title theory. (1907) Property law. The idea that a mortgage transfers legal title of the property to the mortgagor, who retains it until the mortgage has been satisfied or foreclosed. Only a few American states — known as title states, title jurisdictions, or title-theory jurisdictions — have adopted this theory. Cf. LIEN THEORY.

[Cases: Mortgages C=136.]

title transaction. (1939) A transaction that affects title to an interest in land.

title unity. See unity of title under UNITY.

TM, abbr. TRADEMARK. Typically used as a superscript after a mark (TM), it signals only that someone claims ownership of the mark; it does not mean that the mark is registered.
T-note. abbr. TREASURY NOTE.

torcher. Scots law. Dowry.

To-have-and-to-hold clause. See HABENDUM CLAUSE (1).

token, n. (bef. 12c) 1. A sign or mark; a tangible evidence of the existence of a fact. 2. A sign or indication of an intention to do something, as when a buyer places a small order with a vendor to show good faith with a view toward later placing a larger order. 3. A coin or other legal tender. • Although token most commonly refers to a piece of metal, the term may also denote a bill or other medium of exchange.

false token. A counterfeit coin, bill, or the like.

tolerated, v.b. 1. To annul or take away <toll a right of entry>. 2. (Of a time period, esp. a statutory one) to stop the running of; to abate <toll the limitations period>. See EQUITABLE TOLLING. 3. Hist. To raise or collect a tax or due. 4. A charge for a long-distance telephone call. [Cases: Telecommunications ☻ 950.]

toll, n. 1. A tax or due paid for the use of something; esp., the consideration paid either to use a public road, highway, or bridge, or to maintain a booth for the sale of goods at a fair or market. [Cases: Bridges ☻ 33; Turnpikes and Toll Roads ☻ 37.] 2. A right to collect such a tax or due. 3. The privilege of being free from such a tax or due. 4. A charge for a long-distance telephone call. [Cases: Telecommunications ☻ 950.]

toll, vb. (15c) 1. To annul or take away <toll a right of entry>. 2. (Of a time period, esp. a statutory one) to stop the running of; to abate <toll the limitations period>. See EQUITABLE TOLLING. 3. Hist. To raise or collect a tax or due for the use of something.

tollage (toh-lij). 1. Payment of a toll. 2. Money charged or paid as a toll. 3. The liberty or franchise of charging a toll.

tolling agreement. (1934) An agreement between a potential plaintiff and a potential defendant by which the defendant agrees to extend the statutory limitations period on the plaintiff's claim, usu. so that both parties will have more time to resolve their dispute without litigation. [Cases: Limitation of Actions ☻ 14.]

tolling statute. (1899) A law that interrupts the running of a statute of limitations in certain situations, as when the defendant cannot be served with process in the forum jurisdiction. [Cases: Limitation of Actions ☻ 43-138.]

tolt (toht). Hist. A writ for removing a case pending in a court baron to a county court. — Also termed writ of toll. See COURT BARON; COUNTY COURT under COURT. “Where the disputed interest in the land was not a fee held of the king in chief but a fee held of a 'mesne lord' the writ was directed to him bidding him do full right between the parties in the matter of the land in question under pain of the case being removed from his court to the sheriff's court if he failed to do justice. This removal was effected (if necessary) by the process known as 'tolt' under which a sheriff on a complaint to him in his county court of a failure of the lord to do justice ordered his bailiff to attend the lord's court and take away the plaint into the county court.” Geoffrey Radcliffe & Geoffrey Cross, The English Legal System 38 (G.J. Hand & D.J. Bentley eds., 6th ed. 1977).

tombstone. Securities. An advertisement (esp. in a newspaper) for a public securities offering, describing the security and identifying the sellers. • The term gets its name from the ad's traditional black border and plain print. — Also termed tombstone advertisement; tombstone ad. Cf. PROSPECTUS.

ton. A measure of weight fixed at either 2,000 pounds avoidupois or 20 hundredweights, each hundredweight being 112 pounds avoidupois. [Cases: Weights and Measures ☻ 3.]

long ton. Twenty long hundredweight (2,240 pounds), or 1.016 metric tons.

short ton. Twenty short hundredweight (2,000 pounds), or 0.907 metric tons.

ton mile. In transportation, a measure equal to the transportation of one ton of freight one mile.

tonnage (ton-i). 1. The capacity of a vessel for carrying freight or other loads, calculated in tons. — Also termed net tonnage. [Cases: Shipping ☻ 7.2. The total shipping tonnage of a country or port. 3. See tonnage duty under DUTY (4).

tonnage-rent. A rent reserved by a mining lease or similar transaction, consisting of a royalty on every ton of minerals extracted from the mine. [Cases: Mines and Minerals ☻ 70.]

tonnage tax. See tonnage duty under DUTY (4).

tonsure. Hist. The shaving of a person's (usu. a cleric's) head. • Serjeants-at-law supposedly wore coifs to conceal their shaved heads.

tontine (ton-teen or ton-teen), n. 1. A financial arrangement in which a group of participants share in the arrangement's advantages until all but one has died or defaulted, at which time the whole goes to that survivor. [Cases: Insurance ☻ 2441.] 2. A financial arrangement in which an entire sum goes to the contributing participants still alive and not in default at the end of a specified period.

tontine policy. See INSURANCE POLICY.

top-hat pension plan. See PENSION PLAN.

top lease. See LEASE.

top management. See MANAGEMENT.

topographical survey. See SURVEY.

torpedo doctrine. See ATTRACTIVE-NUISANCE DOCTRINE.

Torrens system (tor-anz or tahr-anz). (1863) A system for establishing title to real estate in which a claimant first acquires an abstract of title and then applies to a court for the issuance of a title certificate, which serves as conclusive evidence of ownership. • This tort (tort). (16c) 1. A civil wrong, other than breach of contract, for which a remedy may be obtained, usu. in the form of damages; a breach of a duty that the law imposes on persons who stand in a particular relation to one another. [Cases: Torts \(\Rightarrow\) 106.] 2. (pl.) The branch of law dealing with such wrongs.

"To ask concerning any occurrence 'Is this a crime or is it a tort?' is — to borrow Sir James Stephen's apt illustration — no wiser than it would be to ask concerning a man 'Is he a father or a son?' For he may well be both." J.W. Cecil Turner, Kenny's Outlines of Criminal Law 543 (16th ed. 1952).

"We may ... define a tort as a civil wrong for which the remedy is a common-law action for unliquidated damages, and which is not exclusively the breach of a contract or the breach of a trust or other merely equitable obligation." R.F.V. Heuston, Salmond on the Law of Torts 13 (17th ed. 1977).

"It might be possible to define a tort by enumerating the things that it is not. It is not crime, it is not breach of contract, it is not necessarily concerned with property rights or problems of government, but is the occupant of a large residuary field remaining if these are taken out of the law. But this again is illusory, and the conception of a sort of legal garbage-can to hold what can be put nowhere else is of no help. In the first place, tort is a field which pervades the entire law, and is so interlocked at every point with property, contract and other accepted classifications that, as the student of law soon discovers, the categories are quite arbitrary. In the second, there is a central theme, or basis or idea, running through the cases of what are called torts, which, although difficult to put into words, does distinguish them in greater or less degree from other types of cases." W. Page Keeton et al., The Law of Torts § 1, at 2-3 (5th ed. 1984).

business tort. A tort that impairs some aspect of an economic interest or business relationship and causes economic loss rather than property damage or bodily harm. • Business torts include tortious interference with contractual relations, intentional interference with prospective economic advantage, unfair business practices, misappropriation of trade secrets, and product disparagement. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation \(\Rightarrow\) 410; Libel and Slander \(\Rightarrow\) 130; Torts \(\Rightarrow\) 211, 241.]

constitutional tort. (1966) A violation of one's constitutional rights by a government officer, redressable by a civil action filed directly against the officer. • A constitutional tort committed under color of state law (such as a civil-rights violation) is actionable under 42 USCA § 1983. — Sometimes (informally) shortened to contort. [Cases: Civil Rights \(\Rightarrow\) 1304.]

dignitary tort (di-gna-tar-i). (1996) A tort involving injury to one's reputation or honor. • In the few jurisdictions in which courts use the phrase dignitary tort (such as Maine), defamation is commonly cited as an example. — Also (erroneously) termed dignatory tort.

environmental tort. A tort involving exposure to disagreeable or harmful environmental conditions or harm to and degradation of an environment (e.g., the pouring of acid on golf greens). • An environmental tort is usu. harmful to land rather than people, though people may find it unpleasant (e.g., odors from a landfill). By contrast, toxic torts involve exposure to harmful substances that cause personal physical injury or disease. Cf. toxic tort.

government tort. (1945) A tort committed by the government through an employee, agent, or instrumentality under its control. • The tort may or may not be actionable, depending on whether the government is entitled to sovereign immunity. A tort action against the U.S. government is regulated by the Federal Tort Claims Act, while a state action is governed by the state's tort claims act. See federal tort claims act; sovereign immunity under immunity (1). [Cases: Municipal Corporations \(\Rightarrow\) 723.]

intentional tort. (1860) A tort committed by someone acting with general or specific intent. • Examples include battery, false imprisonment, and trespass to land. — Also termed willful tort. Cf. negligence. [Cases: Torts \(\Rightarrow\) 115.]

marital tort. A tort by one spouse against the other. • Since most jurisdictions have abolished interspousal tort immunity, courts have had to decide which tort claims to recognize between married persons. Among those that some, but not all, courts have chosen to recognize are assault and battery, including claims for infliction of sexually transmitted disease, and intentional and negligent infliction of emotional distress. — Also termed domestic tort. Cf. husband-wife immunity under immunity. [Cases: Husband and Wife \(\Rightarrow\) 53, 205(2).] maritime tort. Any tort within the admiralty jurisdiction. [Cases: Admiralty \(\Rightarrow\) 17.]

mass tort. (1940) A civil wrong that injures many people. • Examples include toxic emissions from a factory, the crash of a commercial airliner, and contamination from an industrial-waste-disposal site. Cf. toxic tort.

negligent tort. (1865) A tort committed by failure to observe the standard of care required by law under the circumstances. See negligence.

personal tort. (17c) A tort involving or consisting in an injury to one's person, reputation, or feelings, as distinguished from an injury or damage to real or personal property. [Cases: Torts \(\Rightarrow\) 425.]

preconception tort. A tort that is committed before the victim has been conceived.

prenatal tort. (1960) 1. A tort committed against a fetus. • If born alive, a child can sue for injuries resulting from tortious conduct predating the child's birth. [Cases: Death \(\Rightarrow\) 15; Infants \(\Rightarrow\) 72(2).] 2. Loosely, any of several torts relating to reproduction, such as those giving rise to wrongful-birth actions, wrongful-life actions, and wrongful-pregnancy actions. [Cases: Health <\to 686, 687.]

primae facie tort (pr-ma fay-shoo-ee or -shee or -sho). (1938) An unjustified, intentional infliction of harm on another person, resulting in damages, by one or more acts that would otherwise be lawful. ● Some jurisdictions have established this tort to provide a remedy for malicious deeds — esp. in business and trade contexts — that are not actionable under traditional tort law. [Cases: Torts <\to 155.]

property tort. (1898) A tort involving damage to property. [Cases: Torts <\to 429.]

public tort. (1949) A minor breach of the law (such as a parking violation) that, although it carries a criminal punishment, is considered a civil offense rather than a criminal one because it is merely a prohibited act (malum prohibitum) and not inherently reprehensible conduct (malum in se). — Also termed civil offense. Cf. civil wrong under wrong; public delict under delict. [Cases: Criminal Law <\to 26, 27.]

quasi-tort. (1809) A wrong for which a non perpetrator is held responsible; a tort for which one who did not directly commit it can nonetheless be found liable, as when an employer is held liable for a tort committed by an employee. — Also spelled quasi tort. See vicarious liability under liability; respondeat superior.

toxic tort. (1979) A civil wrong arising from exposure to a toxic substance, such as asbestos, radiation, or hazardous waste. ● A toxic tort can be remedied by a civil lawsuit (usu. a class action) or by administrative action. Cf. mass tort; environmental tort. [Cases: Negligence <\to 306; Products Liability <\to 201, 217.]

concurrent tortfeasors. (1921) Two or more tortfeasors whose simultaneous actions cause injury to a third party. ● Such tortfeasors are jointly and severally liable. [Cases: Negligence <\to 421, 484; Torts <\to 134, 135.]

consecutive tortfeasors. (1955) Two or more tortfeasors whose actions, while occurring at different times, combine to cause a single injury to a third party. ● Such tortfeasors are jointly and severally liable.

joint tortfeasors. (1822) Two or more tortfeasors who contributed to the claimant's injury and who may be joined as defendants in the same lawsuit. See joint and several liability under liability. [Cases: Negligence <\to 484; Torts <\to 134, 135.]

successive tortfeasors. (1954) Two or more tortfeasors whose negligence occurs at different times and causes different injuries to the same third party. [Cases: Damages <\to 34.]

tortuous (tor-shus). adj. (16c) 1. Constituting a tort; wrongful <tortious conduct>. [Cases: Torts <\to 106, 107.] 2. In the nature of a tort <tortious cause of action>.

tortious conduct. See conduct.

tortious interference with contractual relations. (1954) A third party's intentional inducement of a contract­ ing party to break a contract, causing damage to the relationship between the contracting parties. — Also termed unlawful interference with contractual relations; interference with a contractual relationship; interference with contract; inducement of breach of contract; procurement of breach of contract. [Cases: Labor and Employment <\to 903–914; Torts <\to 212.]

tortious interference with economic relations. See tortIOUS INTERFERENCE WITH PROSPECTIVE ADVANTAGE.

tortious interference with prospective advantage. (1973) An intentional, damaging intrusion on another's potential business relationship, such as the opportunity of obtaining customers or employment. — Also termed interference with a business relationship; tortious interference with a business advantage; tortious interference with economic relations. [Cases: Torts <\to 213.]

tortious liability. See liability.

tort-of-another doctrine. Torts. The principle that a party who must bring or defend an action against a third person based on a tort committed by another person is entitled to seek litigation-related damages from that other person. [Cases: Damages <\to 73.]

tort reform. (1974) A movement to reduce the amount of tort litigation, usu. involving legislation that restricts tort remedies or that caps damages awards (esp. for punitive damages). ● Advocates of tort reform argue that it lowers insurance and healthcare costs and prevents windfalls, while opponents contend that it denies plaintiffs the recovery they deserve for their injuries.

torture, n. (16c) The infliction of intense pain to the body or mind to punish, to extract a confession or information, or to obtain sadistic pleasure. — torture, vb.

"By torture I mean the infliction of physically founded suffering or the threat immediately to inflict it, where such infliction or threat is intended to elicit, or such infliction is incidental to means adopted to elicit, matter of intelligence or forensic proof and the motive is one of military, civil, or ecclesiastical interest." James Heath. Torture and English Law 3 (1982).

torture by proxy. See extraordinary rendition under RENDITION.

torture flight. See extraordinary rendition under RENDITION.

total, adj. (14c) 1. Whole; not divided; full; complete. 2. Utter; absolute.
Totten trust. See trust.

total incorporation. See incorporation.
totality-of-the-circumstances test. (1959) Criminal procedure. A standard for determining whether hearsay (such as an informant’s tip) is sufficiently reliable to establish probable cause for an arrest or search warrant.
• Under this test — which replaced Aguilar–Spinelli’s two-pronged approach — the reliability of the hearsay is weighed by focusing on the entire situation as described in the probable-cause affidavit, and not on any one specific factor. Illinois v. Gates, 462 U.S. 213, 103 S.Ct. 2317 (1983). Cf. Aguilar–spinelli test. [Cases: Arrest C=63.4(7); Searches and Seizures C=115.1.]
total loss. See Loss.
total-offset rule. Torts. A theory of damages holding that the eroding effect of inflation offsets the accrual of interest on an award and makes it unnecessary to discount future damages to their present value. [Cases: Damages C=226.]

total repudiation. See repudiation.
tota re perspecta (toh-ta re par-spek-ta). [Latin] Hist. The whole matter being taken into account or considered. — Also termed tota materia perspecta.
totidem verbis. [Latin] In so many words.
toto caelo (toh-toh see-loh), adv. [Latin “by the whole extent of the heavens”] As far as possible; diametrically <the parties differ with each other toward>.

Totten trust. See trust.
touch, vb. Marine insurance. To stop at a port, usu. for a brief period. [Cases: Insurance C=3059.]
touch and stay. Marine insurance. A right, granted by an insurer to an insured vessel, to stop and remain at certain designated points in the course of the voyage.

Touhy regulations. The rules governing procedures for document production by federal agencies for purposes of litigation. 28 C.F.R. 16.21 et seq. • The term comes from United States ex rel. Touhy v. Ragen, 340 U.S. 462, 71 S.Ct. 416 (1951). In that case, an FBI agent refused to produce certain records under a subpoena duces tecum because a departmental regulation expressly stated that the Attorney General was the only person with authority to produce the documents. The United States Supreme Court upheld the regulation's validity. [Cases: Witnesses C=16.]
tout court (too koor), adv. [French “simply, without qualification”] Very briefly; without explanation.
tout ensemble (toot on-sen-bl), n. [French “all together”] The overall visual effect of a design; general effect. • The phrase denotes a way of comparing two designs, by looking at the total impact rather than comparing individual design elements. That is the technique used in determining whether a design infringes someone’s trade-dress rights, or if a design-patent application shows a novel and nonobvious change from existing designs. Although the phrase is adverbial in French, it is typically used as a noun in English. See Antidissection rule.
touting, n. The solicitation of business by highly recommending a security or product, esp. when the recommendation’s basis is largely puffery.
tout temps prist et encore prist. [Law French] Common-law pleading. The clause in a plea of tender stating that the pleader is and always has been ready to pay. See Plea of Tender.
towage (toh-ij), n. 1. The act or service of towing ships and vessels, usu. by means of a small vessel called a tug. [Cases: Towage C=1.] 2. The charge for such a service. [Cases: Towage C=5.]
toward, adj. 1. In the direction of; on a course or line leading to (some place or something). 2. Coming soon; not long before.
toit (too wit), adv. (14c) Archaic. That is to say; namely <the district attorney amended the complaint to include embezzlement to wit, “stealing money that the company had entrusted to the accused”>. — Sometimes spelled to-wit; towit.
town. 1. A center of population that is larger and more fully developed than a village, but that (traditionally speaking) is not incorporated as a city. [Cases: Towns C=1.] 2. The territory within which this population lives. 3. Collectively, the people who live within this territory. Cf. city.

“A town is a precinct newly containing ten families, whereupon in some countries they are called tithings, within one of which tithings every man must be dwelling, and find sureties for his good behaviour, else he that taketh him into his house is to be amerced in the leet.” Sir Henry Finch, Law, or a Discourse Thereof 80 (1759).
town-bonding act. A law authorizing a town, county, or other municipal corporation to issue its corporate bonds for the purpose of aiding in construction, often of railroads. — Also termed town-bonding law. [Cases: Towns C=52.]
town clerk. See clerk (1).
toxic tort. See TORT.

toxicology (tok-si-kol-a-jee). (18c) The branch of medicine that concerns poisons, their effects, their recognition, their antidotes, and generally the diagnosis and therapeutics of poisoning; the science of poisons. — toxicological (tok-si-ko-lij-i-kal), adj.

toxic waste. See WASTE (2).

toxin, n. (1886) 1. Broadly, any poison or toxicant. 2. As used in pathology and medical jurisprudence, any diffusible alkaloidal substance — such as the ptomaines, abrin, brucin, or serpent venoms and esp. the poisonous products of disease-producing bacteria.

tp. abbr. TOWNSHIP.

TPL. abbr. Third-party logistical service provider. See FREIGHT FORWARDER.

TPPM. abbr. TANGIBLE-PERSONAL-PROPERTY MEMORANDUM.

TPR. abbr. TERMINATION OF PARENTAL RIGHTS.

traces, n. See retrospectant evidence under EVIDENCE.

tracing, n. (16c) 1. The process of tracking property's ownership or characteristics from the time of its origin to the present. 2. Parties in a divorce will be expected to trace the origins of property in existence at the time of marital dissolution in order to characterize each asset as separate or marital property (or as community property in some states). — Also termed tracing of funds; tracing of property. Cf. commingle. 2. The act of discovering and following a person's actions or movements (tracing the robber's steps).

tract. (14c) A specified parcel of land .

trade, n. (14c) 1. The business of buying and selling or bartering goods or services; COMMERCE.

inland trade. Trade wholly carried on within a country, as distinguished from foreign commerce.

precarious trade. Int'l law. Trade by a neutral country between two belligerent powers, allowed to exist at the latter's sufferance.

2. A transaction or swap. 3. A business or industry occupation; a craft or profession. — trade, vb.

trade acceptance. See ACCEPTANCE (4).

trade agreement. 1. An agreement such as the North American Free Trade Agreement — between two or more nations concerning the buying and selling of each nation's goods. [Cases: Customs Duties C=10.] 2. COLLECTIVE-BARGAINING AGREEMENT.

trade and commerce. Every business occupation carried on for subsistence or profit and involving the elements of bargain and sale, barter, exchange, or traffic.

trade association. See ASSOCIATION.

trade council. A central labor union; the central organization of a local trade union. — Also termed trades council. See UNION.

trade defamation. See DEFAMATION.

trade deficit. See DEFICIT.
trade discount. See discount.

trade disparagement. The common-law tort of belittling someone's business, goods, or services with a remark that is false or misleading but not necessarily defamatory. • To succeed at the action, a plaintiff must prove that (1) the defendant made the disparaging remark; (2) the defendant either intended to injure the business, knew the statement was false, or recklessly disregarded whether it was true; and (3) the statement resulted in special damages to the plaintiff, usu. by passing off. — Also termed commercial disparagement; product disparagement; injurious falsehood. Cf. trade defamation under defamation. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation 25.]

trade dispute. 1. Int'l law. A dispute between two or more countries arising from tariff rates or other matters related to international commerce. 2. Labor law. A dispute between an employer and employees over pay, working conditions, or other employment-related matters. • An employee who leaves during a trade dispute is not entitled to benefits under the Unemployment Insurance Act.

trade dollar. Hist. A United States dollar coin, made of silver, issued from 1873 to 1878 for use in foreign trade, esp. in eastern Asia. • A trade dollar was legal tender within the U.S. until 1876 when the coin's silver content fell to less than one dollar. From 1878 to 1885, trade dollars were minted only in proof sets, then discontinued.

trade draft. See draft.

trade dress. Trademarks. The overall appearance and image in the marketplace of a product or a commercial enterprise. • For a product, trade dress typically comprises packaging and labeling. For an enterprise, it typically comprises design and decor. If a trade dress is distinctive and nonfunctional, it may be protected under trademark law. — Also termed get-up; look and feel. [Cases: Trademarks 1061.]

