also usually emphasizes boldness rather than fortitude, but it rarely suggests the critical or censorious attitude so frequently evident in challenge. Rather, it implies venturesomeness, love of danger, or moral courage and may connote great or especial merit or mere rashness in the action (dare the perils of mountain climbing) (dare to be true: nothing can need a lie—Herbert) (and what they dare to dream of, dare to do—J. R. Lowell) (to wrest it from barbarism, to dare its solitude—Century) (among the newspapers only the Irish Times dared to discuss the issue frankly—Blanshard) (no American dared to be seen reaching for a sandwich by the side of a known Communist—Sulzberger) Defy, like the others, usually implies a personal agent, but it may be said of things as well. When the idea of challenging is uppermost, the notion of daring one to test a power which the challenger believes undefeatable or to do what the challenger believes impossible is usually its accompaniment. In either case there is a stronger implication of certainty in one's belief than there is in challenge, and often a clearer suggestion of mockery (from my walls I defy the pow'rs of Spain—Dryden) (fiend, I defy thee! . . . foul tyrant both of gods and humankind, one only being shalt thou not subdue—Shelley) (I defy the enemies of our constitution to show the contrary—Burke) (I defy him to find the gate, however well he may think he knows the city—Kipling) When the idea of resistance is uppermost, there is a suggestion in defy of a power to withstand efforts, opposition, or rules. It is in this sense that a personal agent is most often not implied, for resistance does not always suggest an exercise of will (scenes that defy description) (words that defy definition) (a wooden seat put together with nails—a flimsy contrivance, which defies all rules of gravity and adhesion—Jeffries) (the tall erect figure, defy ing age, and the perfectly bald scalp defying the weather—Upton Sinclair) Beard, although it implies defiance, often differs from defy in suggesting resolution rather than daring or mockery as its motive; in that way it comes somewhat closer to face and to brave (what! am I dared and bearded to my face?—Shak.) (a bold heart yours to beard that raging mob!—Tennyson) (for years she led the life of a religious tramp, bearding bishops and allowing herself many eccentricities—Coulton) Ana confront, encounter, meet: oppose, withstand, resist: contend, fight

Ant avoid — Con evade, elude, shun, escape facet aspect, side, angle, phase facious humorous, jocose, jocular, witty

Ana joking, jesting, quipping, wisecracking (see corresponding nouns at JOKE): jolly, jovial, jocund, merry, blithe: comical, comic, droll, funny, ludicrous, laughable

Ant lugubrious — Con grave, solemn, somber, serious, sober, sedate, staid facile easy, smooth, light, simple, effortless

Ana adroit, deft, dexterous: fluent, voluble, glib (see VOCAL): superficial, shallow, uncritical, cursory

Ant arduous (with reference to the thing accomplished): constrained, clumsy (with reference to the agent or his method)

facility ease, dexterity, readiness

Ana spontaneity, unconstraint, abandon: address, poise, tact: lightness, effortlessness, smoothness (see corresponding adjectives at EASY)

Con ineptness, clumsiness, awkwardness, maladroitness (see corresponding adjectives at AWKWARD): stiffness, rigidity,woodenness (see corresponding adjectives at STIFF): effort, exertion, pains: difficulty, hardship facsimile copy, carbon copy, reproduction, duplicate, replica, transcript faction bloc, party, combination, combine, ring

Ana clique, set, coterie, circle factious contumacious, sedulous, mutinous, rebellious, insubordinate

Ana contending, fighting, waiting (see CONTEND); contentious, quarrelsome (see BELLIGERENT); disaffected, estranged, alienated (see ESTRANGE)

Ant cooperative — Con companionable, gregarious, sociable: compliant, acquiescent: loyal, true, faithful factitious *artificial, synthetic, ersatz

Ana manufactured, fabricated (see MAKE vb): forced, compelled, constrained (see FORCE vb): simulated, feigned, counterfeited, shammed, pretended, affected, assumed (see ASSUME)

Ant bona fide, veritable — Con authentic, genuine: natural, simple, artless, naive, unsophisticated failing are failure, neglect, default, miscarriage, dereliction *vanish, evanesce, evaporate, disappear fade

*power, function shabby, dilapidated, dingy, seedy, threadbare faded

factor 1 *agent, attorney, deputy, proxy 2 constituent, *element, component, ingredient

Ana determinant, *cause, antecedent: *influence:
agency, agent, instrument, instrumentality, *mean faculty 1 *power, function 2 *gift, aptitude, knack, bent, turn, genius, talent Ana *ability, capacity, capability: property, *quality:

penchant, flair, propensity, proclivity, *leaning: *predilection

fak
*excellent, merit, virtue failure, neglect, default, miscarriage, dereliction are comparable when they mean an omission on the part of someone or something of what is expected or required of him or of it. Failure basically implies a being found wanting; it implies a lack or absence of something that might have been expected to occur or to be accomplished, performed, or effected. There was a general failure of crops that year. A distressing confusion in discussions of the human-interest story has been caused by a common failure to define the term—Mott. You will hear a great deal of talk about the failure of Christianity; but where in the Holy Gospels ... do you find any suggestion that Christianity is to be an easy triumph?—Mackenzie

Neglect (see also NEGLIGENCE) implies carelessness and inattentiveness on the part of a person, so that what is expected or required of him is either left unattended to or is not adequately performed. In wartime a charge of neglect of duty is a very serious one. His neglect of his health is a source of much worry to his friends. We made a nice tidy cleanup. If I hadn't done it I ought ... to have been shot for neglect—H. G. Wells

Default is now chiefly found in legal use, where it implies a failure to perform something required by law (as a failure of a plaintiff or of a defendant to appear at the appointed time to prosecute or defend an action or a proceeding) In case of default on the part of the plaintiff, he may be nonsuited. In case of default on the part of the defendant, he may have a judgment rendered against him, this being called a judgment by default. Default may also imply a failure to pay one's debts at the appointed time. (Convicted of default in the payment of a fine) or in extended use a failure to perform something required, usually by total omission of pertinent action. (Betraying by default the privileges of citizenship in a democratic society—Dean)

Lose a tennis match by default

Misconduct does not so definitely point the blame for a failure of someone or something to live up to expectations or to accomplish certain ends as do the preceding words; it is often used when there are no definite persons or things to which culpability can be assigned or when for some reason or other there is a desire to avoid casting of blame (There was a serious misconduct of justice in that trial) (The causes of the misconduct of the project were not clear) (We fear ... some miscarriage in the details of our plan—Krutch)

These various miscarriages cannot all be ascribed to ill fortune—Grenfell

Dereliction, of all these terms, carries the strongest implication of a neglect that amounts to an abandonment of, or a departure from, the thing and especially the duty, the principle, or the law that should have been uppermost in a person's mind; ordinarily it implies a morally reprehensible failure rather than one resulting from carelessness and inattention or from mishap. They would be answerable with their lives for any further dereliction of duty—Ainsworth

It revealed in him ... the indisputable signs of a certain dereliction from some path of development his nature had commanded him to follow—Brooks

Ana *fault, failing: shortcoming, deficiency, *imperfection: *lack, want, absence, privation, dearth: negligence, laxness, slackness, remissness (see corresponding adjectives at NEGLIGENCE): indifference, unconcernedness or unconcern (see corresponding adjectives at INDIFFERENT)

Fair adj indolent, slothful, *lazy fair adj 1 comely, lovely, *beautiful, pretty, bonny, handsome, beauteous, pulchritudinous, good-looking Ana delicate, dainty, exquisite (see CHOICE): charming, attractive, enchanting (see under ATTRACT): pure, *chaste

Ant foul: ill-favored

2 Fair, just, equitable, impartial, unbiased, dispassionate, uncolored, objective are comparable when they are applied to judgments or to judges or to acts resulting from or involving a judgment and mean free from undue or improper influence. Fair, the most general term, implies the disposition or the intention to regard other persons or things without reference to one's own interests, feelings, or prejudices, often even to the point of conceding every reasonable claim of the weaker side or of giving oneself or the stronger side no undue advantage A fair distribution of one's estate A fair decision by a judge A fair play When we consider how helpless a partridge is ... it does seem fairer that the gunner should have but one chance at the bird—Jeffreys (I believe you will find them a fair solution of this complicated and difficult problem—Roosevelt)

Just implies no divergence from the standard or measure of what has been determined or is accepted as right, true, or lawful and dealings that are exactly in accordance with those determinations, no matter what one's personal inclinations or interests may be or what considerations in favor of the person or thing judged may be adduced A just judge Some just prince perhaps had ... safe restored me to my native land—Pope (How much easier it is to be generous than just—Junius) To divert interest from the poet to the poetry ... would conduct to a juster estimation of actual poetry, good and bad—T. S. Eliot

Equitable implies a freer and less rigid standard than just, often the one which guides a court of equity as distinguished from a court of law and which provides relief where rigid adherence to the law would make for unfairness (He has an equitable claim to the property)

More often the word implies fair and equal treatment of all concerned A form of society which will provide for an equitable distribution of ... riches—Krutch It depended wholly on their individual characters whether their terms of office were equitable or oppressive—Buchan

Impartial implies absence of favor for or absence of prejudice against one person, party, or side more than the other An impartial tribunal faithful
adj
faith 1 *belief, credence, credit exposition, *exhibition, show, exhibit

