The most beautiful interiors in the world
Welcome to the 2017 edition of the Interior Design Yearbook. The design industry continues to astound me with the level of quality, craftsmanship and dedication to craft that it, as a collective, displays year on year. Designers are striving for that ‘something special’ to quote the words of Christopher Jenner, and it is clear to see they are finding it. Throw the rulebook out the window, cast restrictive ‘trends’ aside and simply design with heart and a true understanding of the end user. Some designs are created to be utilised, some to stand and be admired from a far, sometimes we invent the new and other times we reinvent the past to take a step into the future.

So what do designers really think about our industry and the way it is moving forward? We have spoken to a plethora of design talents who have shared their ideas on design, on client expectation and on what clever innovation means to them. Here in the book we present chapters that delve into the industry, one sector at a time. Be it furniture, hotels, chalets, yachts or the smallest of spaces, we are incredibly proud to present this year’s line up of design talent, discussing every nuance of the industry in detail, with beautiful examples of work to boot.

The Photo Casebook does not disappoint this year either. Embracing difference, celebrating the brave, we show liberated spaces that do not conform but instead, lead the way in the design trail, reinventing spaces and working wonder with the most unusual requests.

We are incredibly honoured to present you with this edition of the yearbook. Enjoy and you step into design wonder.

JESSICA ZOOB Ltd

Following her move to her huge new Sussex based studio Jessica is becoming increasingly renowned for her vast oil canvasses. Available by commission.

"I first encountered Jessica’s work when I interviewed her for the Sunday Times ‘Style’ magazine several years ago. I was quite simply blown away by her ability to translate raw emotion and energy onto the canvas. No wonder then that she is the artist of choice for many leading, international interior designers, as her paintings sit as happily in very simple, contemporary interiors as in the lavish and the opulent."

Helen Chislett, Journalist & Author.

"I was so fortunate to have met Jessica earlier this year and to see her paintings, which are stunningly beautiful and unique. A photograph cannot do justice to her paintings. Abstracted and atmospheric, the textures and vitality of her paintings need to be seen to be appreciated."

Mary Fox Linton

"These painting’s are truly beautiful."

Since its inception in 2008, the Interior Design Yearbook has established itself as a leading source of inspiration, a predictor of interior trends and a showcase for ‘Brand Britain’. In 2017, design continues to be the UK’s largest export, and interior design in the UK has never been stronger. All over the world, the importance of design in the built environment is being increasingly appreciated. Whilst the public might not be aware of the value of space planning, traffic flow and ergonomics, they instinctively recognise good design. As the use of ‘smart’ technology becomes more commonplace in the built environment, the role of the interior designer has become even more complex. As well as ensuring that spaces function well and are pleasing to look at, today’s designers now require a detailed working knowledge of health and safety, building regulations, sustainability, acoustics, lighting and technology, if they are to meet the increasingly high expectations of their clients. These requirements place the need for professionalism on designers like never before.

In March 2016, the British Institute of Interior Design (BIID), adopted the protected professional title, BIID Registered Interior Designer, as a way for clients, designers and other built environment professionals to identify designers who have met the BIID’s rigorous professional standard. This exciting introduction has been warmly welcomed by both the RIBA and the IFI (International Federation of Interior Architects/Designers) who recognise that it will provide a much needed professional benchmark for the industry. All BIID Registered Interior Designers must have at least six years of relevant education and practical experience, carry professional indemnity and public liability insurances, and be able to demonstrate evidence of extensive professional practice knowledge. Registered designers are also required to participate in the Institute’s programme of Continuing Professional Development (CPD) seminars and workshops, and to adhere to the BIID Code of Conduct. Commercial and residential clients alike can feel confident that when they choose a BIID Registered Interior Designer, they are selecting a committed professional who has been assessed against a wide range of professional competencies. Equally, the BIID provides new designers the opportunity to immerse themselves in the industry and connect to other professional interior designers by becoming a member.

The Interior Design Yearbook 2017 is an essential guide to some of the country’s most respected and influential designers and their work. This is your guide to the latest ideas and product concepts, as well as offering a wealth of advice on a diverse range of subjects. It is a showcase for new and established talent and an amazing resource for designers. I hope you use and enjoy it!
Gunnar Asplund’s Stockholm Public Library is a behemoth of early twentieth century modernist design. Located on Sveavägen, it sits not far from Adolf Fredrik Church; a Stockholm landmark that was constructed two centuries previously. These two buildings sit not just on the same road, but at crossroads in architectural history. The church coming at a moment when Sweden looked to reinterpret the classicism of Ancient Rome (by way of Italian Baroque) and Asplund’s library referencing and reducing classical antiquity to abstract geometric forms, as the Neo-Classical movement morphed into Modernism.

Growing up around the corner, they became a huge influence on my thinking. The way Asplund so wonderfully harnessed the history of classical design into something so contemporary made me realise not only the impact architecture and design has on a person, but also how history can shape that journey.

As designers, we have a great affinity with drawing on the past to seek out the future. We have been reinventing histories for centuries, from the early years of interpreting classical antiquity in architecture, art and design, otherwise known as the Renaissance, to today’s interpretation of the past seen in music, fashion and interior design.

At Martin Brudnizki Design Studio we are inherently inspired by looking back in order to look forward. Our design for The Academicians’ Room at The Royal Academy of Arts sought to enliven the illustrious building’s past whilst ushering it into the twenty-first century. The original pock-marked walls from when the space acted as the architectural hanging gallery are still visible and very much part of the modern-day design. Similarly The Ivy’s design sought to re-establish the infamous restaurant for modern-day London whilst retaining the restaurant’s rich history; iconic stained glass windows and all.

Over the years I have found particularly responsive projects have been those that have a rich story behind them, places which relay memories and experiences that are so relatable to guests. The sense of evoking positive nostalgia within the viewer is something that can be influenced by a carefully composed interior.

It is the power of an interior’s ability to spark reaction, which is of significant importance to a designer like me. Designing today isn’t just about creating something beautiful and impressive, it’s also about composing an interior, which provides a personal connection for all.

We yearn for that immediate sense of belonging within a space and in my eyes one way this is made possible is by holding onto a moment from the past and reinventing it for the future; much like Asplund and his beloved Public Library in Stockholm.
Photo Casebook

Where else can you find such an eclectic range of interior design projects than in the Photo Casebook for the Interior Design Yearbook? The designs for this year’s gallery are the crème-de-la-crème of the interiors world, boasting projects from New York to Moscow and wide across the Mediterranean. There are hotels, glorious apartments, designers’ own spaces and restaurants that inspire a hunger for delicious menus and a thirst for great design. Safari lodges, private member clubs, office spaces and wine cellars make the line up with diversity, traditionalism, contemporary vibes and savvy use of materials at the heart of many of the projects.

FROM SCANDINAVIA TO SOHO

SPACE Copenhagen designed 11 Howard Hotel in New York’s Soho district. It was the Danish studio’s first project in the USA. Using enduring principles of Scandinavian design combined with boundary-breaking creative modernism, SPACE Copenhagen worked with Creative Director Anda Andrei to fill 11 Howard with beautiful materials and meticulously selected objects. The studio has infused 11 Howard with both the DNA of Danish design traditions and the raw and industrial yet timeless nature of New York. 11 Howard reflects the ethos of the design firm and boasts clear signatures of its past work: natural materials, dramatic clarity, and meticulous craftsmanship. The result is a visual language that makes every choice seem like it’s always belonged exactly where it is. Each of the 221 guest rooms is filled with custom pieces by SPACE Copenhagen that were handcrafted in Denmark. SPACE Copenhagen designed 11 Howard to feel residential: more like a home than a hotel. Its furniture creates an atmosphere of ease and informality. The studio consciously crafted each space so that a sense of congruity between furniture and interior is felt throughout the hotel.

11 Howard Hotel was design by SPACE Copenhagen and completed in April 2016 | Images courtesy of 11 Howard and SPACE Copenhagen.
FRENCH CHARM IN CHELSEA

Bandol, on Chelsea’s Hollywood Road, delivers the cuisine of rustic southern France from within a stunningly warm and contemporary environment, featuring copper, distressed oak, steel, concrete, brick, smoked glass and artful lighting, as well as a large central olive tree, designed by Kinnersley Kent Design. The restaurant’s exterior fascia is a re-working of an existing Victorian timber shop front, protected by Conservation Area status. As customers enter the space, they are greeted by two stunning feature areas, the bar to the left, lit by a long display of 24 glass pendants spaced out in different sizes, lengths and colours and a series of four tables to the right, made of cantilevered, L-shaped copper panels which continue as far as one metre up the wall and are lit by bespoke bare-bulb, copper pipe pendant lights. The wall surround around the copper panels is in a concrete render, with a rough finish to add textural interest. Two further small tables in zinc with white J77 chairs from Hay also sit directly behind the glazed section of the fascia. Tables in the main restaurant space are in bespoke, patinated zinc, with natural wood and pale grey chairs from Hay, from the J104 series. There are also lower wicker chairs in the centre, as well as two bespoke sets of banquettes.

Bandol, Chelsea, London was designed by Kinnersley Kent Design and completed in September 2015.
THE SPIRIT OF THE DELTA

The Gallery HBA redesigned Belmond Eagle Island Lodge in Botswana. The lodge is a place of discovery and wonder, delightfully and uniquely capturing the spirit of the delta. Perched on a private island surrounded by some of the deepest stretches of the delta, Belmond Eagle Island Lodge encompasses 12 luxury tented guestrooms. All the structures are new, their form inspired by the astonishing and massive ant nests which rise from the local landscape, as well as the gentle motion of the nearby water. The redesigned Belmond Eagle Island Lodge is a retreat for the discerning adventurer. Each area within the camp is a space to explore where the natural world is interpreted into features, materials and patinas that convey its essence, that conjure up the spirit of adventure past and present and which enrich the guest experience with new memories to take home.

The Belmond Eagle Island Lodge, Botswana, was designed by The Gallery HBA and completed in November 2015.
BELMOND EAGLE ISLAND LODGE
KITCHEN SPOTLIGHT

The kitchen of this impressive stucco fronted property in Belsize Park would have formed the reception room when originally built. As a result, it benefits from impressively high ceilings of 3.8m and beautifully ornate cornicing and a ceiling rose, together with a fireplace as the central feature. The client wished to adapt this stately room into a large kitchen and dining area to suit their lifestyle yet still allow this space to feel like a room and not specifically like a kitchen. In addition they wanted to incorporate their love of modern materials like metal, timber and marble into the space whilst ensuring that it functions efficiently. The natural progress for Roselind Wilson Design was to allow for a banquette seating area in the beautiful bay window. This would maximise the seating space and allow for a stunning oval marble table set against a strong black and white striped fabric for the bespoke bench.

This Belsize park dining area was designed by Roselind Wilson Design and completed in May 2016. Images courtesy of Richard Waites.
GYM TIME

Designed and realised by Conran and Partners, with project director, Tina Nordern leading the team, the inspiration for the German Gymnasium project came from the building itself. Working with its heritage features such as the lofty, triple-height ceiling space with its magnificent timber roof and iron girders, these created a kind of ‘industrial’ vibe that influenced the choice of materials, colours and textures, including distressed leather and black steel, juxtaposed with clean contemporary insertions and huge brass mirrors. The brief was to create a modern interpretation of a classic brasserie, with German undertones but not overtly so, which led to much research, exploration and analysis to interpret the brief. Conran and Partners have designed an environment that will have a timeless elegance in line with its European brasserie predecessors, with a marble floor, warm walnut timber panelling and black and grey leather upholstery, using the occasional pink and red tone to add depth and visual interest.

German Gymnasium, Kings Cross, London, was designed by Conran + Partners and completed in November 2015.

CHATEAU ON THE HILLS
Designer Rebecca James knew instinctively that this brand new chateau on the hills overlooking the Cote D'Azur would be a traditional design with a twist. Rebecca decided to give this French Farmhouse an Asian inspired modern rustic look. Asian elements of the design were about instilling balance and symmetry to the rooms. To achieve this look she worked with local artisans and furniture makers alongside some contemporary art and furniture from different eras. Throughout the house neutral, earthy colours and materials were utilised to give it that warm, relaxed feeling.

Grasse House, Nice, France, was designed by Rebecca James, Interior Desires, and completed in March 2016.
FRENCH LIVING, HOTEL LIFE

Located a stone’s throw away from Paris’ cultural centre and luxury retail hotspots, the Hotel du Ministère is offering a new experience with the apartment, “La Tête dans les Etoiles”, by interior designer François Champsaur. The apartment is made up of two en-suite bedrooms, a living room with a cozy fireplace, laundry room and a full kitchen-dining area. Guests of the apartment are able to benefit from all of the hotel’s amenities including wifi, room service and access to the gym. A perfectly apt name for the 100m² apartment, the large glass windows of “La Tête dans Les Etoiles” give way to a sublime view of the skyline from both the kitchen and the living room. A contemporary setting in the historical heart of the city, travellers find themselves here.

REFRESHED FRENCH COUNTRY RETREAT

Studio Duggan completed the refurbishment of this stunning five-bedroom French country house in Joucas, Provence. This stunning property (approx. 370 m²), located in South-Eastern France in the small hilltop arty village of Joucas, evokes a fresh, contemporary style. Studio Duggan worked closely with the owners on this creative journey to ensure their inherent aesthetic desire gained expression throughout the house. With light and airy spacious rooms along with the founding colours of cool whites and neutrals mixed with pops of colour and texture brings a family twist on Ibiza cool interiors. Studio Duggan’s eclectic design, the mixing of furniture, textures and colours alongside more contemporary pieces, is very prevalent throughout the house. The house benefits from a huge open plan living area, which connects to the outside terrasses and is perfect for entertaining.

JOUCAS HOUSE
Suna Interior Design was briefed by Fruition Properties to create an exceptional design for their four bedroom show home in contemporary and charismatic Ravenscourt Park. The brief was to create an interior design that would pay homage to this beautiful, leafy location in West London, and appeal to the potential purchasers who will most likely be young families, European or city first and second time buyers as well as those who are downsizing, all of whom though enjoy entertaining. Thus it was important to ensure that the design be chic, trendy and make a memorable and lasting stylish impression. The palettes in this design dictate the mood and usage of the space. So for the often used family room the colour palette comprises mustard and chrome with accents of greys, black and white.
BOLD AND COLOURFUL

Rebekah Caudwell designed this Hamptons Montauk beach home in her signature bold colourful style incorporating artwork and sculptures against a backdrop of contemporary wallpapers and wallcoverings, colourful accessories and homeowner items.

TRADITIONAL CHARM

The client approached Interior Desires to redesign this family home located deep in the Oxfordshire countryside. Not being a fan of traditional design, the client was convinced by Rebecca that he needed some traditional elements to give his home a sense of place. Although the exterior of this new-build Oxfordshire home has been styled on the traditional Cotswold properties in the area, and has plenty of charm, inside it lacked soul. For the young family that bought it, more personality and warmth was in high demand. A carefully created mixture of contemporary art, antique pieces and bespoke furniture gave his home the character and personality it was lacking.

BELGRAVIA'S PEARL

The 1508 London team was tasked with redesigning and refurbishing the interior of this ground floor and lower-ground-floor apartment, named Pearl. The design brief centred around the restoration of classical period details and the introduction of fresh, modern materials and a controlled colour palette to create a timeless feel. The beautifully proportioned rooms and high ceilings lend a sense of grandeur and scale to the property, which is furnished with a mix of antique and modern pieces. A bespoke handmade kitchen by 202 Design uses Bardiglio marble and light-grey units to create a light, streamlined aesthetic. A Silestone central island allows for informal seating, while ceiling-height cabinets make full use of the space. Beautiful pendant lighting and a large painting add warmth and character.

DINING IN BUDAPEST

The Ritz Carlton, Budapest worked with B3 Designers, to create the standalone restaurant Deak St. Kitchen and Kupola Lounge café within the hotel. With bold masculine undertones and a sophisticated design, Deák St. Kitchen restaurant makes a striking impression, with its deep rich leather seating, walnut tables and Hungarian point timber flooring. These elements are juxtaposed against brighter details like the rose gold trim on the lighting and furnishings and the antiqued mirror paneling around the room. This, together with the carefully curated artwork, elegantly finishes off the space. Adjoining the restaurant is the lounge café, Kupola Lounge. The lounge takes its name from the soaring dome ceiling feature, which dominates the large space. As most of the building’s internal architecture is protected, B3 Designers strove to celebrate these features by creating an internal skin mirroring the classic architecture by choosing elegant furniture with a timeless material pallet of rose gold, marble, velvet and walnut.

POST-WAR ITALIAN CULTURE

Sessanta takes inspiration from mid-century Italy, combining the avant-garde aesthetic of Giò Ponti with the glamour of Federico Fellini to transport diners to the post-war heyday of Italian culture. Designed by Martin Brudnizki Design Studio, the 90-seat interior feels warm and organic, with linen, marble and wooden timbers in earthy tones, while contemporary art and brightly coloured seating evoke a modernist wit and playfulness for which Italian design is known. Panelled walls and leather booths in shades of sienna and cyan provide a vintage feel in the main dining room, with a centrally located teak and marble bar serving as the hub of the dining experience. Plaster walls and mirrors line a second conservatory-style dining area, designed to feel intimate yet airy with large skylights, foliage and a cement tile floor, and a 30-seat patio offers additional space for outdoor dining. A separate aperitif bar in the front of the space serves before and after-dinner drinks and bites, and doubles as an espresso bar for morning coffee.

A RESPECT FOR THE ORIGINAL

Flat 1, 70 South Audley Street is a contemporary-luxe 2,355 square foot apartment in the heart of Mayfair. The design of this interior, by Shalini Misra, respects original features, with fireplaces and cornices retained, and has been updated to the comforts of modern life with air conditioning and underfloor heating throughout. State of the art lighting on a Lutron system has been designed with layering of lighting for various moods and times of day. All rooms in the apartment have striking three-metre-high ceiling heights. The flooring in the living areas boasts solid rich dark oak in a sleek chevron pattern combining beautifully with the marble and stone of the entrance, kitchen and bathrooms. Each bathroom is carefully designed independently of each other with a seamless blend of textures and palettes. The master bathroom mixes white calacutta marble set off with dark grey stone. Shalini Misra Ltd is renowned for attention to detail and this carries through to the powder loo, with a mix of stone and leather-clad drawers, and the two bathrooms with contrasting mosaic, fluted dark timber and stone surfaces.

SOUTH KENSINGTON SANCTUARY

The HKS Hospitality Group in London designed the South Kensington Club in London SW7. Previously the Harrington Club founded by Rolling Stones’ Ronnie Wood, the new club is designed for a different type of experience with interiors that are comfortably eclectic. For HKS, the biggest challenge was re-configuring the interior spaces within the heritage-protected envelope, involving several major architectural interventions. The design of the club’s first floor Sitting Room suggests 1970s Palm Springs with its combination of mid-century furniture and sporty accents. Its cozy residential ambiance features Brazilian Percival Lafer chairs and an eclectic collection of side tables. The design of the bar, alluding to an old bar at the Grand Hotel et des Palmes in Palermo, feels more like a comfortable home kitchen island. Beyond the Sitting Room is the ‘Voyager Club Room’ where the excitement of exploration is embodied in numerous details from fascinating antique cameras and old maps to collections of National Geographic and a Peter Beard lead painting entitled Edge of the World.

