Lamb
Just born

I am four hours old.
I can see and hear,
but my legs are very weak.
They wobble and shake.
I am hungry.
I drink my mother’s milk. My sister wants to feed too.

Now I am tired.
My woolly coat will keep me warm while I sleep.
I am one day old. My legs are getting stronger. I keep very close to my mother and bleat loudly when she goes away.
I can only stand for a short time before I fall down.

But soon I get up again.
Exploring

I am one week old. My sister and I are growing up fast.

I am interested in everything I see and hear. There’s a new bale of straw. I wonder what it’s like.
Mmm, the straw smells nice, but it tickles my nose!
Growing up

I am four weeks old now.
My woolly coat is growing thicker.
I love to run and play with my sister. Can we jump over these logs?
Playing together

Now I am eight weeks old. I like to chase my sister and the other lambs around the field.
Here she is. She nuzzles my face.
Nibbling the grass

I am ten weeks old.
I love nibbling the fresh green grass.
Grass is very tough to chew. I chew it over and over again until it is soft.

My sister and I often graze together. We rarely feed from our mother.
Almost grown up

I am twelve weeks old. My sister and I spend most of the day grazing with the older sheep.

Our wool is growing longer. We are almost as big as our mother. Soon we will be fully grown.