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

faithful description Encounter of the observed facts—assurance, certitude (see CERTAINTY) assurance, conviction, *certainty, certitude: assent-The term is also used when only firm adherence to actual-faithful likeness) <the faithful story of a battle) <an record of one's experiences) Uncolored (see also COLORLESS) implies freedom feeling, often also implying great temperateness or faithless, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-fidious mean untrue to a person, an institution, or a unity. Although often used interchangeably with the faithless, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithless, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-
faithles, false, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, per-faulting strongest of the terms here discriminated, then implying a betrayal of a person or cause, it is also capable of implying untrustworthiness, unreliability, or loss or neglect of an opportunity to prove one's devotion or faith (and hopeless, comfortless, I'll mourn a faithless woman's broken vow—Burns) (the remnant...have been abandoned by their faithless allies—Shelley) (he abandoned one wife and was faithless to another—J. R. Green)

False differs from faithless in its greater emphasis upon a failure to be true or constant in one's devotion or adherence than upon an actual breach of a vow, pledge, sworn promise, or obligation; however it may, like faithless, carry varying connotations with respect to the gravity or heinousness of that failure (betrayed by a false friend) (never was Plantagenet false of his word—Marlowe) (we hope that we can give a reason for the faith that is in us without being false to the strictest obligations of intellectual honesty—Inge) (the conception of a lordly spent destiny for the human race, to which we are false when we revert to wars and other atavistic follies—Russell) Disloyal implies lack of faithfulness in thought, in works, or in actions to one (as a friend, superior, sovereign, party, or country) to whom loyalty is owed (a disloyal subject) (good party people think such open-mindedness disloyal; but in politics there should be no loyalty except to the public good—Shaw) (assumed a tone in their correspondence which must have seemed often disloyal, and sometimes positively insulting, to the governor—Motley)

Traitorous implies either actual treason or a serious betrayal of trust or confidence (a traitorous general) (a traitorous act) (traitorous breach of confidence) (by the traitorous connivance of the Bulgarian King and Government, advance parties of the German Air Force...were gradually admitted to Bulgaria—Sir Winston Churchill)

Treachery is of wider application than traitorous; as used of persons it implies readiness, or a disposition, to betray trust or confidence (a treacherous ally) and as used of things it suggests aptness to lead on to peril or disaster by false or delusive appearances (treacherous sands) (the treacherous ocean—Shelley) (up steep crags, and over treacherous morasses, he moved...easily—Macaulay)

Perfidious is a more contemptuous term than treacherous; it implies baseness or vulgarity as well as an incapacity for faithfulness in the person concerned (perfidious violation of a treaty) (perfidious dealings) (Spain...to lavish her resources and her blood in furtherance of the designs of a perfidious ally—Southey)

Ana *inconstant, unstable, fickle, capricious: wavering, fluctuating (see SWING vb): *changeable, changeful Ant faithful—Con loyal, true, staunch, steadfast, resolute, constant (see FAITHFUL)

fake adj counterfeit, spurious, bogus, sham, pseudo, pinchbeck, phony

Ana fabricated, forged (see MAKE): framed, invented, concocted (see CONTRIVE)

Con *authentic, bona fide, genuine, veritable: true, real, actual faker *impostor, mountebank, charlatan, quack

Ana defrauder, cheater or cheat, swindler, cozen (see corresponding verbs at CHEAT) fall, drop, sink, slump, subside are comparable when they mean to go or to let go downward freely. They are seldom close synonyms, however, because of various specific and essential implications that tend to separate and distinguish them. Fall, which in the relevant sense is intransitive, suggests a descent by the force of gravity and implies a loss of support opposing gravity; in extended use fall may apply to whatever extends downward or gives an effect of going in a downward direction (let a glass fall to the ground and shatter) (the supports gone, the structure fell in a heap) (the roof had fallen in on another speaker—Cerf) (chair falling over a woman's shoulders) (the birthrate fell over a 6-month period, then rose) (let fall a remark about the weather) Drop may suggest a falling drop by drop or bit by bit, but usually it stresses a speed, directness, unexpectedness, or casualness in falling or allowing to fall (dropped a coin into a pond) (dropped seeds into holes) (dropping to the ground at the sound of an air-raid warning) (dropping a hint of coming trouble) (income dropped during the slow winter season) Sink fundamentally implies a gradual descending motion, especially into something, often to the point of total submersion (the ship sank gradually into the placid sea) (the float on the fish line sank a moment, then bobbed furiously) (the thermometer sank to far below zero—Carruthers) but in frequent somewhat extended use the stress is so strongly on a slow or gradual falling or descent that the notion of submergence is largely or wholly lost (sinking to her knees from exhaustion) (the sun is sinking in the west) (his voice sank to a whisper) Slump usually implies a sudden falling or collapsing (as of someone suddenly powerless or suddenly totally enervated) (slumping to the ground unconscious) (slumped in his seat) (prices slumped badly in the winter) (when a bird falls asleep, it relaxes and slumps down until its body rests against the perch—J. H. Baker) Subside suggests a gradual descent or return to a normal or usual position, action, or condition after an undue rising, expanding, or boiling up; often it can suggest a sinking below a normal or usual level (a wind rising, then subsiding) (he lost a quarter of an hour waiting for the flood to subside—Mary Austin) (the bustle subsides and relative calm is resumed—Amer. Guide Series: N. C.) (the child's quick temper subsided into listlessness—Reppier) (after the boom prices subsided to a level far below normal) (their voices subsided to a whisper)

Ana *descend, dismount, alight: *drop, sag, flag, wilt: ebb, *abate, wane: *recede

Ant rise—Con *lift, raise, elevate, hoist: ascend, arise, mount, soar, tower (see RISE)

fallacious sophistical, casuistical (see under FALLACY)

Ana *irrational, unreasonable: *misleading, deceptive, delusive, equivocal: equivocal, ambiguous (see OBSOURE)