"The 'trade dress' of a product is essentially its total image and overall appearance. It 'involves the total image of a product and may include features such as size, shape, color or color combinations, texture, graphics, or even particular sales techniques.'" Two Pesos, Inc. v. Taco Cabana, Inc., 505 U.S. 763, 765 n.1, 112 S.Ct. 2755, 2755 n.1 (1992).

trade libel. Trade defamation that is written or recorded. See libel; trade defamation under defamation; disparagement (3). Cf. trade slander under slander. [Cases: Libel and Slander 130.]

trademark, n. (1838) 1. A word, phrase, logo, or other graphic symbol used by a manufacturer or seller to distinguish its product or products from those of others. • The main purpose of a trademark is to designate the source of goods or services. In effect, the trademark is the commercial substitute for one's signature.

To receive federal protection, a trademark must be (1) distinctive rather than merely descriptive or generic; (2) affixed to a product that is actually sold in the marketplace; and (3) registered with the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office. In its broadest sense, the term trademark includes a servicemark. Unregistered trademarks are protected under common-law only, and distinguished with the mark "TM." — Often shortened to mark. Cf. servicemark. [Cases: Trademarks 1021.]

The body of law dealing with how businesses distinctively identify their products. — Abbr. TM. See Lanham Act. Cf. servicemark; registered trademark; brand; trademark.

"The protection of trade-marks is the law's recognition of the psychological function of symbols. If it is true that we live by symbols, it is no less true that we purchase what he has been led to believe he wants. The owner of a mark exploits this human propensity by making every effort to impregnate the atmosphere of the market with the drawing power of a congealed symbol. Whatever the means employed, the aim is the same — to convey through the mark, in the minds of potential customers, the desirability of the commodity upon which it appears. Once this is attained, the trade-mark owner has something of value. If another poaches upon the commercial magnetism of the symbol he has created, the owner can obtain legal redress." Mishawaka Rubber & Woolen Mfg. Co. v. S.S. Kresge Co., 316 U.S. 203, 205, 62 S.Ct. 1022, 1024 (1942) (Frankfurter, J.).

"A trademark functions on three different levels: as an indication of origin or ownership, as a guarantee of constancy of the quality or other characteristics of a product or service, and as a medium of advertisement. Thus, a trademark guarantees, identifies, and sells the product or service to which it refers. These three facets of a trademark — of differing importance at different times, in different lines of business and for different products or services — are somewhat correlated. The classical function, that of identification, has been primarily responsible for molding the development of trademark law. The significance of the guarantee function has been somewhat exaggerated, while the implications of the advertisement function still await full recognition in the law." 3 Rudolf Callmann, The Law of Unfair Competition, Trademarks and Monopolies § 17.01, at 2 (4th ed. 1998).

abandoned trademark. A mark whose owner has discontinued using it and has no intent to resume using it in the ordinary course of trade, or has allowed it to become a generic term or otherwise to lose its distinctive significance. • Under § 45 of the Lanham Act, nonuse of a mark for three consecutive years is prima facie evidence of abandonment. The owner of an abandoned mark has no trademark rights to exclude others from using it. — Also termed abandoned mark. [Cases: Trademarks 1153, 1155.]

arbitrary trademark. A trademark containing common words that do not describe or suggest any characteristic of the product to which the trademark is assigned. • Because arbitrary marks are neither descriptive nor suggestive of the goods or services in connection with which they are used, they are inherently distinctive, require no proof of secondary meaning, and are entitled to strong legal protection. A name that would be generic if used with one product may be arbitrary if used with another. For example, "Bicycle" may be registered to identify playing cards, but it could not be protected as a mark to identify bicycles. — Also termed arbitrary mark; arbitrary name. [Cases: Trade Regulation C—1039.]

certification trademark. A word, symbol, or device used on goods or services to certify the place of origin, material, mode of manufacture, quality, or other characteristic. See 15 USCA § 1127. — Also termed certification mark. Cf. collective trademark. — Also termed trademark. [Cases: Trademarks C—1066.]

coined trademark. See fanciful trademark.

collective trademark. (1941) A trademark or servicemark used by an association, union, or other group either to identify the group’s products or services or to signify membership in the group. — Also termed collective mark. Cf. certification trademark. [Cases: Trademarks C—1067.]

Community trademark. A trademark registered with the European Union Trademark Office and recognized in all EU countries. — Also termed Community mark. [Cases: Trademarks C—1261.]

composite trademark. (kom-poz-it mahrk). A trademark or servicemark made up of several words that form a distinctive whole, even if the individual words are ordinary. — Advertising slogans are often protectable as composite marks. A trademark registrant can establish ownership in the whole mark, but must disclaim ownership in any unregistrable parts. — Also termed composite mark; hybrid mark; hybrid trademark. [Cases: Trademarks C—1058.]

counterfeit trademark. A spurious mark that is identical to, or substantially indistinguishable from, a registered trademark. 15 USCA § 1116(d)(l)(B). — Also termed counterfeit mark. [Cases: Trademarks C—1432, 1787.]

descriptive trademark. A trademark that is a meaningful word in common usage or that merely describes or suggests a product. • This type of trademark is entitled to protection only if it has acquired distinctiveness over time. — Also termed descriptive mark; weak mark; weak trademark. See SECONDARY MEANING. [Cases: Trademarks C—1035.]

"The bar against descriptive marks simply reflects the requirement of distinctiveness. 15 U.S.C.A. § 1052(e)(l). It often is said that a mark should not be analyzed in a piecemeal fashion. Instead, the mark as a whole must be tested for descriptiveness or secondary meaning. A mark that merely describes a product cannot possibly distinguish one producer from another. As an obvious example, ‘apple’ would be a descriptive name for that fruit, and, as a mark, would serve only to confuse the consumer, for it would tell nothing about the different origins of a selection of apples produced by different producers. Moreover, to allow an owner to pre-empt the term ‘apple’ would afford the owner a monopoly of something that is necessary to describe the goods for sale.” Arthur R. Miller & Michael H. Davis, Intellectual Property: Patents, Trademarks, and Copyright in a Nutshell 163 (2d ed. 1990).

disparaging trademark. A trademark that tends to bring a person or class of people into contempt or disrepute. • Section 2(a) of the Lanham Act prohibits the registration of disparaging marks. 15 USCA § 1052(a). — Also termed disparaging mark. See prohibited and reserved trademark. [Cases: Trademarks C—1073.]

distinctive trademark. A very strong trademark, one that consumers immediately and consistently associate with specific goods and services. • Distinctive trademarks are usu. fanciful, arbitrary, or suggestive, but descriptive trademarks and common names can become distinctive if they become so well known as to acquire a secondary meaning. — Also termed distinctive mark. [Cases: Trademarks C—1029.]

famous trademark. A trademark that not only is distinctive but also has been used and heavily advertised or widely accepted in the channels of trade over a long time, and is so well known that consumers immediately associate it with one specific product or service. • Only famous marks are protected from dilution. Eight nonexclusive statutory factors are often used in determining whether a particular mark is famous. See 15 USCA § 1125(c)(l)(A)-(H). — Also termed famous mark. [Cases: Trademarks C—1468.]

fanciful trademark. A trademark consisting of a made-up or coined word; a distinctive trademark or tradename having no independent meaning. • This type of mark is considered inherently distinctive and thus protected at common law, and is eligible for trademark registration from the time of its first use. — Also termed fanciful mark; fanciful term; coined trademark; coined mark; coined term. [Cases: Trademarks C—1039.]

"Arbitrary or fanciful marks convey nothing about the nature of the product except through knowledge of the market. For instance, Kodak conveys nothing about photographic equipment except to those knowledgeable about that trade." Arthur R. Miller & Michael H. Davis, Intellectual Property in a Nutshell 168 (2d ed. 1990).

geographically descriptive trademark. A trademark that uses a geographic name to indicate where the goods are grown or manufactured. • This type of mark is protected at common law, and can be registered only on proof that it has acquired distinctiveness over time. — Also termed geographically descriptive mark. See SECONDARY MEANING. [Cases: Trademarks C—1047.]

house trademark. A trademark that identifies a company, a division of a company, or a company’s product line as the source of a product or service. • A house mark and a product mark often appear together on a label. — Also termed house mark. Cf. product trademark. [Cases: Trademarks C—1060.]

hybrid trademark. See composite trademark.

product trademark. A trademark that identifies a single good or service, rather than the producing company, a division of a company, or a product line. • A product mark and a house mark often appear together on a label. — Also termed product mark. Cf. house trademark. [Cases: Trademarks C——1022.]

prohibited and reserved trademark. A mark that is not protected under the Lanham Act because it either fall into an expressly excluded category or else is similar to a mark granted by statute to another. 15 USCA § 1052. — Also termed prohibited and reserved mark. [Cases: Trademarks C——1243.]

registered trademark. A trademark that has been filed and recorded with the Patent and Trademark Office. • A federally registered trademark is usu. marked by the symbol "®" or a phrase such as "Registered U.S. Patent & Trademark Office" so that the trademark owner can potentially collect treble damages or the defendant’s profits for an infringement. If the symbol is not used, the owner can collect these damages or profits only by proving that the defendant actually knew that the mark was registered. — Also termed registered mark. Cf. servicemark. [Cases: Trademarks C——1240.]

strong trademark. An inherently distinctive trademark that is used — usu. by the owner only — in a fictitious, arbitrary, and fanciful manner, and is therefore given greater protection than a weak mark under the trademark laws. — Also termed strong mark. [Cases: Trademarks C——1033.]

suggestive trademark. A trademark that suggests rather than describes the particular characteristics of a product, thus requiring a consumer to use imagination to draw a conclusion about the nature of the product. • A suggestive trademark is entitled to protection without proof of secondary meaning. — Also termed evocative mark; suggestive mark; suggestive name. See secondary meaning. [Cases: Trademarks C——1038.]

technical trademark. A mark that satisfies all the elements of a common-law trademark. • The essential elements of a technical trademark are as follows: (1) its use to designate a commercial source would not interfere with anyone else’s right to use the mark; (2) it must primarily identify the source, rather than the product’s category or grade of quality; (3) it must be attached to the product, label, or collateral materials rather than merely used in advertising; and (4) its use must not undermine some public policy, as by being scandalous or deceptive. — Also termed pure trademark; technical mark; true trademark. [Cases: Trademarks C——1039.]

Trademark Act of 1946. See LANHAM ACT.

trademark application. A mark owner’s written request, filed with the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office, for federal registration of a mark, accompanied by a sample of the mark to be protected and the filing fee. • The application may describe either an existing mark that is in use or a proposed mark. — Also termed servicemark application. [Cases: Trademarks C——1282.]

combined application. An application to register a mark to be used in more than one class of goods or services. • A combined application is given a single serial number, but it is examined as if it were a set of distinct single applications. Separate filing fees must be paid for each class. — Also termed multiple-class application. [Cases: Trademarks C——1282.]

intent-to-use application. An application filed with the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office to protect a trademark or servicemark that is not currently in commercial use but whose owner has a bona fide intent to use the mark commercially in the foreseeable future. • Trademark rights have traditionally been restricted to marks actually used in trade, but a 1988 amendment to the Lanham Act permitted applications to be filed before actual use begins if the mark otherwise qualifies for the Principal Register. 15 USCA § 1051(b). See principal register. [Cases: Trademarks C——1284.]

trademark-application amendment. A proposed modification to a registered trademark or to an application for trademark registration. [Cases: Trademarks C——1251, 1282.]

amendment of registration. Trademarks. Amendment of an existing trademark registration to make minor changes in the design of a mark to reflect how the mark is actually used. • The U.S. Patent and Trademark Office permits an amendment of registration only if it does not materially alter the character of the mark. The PTO amends a registration by attaching to the printed registration a printed certificate showing the amendment. — Also termed amendment of mark in registration. [Cases: Trademarks C——1251.]

amendment to allege use. Trademarks. A supplement to a trademark applicant’s intent-to-use application filed to inform the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office that a trademark is actually in use in interstate commerce. • The form is titled “Allegation of Use for Intent to Use Application.” — Abbr. AAU. — Also termed statement of use; allegation of use. See declaration of use. [Cases: Trademarks C——1284.]

amendment to different register. Trademarks. An amendment to an application for registration on the Principal Register, requesting that the mark instead be placed on the supplemental register. [Cases: Trademarks C——1283.]

trademark class. Any one of 42 international trademark-protection categories, each comprising similar goods or services. • There are 34 goods classes and 8 services classes. A trademark is protected in each class that is relevant to the product’s or service’s business area. [Cases: Trademarks C——1369.]

Trademark Cyberpiracy Prevention Act. See Anticybersquatting Consumer Protection Act.
Trademark Electronic Application System. A method of applying to the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office for a trademark over the Internet. • The system is available at http://www.uspto.gov/teas/index.html. — Abbrev. TEAS.

trademark infringement. See infringe­ment.

Trademark Law Treaty. A 1994 treaty that reduces barriers to applying for and registering trademarks internationally, and establishes a model international-trademark-registration form acceptable by all signatory nations. • The United States is a party to the treaty. [Cases: Trademarks C=1236.]

trademark-registration notice. A notice that a mark is protected by registration with the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office, shown by placing a symbol next to the mark. • In the U.S., the R-within-a-circle symbol (®) is common but the legend "Reg. U.S. Pat. Off." is acceptable. Only federally registered marks may use this notice. [Cases: Trademarks C=1250.]

Trademark Trial and Appeal Board. An administrative body that hears and decides disputes involving trademark ownership, conflicts between marks, and registrability of marks. — Abbrev. TTAB. [Cases: Trademarks C=1313.]

“No judicial body has administered our trademark laws with more regularity than the Trademark Trial and Appeal Board . . . . the administrative tribunal of the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office that decides trademark proceedings. Established by Congress in 1958, the Board has seen its caseload increase dramatically over time, reflecting the growing importance of trademarks in our competitive marketplace.” — Jeffery A. Handelman, Guide to TTAB Practice § 1.01, at 1–3 (2008).

trade meaning. See secondary meaning.

tradename. Intellectual property. 1. A name, style, or symbol used to distinguish a company, partnership, or business (as opposed to a product or service); the name under which a business operates. • A tradename is a means of identifying a business — or its products or services — to establish goodwill. It symbolizes the business’s reputation. Cf. brand; DBA; Trademark. [Cases: Trademarks C=1026.] 2. A trademark that was not originally susceptible to exclusive appropriation but has acquired a secondary meaning. — Also termed brand name; commercial name.

trade or business. Tax. Any business or professional activity conducted by a taxpayer with the objective of earning a profit. • If the taxpayer can show that the primary purpose and intention is to make a profit, the taxpayer may deduct certain expenses as trade-or-business expenses under the Internal Revenue Code. [Cases: Internal Revenue C=3314.1–3318.]

trade practice. A customary way of doing business; esp., a method of using specifications for size, thickness, shape, or quality adopted within a given industry. [Cases: Customs and Usages C=9.]

trader. 1. A merchant; a retailer; one who buys goods to sell them at a profit. 2. One who sells goods substantially in the form in which they are bought; one who has not converted them into another form of property by skill and labor. 3. One who, as a member of a stock exchange, buys and sells securities on the exchange floor either for brokers or on his or her own account. 4. One who buys and sells commodities and commodity futures for others or for his or her own account in anticipation of a speculative profit.

Trade-Related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights. See TRIPS.

trader’s settlement. See settlement (1).

trade secret. (1862) 1. A formula, process, device, or other business information that is kept confidential to maintain an advantage over competitors; information — including a formula, pattern, compilation, program, device, method, technique, or process — that (1) derives independent economic value, actual or potential, from not being generally known or readily ascertainable by others who can obtain economic value from its disclosure or use, and (2) is the subject of reasonable efforts, under the circumstances, to maintain its secrecy. • This definition states the majority view, which is found in the Uniform Trade Secrets Act. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation C=413.] 2. Information that (1) is not generally known or ascertainable, (2) provides a competitive advantage, (3) has been developed at the plaintiff’s expense and is used continuously in the plaintiff’s business, and (4) is the subject of the plaintiff’s intent to keep it confidential. • This definition states the minority view, which is found in the Restatement of Torts § 757 cmt. b (1939). [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation C=413.]

“...So long as the owner of a secret keeps it a secret he has a monopoly. While equity affords protection to trade secrets against betrayal by those under contract or in confidential relations with the owners of the secret, there is no difference between contracts as to trade secrets and contracts as to any other personal property, as far as restraint of trade is concerned.” — Harry D. Nims, The Law of Unfair Competition and Trade-Marks 406 (1929).

“The concept of protecting trade secrets is related to the principles of trademark and patent law. The scope of trade secret protection, however, goes well beyond that of patent law. Unlike patent law, protection under trade secret law is not tied to the information’s novelty, rather, the essence of a trade secret is its relative secrecy. Additionally, unlike patent law, trade secret law draws less from property principles, and more from the equitable principles surrounding confidential relationships.” — Mark A. Rothstein et al., Employment Law § 8.18, at 510 (1994).

"...The difficulty with defining 'trade secrets' in the abstract is that there are so many ways to go about it. In large part, this is a reflection of the fact that the law of trade secrets, unlike the law of patents or copyright, is a creature of the common law rather than of statute. In trying to impose a moral solution on cases of apparent breach of confidence, judges have juggled competing policy interests while trying to draw a line of protection that would lead to the result that they believed was right. ... In other words, the development of trade secret law has been a bit chaotic. ... James Pooley, Trade Secrets § 1.01, at 1-1 to 1-3 (1998).

trade slander. See SLANDER.

tradesman (traydz-man), n. 1. One who buys and sells things for profit; esp., a shopkeeper. 2. A shopkeeper's employee. 3. A mechanic or artisan whose livelihood depends on manual labor; one who is skilled in a trade. — Also termed tradesperson.

trade surplus. See SURPLUS.

trade usage. See USAGE.

trade union. See UNION.

trade surplus. See SURPLUS.

trading. The business of buying and selling, esp. of commodities and securities. [Cases: Commodity Futures Trading Regulation C=11; Securities Regulation C=35.10–67.15.]

day trading. The act or practice of buying and selling stock shares or other securities on the same day, esp. over the Internet, usu. for the purpose of making a quick profit on the difference between the buying price and the selling price.

secondary trading. The buying and selling of securities in the market between members of the public, involving neither the issuer nor the underwriter of the securities.

short-term trading. Investment in securities only to hold them long enough to profit from market-price fluctuations. [Cases: Securities Regulation C=55.10–55.22.]

trading curb. A temporary restriction on trading in a particular security to curtail dramatic price movements. — Sometimes shortened to curb. Cf. TRADING HALT.

trading halt. A temporary suspension of trading in a particular security for a specific reason, such as an order imbalance or a pending news announcement.

- Options can be exercised during a trading halt, and open orders may be canceled. — Also termed suspended trading. Cf. TRADING CURB.

trading partnership. See PARTNERSHIP.

trading voyage. See VOYAGE.

trading with the enemy. The federal offense of carrying on commerce with a nation or with a subject or ally of a nation with which the United States is at war. [Cases: War and National Emergency C=314.]

traditio (tra-dis-ee-oh), n. [Latin] Roman law. The simple delivery of a piece of property by one person to another with the intention of transferring ownership.

- This was the simplest form of transfer, and ultimately it was applied to land as well as movables. Constructive delivery was developed. — Also termed traditio rei. See BREVII MANU; CONSTITUTUM POSSESSORIUM. PL. traditiones (tra-dis-ee-oh neez).

traditio brevi manu (tra-dis-ee-oh bree vi man-yoo). [Latin] Roman law. The surrender of the mediate possession of a thing to the person who is already in immediate possession of it. • This is a type of constructive delivery in which a delivery to the mediate possessor and redelivery to the immediate possessor are unnecessary. See BREVII MANU. For the other two types of constructive delivery, see ATTORNMENT; CONSTITUTUM POSSESSORIUM.

"The first [type of constructive delivery] is that which the Roman lawyers termed traditio brevi manu, but which has no recognised name in the language of English law. ... If, for example, I lend a book to someone, and afterwards, while he still retains it, I agree with him to sell it to him, or to make him a present of it, I can effectually deliver it to him in fulfilment of this sale or gift, by telling him that he may keep it. It is not necessary for him to go through the form of handing it back to me and receiving it a second time from my hands." John Salmon, Jurisprudence 306 (Glannville & Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

traditio longa manu (tra-dis-ee-oh long-ga man-yoo). [Latin] Roman law. See CONSTITUTUM POSSESSORIUM.

trado tibi ecclesiam (trad-oh tib-i ek-lee-zahm). [Law Latin] Hist. Eccles. law & Scots law. I deliver this church (or living) to you. • A patron uttered this phrase when presenting an incumbent to a vacant church. Cf. ACCEPTE ECCLESIAM.

trado tibi manumissione (tra-dis-ee-oh man-yoo-zhun-ooz). vb. (16c) 1. To deliver; calumniate. — trado tibi manumissione, n.

traffic (n. (16c) 1. Commerce; trade; the sale or exchange of such things as merchandise, bills, and money. 2. The passing or exchange of goods or commodities from one person to another for an equivalent in goods or money. 3. People or things being transported along a route. 4. The passing to and fro of people, animals, vehicles, and vessels along a transportation route.