REFINED SAVOIR FAIRE

Completely renovated and redesigned by Stephanie Coutas, this apartment is as warm as it is contemporary. Showcasing the impressive and extensive art collection the designer has accumulated over the years, this interior was inspired by two large portraits created by “The Kid”, a young artist whose work captivates her, which are strategically placed on a curved wall facing each other. The refined ‘savoir faire’ of this renowned designer is reflected throughout the interior by her selection of materials and luxurious finishes such as leather, silk, wood, velvet, marble, bronze and semi-precious stones. In addition, it houses some of Stephanie’s new bespoke pieces such as the stunning ‘Paris’ chandelier edited by Baccarat. To obtain an absolute feeling of comfort and peace, all bedrooms have been conceived as ensuites with all the luxuries of a five star hotel. This beautiful interior, a seamless portrayal of the contemporary and romantic style of Stephanie Coutas, showcases her skilful practice where no detail is left to chance.

REIMAGINING THE PAST
Taking inspiration from the original interiors, alongside the favourite artists and designers of David Collins, Robert Angell has achieved a stunning re-design that conveys The Blue Bar’s famed and ever-enduring charm and sophistication. The original red silk lampshades and Bishops Hat lanterns have been replenished by their original makers Dernier & Hamlyn, and the Lutyens panelling has been beautifully restored with a unique blue lacquer and crackle finishes. The original colour palette of Lutyens blue, dark red, black and silver remains, with white marble and the addition of a stunning new blue sculptural front bar, topped with beautiful onyx takes centre stage. Formerly the Caramel Room, the Collins Room pays homage to the great David Collins with the new, cooler blue and lavender colour palette. Subtle references to the past permeate the room and have been interpreted throughout the design in a modern way.

A WORLD OF GLAMOUR

Globally revered British interior designer Martin Brudnizki presents a strikingly vibrant bohemian-beach chic concept that re-establishes the ideals of 1950s glamour, housed inside a historic Art Deco tower fully restored by Kobi Karp Architects. With a particular emphasis on local partnerships, The Confidante has teamed up with Miami native and James Beard Award-winning chef Michelle Bernstein to introduce her new restaurant, Seagrape; nightlife impresarios Karim Masri and Nicola Siervo of KNR Hospitality Group to develop experience-driven cocktail venues, 1930s House and Crown Room; Miami’s star landscape architect Raymond Jungles to design lush, tropical landscaping; Miami designer Ashley Leimer of Dress Noble to create staff uniforms; and the homegrown Junior & Hatter salon out of the edgy Wynwood district to offer guests unique services.

A LITERARY MASTERPIECE
Formerly an extended-stay hotel where artists, intellectuals and literary figures like F. Scott Fitzgerald, John Steinbeck and Thomas Mann spent time, The Renwick, a 173-room hotel on E. 40th Street, has been redesigned by Stonehill & Taylor. With a focus on reviving the building’s rich, creative roots in a luxurious contemporary design, the designers sought to create a new kind of destination in Manhattan’s Midtown East. Playing off the history, Stonehill & Taylor’s concept for the loft-style guestrooms centres around the idea of a modern artist’s or writer’s studio. References to artistry abound in the room: a bold band of ink permeates from the foot of the bed through the leather-tufted headboard and onto the ceiling; furnishings include easel-inspired television stands, desks reminiscent of the artist’s workbench with hand-made ceramic pencil holders, nightstands intended to mimic flat file cabinets for art storage and a patterned carpet that simulates paint-splattered concrete. The public spaces are marked by bespoke design and art elements. The entry into the lobby is marked by a dramatic poured terrazzo element.

TIME STANDS STILL

Since opening to the public in 1999, The Time has been a popular haunt for creative professionals, travellers, and locals for a quiet retreat from the bustle and excitement of Times Square. Rockwell Group has created a contemporary, non-contextual environment, a fresh reinterpretation of the concept of time. Time is a critical element in the hotel. The Rockwell Group’s goal was to express the idea of time as a true luxury in our busy lives. By distorting and twisting this concept in surprising and subtle ways, guests will feel as though time has been suspended or extended.

A MONACAN PALACE

The Wine Palace opened its doors in the heart of the Monaco Yacht Club, Norman Foster’s most recent project in the principality. The Wine Palace is a timeless opulent setting designed by the Humbert & Poyet firm. This multi-faceted gem plays on contrasting materials and brings the majesty of oak and marble together with the grandeur of bronze. The spotlight shines on the flawless variety of products selected by the sommelier in an elegant and theatrical setting to stage a breath-taking show and unique experience. The maritime metaphor is never far away with the choice of materials, which are deliciously reminiscent of ferries’ low-key luxury in the 30s. The décor features opulent wood in a variety of natural, black and ash oak paved with bronze for a modern twist serving as a showcase for the 2300 bottles displayed on the ground floor...But the grands crus are tucked away from prying eyes behind a glass and bronze door. The space gives pride of place to Emil Humbert and Christophe Poyet’s signature quality materials with black marble inlaid flooring, Versailles parquet and copper inserts.

The trend chapters this year bring together the crème-de-la-crème of the design industry, sharing their expertise on a multitude of design disciplines. This includes insights into spa design, the continuing popularity of innovative office spaces, both at work and at home, yacht and chalet design for those away-from-home moments and also offers a perspective on the design industry from a global stance.
Today residential design is pushing boundaries in a highly competitive market. In the past five years the residential market has changed considerably. Five years ago developers would play it safer and consider an investor market. Now even investors expect to see something different and innovative for specification and show home design, because the competition is so high. It may be, for a show house, that investors still prefer a slightly safer option as they’re not the end user. But the end user is always the key component when creating an interior design scheme. So it is important to cater for their needs and create a space that they want to be in.

By Helen Fewster and Rebecca Tucker Co-Founders, Suna Interior Design

Suna Interior Design is an award-winning boutique interior design consultancy. Helen Fewster and Rebecca Tucker head up the London-based studio ensuring that a high level of attention is dedicated to each client and project. Suna Interior Design has worked on numerous projects from four storey townhouses to beautifully refurbished apartments, exclusive serviced apartments, marketing suites and luxury hotels. Suna Interior Design are involved in the whole design process, subtly steering the final designs towards specific target markets, from quirky, eclectic refurbished units to classic and contemporary designs. Suna Interior Design are involved in the whole design process, focusing on all aspects of interior design from furniture, fixtures and fittings (FF&E) to interior specification and the final design and fit-out. The company also has a ‘Design for CGI’ service, a partnership with visualisation companies where Suna Interior Design create interiors which are then used to create bespoke CGIs. Here Helen and Rebecca take a look across the residential landscape.
Previously we were briefed to cater for a much broader, catch-all market that could include downsizers, professionals and young couples. All in one development, providing for everyone and not being too statement driven.

Today we’re much more likely to target into that market place, be more specific. We are more likely to be briefed that ‘the target market is X and we’d like to have a design created with that in mind.’ There is a much wider variety of developers who are doing this and who specialise in different sectors of the market. Developers are stepping up to the mark. We should mention that we’re referring to our client base which is mostly based in the South East. And while London generally leads trends we imagine that bigger cities will follow, but that this trend is mainly a market driven scenario – to a lesser extent the rest of the country will follow. It’s also based on success if you’re in a market where you are doing something safe but its working and you’re selling then why change? Developers respond to their market. You have to target what you’re selling to the buyer, it’s the only way to sell. If they want safe, give them safe. If they want quirky, give them quirky.

Developers have created their own brands. This brand symbolises what they stand for and is reflected in their developments. A company such as Mount Anvil, for example, always want to stand out as a creative company. So what they’re doing is something that is really discerning and really considered. When we’re designing we have to design as much for their brand and product as for the end user; while incorporating current trends. There are different weights that you have to give to different aspects and Mount Anvil is actually a key example where their brand is probably the prime element that we design towards, however they are all about their target market, it’s what they and their brand stand for.

Marketing suites have also come a long way. Today they are really impressive, where as previously they were just an office where you sold developments. If you look at them today they are the absolute first point of contact with your purchaser. So making sure that they reflect the same design ethos that your show home and development does is really important. It is the first point of contact with a development.

Developers, especially those specialising in the higher end of the private sales market, are really aware of how much they need to invest in their marketing suites. They see it in their competition and so need to do the same in order to stay in the game.

Technology-wise, in terms of selling, these days you don’t get a marketing suite with all the boards with red stickers on. You get interactive models and devices with less desk based selling. Marketing suites are a lot more inviting with intimate areas where purchasers can feel welcomed and comfortable. For example in London Square’s The Star & Garter marketing suite there is a champagne bar, a living-room style seating area with luxurious sofas and a separate, more intimate space for sample selections. There is only one desk, a reception desk which is a ‘greet’, with the private offices being downstairs and out of sight. That is really important, marketing suites have really moved on from the two desks in a porta-cabin situation. Another good example of a marketing suite is located at Mount Anvil’s Dollar Bay development. This is a great example of what good design can do in a small space. The marketing suite was essentially the size of a porta-cabin. But you’d be hard-pressed to call it that now. It is a stylish room with floor to ceiling windows on two walls and is an ideal space to welcome potential customers.

The shift in the housing market has facilitated this growth in competition and has meant that developers, rather than do something generic, are much more honed in on their specific purchaser. From a design perspective this equates to a more target specific brief.

There is also the shift in and growth of shared ownership properties and that is an absolutely targeted market. You know that you’re selling to first-time buyers and you know that you can pin down the design side of that.

In order to continue to innovate in the residential sector we visit a variety of exhibitions: Milan, Paris and all of the London shows. Being in London really helps because you can tap into what’s happening, see and be aware of the trends. For example, visiting new hotels and getting a first-hand experience of hotel design. Blogs and the internet are also fantastic resources and enable us to have access to worldwide design ideas.

As a company we started off mainly designing show homes. But as an interior design company who work predominately with property developers we’ve tried to provide a service that fills all of their design requirements. We design marketing suites, show homes, specification and we’ve also got Design for CGI which is quite a new and fresh element of our business and which is being taken up by more and more of our clients. We have innovated the company to meet the needs of our clients. Some of the most popular requests from clients when beginning a new residential project are that they want something that feels more unique and individual. More relevant to the micro-market that they are targeting. Clients look to us to innovate them. At the end of the day we are specialised in one of the aspects of what they do (that they don't specialise in) and they come to us for that expertise. Our job is to advise our clients on the elements that are new, what to trust and where to lay your hat. For example, on the specification side we’ve been to several meetings where the clients are excited about copper as the ‘new’ metallic. But actually in our experience it’s the one metallic that will come and go and for that reason you don’t want to specify it because it’s a bit of a ‘now’ trend.
that will wear away versus being something that will stand the test of time. We have the knowledge to be able to advise on that and ensure that the client doesn’t make mistakes with elements such as that. We’re future-proofing their projects for them.

If we were to offer any advice to other designers embarking on a new design journey with a private residential client, we would suggest that the designer must take into account what the client wants and how the client will live in the space.

Guide someone into the correct decision. You want to make sure that you’re listening to and designing to the brief but that you’re also providing and creating the right aesthetic for them.

Pushing the knowledge boundary and enabling the client to go out of their comfort zone.

Looking forward to 2017, we feel that in residential design, technology will continue to innovate. Technology, as we know, is constantly evolving and changing the way that we live. It drip-feeds into the residential sector. Elements that we are already specifying such as USB points for charging your phone are almost already starting to become obsolete as now people are using wireless charging. Technology is constantly moving on.

Another area that we think will grow in 2017 has to do with the specification side of interior design. Recently we have been working on far more optimisation – optimising the layouts of the apartments to ensure that they (the interiors) function to the best possible use. We work from the inside out (versus architects who work from the outside in). It’s a symbiotic relationship.

Finally, while we’re looking towards the future, it’s pertinent to mention that we see PRS (Private Rented Sector) as a rising star in the residential design sector. It is quite a separate way of designing and is an element that will hit the market and evolve. As housing becomes more expensive, people will be looking at renting as a choice, rather than as a fall-back. So there is a need to design specifically for that. Historically there are quite a lot of companies that bought up residential developments and then decided to rent them out. These were designed for private sale but, then they were rented out. This is fine, but obviously they weren’t designed with that in mind. There is a big difference now, these whole buildings are being designed to provide community space with café areas, lounge areas and to make it an appealing option that is a lifestyle choice. Rather than just ‘I can’t afford to buy’, it’s ‘I want a new kitchen every 15 years’ and ‘I want someone else to maintain the property’ and ‘I also want to know the people in the building, to have a community’. PRS actually promotes the sense of community with social, interactive spaces.

I believe the interior architecture industry changes constantly as clients have increasingly high demands and expectations from their environments. At Winch Design, we work across yachts, aviation and architectural projects for clients who now want the same design approach, bespoke interior and quality of detail across all environments, whether on land, at sea or in the air. This has been perhaps the most important change in recent years at the very top end of the market.

Another aspect that I believe has changed recently is the inclination towards a more personalised interior and away from a house style. Our clients come to us because they know we can make their dreams come true.

Simon has been heading up the architecture team at Winch Design since 2008, having previously worked on high end resort hotel and private residential projects for international clients around the world. Simon trained and qualified as an architect in 2005 and gained many years of international experience prior to joining Winch Design. He heads up a team of twelve and also works closely with the dedicated Interiors Team at Winch Design to deliver global projects often on an ambitious scale. Simon and the team have recently completed one of the largest private homes in London and are currently working on several projects including an iconic yacht club in Montenegro, a chateau in Europe, a boutique resort property in The Seychelles and a contemporary residence in Cape Town. Simon's design ethos is driven by clarity of thought, attention to detail and a considered approach to the use of materials. Here, Simon combines this detailed process with his knowledge of interior architecture.
whatever their particular style, lifestyle and aspirations. We are currently working on creating a contemporary property situated on a very steep site on the Atlantic Seaboard in Cape Town, an iconic yacht club in Montenegro, a magnificent chateau in Europe and an Art Deco inspired interior for a superyacht. Each project has different points of reference and is authentic in its execution. We are involved from the first creative discussion to filling the drawers in the kitchen and every step in between. We create every aspect from carefully designed floor plans through to bespoke bed linen, silk rugs and personalised china. We travel with the client to source artworks, and spend many hours with them understanding their lives, so that every last detail works perfectly for them, from measuring how they like their towels folded to ensuring the unit in the bathroom is the correct size, to replicating a design element across fabrics, marquetry and furnishings. We visualise and plan how they will use the space and how we can create a seamless flow throughout.

We are in a privileged position at Winch Design, because our heritage in yacht design means that we fully understand the symbiotic relationship between form and function. Our interior architecture projects combine the highest levels of design excellence and technological advances, for example cantilevering a swimming pool from a rock face or creating an architectural design that borrows certain principles of building a yacht to create a curved structure. The challenges we face are related to the sheer scale of many of the projects we are working on, primarily the reality of creating a vast and complex project from scratch in a different country or accessorising the interior of the largest superyacht on the water. Our client base is so varied, we literally don’t know how each project will start! I think our clients expect a great deal from us because of the work we have done over the years, so their expectations are high from day one. The one thing that all of our clients request is an environment which is bespoke, authentic and created for their varied and busy lifestyles. We have a reputation for creating some breath-taking staircases whether on a yacht or an architectural project so this can often be a conversation starter. The element of authenticity is also key, with clients wanting their interiors to tell a story that is relevant to them and to be surrounded by things, which have an interesting provenance. We spend a huge amount of time working with craftspeople around the globe to create the most beautiful interior possible.

When advising other designers, perhaps new to the industry, we would always say it is important to spend time really getting to know each client and to always keep an open mind. We don’t dictate to our clients, as our approach is to interpret their dreams and aspirations in the best way, rather than telling them how they should live. In this business, trust in the working relationship is perhaps the most important aspect and once established, the possibilities are limitless.

I believe there are two defining trends for 2017, which are very different. Firstly, personalisation and ultra-luxe environments. As the world’s wealthiest become even wealthier, the trend for the most extravagant and detailed design and finishes will become even stronger. This is not necessarily about a more flamboyant style, more about the craftsmanship, materials used and hours spent in creation to arrive at a unique and totally bespoke look. At the other end of the scale, I believe a natural, pared-back aesthetic will drive design in 2017. Taking inspiration from natural forms, textures and materials, creates a calm, timeless appeal. We are using this inspiration for the yacht club in Montenegro that we are currently designing.

The overall shortage and rising cost of space has led to an almost universal fixation on the per square foot (or metre) price in property, both in terms of purchasing and build or fit out costs. I have found this to sometimes be an inaccurate and rough measure on the overall quality of the space, as equating things on a strictly square foot basis doesn’t take into account volume, quality of light, flow or proportion. Interestingly there is now more of a focus on cubic size and some estate agents plans now show ceiling height along side room dimensions. I think this will become more prevalent and cubic measures along side things like natural light ratio will be increasingly used to equate the value of property. We found this to be the case of a current project we’re working in Notting Hill where our clients are undertaking a basement excavation and rear extension to a traditional townhouse. Often with these houses the rear of the property is on a half landing and a different level to the main floors. In this case the clients wanted a master suite on the first floor with bedroom, ensuite and dressing all on the same level. The architects found a very clever way of doing this but it meant the client would have to sacrifice the 2nd floor half landing. They decided it was worth it and have foregone the extra square footage to have their dream bedroom, which will be a stunning space. We have recently designed a ‘micro apartment’ in Ladbroke Grove, which was really interesting to work on. With space at such a premium there is a need to make small spaces functional, and more importantly comfortable and enjoyable to live in. Our brief was to create an engaging space that advocates considered, small-scale living. Beyond the primary practical and aesthetic considerations we explored how a space could promote wellness through design. We fitted integrated air filtration into the joinery to clean the interior air and used all natural paint and only naturally occurring raw materials and no VOCs. Human centric lighting was designed with deliberate attention towards the colour temperature of the light, as well as the lumens. It is a very interesting time for interior lighting with a focus on both the affect it has on spaces and the people who use them. Light has a massive power to engage and energise, or, relax and calm, and new technologies in lighting control can make spaces more flexible and intuitive. The office landscape has changed significantly in recent years affecting the way spaces look and function. The move away from the conventional cubicle office layout and with companies increasingly conscious about what their space says about them has led to exciting and innovative design. People working in more open plan configurations means space needs to be adaptable and multifunctional. The ability to compartmentalise an area to meet privately or make phone calls are important and quiet booth or zones are increasingly in demand against the backdrop of bustling open plan offices. Ceiling height is particularly in focus with office spaces, with tenants willing to pay substantial premium for tall open spaces. In recent years the influx of design blogs and particularly Pinterest have helped design ideas and trends spread. Clients are now very well researched in how they want their spaces to look and feel and I find this is particularly Relevant with joinery details and clever uses of space. If there are specific spatial characteristics to their property, for example a pitched roof, or atrium, a client will often have seen or been inspired by a similar space. It can also help us as designers to promote brave decisions and ideas by showing other examples. Well thought out joinery is always a popular request as people look to maximise storage and make the space work as well as it can. We are lucky to work with some wonderful joiners and workshops that love the challenge of creating beautiful and bespoke joinery pieces. One in particular was a boat builder for many years and taking that craft and design mentality and applying it to a residential or commercial setting really helps maximise space.