Ant sound, valid fallacy, sophism, sophistry, casuistry are comparable when meaning unsound and misleading reasoning or line of argument. The same distinctions in implications and connotations are distinguishable in the corresponding adjectives fallacious, sophistical, casuistical. Fallacy and fallacious in specific logical use imply an error or flaw in reasoning that vitiates an entire argument; thus, a syllogism in which one argues from some accidental character as though it were essential and necessary (as, The food you buy, you eat; you buy raw meat; therefore you eat raw meat) contains a fallacy or is fallacious (the many fallacies that lurk in the generality and equivocal nature of the terms "inadequate representation"—Burke) In more general use fallacy and fallacious apply to a conception, belief, or theory that is erroneous and logically untenable, whether it has been arrived at by reasoning or by conjecture or has been taken over from others (the arguments of the Federalist are intended to prove the fallacy of these apprehensions—John Marshall) (the separatist fallacy, the belief that false adj 1 False, wrong mean not in conformity with what is true or right. False in all of its senses is colored by its original implication of deceit; the implication of deceiving or of being deceived is strong when the term implies a contrariety between what is said, thought, or concluded and the facts or reality false statements (see CONTRARY): (thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor—Exod 20:16) (whether it is a genuine insight into the workings of his own mind or only a false explanation of them—Day Lewis) (you can take a chessboard as black squares on a white ground, or as white squares on a black ground, and neither conception is a false one—James) An intent to deceive or a deceptive appearance is implied when the term connotes an opposition to what is real or genuine or authentic false tears false pearls (a box with a false bottom) (a false arch is an architectural member which simulates an arch in appearance but does not have the structure or serve the function of a true arch) The term is applied in vernacular names of plants to a kind related to, resembling, or having properties similar to another kind that commonly bears the unqualified vernacular the pinkster flower is sometimes called false honeysuckle Even when the word stresses faithlessness (see FAITHLESS) there is usually a hint of a deceptive appearance of faithfulness or loyalty or of self-deception in one's failure to be true false friends Only in the sense of incorrect or erroneous (a false note (a false policy) is this implication obscured, though there is often a suggestion of being deceived into believing that the thing so described is true or right. Wrong, on the other hand, is colored in all of its senses by its original implication of wryness or crookedness; in general it implies a turning from the standard of what is true, right (especially morally right), or correct to its reverse. In comparison with false, wrong is simple and forthright in its meaning; thus, a wrong conception is one that is the reverse of the truth, but a false conception is not only wrong but the result of one's being deceived or of one's intent to deceive; a wrong answer to a question is merely an erroneous answer, but a false answer to a question is one that is both erroneous and lying; wrong principles of conduct are the reverse of ethically right principles, but false principles of conduct are not only wrong but are bound to lead astray those who accept them give a person wrong advice through bad judgment (believed that a lie is always wrong) (there is something wrong about his appearance) (there is something false in his courtesy) (he may be wrong in his opinions, but he is not false to his country in trying to impress them upon others) (the book is a chic little piece . . . often amusing, always arch and clever, and usually wrong—Farrell) (the man who, having out of sheer ignorance eaten the wrong end of his asparagus, was thencefore compelled to declare that he preferred that end—Ellis) Ana *misleading, deceptive, delusive, delusory; fallacious, sophistical (see under FALLOACY): mendacious, deceitful, dishonest, untruthful: factitious (see ARTIFICIAL) Ant true —Con real, actual: veritable, *authentic, genuine, bona fide: veracious, truthful (see corresponding nouns at TRUTH) 2 perfidious, disloyal, traitorous, treacherous, *faithless Ana recreant, apostate, renegade, backsliding (see corresponding nouns at RENEGADE): *inconstant, unstable: *crooked, devious Ant true —Con staunch, steadfast, loyal, *faithful, constant, resolute falsehood untruth, *lie, fib, misrepresentation, story Ant truth (in concrete sense) falsify *misrepresent, belie, garble Ana *change, alter, modify, vary: distort, contort, warp (see DEFORM): pervert, corrupt (see DEBASE): contradict, contravene, traverse, *deny falter vb waver, vacillate, *hesitate Ana flinch, blench, *recoil, quail, shrink: fluctuate, oscillate, *swing: *shake, tremble, quake, shudder Con *persevere, persist: resolve, determine, *decide fame n Fame, renown, honor, glory, celebrity, reputation, repute, notoriety, éclat are comparable when they mean the character or state of being widely known by name for one's deeds and, often, one's achievements. Fame is the most inclusive and in some ways the least explicit of these terms, for it may be used in place of any of the others, but it gives no clear suggestion of how far the knowledge of one's name extends, of the reasons for it, or of the creditableness of those reasons; although the term often implies longevity and usually implies a cause or causes to one's credit, it does not invariably carry these favorable implications acquired some fame for his inventions (his fame was short-lived) (fame is the spurt that the clear spirit doth raise . . . to scorn delights and live laborious days—Milton) fame . . . that second life in others' breath—Hazlitt (fame is the thirst of youth—Shelley is the spur that the clear spirit doth raise . . . to scorn delights and live laborious days—Milton) fame . . . that second life in others' breath—Pope (popularity is neither fame nor greatness—Hazlitt) fame is the thirst of youth—Byron (I had won a great notoriety and perhaps even a passing renown—Maughan) Renown implies widespread fame and widespread acclamation for great achievements (as in war, in government, in science, or in art) (those other two equalled with me in fame, so were I equalled with them in renown—Milton) (Niten's paintings are prized, but it is as a swordsman that he won supreme renown—Binyon) (the renown of Walden has grown; schools and colleges have made it required reading—Frank) (he once achieved a singular famed *famous, renowned, celebrated, eminent, illustrious familiar 1 Familiar, intimate, close, confidential, chummy, thick are comparable when meaning near to one another because of constant or frequent association, shared interests and activities, or common sympathies, or, when applied to words or acts, indicative of such nearness. Familiar suggests relations or manifestations characteristic of or similar to those of a family, where long-continued intercourse makes for freedom, informality, ease of address, and the taking of liberties; consequently familiar may apply to the relations, words, and acts of persons actually in such a situation and to the attitude or the style of speaking or writing of persons who assume the freedom and ease of address of those who are familiar essays (a simpler and more familiar speech, able to express subtleties or audacities that before seemed inexpressible—Ellis) (the familiar, if not rude, tone in which people addressed her—Hawthorne) (she was a fearless and familiar little thing, who asked disconcerting questions—Wharton) Intimate suggests relations characteristic of those who are in close contact with one another (as through ties of blood, of friendship, or of common interests or aspirations) and who have opened their hearts or their minds to such a degree that they deeply know and understand one another (the intimate political relation subsisting between the president of the United States and the heads of departments, necessarily renders any legal investigation of the acts of one of those high officers peculiarly... delicate—John Marshall) (they establish and maintain... more intimate and confiding relations with us—J. R. Lowell) (though Farfars must have so far forgiven him as to have no objection to... him as a father-in-law, intimate they could never be—Hardy) Intimate may also apply to a connection between a person and a thing, especially something he says, does, wears, or uses; it then implies a very close relation between that thing and his inmost thoughts or feelings or his life in the privacy of his home (official receptions were few, but small, intimate teas were frequent in the governor's home) (the indecency of publishing intimate letters which were never written to be published—Ellis) (her eyes, lively, laughing, intimate, nearly always a little mocking—Cather) (a shirt-sleeved populace moved... with the intimate abandon of boarders going down the passage to the bathroom—Wharton) As applied directly or indirectly to knowledge, intimate differs from familiar not only in idiom but also in implying not merely acquaintance but close or deep study (he has an intimate knowledge of the situation) (he is familiar with the facts pertaining to the situation) (he is familiar with the poem in question) (he has gained, through long study, an intimate knowledge of the poem) Close is often used in place of intimate when one wishes to imply an intimate relation existing persons together in such a way as to suggest the exclusion of others or a very strong degree of affection between them (close friends) (a close friendship) (seeing them so tender and so close—Tennyson) (too close to Theodore Roosevelt ever to receive the confidence of Woodrow Wilson—Paxson) Confidential implies a relationship based upon mutual trust or confidence or upon a willingness to confide intimate matters (as one's hopes, thoughts, or feelings) (the growing harmony and confidential friendship which daily manifest themselves between their Majesties—Chatham) (he slipped his arm through his father's with a confidential pressure—Wharton) Chummy and thick are less formal terms and usually convey some degree of contempt, derision, or envy of a close association. Chummy suggests an easy informal intimate mechanical triumph that won him wide renown—Anderson) Honor (see also honor 2, honesty) implies a measure of fame (as in a section, a country, a continent, or the civilized world), but it also implies that the knowledge of one's achievements has earned for one esteem or reverence (length of days is in her right hand; and in her left hand riches and honor—Prov 3:16) (one must learn to give honor where honor is due, to bow down... before all spirits that are noble—Benson) Glory usually suggests renown, but more especially it implies a position that attention is fixed on one's brilliance of achievement and the accomplishment of enthusiastic praise or of high honor (the paths of glory lead but to the grave—Gray) (to be recognized... as a master... in one's own line of intellectual or spiritual activity, is indeed glory—Arnold) (no keener hunter after glory breathes. He loves it in his knits more than himself; they prove to him his work—Tennyson) Celebrity is often used in place of fame when the widespread laudation of one's name and accomplishments in one's own time is implied; the term usually carries with stronger implication of famoussness and of popularity than it does of deep-seated or long-lived admiration and esteem (the lonely precursor of German philosophy, he still shines when the light of his successors is fading away; they had celebrity. Spinoza has fame—Arnold) (made a sensational debut as a pianist at the age of six... but by adolescence her celebrity was finished—Tunley) Reputation often denotes nothing more than the character of a person or place, not necessarily as it really is but as it is conceived to be by those who know of or him of it (he has a good reputation in the community) (it is a shame to injure a man's reputation) but in the sense in which it is here particularly considered, the term implies a measure of fame, typically for creditable reasons (his reputation for wit was countrywide) (a man of doubtful reputation) (a painter of growing reputation) (the purest treasure mortal times afford is spotless reputation—Shak) (the fame (reputation is too chilly a word) of Arnold J. Toynbee is a phenomenon in itself worth noting—Brogan) Repute is sometimes used interchangeably with reputation in either sense (only a general of repute could get recruits—Buchan) More often, however, repute suggests a relation that is closer to honor than to fame, and denotes rather the degree of esteem accorded to a person or thing than the measure of fame it acquires (the book has no little repute among the best critics) (his work is held in high repute) (he won a great deal of repute for his bravery) Notoriety implies public knowledge of a person or deed; it usually suggests a meretricious fame and imputes sensationalism to the person or thing that wins such repute (he achieved notoriety as the author of a most salacious novel) (that brilliant, extravagant, careless Reverend Doctor Dodd who acquired some fame and much notoriety as an eloquent preacher—Ellis) Eclat may be used in place of renown or of notoriety. To either idea is added the connotation of great brilliancy or display, but when the basic meaning is renown, illustriousness is especially suggested (consider what luster and éclat it will give you... to be the best scholar, of a gentleman, in England—Chesterfield) and when it is notoriety, flashiness or ostentation is usually implied (his success in such a pursuit would give a ridiculous éclat to the whole affair—Scott) Ana acclaim, acclamation, *applause: recognizing or recognition, acknowledgment (see corresponding verbs at ACKNOWLEDGE): eminence, illustriousness (see corresponding adjectives at FAMOUS)

Ana analogous words Ant antonyms Con contrasted words See also explanatory notes facing page 1
fanatic

bigot, *enthusiast, zealot

Ant

Ana

*fictitious, fabulous, mythical, apocryphal, legendary-

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.