- Options may be canceled. Also termed trading halt.

traffic, n. To trade or deal in (goods, esp. illicit drugs or other contraband) <traffic in heroin>. [Cases: Controlled Substances C=32, 82.] — trafficking, n. — trafficker, n.

traffic balance. The balance of moneys collected in payment for transporting passengers and freight.

traffic court. See COURT.

trafficking. The act of transporting, trading, or dealing, esp. in people or illegal goods. Cf. PEOPLE-SMUGGLING; SMUGGLING.
drug trafficking. The act of illegally producing, importing, selling, or supplying significant amounts of a controlled substance. [Cases: Controlled Substances \(\Rightarrow\) 32, 82.]

human trafficking. The illegal recruitment, transportation, transfer, harboring, or receipt of a person, esp. one from another country, with the intent to hold the person captive or exploit the person for labor, services, or body parts. • Human-trafficking offenses include forced prostitution, forced marriages, sweat-shop labor, slavery, and harvesting organs from unwilling donors. — Also termed trafficking in persons. Cf. PEOPLE-SMUGGLING; ORGAN TRAFFICKING.

organ trafficking. Illegal trafficking in human body parts, esp. transplantable organs that are offered to the highest bidder or that have been harvested without the consent of the donor or the donor’s next of kin. • In international law, organ trafficking is broadly included in the offense of human trafficking. — Also termed trafficking in persons. Cf. human trafficking.

trafficking in persons. 1. See human trafficking. 2. See organ trafficking.

trafficking in persons. See trafficking.

traffic regulation. A prescribed rule of conduct for traffic; a rule intended to promote the orderly and safe flow of traffic. [Cases: Automobiles \(\Rightarrow\) 5(5), 7, 335.]

trailer clause. An employee’s promise to assign to the employer the rights to all inventions developed while employed and for a specified time afterward. • For the covenant to be enforceable, the time restriction must be reasonable. — Also termed holdover clause.

traitor, n. 1. A person who commits treason against his or her country. [Cases: Treason \(\Rightarrow\) 10.] 2. One who betrays a person, a cause, or an obligation. — traitorous, adj.

tramp, n. 1. A person who roams about from place to place, begging or living without labor or visible means of support; a vagrant. 2. TRAMP STEAMER.

tramp corporation. See CORPORATION.

tramp steamer. A ship that is not scheduled to sail between prearranged ports of call but that stops at those ports for which it has cargo. • A tramp steamer typically carries bulk cargoes such as oil, grain, coal, steel, iron ore, or lumber, and is contracted with a charter-party rather than a bill of lading. — Often shortened to tramp.

tranche (transh), n. [French “slice”] Securities. 1. A bond issue derived from a pooling of similar debt obligations. • A tranche usu. differs from other issues by maturity date or rate of return. 2. A block of bonds designated for sale in a foreign country. — Also spelled tranche; trench. See COLLATERALIZED MORTGAGE OBLIGATION.

transact, vb. 1. To carry on or conduct (negotiations, business, etc.) to a conclusion <transact business>. 2. Civil law. To settle (a dispute) by mutual concession. See TRANSACTION (4). 3. To carry on or conduct negotiations or business <refuses to transact with the enemy>.

transaction, n. (17c) 1. The act or an instance of conducting business or other dealings; esp., the formation, performance, or discharge of a contract. 2. Something performed or carried out; a business agreement or exchange. 3. Any activity involving two or more persons. 4. Civil law. An agreement that is intended by the parties to prevent or end a dispute and in which they make reciprocal concessions. La. Civ. Code art. 3071. — transactional, adj.

arm’s-length transaction. 1. A transaction between two unrelated and unaffiliated parties. 2. A transaction between two parties, however closely related they may be, conducted as if the parties were strangers, so that no conflict of interest arises.

closed transaction. Tax. A transaction in which an amount realized on a sale or exchange can be established for the purpose of stating a gain or loss. [Cases: Internal Revenue \(\Rightarrow\) 3393.]

colorable transaction. (18c) A sham transaction having the appearance of authenticity; a pretended transaction <the court set aside the colorable transaction>.

transactional audit. See AUDIT.

transactional immunity. See IMMUNITY (3).

transactional lawyer. 1. See LAWYER. 2. See OFFICE PRACTITIONER.

transactional takeover defense. See TAKEOVER DEFENSE.

transaction causation. See CAUSATION.

transaction cost. See COST (4).

transaction-or-occurrence test. (1957) A test used to determine whether, under Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(a), a particular claim is a compulsory counterclaim. • Four different tests have been suggested: (1) Are the legal and factual issues raised by the claim and counterclaim largely the same? (2) Would res judicata bar a later suit on the counterclaim in the absence of the compulsory-counterclaim rule? (3) Will substantially the same evidence support or refute both the plaintiff’s claim and the counterclaim? (4) Are the claim and counterclaim logically related? See compulsory counterclaim under COUNTERCLAIM. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure \(\Rightarrow\) 776; Set-off and Counterclaim \(\Rightarrow\) 60.]

transaction slip. See CONFIRMATION SLIP.

transcarceration. (1987) The movement of prisoners or institutionalized mentally ill persons from facility to facility, rather than from a prison or an institution back to the community, as when a prisoner is transferred to a halfway house or to a drug-treatment facility. [Cases: Prisons \(\Rightarrow\) 13.3, 13.5.]
transcribe, vb. (16c) To make a written or typed copy of (spoken material, esp. testimony).

transcript, n. (14c) A handwritten, printed, or typed copy of testimony given orally; esp., the official record of proceedings in a trial or hearing, as taken down by a court reporter. — Also termed report of proceedings; reporter's record. [Cases: Appeal and Error ☞ 593–611; Criminal Law ☞ 1104; Federal Courts ☞ 694.]

transcription. (16c) 1. The act or process of transcribing. 2. Something transcribed; a transcript.

transcript of proceedings. A compilation of all documents relating to a bond issue, typically including the notices, affidavits of notices, a bond resolution (or bond ordinance), official statement, trust indenture and loan agreements, and minutes of meetings of all authorizing bodies.

transact cum universitate (trans-see-ant kam yoo-ni-var-sa-tay-tee). [Latin] Hist. They are transferred with the whole estate.

transfer, n. (14c) 1. Any mode of disposing of or parting with an asset or an interest in an asset, including a gift, the payment of money, release, lease, or creation of a lien or other encumbrance. • The term embraces every method — direct or indirect, absolute or conditional, voluntary or involuntary — of disposing of or parting with property or with an interest in property, including retention of title as a security interest and foreclosure of the debtor's equity of redemption. 2. Negotiation of an instrument according to the forms of law. • The four methods of transfer are by indorsement, by delivery, by assignment, and by operation of law. [Cases: Bills and Notes ☞ 176–222.] 3. A conveyance of property or title from one person to another. [Cases: Bills and Notes ☞ 176–222.]

constructive transfer. (1852) A delivery of an item — esp. a controlled substance — by someone other than the owner but at the owner's direction. [Cases: Controlled Substances ☞ 32, 82.]

incomplete transfer. Tax. A decedent's inter vivos transfer that is not completed for federal estate-tax purposes because the decedent retains significant powers over the property's possession or enjoyment. • Because the transfer is incomplete, some or all of the property's value will be included in the transferor's gross estate. IRC (26 USCA) §§ 2036–2038. [Cases: Internal Revenue ☞ 4159(3).]

inter vivos transfer (in-tar vi-vohs or vee-vohs). (1930) A transfer of property made during the transferor's lifetime.

testamentary transfer. A transfer made in a will. • The transfer may be of something less than absolute ownership. Cf. testamentary gift under GIFT. [Cases: Wills ☞ 86.]

transfer in contemplation of death. See gift causa mortis under GIFT.

transfer in fraud of creditors. (1883) A conveyance of property made in an attempt to prevent the transferor's creditors from making a claim to it. [Cases: Fraudulent Conveyances ☞ 1.]

transfer, vb. (14c) 1. To convey or remove from one place or one person to another; to pass or hand over from one to another, esp. to change over the possession or control of. 2. To sell or give.

transferable (trans-for-a-bal), adj. (14c) Capable of being transferred, together with all rights of the original holder.

transferable letter of credit. See LETTER OF CREDIT.

transferable vote. See single transferable vote under VOTE (1).

transfer agent. See AGENT (2).

transfer-agent-run dividend-reinvestment plan. See DIVIDEND-REINVESTMENT PLAN.

transferee. One to whom a property interest is conveyed.

transferee liability. (1951) Tax. The liability of a transferee to pay taxes owed by the transferor. • This liability is limited to the value of the asset transferred. The Internal Revenue Service can, for example, force a donee to pay the gift tax when the donor who made the transfer cannot pay it. IRC (26 USCA) §§ 6901–6905. [Cases: Internal Revenue ☞ 4817; Taxation ☞ 3480.]

transference. Scots law. The act of substituting a representative for a deceased litigant in a pending action. • This is similar to the common law's substitution of parties.

transfer hearing. See hearing.

transfer in fraud of creditors. See TRANSFER.

transference of a case. (1843) The removal of a case from the jurisdiction of one court or judge to another by lawful authority. — Also termed TRANSFER OF A CAUSE. See REMOVAL (2). [Cases: Removal of Cases ☞ 16.]

transference of venue. See CHANGE OF VENUE.

transferor. (1875) One who conveys an interest in property.

transfer payment. (usu. pl.) (1945) A governmental payment to a person who has neither provided goods or services nor invested money in exchange for the payment. • Examples include unemployment compensation and welfare payments. [Cases: United States ☞ 82(1).]

transferred intent. See INTENT (1).

transferred-intent doctrine. (1957) The rule that if one person intends to harm a second person but instead unintentionally harms a third, the first person's criminal or tortious intent toward the second applies to the third as well. • Thus, the offender may be prosecuted for an intent crime or sued by the third person for an intentional tort. See INTENT. [Cases: Assault and Battery C– 3, 49; Homicide C– 355, 702; Torts C– 115.]

transfer statute. A provision that allows or mandates the trial of a juvenile as an adult in a criminal court for a criminal act. • Every state has some form of transfer statute. The Supreme Court has held that a juvenile cannot be transferred to criminal court under a discretionary statute "without ceremony — without hearing, without effective assistance of counsel, without a statement of reasons." Kent v. United States, 383 U.S. 541, 554, 86 S.Ct. 1045, 1053–54 (1966). [Cases: Infants C– 68.7.]

automatic-transfer statute. A law requiring the transfer from delinquency court to criminal court for certain statutorily enumerated offenses if certain statutory requirements are met. [Cases: Infants C– 68.5, 68.7(2).]

discretionary-transfer statute. A law that allows, but does not mandate, the transfer from delinquency court to criminal court for certain statutorily enumerated offenses if certain statutory requirements are met. • The prosecutor has discretion to request the transfer, and the judge has discretion to order the transfer. [Cases: Infants C– 68.7.]

reverse transfer statute. A provision that allows a criminal court to return certain cases to juvenile court. [Cases: Infants C– 68.6.]

transfer tax. See generation-skipping transfer tax under TAX.

transfer warranty. See WARRANTY (2).

transformative use. Copyright. The use of copyrighted material in a manner, or for a purpose, that differs from the original use in such a way that the expression, meaning, or message is essentially new. • The term was coined by Judge Pierre N. Leval in a 1990 law-review article entitled Toward a Fair Use Standard, 103 Harv. L. Rev. 1105, 1111 (1990). The concept was first applied by the U.S. Supreme Court in Campbell v. Acuff-Rose Music, Inc., 510 U.S. 569, 114 S.Ct. 1164 (1994). The Court held that the transformative use in that case was a fair, noninfringing use of the plaintiff’s copyright. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property C– 53.2.]

transgenic (tranz-jen-ik), adj. Patents. Of, relating to, or describing a living organism that has been genetically altered by introducing recombinant DNA from another organism.

transgress, vb. 1. To exceed the limits of (a law, rule, regulation, etc.): to break or violate. 2. To pass over (limits, boundaries, etc.). — transgressor, n.

transgression. Archaic. See MISDEMEANOR.

transgressione, ad audiendum et terminandum (trans-gres[h]-ee-oh-nee, ad aw-dee-en-dam et tar-ma-nan-dam). See DE TRANSGRESSIONE, AD AUDIENDUM ET TERMINANDUM.

transgressive trust. See TRUST.

transient (tran-shant), adj. (16c) Temporary; impermanent; passing away after a short time.

transient, n. 1. A person or thing whose presence is temporary or fleeting. 2. TRANSIENT PERSON.

transient foreigner. One who visits a country without the intent to remain.

transient jurisdiction. See JURISDICTION.

transient merchant. A trader who sells merchandise at a temporary location without intending to become a permanent merchant in that place. [Cases: Licenses C– 15(2).]

transient person. (18c) One who has no legal residence within a jurisdiction for the purpose of a state venue statute. — Also termed transient. [Cases: Venue C– 18.]

transit, n. (15c) 1. The transportation of goods or persons from one place to another. [Cases: Insurance C– 2137(3).] 2. Passage; the act of passing.

transitional alimony. See rehabilitative alimony under ALIMONY.

transition phrase. Patents. In a patent claim, the word or phrase that relates the preamble to the body. • The transition is often the term "comprising," "having," "including," "consisting of," or "consisting essentially of." Cf. PREAMBLE (2); BODY OF A CLAIM.

transitory (tran-so-ter-ee or tran-zor-ee), adj. (14c) Passing from place to place; capable of passing or being changed from one place to another.

transitory action. See ACTION (4).

transitory treaty. See TREATY (1).

transitory wrong. See WRONG.

transit passage. Int'l law. The right of a vessel or airplane to exercise freedom of navigation and overflight solely for the purpose of continuous and expeditious transit between one part of the high seas or an exclusive economic zone and another part of the high seas or an exclusive economic zone. — Also termed right of transit passage. Cf. INNOCENT PASSAGE.

translation, n. 1. The transformation of language from one form to another; esp., the systematic rendering of the language of a book, document, or speech into another language.

"Generally speaking, a translation need not consist of transferring from one language into another; it may apply to the expression of the same thoughts in other words of the same language." Rasmussen v. Baker, 50 P. 819, 826 (Wyo. 1897).
2. Archaic. The transfer of property. 3. Eccles. law. The removal of a bishop from one diocese to another.

translative (trans- or tranz-lay-tiv), adj. Making or causing a transfer or conveyance.

translative fact. See FACT.

transmission. Civil law. The passing of an inheritance to an heir.

transmit, vb. (15c) 1. To send or transfer (a thing) from one person or place to another. 2. To communicate.

transmittal letter. (1914) A nontypical letter that establishes a record of delivery, such as a letter to a court clerk advising that a particular pleading is enclosed for filing. * Lawyers have traditionally opened transmittal letters with the phrase “Enclosed please find,” even though that phrasing has been widely condemned in business-writing handbooks since the late 19th century. A transmittal letter may properly begin with a range of openers as informal as “Here is” to the more formal “Enclosed is.” — Also termed cover letter.

transmutation. A change in the nature of something; esp., in family law, the transformation of separate property into marital property, or of marital property into separate property. [Cases: Divorce C==252.3(3); Husband and Wife C==249(6).]

transnational adoption. See international adoption under ADOPTION.

transnational corporation. See multinational corporation under CORPORATION.

transnational law. 1. The amalgam of common principles of domestic and international law dealing esp. with problems arising from agreements made between sovereign states and foreign private parties. 2. The problems to which such principles apply. Cf. INTERNATIONAL LAW.

transparency. Openness; clarity; lack of guile and attempts to hide damaging information. * The word is used of financial disclosures, organizational policies and practices, lawmaking, and other activities where organizations interact with the public.

transport, vb. To carry or convey (a thing) from one place to another.

transportation, n. (16c) 1. The movement of goods or persons from one place to another by a carrier. 2. Criminal law. A type of punishment that sends the criminal out of the country to another place (usu. a penal colony) for a specified period. Cf. DEPORTATION.

Transportation Security Administration. The federal agency charged with promoting safety and security of air, water, rail, and highway transportation. * The agency was created in the Department of Transportation after the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001, and was transferred to the Department of Homeland Security in 2002.

transracial adoption. See ADOPTION.
"It is said that the technical term traverse, from transvert., to turn over, is applied to an issue taken upon an indictment for a misdemeanor, and means nothing more than turning over or putting off the trial to a following session or assize, and that thus it is that the officer of the court asks the party whether he is ready to try then, or will traverse to the next session, though some have referred its meaning originally to the denying or taking issue upon an indictment, without reference to the delay of trial, and which seems more correct. I Joseph Chitty, A Practical Treatise on the Criminal Law 486 (2d ed. 1826).

common traverse. (1841) A traverse consisting of a tender of issue — that is, a denial accompanied by a formal offer for decision of the point denied — with a denial that expressly contradicts the terms of the allegation traversed. — Also termed specific traverse.
[Cases: Pleading C—117.]

"The common or specific traverse is an express denial of a particular allegation in the opposing pleading in the terms of the allegation, accompanied by a tender of issue or formal offer of the point denied for trial." Benjamin J.
Shipman, Handbook of Common-Law Pleading § 168, at 303 cumulative traverse. (1848) A traverse that analyzes a proposition into its constituent parts and traverses them cumulatively. • It amounts to the same thing as traversing the one entire proposition, since the several parts traversed must all make up one entire proposition or point.

general traverse. (17c) A denial of all the facts in an opponent’s pleading.

special traverse. (18c) A denial of one material fact in an opponent’s pleading; a traverse that explains or qualifies the denial. • The essential parts of a special traverse are an inducement, a denial, and a verification. [Cases: Pleading C—118.]

specific traverse. See common traverse.

traverse jury. See petit jury under JURY.

traverser, n. (14c) One who traverses or denies a

traverse the requirement, vb. Patents. To (1) respond in detail to a patent examiner’s decision that the patent application claims more than one invention and (2) ask that the restriction requirement be reconsidered.
• The traverse must specifically explain why restriction should not be required, not merely assert that the requirement is wrong. Failure to traverse a requirement forfeits any rights to appeal the decision. [Cases: Patents treachery, n. A deliberate and willful betrayal of trust and confidence.
C—104.]

treason, n. (13c) The offense of attempting to overthrow the government of the state to which one owes allegiance, either by making war against the state or by materially supporting its enemies. — Also termed high treason; alta prodictio. Cf. SEDITION. [Cases: Treason C—1.] — treasonable, treasonous, adj.

"The judgment of high treason was, until very lately, an exception to the merciful tenor of our judgments. The least offensive form which is given in the books is, that the offender be carried back to the place from whence he came, and from thence to be drawn to the place of execution, and be there hanged by the neck, and cut down alive, and that his entrails be taken out and burned before his face, and his head cut off, and his body divided into four quarters, and his head and quarters disposed of at the king’s pleasure. Some of the precedents add other circumstances, of still more grossness and aggravation.
But this horrible denunciation was very seldom executed in its more terrible niceties." I Joseph Chitty, A Practical Treatise on the Criminal Law 702 (2d ed. 1826).

"[S]everal important characteristics marked off high treason from all other crimes. For one thing, it earned a peculiarly ghastly punishment. For another, it was ‘unclergyable,’ while every felony was ‘clergyable’ unless some statute had otherwise ordained. Thirdly, while the felon’s land escheated to his lord, the traitor’s land was forfeited to the king. This last distinction influenced the development of the law." 2 Frederick Pollock & Frederic William Maitland, History of English Law Before the Time of Edward
I / 500 (2d ed. 1899).

"Treason against the United States, shall consist only in levying war against them, or in adhering to their Enemies, giving them Aid and Comfort. No Person shall be convicted of Treason unless on the Testimony of two Witnesses from the same overt Act, or on Confession in open Court." U.S.
Const. art. III, § 3.

constructive treason. 1. Speech that manifests a desire or intent to make war against the state or materially support an enemy, even though the speech is unaccompanied by acts that further the desire or intent.
• There is no crime of constructive treason in U.S. law because treason requires an affirmative act, and intent alone cannot substitute for an act. Cf. SEDITION.
[Cases: Treason C—1.] 2. Hist. Speech that is critical of the government. • This sense arose during the reign of Henry VIII of England. Critical speech remained a capital crime until the early 18th century.

petty treason. Archic. Murder of one’s employer or husband. • Until 1828, this act was considered treason under English law. — Also spelled petit treason.

"The frequent reference to high treason is a carry-over from an ancient division of the offense that has long since disappeared. In the feudal stage of history the relation of lord to vassal was quite similar to the relation of king to subject. The relation of husband to wife came to be regarded in the same category, as also did the relation of master to servant, and that of prelate to clergyman.
And just as it was high treason to kill the king, so a malicious homicide was petit treason if it involved a killing of (originally, lord by vassal, and later) husband by wife, master by mistress or servant, or prelate by clergyman.
When the special brutality provided by the common law for the punishment of petit treason disappeared, this crime became merged with murder and only one crime of treason remained." Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal treasonable misdemeanor. English law. An act that is likely to endanger or alarm the monarch, or disturb the public peace in the presence of the monarch. Cf.

TREASON FELONY.

treason felony. English law. An act that shows an intention of committing treason, unaccompanied by any further act to carry out that intention. • This offense usu.
results in life imprisonment rather than the death penalty. Cf. TREASONABLE MISDEMEANOR.

Treas. Reg. abbr. TREASURY REGULATION.
treasurer. An organization's chief financial officer. • The treasurer’s duties typically include prudently depositing (or, if authorized, investing) and safeguarding the organization’s funds and otherwise managing its finances; monitoring compliance with any applicable law relating to such finances and filing any required report; disbursing money as authorized; and reporting to the organization on the state of the treasury. — Also termed finance officer; financial secretary; quartermaster. [Cases: Corporations ☀= 301.]

city treasurer. A local officer who is responsible for managing municipal funds.

Treasurer, Lord High. See LORD HIGH TREASURER.

Treasurer of the United States. The officer in the U.S. Department of the Treasury responsible for overseeing the operations of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing and the U.S. Mint.

treasure trove. [Law French “treasure found”] (16c) Valuables (usu. gold or silver) found hidden in the ground or other private place, the owner of which is unknown. • At common law in the United States, the finder of a treasure trove can usu. claim good title against all except the true owner. But until 1996, any treasure trove found in the United Kingdom belonged to the Crown.

“Treasure hid in the earth, not upon the earth, nor in the sea, and coin though not hidden, being found is the king’s; we call it treasure trove.” Sir Henry Finch, Law, or a Discourse Thereof 177 (1759).

“Treasure trove consists essentially of articles of gold and silver, intentionally hidden for safety in the earth or in some secret place, the owner being unknown, although it is probable that the category might include articles made from the required metals buried in the ground for other purposes, for example in connection with an ancient sepulchre. In the United States, the state has never claimed title to lost property by virtue of its character as treasure trove, and it has been stated that the law relating thereto is merged with that of lost goods generally, although there is authority for the proposition that while treasure trove in the United States belongs to the finder, found goods not of that character go to the owner of the locus in quo.” Ray Andrews Brown, The Law of Personal Property § 13, at 27-28 (2d ed. 1955).

Treasures. (1922) Debt obligations of the federal government backed by the full faith and credit of the government. See TREASURY BILL; TREASURY BOND; TREASURY CERTIFICATE; TREASURY NOTE. [Cases: United States ☀= 89-91.]

treasury. 1. A place or building in which stores of wealth are kept; esp., a place where public revenues are deposited and kept and from which money is disbursed to defray government expenses. [Cases: United States ☀= 81.] 2. (cap.) DEPARTMENT OF THE TREASURY.

Treasury, First Lord. See FIRST LORD OF THE TREASURY.

Treasury Bench. In the British House of Commons, the first row of seats on the right hand of the speaker. • The Treasury Bench is occupied by the First Lord of the Treasury or principal minister of the Crown.

Treasury bill. (18c) A short-term debt security issued by the federal government, with a maturity of 13, 26, or 52 weeks. • These bills — auctioned weekly or quarterly — pay interest in the form of the difference between their discounted purchase price and their par value at maturity. — Abbr. T-bill. [Cases: United States ☀= 89.]

Treasury bond. (1858) A long-term debt security issued by the federal government, with a maturity of 10 to 30 years. • These bonds are considered risk-free, but they usu. pay relatively little interest. — Abbr. T-bond. [Cases: United States ☀= 91.]

TIPS bond. A treasury bond whose face value is adjusted to keep pace with the inflation rate. • The acronym TIPS stands for Treasury inflation-protected securities. — Abbr. TIPS.

treasury certificate. An obligation of the federal government maturing in one year and on which interest is paid on a coupon basis. [Cases: United States ☀= 90.]

Treasury Department. See DEPARTMENT OF THE TREASURY.