If designing with limited space I would say start with a clear brief and understanding of living habits. Think about how your clients want to live in a space and what your clients’ routines and journeys through the space will be like. Make the space work in the first instance with an optimum layout and then move towards palettes and finishes.

The international design landscape has changed tremendously over recent years. I suppose the dramatic change is not solely relegated to the design industry. The world has become incredibly small. As a result of the possibilities of 'working from anywhere' movement is constant. Outstretch of client reach is without boundaries. It is an exciting time where being based in one location and working in another is becoming more common.

I like to think that John Lennon’s vision can become a reality in our modern world that has become more and more connected through technology and social media streams.

As a New York native based in London, at first I noticed a lot of differences between the design worlds. For starters the measuring system is different from imperial to metric, different currencies, different procedures and building codes. Now I am fortunate to see the similarities. I have a very international client base so the differences are more about their wants and needs for their property as opposed to colour or regional trends. Contacts and connections and cross-pollination is so readily available that you can see the inspiration of certain regional designs and patterns being re-interpreted and infused into many homes. My work is mainly based in London with a contemporary international clientele so the infusion of different styles is greeted with open arms. I am currently working on a traditional Balinese beach house in western Africa. The clients and I wanted to ensure the buildings were authentic so I have been working with builders and suppliers in Bali, Indonesia, to create ornate carved stone panels, raised column plinths, traditional woven roofing, and highly considered detailing throughout. The project will incorporate traditional Balinese planning principles to carry the concept from plan through to finishes. The way I have been innovative in this sector has been all about the process. It has been about bringing people and teams together. When I first started working internationally I was working on a complex project just outside Moscow. The clients hired a translator so I could communicate my ideas to the contractor’s, consultants, structural and mechanical engineers. It only took moments for the translator to fall silent. As we all had our pens on paper and...

it didn’t matter so much that I was in Russia, we could have been in a meeting in London or New York in my native tongue. The ideas and concepts were coming across. We could communicate through drawings and numbers. It was then I realised this would not hinder the project but help it. It meant my drawings needed to be as clear and concise to translate the ideas on paper.

We communicated through the universal language of numbers and drawing. We were all connecting through the power of lines. This allowed me to realise that I could be setting this as the premise of the global communication foundation. Knowing that we share more similarities than differences. This has allowed me to work on projects with teams throughout the UK, USA, Africa, Europe, and Indonesia.

My critical advice to designers before embarking on projects abroad would be to be mindful of the different currencies, VAT obligations, and import and export regulations in each country. I have found working in cross currencies to be the most difficult aspect. Identifying if you are comparing like costs with all fees inclusive. There are a lot of hidden and unknown additional costs that need to be factored in, especially when shipping materials from suppliers that may not be readily available in the country you are working in or when particular materials being imported have high taxation rates. It is also important to find a local team that you can work with to help identify any local planning and building regulations that may differ.

I continue to see the incorporation of more sustainable building methods, advanced lighting and technology being seamlessly infused into interiors, and stronger and more infused connection between the building core and its interiors creating more holistic and seamless designs. On the softer side of the interiors, natural materials and colours will dominate. As clients and society as a whole are becoming more aware of what they are putting in their bodies, they are also becoming more aware of what they are putting in their homes. I like to use the least toxic materials, which means staying away from synthetics and any strong chemicals found in certain paints, lacquers, and sprays.

Kitchens often include a family living space and we spend more time in them than any other room in our homes. They should therefore take prime position in a house and have the best views, the best light and the best access to outside space. The rooms we relax, play, eat and entertain in should also be prioritised in terms of budget. Formal dining rooms have become largely redundant and many people prefer to create a large kitchen/dining and family room instead. The challenge is how to make the most of the available space and ensure that it is well integrated with the rest of the house. Planning is essential for any room, particularly for a multi-functional kitchen, which needs... to work at a spiritual and aesthetic level as well as a practical one. Before any planning can start, it is vital to understand how the space will be used by everyone in the family. Good design results from conversation and close collaboration with all involved. Unusual requests or difficult site conditions can often produce unique and surprisingly successful solutions, so challenges can be good. However, to be really successful it is important to give a kitchen and dining space a character and an identity, which reflects the lives and personalities of the people using it. Modern, contemporary and clean spaces are fine for people who are extremely tidy and have no children, but for messy creative people like myself, they simply do not work. If mess is an inevitable part of day-to-day life, then a more casual and traditional design will help to absorb at least some of it. The Modern Movement loved the idea of flexible space and open-plan living, but having experimented with this for so long, people now realise how impractical large spaces can be especially in Britain where our temperate climate throws up issues with heating. Sometimes you need privacy, even within the family, and the cosiest rooms are often quite small. So it is no surprise that the trend towards bigger and bigger kitchens has ended. The team at Studio Indigo is heavily influenced by Sir John Soane, who created varied and interesting spatial forms and always aimed to maximise light. We aim to increase the perception of space and light while also using barrel vaulted ceilings, apsidal shapes and bay windows to add character and help to create an identifiable space. Great care is also taken to ensure there is a natural flow throughout the house and, as the core of a home, the kitchen needs to be seamlessly linked to the other rooms. A kitchen is now usually part of a bigger family space and we often ask clients to consider adding a scullery (that lovely old-fashioned word) to house the dishwasher and maybe an extra fridge and the washing machines. It can be a great space for dumping the debris after dinner, so you do not have to sit and look at all those dishes which need to be washed up. Bars and stools make a great place to have a quick breakfast...

first thing in the morning and they also come into their own in when people want to chat to the whoever is cooking. They also provide a work space, so make sure there are plenty of power points and a really good internet connection. Wireless charging or docking stations help to keep the tangle of leads from mobile phones and tablets at bay. Dining spaces now tend to be more informal and while it should be possible to dress the table up for when family and friends come around, it needs to be robust and practical for everyday use. Like the bar, it is often used as a large desk by adults as well as by children doing their homework, so choose materials and fabrics that can take a knock or two.

Lastly, the family area has to be large enough for all members to relax in. It needs to allow them to gather around a fire or the TV in comfort. Again, the style should reflect the family’s personality and the materials and furniture should allow everyone to relax without feeling too precious about things. Since it will probably be the main living and entertaining space, be bold and confident about how it is decorated, give the room character and make the most of its potential.

With commercial and hospitality spaces practicality is the key request in bathroom design. Clients not only want their bathrooms to look good, but also function well and be relatively easy to maintain as they have heavy traffic. Are the products easy to clean? Are the spare parts for plumbing easy to get a hold of? Are the materials durable? One thing commercial and residential clients have in common lately is they both want their bathroom designs to stand the test of time. No one wants to be redecorating the space every two to three years. My residential clients are requesting more industrial style bathrooms with more metal details, taps and exposed basins.
Technology and lighting has evolved much more in the past decade in the bathroom industry. Not only is there a larger variety of both on the market, but they are much more affordable and easier to get hold of. Things like underfloor heating have become standard features and the variety of LED lighting options are mind blowing. In terms of bathroom products, there have been numerous new entrants who have introduced various exciting baths, showers, basins, taps etc. to the market.

One of the driving changing factors is how much clients travel nowadays and this means they are witness to a lot of innovative designs whilst staying in hotels. A lot of these client’s now want their bathrooms at home to feel like hotel bathrooms in terms of functionality, looks and wow factor.

The hospitality sector I believe, leads the way in bathroom design. The whole integrated home automation movement comes from hotels and clients seem to want this in their homes. Bathroom designs are limited compared to other parts of the house, however limitations often lead to inspired and innovative designs. I like to play with different metal finishes when choosing brassware rather than the standard nickel and chrome finishes. I really like to work with Waterworks and Watermark.

Living in London, storage space is a premium and as designers, we always have to find innovative ways to create storage without upsetting the aesthetics of the bathroom design. I like to create shelving units and drawers with stone fronts as it creates a seamless and minimal look and eliminates the use of wood in the bathroom. My client’s like to feel like they have something no one else has, so I always try to source unusual stones.

One thing I have noticed in the past few years is that the quality of porcelain tiles has really improved. It is now virtually impossible to tell the difference between some natural stones and porcelain tiles. Porcelains allow for more flexibility as they come in infinite sizes and weigh much less than natural stones. As they generally tend to cost less money and are easier to install, we are able to give our clients the ‘organic’ look for much less money. There are also a lot more interesting IP rated lighting products on the market as opposed to a few years back, when this sector of the market was often overlooked, but I’m pleased furniture companies are paying more attention to this nowadays. From minimal hidden LEDs to the elaborate decorative lights, there seems to be something on the market to fit most design schemes.

Clients now want their bathrooms to serve as an oasis of calmness and tranquillity. To achieve this feeling, we look to spa designs as our inspiration.
The layout, colour scheme, materials and lighting have to be spot on and in line with what they have experienced in the wellness spaces they have experienced.
Designing bathrooms appears easy to most people, but they are actually quite complicated. One has to have basic plumbing and electrical knowledge in order to work out the best positions to place bathroom products. My advice to fellow designers is to try to understand your client’s brief and expectations for the space. What are their needs, how will they use the space and how do they live? These questions are very important when deciding on layouts, lighting, and storage space etc. Once the practical elements have been pinned down, then the aesthetics come in to play.
Thinking about industry talent, I’ve seen a couple of bathrooms that have impressed me recently, I’m not quite sure if the designers are new or not. Maddux creative and Ekaterina Fedorchenko designed some bathrooms that received a lot of press and were really quite detailed and beautiful. I enjoy the bathrooms designed by Joseph Dirand, the understated simplicity of his work is very inspiring to me.

Our clients are purveyors of the ‘special something’ and so ask us for designs and concepts that are unique, collectable and crafted. Everyone is looking for something special, something that resonates with their personality, communicates a sense of style and fits their lifestyle. Furniture does this in a multitude of ways. Clients are looking for handcrafted, natural and emotive pieces; furniture, which is less about production and more about narrative. They want less product and more experience. There is an increasing desire to learn, to get involved and understand the reasoning behind a solution or a technique, clients are now far more engaged in the design and production that goes Christopher Jenner established his London based studio in 2010. Born in South Africa, he studied fine art at the Johannesburg school of the Arts, and design at The Boston School of design. He has travelled the world extensively, living and working in Paris, Tel Aviv and Hong Kong. This period of exposure to divergent cultures and traditions continues to exert an influence on his work. Almost immediately the studio enjoyed the patronage of brands looking to connect with their clients on a deeper emotive level. Christopher’s design process considers heritage, tradition and positioning within his work, resulting in projects that capture narrative through his distinct style. Currently the studio is working with a number of lifestyle and luxury brands. The scope of these projects includes interiors, product collections and packaging, thus helping his clients to convey the sensory connections so essential to differentiating themselves. Alongside his work with brands Christopher is working on a series of his own projects to be exhibited in leading contemporary design galleries. Here, Christopher conveys his thoughts on furniture as more of an understanding between client and designer, than a fixed, one thread trend for a season.

into crafting furniture. They are savvy and intelligent to it and their expectations should be met with wonderful furniture designs. Some of the biggest changes in interior design that demonstrate a shift are that interiors are more directional, less about a theme and more about a sense of style and curation. Simply anything goes if you know how to choose it, clients are more aware of this and have a greater sense of their own identity, they’re looking to collaborate with designers and not necessarily be dictated to. Their requirements are more specific, more directional and they know what they want. This has really changed the way we as designers approach things. The first concept considerations for a piece of furniture are very ‘project specific’. It completely depends on what we’re working on at the time. It could be a desire to explore a new shape, gain a deeper insight into a material or learn more from a traditional craft. Lately I’ve been working on a series of projects exploring traditional English crafts, this is interesting and challenging, you’re coming up against tried and tested processes with new contemporary thinking and asking artisans to lend themselves to something which can be quite alien. The challenge here is taking something essentially traditional and giving it a new perspective. I can’t say it’s the ‘technique’ or the ‘idea’ which is pre-eminent I feel both are equally valuable. There is a very fluid relationship between ideas from the cross section of design arenas, everything is related. Although I’m anti-trend, it does seem the world works in this way; things seem to appear in phases where various materials and forms and finishes, from interiors to lighting to furniture find a window at the same moment. The current trend is towards a more functional home environment, where experience and connection are the focus over ownership. This is dictating a more linear and minimalistic trend in furniture design. There’s a play on pattern, materials and relationships, which is fresh and current.

I relate innovation to technology, but it’s also applicable to craft and more traditional techniques. To continue innovating, we need to respect all of these elements.

As a studio we’re committed to finding the answers to our questions though the use of cutting-edge visualisation and 3D modelling software (I’m not sure how we’d be able to work without it) and, while I’m useless at it, my team are incredibly talented individuals. Combining new, technologically driven manufacturing techniques, like CNC, to classic materials allows one to change perceptions and create pieces that are ‘out of the box’ LED has had a profound effect on the way we use light, it’s absolutely unlimited with incredible potential to change our notion of the possible.

At the start of any design journey with a client, it is really about the relationship and how that develops, as it creates the foundation for everything else. If you’re going to create something, which is unprecedented, then you need to set out on the journey together. We’re increasingly working with interior designers who approach us to design one-off pieces for their projects. Our repertoire of suppliers and techniques is incredible, and our ability to visualise sensational. Collaboration is very important; you want both parties to feel as though they own it. Considering residential and hospitality furniture design, while both embody a sense of identity, there are distinct differences between the two. Residential projects are a personal expression of a client, whereas commercial projects are about building the brand narrative, ensuring customers connect with a predetermined set of values. Commercial projects are more analytical, whereas private project are more emotional.

In 2017 there will be lots of innovation in the sector, an increasing marriage between tradition and technology, with designers challenging materials, forms and shapes.

Clients are typically hesitant to experiment with colour, and would rather employ a safe, muted colour scheme. I call for a revival in the confident use of colour, and encourage clients to challenge their immediate perceptions and move away from neutral interiors that rely on safe palettes. Although clients often enter an interior project seemingly scared of colour, it is most likely to be the most colourful spaces that they prefer.

I believe changes in fashion and art trends impact changes in interior design, and have recently encouraged bolder use of colour. Living in a world of ever-changing and diversifying possibilities and growth, nothing remains frozen, and people want to keep moving and changing in every aspect of life.
I have also noticed a dramatic change to take place in the kitchen. As the kitchen has gradually become the heart of the home, and an important social area of the home, clients seek more interesting design ideas in which case I encourage adding colourful splashbacks and units.
In the same way that the fashion industry has seasons, so does interior design. Colour trends in fashion design inform clients decisions and tastes in interiors, and are subsequently interpreted in an interior setting. This applies to fabrics too, with recent fashion trends incorporating plastic into design. Previously plastic would not have been considered in any design discipline, yet this inexpensive material has become fashionable, is durable, robust and ideal for high-use areas of the home.
Colour, and the actual application of it, is a great way to express personality and create innovative spaces. In terms of actual colour, I love to experiment with neon paint, as this is unusual, bold and fun and can brighten up any space. I applied this exact scheme to a guest bathroom in a Chelsea project, by adding bold neon bursts of colour on edges that are noticeable, yet not overwhelming.
A great product of innovation is in the choices of where to apply colour, such as flooring and ceilings.
I also find that adding small bursts of colour maximises an otherwise unused space into a sociable and informal meeting place. I often find myself chatting and laughing with my children on the staircase outside all of our rooms, it is important for it to feel vibrant and welcoming as it keeps the energy flowing throughout the house. That’s why I always favour a bright and colourful runner, which we can all appreciate, it encourages us to spend more time out of our bedrooms and more time appreciating our home.
When introducing colour into a hospitality project, we need to consider colours that match the specific needs of the space. When introducing colour into a hospitality project, we need to consider colours that match the specific needs of the space.
Colours influence mood, so this needs to adhere to the brief of the hospitality space. A rich burnished orange for instance, creates a different environment to mood-boosting tangerine.
For clients unfamiliar and inexperienced in experimenting with colour, I suggest gently easing into using them. I advise selecting one strong principal shade to add a pop of colour to temporary statement pieces of furniture, such as cushions, throws or lampshades, as an innovative and contemporary way to introduce colour into your home with ease and flexibility. By experimenting with unexpected colour combinations and adding dynamic accents for accessories, you can create fun personal design statements that provide perfect opportunities for confident colour choices and can be changed accordingly. The next step would maybe be to try applying colour to a wall!

We advise also exploring colour in a room less frequently used, I often suggest a guest bathroom as a great place to experiment with colour and be bold. This is an ideal space to introduce colour as a starting point in the home. When clients become more confident in applying colour to the home, we suggest various tips and techniques for creating the perfect balance of colour, such as selecting one dominant colour to apply throughout the main surface areas of the space, such as floors and ceilings to create a coherent scheme.

Combining harmonious colours in the same colour family is key to creating a complimentary interior; hot pinks pair well with vivid purple, emerald green works well with rich turquoise and sunny yellow paired with uplifting orange is always a fantastic match.

I encourage clients to experiment with tones by combining darker shades with brighter shades or monochrome with bursts of contrasting colour. I always advocate the use of certain colours that I feel are under-used in design, such as orange. White walls and basins are banished throughout our projects. We suggest rather replacing white basins with nickel for instance, as an alternative to brighten up a space with colour and an interesting finish to represent the personality of each client.

Applying colour to residential and hospitality projects differ greatly. A residential project reveals personality and encourages braver choices in colour to meet personal taste. Hospitality projects however typically employ soft, recognisable and neutral colours in order to appeal to a mass-market taste. I however prefer to steer away from this colour trend, as I believe that people are more likely to appreciate bold colours that will have a long lasting impact, especially if they are in contact with the space for a short amount of time.

I predict that 2017 will welcome a range of green and pale pink tones. Green has a hugely positive impact on mood and is associated with organic and ecological notions, creating the feeling of healthy nature creeping into the home. Pale pink achieved by setting plaster is one of my favourite colour techniques. This will be used in upcoming projects, as it creates a soft, serene atmosphere that mixes well with other colours, and is therefore easy to work with and build upon.

The lighting industry now is far more competitive, which is an advantage for end users, architecture and design, and for the lighting design industry as a platform for opportunity. An award-winning lighting designer, with over 18 years’ experience, Paul established Nulty+ in 2011 to explore and push the boundaries in lighting design. He has worked on a variety of prestigious and award winning projects across many sectors, including commercial, residential, retail and hospitality and combines a creative edge with an eye for detail and an understanding of how lighting impacts atmosphere, mood and ultimately behaviour. A theatrical lighting background gives him a unique appreciation of the relationship between space and light. Here, Paul talks about the coming of age for the lighting industry.

The lighting industry now is far more competitive, which is an advantage for end users, architecture and design, and for the lighting design industry as a platform for opportunity. We are really starting to come of age; residential developers, retailers, those managing hospitality are no longer accepting lighting solutions as bolt-ons and while this might mean additional budget, there is a real understanding of how light can transform a space. Historically, there has been a skills gap at the top of the industry but due to this nascent industry becoming more mainstream the gap is being filled by extremely creative, design-led and even science and tech-led people who feel that lighting design is an increasing area of opportunity. It’s an exciting time to experiment and forge partnerships with other industries.