famous famed, renowned, celebrated, eminent, illustrious are comparable when meaning known far and wide among men. Famous and famed apply chiefly to men, events, and things that are much talked of or are widely or popularly known throughout a section, a country, a continent, or a cultural tradition; they also imply good repute or a favorable reputation. Normally these terms are applied without qualification only to those persons or things that are still so known or that were so known in the time under consideration—(the once famous poems of Owen Meredith) (a famous American aviator) (some of our most famous physicians have had to struggle pitiably against insufficient means until they were forty or fifty—Shaw) (time has spiraled them from rebellion to eminence. They are respectively famous, and the poet Edith even fashionable—W. T. Scott) (a corpulent, jolly fellow, famed for humor—Hawthorne) Renowned implies more glory or honor and more widespread acclamation than either famous or famed; it is, however, often employed as a stronger or more emphatic term than famous with little actual difference in meaning except for a suggestion of greater longevity of fame (royal kings . . . renowned for their deeds—Tennyson) (the celebrated stresses reception of popular or public notice or attention and frequent mention, especially in print; it may also suggest public admiration or popular honor (the celebrated kidnapping of Charley Ross) (the most celebrated of the cases pending before the Supreme Court) (Benjamin Franklin’s celebrated kite) (the greatest, but the least celebrated, general in the war) (it is characteristic that in this whole “Notebook” Maugham seldom mentions any of his celebrated friends—Behrman) Eminent implies conspicuousness for outstanding qualities; it is applicable chiefly to persons or things that are recognized as topping others of their kind (the age produced no eminent writers) (many eminent men of science have been bad mathematicians—Russell) (eminent manifestations of this magical power of poetry are very rare and very precious—Arnold) Illustrious carries a stronger implication of renown than eminent; it also imparts to the thing so described a gloriousness or splendor that increases its prestige or influence (illustrious deeds of great heroes) (his right noble mind, illustrious virtue—Shak.) (boast the pure blood of an illustrious race—Pope)

Ant

obscure

fanatic

n

bigot, *enthusiast, zealot

fanciful

*impractical, visionary, fantastic, chimerical, quixotic

Ana

*fictitious, fabulous, mythical, apocryphal, legendary-bizarre, grotesque, *fantastic: preposterous, absurd (see FOOLISH): *false, wrong realistic —Con matter-of-fact, *prosaic: truthful, veracious (see corresponding nouns at TRUTH)

Ant

fancy

n

1 *caprice, freak, whim, whimsy, conceit, vagary, crotchet

2 *imagination, fantasy

Ant

experience

3 Fancy, fantasy, phantasy, phantasm, vision, dream, daydream, nightmare are comparable when they denote a vivid idea or image, or a series of such ideas or images, present in the mind but having no concrete or objective reality. Fancy (see also IMAGINATION) is applicable to anything which is conceived by the imagination, whether it recombines the elements of reality or is pure invention (surely this great chamber . . . did not exist at all but as a gigantic fancy of his own—Galsworthy) (the status of archaeological fact and fancy in the world today—W. W. Taylor) Fantasy applies to a fancy and especially to an organized series of fancies (as one presented in art) that is the product of an unrestrained imagination freed from the bonds of actuality (Shakespeare’s Midsummer Night’s Dream is a pure fantasy) (a thousand fantasies begin to throng into my memory, of calling shapes, and beckoning shadows dire, and airy tongues that syllable men’s names—Milton) Phantasy, though sometimes used in place of fantasy, both as the power of free inventive imagination and as a product of that power, may apply particularly to the image-making power of the mind, whether the image is the result of sense perception or of the imagination, or to a product of that power and then may be strongly antonymous to truth and reality (probably in his life, certainly in his poetry, there is no sharp boundary between phantasy and reality—Canby) (phantasies created by the reading of Kubla Khan) Phantasm may be applied either to a phantasy, the mental image (figures . . . of which the description had produced in you no phantasm—Taylor) or to a fantasy, especially to one that is hallucinatory (the phantasms of a disordered mind) Vision often implies an imagining, but it as frequently implies a seeing or a revelation. Specifically, however, the term is applied to something which the mind perceives as clearly or concretely as if revealed to it by a supernatural or mysterious power (see REVELATION), or as if viewed by a kind of spiritual sight or intuition, or as if seen in a dream; vision therefore often suggests a sight of something that is actually spiritual in essence or is beyond the range or power of the eyes or mind to grasp as a whole (a whole life . . . devoted to the patient pursuit of a single vision seen in youth—Eliot) (each word’s . . . power of touching springs in the mind and of initiating visions—Montague) (our vision of world law and some sort of worldwide law-enforcement agency—Sat. Review) Dream is the general term for the ideas or images present to the mind in sleep (thus have I had thee, as a dream doth flatter, in sleep a king, but waking no such matter—Shak.) (your old men shall dream dreams, your young men shall see visions—Joel 2:28) In extended use dream, like daydream, suggests vague or idle, commonly happy, imaginations of future events or of nonexistent things (childhood’s sunny dream—Shelley) (a busy person has no time for daydreams) Nightmare applies to a frightful and oppressive dream which occurs in sleep or, by extension, to a vision or, sometimes, an actual experience which inspires terror or which cannot easily be shaken off (how many of our daydreams would darken into nightmares, were there a danger of their coming true!—L. P. Smith)

Ana

figment, fabrication, fable, *fiction: notion, conception, *idea, concept

Ant

reality (in concrete sense)

fancy

vb

1 dote, *like, love, enjoy, relish fantastic

Ana *approve, endorse, sanction

Con *disapprove, deprecate

2 imagine, conceive, envisage, envision, realize, *think

Ana *conjecture, surmise, guess

fantastic

1 chimerical, visionary, fanciful, *imaginary, quixotic

Ana extravagant, extreme (see EXCESSIVE); incredible, unbelievable, implausible (see affirmative adjectives at PLAUSIBLE); preposterous, absurd (see FOOLISH); *irrational, unreasonable: delusory, delusive, deceptive, *misleading

Con familiar, ordinary, *common: usual, customary

2 Fantastic, bizarre, grotesque, antic are comparable when they describe works of art, effects produced by nature or art, ideas, or behavior and mean conceived or made, or seemingly conceived or made, without reference to reality, truth, or common sense. Fantastic stresses the exercise of unrestrained imagination or unlicensed fancy. It therefore variously connotes absurd extravagance in conception, remoteness from reality, or merely ingenuity in devising <fantastic figures, with bulbous heads, the circumference of a bushel, grinned monstrously in his face—Hawthorne> <one need not have a very fantastic imagination to see spirits there—Gray> <he wove fantastic stories of the hunting bride—Kipling> Bizarre is applied to what is unduly, often sensationally, strange or queer; it suggests the use of violent contrasts (as in color, in sound, or in emotional effects) or of strikingly incongruous combinations (as of the tragic and the comic or of the horrible and the tender) <it was bizarre in the extreme. It was as if a judge, wearing the black cap, had suddenly put out his tongue at the condemned—Powys> <temple sculpture became bizarre—rearing monsters, fiery horses, great pilared halls teeming with sculptures—Atlantic> Grotesque emphasizes distortion of the natural to the point either of comic absurdity or of aesthetically effective ugliness. Technically the word is applied to a type of painting or sculpture of ancient Roman origin which serves a decorative rather than a pictorial purpose and which employs natural details (as animals, men, flowers, and foliage) and conventional designs and figures (as scrolls, garlands, and satyrs) in unnatural combinations or to the comic exaggerations or distortions of human and animal figures in the sculptured decorations and especially the gargoyles of Gothic architecture. It is from the latter association that the adjective in general use derives its leading implications of ridiculous ugliness or ludicrous caricature <the camel was crouching . . . with his grotesque head waving about in dumb protest to the blows—Hoffman> <she differed from other comedians. There was nothing about her distinguishable from exaggeration—Kahn> <the incident happened farther back than I can remember> <circumstances such as the present . . . render further reserve unnecessary—Shaw> In spite of this fundamental distinction in meaning, there are many occasions where it is difficult to make a choice, since the ideas of distance from a given point and of advance in movement may both be implied. In such cases either word may be used <to go further and fare worse—Old Proverb> <my ponies are tired, and I have further to go—Hardy> <as we climb higher, we can see further—Inge> <“What! . . . was Pat ever in France?” “Indeed he was,” cries mine host; and Pat adds, “Ay, and further—Lover> fascinate charm, bewitch, enchant, captivate, allure, *attract

Ana influence, impress, *affect, sway, strike, touch: delight, rejoice, gladden, *please fascinating charming, bewitching, enchanting, captivating, alluring, attractive (see under ATTRACT)

Ana *delightful, delectable: luring, enticing, seducing

Con *repugnant, repellent, distasteful, obnoxious, abhorrent

fashion

n 1 manner, way, *method, mode, system

Ana practice, *habit, custom, usage, wont

2 Fashion, style, mode,ogue, fad, rage, craze, dernier cri, *ery are comparable when denoting a way of dressing, of furnishing and decorating rooms, of dancing, or of behaving that is generally accepted at a given time by those who wish to follow the trend or to be regarded as up-to-date. Fashion is thought of in general as the current conventional usage or custom which is determined by polite society or by those who are regarded as leaders especially in the social, the intellectual, the literary, or the artistic world <the dictates of fashion> <follow the fashion> <nowhere . . . is fashion so exacting, not only in dress and demeanor, but in plastic art itself—Brownell> <took the view . . . that externals count for much, since they sway opinion, and opinion sways fashion, and fashion is reflected in conduct—Buchan> Fashion is also applicable to the particular thing (as costume, furniture, behavior, or subject in literature or art) which is dictated by fashion <this poem . . . provided . . . the fake-progressive