Treasury inflation-protected securities. See TIPS bond under TREASURY BOND.

Treasury note. (18c) An intermediate-term debt security issued by the federal government, with a maturity of two to ten years. • These notes are considered risk-free, but they usu. pay relatively little interest. — Abbr. T-note. [Cases: United States ☀= 90.]

Treasury Regulation. (1860) A regulation promulgated by the U.S. Treasury Department to explain or interpret a section of the Internal Revenue Code. • Treasury Regulations are binding on all taxpayers. — Abbr. Treas. Reg. [Cases: Internal Revenue ☀= 3038-3042, 3045, 3048.]

treasury security. See TREASURY STOCK under STOCK.

treasury share. See TREASURY STOCK under STOCK.

treasury stock. See STOCK.

treasury warrant. See WARRANT (2).

treating-physician rule. The principle that a treating physician’s diagnoses and findings about the degree of a social-security claimant’s impairment are binding on an administrative-law judge in the absence of substantial contrary evidence. [Cases: Social Security and Public Welfare ☀= 143.65.]

treaty. 1. An agreement formally signed, ratified, or adhered to between two nations or sovereigns; an international agreement concluded between two or more states in written form and governed by international law. — Also termed accord; convention; covenant; declaration; pact. Cf. EXECUTIVE AGREEMENT. [Cases: Treaties ☀= 1.]

“[T]he legal terminology used by the United States to describe international agreements is markedly different from that employed elsewhere. Under the U.S. Constitution, the term ‘treaty’ has a particular meaning — an agreement made by the President with the advice and consent of the Senate.” David J. Bederman, International Law Frameworks 158 (2001).
commercial treaty. A bilateral or multilateral treaty concerning trade or other mercantile activities. Such a treaty may be general in nature, as by supplying the framework of long-term commercial relations. Or it may be specific, as by detailing the conditions of particular branches of trade or other commercial transactions. Sometimes a treaty of this kind deals with an individual project, such as a guaranty agreement. [Cases: Treaties 2-8.]

defensive treaty. A treaty in which each party agrees to come to the other's aid if one is attacked by another nation. See treaty of alliance.

"Defensive treaties, as generally understood, are made to secure the parties to them against aggression from other states. They may, also, aim at the maintenance of internal quiet, or of neutrality amid the conflicts of neighboring powers. To attempt to gain any of these objects is not necessarily contrary to the law of nations or to natural justice. Mutual aid, indeed, against the disturbers of internal quiet, may secure an absolute government against popular revolutions in favor of liberty, but if a confederation or alliance may secure to its members the enjoyment of free institutions, there is no reason, as far as international law is concerned, why institutions of an opposite kind may not support themselves in the same way." Theodore D. Woolsey, Introduction to the Study of International Law § 107, at 171 (5th ed. 1878).

disposable treaty (dis-poz-ə-tiv). A treaty by which a country takes over territory by impressing a special character on it, creating something analogous to a country takes over territory by impressing a special character on it, creating something analogous to a servitude or easement in private law.

guarantee treaty. An agreement between countries directly or indirectly establishing a unilateral or reciprocal guarantee. — Also spelled guaranty treaty. — Also termed treaty of guarantee; quasi-guarantee treaty; pseudo-guarantee treaty.

"In many instances where the term 'guarantee' is used in international treaties, the contracting parties merely intend to underlie their willingness to comply with the obligation they have entered into. Obligations of this kind do not fall within the concept of guarantee in the proper sense of the term. In this particular respect, the expression 'pseudo-guarantees' or 'quasi-guarantee treaties' is used." George Ress, "Guarantee Treaties," in 2 Encyclopedia of Public International Law 634 (1995).

mixed treaty. A treaty with characteristics of different types of treaties, esp. contrasting types (e.g., permanent and transitory, or personal and real).

nonaggression treaty. See nonaggression pact.

nonproliferation treaty. A treaty forbidding the transfer of nuclear weapons from a country with a nuclear arsenal to one that does not have nuclear-weapons capability. — The first such treaty was concluded in 1968, and now more than 100 nations have agreed to its terms. — Also termed nuclear-nonproliferation treaty.

offensive treaty. A treaty in which the parties agree to declare war jointly on another nation and join forces to wage the war. See treaty of alliance.

peace treaty. A treaty signed by heads of state to end a war. — Also termed treaty of peace. Cf. truce. [Cases: War and National Emergency <= 33.]

"A peace differs not from a truce essentially in the length of its contemplated duration, for there may be very long armistices and a state of peace continuing only a definite number of years. The ancients often concluded treaties of peace which were to expire after a certain time . . . ." Theodore D. Woolsey, Introduction to the Study of International Law § 158, at 268 (5th ed. 1878).

permanent treaty. A treaty that contemplates ongoing performance (as with a treaty of neutrality).

personal treaty. Hist. A treaty relating exclusively to the contracting sovereign as a person. — Examples of personal treaties are family alliances and treaties guaranteeing the throne to a particular sovereign and his or her family. With the advent of constitutional government in Europe, personal treaties have lost their importance.

pseudo-guarantee treaty. See guarantee treaty.

quasi-guarantee treaty. See guarantee treaty.

real treaty. A treaty relating solely to the subject matter of the compact, independently of the persons of the contracting sovereigns. — Real treaties continue to bind the state even when the heads of government change.

transitory treaty. A treaty carried into effect once and for all, so that it is complete when the act has been performed (as with a treaty of cession).

treaty of alliance. A treaty establishing mutual and reciprocal support obligations. — A treaty of alliance may be for support in defense, aggression, or both. See defensive treaty; offensive treaty.

"A treaty of alliance can bind the parties to no injustice, nor justify either of them in being accessory to an act of bad faith on the part of another. Hence a defensive, still more an offensive alliance, can only contemplate, if lawful, the warding off of intended injustice." Theodore D. Woolsey, Introduction to the Study of International Law § 107, at 172 (5th ed. 1878).

treaty of guarantee. See guarantee treaty.

treaty of neutrality. A treaty in which the parties agree not to engage in any aggressive action against one another, whether individually or jointly with others, and not to interfere with the other party's affairs. — There is no commitment to aid another party in the event of war — only to refrain from becoming involved.

"Treaties of neutrality are reciprocal engagements to have no part in the conflicts between other powers — to remain at peace in an apprehended or an actual war. They are suggested by, and prevent the evils of that interference of nations in each other's affairs, for the preservation of the balance of power or the safety of the parties interfering, which is so common in modern history." Theodore D. Woolsey, Introduction to the Study of International Law § 107, at 172 (5th ed. 1878).

treaty of peace. See peace treaty.

2. A contract or agreement between insurers providing for treaty reinsurance. See treaty reinsurance under reinsurance. [Cases: Insurance <= 3593.] 3. A negotiated contract or agreement between private persons.

treble damages. See DAMAGES.

tres-pass (tres-p:::ls), n. [Late 15c.] A wrongful entry or action on land without authority; esp., unlawful entry under ENTRY (1). [Cases: Trespass C-1-15.] 2. At common law, a legal action for injuries resulting from an unlawful act of this kind. 3. Archaic. MISDEMEANOR. — trespass, vb. — trespassory (tres-pa-sor-ee), adj.

The familiar legend on notice-boards, 'Trespassers will be prosecuted,' implies that it is a crime, but this may usually be dismissed as 'a wooden lie.' Yet in time past the idea was a very correct, for trespass of any sort was punishable by fine and imprisonment as well as redressible by an action for damages, and actually it was not until 1694 that the punitive element disappeared although it had faded into obsolescence long before that date. But nowadays trespass is never criminal except under special statutes which make it punishable . . . . P.H. Winfield, A Textbook of the Law of Torts § 90, at 307 (5th ed. 1950).

'The term trespass has been used by lawyers and laymen in three senses of varying degrees of generality. (1) In its widest and original signification it includes any wrongful act — any infringement or transgression of the rule of right. This use is common in the Authorised Version of the Bible, and was presumably familiar when that version was first published. But it never obtained recognition in the technical language of the law, and is now archaic even in popular speech. (2) In a second and narrower signification — its true legal sense — the term means any legal wrong for which the appropriate remedy was a writ of trespass — viz. any direct and forcible injury to person, land, or chattels. (3) The third and narrowest meaning of the term is that in which, in accordance with popular speech, it is limited to one particular kind of trespass in the second sense — viz. the tort of trespass to land (trespass quare clausum fregit). R.F.V. Heuston, Saimond on the Law of Torts 4 (17th ed. 1977).

The word 'misdemeanor' became well established in early English law, and was used at times by Blackstone for this purpose, as in the phrase 'treason, felony, or trespass.' Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 405 (3d ed. 1982).

cattle-trespass. Hist. Trespass by one's cattle or other animals on another's land, as a result of which the other might either restrain them damage peaceable or sue for trespass in the local courts. At first (from the early 13th century) this type of trespass applied only to intentional trespass by the keeper of the cattle, but in 1353 it was extended to beasts that had merely escaped. This type of trespass gave rise to strict liability. [Cases: Animals C-89.]

'It has long been settled that liability for cattle-trespass is independent of negligence, and it is that which constitutes its strictness. And, in spite of some confusion in time past, it is quite distinct from the scienter type of liability. In Lee v. Riley [(1865), 18 CB. (N.S.) 722] the defendant's mare strayed through a gap in his fence, which was his duty to repair, to the plaintiff's land and there quarrelled with and kicked the plaintiff's horse. The defendant was held liable for cattle-trespass. A great deal of argument was expended at the trial on whether the defendant had notice of the ferocious disposition of his mare, but Erle, C.J., pointed out that, however relevant that might have been in a scienter action, it was beside the mark in one for cattle-trespass. P.H. Winfield, A Textbook of the Law of Tort § 148, at 518 (5th ed. 1950).

constructive trespass. See trespass to chattels.

continuing trespass. A trespass in the nature of a permanent invasion on another's rights, such as a sign that overhangs another's property. [Cases: Trespass C-51.]

criminal trespass. 1. A trespass on property that is clearly marked against trespass by signs or fences. [Cases: Trespass C-81.] 2. A trespass in which the trespasser remains on the property after being ordered off by a person authorized to do so.

innocent trespass. A trespass committed either unintentionally or in good faith. [Cases: Trespass C-2.]

joint trespass. A trespass that two or more persons have united in committing, or that some have actually committed while others commanded, encouraged, or directed it. [Cases: Trespass C-31.]

permanent trespass. A trespass consisting of a series of acts, done on consecutive days, that are of the same nature and that are renewed or continued from day to day, so that the acts in the aggregate form one indivisible harm.

trespass ab initio (ab i-nish-ee-oh). An entry on land that, though begun innocently or with a privilege, is deemed a trespass from the beginning because of conduct that abuses the privilege. [Cases: Trespass C-13.]

trespass by relation. A trespass committed when the plaintiff had a right to immediate possession of land but had not yet exercised that right. • When the plaintiff takes possession, a legal fiction treats the plaintiff as having had possession ever since the accrual of the right of entry. This is known as trespass by relation because the plaintiff's possession relates back to the time when the plaintiff first acquired a right to possession.

trespass de bonis asportatis (see boh-nis as-por-tay-tis). [Latin "trespass for carrying goods away"] 1. A wrongful taking of chattels. • This type of trespassory taking was also an element of common-law larceny. 2. At common law, an action to recover damages for the wrongful taking of chattels. — Abbr. trespass d.b.a. — Often shortened to trespass de bonis. — Also termed trespass to personal property. [Cases: Trespass § 66.]

"The most important of the writs framed under the authority of the statute of Westminster 2 is that of 'trespass on the case,' to meet cases analogous to trespass in delict, but lacking the element of direct or immediate force or violence. This writ gave a form of action in which the court was enabled to render judgment of damages in cases of fraud, deceit, negligence, want of skill, defamation oral or written, and all other injurious acts or omissions resulting in harm to person or property, but wanting the vi et armis, the element of direct force and violence, to constitute trespass." Edwin E. Bryant, The Law of Pleading Under the Codes of Civil Procedure 7 (2d ed. 1899).

"Common law recognizes a distinction between the actions of trespass vi et armis (or simply trespass) and trespass on the case. This distinction has been expressed by stating that a tort committed by the direct application of force is remediable by an action for trespass, while a tort accomplished indirectly is a matter for trespass on the case. Other authority makes the distinction on the basis of the defendant's intent, stating that trespass involves a willful and deliberate act while trespass on the case contemplates an act or omission resulting from negligence." 1 Am. Jur. 2d Actions § 23, at 738 (1994).

trespass quare clausum fregit (kwair-ee-klaw-zam-free-jit). [Latin "why he broke the close"] (17c) 1. A person's unlawful entry on another's land that is visibly enclosed. • This tort consists of doing any of the following without lawful justification: (1) entering upon land in the possession of another, (2) remaining on the land, or (3) placing or projecting any object upon it. 2. At common law, an action to recover damages resulting from another's unlawful entry on one's land that is visibly enclosed. — Abbr. trespass q.c.f. — Also termed trespass to real property; trespass to land; quare clausum querentis fregit. See trespass vi et armis. [Cases: Trespass §§ 10, 16, 17.]

"Every unwarrantable entry on another's soil the law entitles a trespass by breaking his close; the words of the writ of trespass commanding the defendant to shew cause, quare clausum querentis fregit. For every man's land is in the eye of the law enclosed and set apart from his neighbour's: and that either by a visible and material fence, as one field is divided from another by a hedge; or, by an ideal invisible boundary, existing only in the contemplation of law, as when one man's land adjoins to another's in the same field. And every such entry or breach of a man's close carries necessarily along with it some damage or other: for, if no other special loss can be assigned, yet still the words of the writ itself specify one general damage, viz., the treading down and bruising his herbage." — William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 209-10 (1768).

trespass to chattels. (1843) The act of committing, without lawful justification, any act of direct physical interference with a chattel possessed by another. • The act must amount to a direct forcible injury. — Also termed trespass to goods; constructive trespass. [Cases: Trespass § 5.]"Trespass to goods is a wrongful interference with the possession of them. It may take innumerable forms, such as scratching the panel of a coach, removing a tire from a car, injuring or destroying goods, or in the case of animals, beating or killing them, or infecting them with disease. All that is necessary is that the harm done should be direct..." P.H. Winfield, A Textbook of the Law of Tort § 99, at 345 (5th ed. 1950).

trespass to goods. See trespass to chattels.

trespass to land. See trespass quare clausum fregit.

trespass to personal property. See trespass de bonis asportatis.

trespass to real property. See trespass quare clausum fregit.

trespass to try title. (1826) 1. In some states, an action for the recovery of property unlawfully withheld from an owner who has the immediate right to possession. 2. A procedure under which a claim to title may be adjudicated.

trespass vi et armis (vi et ahr-mis). [Latin "with force and arms"] (17c) 1. At common law, an action for damages resulting from an intentional injury to person or property, esp. if by violent means; trespass to the plaintiff's person, as in illegal assault, battery, wounding, or imprisonment, when not under color of legal process, or when the battery, wounding, or imprisonment was in the first instance lawful, but unnecessary violence was used or the imprisonment continued after the process had ceased to be lawful. • This action also lay for injury to relative rights, such as menacing tenants or servants, beating and wounding a spouse, criminal conversation with or seducing a wife, or debauching a daughter or servant. 2. See trespass quare clausum fregit. • In this sense, the "force" is implied by the "breaking" of the close (that is, an enclosed area), even if no real force is used. [Cases: Trespass § 17.]

trespasser. (14c) One who commits a trespass; one who intentionally and without consent or privilege enters another's property. • In tort law, a landholder owes no duty to unforeseeable trespassers. Cf. invitee; licensee. [Cases: Trespass § 9.]

"The word 'trespasser' has an ugly sound, but it covers the wicked and the innocent. The burglar and the arrogant squatter are trespassers, but so are all sorts of..."
trespass for mesne profits comparatively innocent and respectable persons such as a walker in the countryside who unhindered strolls across an open field. Perhaps much of the trouble in this area has arisen from the 'simplistic stereotype' of the definition. The courts are therefore beginning to recognise that the duty of the occupier may vary according to the nature of the trespasser." R.F.V. Houston, Salmond on the Law of Torts 278 (17th ed. 1977).

innocent trespasser. (1888) One who enters another's land unlawfully, but either inadvertently or believing in a right to do so. [Cases: Trespass C=2, 23.]

trespass for mesne profits. Hist. An action — supplementing an action for ejectment — brought against a tenant in possession to recover the profits wrongfully received during the tenant's occupation. [Cases: Ejectment C=128.]

trespass q.c.f. See trespass quare clausum fregit under TRESPPAS.

tret (tret), n. An allowance or abatement of a certain weight or quantity that a seller makes to a buyer because of water or dust that may be mixed with a commodity. Cf. tare.

triable either way. (15c) Subject or liable to judicial examination and trial .

triable either way. English law. (Of an offense) prosecutable either in the Crown Court or in a magistrates' court.

"The criminal courts in England and Wales are the magistrates' courts and the Crown Court. Those offences considered least serious are summary offenses, triable only in the magistrates' courts. Those offences considered most serious are triable only on indictment, in the Crown Court. A large number of offenses, such as theft and most burglaries, are 'triable either way,' in a magistrates' court or the Crown Court. For these offenses the defendant can elect to be tried at the Crown Court, where there is a judge and jury. If the defendant does not wish a Crown Court trial, the magistrates may decide (having heard representations from the prosecutor) that the case is so serious that it should be committed to the Crown Court for trial." Andrew Ashworth, Principles of Criminal Law 16 (1991).

trial. (15c) A formal judicial examination of evidence and determination of legal claims in an adversary proceeding. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure C=195; Trial C=18.]

bench trial. (1954) A trial before a judge without a jury. • The judge decides questions of fact as well as questions of law. — Also termed trial to the bench; nonjury trial; court trial; trial before the court (abbr. TBC); judge trial. [Cases: Criminal Law C=247-260.13; Federal Civil Procedure C=2251; Trial C=367-387.]

bifurcated trial. (1945) A trial that is divided into two stages, such as for guilt and punishment or for liability and damages. — Also termed two-stage trial. Cf. severance (2). [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure C=1954; Sentencing and Punishment C=334; Trial C=3.]

closed trial. A trial that is not open to the public, usu. because of some overriding concern such as a need to protect a child's anonymity or for security. [Cases: Criminal Law C=635; Federal Civil Procedure C=1951; Trial C=20.]

joint trial. (18c) A trial involving two or more parties; esp., a criminal trial of two or more persons for the same or similar offenses. [Cases: Criminal Law C=622.]

jury trial. (18c) A trial in which the factual issues are determined by a jury, not by the judge. — Also termed trial by jury.

new trial. (16c) A postjudgment retrial or reexamination of some or all of the issues determined in an earlier judgment. • The trial court may order a new trial by motion of a party or on the court's own initiative. Also, when an appellate court reverses the trial court's judgment, it may remand the case to the trial court for a new trial on some or all of the issues on which the reversal is based. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 59; Fed. R. Crim. P. 33. See motion for new trial; remand. [Cases: Criminal Law C=905-965; Federal Civil Procedure C=2311; New Trial C=0.5.]

nonbinding mini trial. See summary jury trial.

nonbinding summary jury trial. See summary jury trial.

nonjury trial. See bench trial.

political trial. (18c) A trial (esp. a criminal prosecution) in which either the prosecution or the defendant (or both) uses the proceedings as a platform to espouse a particular political belief; a trial of a person for a political crime. See show trial.

public trial. A trial that anyone may attend or observe. [Cases: Criminal Law C=635; Federal Civil Procedure C=1951; Trial C=20.]

separate trial. (18c) 1. Criminal procedure. The individual trial of each of several persons jointly accused of a crime. Fed. R. Crim. P. 14. [Cases: Criminal Law C=622. 2. Civil procedure. Within a single action, a distinct trial of a separate claim or issue — or of a group of claims or issues — ordered by the trial judge, usu. to conserve resources or avoid prejudice. Fed. R. Civ. P. 42(b). Cf. severance (2). [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure C=1953-1965; Trial C=3.]

show trial. See show trial.

state trial. A trial for a political offense.

summary jury trial. (1984) A settlement technique in which the parties argue before a mock jury, which then reaches a nonbinding verdict that will assist the parties in evaluating their positions. — Also termed trial at nisi prius (n̩-si pri̩-əs). Hist. A trial before the justices of assize and nisi prius in the county where the facts are alleged to have occurred, and from which county the jurors have been summoned.

trial before the court. See bench trial.

trial by battle. See trial by combat.

trial by certificate. Hist. A trial in which the issue is decided on evidence in the form of witnesses' certificates of what they individually know.

trial by combat. See trial by battle.

trial by the country. See trial per pais.

trial by record. Hist. A trial in which a record having been pleaded by one party and denied by the other, the record is inspected in order to decide the dispute, no other evidence being admissible. See null til record.

trial by the country. See trial per pais.

trial by the record. A trial in which one party insists that a record exists to support its claim and the opposing party denies the existence of such a record. * If the record can be produced, the court will consider it in reaching a verdict — otherwise, it will rule for the opponent.

trial de novo (dee or di noh voh). (18c) A new trial on the entire case — that is, on both questions of fact and issues of law — conducted as if there had been no trial in the first instance. [Cases: Appeal and Error C=892; Criminal Law C=260; Federal Courts C=776.]

trial in absentia. A trial held without the accused being present. * In the United States, a trial may be held in absentia only if the accused has either voluntarily left after the trial has started else has so disrupted the proceedings that the judge orders the accused's removal as a last resort. [Cases: Criminal Law C=636.]

trial on the merits. (18c) A trial on the substantive issues of a case, as opposed to a motion hearing or interlocutory matter.

trial per pais (par pay or pays). [Law French "trial by the country"] (17c) Trial by jury. — Also termed trial by the country. Cf. conclusion to the country; going to the country; patria (3).

trial to the bench. See bench trial.

trifurcated trial. (1959) A trial that is divided into three stages, such as for liability, general damages, and special damages. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure C=1961; Trial C=3(5.1).]

two-stage trial. See bifurcated trial.

trial brief. See brief.

trial by combat. Hist. A trial that is decided by personal battle between the disputants, common in Europe and England during the Middle Ages; specifically, a trial in which the person accused fought with the accuser, the idea being that God would give victory to the person in the right. * This method was introduced into England by the Normans after 1066, but it was a widely detested innovation and was little used. It became obsolete several centuries before being formally abolished in 1818, having been replaced in practice by the grand assize and indictment. — Also termed trial by battle; trial by wager of battle; trial by duel; judicial combat; duel; duellium; wager of battle; ornest; vadiatio duelli; weheading. See judicium dei.

trial by corsnaed. See ordeal of the morsel under ordeal.