In terms of luminaries we’re not really seeing anything new. There has been a trend over the past two or three years for LED Retrofit bulbs matching those of incandescent quality, giving the old-style bulbs a similar quality to current light technology.

Visually, influenced by the trend for minimalism and the atmosphere of Victorian industrial, the incandescent lamp has become a staple, Hipster hang-outs inspired by the Manhattan bare brick, loft and warehouse scene are still tapping into the popular lighting look. It is through technology that the industry is experiencing the most change. Technology is embracing the ‘internet of things’ and our daily tasks have been transformed into light controlled communications between us and what we own, such as turning on heating while not at home and receiving communication from the fridge that we’ve run out of butter. Light is also embracing this technology and can be used for security, guidance and personalisation by individually addressing and controlling luminaires how we want.

The tech sector is now looking to the lighting industry to help realise new techniques that will change the way we live. While this is fundamentally exciting for the industry, lighting designers are still committed to educating the wider architectural and design industry on the power of light and its effect on space, surfaces and materials and ultimately mood and behaviour.

The correct term for what we do should be light and dark designers because we understand the impact of light and shadow on textures around us. Light and materiality go hand in glove and by collaborating with interior designers and architects we can demonstrate how certain spaces, surfaces and materials are perceived in various degrees of light and dark.

One of the most significant changes within the commercial office sector is the development of flexible working. Much of today’s office space is open plan with collaborative working spaces positioned next to desks and desks running alongside breakout areas for relaxing. Light has come to replace the partition wall with shifts in tonality differentiating one space from another.

An increase in agile working has created a new type of hospitality, including members clubs and cafés that now need to accommodate daytime workers as well as night-time revellers within one space across 24 hours. To do this successfully the materials, walls and wider design of the interior needs to respond to the atmosphere. It is clever lighting that can enliven a space for a specific period of time before transforming that same space into one of intimacy without a need to change any of the furnishings. We all know lighting needs to be low energy, affordable and meet sustainability regulations. The difference today is it’s no longer simply about sustainability but about ensuring light is human centric, and this means exploring the impact of lighting on people and remediating any negative effects. The key word is wellbeing, especially in the commercial office sector, and one of the most effective ways to stabilise mood and behaviour is through the right lighting.

As designers we need to revise our approach towards lighting and embrace new technologies that can remedy the shortcomings of some light and lamps sources. It will require a higher degree of thought, creativity and detailing but this is why we are lighting designers. The challenge to use, revolutionise, and improve on what we have already achieved is what we do best. The result is that we will continue to shape mood and atmosphere across every sector, tuning events into positive experiences and in a way that is sustainable and affordable. A vital aspect of that innovation is to always be looking at the way people use light and dark and how they respond to it. My advice for designers and lighting designers collaborating together involves a balance of understanding and appreciation for both sides of the profession. To say don't be precious sounds dismissive of the incredible talent and hard work that designers have and undertake; it is not surprising they should feel protective of their work and not want the ‘lighting designer’ to start tweaking. But the aim of all lighting designers is to ensure the specific details designers want to bring to life are done so at every minute of the day. As the sun rises and falls and night time descends, shadow and light will transform a space; it is our role to ensure that the ideal is retained throughout.

It is the role of architecture and design (and that includes lighting design) to reinforce positive emotions across the brands and sectors of our clients and ultimately support their bottom line. This openness to collaborate from the outset and have a two-way discussion means we can make all the tools we have available work harder for us. I would also advise them to get excited; lighting design will never be a competition to interior design, we are partners that layer a space with mood. By working in collaboration with interior designers from early on in the design process, clients are getting a more holistic interior design concept. Light’s impact on behaviour is more recognised than ever, and this is being understood across all the sectors and will continue to be prevalent in 2017.

Retailers are aware they need to offer their customers something different if they are to compete with online shopping and now seek to deliver a brand experience to get shoppers back to the high street. This is exactly where retailers have the advantage; the opportunity to create an emotional connection between customer and product. Today’s customers don’t want a functional space that soullessly displays merchandise, they want to experience the brand and feel connected; the result is that lighting is now regarded as an effective branding tool.

Hospitality is still designing with extravagance in mind with an increasing number of super-designed bars where more money is spent on light fittings and the overall lighting design of spaces. Hospitality owners and interior designers are aware that lighting is one of the most influential features in this type of design, that it creates atmosphere and dictates behaviour and ultimately increases dwell time of customers.

Within commercial office, where wellbeing is at the forefront of employee retention, architectural lighting is used to create permeability and a sense of space to make the workplace a better and ultimately happier place to be. Today’s employers are all too aware that a ‘softer’ more aesthetic surrounding increases staff retention and well-being and ultimately benefits their bottom line in enhanced employee productivity.

I have always maintained that every end user has the power to be a lighting designer and improve their own spaces through the clever use of illumination. As the size of our homes shrink, this skill is even more valuable. Today’s home design tends to be minimalist and lighting should mimic this to make the design compatible and to increase the sense of space.

Comfort and practicality is always at the forefront of a client’s mind; they like to know how it will feel to sit and relax on a sofa. So we put together interesting textiles and textures that will both look and feel good in their homes. I like to combine unexpected textures, such as relaxed linen-upholstered chairs with a smooth leather bench to build layers in a room.

Our changing lifestyles means rooms are becoming increasingly multi-functional. These days we work from home and prefer more relaxed rooms with individual functions, separate dining and living room are less relevant and we prefer fluid and open-plan spaces. That blurring between public and private space means the design brief is twofold - a

Founder, Natalia Miyar Atelier

Natalia Miyar launched Natalia Miyar Atelier in Spring 2016. Natalia is led by her vision to create an international practice that spans London to Miami, and her passion for developing an own-brand studio. Natalia began her professional career as an architect, working with notable architectural firms in Miami. During eight years of study and six years in practice she developed a true love of materiality, space and proportion, which led naturally into design of the interiors. Several years on, her own interior atelier promises both a capacity for original, exciting design and the professional skill of a leading practice. Born in Mexico to Cuban American parents then relocating to Miami at the age of seven, travel and culture have always been central to her life. Her cultural identity is unique, mixed, and laden with inspiration, which fuels a love of texture, colour and the contrasts of the visual world. A degree in the History of Art and Architecture has inspired more than a lifelong interest, Natalia uses her knowledge to open up the art world to clients that do not have a collection to help then give a voice to what they like. Here Natalia talks about that love of materiality and guiding clients on their quest for beautifully upholstered homes.

Above: Natalia mixes textures and blurs the boundaries of formal and casual for a nuanced interior glamorous, stylish space also needs to be practical for everyday use. So we use more varied materials and incorporating patterns to build character in a space. The blend of contrasting textures creates tactility and comfort, two elements I feel are key to creating a nuanced and inviting interior.

Fashion and interiors are undoubtedly intertwined. Innovations in couture often inform trends in interior design. Both industries are strongly influenced by advancements in the technology industry, for example the theme for the Met Gala 2016 was ‘Man u x Machina: Fashion in an Age of Technology’ and provided a spectacular showcase of the rapprochement of hand-crafted couture and machine-made fashion. The same is happening in interior design and I love to juxtapose handmade embellishment techniques such as embroidery, pleating and lacework with designs made with new technologies like laser-cutting, thermo-shaping and 3D printing.

The innovation in my projects comes from making unexpected choices and transcending traditional rules when it comes to using materials. I have no qualms about upholstering casual furniture in silk for a polished, elegant look and contrasting this with a relaxed woven linen headboard for instance. Innovation comes not only from the making of a material but also in its application. At the start of any project involving new uses of textiles, I have a conversation with my client about how they plan to use a space and what materials mean comfort to them. I build on that and offer solutions in harmony with their brief but also my own ideas for making the space better. For example, a master bedroom should be a haven of tranquility and in order to create a cocooning feel I suggest a blend of tactile materials from the curtains to throws, cushions and an upholstered headboard.

The main difference in textile sourcing for hospitality and residential projects is the emphasis on durability of a material, as well as making sure that it meets health and safety requirements. Until recently, this limited flexibility and creativity but there has been a vast improvement in the variety of... beautiful fabrics made for hospitality use and I always aim to push the boundaries in hotel projects to create a memorable experience for guests.

The biggest idea in textile design for 2017 is a return to the expression of integrity of craftsmanship and specialist artisanal techniques fused with contemporary design. Craft allows for unparalleled flexibility in the use of colour and pattern to make one-of-a-kind creations for clients that have character and depth. It is this synthesis between contemporary design and craftsmanship with traditional detailing that excites me. It is a combination that I hope my interiors have too.

Thinking about new talent, I love the work of textile designer Georgia Kemball who I recently had the opportunity to meet at The New Craftsmen. Georgia creates beautiful handwoven textiles that celebrate a love of worn, aged fabric. She has developed her own process and technique of trapping threads between a stitched line to create the textiles and the colour and pattern possibilities are endless. I love the rawness of her work and the idea that fraying edges and loose threads show the love of an item where time has passed, ultimately adding to the beauty of a piece.

Each one of my clients are looking for art that tells their story and makes their place unique. Art adds soul to a space and heightens people’s emotional experience of it, helping to turn a space into a place that people call their own. It also gives brands and organisations the opportunity to connect with people at the very deepest level.

The most popular requests from my hospitality clients are twofold. The first is background art that sets a general tone and the second is focal point art that creates a stand out experience. Murals are always popular. They become the fabric of the space shape the character of the place more integrally than hung art, which maintains a degree of

Trend: Art in Interiors

By Natasha Hawtrey-Woore

Founder, Hawtrey Woore Design

Hawtrey Woore Designs’ aim is to touch people at the deepest level of design. The company works with creative talent from all disciplines to infuse environments with brand identity in a subliminal way. Natasha, at the helm of the business, helps her clients create uniquely beautiful experiences through interior design woven with art. She has a specific interest in the expression of identity through environments and what happens when the soul of a space is brought together with the soul of the people that live, work and play there. Prior to setting up her own studio, Natasha helped clients develop their brand identities and express them through their environments for several London based global design practices. Here, Natasha shares her expertise on the subject of art in interiors and how it heightens emotional experiences in its setting.
independence from its spatial context. There is also growing interest in dedicating a wall as a mural art space to be regularly refreshed and showcase new and emerging talent.

One of the biggest changes in the design industry, with regards to art, is the sheer amount of good design that’s out there, which makes it harder to stand out as an exceptional environment. Art is by its nature individual and it allows you to create a truly unique experience. It is then a natural development to incorporate more art into spatial design as a way of expressing clients’ individuality.

In the digital era that we are in, we are all seeking heightened physical experiences to counterbalance our screen based lives. In interior design it is no surprise then that colour and texture have been gathering increasing prominence. Art is the ultimate opportunity to bring colour and texture to the fore.

Perhaps the most interesting change of all and one that I have embraced wholeheartedly is the convergence of creative disciplines in the pursuit of place making. Historically, the nature of functional design was felt to be at odds with the artist’s interest in self-expression. Now, artists are keen to offer their interpretation of a client’s story and work with designers in bringing it into form. My starting point on any project is a design idea that encapsulates the client’s story and informs the design and materials as well as the art brief.

For a Hackney restaurant located in an old 1913 cinema, we wanted to evoke the feeling of old silver screen glamour in a laid back way so used appropriate black and white prints hung in a relaxed way around the restaurant perimeter.

For a recent restaurant project based in Walthamstow Village, the idea of ‘City meets Nature’ was inspired by the restaurant’s location on the edge of Epping Forest and led us to use Paul Tucker’s photographic essay ‘Quiet City’ with powerful images of the intersections between London and nature. As well as sourcing existing art for clients, I work with artists to develop installations. For the Walthamstow restaurant project, I worked with artist /maker Alex Mulligan to develop a light installation inspired by the ‘city meets nature idea’. The result was an urban bent wood approach to tree branches, spanning the ceiling of the bar. Functional art pieces are very much part of my design approach and I am currently collaborating with artist, Andrew Macgregor to create seating, surfaces and lighting as an extension of his pineapple paper sculptures.

When discussing art with my clients I am very straightforward. It’s a case of ‘love it or leave it’. If a piece speaks directly to your heart, it will find a place in your home. Always ask, what does it make me think and what does it make me feel? When art evokes a good feeling it will become a treasured piece that will travel you’re your clients throughout life.

I think it is so important to spend time with your client to understand their personal or brand story and boil it down to a vision or idea that will inspire the artist you’re working with. Introduce the client and artist to each other. This will excite the client and give the artist the opportunity to pick up on nuances that may trigger creative thoughts. Allow the artist the freedom to interpret the idea in their own way. Build a rapport with them so that you can maintain an on-going conversation about the development of the piece without stifling their creative freedom. This will ensure that what their work has a relevant part to play in telling the client’s story. Involve the client at key points so that they feel a connection with the piece by the time it is finished.

For 2017, convergence will see all creative disciplines working together to create art and a continued blurring of the lines between art and design. Art will become increasingly important in telling brand stories through environments and it will be a force for unifying all media in this creative storytelling. With this, we will see more functional art in the form of lighting and furniture.

Thinking about rising stars in art, I love Maarten Baas’s work, particularly his sculptural clay furniture and I look forward to seeing how he develops it further.

Some of the most requested items of AKA, with regards to bespoke made furnishings, revolve around organic elements. I am a nature lover, and as such a gardener at heart. So many of the chandeliers we make are born out of my love for branches and driftwood. But, how beautiful they become when electrified and with clusters of gemstones. Gilding the branches is a beautiful accompaniment to the gems we employ. We have made endless chandeliers, sconces, tables of every sort and mirror frames etc., with organic forms. The beauty of bespoke design and that intense level of craftsmanship is that you really can create anything the client wishes. Some of the biggest challenges and changes in interior design today come from the availability of products on the internet from China, India and a host of other sources worldwide. There are portals such as First Dibs, presenting wonderful treasures, allowing everyone to become a designer of sorts. A result of this is that there are more middle-of-the-road product made available in the market, as more people decide to try their hand at things. This is not bad, it’s just a driving force of our current economies, making the bespoke artists more and more rare. I think the proportion of great lines has become more visible in a way as they stand out in the crowd, but truly handmade artistry is also more elusive due to the cost to produce.

As a result of the market changes, and the knowledge base of production dropping due to the large number of first timers in the manufacturing field, many people are not perceptive of real value, true workmanship or craftsmanship, and the reliance on the knowledge of a truly great designer who understands the value of art, antiques and furnishings costs more by comparison.

Honoring the traditions of craftsmanship has become very expensive. So many artisans are gone. They existed in another era, their children no longer wish to work with their hands. So to produce beautiful things, it is up to you to hold every one’s feet to the fire, and gild, then re-gild, if it’s not right. In our acrylic workshops, it is always a challenge to improve on the past and make things to perfection. A great example is our new Sable and Chinchilla Acrylic. What we did not know was that there was a greater degree of fabrication difficulty with these new colors of acrylic. In addition to the increased cost of the raw material, the items were on the fabrication tables twice as long as their clear counterparts.

As a company of designers, we are poised perfectly to advise clients on introducing bespoke items into environments. As most of the objects we create are items that are rooted in classic forms, transitioned into modern materials, we are experts at blending the two seamlessly. Clever craftsmanship and dedicated bespoke design is so often about respecting the past and paving the way for the future. The changes in the way people purchase and use real estate throws a different light on the way we design bespoke pieces for our clients. I remember when people had a vacation home, a lake house, or a ranch. Now, people own all of the above at one time and then some. This is a huge amount of design work and clients can often become overwhelmed when trying to furnish them all with bespoke pieces and beautiful craftsmanship, that reflects their personality and lifestyle choices. The sheer size of spaces can also impact this. Sourcing and taking your time over the selections of pieces is key to getting it just right. Not everything has to have a high price tag but it must reflect the interior with consistency and bring something special to a room. This is what I see as the biggest change in the last two decades. I see people who want the homes to be stunning, but end up with a great percentage of the furnishings on a level that is not going to hold up forever. The dispensable design trend has also caused a shift in the way people appreciate design. As an American, I see this happen frequently. In Europe, the attitude has been more of permanence and quality.

With regards to home offices or studies, some clients are very knowledgeable about what they want; others need a brainstorm. Every client wants a workspace but that should double as an area for meetings, contemplation, or simply to meet and talk with friends over an exquisite cup of coffee. Often, the private club feel works best for studies and home workspaces. In our 30,000 sq ft home in Dubai, the study was inspired by a London members’ club. It needed to be timeless yet elegant, and innovate in terms of the clients’ expectations. So, we created a welcoming and intimate space, not clinical and office-like. The colour palette in this project was smoky, driven by the amber.

Formed by Alix Lawson and Charlotte Robb in 2003, Lawson Robb is an interior architecture and design studio, headquartered in London, whose clients are some of the world’s most prominent and influential families and businesses. Foremost artists and design forward thinkers, Lawson Robb delivers dynamic design leadership through a disciplined approach and thorough understanding of their clients’ expectations. They are committed to delivering seven-star service commensurate with their clients’ experiences. 80 per cent of their clients are international, based in London or with multiple homes around the world. Through longstanding client relationships, Lawson Robb challenges boundaries to create one-off, highly coutured, exciting, yet sophisticated and livable spaces. The studio’s free-form creative energy has its roots in a very clear and disciplined framework, producing timeless yet bold and energetic designs. Here, the studio at Lawson Robb provides some insight into this fast growing home office concept.

hues of cognac, fine Scotch, cigars or wine. As with a members’ club, the furniture is functional yet comfortable, so we specified big clubby chairs, tables with discreet storage, cigar boxes and drinks tables. Previously it was thought that you had to have a large home before you could accommodate a study or home office. Now, no matter the size, home offices and studies can be incorporated.

With modern life one wants the option of being able to work from home, whatever the work, whether as a parent or company director. One needs a space to write, think, contemplate, talk with friends. Also because some appointments have to happen at home during the working week, having the option to work efficiently from a dedicated space is essential. Studies can be created within a living for example using partitions, screens, curtains or shutters. Of course we design it with love so that even in the smallest spaces, one can have quality time.

Every project is different, charismatic and of course, personal to the client. The location provides a sense of place. A study in Dubai is bound to have a different approach compared with one in London. All these destinations command their own approach to materials or colour palette. From the Caribbean to Miami, we might incorporate linens, raffia carpets and a fresh colour scheme. In London however the tendency would be for rich British waxy leathers with a hint of suede and velvet. In the Middle East, inspiration can come from the beauty of the sand dunes or earth tones. But, sometimes clients want a mix of cultures and palettes, which is why we brought the British club look to Dubai.

We are creating a sense of visual drama in every new space and this is how we continue to innovate. Listening to clients’ stories helps us develop strong relationships and understand their motivations. The study then will reflect the colour, passion for materials and a sense of place for the location, whether that is overlooking the garden, ocean or even on the lower ground floor. The majority of our clients work from home, at least part of the time. Even if they don’t want a separate study, they will ask for a working area. This can work really well in bedrooms even, where the study area does not have to look as rigid as a desk; it can be whimsical, quite artistic and creative, where you can enjoy a cocktail as much as do some work.