Ana analogous words

Ant antonyms

Con contrasted words

See also explanatory notes facing page 1
with a new fashion—Day Lewis} (it is the latest fashion in hats) Style, in this as in its other senses (see LANGUAGE 2, NAME) implies a manner or way that is distinctive; though often interchangeable with fashion (a dress in the latest style) it particularly suggests the elegant or distinguished way of dressing, furnishing, and living characteristic of those who have wealth and taste (live in style) (judging from the style they keep, they are both wealthy and cultivated) (their clothes, their homes, their tables, their cars have that somewhat elusive quality called style) (an authentic opera queen, temperamental, colorful, obstreperous, who considered traveling in style as important as singing in tune—Kupferberg) Mode, especially in the phrase "the mode," suggests the peak of fashion or the fashion of the moment among those who cultivate elegance in dress, behavior, and interests (the easy, apathetic graces of the man of the mode—Macaulay) (that summer Russian refugees were greatly the mode—Rose Macaulay) (sleeping on top of television sets is the mode of the day for cats—New Yorker) Vogue stresses the prevalence or wide acceptance of the fashion and its obvious popularity (the slender, undeveloped figure then very much in vogue—Cather) (the word morale, in italics, had a great vogue at the time of the War—Montague) (yet I am told that the vogue of the sermon is passing—Quiller-Couch) Fad, rage, craze, dernier cri all apply to an extremely short-lived fashion. Fad stresses caprice in taking up and in dropping (many people are inclined to see in the popularity of this new subject a mere university fad—Babbitt) (a fashion is not in France the mere "fad" it is in England and with us—Browne) Rage and craze imply short-lived and often markedly senseless enthusiasm (Mr. Prufrock fitted in very well with his wife's social circle, and was quite the rage—Day Lewis) (dog racing had begun as an enthusiasm, worked through to being a craze, and ended as being a habit—Westerby) Dernier cri or its equivalent cry (especially in "all the cry") applies to whatever is the very latest thing in fashion (a woman whose clothes are always the dernier cri) (open-toed shoes were all the cry that summer)

Ana trend, drift, *tendency: convention, *form, usage fashion vb form, shape, *make, fabricate, manufacture, forge Ana devise, contrive (see corresponding nouns at DEVICE): design, plan, plot (see under PLAN n): produce, turn out (see BEAR) fashionable *stylish, modish, smart, chic, dashing Ant unFashionable: old-fashioned fast, rapid, swift, fleet, quick, speedy, hasty, expeditious mean moving, proceeding, or acting with great celerity. Fast and rapid are often used without distinction; but fast frequently applies to the moving object and emphasizes the way in which it covers ground, whereas rapid is apt to characterize the movement itself and often to suggest its astonishing rate of speed (a fast horse) (a fast train) (a fast boat) (a rapid current) (a rapid gait) (rapid progress) (a fast worker) (rapid work)

Swift suggests great rapidity, frequently coupled with ease or facility of movement (fleeter than arrows, bullets, wind, thought, swifter things—Shak) (more swift than swallow shears the liquid sky—Spenser) (the flight of his imagination is very swift; the following of it often a breathless business—Day Lewis) Fleet, which is chiefly in poetic or journalistic use, connotes lightness or nimbleness as well as extreme fastness or rapidity (antelope are fleet of foot) (how the fleet creature would fly before the wind—Melville) Quick (see also quick 2) applies especially to something that happens promptly or occupies but little time; it suggests alacrity or celerity, especially in action, rather than velocity of movement (quick thinking saved him from the trap) (thy drugs are quick. Thus with a kiss I die—Shak) (slow to resolve, but in performance quick—Dryden)

Speedy, when applied to persons or their motions or activities, implies extreme quickness and often hurry or haste; when applied to things and their motion or movement, it also often suggests great velocity; in general, it is opposed to dilatory (no mode sufficiently speedy of obtaining money had ever occurred to me—De Quincey) (hope for their speedy return) (be speedy, darkness—Keats) (make speediest preparation for the journey—Shelley) Hasty suggests hurry or precipitance rather than speed and often connotes the resulting confusion, disorder, or inattention (gobbled down a hasty meal) (we must, this time, have plans ready—instead of waiting to do a hasty, inefficient, and ill-considered job at the last moment—Roosevelt) Expeditious adds to quick or speedy the implication of efficiency; it therefore implies the absence of waste, bungling, and undue haste (an expeditious movement of troops) (there is no expeditious road to pack and label men for God, and save them by the barrel load—Thompson)

Ant slow

fasten, fix, attach, affix mean to make something stay firmly in place or in an assigned place. All but fix (and that sometimes) imply a uniting or joining of one thing to another or of two things together. Fasten implies an attempt to keep a thing from moving by uniting it (as by tying, binding, nailing, or cementing) to something else or by restraining it by means of some mechanical device (as a lock, a screw, or a hook and eye) (fasten a horse to a post) (fasten down the lid of a box) (fasten a calendar to a wall) (fasten a door) (fasten a dress in the back) Fix implies an attempt to keep something from falling down or from losing hold; it suggests such operations as driving in or implanting deeply, usually with care and accuracy (fix a stake in the ground) (unless their roots are deeply fixed, plants will not be strong) It is more common in its extended than in its basic sense, but the implications remain the same (fix a face in one's memory) (fix facts in one's mind) (fix a color in a fabric by use of a mordant)

In some phrases where fasten and fix are used interchangeably there may be a distinction in meaning which is subtle but justified; thus, to fix one's affections on someone implies concentration and fidelity while to fasten one's affections on someone may, and often does, suggest covetousness or an attempt to hold or control; to fix the blame upon a person implies solid grounds for the accusation, but to fasten the blame upon someone often suggests factitious grounds or selfish motives (his heart is fixed, trusting in the Lord—Ps 112:7) (society wanted to do what it pleased; all disliked the laws which Church and State were trying to fasten on them—Henry Adams)

Attach stresses connection or union in order to keep things together or to prevent their separation; it usually implies a bond, link, or tie (the lid is attached to the box by hinges) (attach loose sheets by means of a staple) (the collarbone is attached to the shoulder blade at one end and to the breastbone at the other) (he attached himself to the cause in his youth) (in some countries little odium is attached to drunkenness) (attach to a promise) (she undertakes to attach him to her by strong ties: a child, or marriage—Parshley) Affix usually implies imposition of one thing upon another; it may convey no further information (affix a seal to a document) (Felton affixed this bull to the gates of the bishop of London's palace—Hallam) but it more often than not suggests

A colon (:) separates groups of words discriminated. An asterisk (*) indicates place of treatment of each group.
either attachment by an adhesive (as paste, gum, or mucilage) \(<\text{affix to a stamp on an envelope}>\) or subscription (as of a name to a document) \(<\text{he's old enough to affix his signature to an instrument}>\) —Meredith

Ana

- unfasten: loosen, loose —Con *separate, part, sever, unnerve, divorce, divide

fastidious

- finicky, finicking, finical, particular, fussy, *nice, dainty, squeamish, persnickety, prickly

fat

- *fleshy, stout, portly, plump, corpulent, obese, robust, strong
- *secure, rivet, moor, anchor: *join, connect, link, unite: adhere, cleave, cling, *stick, cohere: bind, *tie
- unfasten: loosen, loose —Con *separate, part, sever, unnerve, divorce, divide

fastness

- stronghold, *fort, fortress, citadel

fatally

- dangerously, perilously, *ominously, portentously, inauspiciously, unpropitiously

fatuous

-

fate

- sexually, virile, virginal, effeminate, effeminate, effeminate, effeminate
- *secure, rivet, moor, anchor: *join, connect, link, unite: adhere, cleave, cling, *stick, cohere: bind, *tie
- unfasten: loosen, loose —Con *separate, part, sever, unnerve, divorce, divide