Tribal Court. Under the Indian Child Welfare Act, a court with child-custody jurisdiction that is (1) a Court of Indian Offenses, (2) a court established and operated under an Indian tribe's code or custom, or (3) any other tribal administrative body that is vested with authority over child-custody proceedings. * The Tribal Court is composed of tribal members, is usu. situated on the reservation, and varies in its characteristics from tribe to tribe. It is not part of any state's judicial system, instead operating more or less as a judicial system of a foreign nation. See Indian child welfare act. [Cases: Indians C=134(3).]

tribal-exhaustion doctrine. The general principle that when an Indian tribal court, original or appellate, has personal and subject-matter jurisdiction, the parties... must pursue all remedies available under tribal law before turning to nontribal courts. • A federal court may review a challenge to jurisdiction only after the tribal court has established it has jurisdiction and determined the case on the merits. See National Farmer's Union Ins. Co. v. Crow Tribe, 471 U.S. 845, 856–57, 105 S.Ct. 2447, 2454 (1985).

tribal land. A part of an Indian reservation that is not allotted to or occupied by individual Indians but is held as the tribe's common land. Cf. INDIAN LAND. [Cases: Indians <== 151.]

tribunal (tri-b-yoo-nal), (15c) 1. A court or other adjudicatory body. 2. The seat, bench, or place where a judge sits.

tributary (trib-ya-ter-ee), n. (14c) A stream flowing directly or indirectly into a river.

tribute (trib-yoot), n. (14c) 1. An acknowledgment of gratitude or respect. 2. A contribution that a sovereign raises from its subjects to defray the expenses of state. 3. Money paid by an inferior sovereign or state to a superior one to secure the latter's friendship and protection.

tributum (tri-byoo-tom), n. [Latin] Roman law. Originally, a war tax; later, a regular tax on land or persons in the Roman provinces.

tri-chad. See CHAD.

trier of fact. See FACT-FINDER.

trifurcated trial. See TRIAL.

trigamy (trig-a-mee), n. (17c) The act of marrying a person while legally married to someone else and bigamously married to yet another. [Cases: Bigamy <== 1.]

"Trigamy, literally three marriages, is often used for a special situation. 'Trigamy,' in the sense of the special problem of the third wife, stems from the premise that invalidity of the alleged prior marriage is a good defense to a charge of bigamy. Thus in a bigamy prosecution a so-called common-law marriage can be relied upon to establish either the first or second marriage, if it is recognized in the jurisdiction as giving rise to the marital status, but cannot be relied upon where it is not so recognized. A logical result is that a charge of bigamy may be defeated by showing that the alleged prior marriage, relied upon to support the charge, was itself void because of an even earlier marriage existing at the time—as was held about 1648 in Lady Madison's Case. For example, D marries A, and afterward while A is alive marries B, and still later when A is dead but B alive, marries C. The marriage to C is not bigamy because the marriage to B was bigamous and void." Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 458 (3d ed. 1982).

trigamy. See TRIG EGS.

triggering condition. See CONDITION (2).

Trinity House. Maritime law. A British corporation chartered in 1514 to train and license pilots and officially regulate piloting. • Trinity House has also erected and maintained aids to navigation, such as lighthouses and buoys, on the coasts of Great Britain.

Trinity sittings. English law. A term of court beginning on May 22 of each year and ending on June 12. • This was known until 1875 as Trinity term. Cf. EASTER SITTINGS; HILARY SITTINGS; MICHAELMAS SITTINGS.

tripalite (tri-pahr-tit), adj. (15c) Involving, composed of, or divided into three parts or elements .

tripartite lease. See finance lease under LEASE.

tripartite test. Patents. A judicial test for determining patent infringement by looking at whether a challenged device or process, though outside the literal scope of the patent claims, performs the function in substantially the same way. See SUBSTANTIAL EQUIVALENT.

triples. See treble damages under DAMAGES.

triple trigger. Insurance. (1981) A theory of coverage providing that all insurers on a risk must cover a loss from the day a claimant is first exposed to an injury-producing product (such as asbestos) to the date of diagnosis or death, whichever occurs first. • This term was first used in Keene Corp. v. Insurance Co. of N. Am., 667 F.2d 1034 (D.C. Cir. 1981), cert. denied, 445 U.S. 1007, 102 S.Ct. 1644 (1982). — Also termed continuous trigger. Cf. ACTUAL-INJURY TRIGGER; EXPOSURE THEORY; MANIFESTATION THEORY. [Cases: Insurance C== 2265.]

TRIPs. abbr. Intellectual Property. The Agreement on Trade-Related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights, a treaty that harmonized and strengthened the intellectual-property laws of its signatories by linking the obligation to protect the intellectual-property rights of other members' citizens with a mechanism for settling international trade disputes. • TRIPs was negotiated at the 1994 Uruguay Round of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT). More than 150 nations are parties to the agreement. In the field of patents, TRIPs standardized patentable subject matter to include medicines, required testing for nonobviousness and utility, and protected patentees from infringing imports. In response to the agreement Congress (1) changed patent terms to 20 years from the date of application, rather than 17 years from the date of issue; (2) allowed foreign filers to prove priority by inventive efforts that preceded filing; (3) widened the definition of infringement to cover offering for sale and importing; and (4) permitted provisional applications, with brief descriptions and no claims, to establish priority. 33 T.I.M. 1197. In the field of copyrights, TRIPs incorporates most of the provisions of the Berne Convention for the Protection of Literary or Artistic Works, and sets the length of copyright protection as the life of the author plus 50 years. In the field of trademarks, TRIPs sets the initial term of a trademark registration as not less than seven years, and makes it renewable indefinitely. Nations subject to TRIPs may make registrability dependent on use but may not require use as a condition for filing an application. — Also written TRIPS. — Also termed TRIPs Agreement.
“Articles 1–8 of TRIPs include the basic principles of national treatment and most-favoured-nation treatment. That is, each Member must give to the nationals of other Members treatment no less favourable than that given to its own nationals, and must give to the nationals of all Members the same privileges as are given to the nationals of any Member. Thus, subject to certain exemptions, bilateral agreements between Members should no longer be permitted.” Philip W. Crubb, Patents for Chemicals, Pharmaceuticals and Biotechnology 31 (3d ed. 1999).

triverbial days (tri-var-bee-al). See dies fasti under DIES.

trivial, adj. (16c) Trifling; inconsiderable; of small worth or importance.

TRO (tee-ahr-oh). abbr. TEMPORARY RESTRAINING ORDER.

troubled asset. See ASSET.

trover (troh-vdr). (16c) A common-law action for the recovery of damages for the conversion of personal property; the damages generally being measured by the property’s value. — Also termed trover and conversion. Cf. DETINUE; REPLEVIN. [Cases: Trover and Conversion (1)–(2), 43.]

truant (troo-on-see). n. (18c) The act or state of shirking responsibility; esp., willful and unjustified failure to attend school by one who is required to attend. [Cases: Schools (1)–(2), 161.] — truant, adj. & n.

truant officer. An official responsible for enforcing laws mandating school attendance for minors of specified ages (usu. 16 and under). — Also termed truant officer; attendance officer. [Cases: Schools (1)–(2), 161.]

truant, n. A person who without permission is absent from work or school or who shirks a duty. [Cases: Schools (1)–(2), 161.]

truce. Int’l law. A suspension or temporary cessation of hostilities by agreement between belligerent powers. — Also termed armistice; ceasefire; suspension of arms. Cf. peace treaty under TREATY (1). [Cases: War and National Emergency (1)–(3), 33.] — trucial, adj.

general truce. A truce suspending hostilities in all places.

special truce. A truce referring only to operations before a specific fortress or in a district, or between certain detachments of armies. — Also termed partial truce.

truck. Hist. Scots law. The payment of wages in scrip or goods. • Truck systems, once common where workers had to live in isolated areas and depended on company stores for food and clothing, were abolished in the 19th century.

“Truck was payment not in money but in goods or tickets which could be exchanged for goods. . . . The principle that contractors could buy in bulk and retail to the workmen, deducting the cost from their wages, was sound but was open to abuse; in fact truck became a means of robbery. Railway contractors frequently made more profit from truck than from the contract . . . Truck shops, frequently called tommy shops or tally shops, might be run by the contractor or let by him to an associate or a shopkeeper for a rent or on the basis that part of the shop profits would go back to the contractor. The goods were frequently inferior and sold at excessive prices. David M. Walker, 6 A Legal History of Scotland 820 (2001).

true admission. See judicial admission under ADMISSION (1).

true and correct. Authentic; accurate; unaltered. <we have forwarded a true and correct copy of the expert’s report>. — Also termed true and exact.

true bill. n. (18c) A grand jury’s notation that a criminal charge should go before a petty jury for trial <the grand jury returned a true bill, and the state prepared to prosecute>. — Also termed billa vera. Cf. NO BILL. [Cases: Grand Jury (1)–(2), 42.]

true bill, vb. To make or deliver a true bill on <the grand jury true-billed the indictment>.

true legal impossibility. See legal impossibility (1) under IMPOSSIBILITY.

true mark. See technical trademark under TRADEMARK.

true residue. See CLEAR RESIDUE.

true trademark. See technical trademark under TRADEMARK.

true value. See fair market value under VALUE (2).

true-value rule. The rule requiring that one who subscribes for and receives corporate stock must pay par value for it, in either money or its equivalent, so that a corporation’s real assets square with its books. • If true value is less than par value, the stock is deemed unpaid for to the full extent of the difference, and the affected shareholder is liable to creditors for the difference, notwithstanding the directors’ good faith. [Cases: Corporations (1)–(2), 323.]

trust. n. (15c) 1. The right, enforceable solely in equity, to the beneficial enjoyment of property to which another person holds the legal title; a property interest held by one person (the settlor) for the benefit of a third party (the beneficiary). • For a trust to be valid, it must involve specific property, reflect the settlor’s intent, and be created for a lawful purpose. The two primary types of trusts are private trusts and charitable trusts (see below). [Cases: Trusts (1)–(2), 1.]

2. A fiduciary relationship regarding property and charging the person with title to the property with equitable duties to deal with it for another's benefit; the confidence placed in a trustee, together with the trustee's obligations toward the property and the beneficiary. • A trust rises as a result of a manifestation of an intention to create it. See fiduciary relationship under RELATIONSHIP. 3. The property so held; CORPUS (1).

"One must distinguish... in countries where English is spoken, between a wide and a narrow sense of the word 'trust.' In the wide sense a trust exists when property is to be held or administered by one person on behalf of another or for some purpose other than his own benefit... In the narrow or strict sense a trust exists when the creator of the trust... hands over or is bound to hand over the control of an asset which, or the proceeds of which, is to be administered by another (the trustee or administrator) in his capacity as such for the benefit of some person (beneficiary) other than the trustee or for some impersonal object. A trust in this sense is a species of the genus 'trust' in the wide sense." Tony Honore, The South African Law of Trusts §§ 1-2, at 1-3 (3d ed. 1985).

"Some courts and legal writers have defined a trust as a certain kind of right that the beneficiary has against the trustee, or a certain kind of interest that the beneficiary has against the trustee, or a certain kind of interest that the beneficiary has in the trust property, thus looking at it from the point of view of the beneficiary. While it is true that the beneficiary has the right or interest described, the trust is something more than the right or interest of the beneficiary. The trust is the whole juridical device: the legal relationship between the parties with respect to the property that is its subject matter, including not merely the duties that the trustee owes to the beneficiary and to the rest of the world, but also the rights, privileges, powers, and immunities that the beneficiary has against the trustee and against the rest of the world. It would seem proper, therefore, to define the trust either as a relationship having certain characteristics stated in the definition or perhaps as a juridical device or legal institution involving such a relationship." Austin W. Scott & William F. Fratcher, The Law of Trusts § 2.4, at 42 (4th ed. 1987).

"In the strict, traditional sense, a trust involves three elements: (1) a trustee, who holds the trust property and is subject to deal with it for the benefit of one or more others; (2) one or more beneficiaries, to whom and for whose benefit the trustee owes duties with respect to the trust property; and (3) trust property, which is held by the trustee for the beneficiaries. In a more comprehensive sense, the trust purpose is often included in discussions of the elements of the trusts... Although all of these elements are present in a complete trust, either or both of elements (1) and (2) above may be temporarily absent without destroying the trust or preventing its creation." Restatement (Third) of Trusts § 2 cmt. f (2003).

A-B-Q trust. See bypass trust.

A-B trust. See bypass trust.

accumulation trust. A trust in which the trustee must accumulate income and gains from sales of trust assets for ultimate disposition with the principal when the trust terminates. • Many states restrict the time over which accumulations may be made or the amount that may be accumulated. [Cases: Trusts 280.]

active trust. A trust in which the trustee has some affirmative duty of management or administration besides the obligation to transfer the property to the beneficiary. — Also termed express active trust; special trust; operative trust. Cf. passive trust. [Cases: Trusts 135.]

alimony trust. A trust in which the payor spouse transfers to the trustee property from which the payee spouse, as beneficiary, will be supported after a divorce or separation.

annuity trust. A trust from which the trustee must pay a sum certain annually to one or more beneficiaries for their respective lives or for a term of years, and must then either transfer the remainder to or for the use of a qualified charity or retain the remainder for such a use. • The sum certain must not be less than 5% of the initial fair market value of the property transferred to the trust by the donor. A qualified annuity trust must comply with the requirements of IRC (26 USCA) § 664. [Cases: Trusts 281.]

asset-protection trust. 1. A trust designed specifically to insulate assets from the settlor's creditors. • When the trust is created using the law of a state, it is also termed a domestic asset-protection trust. It may also be referred to by the name of the specific state, e.g., Alaska trust, Delaware trust, or Nevada trust. If it is created under foreign law, even though the assets are within the United States, it is also termed an offshore asset-protection trust. 2. See self-settled trust.

bank-account trust. See Totten trust.

blended trust. A trust in which the beneficiaries are a group, with no member of the group having a separable individual interest. • Courts rarely recognize these trusts.

blind trust. (1969) A trust in which the settlor places investments under the control of an independent trustee, usu. to avoid a conflict of interest. • The beneficiary has no knowledge of the trust's holdings and no right to participate in the trust's management.

bond trust. A trust whose principal consists of bonds that yield interest income.

bypass trust. (1981) A trust into which just enough of a decedent's estate passes, so that the estate can take advantage of the unified credit against federal estate taxes. See 26 USCA § 2010. — Also termed credit-shelter trust; A-B trust; A-B-Q trust; marital life-estate trust. See unified estate-and-gift tax credit under TAX CREDIT.

charitable lead trust. An irrevocable trust made in favor of a charity and allowing the charity to receive income from the trust property for a specified period, after which the property reverts to the settlor's estate.

charitable-remainder annuity trust. A charitable-remainder trust in which the beneficiaries receive for a specified period a fixed payment of 5% or more of the fair market value of the original principal, after which the remaining principal passes to charity. — Abbr. CRAT. — Also termed *charitable-remainder-trust retirement fund. [Cases: Charities C=6; Trusts C=281.]

charitable-remainder trust. A trust consisting of assets that are designated for a charitable purpose and paid over to the trust after the expiration of a life estate or intermediate estate. — Abbr. CRT. — Also termed split-interest trust. [Cases: Charities C=4.]

charitable-remainder trust retirement fund. See charitable-remainder annuity trust.

charitable trust. (18c) A trust created to benefit a specific charity, specific charities, or the general public rather than a private individual or entity. • Charitable trusts are often eligible for favorable tax treatment. If the trust's terms do not specify a charity or a particular charitable purpose, a court may select a charity. See Uniform Trust Act § 405. — Also termed public trust; charitable use. See charitable deduction under deduction; cy pres. Cf. private trust. [Cases: Charities C=1; Internal Revenue C=4048; Taxation C=2337, 3328, 3488.]

Claffin trust. See indestructible trust.

Clifford trust. (1941) An irrevocable trust, set up for at least ten years and a day, whereby income from the trust property is paid to the beneficiary but the property itself reverts back to the settlor when the trust expires. • These trusts were often used by parents — with their children as beneficiaries — to shelter investment income, but the Tax Reform Act of 1986 eliminated the tax advantage by imposing the kiddie tax and by taxing the income of settlers with a reversionary interest that exceeds 5% of the trust’s value. This term gets its name from Helvering v. Clifford, 309 U.S. 331, 60 S.Ct. 554 (1940). — Also termed short-term trust. [Cases: Internal Revenue C=3362.]

common-law trust. See business trust under trust (4).

community trust. See community trust.

complete voluntary trust. See executed trust.

complex trust. 1. A trust having elaborate provisions. 2. See discretionary trust.

constructive trust. (18c) An equitable remedy that a court imposes against one who has obtained property by wrongdoing. • A constructive trust, imposed to prevent unjust enrichment, creates no fiduciary relationship. Despite its name, it is not a trust at all. — Also termed implied trust; involuntary trust; trust de son tort; trust ex delicto; trust ex maleficio; remedial trust; trust in invitum. See trustee de son tort under trustee. Cf. resulting trust. [Cases: Trusts C=91-111.]

A constructive trust is the formula through which the conscience of equity finds expression. When property has been acquired in such circumstances that the holder of the legal title may not in good conscience retain the beneficial interest, equity converts him into a trustee.” Beatty v. Guggenheim Exploration Co., 122 N.E. 378, 380 (N.Y. 1919) (Cardozo, J.).

“It is sometimes said that when there are sufficient grounds for imposing a constructive trust, the court ‘constructs a trust.’ The expression is, of course, absurd. The word ‘constructive’ is derived from the verb ‘construct,’ not from the verb ‘construct.’ . . . The court constructs the circumstances in the sense that it explains or interprets them; it does not construct them.” S Austin W. Scott & William F. Fratcher, The Law of Trusts § 462.4 (4th ed. 1987).

contingent trust. An express trust depending for its operation on a future event.

credit-shelter trust. See bypass trust.

Crummey trust. A trust in which the trustee has the power to distribute or accumulate income and to give the beneficiary the right to withdraw an amount equal to the annual gift exclusion (or a smaller sum) within a reasonable time after the transfer. • This type of trust can have multiple beneficiaries and is often used when the beneficiaries are minors. Gifts to a Crumмey trust qualify for the annual gift exclusion regardless of the age of the beneficiaries. The trust assets are not required to be distributed to the beneficiaries at age 21. The validity of this type of trust was established in Crumмey v. Commissioner, 397 F.2d 82 (9th Cir. 1968). — Also termed discretionary trust. See Crumмey power; annual exclusion under exclusion. Cf. 2503(c) trust.

custodial trust. A revocable trust for which a custodial trustee is named to manage the assets for an incapacitated or disabled beneficiary. • The beneficiary does not have to be disabled or incapacitated at the time the trust is created. An adult beneficiary who is not disabled or incapacitated may terminate the trust at any time before his or her disability, incapacity, or death.

declared trust. See express trust.

defective trust. A trust that is treated, for income-tax purposes, as if it were the same entity as the grantor, but for estate-tax purposes is treated as an entity separate from the grantor. • Typically a trust is an independent entity that is taxed separately from the settlor. Because trust income is taxed at higher rates than individual income, the settlor may intentionally create a defect in the trust terms so that the trust’s income will be taxable to the grantor. This is achieved by violating the grantor-trust rules of IRC §§ 671–677 in a way that does not affect the completeness of the gift under IRC §§ 2035–2042. A violation renders the trust “defective” because the settlor must recognize the income even if the settlor does not actually receive it. The attribution of tax liability and payment of taxes on trust income do not give the grantor an ownership in the trust, which remains separate from the settlor’s estate and is not subject to estate taxes. [Cases: Internal Revenue C=4023.]

Delaware trust. See asset-protection trust.

destructible trust. (1953) A trust that can be destroyed by the happening of an event or by operation of law.

directory trust. 1. A trust that is not completely and finally settled by the instrument creating it, but only defined in its general purpose and to be carried into detail according to later specific directions. 2. See fixed trust.

direct trust. See express trust.

discretionary trust. (1837) 1. A trust in which the settlor has delegated nearly complete or limited discretion to the trustee to decide when and how much income or property is distributed to a beneficiary. • This is perhaps the most common type of trust used in estate planning. [Cases: Trusts C–150, 177] 2. See Crummey trust. Cf. mandatory trust; Crummey power.

domestic asset-protection trust. See asset-protection trust (1).

donative trust. A trust that establishes a gift of a beneficial interest in property for a beneficiary. • Most trusts are donative trusts. — Also termed gratuitous trust. [Cases: Trusts C–35(1)].

donor-advised trust. A trust set up by a public charity using cash or other assets donated by a person who will act as a director of the trust. IRC (26 USCA § 4966(d)(2). — Also termed donor-advised fund.

dry trust. 1. A trust that merely vests legal title in a trustee and does not require that trustee to do anything. 2. See passive trust.

dynasty trust. A generation-skipping trust funded with the amount that is permanently exempt from generation-skipping tax and designed to last more than two generations. • In 2000, a settlor could contribute $1 million to a dynasty trust. Almost half the states allow dynasty trusts, despite their potential for lasting more than 100 years. — Also termed GST supertrust. [Cases: Internal Revenue C–4224.]

educational trust. 1. A trust to found, endow, or support a school. 2. A trust to support someone's education.

electing small-business trust. A trust of which the beneficiaries are individuals, estates, certain charitable organizations, or certain governmental entities, who did not purchase an interest in the trust, and for which the trustee has elected to be taxed under special rules. IRC (26 USCA § 1391(e)(1). — Abbbr. ESBT.

equipment trust. See equipment trust.

estate trust. A trust that is established to qualify a deceased spouse's property for the marital deduction. • The trustee may be given discretion to distribute principal or income to the donor's spouse if the donor also provides that, at the surviving spouse's death, any accumulated income and remaining principal must be distributed to the surviving spouse's estate. See marital deduction under deduction.

ex delicto trust (de-lik-toh). A trust that is created for an illegal purpose, esp. to prevent the settlor's creditors from collecting their claims out of the trust property.

executed trust. A trust in which the estates and interests in the subject matter of the trust are completely limited and defined by the instrument creating the trust and require no further instruments to complete them. — Also termed complete voluntary trust. [Cases: Trusts C–114.]

executory trust (eg-zek-ya-tor-ce). (18c) A trust in which the instrument creating the trust is intended to be provisional only, and further conveys are contemplated by the trust instrument before the terms of the trust can be carried out. — Also termed imperfect trust. [Cases: Trusts C–114.]

express active trust. See active trust.

express private passive trust. A trust in which land is conveyed to or held by one person in trust for another, without any power being expressly or impliedly given to the trustee to take actual possession of the land or exercise any ownership rights over it, except at the beneficiary's direction. [Cases: Trusts C–136.]

express trust. (18c) A trust created with the settlor's express intent, usu. declared in writing; an ordinary trust as opposed to a resulting trust or a constructive trust. — Also termed direct trust; declared trust. [Cases: Trusts C–1–61.5.]

family-pot trust. A trust in which all the assets are kept in a single fund for the trustee to use for multiple beneficiaries (usu. children). • Family-pot trusts are typically testamentary and used to administer a donor's property until the donor's minor children have completed their education.

family trust. A trust created to benefit persons who are related to one another by blood, affinity, or law.

fixed trust. A trust in which the trustee may not exercise any discretion over the trust's management or distributions. — Also termed directory trust; nondiscretionary trust.

foreign-situs trust (st-tos). A trust created under foreign law. • This type of trust usu. has no significant income-tax benefits and is subject to greater reporting requirements than a domestic trust. Because creditors cannot easily reach the foreign trust's assets, it is frequently used as a means of asset-protection. — Also termed foreign trust; offshore trust.

general trust. See passive trust.

generation-skipping trust. (1976) A trust that is established to transfer (usu. principal) assets to a skip person (a beneficiary more than one generation removed from the settlor). • The transfer is often accomplished by giving some control or benefits (such as trust income) of the assets to a nonskip person, often a member of the generation between the settlor and skip person. This type of trust is subject to a generation-skipping transfer tax. IRC (26 USCA §§ 2601 et seq. See deemed transfer; generation-skipping transfer; generation-skipping transfer tax under tax; skip person. Cf. dynasty trust. [Cases: Internal Revenue C–4224.]

governmental trust. 1. A type of charitable trust established to provide a community with facilities ordinarily supplied by the government, esp. by a municipality, and to promote purposes that are sufficiently beneficial to the community to justify permitting the property to be perpetually devoted to those purposes. • Examples of such facilities include public buildings, bridges, streets, parks, schools, and hospitals. 2. A type of charitable trust established for general governmental or municipal purposes, such as defraying the expenses of a governmental entity or paying the public debt. Restatement (Second) of Trusts §§ 373, 374 (1959).

grantor-retained annuity trust. An irrevocable trust into which the grantor transfers property in exchange for the right to receive fixed payments at least annually, based on original fair market value of the property transferred. • At the end of the specified time, the principal passes to a noncharitable beneficiary such as the grantor’s child or grandchild. Essentially, the grantor makes to the remainder a current gift of the right to trust assets at a specified date in the future. — Abbr. GRAT.

grantor-retained income trust. A trust in which a gift’s value can be reduced by the grantor’s retaining an income interest, for a specified time, in the gifted property. • At the end of the specified time, the principal passes to a noncharitable beneficiary such as the grantor’s child or grandchild. Essentially, the grantor makes to the remainder a current gift of the right to trust assets at a specified date in the future. — Sometimes shortened to retained income trust. — Abbr. GRIT.

grantor-retained unitrust. An irrevocable trust into which the grantor transfers property in exchange for the right to receive annual payments, the amount of which fluctuates based on the increase or decrease in the value of the property transferred. — Abbr. GRUT. Cf. grantor-retained annuity trust.

grantor trust. A trust in which the settlor retains control over the trust property or its income to such an extent that the settlor is taxed on the trust’s income. • The types of controls that result in such tax treatment are set out in IRC (26 USCA) §§ 671-677. An example is the revocable trust.

gratuitous trust. See donative trust.