Our key advice to other designers is to have fun designing the space. Every area should be treasured and functional yet stunning to have. Designers can play with materials and create a desk as a piece of art in the client’s home. In a corporate environment, office furniture needs to accommodate many workers and fit within the business style. The nature of one’s role, whether that is the legal or marketing team, has little bearing on the office look. But at home, which is your kingdom, or queendom, the study is very personal. You can be a makeup artist for example, surrounded by brushes and books, or a financier treasuring collections and objet d’arts. For 2017 I think we’ll see the number of those working from home continue to increase; whether you set up as an individual worker, or are able to work from home as part of a larger business. Being able to work from home also tends to serve the community better, with less transportation and traffic, and accommodating more flexible working patterns. Increasingly it will become a very important part of the house and therefore an integral part of the designers’ brief.

Through my practice, I meet clients from all walks of life, with different criteria, styles and tastes for their outdoor space. I have the privilege of designing their gardens, which gives me a thrill each time I succeed in making their garden work for them. As with architecture or interiors, each space needs to function and please each individual client, making every project bespoke. This is not only a welcome challenge, but also a wonderful opportunity to try various ideas and test my skills in design, learning something new each time.

Horticulture for me is a hidden gem, which I wish I had discovered earlier in life. The only horticultural activity I remember from school was... planting a sunflower seed in a polystyrene cup and watching it grow, which signifies how little emphasis was given to horticulture in the curriculum at the time. Had there been the opportunity to study it more, perhaps I would have arrived at my chosen career earlier in life, who knows? Without providing the next generation with exposure to nature and experience of horticultural pursuits, we aren’t giving them the chance to decide for themselves.

This is being acknowledged more nowadays, with organisations like the RHS championing initiatives like Horticulture Matters, a scheme to further integrate horticulture into education and get it recognised as a valuable career. Sue Biggs, Director General of the Royal Horticultural Society, wrote in the Horticulture Matters 2014 report “There is a growing crisis that is threatening our economy, environment and food security. This is the increasing lack of people joining the sector and the skills shortage that it brings.” This is relevant not only to the horticultural industry but to the country as a whole.

In my work, I notice at the grass roots level a lack of trained people to carry out maintenance for clients on completed gardens. Sadly, horticulture in all its forms has been a much maligned vocation over recent decades, where fast-paced developments in technology have enticed younger generations into a life away from the soil and the wonders that spring from it.

As an example to further compound this, in 2007 some of the words Oxford University Press no longer deemed relevant to modern-day childhood included acorn, adder, bluebell, buttercup, catkin, conker, dandelion, fern, hazel, heather, ivy, kingfisher, lark, mistletoe, nectar, newt, otter, pasture and willow, removing them from the Oxford Junior Dictionary. Some examples of the words taking their places in the new edition include attachment, block-graph, blog, broadband, bullet-point, celebrity, chatroom, committee, cut-and-paste, MP3 player and voice-mail.

In doing this, aren’t we removing an opportunity for children to learn about our natural world? These are the people who will grow up, influence and manage our world in years to come; what precedents are we setting? As someone within this industry, I can see that we're heading towards a potential catastrophe if more isn't done to encourage school leavers to consider horticulture, in one of its many forms, as a desirable career.

Horticulture is not the fallback for those that cannot do anything else; it's a career for enthusiastic and educated individuals wanting to make a difference.

Now that I am a landscape and garden designer, I passionately believe in the value of a well-designed garden, which not only adds value to a property, but also, and most importantly, enhances the quality of life of those who use it.

With every outdoor space we design, we have the opportunity to improve our environment, and in doing so, the world around us. We do this through the design decisions we make, the elements and materials we choose (and those we exclude), types of planting, and the consideration we give to wildlife, ecology, and water conservation in our design.

These things are more important than ever to consider; now and going forwards – as designers, we can make a relatively small but positive impact on global warming, ecology, and the environment. If we all work together, that impact could be huge.

When it comes to people's homes, they traditionally focus first on the fabric of their house, then the interior finishes, and lastly if we're lucky, the gardens. But the gardens can be equally as important in enhancing the enjoyment of the home. If architects, interior designers, and landscape designers work cohesively together to create living spaces, we could maximise the potential for our clients' enjoyment and in turn, our ultimate success. This can be done by linking finishes and materials between the house and garden, integrating the use of lighting, style and form, so they echo the interior within the garden. Views from the property into the garden and beyond could be utilised, bringing the garden into the house, and vice versa, producing one harmonious living space, rather than two disjointed ones.

A garden can offer so much to its user, extending their living space for entertaining and relaxing. From alfresco dining on a beautiful terrace to the cool shade of a pretty tree, growing food, sumptuous planting, ambient lighting and tranquil water features, the list is endless. A beautiful, well-designed garden will complement the architecture and interior of a house, while providing an outdoor space that can give so much enjoyment to its users.

The natural world is part of who we are, it's the core of our existence, and a precious resource to be preserved. It's crucial that we make it an essential part of every person's education and experience growing up, hopefully instilling a love of the outdoors and a respect and enjoyment of nature for generations to come.

Designing hotels, which are very special, is a tricky job. Hotels are large, complex, multi-faceted operations, which need a lot of thought, attention and care when designing. I travel a lot and so stay in a number of hotels and it still amazes me how often new hotels can get it so wrong; trying to be too clever, trying to be too many things and forgetting the core principles of comfort and operations. Whether you appreciate the design or not, great hotels should be judged on their comfort, quality of operating supplies and equipment, service and of course lighting. Gone are the days where electric drapes matter, or the most sophisticated touch-pad controls are necessary. A great bed, quality sheets and a powerful shower go a long way to ensuring a proper night’s stay. Hotel interior design has been through a period of laziness, repetition, downplaying and dumbing down of luxury, which has made a large number of hotels at all levels look and feel the same. I believe hotels should offer their guests an experience, better than one they have at home, one in which they feel is worth the money, and of course one which is comfortable and restful. Globalisation of hotel designs also doesn't seem to stop, I like a hotel to be grounded by its location, reference its surroundings and be inspired by its landscape, however there is still at luxury level a roll-out culture which seems so unnecessary within the world of hospitality. At David Collins Studio, our hotel designs always embrace local ideas, crafts or artworks giving a sense of place, support and connection with the locality. Hotels take a long time to design, procure, build and open which means that any design work must be carefully considered and thought through to ensure durability in its creativity and distance itself from being trend driven, to ensure that it was created as a vision appropriate to the brief, customer and location without referencing disposable gimmicks and ideas. Innovation for me when I design hotels is about perfecting simplicity, rather than embracing new ideas. It’s very difficult to design a single room, which is perfect in every way. A hotel guest is exposed to this single space for a short amount of time, so simple is always best. Innovation can often mean expensive mistakes. I am very lucky to work with hoteliers who have the same vision as I, the same obsession with practicality, the same desire to create simplicity and when embarking on a renovation I always challenge the need to change, understand if everything is necessary, isolate what is a priority and embrace existing ‘quirks’ as I call them, which for me should be embraced. A new build however, I approach differently, working closely to understand the feelings, the experiences and the level of comfort and luxury we are looking to create. This then is the best starting point, rather than focusing on a price point or comparison exercise. I don’t know how designers can manage the simultaneous creation of multiple large hotels, it’s a huge commitment of resources, a very intense creative relationship and to perfect, takes time. I would always advise to plan the projects to allow enough time to research, enough time to prototype effectively and without fail, create a tried and tested (and slept in) model room. To me, many global brands, boutiques and smaller independent hotels have all become one and the same. Large chains try to look boutique-like, independent ones want brand recognition. I love to work with all of them for different reasons. The right building, in the right location, with the right team can bring a successful hotel to life, it's kind of irrelevant today in some regions and completely relevant in others, the global market has so many different factors at play. Moving into 2017 I hope to see the idea of 'grannyification' slowly fading. There is a new breed of beautiful, simple, well thought through hotels coming to light; hotels with a vision of calm luxury, creative solitude, crafted elegance and a social responsibility. Competition across all levels is fierce, and smart, simple, solutions-driven hospitality design with quality and thought at the core will shine in 2017. A comfortable full-length mirror and flattering mood lighting may seem obvious but can often be overlooked. 2017, I believe, will see a new breed of hotel brands across all levels redefining what has been seen in recent years – the classics being reawakened sensitively, realising there is no point of change for change sake, but where necessary, and with clarity of vision and a clear direction of creativity. Hotel design has always been at the forefront of trends and I think that now is the time that hotel operators and designers should plan for the long term. The industry should focus on what makes a hotel, go back basics by perfecting the basics and adding layers of luxury where required and relevant. As I mentioned at the beginning, hotels should deliver experiences over and above those you have in your own home. I stay in hotels which I feel will provide a calm relaxing haven. The bed, the sheets, the shower, the lighting, that's what really matters – and of course amazing coffee, which in a hotel is hard to find.

Trend: Bar and restaurant design

By Robert Angell
Founder, Robert Angell Design International

Robert Angell is one of the yearbook’s established designer contributors, having written for the book in past editions. He has worked with David Collins, travelled the globe in search of great design, set up his own company and lecturers on the subject of design. Five years in, Robert Angell Design International is being recognised for all the right reasons. Born and raised in Dorset, Robert Angell’s passion for design started at a young age where he was fascinated by making and creating things. This passion grew when Robert went to school and began designing, developing and honing pieces of bespoke furniture and lights. In 1995, after gaining a BA honours degree in Interior Design at Nottingham Trent University, Robert set off for London. A chance meeting with David Collins saw the beginning of a long and incredible design journey. Here, Robert continues to demonstrate his sharp sense for great design, writing about his ideas on brilliant bar and restaurant design.

Clients have a multitude of different requests for their restaurant and bars, but often the first thought it is to ‘make them less stuffy and more relaxed.’ Not as straightforward as it may seem, as it depends on the style of offer and hotel or restaurant operator we are designing for. In luxury hotels we design them with lower seating and dining table heights, which allow the guests to stay longer and enjoy the relaxed ambience. We pay close attention to the details and ensure each piece is designed for that particular interior. Lighting is so important to create the ambience we want and this is the single element that can transform an interior throughout the day and evening to give balance and intimacy too.

I think the desire by new emerging talent to set up their own bar or restaurant, perhaps without big budgets, has driven an upcycle and industrial vibe in a lot of new places we see. I also think customers are searching evermore for the latest opening or place to go, to try another take on a classic or a simple menu style that focuses on two or three items.

Social media is a massive driver now and that makes it crucial to get all the elements perfect. The flipside is that if the interior or the offer does not stand up they will fail. So good design is important from the kitchen outwards. Hotels have also realised that guests are now more likely to stay in the hotel if the F&B offering is good, but then the hotel offers have their own brand identity and their own look to make you feel like you are not part of the hotel even though you are. This can be confusing, adding another element of consideration to designing these spaces. Big name chefs are still a huge draw to hotels, but again they want to put their own stamp on creating the right vibe to attract diners to go there. So it has all changed really, eating out, is not what it used to be and we will continue to see more of this new wave.

Continuous advancements in technologies and the different ways to use more traditional materials such as leathers, is driving the interiors industry in a new direction. I think there is a global impact too, which has opened up so many resources and highlighted companies that can produce the most amazing materials. We can now utilise them to make a fabulous upholstery detail or an inlaid metal into marble detail that fits perfectly, which would have previously been too expensive to produce.

Research is still a very important part of the design process, particularly in regards to innovation. We look to different cultures, materials, traditions and technologies for new ideas. We are often inspired by our clients’ vision and then take this seed, apply it to our global knowledge of design, to deliver something unique that improves the experience of the setting.

In terms of renovation of bar and restaurant spaces we have to consider the angle of the client or brand. A new brand would be a fresh start for a new project, including a detailed brief where we would learn a great deal about the client and their wishes. Older, more established clients have a different set of rules to play by. Similarly, when thinking about the space, an existing bar requires you know understand what has worked and not worked in it's previous guise, what are the DNA elements that make that bar what it is and what elements are no longer working or relevant. For example, with the Blue Bar, which is one of the most iconic bars in the world, I was asked to redesign it but to retain its iconic elements. We updated and changed 90 per cent of the room, including all the furniture, mirrors, rugs. In fact, the whole room was taken apart and each plank labelled for the refurbishment. At first glance you would think nothing has changed but look closer and then the room reveals its new elegant and comfortable furniture and finishes. My advice to designers, entering into a bar and restaurant project is to create the best interior you can ever dream of and then turn that dream into a reality for the client. Exceeding clients’ expectations is a great feeling. Global influences that we see sweeping across London, include the recent emergence of Latin American influences, and it doesn’t end there. New cultural experiences are cropping up all the time, offering people variety, flavour and intrigue. New twists on classic cocktails are always coming in, with ever-creative garnishes that again enhance that experience and give you something to Instagram about. It’s not just about the interiors, but the whole concept, working together. Like chefs and bar staff using the best products and carefully selected ingredients designers need to select the best materials possible that brings a quality, uniqueness and individuality to an interior. I would like to see a new twist on glamour coming through as customers again are in search of spaces that make them feel good in the surroundings they are in.

Hotels are now generally building stronger identities, with guests becoming increasingly brand-loyal. This has had an affect on the spa landscape in turn. For example, in London, a guest might have enjoyed a stay at Firmdale’s Ham Yard Hotel and will then look to try other hotels by the Firmdale Group such as the Charlotte Street Hotel or Number Sixteen. Globally, if someone often frequents The Dorchester in the UK, they might seek to stay in The Beverley Hills Hotel in Los Angeles. This is because a trust has been developed between the brand and the guest and what can be offered is proven.

With this, understanding the brand of each hotel is key to 1508 London was established in 2010 and is a multidisciplinary interior design and architecture studio created by its three partners: Hamish Brown, Louise Wicksteed and Shona Patel. 1508 specialises in high-end and boutique interior spaces in the residential, hospitality and commercial sector. Louise has been working exclusively on high-end projects since graduating in interior design and design management. Beginning her career with luxury developers Candy & Candy, Louise worked on a number of high profile projects, most notably the 62 metre Benetti yacht Candyscape II. With over 10 years of high-end residential and nautical experience, Louise has worked on numerous international private and developer led projects. Most recently Louise has been working on 26,000 square foot property for a private client in Chelsea, a lateral rooftop penthouse in Mayfair and a spa and Private Members Club for a prestigious London hotel. Here, Louise talks about individuality and personality being at the heart of clever spa design.

successful spa design. In the past, spas have tended to have a common eastern-fusion vibe, and that is no longer the case. Designing a space that will stand the test of time and reflect the hotel’s personality is key. For example, we are currently working on the spa at The Lanesborough, a traditionally British hotel in London and as such, we chose to use Bath Spa as our inspiration to create a quintessentially English feel.

Using one material such as stone in a multitude of ways can be exceptionally interesting as it can be carved, honed, textured and shaped to add interest and depth. Design is constantly progressing and evolving, and spas are some of the most long-standing areas within hotels. To ensure the longevity of the design, it should relate back to the personality of the hotel rather than a trend, as that would make the aesthetic more likely to date.

Durability is also crucial so materials that can withstand high-levels of traffic. Spa areas must withstand a huge variety of elements, extreme temperatures and water exposure, to name but a few, so selecting materials and ensuring consistency throughout can be a challenge.

At 1508, each and every project is entirely unique, so for us, individuality and personality are the foundation of any design. By understanding the client’s brand ethos and its clients, a unique design will manifest. Getting in to the mindset of a hotel or spa’s clientele, why they are visiting and what they would like to take away from the experience, can really help as a starting point.

Take the Cowshed spas within the Soho House hotels. Babington House in the Somerset countryside is a place for urban dwellers to escape, unwind and recuperate, so the space is designed as a rural retreat with lots of relaxing, private treatment areas. Contrast this with the Cowshed spa at Shoreditch House in East London, another Soho House hotel, and you’ll see that while the space still retains a rural feel to be true to the brand, its location dictates that the focus is more on party prep and beauty treatments so the spa areas are more sociable and allow guests to chat while they have a manicure. From the outset, understanding your audience is imperative. Are you appealing to families, in which case a pool is a must, or are you looking to generate revenue by having as many treatment and experience choices as possible. We will never make commercial recommendations to our clients, but we do need them to have a clear idea in mind.

For spa design specifically I recommend being aware of usability and functionality of materials. Choosing a material that’s fit for purpose, water-tight and non-slip for high-traffic areas for example, is crucial and the design can evolve from there.
With this in mind, it’s really important to understand the parameters of each space before putting pen to paper, the purpose must be an intrinsic part of the overall concept, rather than the function being shoehorned into a scheme.

In some of a hotel’s communal areas, drawing rooms and snugs for example, I think residential design and trends have a huge impact as the space needs to feel homely, but this is not the case in spa areas. Guests like to feel that they’re having an experience that they can’t achieve by simply taking a long bath at home, so really I think commercial spa design is influencing residential, rather than the other way round.

Increasingly, people are looking to replicate a spa-at-home feel in their own bathrooms; so commercial spa designs need to take it to the next level.

That said, we are seeing that privacy is becoming more important. We have seen a move away from traditional communal changing areas in favor of personal changing rooms.

For 2017 we should be looking to go for an individual, tailored approach to the design. Using design and materiality to ensure the spa tells a story and reflects the personality of the hotel it sits within is going to be crucial.

“...individuality and personality are the foundation of any design. By understanding the client’s brand ethos and its clients, a unique design will manifest.”

Trend: Office design

By Nick Stringer
Co-Founder, Shed

Shed are a group of award winning interior designers and architects who've been designing and delivering environments for some of the world's leading companies since 2000. The team includes straight talking, smart thinking creatives who work across residential and commercial markets, specialising in branded interior design. Above all, they focus on originality and innovation in everything they do. Shed are passionate about the creative process and love to make things happen. Most recently, they have completed Level Shoes Men in Dubai, ISSA womenswear in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia, MEAT Liquor restaurants in Singapore, Brighton, Leeds, Bristol and Islington as well as Hotbox restaurant and 46&Mercy bar in Spitalfields. Here, Nick embraces the cross-over in office design trends, from hotels, to home offices and back again.

The most common client request for commercial office design we get is 'we want it to look like Soho House'! That's sometimes without an understanding of the careful process involved to create the comfortable and casual look and feel.

Another request is 'it can't feel like an office'. So anything but the dullness of basic carpet tiles, fluorescent luminaires and white walls. Clients want somewhere their employees feel proud to work. Potential employees can now sometimes view their potential workspace on a design blog, and this can be a draw.

Clients want to reflect recent moves towards collaborative spaces. Also to update finishes to be more contemporary. Office
OFFICE DESIGN

Design refurbishment cycles average around seven years. We have been a constant part of one of our client’s stories; Freuds, designing their first, second and third offices all seven years apart. Clients are now seeing more of a value in interior designers compared to architects in this field. Projects require a thorough understanding of interior spaces as well as finishes, fabrics, furniture and colour. Suppliers are embracing customisation, which is now making everything more individual without prohibitive costs. I’m taking advantage of recent launches such as Bolon By You, custom wallpapers by Milton & King and custom printed fabrics by Creation Baumann.