fatum

- fate, destiny, lot, portion, doom: analogous words See also explanatory notes facing page 1 weakness of character for which one is not entirely responsible or of which one may not be aware (pride . . . is a very common failing, I believe—Austen) (a knowledge of his family failings will help one man in economizing his estate—Quiller-Couch) (while in other statesmen these failings are usually thought of as sorrowful necessities, in Lloyd George they are commonly held to show his essential nastiness—Sykes) Frailty often implies a weakness in character which makes one prone to fall when tempted (God knows our frailty, pities our weakness—Locke) The term therefore often denotes a pardonable or a petty fault (a purely human frailty, like a fondness for detective stories—Lowes) Foible denotes a harmless, sometimes an amiable, sometimes a temperamental, weakness or failing (I can bear very well to hear my foibles exposed, though not my faults—Shenstone) (he had all the foibles of the aesthetics—Buchan) Vice (see also OFFENSE) is stronger than fault and failing in its suggestion of violation of the moral law or of giving offense to the moral senses of others, but it does not necessarily imply corruptness or deliberate defiance of the law and may be rather a general term attributable to an imperfection or flaw that impairs the soundness of a character or an ability (knowledge . . . of all the virtues and vices, tastes and dislikes of all the people—Galsworthy) (she had been proud. She was criminally proud. That was her vice—Bennett) (as Professor Whitehead has lately said, the intolerant use of abstractions is the major vice of the intellect—Inge) Ana weakness, infirmity (see corresponding adjectives at WEAK): flaw, defect, *blemish Ant merit —Con *excellence, virtue, perfection 3 *blame, culpability, guilt Ana responsibility, answerability, accountability (see corresponding adjectives at RESPONSIBLE): sin, *offense, crime faultfinding adj captious, caviling, carping, censorious, hypercritical, *critical Ana exacting, demanding, requiring (see DEMAND vb): fussy, particular, finicky, perrickety (see NICE) Con appreciating or appreciative, valuing, prizing, cherishing (see corresponding verbs at APPRECIATE): approving, endorsing (see APPROVE) faultless *impeccable, flawless, errorless Ana *correct, right, nice, accurate, exact, precise: *perfect, intact, entire, whole Ant faulty faux pas blunder, slip, *error, mistake, lapse, bull, howler, boner favor n boon, largess, *gift, present, gratuity Ana token, *pledge, earnest: concession, *allowance: *honor, homage, deference: benefaction, *donation, contribution favor vb 1 Favor, countenance, encourage are comparable when they mean to give the support of one's approval to. Favor may be used in reference to a well-disposed inclination, an expressed preference, or active support or sometimes to a circumstance or agency conducive to a result (a number of wealthy and influential Newport folk favored dramatic performances, although a majority of their fellow citizens continued to condemn them—Amer. Guide Series: R. I.) (in general the marshmen favor a broad, roomy canoe—Thesiger) (we had been favored by tail winds and would put down at Idlewild—Cefyn) for the summer weather at Maudheim favored the formation of this type of snow—Schartz) Countenance may indicate mere toleration; more often it implies a positive favoring (really fail to see why you should countenance immorality just to please your—Kaye-Smith) (her popularity had been retrieved, grievances against her silenced, her past countenanced, and her present irradiated by the family approval—Wharton) (several of them appeared at the bar to countenance him when he was tried at the Horsham assizes—Macaulay) Encourage carries the notion of heartening stimulation, inciting or inducing especially by expressions of approval, confidence, liking, or comfort (openly encouraged from Germany and Italy, fascist organizations, although from time to time banned, carried on insidious and demoralizing propaganda—Ogg & Zink) (encouraged her in her ambition to be an actress—Current Bio.) Ana *approve, endorse: *support, uphold, back Ant disapprove —Con *decry, depreciate, disparage 2 accommodate, *oblige Ana *help, aid, assist: *indulge, pamper, humor: *benefit, profit Con foil, thwart, baffle, circumvent, *frustrate: *inconvenience, incommode, discommode favorable, benign, auspicious, propitious mean being of good omen or presaging a happy or successful outcome. Favorable implies that the persons or circumstances involved tend to assist in attaining one's ends—persons by being kindly disposed or actually helpful and circumstances by being distinctly advantageous or encouraging (send a favorable ear to a request) (it was feared that many of the small countries were favorable to the enemy) (a favorable breeze) (a hot dry summer, favorable to contemplative life out of doors—Conrad) (they won't take a chance of battle unless they can feel sure of most favorable conditions—Alexander Forbes) Benign (see also KIND) is applicable chiefly to someone or to something that has power to make or mar one's fortunes by his or its aspect and is thought of as looking down with favor on one or of presenting a favorable countenance to one (so shall the World go on, to good malignant, to bad men benign—Milton) (on whose birth benign planets have certainly smiled—Bronie) (a benign rather than a malevolent phenomenon—Margaret Halsey) Auspicious, like the related augur (see under FORETELL), suggests the presence of signs or omens and is applicable to something that is marked by favorable signs or is in itself regarded as a good omen (an auspicious beginning of what proved to be a great career) (for sure the milder planets did combine on thy auspicious horoscope to shine—Dryden) (pay the boy . . . he brought auspicious news—Kipling) Propitious suggests an allusion to favoring gods or powers more strongly than favorable but not quite so explicitly as auspicious; it may therefore be preferred to favorable when such a connotation is desired (if the fates are propitious, there is no doubt of his success) (they looked upon the present moment as propitious for starting their project) (after so propitious an opening it seemed that aceberities might be quelled, rivalries mitigated—S. H. Adams) Ana advantageous, *beneficial, profitable: salutary, wholesome, *healthful: benignant, kindly, *kind Ant unfavorable: antagonistic favorite n sycophant, toady, lissipattle, * parasite, bootlicker, hanger-on, leech, sponge, sponger fawn vb Fawn, toady, truckle, cringe, cower are comparable when they mean to act or behave with abjectness in the presence of a superior. Fawn implies a courting of favor by such acts of a sycophant as servile flattery and exaggerated deference (they fawn on the proud feet that are starting their lying low—Shelley) (courtiers who fawn on a master while they betray him—Macaulay) (they fawn and slaver over us—Jeffers) (died, still fawning like the coward that he had always been—Pares) Toady carries a strong implication of a menial as well as of a fawning attitude in an attempt to ingratiate oneself; often also it suggests the close following of a hanger-on or parasite or the vulgarly imitative behavior of a social climber (toadying to the rich boys in his school) (her generosity encouraged toadying among her neighbors) (he toadied and worshipped and worried: he became timid and obsequious, feeling himself to be a fluff, a little scratching cinder among immensities—Enright) (in proportion as he submits and toadies, he also will dominate and bully—Mead) (Truckle implies subordination of self or submission of one’s desires, judgments, or opinions to those of a superior (everybody must defer. A nation must wait upon her decision, a dean and chapter to_truckle to her wishes—Sackville-West) (there are people who will always _truckle to those who have money—Archibald Marshall) (Cringe implies obsequious bowing or crouching as if in awe or fear; it usually connotes abject abasement (we are sneaking and bowing and cringing on the one hand, or bullying and scurrying on the other—Thackeray) (she is very humble and careless of self. “My poor, humble self” . . . is often on her lips; but she never cringes or loses dignity—Symonds) (Cower always implies abject fear, often cowardly fear, especially in the presence of those who tyrannize or domineer (the whole family cowered under Lady Kew’s eyes and nose, and she ruled by force of them—Thackeray) (having found . . . every incentive to cower and cringe and hedge, and no incentive . . . to stand upright as a man—Brooks) (Ana) blandish, cajole, wheedle, *coax: defer, bow, cave, *yield, submit: court, woo, *invite (Ant) domineer (faze) disconcert, discomfit, rattle, *embarrass, abash (ana) nonplus, confound, dumbfound, perplex, mystify, *puzzle: *confuse, muddle: fluster, flurry, perturb, *dis-compose (fealty) *fidelity, loyalty, devotion, allegiance, piety (Ana) faithfulness or faith, trueness or truth, constancy, staunchness, steadfastness (see corresponding adjectives at FAITHFUL): *obligation, duty (Ant) perfidy —Con perfidiousness, treacherousness or treachery, traitorishness, faithlessness, disloyalty, falsehood (see corresponding adjectives at FAITHLESS) fear n 1 Fear, dread, fright, alarm, dismay, consternation, panic, terror, horror, trepidation denote the distressing or disordering agitation which overcomes one in the anticipation or in the presence of danger. Fear is the most general term: like _dread, it implies apprehension and anxiety, but it also frequently suggests a loss of courage amounting to cowardice (_fear came upon me, and trembling—Job 4:14) (he had, indeed, an awful _dread of death, or rather “of something after death”—Boyswel) (do you know what _fear is? Not ordinary fear of insult, injury or death, but abject, quavering _dread of something that you cannot see—Kipling) (the only thing we have to fear is _fear itself—Roosevelt) (Fright implies the shock of sudden, startling, and usually short-lived fear; _alarm suggests the fright which is awakened by sudden awareness of imminent danger (she had taken _fright at our behavior and turned to the captain pitifully—Conrad) (she stared at her husband in _alarm; her golden-hazel eyes were black with apprehension—Wylie) (they were all in—Defoe) (Panic is overmastering and unreasoning, often groundless, fear or fright (a blockhead, who was in a perpetual _panic lest I should expose his ignorance—De Quincey) (Terror suggests the extremity of consternation or dread (_the terror by night—Ps 91:5) (frozen with _terror—Beckford) (soul-chilling _terror—Shelley) (Horror adds the implication of shuddering abhorrence or aversion, for it usually connotes a sight, activity, or demand rather than a premonition as a cause of fear (_the horror of supernatural darkness—Pater) (shrank from the task with all the horror of a well-bred English gentleman—Woolf) (Trepidation adds to _dread the implication of timidity, especially as manifested by trembling or by marked hesitation (_the Stubland aunts were not the ladies to receive a solicitor’s letter calmly. They were thrown into a state of extreme _trepidation—H. G. Wells) (it is often used for a polite pretense of fear or timidity (_I take up with some _trepidation the subject of program music—Babbit) (Ana) *apprehension, foreboding, misgiving, presentiment: anxiety, worry, concern (see CARE) (Ant) fearlessness —Con boldness, bravery, intrepidity, valiancy (see corresponding adjectives at BRAVE) *courage, mettle, spirit, resolution: *confidence, assurance, aplomb 2 awe, *reverence (Ana) veneration, worship, adoration (see under REVERE): admiration, *wonder, amazement: respect, esteem (see REGARD n) (Ant) contempt (fearful) 1 Fearful, apprehensive, afraid are comparable when they mean inspired or moved by fear. In such use they are normally followed by of, that, or lest, afraid being never and fearful and apprehensive infrequently used attributively in this sense. Fearful carries no suggestion of a formidable cause of fear; it often connotes timorousness, a predisposition to worry, or an active imagination (the child is fearful of loud noises) (they were fearful that a storm would prevent their excursion) (fearful lest his prize should escape him—J. R. Green) (Apprehensive suggests a state of mind rather than a temperament and grounds for fear that at least seem reasonable. It always implies a presentiment or anticipation of evil or danger (in July 1914 all civilized peoples were apprehensive of war) (had driven before them into Italy whole troops of . . . provincials, less apprehensive of servitude than of famine—Gibbon) (Afraid may or may not imply sufficient motivation of fears, but it typically connotes weakness or cowardice and regularly implies inhibition of action or utterance (the trained reason is disinterested and fearless. It always connotes sufficient apprehension, and a loss of courage in the face of possible or imminent danger (under CARE n): hesitant, reluctant, *disinclined (Ant) fearless: intrepid —Con bold, audacious, *brave, courageous, dauntless, valiant, unafraid 2 Fearful, awful, dreadful, frightful, terrible, terrific, horrible, horrid, shocking, appalling are comparable in that all and especially their adverbs are used informally as intensives meaning little more than extreme (or extreme-ly), but each term has a definite and distinct value when applied to a thing that stimulates an emotion in which fear or horror is in some degree an element. Something is fearful which makes one afraid or alarmed. In literary or formal use the word usually implies a deep and painful emotion and a loss of courage in the face of possible or imminent danger (call torment, trouble, wonder and amazement inhabits here: some heavenly power guide us out of this fearful country!—Shak.} A sight too fearful for the feel of fear—Keats} Our fearful trip is done, the ship has weathered every rack—Whitman In less formal English fearful may not imply apprehension of danger, but it may at least imply that the thing so qualified is a cause of disquiet—the fearful tenacity of a memory—a fearfully distressing situation. Something is awful which impresses one so profoundly that one acts or feels as if under a spell or in the grip of its influence; the word often implies an emotion such as reverential fear or an overpowering awareness of might, majesty, or sublimity—and wring the awful scepter from his fist—Shak.} God of our fathers . . . beneath whose awful Hand we hold dominion over palm and pine—Kipling} Men living among the glooms and broken lights of the primeval forest, hearing strange noises in the treetops when the thunder crashed, and awful voices in the wind—Buchan With somewhat weakened force awful may be applied to qualities or conditions which are unduly weighted with significance or which strike one forcibly as far above or beyond the normal {no tribunal can approach such a question without a deep sense . . . of the awful responsibility involved in its decision—John Marshall} A moment of awful silence before the questions between two of our Countrymen—Shaw} Suddenly, the awful clarity of purpose of the innocent and intelligent, she believed in Captain Remson—McFee} Something is dreadful from which one shrinks in shuddering fear or in loathing—the dreadful prospect of another world war—cancer is a dreadful disease—she felt her two hands taken, and heard a kind voice. Could it be possible it belonged to the dreadful father of her husband?—Meredith} Dreadful things should not be known to young people until they are old enough to face them with a certain poise—Russell} In weakened use dreadful is applicable to something from which one shrinks as disagreeable or as unpleasant to contemplate or endure—A dreadful necessity—wouldn't it be dreadful to produce that effect on people—L. P. Smith} Something is frightful which, for the moment at least, paralyzes one with fear or throws one into great alarm or consternation {a frightful sound broke the quiet of the night}—A frightful tornado—the Ghost of a Lady . . . a scar on her forehead, and a bloody handkerchief at her breast, frightful to behold—Meredith} Frightful is also often employed without direct implication of fright, but in such use it imputes to the thing so qualified a capacity for startling the observer (as by its enormity, outrageousness, or its shocking quality) a frightening disregard of decency a frightening scandal this frightful condition of internal strain and instability—Shaw} The labor of sifting, combining, constructing, expunging, correcting, testing: this frightening toil is as much critical as creative—T. S. Eliot} Something is terrible which causes or is capable of causing extreme and agitating fear or which both induces fright or alarm and prolongs and intensifies it mentally—voices arise. The clamor became terrific—confused the minds of all men—Anders} One of those terrible women produced now and then by the Roman stock, unsexed, implacable, filled with an insane lust of power—Buchan} I have never read a more terrible exposure of human weakness—of universal human weakness—that the last great speech of Othello—T. S. Eliot} A human being devoid of hope is the most terrible object in the world—Heiser} When the word carries no implication of terrifying or of capacity for terrifying, it usually suggests that the thing so described is almost unendurable in its excess (as of force or power) or too painful to be borne without alleviation or mitigation {knowledge . . . is no longer thought to be a secret, precious, rather terrible possession—Benson} An evil passion may give great physical and intellectual powers a terrible efficiency—Eliot} Saint-Beuve believed that the truth is always terrible—L. P. Smith} Something is terrific which is fitted or intended to inspire terror (as by its size, appearance, or potency) {eyes and hairy mane terrific—Milton} Assumes a terrific expression {one little tool . . . transforms the spark [of electricity] from a form too brief and bright and terrific to be intelligible into one of the most tractable and lucid of the phenomena . . . of Nature—Darrow} Terrific may be preferred to terrible when there is an implication of release of stored-up energy, physical, emotional, or intellectual, and of its stunning effect a terrific explosion} A terrific outburst of rage} The most admired single phrase that Shakespeare ever wrote—Ripeness is all . . . derives a terrific and pure dramatic impact from its context—Day Lewis} Something is horrible the sight of which induces not only fear or terror but also loathing and aversion; thus, a fearful precipice may not be horrible; in the practice of the ancient Greek dramatists, murder on the stage was avoided as horrible (now that wars are between nations, no longer between governments or armies, they have become far more horrible—Inge} Horrible, like the other words, may be used in a mawkish sense; in such cases it seldom suggests horror, but it does suggest hideousness {a horrible suspicion arose in his mind} a horribly shrill voice} A horrible taste} Horrible emphasizes the effect produced on a person, horrific the possession of qualities or properties fitted or intended to produce that effect that horrific yarn [Stevenson's] “The Body-Snatcher”} His yearning for the horrific, the revolting, the transcendent mystery of whatever is not “nice”—Times Lit. Sup.} Something is shocking which startles or is capable of startling because it is contrary to one's expectations, one's standards of good taste, or one's moral sense {likes to tell shocking stories} {find a shocking change in a friend's appearance} The treatment should begin by encouraging him to utter freely even his most shocking thoughts—Russell} Often in extended use shocking does not imply a capacity for startling so much as a blamable or reprehensible character {it is shocking of me, but I have to laugh when people are pompous and absurd—Rose Macaulay} A solemnis of this kind . . . would have seemed a shocking thing to . . . so accurate a scholar—L. P. Smith} Something is appalling which strikes one with dismay as well as with terror or horror {her overthrow would have been the most appalling disaster the Western world had ever known—Henry Adams} {the defects are alarmingly prolific—Shaw} Sometimes appalling comes close to amazing but then retains the notion of dismaying and carries a stronger suggestion of dumbfounding than of surprising {his appalling quickness of mind} He was squatting in some sepulchral Indian village talking to unwashed old men, and eating the most appalling food—La Farge} Ana frightening, terrifying, alarming (see FRIGHTEN): ghastly, gruesome, grisly, grim, macabre, lurid: {sinister, baleful, malign: sublime (see SPLENDID) fearful unafraid, dauntless, undaunted, bold, intrepid, audacious, {brave, courageous, valiant, valorous, doughty Ana daring, venturesome, *adventurous: heroic, gallant (see corresponding nouns at HEROISM): plucky, gritty (see corresponding nouns at FORTITUDE) Ant fearful —Con timid, timorous feasible *possible, practicable Ana practical, *practicable: advisable, *expedient, political: advantageous, *beneficial, profitable: suitable, appropriate, fitting, *fit Ant unbelievable, infeasible: chimerical (schemes, projects, suggestions) —Con fantastic, visionary, quixotic (see feast 331 feeling imaginary): utopian, *ambitious, pretentious feast *dinner, banquet feast n Feast, exploit, achievement denote a remarkable deed or performance. Feast applies particularly to an act involving physical strength, dexterity, and often courage; an exploit is an adventurous, heroic, or brilliant deed; achievement emphasizes the idea of distinguished endeavor especially in the face of difficulty or opposition; all are used frequently with some degree of irony (sights of art and feats of strength went round—Goldsmith) (feats of daring) (I must retreat into the invalided corps and tell them of my former exploits, which may very likely pass for lies—Scott) (great is the rumor of this dreadful knight, and his achievements of no less account—Shak) (achievements of science)