GST supertrust. See dynasty trust.

honorary trust. (1844) A noncharitable trust that is of doubtful validity because it lacks a beneficiary capable of enforcing the trust. • Examples include trusts for the care and support of specific animals, or for the care of certain graves. The modern trend is to recognize the validity of such trusts, if the trustee is willing to accept the responsibility. If the trustee fails to carry out the duties, however, a resulting trust arises in favor of the settlor’s residuary legatees or next of kin. [Cases: Trusts 1-1.]

Illinois land trust. See land trust.

illusory trust. (1939) An arrangement that looks like a trust but, because of powers retained in the settlor, has no real substance and is not a completed trust. [Cases: Trusts 1-1.]

imperfect trust. See executory trust.

implied trust. 1. See constructive trust. 2. See resulting trust.

indestructible trust. (1909) A trust that, because of the settlor’s wishes, cannot be prematurely terminated by the beneficiary. — Also termed Claflin trust.

insurance trust. A trust whose principal consists of insurance policies or their proceeds.

inter vivos trust (in-tar vi-vohs or vee-vohs). (1921c) A trust that is created and takes effect during the settlor’s lifetime. — Also termed living trust. Cf. testamentary trust. [Cases: Trusts 1-1, 58–61.]

investment trust. See investment company under company.

involuntary trust. See constructive trust.

irrevocable trust (i-rev-oo-bal). (1837) A trust that cannot be terminated by the settlor once it is created. • In most states, a trust will be deemed irrevocable unless the settlor specifies otherwise. [Cases: Trusts 1-59.]

land trust. A land-ownership arrangement by which a trustee holds both legal and equitable title to land while the beneficiary retains the power to direct the trustee, manage the property, and draw income from the trust. — Also termed Illinois land trust; naked land trust. [Cases: Trusts 1-140(1).]

life-insurance trust. A trust consisting of one or more life-insurance policies payable to the trust when the insured dies. [Cases: Trusts 1-37.]

limited trust. A trust created for a limited period. Cf. perpetual trust.

liquidating trust. A trust designed to be liquidated as soon as possible. • An example is a trust into which a decedent’s business is placed to safeguard the business until it can be sold.

living trust. See inter vivos trust.

mandatory trust. A trust in which the trustee must distribute all the income generated by the trust property to one or more designated beneficiaries. — Also termed simple trust. Cf. discretionary trust.

marital-deduction trust. (1953) A testamentary trust created to take full advantage of the marital deduction; esp., a trust entitling a spouse to lifetime income from the trust and sufficient control over the trust to include the trust property in the spouse’s estate at death. See marital deduction under deduction. [Cases: Internal Revenue 1-4169.]

marital life-estate trust. See bypass trust.

Massachusetts trust. See business trust under trust (4).

Medicaid-qualifying trust. (1989) A trust deemed to have been created in an effort to reduce someone’s assets so that the person may qualify for Medicaid, and that will be included as an asset for purposes of determining the person’s eligibility. • A person who wants to apply and qualify for Medicaid, but who has too many assets to qualify, will sometimes set up a trust — or have a spouse or custodian set up a trust — using the applicant's own assets, under which the applicant may be the beneficiary of all or part of the payments from the trust, which are distributed by a trustee with discretion to make trust payments to the applicant. Such a trust may be presumed to have been established for the purpose of attempting to qualify for Medicaid, and may be counted as an asset of the applicant, resulting in a denial of benefits and the imposition of a penalty period during which the applicant cannot reapply. Nonetheless, Medicaid rules allow three types of trusts that do not impair Medicaid eligibility, since the trust assets are not considered the beneficiary's property: Miller trust, pooled trust, and under-65 trust. [Cases: Health C=471(6).

Miller trust. An irrevocable trust funded with the income of an incompetent beneficiary who seeks to qualify for Medicaid in a state with an income cap. • Funding is strictly limited to the beneficiary's income (from any source). The assets in the trust are not included in the beneficiary's estate for Medicaid purposes if the trust assets will be used to reimburse the state after the beneficiary's death. Trust distributions are kept below the income cap in order to preserve the beneficiary's Medicaid eligibility. This type of trust was first judicially sanctioned in Miller v. Ibarra, 746 F.Supp. 19 (D. Colo. 1990). — Also termed Miller's trust; qualified income trust.

ministerial trust. See passive trust.

minor's trust. See 2503(c) trust.

mixed trust. A trust established to benefit both private individuals and charities.

naked land trust. See land trust.

naked trust. See passive trust.

Nevada trust. See asset-protection trust (1).

nominal trust. See passive trust.

nominee trust. 1. A trust in which the beneficiaries have the power to direct the trustee's actions regarding the trust property. 2. An arrangement for holding title to real property under which one or more persons or corporations, under a written declaration of trust, declare that they will hold any property that they acquire as trustees for the benefit of one or more undisclosed beneficiaries. — Also termed (in sense 2) realty trust. [Cases: Trusts C=133–140.]

nondiscretionary trust. See fixed trust.

nongrantor-owner trust. A trust in which the beneficiary has an unrestricted power to vest the principal or interest in him or herself. IRC (26 USCA) § 678. — Also termed 678 trust.

offshore asset-protection trust. See asset-protection trust (1).

offshore trust. See foreign-situs trust.

onerous trust. A trust that places exceptionally heavy and time-consuming duties of responsibility and care on the trustee, often without providing for compensation. • Because of the burden and inequity of requiring the trust to be administered voluntarily, courts often grant a trustee a reasonable sum for the tasks performed.

oral trust. 1. A trust created by the settlor's spoken statements as opposed to a written agreement. • Trusts of real property must usu. be in writing (because of the statute of frauds). Trusts of personal property may be created orally but require clear and convincing evidence to show that an oral trust was created. Uniform Trust Act § 8407. — Also termed parol trust. [Cases: Trusts C=17.] 2. A trust created by operation of law, such as a resulting trust or a constructive trust.

parol trust. See oral trust (1).

passive trust. A trust in which the trustee has no duty other than to transfer the property to the beneficiary. — Also termed dry trust; general trust; nominal trust; simple trust; naked trust; ministerial trust; technical trust. See bare trust under Trustee. Cf. active trust. [Cases: Trusts C=136.]

pension trust. An employer-funded pension plan; esp., a pension plan in which the employer transfers to trustees amounts sufficient to cover the benefits payable to the employees. [Cases: Labor and Employment C=400.]

perpetual trust. A trust that is to continue as long as the need for it continues, such as for the lifetime of a beneficiary or the term of a particular charity. Cf. limited trust.

personal-residence trust. An irrevocable trust to which the settlor transfers ownership of his or her personal residence while retaining the right to live there for a specified term of years. • The trust cannot hold any assets other than the residence and proceeds resulting from damage to or destruction of the residence. Cf. qualified personal-residence trust. [Cases: Trusts C=1.]

personal trust. See private trust.

pet trust. An honorary trust that is established for the care and maintenance of a particular animal or group of animals. • Pet trusts are generally invalid because animals are incapable of compelling a trustee to act, and animals have no standing in law. Effectively, the trust has no beneficiary. But some states (e.g., Colorado) statutorily recognize these trusts as valid. Pet trusts are covered in the Uniform Trust Code (§ 408).

pooled-income fund. See pooled-income fund.

pooled trust. An irrevocable, discretionary trust that (1) is established and managed by a nonprofit association, (2) is funded with the assets of disabled persons, and (3) maintains a separate trust account for each beneficiary, but (4) pools the trust assets for investment purposes. • If the trust provides for distribution of a deceased beneficiary's interest to the state in reimbursement of Medicaid expenditures, a pooled-trust beneficiary may be eligible for Medicaid benefits. The assets contributed to the trust for the individual's benefit are not treated as the beneficiary's property. — Also termed pooled-assets trust. [Cases: Trusts ☞ 11(1).]

pourover trust. (1981) An inter vivos trust that receives property (usu. the residual estate) from a will upon the testator's death. Cf. pourover will under WILL.

power-of-appointment trust. (1848) A trust in which property is left in trust for the surviving spouse. • The trustee must distribute income to the spouse for life, and the power of appointment is given to the spouse or to his or her estate. A power-of-appointment trust is commonly used to qualify property for the marital deduction. See marital deduction under DEDUCTION.

precatory trust (prek-ə-tor-ee). (1878) A trust that the law will recognize to carry out the wishes of the testator or grantor even though the statement in question is in the nature of an entreaty or recommendation rather than a command. [Cases: Trusts ☞ 29.]

presumptive trust. See resulting trust.

private trust. A trust created for the financial benefit of one or more designated beneficiaries rather than for the public benefit; an ordinary trust as opposed to a charitable trust. • Three elements must be present for a private trust: (1) the demonstrated intent of the settlor, (2) trust property (as res), and (3) a certain beneficiary capable of enforcing the trust. — Also termed personal trust. Cf. charitable trust. [Cases: Trusts ☞ 1.]

protective trust. A trust that is designed to protect the trust property to ensure the continued support of the beneficiary. [Cases: Trusts ☞ 152.]

"In a broad sense, a spendthrift, support, or other similarly protective trust is one created to provide a fund for the maintenance of the beneficiary and at the same time to secure it against the beneficiary's improvidence or incapacity." 76 Am. Jur. 2d Trusts § 121 (1992).

public trust. See charitable trust.

purchase-money resulting trust. A resulting trust that arises when one person buys property but directs the seller to transfer the property and its title to another. • Although a purchase-money resulting trust is properly understood as a court-imposed equitable remedy rather than as a true trust, the buyer is occasionally referred to as the "beneficiary" and the titleholder as the "trustee." — Abbr. PMRT. [Cases: Trusts ☞ 72–83.]

QTIP trust (kyoo-tip). (1985) A trust that is established to qualify for the marital deduction. • Under this trust, the assets are referred to as qualified-terminable-interest property, or QTIP. See qualified-terminable-interest property under PROPERTY. Cf. qualified domestic trust. [Cases: Internal Revenue ☞ 4169(4).]

qualified income trust. See Miller trust.

qualified personal-residence trust. An irrevocable trust that is funded with cash and the personal residence of the grantor, who retains the right to dwell in the residence for a specified term of years. • The trust may receive and hold additional cash to pay for trust expenses, mortgage installments, and improvements to the residence. — Abbr. QPRT. Cf. personal-residence trust. [Cases: Trusts ☞ 1.]

qualified S-corporation trust. A trust that (1) owns stock in one or more S corporations, (2) distributes all income to one individual (who must be a United States citizen or resident), (3) requires only one beneficiary at a time, and (4) requires the income-beneficiary-elect to have the trust qualify as a QSST. • The trust is rarely termed a qualified subchapter-S corporation trust but the common abbreviation is QSST, not QSCT.

rabbinic trust. A rabbi trust that protects the trust assets against the claims of the employer's creditors by converting to a secular trust if the employer funding the trust becomes insolvent. • The term is a portmanteau word from rabbi and secular. Cf. rabbi trust; secular trust.

rabbi trust. Slang. An irrevocable grantor trust whose assets remain subject to the claims of the grantor's general creditors, and from which benefits are paid to the grantor's employees if a stipulated event occurs. • A rabbi trust is a form of nonqualified deferred-compensation plan. Because the trust can be reached by creditors, the participants can avoid being taxed on the constructive receipt of the benefits held in the trust. Its name derives from the IRS letter ruling that approved its use by a synagogue. Priv. Ltr. Rul. 81-13-107 (Dec. 31, 1980). Cf. rabbinic trust; secular trust. [Cases: Labor and Employment ☞ 431.]

real-estate mortgage trust. See real-estate MORTGAGE TRUST.

realty trust. See real-estate TRUST.

reciprocal trust. A trust arrangement between two parties in which one party is beneficiary of a trust established by the other party, and vice versa. • Such trusts are common between husband and wife.

remedial trust. See constructive trust.

resulting trust. (18c) A remedy imposed by equity when property is transferred under circumstances suggesting that the transferor did not intend for the transferee to have the beneficial interest in the property. — Also termed implied trust; presumptive trust. Cf. constructive trust. [Cases: Trusts ☞ 62–90.]
spendthrift trust. See grantor-retained income trust.

revocable trust (rev- a-ka-bal). A trust in which the settlor reserves the right to terminate the trust and recover the trust property and any undistributed income. [Cases: Trusts C=59.]

savings-account trust. See Totten trust.

savings-bank trust. See Totten trust.

secret trust. An instrument, usu. a will, that appears to give an absolute gift to another although the donee has orally agreed with the grantor that he or she is to use the property for the benefit of some third party. • Courts admit evidence of the promise to prevent unjust enrichment and enforce it by imposing the remedy of a constructive trust upon the reneging “trustee.” Cf. semi-secret trust. [Cases: Trusts C=35(3).]

secular trust. An irrevocable trust, funded by an employer, that protects an employee-beneficiary’s deferred compensation from the claims of creditors during an employer’s bankruptcy or insolvency. • The trust provides the employee-beneficiary with exclusive rights. The employee enjoys security since the trust is funded and the funds are beyond the reach of creditors and immune from forfeiture, but the employee cannot defer income recognition. Cf. rabbinic trust; rabbi trust.

self-settled trust. (1969) A trust in which the settlor is also the person who is to receive the benefits from the trust, usu. set up in an attempt to protect the trust assets from creditors. • In most states, such a trust will not protect trust assets from the settlor’s creditors. Restatement (Second) of Trusts § 156 (1959). — Also termed asset-protection trust.

semi-secret trust. An instrument that indicates who is to serve as a trustee but fails to identify either the beneficiary or the terms of the trust, or both. • Traditionally, this trust was deemed to fail for want of an ascertainable beneficiary. But the modern view is to provide the same relief as that given for a secret trust: to receive evidence of the donor’s intent, including the intended beneficiary, and impose a constructive trust in his or her favor. Cf. secret trust. [Cases: Trusts C=1, 64.]

shifting trust. An express trust providing that, upon a specified contingency, it may operate in favor of an additional or substituted beneficiary.

short-term trust. See Clifford trust.

simple trust. 1. See mandatory trust. 2. See passive trust.

678 trust. See nongrantor-owner trust.

special-needs trust. See supplemental-needs trust.

special trust. See active trust.

spendthrift trust. (1878) 1. A trust that prohibits the beneficiary’s interest from being assigned and also prevents a creditor from attaching that interest; a trust by the terms of which a valid restraint is imposed on the voluntary or involuntary transfer of the beneficiary’s interest. [Cases: Trusts C=12, 141, 152.] 2. A similar trust in which the restraint on alienation results from a statute rather than from the settlor’s words in the trust instrument.

‘Origin of the term ‘spendthrift trust.’ The phrase ‘spendthrift trust’ seems to have been first used, as might be expected, in Pennsylvania. The earliest instance in which a use of the phrase has been found was in 1875, when it appeared in the syllabus of a case, though the court did not use it in its opinion. Four years later, in Overman’s Appeal [88 Pa. 276 (1879)], the phrase is found in the auditor’s report (in italics), while the opinion of the court in the same case refers to the trust in question as ‘a trust for a spendthrift as it is termed’ [id. at 278]. That the phrase had not become familiar by 1882 is indicated by Thackara v. Mintzer 100 Pa. 151 (1882), where the head note refers to a ‘spendthrift son trust,’ but the court does not use that or any similar phrase. And in 1883, in the first edition of his Restraints on Alienation, [John Chipman] Gray used the phrase only rarely, and then spoke rather apologetically of ‘spendthrift trusts so called.’ In the second edition of this book, published twelve years later, the use of the phrase is frequent.” Erwin N. Griswold, Spendthrift Trusts ¶ 33, at 32 (2d ed. 1947).

split-interest trust. See charitable-remainder trust.

spray trust. See sprinkle trust.

sprinkle trust. A trust in which the trustee has discretion to decide how much will be given to each beneficiary. — Also termed spray trust. See spray power.

standby trust. A trust created to manage a person’s assets while he or she is out of the country or disabled. Trusts C=14.

supplemental-needs trust. A trust established to provide supplemental income for a disabled beneficiary who is receiving or may be eligible to receive government benefits. • This type of irrevocable trust is often used by parents of disabled children to ensure the beneficiary’s eligibility for government benefits by expressly prohibiting distributions that may be used for the beneficiary’s food, shelter, or clothing. [Cases: Trusts C=11(1).]

support trust. (1946) A discretionary trust in which the settlor authorizes the trustee to pay to the beneficiary as much income or principal as the trustee believes is needed for support, esp. for “comfortable support” or “support in accordance with the beneficiary’s standard of living.” • The beneficiary’s interest cannot be voluntarily transferred, but creditors who provide necessaries can usu. reach it; general creditors cannot. [Cases: Trusts C=127.]

technical trust. See passive trust.

tentative trust. See Totten trust.

testamentary trust (tes-to-men-to-reek or-tree). (1832) A trust that is created by a will and takes effect when the settlor (testator) dies. — Also termed trust under will. Cf. inter vivos trust. [Cases: Wills C=669–694.]

Totten trust. (1931) A revocable trust created by one’s deposit of money, typically in a savings account, in the depositor's name as trustee for another. • A Totten trust is an early form of "pay on death" account, since it creates no interest in the beneficiary unless the account remained at the depositor's death. Its name derives from the earliest decision in which the court approved the concept, even though the formalities of will-execution were not satisfied: In re Totten, 71 N.E. 748 (N.Y. 1904). A Totten trust is commonly used to indicate a successor to the account without having to create a will, and thus it is a will substitute. — Also termed tentative trust; bank-account trust; savings-account trust; savings-bank trust; trustee bank account. [Cases: Trusts 35:34(1).]

"A deposit by one person of his own money, in his own name as trustee for another, standing alone, does not establish an irrevocable trust during the lifetime of the depositor. It is a tentative trust merely, revocable at will, until the depositor dies or completes the gift in his lifetime by some unequivocal act or declaration, such as delivery of the pass book or notice to the beneficiary. In case the depositor dies before the beneficiary without revocation, or some decisive act or declaration of disaffirmance, the presumption arises that an absolute trust was created as to the balance on hand at the death of the depositor." In re Totten, 179 N.Y. 112, 125-26 (1904) (Vann, J.).

trust de son tort (da sown [or son] tor[t]). See constructive trust.

trust ex delicto. See constructive trust.

trust ex maleficio. See constructive trust.

trust for support. A trust that, by its terms, provides that the trustee must pay or apply only as much of the income and principal as is necessary for the education and support of the beneficiary. [Cases: Trusts 35:276, 280.]

trust in invitum. See constructive trust.

trust under will. See testamentary trust.

2503(b) trust. A trust that requires a distribution of income to the beneficiary at least annually, and provides that gifts to the trust qualifying as gifts of a present interest become eligible for the annual gift-tax exclusion. • It is named after the section of the IRS code on which it is based. IRC (26 USCA) § 2503(b). [Cases: Internal Revenue 35:4206.]

under-65 trust. A discretionary trust established for the sole benefit of a Medicaid recipient who is under the age of 65. • This type of trust may be established by anyone except the beneficiary, who must be less than 65 years old at the time of creation. The assets in trust will not be included in the beneficiary's estate for purposes of determining Medicaid eligibility. The beneficiary may receive distributions from the trust during life, but any balance remaining in the trust must be used to reimburse the state for the beneficiary's Medicaid expenditures.

unit-investment trust. 1. A trust in which funds are pooled and invested in income-producing securities. • Units of the trust are sold to investors, who maintain an interest in the trust in proportion to their investment. 2. An investment company that gives a shareholder an undivided interest in a fixed pool of securities held by the trustee. • This type of company can be organized in several ways (as by trust indenture, contract of custodianship or agency, or similar instrument), but is most commonly organized with a trust indenture. Such a company does not have a board of directors and issues only redeemable securities, each of which represents an undivided interest in a unit of specified securities. 15 USC 80a-4. See investment company under COMPANY.

unitrust. (1971) A trust from which a fixed percentage of the fair market value of the trust's assets, valued annually, is paid each year to the beneficiary. [Cases: Trusts 35:276.]

voluntary trust. 1. A trust that is not founded on consideration. • One having legal title to property may create a voluntary trust by (1) declaring that the property is to be held in trust for another, and (2) transferring the legal title to the third person who acts as trustee. [Cases: Trusts 35:13.] 2. An obligation arising out of a personal confidence reposed in, and voluntarily accepted by, one for the benefit of another.

voting trust. A trust used to hold shares of voting stock in a closely held corporation, usu. transferred from a parent to a child, and empowering the trustee to exercise the right to vote. • The trust acts as custodian of the shares but is not a stockholder. Cf. VOTING GROUP. [Cases: Corporations 30:198.1(1).]