In terms of FF&E there’s a lot of high quality affordable furniture and lighting coming from the young Danish companies, a movement surely started by Hay, and continued by &tradition and Menu. These brands represent a clean style that is still fun and relevant, which fits neatly into many of our design projects. The Hay New Order shelving system for example is being used in lots of office projects right now, and for good reason, with its simple good looks contemporary finishes and modularity. We like to take materials and finishes out of context to create something new. For our recent Angel Square project for The Office Group, we used an industrial resin coating from Altro on floors and walls, in a seamless ‘tray’ design, giving a hard wearing finish in our unique colour mix. After 30 samples (each composed of three colours of paint flake), we settled on pastel pinks and mid blues, which really pop against the ‘typical office’ white walls.

It shouldn’t be necessary anymore to plaster the interior of an office with corporate identities and brand colours. It’s far more important to convey the attitude and culture, with a deeper understanding of how the organisation works and who they want to be. This is innovation in this sector and it continues apace, with clients understanding developing as they come to embrace a different sense of identity.

Some suggestions for clients at the beginning of an office reinvention would be to involve staff, but not too much! Everyone will have their own ideas but it’s essential to entrust the interior designer with overall responsibility, otherwise the final scheme will not make sense.

Dedicate some resource to improving lighting, especially in public spaces. Focus on the lighting effect not just the light fitting. Some pretty pendants actually give off hardly any light. A selection of wall lights and spotlights on dimmer switches will always provide great value.

For other designers, I’d say spend some time within the clients’ organisation and observe how they currently work. What are the patterns and habits, and where are the opportunities for improvement? The challenge is to balance the current trend for extreme openness and freedom with an individual desire for quiet time and private space.

The solution is to include work zones at different paces, heights and levels of privacy. Some of the nicest small offices are essentially apartments with desks; every sector is inspired by another. There is a blurring of the lines here. Offices are designed to feel residential, residences are designed to feel like hotels and hotel lobbies are now co-working spaces. This generates a wider spectrum of feelings inside interiors. Perhaps this is why we at Shed like to design projects in all sectors. An office design might include a bar and banquette seating, for which we draw on our experience designing restaurants and bars.

For Kudos television production studio, the producers were always out and about, away from the office. We then designed their office as a home-from-home to balance this, with patterned kilim rugs and reclaimed 19th century maple flooring running throughout. The most interesting office spaces seem to be made by people who aren’t ‘office designers’. Likewise, the most interesting furniture for offices is not made by ‘office furniture’ suppliers.

For 2017 we are seeing a move away from gimmicks. With Google as the poster-child, the slides (used in the likes of high-tech companies and start ups) and bright colours of the previous few years already feel dated. Natural, tactile textures will permeate across office design. This works with a further casualisation of the workplace, moving away from stiff formal spaces, as is happening in the restaurant industry.

Interior planting will go to the next level. In the past there may have been one or two plants in the corner but we will start to see lush jungle scenes. These will be best maintained by external specialists. Planting is particularly beneficial to office spaces, as interest in air quality increases. Co-working will continue to rise, with spaces popping up everywhere. The ones that thrive will be those with a community, which give freelancers and start ups a reason to leave their bedroom, to be part of something bigger than themselves.

Trend: Chalet Design

By Alex Isaac
Head of Design, Morpheus London

Alex Isaac leads the Morpheus London design team to deliver the finest private residences for a discerning clientele. Dedicated to designing through the eyes of each client, Alex and his team approach every commission in a tailored fashion, not only informing the design language, but the entire process to suite each clients desires, needs and requirements. Alex and his team were responsible for the design of the Six Senses Residence design package, part of the Courchevel 1850 resort. Taking inspiration from the French Alps, the residences presents a collection of apartments and duplex penthouses and the penthouses are where Morpheus London demonstrated their chalet design prowess, with stunning palettes, beautiful materials and a clear homage to the setting being paid at every step. Here, Alex extends his experience of Courchevel to the subject of chalet design for the yearbook.

Morpheus is more commonly known for its projects in other areas, be they homes in international cities, or hospitality projects on the Cote d’Azur, so perhaps the fact that an international design house based in London, such as Morpheus, being approached to undertake high-end alpine projects is itself a reflection of how the market is changing. Whilst we would always design a chalet in ways that remain appropriate for the environment, weather, terrain and alpine landscape, I feel that the design must also be much more relevant to our global and internationally cultured client base. These changes reflect what we see in the rest of the design world in general, becoming more dynamic.
cosmopolitan and contemporary. Some of the most significant changes in the chalet design arena include the move away from the ‘twee’ that I believe has affected chalet interiors most previously. The interiors can still be rustic and cosy, but the obviousness of net bistro curtains, embroidered cow and snowflake patterned fabrics and cowbells used as accessories, amongst other things have, thankfully, gone away. Chalets these days have a less obvious sense of theatre that used to define them purely as holiday homes. A subtle theming now allows chalets to be a distinct house in their own right and potentially liveable all year around.

When staying in a chalet one still wants to feel an intrinsic link to the locality and spirit of the mountains, therefore you wouldn’t transplant a metropolitan city interior into an alpine building. That said, alongside the woods, leathers and woools one might normally associate with a comfortable, cosseting chalet interior, we are now using specialist finishes, bespoke furniture, metals and stones. All of these need to be appropriately selected, not just for the look and feel created, but the climate. For instance the air is generally very dry, it is therefore very important that furniture is acclimatised before installation. Helpfully the locations in which chalets reside are normally very beautiful, making it easy to draw inspiration from the surroundings. It is how we apply these inspirations that allows us to innovative. It is important to abstract these inspirations making them understated references, rather than overt statements. Innovation comes from the material palette chosen to reflect the colours of nature, a stone locally sourced for vanities and worktops, and the finished layout mirroring the silhouettes found in the landscape.

Chalet design can and should be progressive. It has come on leaps and bounds in recent years and designers owe a duty of care to the industry to keep the momentum going, offering viable well-designed homes for their clients. Also, whilst challenging the status quo, we must keep the design appropriate for the habitat in which the design is undertaken. The design of a chalet property needs to retain its link with its positioning. Chalet design will mature even more in to 2017 and beyond, not forgetting its roots, and not stylistically copying other vernaculars that would be unsuitable. It will further become respected a discipline in contemporary architecture and interior design in its own right and take on board initiatives we see more frequently in other markets. This could be in details such as greater audio visual integration, operational elements such as wine/cigar storage, or high level such as in the exterior design, and it’s marketing and branding. Currently Morpheus are working closely with the resort brand Six Senses on such signature residences, which do include many details comparable with our client’s main homes. Alpine residences are a relatively new opportunity for us starting in 2015, and whilst we will continue to work on our core city and international projects we hope to pick up some further chalet projects in the near future based on the projects we have completed in Courchevel thus far.

It’s official: the yacht has morphed. Definitions of style and design have been reinvented and the most striking new lines are leaving anyone with a yacht-spotting fetish (myself included) debating furiously. There’s also the sheer scale of today’s superyachts to consider. It appears that size, actually, does matter.

As a result, the shipyards have become big brands and the go-to names of the industry include Lürssen, who are known for creating Azzam, Ice, Phoenix and countless other iconic vessels. German shipyard, Nobiskrug, have so far taken on the most futuristic stance, as seen in their latest design with Philippe Starck for the infamous superyacht, A. And then there are the classics, British Designer Tara Bernerd is Founder of the established interior architectural practice, Tara Bernerd & Partners. Working with an executive team of highly experienced architects and designers based out of the London Headquarters in Belgravia, the focus for Bernerd is on the relevance of creative direction and interior design. Bernerd’s business interests continue to grow, working increasingly on a global platform with projects in New York, Chicago, London, Hong Kong, Shanghai and Switzerland. Key clients include Thompson Hotels, Sixty Hotels, Blackstone, the LeFraks, Berkeley Group, Lend Lease, Couture Homes, Grosvenor Asia and Asia Standard, plus select private clients. Tara Bernerd & Partners’ designs reflect intelligent space planning and layouts, with a strong use of texture and colour, which typify their projects. With a more edgy approach Bernerd’s work is renowned for creating warmth and atmosphere. Increasingly focusing on hotels, restaurants and commercial residential developments the practice is committed to making a difference through design. Here, Tara discusses yacht building and the inevitable lifestyle designing that goes with it.

where ultimately an owner becomes a custodian of an enchanted story and thanks to true dedication, love and care yachts such as Shemara still grace our seas.

Personally, I like a Feadship: established in the 1920s and still creating the most beautiful and classic designs found at sea today. However, I might also be tempted by the chic answer to sailing perfected by the Italian shipyard, Perini Navi.

Whatever the vessel, when we build a yacht we are still essentially building a lifestyle, so we of course work in close collaboration with the shipyards from the outset to ensure that our vision is fully aligned with theirs and that we are able to create something truly special. With yachts it is not so much about thinking outside the box for us, but rather making a world within the box. Layouts therefore form a crucial starting point for any yacht project we undertake as they provide an essential framework from which we are able to build upon. By marrying open plan spaces with private, more seductive areas, we are able to cater to the needs of the modern yacht owner who not only wants a place to work or relax, but also requires stunning spaces to entertain guests.

Personally I tend to avoid trends. However, our clients are realising more and more that well-designed environments can have an impact upon how we feel and my team and I of course fully embrace this idea that design matters. ‘Home’ is key word for me. Given that so many people are in transit nowadays, can a yacht or hotel ever take the place of a home? And if so, how?

me, the cosy sanctuary of the bedroom is paramount and is still something that, despite all the technology in the world, we hold sacred. However, the way we feel about bathrooms is changing: you can’t have a throw-away, cubby-hole for a bathroom on today’s superyachts, instead it needs to be a space of indulgence; a chic haven to escape to before the big party on deck. Through clever design and space-planning, my team are able to meet the changing demands of today’s modern lifestyles in order to provide the ultimate yachting experience.

And once our layouts are fully established, we then begin work on what I call the ‘layering process’. We don’t have a typical in-house style at Tara Bernerd & Partners, but we are perhaps known for our ability to translate indigenous flavours into our designs. I like to establish a DNA for each project, and each one is unique by its inherent essence and location. With a yacht you have to approach things slightly differently because it is of course nomadic by its very nature. However, people still need to have a rooted feeling, a sense of place, and so as a designer once you have considered how the overall layout of the space is going to work, you can then bring in the touches which provide that all-important sense of character, introducing texture and warmth. It might be books, it might be a mixture of objects that you collect or an alluring piece of artwork, but it is those final touches that give an interior that crucial sense of character. So it’s no quick-fix, but instead there is a sincerity to this process and I think our work, be it on yachts, or in hotels or private residences, is characterised by an integrity and a truth that gives each project a little more depth than if we had simply come in at the end of the process to dress the space. Quality and workmanship are also of the utmost importance. This has never been more relevant in a world in which people are becoming more and more aware of the level of luxury that yachts demand. Indeed, attention to detail is magnified on board. We can have the concept, the vision, we can draw out the plans and create detailed design packages, but skilful construction and artisan expertise are vital in order to meet the expectations of an increasingly design-savvy audience.

That said, the main thing about yacht design is to have fun! Across all of the yachts we have worked on, we have always attempted to create spaces that are luxurious and edgy, whilst still retaining a certain warmth and atmosphere. Finding this balance and oxygenating it throughout the entire design DNA can be a challenge – but I have always loved challenges and I hope to have many more to come.

TrendPulse is a London based design studio dedicated to interiors and home product design and development. Headed by creative directors Sarah Shepherd and Sally Nettleton, the TrendPulse service gives insights into global trends in lifestyle and home interior products. TrendPulse offers a bespoke consultancy service to clients looking for expert help with specific product or home range development such as bed, bath, furnishings, wallcoverings, tabletop, gifts, kitchen, textiles, stationery or toiletries. Sarah and Sally both have over 20 years’ experience in the interiors and design industry specialising in trend and colour forecasting, and product development. They met at UK department store Debenhams when Sarah left a design role and Sally took it over. Their career paths continued to cross and they have worked together at both Nigel French Enterprises and WGSN, both leading fashion and trend forecasters. They each trained as printed textile designers and are excited to share their mutual obsession with pattern, design and product through the TrendPulse studio. They live to shop and shop to live, and are always on the hunt for the next inspiring trend. They are members of the British Textile Colour Group who represent the UK at Intercolor, the twice-yearly international colour congress. They live in south London with their respective families and are fortunate to travel widely both for work and leisure.

Identifying trends is a continuous effort of gathering and analysis. At TrendPulse we tap into a huge range of subject areas, including the worlds of art, design, science, retail, colour, food, travel, technology and the catwalk. We highlight exciting projects and pioneering ideas that are set to influence product development for the season ahead. These emerging aesthetics are filtered into seasonal trend and colour forecasts and also applied to bespoke and specific creative projects. Heading into 2017/18 we share some of the creative input we have identified for the season, here’s a snapshot of our Pure trend direction.

Unexpected encounters invite a quiet and serendipitous journey of discovery for the TrendPulse Autumn/W inter 2017/18 forecast Pure. Delicate coloured whites are hazed with warm tints and cool sky-scape shadings. An exploration of abstraction, minimalism and the spiritual. A quiet narrative of sensual and poetic forms that create peacefulness, purity and a thoughtful conceptual mood. Pure is designed to be subtle and to express a crafted luxury where materials matter more than ever. Think couturier craftsmen and a subtle and tactile sensibility combined with a thoughtful modernity.

The word on the street is sable acrylic. Gone are the days of the smoked acrylic side table, this is the brave new world of custom coloured acrylic, imported from the USA.

Allan Knight, the guru of all things acrylic, has landed on a specific colour of acrylic that works within any environment. Where the sophisticated, clear acrylic is icy and modern, its new addition is comfortable in almost any environment. The sexy younger brother arrives as if from the beach with the summer sun still touching its sultry skin. Allan comments, “We wanted a sleek reinvention of our much better known clear acrylic. The bronze coloured ‘sable’ was so named as it shades in several distinct colours as the viewer takes in every angle of the piece. The darker and light shades come together to remind us of the colouring of a fabulous fur coat. Fur is imbued with many distinctive qualities, two of which we are striving to mimic; visual warmth is the first and the multi-colour aspect is the second. I feel that we have succeeded in creating something special and apart from everything else on the market, and because we have been making acrylic furniture for over 50 years, the client will assured of receiving the very best product with invisible glue joints and a lustrous mirror finish that will only be more beautiful over time.”

Any size or configuration is possible because each piece is made completely by hand, every single time. The company’s ‘to-the-trade’ sensibility keeps ideas in the high end arena of the design world. Allan Knight is available in the UK through J. Robert Scott in the Chelsea Harbour Centre showroom.

Pure wool portfolio

For over 30 years Atlantico Rugs have produced traditional handmade tapestry rugs in pure wool

Atlantico’s portfolio has evolved and diversified over the years and now, with its extensive range of designs they can provide bespoke rugs for every style of interior. With a range of designs for beach villas, ski chalets or boutique hotels, Atlantico Rugs can accommodate all interior design requirements.

The team’s craftsmen and women in Portugal have the same passion and use the same techniques for producing the beautiful rugs that were first exported to England over 800 years ago, the only difference being imported wool from New Zealand rather than Britain. The Arraiolos long-armed cross-stitch method of manufacture has not changed and Atlantico Rugs hand dye all wool using natural dyes. The stitching skills have been, and are continuing to be handed down through generations, providing much needed employment for all ages. The company is trying to be as ecological as possible with solar and wind power generating electricity for the workrooms.

Atlantico Rugs are constantly designing and developing new patterns and work very closely with all the major interior designers to create the perfect design for their clients. They understand how important a rug can be to a room, ‘a rug makes a room’, pulling together all the elements, and this is why Atlantico Rugs pride themselves on the personal touch, spending time with the client in their house, choosing the right colours. Each rug is custom made and they can adapt and personalise the design, scaling the pattern up or down, reducing or enlarging the border dependent on the requirement. Wools can be dyed to match fabric swatches in a full range of colours. Depending on the size of the rug, each one can take between three to six months to custom produce. A small selection of examples of designs can be viewed in the gallery section of the website. In the Putney showroom, Atlantico Rugs have many rugs in stock in various sizes, designs and colours. Open by appointment only.

Having worked in the industry since 2006, Birgit has established a reputation for fine taste and an unerring eye for new trends.

Since 2011 Birgit has been manufacturing her own line of furniture in her workshop in Germany. The collection is a modern interpretation of her love of antiques and vintage pieces, which underlines her signature look of mixing old and new.

Birgit Israel are producing a unique, bespoke collection of handmade furniture using classic materials, such as piano lacquer, vellum, and metals. The finish on many pieces is highly polished and requires many days of labour. The aim is to produce items that are timelessly elegant and which will develop their own patina and become more beautiful over time.

Since launching at Decorex in 2012, her collection has become well established and loved by interior designers and architects worldwide. All pieces are made to order and Birgit and her team are happy to accommodate the particular demands and ideas of her high-profile clients.

Kayospruce have been established for 33 years on the South Coast.

Starting as a marine technical fabric supplier, it quickly became apparent that materials proven in their adaptability and stability in harsh environments made them ideally suited to structures, typically awnings, walkways, partitions, umbrellas etc. The flame retardant properties, very high U/V resistance, 5 and 10 year guarantees against fading and rotting and water resistance, make these fabrics compulsory for any commercial or domestic project or ‘al fresco’ dining setting.

Kayospruce are the UK distributor for Sunbrella Upholstery fabrics, used for shading and garden furniture. These are specialist fabrics designed not to rot or fade. 100 per cent solution dyed acrylic, they combine resistance, comfort and ease of maintenance. Sunbrella quality is renowned in the professional world of furniture, where it has many different applications. Sunbrella superior pigments are added during the production of fade resistant Sunbrella fibre. The final result is Sunbrella yarn and fabric with colour throughout that won’t wash or fade away. The Sunbrella Renaissance collection compliments the Main Outdoor Collection of fabrics. It is constructed from 50 per cent recycled fibres, available in three styles with a wide range of colours and designs. The recycled fibres are taken directly from the factories where the fabric remnants are divided by colour batches, reconditioned as fibres and woven together with fresh, new Sunbrella fibres. This collection provides a vintage feel with a modern twist for an eye-catching, comfortable, environmentally-friendly outdoor setting. Awnings and canopies to cover those outdoor areas can also be catered for by Kayospruce who are the UK Distributor for Sauleda Outdoor Fabrics, these fabrics rise to meet the challenges of industrial sectors with extremely high technical standards. Sauleda fabrics provide solar protection and high resistance to UV radiation, while taking care of the visual environment and obtaining controlled luminosity.

Kayospruce Ltd is the go-to outdoor and contract fabrics provider for the creative designer

The Perfect Touch

Touch Ironmongery supply a vast range of products and through a range of services aim to provide every customer with solutions for their requirements.

Established 34 years ago in October 1982, Touch Ironmongery is one of London’s leading ironmongers. Originally called “A Touch of Brass”, the firm changed their name in 2003 in reaction to slowly advancing market changes in architectural ironmongery, which is no longer supplied solely in brass, and to also reflect the broader range of products and finishes that they sell.