feature n *characteristic, trait ana detail, particular, *item: specialty, particularity (see corresponding adjectives at special): *quality, character, property fecund fruitful, prolific, *fertile ana bearing, producing, yielding (see bear): breeding, propagating, reproducing, generating (see generate)

ant barren—con *sterile, unfruitful, infertile, impotent fecundity fruitfulness, prolificacy, fertility (see under fertile) ana producing or productiveness (see corresponding verb at bear): profuseness or profusion, luxuriance, lavishness, prodigality, lushness, exuberance (see corresponding adjectives at profuse)

ant barrenness

federation confederacy, confederation, coalition, fusion, *alliance fee stipend, emolument, salary, *wage or wages, pay, hire ana remuneration, compensation (see corresponding verbs at pay): charge, *price, cost, expense feebie *weak, infirm, decrepit, frail, fragile ana unnerved, energized, emancipated, unnanoned (see unnerv): debilitated, weakened, enfeebled, disabled, crippled (see weaken): powerless, impotent ant robust—con *strong, sturdy, stout, stalwart: *vigorous, lusty, energetic: hale, *healthy feed vb Feed, nourish, pasture, graze are comparatively good to animals and especially to domestic animals (as cattle, sheep, or horses) fed on grass (cattle are pastured on the ridges and mounds that rise . . . above the swamps—Amer. Guide Series: La.)