"At common law there was great suspicion of voting trusts. One commentator described a voting trust as 'little more than a vehicle for corporate kidnapping.' This attitude has largely disappeared. State statutes now uniformly recognize the validity of voting trusts and they have received a more hospitable judicial reception." Robert W. Hamilton, The Law of Corporations in a Nutshell 199 (3d ed. 1991).

wasting trust. A trust in which the trust property is gradually depleted by periodic payments to the beneficiary.

4. A business combination that aims at monopoly. See ANTITRUST LAW.

business trust. A form of business organization, similar to a corporation, in which investors receive transferable certificates of beneficial interest instead of stock shares. — Also termed Massachusetts trust; common-law trust. [Cases: Internal Revenue 35:4206; Joint-Stock Companies and Business Trusts 30:1, 8.]

The document contains detailed information on various types of trusts, including definitions, descriptions of their characteristics, and references to legal cases and statutes. It covers topics such as irrevocable trusts, testamentary trusts, and specific types like the Totten trust, which was an early form of "pay on death" account. The text also discusses the implications of these trusts in the context of legal and financial transactions, particularly in relation to the concepts of perpetuities and the rule against perpetuities. The document references various legal cases and statutes to support its explanations, such as In re Totten, 179 N.Y. 112, 125-26 (1904) (Vann, J.), which is cited as a notable decision regarding the Totten trust. The text is rich with legal terminology and detailed explanations, making it a comprehensive resource for understanding the complexities of trust law.

trustee (tras-tee), n. (17c) 1. One who stands in a fiduciary or confidential relation to another; esp., one who, having legal title to property, holds it in trust for the benefit of another and owes a fiduciary duty to that beneficiary. • Generally, a trustee's duties are to convert to cash all debts and securities that are not qualified legal investments, to reinvest the cash in proper securities, to protect and preserve the trust property, and to ensure that it is employed solely for the beneficiary, in accordance with the directions contained in the trust instrument. [Cases: Trusts C-133, 171.]

bare trustee. A trustee of a passive trust. • A bare trustee has no duty other than to transfer the property to the beneficiary. See passive trust under trust.

corporate trustee. (1852) A corporation that is empowered by its charter to act as a trustee, such as a bank or trust company.

indenture trustee. A trustee named in a trust indenture and charged with holding legal title to the trust property; a trustee under an indenture.

joint trustee. See cotrustee.

judicial trustee. (18c) A trustee appointed by a court to execute a trust.

quasi-trustee. (1830) One who benefits from a breach of a trust to a great enough degree to become liable as a trustee.

successor trustee. (1866) A trustee who succeeds an earlier trustee, usu. as provided in the trust agreement. [Cases: Trusts C-169, 243.]

testamentary trustee (tes-to-men-to-ree or -tree). (1811) A trustee appointed by or acting under a will; one appointed to carry out a trust created by a will. [Cases: Wills C-681.]

township trustee. One of a board of officers to whom, in some states, a township's affairs are entrusted. [Cases: Towns C-28.]

trustee ad litem (ad li-tem or -tam). (1921) A trustee appointed by the court.

trustee de son tort (da sawn or son tor[t]). (1857) A person who, without legal authority, administers a living person's property to the detriment of the property owner. See constructive trust under trust. [Cases: Trusts C-170.]

trustee ex maleficio (eks mal-a-fish-ee-oh). (1837) A person who is guilty of wrongful or fraudulent conduct and is held by equity to the duty of a trustee, in relation to the subject matter, to prevent him or her from profiting from the wrongdoing.

2. Bankruptcy. A person appointed by the U.S. Trustee or elected by creditors or appointed by a judge to administer the bankruptcy estate during a bankruptcy case.

The trustee's duties include (1) collecting and reducing to cash the assets of the estate, (2) operating the debtor's business with court approval if appropriate to preserve the value of business assets, (3) examining the debtor at a meeting of creditors, (4) filing inventories and making periodic reports to the court on the financial condition of the estate, (5) investigating the debtor's financial affairs, (6) examining proofs of claims and objecting to improper claims, (7) furnishing information relating to the bankruptcy to interested parties, and (8) opposing discharge through bankruptcy, if advisable. A trustee is appointed or elected in every Chapter 7 case, and is appointed in every Chapter 12 and Chapter 13 case under the Bankruptcy Code. A trustee is not appointed or elected in a Chapter 11 case unless the court finds that a trustee is needed and appoints one. In most Chapter 11 cases, the bankruptcy estate is administered by the debtor in possession, rather than by a trustee. The role of a bankruptcy trustee varies depending on the type of bankruptcy case. 11 USCA §§ 701–03, 1104, 1202. — Also termed (in sense 2) bankruptcy trustee, trustee in bankruptcy. See United States trustee. [Cases: Bankruptcy C-3001—3011.]

interim trustee. A bankruptcy trustee appointed to perform all the functions and duties of a trustee until the regular trustee is selected and qualified. • Before the meeting of creditors, the interim trustee often preliminarily investigates the debtor's assets and financial affairs. [Cases: Bankruptcy C-3002.]

trustee, vb. (1818) 1. To serve as trustee. 2. To place (a person or property) in the hands of one or more trustees. 3. To appoint (a person) as trustee, often of a bankrupt's estate in order to restrain a creditor from collecting moneys due. 4. To attach (the effects of a debtor) in the hands of a third person.

common trust fund. (1852) A trust fund set up within a trust department to combine the assets of numerous small trusts to achieve greater investment diversification. • Common trust funds are regulated by state law.
pooled-income fund. See pooled-income fund.
trust-fund doctrine. (1892) The principle that the assets of an insolvent company, including paid and unpaid subscriptions to the capital stock, are held as a trust fund to which the company's creditors may look for payment of their claims. • The creditors may follow the property constituting this fund, and may use it to reduce the debts, unless it has passed into the hands of a bona fide purchaser without notice. — Also termed trust-fund theory. [Cases: Corporations C⇒544.(2).] trust indenture. See indenture.
Trust Indenture Act. A federal law, enacted in 1939, designed to protect investors of certain types of bonds by requiring that (1) the SEC approve the trust indenture, (2) the indenture include certain protective clauses and exclude certain exculpatory clauses, and (3) the trustees be independent of the issuing company. 15 USCA §§ 77aaa et seq. • The Act is administered by the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission. [Cases: Securities Regulation C⇒29.10–29.14.]

turpitude (tar-pa-t(y)ood). See moral turpitude.

tutela (t(y)oo-tee-la), n. [Latin “tutelage”] Roman law. A type of guardianship either for those not having reached puberty (tutela impuberum) or for women (tutela mulierum). • The guardian was called the tutor, the ward the pupillus. Guardians for women no longer existed in Justinian’s time. Cf. cura.

tutelage (t(y)oo-to-lij), n. 1. The act of protecting or guiding; guardianship. 2. Int’l law. The state of being under the care and management of an international organization such as the League of Nations or United Nations. • This term applies, for example, to the status of a people who do not yet benefit from a fully operational government of their own — such as people displaced by war and living in a territory that will in the future be given its autonomy.

tutor, n. 1. One who teaches; esp., a private instructor. Pl. tutors. 2. Roman & civil law. A guardian of a minor; a person appointed to have the care of the minor’s person and estate. • The guardian of a minor past the age of puberty is called a curatrix and has duties somewhat different from those of a tutor. Pl. tutores. [Cases: Guardian and Ward 9=10, 17.]

tutor legitimus (t(y)oo-tor [or -ar] lo-jit-i-mas). [Latin] Roman law. A tutor-at-law; a tutor by virtue of the relationship with the pupil, such as a paternal uncle. Pl. tutores legitimi.

tutor testamentarius (t(y)oo-tor [or -ar] tes-ta-men-tair ee-as). [Latin] Roman law. A tutor appointed by will to have the guardianship over the testator’s children. Pl. tutores testamentarii.

undertutor. Civil law. A person appointed by a court to represent a minor under the care of a tutor when the interests of the minor conflict with that of the tutor. See tutorship. [Cases: Guardian and Ward 9=12.]

tutor legitimus. See tutor.

tutorship. Civil law. The office and power of a tutor; the power that an individual has, sui juris, to take care of one who cannot care for himself or herself. • The four types of tutorship are (1) tutorship by nature, (2) tutorship by will, (3) tutorship by the effect of the law, and (4) tutorship by judicial appointment. La. Civ. Code art. 247. [Cases: Guardian and Ward 9=10.]

dative tutorship. Civil law. Tutorship that arises from a court’s appointment, usu. on the advice of the family. — Also termed dative curatorship; tutorship by judicial appointment. [Cases: Guardian and Ward 9=10.]

legal tutorship. Civil law. Tutorship that is bestowed by statute and does not require a court’s or family’s approval. • For example, a spouse has the legal tutorship of the incompetent spouse. — Also termed tutorship by the effect of the law. [Cases: Guardian and Ward 9=10.]

tutorship by judicial appointment. Civil law. See dative tutorship.

tutorship by nature. 1. Tutorship of a minor child that belongs by right to a surviving parent. 2. Tutorship of a minor child that belongs to the parent under whose care the child has been placed following divorce or judicial separation. • If the parents are awarded joint custody, both have cotutorship and equal authority, privileges, and responsibilities. La. Civ. Code art. 250. [Cases: Child Custody 9=1.]

tutorship by the effect of the law. Civil law. See legal tutorship.

tutorship by will. Tutorship that is created (1) by the will of the parent who dies last, or (2) by any declaration of the surviving father or mother (or the parent who is the curator of the other spouse), executed before a notary and two witnesses. La. Civ. Code art. 257.

tutor testamentarius. See tutor.

tutory (t(y)oo-tar-ee). 1. Guardianship; charge. 2. Tutorage; tutelage. — Also spelled tutry; tutowry. Cf. tutelage (1).
Twelfth Amendment. The constitutional amendment, ratified in 1804, that altered the electoral-college system by separating the balloting for presidential and vice-presidential candidates. • In 1800, members of the Electoral College could cast votes only for the office of President, and Thomas Jefferson and his running mate Aaron Burr each received the same number of votes. The House of Representatives had to break the tie. [Cases: United States C-25.]

twelve-day rule. Criminal procedure. A rule in some jurisdictions requiring that a person charged with a felony be given a preliminary examination no later than 12 days after the arraignment on the original warrant. [Cases: Criminal Law C-264.]

twelve-month liquidation. See liquidation.

Twelve Tables. Roman law. The earliest surviving legislation enacted by the Romans, written on 12 tablets in the 5th century B.C. • The 'Tables set out many rights and duties of Roman citizens, including debtors' rights, family law, wills, torts, civil procedure, and some public law. They substituted a written body of laws, easily accessible and binding on all citizens of Rome, for an unwritten usage accessible to only a few. The law of the Twelve Tables was also known as the Lex Duodecim Tabularum.

"The Twelve Tables continued to be recognized for many centuries as the fundamental law of the Romans, they did not formally lose this character until it was taken from them by the legislation of Justinian." James Hadley, Introduction to Roman Law 74-75 (1881).

Twentieth Amendment. The constitutional amendment, ratified in 1933, that changed the date of the presidential and vice-presidential inaugurations from March 4 to January 20, and the date for congressional convention from March 4 to January 3, thereby eliminating the short session of Congress, during which a number of members sat who had not been reelected to office. — Also termed lame-duck amendment. [Cases: United States C-26.]

Twenty-fifth Amendment. The constitutional amendment, ratified in 1967, that established rules of succession for the presidency and vice presidency in the event of death, resignation, or incapacity. • Article II, § 1 of the Constitution provides for the Vice President to assume the President's powers and duties but does not clearly state that the Vice President also assumes the title of President. [Cases: United States C-26.]

Twenty-first Amendment. The constitutional amendment, ratified in 1933, that repealed the 18th Amendment (which established national Prohibition) and returned the power to regulate alcohol to the states. [Cases: Intoxicating Liquors C-5.1, 17.]

2503(b) trust. See trust (3).

2503(c) trust. See trust (3).
is error-free, the appellate court should presume that the jury based its verdict on the proper issue — not on an erroneous one — and should therefore affirm the judgment. [Cases: Appeal and Error $\equiv$ 1068(2).

two-party payment. See payment.

two-stage voting. See voting.

two-stage trial. See bifurcated trial under trial.

two-tier offer. A two-step technique by which a bidder tries to acquire a target corporation, the first step involving a cash tender offer and the second usu. a merger in which the target company's remaining shareholders receive securities from the bidder (these securities ordinarily being less favorable than the cash given in the first step).

two-witness rule. (1900) 1. The rule that, to support a perjury conviction, two independent witnesses (or one witness along with corroborating evidence) must establish that the alleged perjurer gave false testimony. [Cases: Perjury $\equiv$ 34.] 2. The rule, as stated in the U.S. Constitution, that no person may be convicted of treason without two witnesses to the same overt act — or unless the accused confesses in open court. U.S. Const. art. IV, § 2, cl. 2. [Cases: Treason $\equiv$ 13.]

ty, adj. Antitrust. Of or relating to an arrangement whereby a seller sells a product to a buyer only if the buyer purchases another product from the seller (tying agreement). [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation $\equiv$ 568.]

ty arrangement. Antitrust. (1953) A seller's agreement to sell one product or service only if the buyer also buys a different product or service; a seller's refusal to sell one product or service unless the buyer also buys a different product or service. • The product or service that the buyer wants to buy is known as the tying product or tying service; the different product or service that the seller insists on selling is known as the tied product or tied service. Tying arrangements may be illegal under the Sherman or Clayton Act if their effect is too anti-competitive. — Also termed tying agreement; tie-in; tie-in arrangement. Cf. reciprocal dealing. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation $\equiv$ 568.]

"The courts have developed an easily articulated text for so-called per se illegal tying arrangements, although the test varies from one circuit court to another. . . . In operation, the tests are similar, and the three-part test combines elements that are separated in the tests of other circuits. For purpose of analysis we use this five-part test: (1) There must be separate tying and tied products; (2) there must be 'evidence of actual coercion by the seller that in fact forced the buyer to accept the tied product . . . .' (3) the seller must possess 'sufficient economic power in the tying product market to coerce purchaser acceptance of the tied product . . . .' (4) there must be 'anticompetitive effects in the tied market . . . .' and (5) there must be 'involvement of a 'not insubstantial' amount of interstate commerce in the tied product market . . . ." Herbert Hovenkamp, Federal Antitrust Policy 392 (2d ed. 1999) (quoting Yetsch v. Texaco, Inc., 630 F.2d 46, 56, 57 (2d Cir. 1980)).

"The traditional objection to tying arrangements is that they enable a firm having a monopoly in one market to obtain a monopoly in a second one. Thus, a firm having monopoly power in the market for business machines could obtain a monopoly on punch cards as well simply by refusing to sell or lease its machines unless the purchaser or lessee agreed to use only its punch cards in the machines."

typographum ([ti-pog-ra-fom]). [Latin] Hist. Impressed by use of a type, as distinguished from chirographum ("written by hand").

tyranny. 1. The severe deprivation of a natural right. 2. The accumulation of all powers — the legislative, executive, and judicial — in the same hands (whether few or many). • Sense 2 expresses the Madisonian view of tyranny, to be found in The Federalist, No. 47. 3. Arbitrary or despotic government; the severe and autocratic exercise of sovereign power, whether vested constitutionally in one ruler or usurped by that ruler by breaking down the division and distribution of governmental powers. — tyrannical, tyrannous, adj.

tyrant, n. A sovereign or ruler, legitimate or not, who wields power unjustly and arbitrarily to oppress the citizenry; a despot.

unconscionability (an-kon-shay-na-bil-ee). (16c) 1. Extreme unfairness. • Unconscionability is normally assessed by an objective standard: (1) one party’s lack of meaningful choice, and (2) contractual terms that unreasonably favor the other party. 2. The principle that a court may refuse to enforce a contract that is unfair or oppressive because of procedural abuses during contract formation or because of overreaching contractual terms, esp. terms that are unreasonably favorable to one party while precluding meaningful choice for the other party. • Because unconscionability depends on circumstances at the time the contract is formed, a later rise in market price is irrelevant. [Cases: Contracts C 1.]

"Traditionally, a bargain was said to be unconscionable in an action at law if it was "such as no man in his senses and not under delusion would make on the one hand, and as no honest and fair man would accept on the other," damages were then limited to those to which the aggrieved party was "equitably" entitled. Even though a contract was fully enforceable in an action for damages, equitable remedies such as specific performance were refused where "the sum total of its provisions drives too hard a bargain for a court of conscience to assist." Modern procedural reforms have blurred the distinction between remedies at law and in equity. For contracts for the sale of goods, Uniform Commercial Code § 2-302 states the rule of this Section without distinction between law and equity. Comment 1 to that section adds, "The principle is one of the prevention of oppression and unfair surprise . . . and not of disturbance of allocation of risks because of superior bargaining power." Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 208 cmt. b (1979) (citations omitted).

"Nowhere among the [Uniform Commercial Code's many definitions is there one of unconscionability. That term is incapable of precise definition is a source of both strength and weakness." E. Allan Farnsworth, Contracts § 4.28, at 310 (3d ed. 1999).

procedural unconscionability. (1973) Unconscionability resulting from improprieties in contract formation (such as oral misrepresentations or disparities in bargaining position) rather than from the terms of the contract itself. [Cases: Contracts C 1.]

"Most cases of unconscionability involve a combination of procedural and substantive unconscionability, as it is generally agreed that if more of one is present, then less of the other is required." E. Allan Farnsworth, Contracts § 4.28, at 312 (3d ed. 1999).

substantive unconscionability. (1973) Unconscionability resulting from actual contract terms that are unduly harsh, commercially unreasonable, and grossly unfair given the existing circumstances. [Cases: Contracts C 1.]

unconscionable (un-kon-sha-na-bal), adj. (16c) 1. (Of a person) having no conscience; unscrupulous <an unconscionable used-car salesman>. 2. (Of an act or transaction) showing no regard for conscience; affronting the sense of justice, decency, or reasonableness <the contract is void as unconscionable>. Cf. CONSCIONABLE. unconstitutional, adj. (18c) Contrary to or in conflict with a constitution, esp. the U.S. Constitution <the law is unconstitutional because it violates the First Amendment's free-speech guarantee>. Cf. NONCONSTITUTIONAL.

unconstitutional-conditions doctrine. Constitutional law. 1. The rule that the government cannot condition a person's receipt of a governmental benefit on the waiver of a constitutionally protected right (esp. a right under the First Amendment). • For example, a television station that receives public funds cannot be forced to refrain from endorsing political candidates. [Cases: Constitutional Law C 1057.] 2. The rule that the government cannot force a defendant to choose between two constitutionally protected rights. — Also termed doctrine of unconstitutional conditions.

uncopyrightable, adj. (Of a work) ineligible for copyright protection either because the work lacks originality or because it is an idea, concept, process, or other abstraction that is not included in one of the eight covered classifications of copyrightable works. 17 USCA §§ 101–106. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property C 4.]

uncore prist (un[g]-kor prist). [Law French "still ready"] Hist. A plea by which a party alleges readiness to pay or perform what is justly demanded.

"Yet sometimes, after tender and refusal of a debt, if the creditor harasses his debtor with an action, it then becomes necessary for the defendant to acknowledge the debt, and plead the tender, adding, that . . . he is still ready, uncere prist, to discharge it . . . " 3 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 303 (1768).

uncorrectability defense. Patents. An affirmative defense in an infringement suit, established by showing (1) that a co-inventor's name was omitted from a patent, and (2) that the patent cannot be corrected because the named co-inventor acted with deceptive intent. [Cases: Patents C 283(1).]

undertutor. See tutor.

underwriter. 1. insurer. 2. One who buys stock from the issuer with an intent to resell it to the public; a person or entity, esp. an investment banker, who guarantees the sale of newly issued securities by purchasing all or part of the shares for resale to the public. [Cases: Securities Regulation ☞ 11.18, 60.31.]

"The term 'underwriter' derives its meaning from former British insurance practices. When insuring their cargo, shippers would seek out investors to insure their property. The insurers would add their signatures and would write their names under those of the shipper, hence the term 'underwriters.' Both in terms of the insurance industry and the securities markets, the concept of underwriting has expanded significantly since its inception." Thomas Lee Hazen. The Law of Securities Regulation § 2.1, at 57 (2d ed. 1994).

chartered life underwriter. An underwriter who has satisfied the requirements set forth by The American College (formerly The American College of Life Underwriters) to be designated a life insurance underwriter. — Abbr. CLU.

insurance underwriter. 1. insurer. — Also termed writer. 2. An insurance-company employee who is responsible for determining whether to issue a policy and the amount to charge for the coverage provided. [Cases: Insurance ☞ 1515.]

underwriting, n. 1. The act of assuming a risk by insuring it; the insurance of life or property. See insurance. [Cases: Insurance ☞ 1515.]

2. The act of agreeing to buy all or part of a new issue of securities to be offered for public sale. [Cases: Securities Regulation ☞ 11.18, 60.31.] — underwrite, vb.

best-efforts underwriting. Underwriting in which an investment banker agrees to direct, but not guarantee, the public sale of the issuer's securities. • The underwriter, or underwriting group, sells the securities as agent for the issuer, and unsold securities are never issued.

firm-commitment underwriting. Underwriting in which the underwriter agrees to buy and sell all the shares to be issued and assumes full financial responsibility for any unsold securities. • The underwriter, or underwriting group, buys the securities from the issuer and resells them as principal. In this type of underwriting, securities that are not sold to the public are owned by the underwriter, and the issuer is paid for those securities as well as the others.

standby underwriting. Underwriting in which the underwriter agrees, for a fee, to buy from the issuer any unsold shares remaining after the public offering. — Also termed strict underwriting.

undue, adj. (14c) 1. Archaic. Not yet owed; not currently payable <an undue debt>. 2. Excessive or unwarranted <undue burden> <undue influence>. — unduly, adv.

undue burden. See burden.

undue-burden test. (1992) Constitutional law. The Supreme Court test stating that a law regulating abortion will be struck down if it places a substantial obstacle in the path of a woman's right to obtain an abortion. • This test replaced the "trimester analysis" set forth in Roe v. Wade, in which the state's ability to restrict abortion increased after each trimester of pregnancy. Planned Parenthood of Southeastern Pa. v. Casey, 505 U.S. 833, 112 S.Ct. 2791 (1992). [Cases: Abortion and Birth Control C=104.]

undue experimentation. Patents. An unreasonable amount of research and testing that would be required for a person skilled in the appropriate art to make and work an invention from the specification in the patent application. • If undue experimentation would be required, the application fails the embodiment requirement of 35 USCA § 112. See wands test. [Cases: Patents C=99.]

undue hardship. See hardship.

undue influence. (18c) 1. The improper use of power or trust in a way that deprives a person of free will and substitutes another's objective. • Consent to a contract, transaction, or relationship or to conduct is voidable if the consent is obtained through undue influence. — Also termed implied coercion; moral coercion. [Cases: Contracts C=96.]