Touch occupy their recently refurbished showroom at 210 Fulham Road, Chelsea, where they display a vast range of their 5,000 products. With a customer base including interior designers, builders and individuals who are interested in the top end of the Ironmongery market, Touch mainly supply to residential premises but hotel and office properties also contribute to their vast clientele. The company also have a healthy export market to all corners of the world, namely the Middle East, Europe and the Americas. Touch’s Owner and Founder, Bill Benham, has 34 years’ experience in the ironmongery trade, as do his colleagues Jim Haselup and Alan Blanchard. Saleem Qureshi is the newest member of our team and has 12 years’ experience, meaning their knowledge is unrivalled in this industry.

The range of products supplied by Touch date from circa 1640 French (Louise XIV) and cover all subsequent periods (Georgian, Edwardian & Victorian), Art Deco and contemporary pieces also make up the product ranges. In addition, Touch showcases the very best of British manufacturing; the best ranges are still produced in the Midlands by craftsmen in factories dating back 200 years or more. Touch also sell European manufactured goods which is considered to be of a very good quality and in recent years they have introduced some of the far eastern made products, albeit in a limited range. With trends continuously evolving, new innovative products are constantly under development. Touch understand that keeping up with the fashion-shifts is imperative in order to provide every customer with the best solution for their requirements.

Ironmongery can be a difficult and complicated aspect of a building project, as a result Touch aim to take this awkward aspect and make it user friendly and clear to understand by offering an on-site service where they carry out a detailed door by door, window by window, room by room ironmongery schedule, highlighting all requirements and identifying any items that can be refurbished. Refurbishment is a large part of the business; Touch will undertake complete ironmongery refurbishment projects, and can restore old paint covered door furniture to their former glory, looking as new, at a fraction of the cost to replace.

Christopher Peacock

New York City based Christopher Peacock launches in London, bringing a new benchmark in taste and understated elegance to Design Centre, Chelsea Harbour

A global leader in luxury lifestyle interiors, Christopher Peacock launched the London showroom in November 2015, bringing the brand to the UK for the first time.

Founded in 1992, Christopher Peacock remains a benchmark of taste and understated elegance, which has graced many of the world’s most luxurious private estates and residential developments across the globe. Christopher Peacock, Founder and Creative Director, comments: “The launch of our first UK showroom in London’s thriving Design Centre Chelsea Harbour, Europe’s flagship for design and decoration, represents the next chapter for Christopher Peacock as an international brand. Drawing back to my roots, the collection has always been inspired by English architecture and design.”

Specialising in outstanding craftsmanship, Christopher Peacock represents unique bespoke and handcrafted cabinetry, hardware adornments and fitted furniture for the entire home. The collection includes spectacular kitchens, libraries, dressing rooms, bathroom suites, wine tasting rooms and butler’s pantries. The highly-skilled interior designers provide incomparable personal service and consultation, tailoring each room individually, creating functional spaces that meet the demands of today’s lifestyle.

The London showroom features signature displays including the recently launched Motra™ Collection of cabinetry that offers a modern and traditional line available in a wide-variety of finishes such as Quarter Sawn oak, American walnut and the Christopher Peacock Paint. The Refectory Collection, also on view, embodies understated elegance of New Hampton Style that conveys a blend of English Georgian and American Colonial architectural elements.

There are seven additional showrooms in Chicago, Boston, San Francisco, Millburn, Greenwich, Cannes and the Cote D’Azur.

Robert Douglas

Using techniques that heighten his artistic virtuosity, Robert Douglas creates art that makes a statement.

Robert Douglas as a student at Central St Martins School of Art specialised in the psychological effect of colour and form. This reflects clearly in his paintings where he sets out to influence the interiors where they are installed.

His latest portfolio exemplifies his artistic virtuosity using techniques that express new possibilities in art and creating paintings that make a statement. The simplicity of modern interiors sometimes have spaces that clearly benefit from art installations and Douglas has created new works towards fulfilling this need. By manipulating oil and acrylics, he reveals expressions in art that are challenging to the senses and have a direct effect on the viewer and the location.

Lalique

Lalique is a truly timeless lifestyle brand that is known throughout the world as the ultimate symbol of French luxury and craftsmanship.

For over a century Lalique has remained the ultimate symbol of French luxury and craftsmanship.

Diespeker

Diespeker has been supplying superb marble, granite and terrazzo solutions for commercial property, public buildings and residential dwellings since 1881.

From enduring flooring and cladding, through stunning kitchens and beautiful bathrooms to exquisite individual pieces for restaurants and private clients, Diespeker’s expert in-house team has incomparable experience and a real hunger for creating some of the most talked-about natural stone and terrazzo work in the UK, and beyond.

One of Diespeker’s increasingly sought-after services is their ability to produce stunning, bespoke terrazzo for clients wanting something totally unique, using traditional skills but with a thoroughly modern twist. They work with UK and overseas partners to unearth unusual additions for terrazzo, such as glass chippings and tiny sea shells sourced from China. Diespeker works with the very best designers and architects to push the boundaries of terrazzo design, always rising to the challenge, researching new ways of using the materials they’re passionate about. Excitingly, they can now match cement based terrazzo with resin based terrazzo, enabling a unique ‘mix and match’ service using the best of both materials, in a seamless partnership.

Diespeker is proud of their South East London showroom showcasing the very best materials, including marble, granite, engineered stone, standard terrazzo and samples of bespoke-made terrazzo. Architects, designers and private customers visit the workshop and factory with its state-of-the-art cutting machinery, to see how bespoke terrazzo is made and take a look around the yard, which is always stacked with beautiful natural stone. Their work, expertise and commitment to quality and longevity is evident in so many places; if you’re running across the concourse to catch a train at Charing Cross, climbing the steps into the London Coliseum, eating a pizza from a marble table at Franco Manca, or shopping at Reiss or Whistles, the chances are you’ve just had a close encounter with Diespeker.

EPOC Handcrafted Beds

EPOC produce handmade beds of the finest quality, using high quality materials from around the world and each bed is designed to fit the customer perfectly.

Established in the East End of London by Joseph James Cope in 1949, EPOC Handcrafted Beds was founded with one overriding ambition: to build the finest hand-made beds and mattresses possible. Some 65 years later, this ambition remains the same.

“It’s not about showing our customers what we make, it’s about making what they want,” says Colin Payne, Director of EPOC Handcrafted Beds. This is no idle boast, with the company being one of the finest manufacturers of bespoke divan beds and mattresses in the UK.

“Beds are our passion,” explains Colin. “Not just any bed, mind you, but beds that fit the customer perfectly. It doesn’t matter to us what size, shape, mattress tension, storage arrangement or fabric the client wants to use – the answer is ‘yes’.”

The key to the enduring popularity of an EPOC bed is the quality of the materials and the quality of its finish. The firm’s mattresses are hand-filled and hand-stitched at its headquarters in Suffolk, England. EPOC use only the finest products and materials in their beds and treat every item as a bespoke piece, with great attention to detail they hand-make everything to order and use natural fillings including coir, hair, cashmere, lambs wool, mohair, silk, wool and bamboo.

“We spend more than a third of our life asleep, so an EPOC bed is one of the best investments our customers will ever make” says Colin. “We are very proud of the products we make and of the level of customer service we provide.”

First showcased at Decorex 2015, and prescribing to the philosophy, “Go find the best”, the Silver Edition bed stands tall as the definition of EPOC Handcrafted Beds’ craftsmanship. Incorporating cutting-edge pocket-spring technologies, it is finished with luxurious, layered fillings from all corners of the world. Appearing once again at London Design Week’s Decorex event, EPOC Handcrafted Beds looks certain to present some of their finest sleeping environments to the market.

Simon Horn

Simon Horn has been one of Britain’s best known bed makers since 1982 when it transformed British bedrooms with its classic 18th and 19th Century French beds.

From the Lit Bateau to the Reine de France and other traditional designs, these romantic beds are still at the heart of Simon Horn. Based on antiques, generously re-sized for modern living, they are handmade using the same craft skills and materials as the originals.

CLASSIC AND CONTEMPORARY
Simon Horn also offers a wonderfully eclectic collection of luxury beds and furniture inspired by other classic, contemporary, retro and even futuristic themes. Many have bespoke elements and are made or hand finished to order.

BEDS, FURNITURE AND LINENS
Set over two floors, Simon Horn’s Kings Road showroom is as much a lifestyle store as a bed shop. The beds are dressed with downy duvets, pillows and bedlinens and heaped with beautiful throws; all available from the store. Matching and co-ordinating furniture collections offer bedside tables, chests of drawers, armoires and occasional pieces.

HANDMADE ENGLISH MATTRESSES
Another compelling reason to visit Simon Horn is its exclusive handmade mattresses. Entirely custom made, they embody the highest level of British tradition, craftsmanship and luxury materials. Specialist advice is always on hand, helping customers choose the perfect mattress.

UNIQUE SOFA BEDS
Simon Horn is also famous for its sofa beds. Elegant as sofas, they also have a unique mechanism and mattress, giving the smoothest transition to a bed.

ONE-OFFS AND BESPOKE SERVICES
Simon Horn offers design professionals a wide range of bespoke services, from one-off bed and furniture designs to specialist staining, polishing, lacquering and painting in any chosen colour. Beds can be upholstered in a great choice of materials, including in customers’ own fabrics. Simon Horn’s bespoke upholstered headboards are another brilliant resource and matching upholstered divans bring an even more sophisticated finish. Recent contract projects for Simon Horn include The Franklin Hotel in Knightsbridge and The Assembly House, Norwich.

Effegibi is an Italian company that was established in 1987 as a producer of Finnish saunas. Through the years, the company has introduced their products to the private market and made them available to the general public.

BodyLove is the new sauna + Hammam combination designed by Rodolfo Dordoni with Michele Angelini. It represents the latest evolutionary leap forward taken by Effegibi surrounding heat technology and wellbeing. BodyLove has a painted aluminium frame with glass wall and door panels in a super-clear or opaque finish. Materials like grès porcelain stimulate the perception of the spa space as an environment that blends perfectly with its surroundings. Interiors of the sauna + Hammam are divided into two spaces that can have either a front or side entrance. The sauna space is furnished with raised wooden benches. A base made of wood clad in grès porcelain supports the heater, finished in glazed ceramic and the ceiling houses the RGB LED lighting. Canadian hemlock or heat-treated solid wood for the walls with mirrored surfaces available on request. The Hammam part has a wall-fitted bench in Corian, complete with a teak backrest and footrest, and a base containing the Nuvola Smart Power steam generator. A panel of Botticino marble contains the taps and the spring and shower controls, plus a copper-finish stainless steel bowl revisiting the traditional ritual of dousing yourself with cool water. A ceiling-mounted shower head delivers a regenerating flow of water from above and a niche adorning the transparent wall creates a convenient open space fitted with shelves. Outer surfaces can be finished in ceramic, wood, mirrored or back-painted glass. Inner surfaces are clad in grès porcelain in a choice of two soft colours, or can be finished in back-painted fluted glass. Colour-therapy and the ECC system enabling remote control of switch-on time, temperature, lighting, etc complete the system.

The sauna + Hammam version measures 393 x 176 x h220 cm. BodyLove can also be supplied in a stand-alone version, with just a sauna or Hammam measuring 200 x 176 x h220 cm. Like all Effegibi products BodyLove offers countless personalisation options.

Effegibi create saunas that break away from traditional concepts, transforming the sauna into ‘furniture’ of modern design for any room in the house.

Smart Fire UK

Smart Fire UK offer the comfort of traditional fireplaces, without the negatives associated as the fires don’t require a chimney or flue and are environmentally friendly.

Finding a heating solution which offers year round warmth, very little maintenance and is stylish, elegant and contemporary is not easy.

SmartFire UK, a leading provider in heating solutions, is the sole UK distributor of EcoSmart Fire. The bio-ethanol fires, which require no chimney or flue, use plant by-products to avoid harming the environment and because they need no extraction system, are ideal for new builds and apartments. They offer the comfort and ambience of a traditional fireplace without the hassle associated with it. The range of options available makes these fires suitable for any home, with easy installation and freestanding alternatives that can be stored away in areas with limited space. The EcoSmart Bio-Ethanol Fire Box has become a popular choice with interior designers wanting to make an impression and looking for a stylish solution for an existing grate or fireplace. The fires have been designed to compliment a wide range of building materials to create a traditional or modern look. The fuel is stored in the device’s internal reservoir meaning that they can simply be installed into a standard frame or inside an existing fireplace. The EcoSmart Bio Ethanol Burners are the obvious choice for creating a design statement. Their versatility means they can be placed almost anywhere – within the middle of a table for a talking point or in the centre of a stylish lounge. The Designer range is ideal if you want a contemporary focal or talking point within a room.

Paul Holt, business manager at SmartFire UK, said: “EcoSmart fires are a truly revolutionary product and are making a splash in the domestic and commercial world. “They’re a popular choice for homes without a chimney and add a cosy feel to any apartment. They work well in new homes and apartments as they eliminate the additional building work required to add a chimney. The additional environmental benefits associated with EcoSmart over traditional fire options are a major advantage of this product.”

SHH Interior Design & Architecture

SHH Interior Design & Architecture is a London-based practice that is dedicated to working in residential and commercial fields with integrity, intelligence and flair.

SHH Interior Design & Architecture has over 25 years experience creating exceptional luxury properties, which brings with it a deep knowledge of clients’ needs, commercial awareness and how to deliver value added interiors with an international market appeal.

Founded in 1991 by David Spence, Graham Harris and Neil Hogan, SHH Interior Design & Architecture is known for providing expertise in architecture and interiors ranging from Super Prime homes and luxurious residential developments to stand-alone restaurants and bars and large hospitality environments. The team comprises 50 talented individuals from around the globe.

HOLISTIC APPROACH TO DESIGN
SHH’s talented design team of architects, interior designers, and FF&E specialists understand the complexities of a project and can move seamlessly from design to delivery. With this large pool of international talent, they can build a bespoke team for a project and manage every stage in-house. An emphasis on attention to detail and love of creating a comfortable space for their clients means that every project is personal and unique. This approach is the backbone of their reputation for integrity, efficiency and innovation.

DEDICATED TO DELIVERING
With an extensive client base ranging from beautiful homes to luxury restaurants, SHH understands the balance between delivering an exceptional project on time and within budget that will create a return on investment, whilst also exceeding expectations. They have worked for many years with reliable contractors and suppliers who understand the quality and delivery required for such prestigious properties, maximizing the value of the property.

Marshall & Stewart is a family-owned business dedicated to bringing luxurious handcrafted beds and a perfect night’s sleep to all of their clients.

Marshall & Stewart is a family-owned business with more than a century of combined experience in the bed industry. Brent Cooper, Managing Director, has personally worked in the luxury bed industry for over three decades, leading bedmakers And So To Bed and Hästens to considerable UK success before launching Marshall & Stewart.

Marshall & Stewart sell the world’s most luxurious and comfortable beds in their exclusive Diamond Collection. Every bed in the Collection has been handcrafted to create a sanctuary for sleep, seeking to facilitate the improvements in lifestyle and health that come with achieving a truly restorative night’s shut eye. Each bed is handmade in the UK by master craftsmen using the finest natural materials such as cotton, cashmere and loose horsehair; hand teased to create the ultimate in comfort and quality. Marshall & Stewart firmly believe that the mattress plays a pivotal role in creating the support required to ensure comfortable, restorative sleep, with each Marshall & Stewart mattress working in synergy with the bed base and to suit each customer’s specific requirements.

Using years of experience working with natural materials, their master craftsmen have acquired unparalleled expertise on these materials’ qualities and attributes, bringing this knowledge together to create a range of luxurious, comfortable and stylish beds for all needs. Brent Cooper understands the importance of good quality sleep and is dedicated to teaching people how a good night’s sleep can impact on their lives. He said: “Each person is affected by poor sleep at one time or another, but it is alarming how many people simply tolerate it, not acknowledging that disturbed sleep affects not only the third of their life that they’re in bed but also the two thirds when they are awake. Prolonged sleep deprivation, whether it is an inability to fall or stay asleep, can cause back pain, premature ageing, stress, weight gain and mood swings.” Brent and his expert team offer complimentary sleep consultations as part of their bespoke service. These sleep consultations involve a lifestyle evaluation and sleep analysis to help customers choose the ideal model of bed for them and to enjoy a perfect night’s sleep, every night.

Jennifer Manners Design

Specialising in handmade rugs, Jennifer Manners Design offers exquisite designs with attention to detail.

Jennifer Manners Design is a small design studio that specialises in exquisite handmade rugs for both residential and commercial spaces. Jennifer's collections strike the perfect balance between calm and eclectic - with exquisite attention to detail.

Inspiration for the designs, ranging from Graphic, Geometric, Nature and Estate, largely comes from Jennifer's global travels, having previously worked as a news journalist. She seems to gracefully combine images, shapes and colours for an "elegant bohemian" look that very much defines her style. Each piece tells a story in beautiful detail and is brought to life by artisans in India and Nepal who have passed down their craft through the generations.

The team at Jennifer Manners passionately oversees every step in the creation of each rug so that the highest quality is maintained. Jennifer seamlessly fuses traditional rug-making techniques with contemporary design in creating unique pieces that will ground and enhance any space. The finest Tibetan and New Zealand wools, raw silks and bamboo silks are employed in the making of each piece and Jennifer is always experimenting with new materials and weaves as part of the creative process. The studio specialises in hand-knotted rugs where individual strands of wools or silks are secured around a warp and weft for a dense, luxurious pile with 80-, 100- and 150-knots per square inch the most popular. These are made in the Tibetan style in the foothills of Nepal. Flat-woven rugs that are crafted by hand in India on pit looms in thick, natural wools also make up a key rug style option, celebrated for the casual, textural feel they add to a space. Choosing the perfect rug for a space should be an investment that lasts a lifetime regardless of budget. Much of the success of Jennifer Manners is owed to their exceptional service and passion with which they operate. Their experience is unparalleled, having made several hundred rugs over the years for homes and hotels across around the world. Having a background in interior design, Jennifer guides and collaborates with clients to ensure the perfect scale, pattern, colour, size and textures is achieved so that the space is enhanced. The Jennifer Manners Design look has also gone beyond flooring with the recently launched collection of silk Ikat cushions and furnishings that reflect the bohemian vibe that defines the studio’s style.

The Platonic Fireplace

The Platonic Fireplace Company continues to forge the way in fireplace innovations with modern designs at the helm.

Founded by architect Henry Harrison in 1984, The Platonic Fireplace Company has been forging the way for the modern fireplace.

Henry started with his Geolog fire, which is still as contemporary today as in the 80s. Platonic have continued to innovate, creating contemporary designs that reinstate the fireplace as the central focus of the modern residence. As pioneers of the modern gas fireplace the company has unparalleled skills in producing custom solutions to projects from detailed burner design to flue systems. Working with some of the top architects, designers and contractors, Platonic fireplaces can be found at the Four Seasons Hotel and Metropolitan Hotel on Park Lane, Montcalm Hotel near Marble Arch and Marriot London Editions Hotel to name a few. There are also numerous private projects throughout London and the UK along with worldwide projects, most recently in Gibraltar, Majorca and Spain. There is an experienced design team that can discuss each project at length and offer solutions to every design intent, drawing on their knowledge of legislation, building regulations and clever design ‘tweaks’ to create the perfect fireplace, whether it be a bespoke gas fire, balanced flue gas fire or their stunning Electroscape electric fire.