graze is often preferred specifically to pasture when the emphasis is on the use of growing herbage for food (a field or two to graze his cows—Swift) (graze sheep on the common) ana *nurse, nurture, foster, cherish: support, sustain, maintain (see corresponding nouns at living)

ant starve

feed n fodder, forage, provender, *food, victuals, viands, provisions, comestibles feel vb *touch, palpate, handle, paw ana *apprehend, comprehend: perceive, observe, notice (see see) feel n feeling, *atmosphere, aura ana see those at feeling 3 feeling n 1 sensibility, *sensation, sense ana reacting or reaction, behaving or behavior (see corresponding verbs at act): responsiveness (see corresponding adjective at tender): sensitiveness, susceptibility (see corresponding adjectives at liable)

2 feeling, affection, emotion, sentiment, passion. Feeling, the general term, denotes a partly mental and partly physical, but not primarily sensory, reaction or state that is characterized by an emotional response (as pleasure, pain, attraction, or repulsion). Unless it is qualified or a clue is given in the context, feeling gives no indication of the nature, the quality, or the intensity of the response (whatever feelings were in Sophia's heart, tenderness was not among them—Bennett) (a feeling of sadness and longing—Longfellow) Often feeling implies a contrast with judgment and connotes lack of thought (her humanity was a feeling, not a principle—Henry Mackenzie) (she had a feeling that all would be well—Parker) Affection is applied mainly to such feelings as are also inclinations or likings; the word therefore sometimes suggests desire or striving (the heart . . . we are, by foolish custom . . . impelled to call the seat of the affections—Rose Macaulay) (that serene and blessed mood, in which the affections gently lead us on—Wordsworth) (music played with affection and understanding—Kolodin) Emotion usually suggests a condition that involves more of the total mental and physical response than does feeling or implies feelings marked by excitement or agitation ( eagerness for emotion and adventure—Sydney Smith) (means of exciting religious emotion—Ruskin) (a sensation of strength, inspired by mighty emotion—George Eliot) Sentiment connotes a larger intellectual element in the feeling than any of the others; it often is applied specifically to an emotion inspired by an idea (his own anti-slavery sentiments were sincere—Boatfield) Commonly the word suggests refined, sometimes romantic, occasionally affected or artificial, feeling (that moral sentiment which exists in every human breast—Bancroft) (his opinions are more the result of conviction than of sentiment—J. R. Lowell) (Sterne has been called a man overflowing with sentiment on paper but devoid of real feeling)

Passion suggests powerful or controlling emotion; more than affection, it implies urgency of desire (as for possession or revenge) (hark! how the sacred calm, that breathes about, bids every fierce tumultuous passion cease—Gray) (the ruling passion, be it what it will, the ruling passion conquers reason still—Pope) (give me that man that is not passion's slave—Shak) ana impressing or impression, touching, affecting or affection (see corresponding verbs at affect vb 1): *mood, humor, temper, vein

ana analogous words

ant antonyms

con contrasted words

see also explanatory notes facing page 1 Female, woman, lady are comparable when meaning criminal, convict, malefactor, culprit, delinquent felon felicitous

adj
fell felicity
*adj

felicitous
happy, apt, fitting, appropriate, *fit, suitable, meet, proper

Ana
telling, convincing (see valid): pat, timely, opportunity, *seasonable, well-timed: apposite, pertinent, *relevant

Ant
infelicitous: inept, maladroit — Con *awkward, clumsy, gauche: unfortunate, unhappy, unlucky (see affirmative adjectives at lucky)

felicity
*happiness, bliss, beatitude, blessedness

Ana
rapture, transport, *ecstasy: joy, delight, delectation, *pleasure, fruitation

Ant
misery

fell
adj
cruel, inhuman, savage, barbarous, ferocious, *fierce, truculent

Ana
baleful, malign, malefic, maleficient, *sinister: pitiless, ruthless (see corresponding nouns at sympathy): relentless, unrelenting, merciless, *grim, implacable

felon
*criminal, convict, malefactor, culprit, delinquent female

n
Female, woman, lady are comparable when meaning a person and especially an adult who belongs to the sex that is the counterpart of the male sex. Female (the correlative of male) emphasizes the idea of sex; it applies not only to human beings but also to animals and plants. Its ordinary use as a synonym for woman was once frequent (three smart-looking females—Austen) to please the females of our modest age—Byron but this use is now felt as derogatory or contemptuous except in strictly scientific or statistical application, where the term may be employed to designate a person of the female sex whether infant, child, adolescent, or adult (the city's population included 12,115 males and 15,386 females). As compared with woman (the correlative of man), which emphasizes the essential qualities of the adult female, lady (the correlative of gentleman) connotes basically the added qualities implicit in gentle breeding, gracious nature, and cultivated background. Woman is preferred by many whenever the reference is to the person merely as a person (The country expects the help of its women) the following women assisted in receiving the guests a woman of culture a saleswoman a working woman society women Lady, on the other hand, is preferred when exalted social position or refinement and delicacy are definitely implied (Alfonso XI at his death left one legitimate son and five bastards by a lady of Seville, Doña Leonor de Guzmán—Altamira y Crevea) Miss Nancy had the essential attributes of a lady—high veracity, delicate honor in her dealings, deference to others, and refined personal habits—George Eliot but lady may also be used informally as a mere courteous synonym for woman (Please allow these ladies to pass) the ladies were the decisive factor in rolling up the Republican landslide Priest may I speak to the lady of the house? though its indiscriminate substitution for woman (as in wash lady, saleslady) carries courtesy into travesty from that hour to this, the Gazette has referred to all females as women except that police-court characters were always to be designated as ladies—White

female adj
Female, feminine, womanly, womanlike, womanish, effeminate, ladylike are comparable when meaning of, characteristic of, or like a female especially of the human species. Female (opposed to male) applies to animals and plants as well as to human beings and stresses the fact of sex (The female bee Milton) (female children were excluded from inheritance) Feminine (opposed to masculine) alone of these words may imply grammatical gender (feminine nouns and pronouns) but it characteristically applies to features, attributes, or qualities which belong to women rather than to men; it has practically displaced all except the more strictly physiological senses of female her heavenly form angelic, but more soft and feminine Milton (the domestic virtues, which are especially feminine Lecky) the strangely feminine jealousies and religiousness Steinbeck Womanly (often opposed to girlish or, from another point of view, to manly) is used to qualify whatever evidences the qualities of a fully developed woman Womanly It often specifically suggests qualities (as tenderness, sympathy, moral strength, and fortitude) which especially befit a woman and make her attractive especially in her functions as a wife and mother, or it may merely suggest the absence of such mannish qualities as aggressiveness (twas just a womanly presence, an influence unexpressed—J. R. Lowell all will spy in thy face a blushing, womanly, discovering grace Donné) Womanlike (opposed to manlike) is more apt to suggest characteristically feminine faults or foibles womanlike, taking revenge too deep for a transient wrong done but in thought to your beauty Tennison Womanish (compare mannish, childish) is a term of contempt, especially when applied to what should be virile or masculine art thou a man? Thy form cries out thou art; thy tears are womanish Shak womanish or wailing grief—Cowper Effeminate emphasizes the idea of unmanly delicacy, luxuriously, or enervation a woman impudent and mannish growth is not more loathed than an effeminate man in time of action—Shak an effeminate and unmanly foppery Hurd something feminine not effeminate mind is discoverable in the countenances of all men of genius Coleridge Ladylike is sometimes used sarcastically, especially of men, to imply a dainty and finical affectation of the proprieties tops at all corners, ladylike in mien Cowper that ladylike quality which is the curse of Southern literature—Leechy As applied to girls and women or to their conduct, habits, or manners, ladylike implies conformity to a standard appropriate to a lady your daughter may be better paid, better dressed, more gently spoken, more ladylike than you were in the old mill Shaw

Ant
male — Con masculine, manly, manlike, manful, manish, virile (see male) feminine female, womanly, ladylike, womanish—fertile, *fierce, truculent, barbarous, savage, inhuman, *fierce vb 1 *enclose, envelop, pen, coop, corral, cage, wall

Ana confine, circumscribe, *limit: *surround, gird, environ

2 *dodge, parry, sidestep, duck, shirk, malinger

Ana evade, avoid, shun, elude (see ESCAPE): maneuver, feint (see corresponding nouns at TRICK): baffle, foil, outwit (see FRUSTRATE)

feral *brutal, brute, brutish, bestial, beastly

Ana *fierce, ferocious ferocious *fierce, brutal, savage, inhuman, cruel, fell

Ana infuriated, maddened, enraged (see ANGER vb): rapacious, *voracious, ravenous: relentless, implacable, merciless, *grim

Con *tame, subdued, submissive ferret out vb *seek, search, scour, hunt, comb,ransack, rummage

Ana extract, elicit (see EDUCE): penetrate, probe, probe (see ENTER)