The London showroom is situated in a unique position in the river Thames, on Eel Pie Island, Twickenham, just 20 minutes from Waterloo by train and 30 minutes by car.

Le Deun Luminaires

Le Deun Luminaires, who have remained at the forefront of lighting design and technology since 1997, continue to push the boundaries of their craft.

Founded in 1997 by Jean Luc Le Deun, Le Deun Luminaires is a French company specialising in exquisite, refined and contemporary electronic lighting with low energy consumption. They have been using LED’s as their main light-source for all of their products and installations since the creation of the company, which at the time was considered a visionary path.

Jean Luc remains at the helm of the company, still generating his unique ideas and designs combined with cutting edge technology and his unparalleled energy and enthusiasm. Jean Luc oversees production, ensuring the quality of work and unrivalled attention to detail. This singular devotion to his craft is the reason Le Deun Luminaires is not only a pioneer in elegant, design led LED technology but has remained at the peak of this sector. The philosophy behind Le Deun Luminaires is the pursuit of simplicity and purity; this is what endows their designs with the integrity that has allowed the brand to endure. Le Deun Luminaires believe that function must inform the shape, which is why they only work with the simplest of geometrical forms. Together with the highest quality of electronic components, exclusively designed for the company, they strive to create the most perfect and efficient object, which is very far from purely decorative lighting. All Le Deun Luminaires creations are designed and produced by a professional team in France. The initial steps of production take place in their workshop in Poitiers and products are then perfected in their Atelier in Central Paris.

Le Deun Luminaires’ clientele is broad and sophisticated, it includes the full spectrum of architects, interior designers and prestigious manufacturers or brands that either choose products from the main collection or specify bespoke creations for unique lighting projects or important events. Le Deun have collaborated with many leading global brands in commercial environments and with esteemed interior designers for private homes. 2016 has proved to be another successful year for Le Deun and has seen them navigate new territories with the opening of their first showroom in London. Moving forward they are looking to expand the UK business and become an integral part of the London lighting scene.

USM Haller

USM Haller are well known as one of the stalwarts of modern, timeless design and their classic ranges are perfect for contemporary and elegant storage solutions.

For more than 50 years USM Haller has stood for timeless design, its success is due to its simplicity and longevity.

From a few basic components a beautiful and practical piece of furniture is built which has been designed to grow with its environment’s ever changing needs whether that is the living room, home office, bedroom or kitchen. The origin of the modularity is a chrome ball joint; from there chrome tubes and metal insert panels allow whatever the user imagines to come to life. There are 14 classic colours to choose from ranging from a classic white to a vibrant yellow and through to a dramatic black. Storage solutions and shelving systems can be customised to meet specific needs and then reconfigured if these needs change. The freestanding nature of the units give interiors a contemporary style whilst offering elegant storage and the perfect setting to showcase objets. The design of the USM Haller modular system is fantastically simple. However, it is the Swiss precision in which the components are made that gives the furniture the strength, versatility and clean lines that have made USM Haller a design classic. Launched on to the market in 1965 the USM Haller system has become a watchword for timeless design all over the world. In 1988 it was decided in Germany for the first time ever that the USM Haller furniture system is a work of applied art and should be protected by copyright. Its acceptance into the Design Collection of the Museum of Modern Art (MoMA) in New York (USA) at the end of 2001 was a high distinction and confirmed the artistic character of the product.
Wellness resorts have grown in population density and hotels are fast upgrading into focused spa delivery, driven by the demand of discerning guests seeking a more holistic, results driven experience, with expectations far higher than 10 years ago. Richard Bishop MISPE of NOLA 7 gives an insight into Wellness design and trends across the Wellbeing market. "NOLA 7 design their wellness spas with clean simple lines and natural earth tones, wherever possible merging inside with the outside local environments to help draw the guests into fresh organic surroundings. Mother Nature builds the most magnificent spas so wherever possible they try to marry our designs with nature's offerings. Clean, open spaces flooded with natural light can be accented with signature pieces in raw materials, ranging from sun bleached drift woods to specimen mineral displays. Enhancing the connection with nature by expressing the local geology and historical architectural influences help create a truly authentic sense of place. Urban spas deliver a sanctuary where one can instantly disconnect from the outside world, transporting the guests into a cocoon like sanctuary of peace and tranquility within just a few steps. NOLA 7 carefully consider the guest's thermal journey. The communal suite needs to deliver a varied selection of warm, hot and cooling experiences - salt saunas, invigorating aroma steam and cleansing rasul mud cure rooms alongside refreshing experience showers and ice caves, complimented with a quality hydrotherapy pool. We all have a natural affinity with water and so for active fitness the company install the SwimEx fitness pools and plunge tanks as used by professional sports teams. The unique paddlewheel technology delivers laminar water resistance for aerobic exercising enabling conventional swimming, underwater running treadmills and bicycles - all within a space saving, low energy, bespoke handmade shell. In imitating the natural environment NOLA 7, look to appeal to each of our senses – nutritious food offerings, calming aromas, sound to sooth, whilst sight and touch is engaged with interesting tactile floor sensations from warmed natural stone to bamboo and soft cushioning natural fleeces. As one of the most versatile design accomplices, lighting enables the feel and appearance of the spa zones to change with relatively low capital, and maybe mimicking a balmy, stress relieving sunset..."
The design industry, by nature, is always looking to innovate and push the boundaries aesthetically and with regard to materials, specifications and finishes.

Whilst John Anthony Signs will never be able to hang our signs on “sky hooks” this constant innovation means that designers, architects, shopfitters and main contractors need to rely heavily on their specialist sub-contractors to find solutions.

The company believe that this collaboration is the key to finding the best results for both the designer and ultimately the client. Expert knowledge is key to making some designs a reality. There are numerous occasions where suppliers inform their client that it is impossible to fabricate or illuminate their given sign design but with a little research and development, sampling and prototyping, a solution can often be found. Many sign companies struggle to innovate and some companies relish it. David Fagg, the Sales Director of John Anthony Signs stated that “we are one of those companies that relish innovation and we have a wealth of experience both nationally and internationally across all market sectors, hence our strong relationships with many of the key designers and architects across the country. It is imperative that a consultative approach is maintained by our Business Development team so that we are a solution provider that can genuinely help and support our clients innovate and push the boundaries within sign design and fabrication.”

Collaboration is the key to get the best results.

Looking Glass of Bath

Looking Glass of Bath now offer a contemporary range in keeping with their reputation as creators of high quality, bespoke mirrors.

Over the last 50 years the Looking Glass of Bath have built up a fine reputation for making bespoke mirrors and frames in predominantly traditional designs.

However, responding to repeated requests to make a range of more contemporary mirrors, they have created a new collection, which is designed to reflect the current trend for more minimalist and industrial inspired interiors. They have created a new and exciting collection of simple unadorned frames using a variety of materials such as raw and polished brass, oxidised and blackened iron, nickel and polished stainless steel. They often incorporate antiqued mirror glass which is produced by their sister company into their designs which give an authentic vintage look and feel. Their ‘Panel’ mirrors are designed and made using this mirror glass and can be made in any size or configuration of tiles. Every bespoke mirror is hand made in their own workshops and examples of their finishes and past work can be viewed either on their website or in their showroom situated in the centre of Bath. There is parking nearby and their opening hours are 9 AM until 6 PM. Monday to Saturday. In answer to requests to supply their antiqued mirror glass as tiles, they supply tiles cut to any size for fitting directly onto walls or back splashes. Similarly, they now stock pre-cut ‘metro’ tiles size 20cm x 10cms with either polished or bevelled edges priced at £4 each. The mirror glass is made using a traditional Victorian technique which involves plating the glass using real silver rather than the modern alternatives which give a harsh bright reflection. The soft silver gives a much warmer and more authentic finish to all of their mirrors. The Antique Mirror company control every stage of the manufacturing process and can offer a range of finishes to suit any decorating scheme. Deliveries of glass, tiles or framed mirrors can be arranged using specialist carriers in the UK. Their lead times vary depending on outstanding orders, but they try to keep to a three-week turnaround from a confirmed order.

Rubber flooring is fast becoming one of the first choices for resilient flooring. With strong eco credentials, low maintenance and a long lifecycle, it is widely becoming recognised as the best long-term solution for contract flooring projects including schools, hospitals, airports, retail, leisure and transportation.

nora® rubber floorcoverings satisfy current requirements for modern-day construction projects. The floorings’ dense, unbroken surface prevents dirt absorption, thus enabling them to be cleaned easily and economically, without any coating required. With their high walking comfort and excellent footfall sound absorption properties, these resilient rubber floorings are the ideal guarantee for harmonious visual synergy. Above and beyond this, the floorcoverings’ extreme durability, backed up by their slip resistance properties and excellent fire-protection characteristics, ensure lasting safety for generations. nora® colour range is designed because you’ve only got one chance to make a first impression! Particularly in heavy traffic entrance and stairwell areas, the extraordinarily wear-resistance of nora floor coverings ensure a long-lasting warm, friendly and pleasant atmosphere. The norament® stairtreads conveniently preshaped in one piece turn installation into a fast, neat and cost-efficient job, in new buildings and for refurbishment work alike. More than 300 colours in the nora® standard range alone offers limitless scope for cost-efficient implementation of your particular design concept: from the entrance area through the stairwells and corridors, right into the living space. nora® see it as their task to accompany clients on the path to complete environmentally compatible project solutions. The floor coverings can be installed using double-sided special tape only released for nora products. Customers can be assured of positively contributing to indoor environment and thus protecting the health of all concerned. Today nora® flooring systems has no less than twelve environmental and quality awards including the ‘Blue Angel’ Greenguard Indoor Air Quality and the BREEAM ‘A’ rating.
FWUK Furnitureworks

FWUK Furnitureworks manufacture bespoke furniture from their factory which can take products all the way from design to production, giving them a loyal client base.

FWUK Furnitureworks are the preferred manufacturer for many of London's top designers. While it does have its own brand, the very successful 'Chairmaker', the bulk of its work is still building other people's products.

FWUK is run by Kevin Baker and the way he operates keeps the company at the forefront of Bespoke manufacture. The flexibility of the business is what makes it so successful. Many of FWUK's chairs are in well known London restaurants like the Ivy and the new Devonshire club and they are also found in some of the best homes, hotels and even on board superyachts.

The FWUK factory is the engine room of the business. Kevin has a full time design team that turn ideas into products: drawings in cad then full prototypes or mockups can be made. Or you can choose to bypass this process and go straight to production. The team at FWUK are so good at this they can take a sketch and turn it into a product in just a few weeks. The factory has a crew of almost 30 of the best makers in the country and the various departments are all under one roof in Worthing. The frame shop has every machine needed from saws to moulders, lathes and even CNC. There are makers everywhere hand making stunning frames, tables and even cabinets. The polishing shop has recently been doubled and now has 2 separate spray rooms with infrared heating. This department carries out all kinds of polishing and painting, including hi-gloss. The latest innovation is liquid metal application which has to be seen to be believed. At the other end of the building is the upholstery shop. Here the finest upholstery is applied to the frames. Techniques are designed for the intended use. From full on traditional to a unique system Kevin calls 'Hotel' this method has been developed using the toughest internals that all meet the commercial fire regs known as crib5. Products upholstered to this standard are built to take the abuse of a busy restaurant or Hotel. FWUK even make their own cushion interiors, from foam to feather wrap and even down mixes. The FWUK factory also has a showroom that is forever evolving with different products. There is a massive fabric library with books from all major fabric houses. This showroom is available to designers who wish to bring their clients down for a visit, the coffee is pretty good to. All in all FWUK is the one stop solution for designers who require bespoke English made furniture, they will even deliver it for you direct to your client or shipper in quality vans with no sign writing.

ETHOS

IN TRUE ICONIC SPIRIT, THE NEW ETHOS RANGE FROM LEGEND FIRES JUST CANNOT BE IGNORED.

Breaking the rules of the game with industry leading performance, the Ethos promises to define an era by being more admired than anything else around.

Rich and understatedly opulent, with a rakishly sophisticated exterior, the Ethos is designed to be noticed and built to last. And in true Legend Fires tradition, the new Ethos range has once again raised the bar for efficiency, performance and style.

A SPIRIT OF DIFFERENCE

FROM LEGEND FIRES

For more information about the new Ethos range contact our Sales Department on 01254 695244.

Our EcoSmart bio ethanol fires can fit into any environment. Come to our design studio and put us to the test. We’ve installed them in the most extraordinary locations indoors and out as we’ll be happy to show you.

Traditional, modern or contemporary

No flue, no hassle, no problem.

AND NOW

Our Bromic outdoor heating installations are thrilling designers who need to stylishly and subtly heat outdoor areas with either portable gas or fixed gas or electric heaters. They have proved far more versatile and efficient than previous technology allowed.

The BWMB sells and promotes British Wool to the international carpet and textile industry on behalf of wool producers in the UK. The Shepherd's Crook mark highlights British wool content in finished product and is only available to licensed partners. We are a founder member and active supporter of The Campaign for Wool.

The Campaign for Wool is a project that was initiated by its Patron HRH The Prince of Wales who wanted to educate and encourage consumers to choose real wool for its many superior attributes and in particular for its natural sustainability. It was launched in 2010 and has succeeded in bringing together the wool industry, leading brands, retailers and wool lovers across the globe.

Good Morning!

We believe that day and night are one.
Sleep well, live better with a Vispring bed.

VISPRING
Luxury Beds - London 1901

Discover our exclusive handcrafted bed collection.

www.vispring.com
Hypnos, the award-winning, family-run British company, has been manufacturing luxury handcrafted beds using time-honoured methods for over 100 years. Combining traditional skills with constant innovation, and using only the finest natural and sustainable materials, Hypnos has a reputation for making the most comfortable beds in the world. A Royal Warrant from Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II reinforces Hypnos' reputation for service excellence and commitment to sustainability.
Once upon a time...
.....people dreamt of a natural, deep and good sleep. Then Abaca was born to create the comfiest organic mattresses possible, to make those dreams come true.

Each Abaca mattress is organic and unlike any other on the market, every single one is naturally healthy, free of chemicals and crammed with goodness. Thanks to the natural properties of Welsh wool, they are fire retardant too.

But there's more to mattresses than pure, organic goodness. So please visit us at www.abacaorganic.co.uk or call us on 01269 598 491. Tell us what you want and rest assured that we'll go the extra mile to make your dreams come true.

A guest’s memory of a hotel stay is largely determined by the quality of their rest - a fantastic experience can be marred by a bad night’s sleep. Vispring’s luxurious, pocket sprung mattresses are renowned for offering unsurpassable comfort and support, and as a result, its beds grace the rooms of world-class hotels around the globe.

Bronzino® containers are hand-made by artisans from solid copper, zinc, and brass for use inside and out. Inspired by traditional metalworking forms and techniques, Scottish artist-designer Kenneth Topp established Bronzino® to create a showcase for craft-based and functional planter design. We work with architects, designers and private clients worldwide.

Create the perfect space for outdoor living with a beautiful haus awning. The haus awning combines the very latest design and technology with precision German engineering. Innovative features include automatic weather sensors that extend the awning to give shade when the sun’s out and then retract it in windy weather. Dimmable LED lighting and radio controlled infrared heating will allow more time relaxing and entertaining all year round.

Metropole is a system that looks like a pole but functions as a track. No need for rings or eyelets, the curtain hangs neatly on gliders contained within the track. The poles are available in 4 different sizes/shapes with a choice of up to 13 colours. Decorate your system with one of the stunning contemporary or traditional finials or midials.
The Bradley Collection is proudly based in rural Suffolk, where Priscilla Bradley has added her own sophisticated design signature to local craft skills and aspires to produce the world’s finest curtain poles.

Custom services include bending of poles and tracks, double curtain rods across design styles, bracket solutions for any window and a wide palette of sophisticated finishes.

Colony is a woven fabric editor from Italy. We specialise in a vast range of fabrics from traditional 17th and 18th century Italian and French designs to contemporary styles. Our original and elegant fabric designs fuse styles from France, Italy and the Orient and we are well known for our original style and particular accuracy of colours and materials. Colony also has an upholstered line of furniture to complement these fabrics. Available worldwide, Colony has showrooms in London, Paris, Rome, and Munich. Also available to view at the Colony showroom in London are the full collections of Scalamandre and Cesari. In addition, Peter Dudgeon is also exposing a collection of their furniture at our London showroom.

GoodWeave works to end child labour and slave labour in the rug industry. The international labelling scheme provides educational opportunities to children and vital support to weaving communities. A numbered GoodWeave label on a rug provides the assurance that no child was exploited to make it. By purchasing and specifying GoodWeave labelled rugs you will help eradicate exploitation. There are over 20 rug designers and specialists in the UK importing GoodWeave labelled rugs and over 130 worldwide. Please check before you purchase.

Web: www.ashleycraft.co.uk
A family business, Ashley Craft uses its skills in all fields of cabinet making and upholstery to produce stunning items of furniture. Working closely with interior designers and architects recent commissions include home cinema seating, bedroom furniture and numerous one off designs to grace the homes of many discerning clients.
We appreciate the finer things in life...

Founded in October 1952, Artistic is still privately owned and managed by the founding family, now in its third generation, and committed to maintaining the family principles of excellence in design and quality of products.

Our furniture graces some of the finest country houses, embassies, hotels and homes of people who appreciate the finer things in life, and, as you would expect, exported the world over.

Building on our heritage, we have constantly adapted to an ever changing market, making the company one of the UK’s most respected and leading makers of bespoke upholstery.

The company was awarded the coveted ‘Manufacturing Guild Mark’ by the Worshipful Company of Furniture Makers in the City of London in 1998 in recognition of the highest quality of manufacture.

Our brochures and ‘Guide to traditional and classic upholstery’ is available to view on line, or available by post on application.

Conker Brown takes a considered approach to designing understated, timeless, interior furniture which echoes the past whilst sitting beautifully in the present.
Great emphasis is given to the quality of materials, finishes and workmanship, and the quiet, distinctive detailing is as individual as their clients.

Web: www.originalbtc.com

Hand-assembled from the finest aluminium, chrome and bone china, Original BTC’s essential collection of British-manufactured table, floor, wall and pendant lights is suited to residential and commercial properties alike. Quality, detail and mix of materials is key: metallic painted, glass or china shades are paired with polished, satin or chromed bases, offset by matching cotton braided flex. Lights are made at Original BTC’s own bone china factory in Stoke on Trent, and metalworks and glassworks in Birmingham, ensuring 100% British production.

FRANCESCA’S PAINTS LTD
34 Battersea Business Centre
99/109 Lavender Hill
London SW11 1QY
Tel/Fax: 020 72287694
Web: www.francescaspaint.com
Francesca’s Paints, founded in 1996, produces eco and traditional paints, like lime wash and eco emulsion, in over 210 colours and custom mixes new colours to any specification. As “colour artisans”, colours are made by eye, the paint is hand mixed and a formula is kept for all colours so that they can be exactly reproduced. Francesca’s Paints sources their products attentively as textures and colours are their passion. Their paints are like velvet, changing with the light and adding depth to the wall.