"Undue influence is unfair persuasion of a party who is under the domination of the person exercising the persuasion or who by virtue of the relation between them is justified in assuming that the person will not act in a manner inconsistent with his welfare." Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 177(1) (1979).

"When at the turn of the twentieth century, the common law doctrine of duress was expanded to provide relief for coercion irrespective of the means of coercion, much of the work of undue influence became unnecessary. The doctrine has a much more specialized role today, although often enough the precedents decided when the more general doctrine prevailed are cited and quoted to the general confusion of the profession. Today the gist of the doctrine is unfair persuasion rather than coercion. Euphoria rather than fear is often, but certainly not always, the state of mind of the party unduly influenced." John D. Calamari & Joseph M. Perillo, The Law of Contracts § 9-9, at 351-52 (3d ed. 1987).

2. Wills & estates. Coercion that destroys a testator's free will and substitutes another's objectives in its place. • When a beneficiary actively procures the execution of a will, a presumption of undue influence may be raised, based on the confidential relationship between the influencer and the person influenced. — Also termed improper influence; (formerly, in both senses) suggestion. See coercion; duress. [Cases: Wills C=154.]

UNESCO. abbr. UNITED NATIONS EDUCATIONAL, SCIENTIFIC, AND CULTURAL ORGANIZATION.

unessential mistake. See MISTAKE.

unfair competition. (1876) 1. Dishonest or fraudulent rivalry in trade and commerce; esp., the practice of endeavoring to pass off one's own goods or products in the market for those of another by means of imitating or counterfeiting the name, brand, size, shape, or other distinctive characteristic of the article or its packaging, including passing off, false advertising, commercial disparagement, and misappropriation.

"The legal doctrine of unfair competition is a development of the fundamental idea that dealings based on deceit are legally wrong." Harry D. Nims, The Law of Unfair Competition and Trade-Marks 6 (1929).

unfair hearing. See HEARING.

unfair labor practice. Any conduct prohibited by state or federal law governing the relations among employers, employees, and labor organizations. • Examples of unfair labor practices by an employer include (1) interfering with protected employee rights, such as the right to self-organization, (2) discriminating against employees for union-related activities, (3) retaliating against employees who have invoked their rights, and (4) refusing to engage in collective bargaining. Examples of unfair labor practices by a labor organization include causing an employer to discriminate against an employee, engaging in an illegal strike or boycott, causing an employer to pay for work not to be performed (i.e., featherbedding), and refusing to engage in collective bargaining. 29 USCA §§ 151-169. [Cases: Labor and Employment C==1427-1504.]

unfair persuasion. (1931) Contracts. A type of undue influence in which a stronger party achieves a result by means that seriously impair the weaker party's free and competent exercise of judgment. • Unfair persuasion is a lesser form of undue influence than duress and misrepresentation. The two primary factors to be considered are the unavailability of independent advice and the susceptibility of the person persuaded. See UNDUE INFLUENCE (1). [Cases: Contracts C==96.]

unfair surprise. (1815) A situation in which a party, having had no notice of some action or proffered evidence, is unprepared to answer or refute it.

unfair trade. An inequitable business practice; esp., the act or an instance of a competitor's repeating of words in a way that conveys a misrepresentation that materially injures the person who first used the words, by appropriating credit of some kind earned by the first user. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation C==25.]

Unfair Trade Practices and Consumer Protection Law. A model statute patterned on the Federal Trade Commission Act and proposed by the FTC in 1967 for adoption by the states; a state law providing consumer-protection remedies, including private causes of action, for deceptive trade practices and false advertising. • The Act gives the state attorney general power to regulate unfair and deceptive trade practices. It also gives consumers a right to sue offenders directly. — Abbr. UTPCPL. — Also termed Little FTC Acts. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation C==126.]

unfinished business and general orders. See BUSINESS.

unfit, adj. (16c) 1. Unsuitable; not adapted or qualified for a particular use or service <the buyer returned the unfit goods to the seller and asked for a refund>. [Cases: Contracts C==312(5); Sales C==284(1).] 2. Family law. Morally unqualified; incompetent <the judge found the mother unfit and so found that awarding custody of the child to the father was in the child's best interests>. [Cases: Child Custody C==32; Infants C==154.1-159.]

unfitness of a parent. Family law. A parent's failure to exhibit a reasonable concern for, interest in, or responsibility for a child's welfare. • Regardless of the specific ground for an allegation of unfitness, a court considers the parent's actions and the circumstances surrounding the conduct in deciding whether unfitness has been demonstrated. [Cases: Child Custody C==51; Infants C==154.1-159.]

uniform, adj. Characterized by a lack of variation; identical or consistent.

uniform act. 1. A law drafted with the intention that it will be adopted by all or most of the states; esp., a uniform law. See uniform law. Cf. model act. 2. See uniform statute under statute. [Cases: Statutes (226).]

Uniform Adoption Act. A 1994 model statute aimed at achieving uniformity in adoption laws. • The current version of the Act was promulgated in 1994 by the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws. State adoption has been largely unsuccessful. Earlier versions, in 1953 and 1971, were amended many times but were enacted in only a few states. — Abbr. UAA. [Cases: Adoption (1-25).]

Uniform Anatomical Gift Act. A 1968 model statute that created protocols that govern the giving and receiving of anatomical gifts. • Under the Act, persons may donate their body or parts of their body for purposes of transplantation, therapy, research, or education. The original Act has been adopted in some form in all 50 states and the District of Columbia. It was revised in 1987, and the revised version has been adopted in some form in at least 22 states. — Abbr. UAGA. [Cases: Dead Bodies (1).]

Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction Act. A 1968 model statute that sets out a standard (based on the child’s residence in and connections with the state) by which a state court determines whether it has jurisdiction over a particular child-custody matter or whether it must recognize a custody decree issued by another state’s court. • The Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction Act was replaced in 1997 by the Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction and Enforcement Act. — Abbr. UCCJA. See home state. Cf. parental kidnapping prevention act; uniform child custody jurisdiction and enforcement act. [Cases: Child Custody (730-753).]

Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction and Enforcement Act. A 1997 model statute that provides uniform methods of expedited interstate custody and visitation orders. • This Act was promulgated as a successor to the Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction Act. The UCCJEA brings the Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction Act into conformity with the Parental Kidnapping Prevention Act and the Violence Against Women Act. The Act revises child-custody jurisdiction, giving clearer standards for original jurisdiction and a standard for continuing jurisdiction. The Act also provides a remedial process for enforcing interstate child custody and visitation. — Abbr. UCCJEA. Cf. uniform child custody jurisdiction act. [Cases: Child Custody (730-753).]

Uniform Commercial Code. A uniform law that governs commercial transactions, including sales of goods, secured transactions, and negotiable instruments. • The Code has been adopted in some form by every state and the District of Columbia. — Abbr. UCC. [Cases: Bills and Notes (2); Sales (3.1); Secured Transactions (3).]

Uniform Computer Information Transactions Act. A model law that regulates software licensing and computer-information transactions. • The act draws upon contract law and the Uniform Commercial Code to create a regulatory scheme for licensing, rather than sales or lease, transactions. Among other things, UCITA applies to contracts for the licensing or purchase of software, contracts for software development, and contracts for access to databases through the Internet. It does not cover goods or services contracts within the scope of the UCC. — Abbr. UCITA.

Uniform Consumer Credit Code. A uniform law designed to simplify and modernize the consumer credit and usury laws, to improve consumer understanding of the terms of credit transactions, to protect consumers against unfair practices, and the like. • This Code has been adopted by only a few states. — Abbr. UCCC; U3e. — Also termed Consumer Credit Code. See consumer credit protection act. [Cases: Consumer Credit (1)].

Uniform Controlled Substances Act. A uniform act, adopted by many states and the federal government, governing the sale, use, and distribution of drugs. 21 USCA §§ 801 et seq. [Cases: Controlled Substances (4, 20).]

Uniform Crime Reports. A series of annual criminological studies (each entitled crime in the united states) prepared by the FBI. • The reports include data on eight index offenses, statistics on arrests, and information on offenders, crime rates, and the like. — Abbr. UCR.
Uniform Customs and Practice for Commercial Documentary Credits. A publication of the International Chamber of Commerce that codifies widespread customs of bankers and merchants relating to the mechanics and operation of letters of credit. • Courts use this publication to supplement and help interpret primary sources of credit law, such as UCC Article 5. — Abbr. UCP. [Cases: Banks and Banking C=191.]

Uniform Deceptive Trade Practices Act. A 1978 model statute designed for non-community-property states to preserve the rights of each spouse in property that was community property before the spouses moved to non-community-property states, unless they have severed or altered their community-property rights.

Uniform Determination of Death Act. A 1978 model statute that provides a comprehensive basis for determining death. • This is a technical act that merely defines death clinically and does not deal with suicide, assisted suicide, or the right to die. The Act was revised in 1980. It has been adopted in almost all states. [Cases: Death C=1.]

Uniform Division of Income for Tax Purposes Act. A uniform law, adopted by some states, that provides criteria to assist in assigning the total taxable income of a multistate corporation among the various states. — Abbr. UDITPA. [Cases: Taxation C=3477.]

Uniform Durable Power of Attorney Act. A 1979 model statute that provides a simple way for a person to deal with his or her property by providing a power of attorney that will survive after the incompetence of the principal. • The Act was revised in 1987 and has been adopted in almost every state. [Cases: Principal and Agent C=42.]

Uniformed Services Former Spouses’ Protection Act. A federal statute that governs the disposition of military pension benefits to former spouses of persons in the armed services. 10 USCA §§ 1401 et seq. • The Act permits state courts to treat military-retirement pay as marital property and to order payment of up to 50% of the retirement pay directly to the former spouse if the spouses were married for at least ten years while the employee served in the military. — Abbr. USFSPA. [Cases: Divorce C=252.3(4).]

Uniform Electronic Transactions Act. A 1999 model law designed to support electronic commerce by providing means for legally recognizing and retaining electronic records, establishing how parties can bind themselves in an electronic transaction, and providing for the use of electronic records by governmental agencies. • UETA covers electronic records and digital signatures but applies only if all parties agree to do business electronically. — Abbr. UETA.

Uniform Enforcement of Foreign Judgments Act. A uniform state law giving the holder of a foreign judgment the right to levy and execute as if it were a domestic judgment. [Cases: Judgment C=814–830.]

Uniform Fraudulent Conveyances Act. A model act adopted in 1918 to deal with issues arising from fraudulent conveyances by insolvent persons. • This act differentiated between conduct that was presumed fraudulent and conduct that required an actual intent to commit fraud. — Abbr. UFCA. [Cases: Fraudulent Conveyances C=2.]

Uniform Fraudulent Transfer Act. A model act designed to bring uniformity among the states regarding the definition of, and penalties for, fraudulent transfers.

Uniform Interstate Family Support Act. The act adopted in 1991 to make the pursuit of interstate child support and paternity more effective, consistent, and efficient by requiring all states to recognize and enforce consistently support orders issued in other states. Before its enactment, there was considerable disparity among the states in the way they handled interstate child-support proceedings, since each state had differing versions of the earlier uniform law, the Uniform Reciprocal Enforcement of Support Act. The Act was revised in 1996 and again in 2001. — Abbr. UIFSA. [Cases: Child Support C=500–510.]

Uniform Interstate Juvenile Compact. An agreement that regulates the treatment of juveniles who are not under proper supervision or control, or who have run away or escaped, and who are likely to endanger their own or others’ health, morals, or welfare. • The Compact is relied on by the state to transport juvenile runaways back to their home states. It has now been universally adopted in the United States, but not always in its entirety. — Abbr. UIJC.
Uniformity Clause. (1881) The clause of the U.S. Constitution requiring the uniform collection of federal taxes. U.S. Const. art. I, § 8, cl. 1. [Cases: Internal Revenue C=3022.]

Uniform Juvenile Court Act. A 1968 model statute designed to (1) provide for the care, protection, and moral, mental, and physical development of the children who come under its provisions, (2) provide juvenile delinquents with treatment, training, and rehabilitation rather than criminal punishment, (3) attempt to keep families together unless separation of parents and children is necessary for the children's welfare or is in the public interest, (4) provide a judicial procedure for a fair hearing and protection of juvenile delinquents' constitutional and other legal rights, and (5) provide simple interstate procedures to carry out cooperative measures among the juvenile courts of different states. — Abbr. UJCA. [Cases: Infants C=131-254.]

uniform law. An unofficial law proposed as legislation for all the states to adopt exactly as written, the purpose being to promote greater consistency among the states. • All the uniform laws are promulgated by the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws. For a complete collection, see Uniform Laws Annotated. See uniform statute under statute. Cf. MODEL ACT. [Cases: Statutes C=226.]

Uniform Law Commissioners. See NATIONAL CONFERENCE OF COMMISSIONERS ON UNIFORM STATE LAWS.

Uniform Limited Partnership Act. A model law promulgated in 1916 for adoption by state legislatures to govern the relationship between the partners of a limited partnership. • At one time it was adopted in all states except Louisiana. The National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws promulgated the Revised Uniform Limited Partnership Act (RULPA) in 1976, and made substantial amendments to it in 1985. The amended RULPA has been adopted by most states. — Abbr. ULPRA. [Cases: Partnership C=351.]

Uniform Mandatory Disposition of Detainers Act. A 1958 model statute requiring a state to timely dispose of any untried charges against a prisoner in that state, on the prisoner's written request. • The Act has been adopted by several states. See INTERSTATE AGREEMENT ON DETAINERS ACT. [Cases: Extradition and Detainers C=51.]

Uniform Marriage and Divorce Act. A 1970 model statute that defines marriage and divorce. • Extensively amended in 1973, the Act was an attempt by the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws to make marriage and divorce laws more uniform. The Act's greatest significance is that it introduced, as the sole ground for divorce, irreconcilable differences. Although the UMDA has been enacted in part in only a handful of states, it has had an enormous impact on marriage and divorce laws in all states. — Abbr. UMDA. — Also termed Model Marriage and Divorce Act. See IRRECONCILABLE DIFFERENCES.

Uniform Parentage Act. A 1973 model statute that provides a means for determining parenthood for the general welfare of the child and for assigning child support. • The Act abolishes distinctions between legitimate and illegitimate status for children. Instead, it directs courts to determine rights and responsibilities based on the existence of a parent–child relationship. The Act has been adopted in all states. The Act was revised in 2000 and amended in 2002. Among other changes, the revisions provided frameworks for establishing the parentage (esp. paternity) of children born to married or unmarried couples, and set standards and rules for genetic testing. A minority of states have enacted a version of the revised Act. [Cases: Children Out-of-Wedlock C=31.]

Uniform Partnership Act. A 1914 model statute intended to bring uniformity to state laws governing general and limited partnerships. • The Act was adopted by almost all the states, but has been superseded in several of them by the Revised Uniform Partnership Act (1994). — Abbr. UPA. [Cases: Partnership C=351.][Cases: Partnership C=1,351.]

Uniform Premarital Agreement Act. A 1983 model statute that governs the drafting of prenuptial contracts and provides a more certain framework for drafting complete and enforceable agreements. • Under the UPAA, a premarital agreement must be in writing and signed by the parties. It becomes effective only upon marriage. The agreement may govern the parties' assets, support, and obligations during the marriage, at death, and upon divorce. The UPAA has been adopted in some form in about one-third of the states. — Abbr. UPAA. [Cases: Husband and Wife C=29.]

Uniform Principal and Income Act. A uniform code adopted by some states governing allocation of principal and income in trusts and estates. [Cases: Executors and Administrators C=502; Trusts C=272; Wills C=684.]

Uniform Probate Code. A 1969 model statute that modernizes the rules and doctrines governing intestate succession, probate, and the administration of estates. • It has been extensively amended many times since 1969 and has been enacted in a majority of states. — Abbr. UPC. [Cases: Wills C=3,204.]

Uniform Prudent Investor Act. A 1994 model statute that sets a standard for the acts of a trustee, adopts a prudent-investor standard, and prefers a modern portfolio approach to investing. • Under the Uniform Prudent Investor Act, the trustee is given significant power to delegate the selection of investments. The prudent-investor standard replaces the prudent-person standard of investing. The portfolio approach provides that no investment will be viewed in isolation; rather, it will be viewed as part of the entire portfolio. Under this theory, even though an investor loses trust assets on an investment, if there is an overall positive return, the investor will not be liable to the beneficiaries. — Abbr. UPIA. See PRUDENT-INVESTOR RULE.
Uniform Putative and Unknown Fathers Act. A 1988 model statute aimed at codifying Supreme Court decisions on the rights of an unwed father in relation to his child. • The Act deals primarily with an unwed father’s right to notice of a termination and adoption proceeding, to adjudication of paternity, to visitation, and to custody. — Abbr. UPUFA. — Also termed Model Putative Fathers Act; Putative Fathers Act.

Uniform Reciprocal Enforcement of Support Act. A 1950 model statute (now superseded) that sought to unify the way in which interstate support matters were processed and the way in which one jurisdiction’s orders were given full faith and credit in another jurisdiction. • This Act, which was amended in 1958 and 1960, was replaced in 1997 with the Uniform Interstate Family Support Act. — Abbr. URESA. See uniform interstate family support act. [Cases: Child Support § 500–510.]

Uniform Simultaneous Death Act. A 1940 model statute creating a rule that a person must survive a decedent by at least 120 hours in order to avoid disputes caused by simultaneous deaths (as in a common disaster) or by quickly successive deaths of persons between whom property or death benefits pass on the death of one survived by the other. • In the absence of the 120-hour period of survival, each person is presumed to have survived the other for purposes of distributing their respective estates. The Act was revised in 1993 and has been adopted in some form by almost every state. See commorientes. [Cases: Death § 5–6.]

Uniform Status of Children of Assisted Conception Act. A 1988 model statute aimed at ensuring certainty of legal parentage when assisted conception has been used. • The adopting state has the option of regulating or prohibiting contracts with surrogate mothers.

uniform statute. See statute.

Uniform Trade Secrets Act. A 1979 model statute, enacted by most states, defining trade secret differently from the common law by being at once broader (because there is no continuous-use requirement) and narrower (because information “readily ascertainable by proper means” cannot qualify). • The Act has three elements: (1) the information must qualify as a trade secret; (2) it must be misappropriated, either through wrongful means or by breaching a duty of confidentiality; and (3) the owner must have taken reasonable precautions to keep the information secret. — Abbr. UTSA. — Also termed Uniform Trade Secrets Protection Act. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation § 411.]

Uniform Transfers to Minors Act. A 1983 model statute providing for the transfer of property to a minor and permitting a custodian who acts in a fiduciary capacity to manage investments and apply the income from the property to the minor’s support. • The Act has been adopted in most states. It was revised in 1986. — Abbr. UTMA. — Also termed Transfers to Minors Act. — Formerly also termed Uniform Gifts to Minors Act; Gifts to Minors Act. [Cases: Infants § 28.]

unitization. Oil & gas. The collection of producing wells over a reservoir for joint operations such as enhanced-recovery techniques. ● Unitization is usu. carried out after primary production has begun to fall off substantially, in order to permit efficient secondary-recovery operations. It is also done to comply with well-spacing requirements established by state law or regulation. Pooling, by contrast, is usu. associated with drilling a single well and operating that well by primary-production techniques. Cf. pooling. [Cases: Mines and Minerals ☐-92.78. — unitize (yoo-ni-tiz), vb. compulsory unitization. Unitization done by order of a regulatory agency. — Also termed forced unitization. [Cases: Mines and Minerals ☐-92.78.]

forced unitization. See compulsory unitization.

voluntary unitization. Unitization arranged by agreement of the owners of mineral interests. [Cases: Mines and Minerals ☐-78.1(7), 79.1(5).]

unitization clause. Oil & gas. A provision in an oil-and-gas lease granting the lessee the right to unitize the leased premises, generally for enhanced-recovery operations. [Cases: Mines and Minerals ☐-78.1(7).]

unit-ownership act. A state law governing condominium ownership. [Cases: Condominium ☐-2.]

unit pricing. A system in which contract items are priced per unit rather than on the basis of a flat contract price. [Cases: Contracts ☐-231(1); Sales ☐-77(1).]

unit rule. 1. Securities. A method of valuing securities by multiplying the total number of shares held by the sale price of one share sold on a licensed stock exchange, ignoring all other facts about value. 2. Parliamentary law. A convention’s rule that lets a delegation’s majority cast the entire delegation’s votes. Cf. instructed delegate under delegate.

unitrust. See trust.

units-of-output depreciation method. See depreciation method.

units-of-production depreciation method. Tax. An accounting method in which the depreciation provision is computed at a fixed rate per product unit, based on an estimate of the total number of units that the property will produce during its service life. ● This method is used in the oil-and-gas industry when the total number of units of production (i.e., barrels in a reserve) can be accurately estimated.

unity, n. (13c) 1. The fact or condition of being one in number; oneness. 2. Jointness in interest, possession, time, or title. ● At common law, all four of theseunities were required for the creation of a joint tenancy. See joint tenancy under tenancy. [Cases: Joint Tenancy ☐-1, 3. — unitary, adj.

unity of interest. (18c) ‘The requirement that all joint tenants’ interests must be identical in nature, extent, and duration. — Also termed interest unity. [Cases: Joint Tenancy ⊢ 1, 3.]

unity of possession. (18c) The requirement that each joint tenant must be entitled to possession of the whole property. — Also termed possession unity. [Cases: Joint Tenancy ⊢ 1, 3.]

unity of time. (18c) The requirement that all joint tenants’ interests must vest at the same time. — Also termed time unity. [Cases: Joint Tenancy ⊢ 1, 3.]

unity of title. (18c) The requirement that all joint tenants must acquire their interests under the same instrument. — Also termed title unity. [Cases: Joint Tenancy ⊢ 1, 3.]

unity of art. Copyright. The inseparable nature of utilitarian and functional aspects of applied art. • France uses the unity-of-art approach to applied art and industrial design, but stops short of protecting strictly utilitarian design under copyright. — Also termed cumulative approach. Cf. duality of art.

unity of seizin (see-zin). (1800) The merging of seizin in seised of a tract of land on which he or she already has an easement. [Cases: Easements ⊢ 27.]

universal agency. See general agency under agency (1).

universal agent. See agent.

Universal Copyright Convention. A 1952 treaty binding signatories to give citizens of other member nations the same copyright protection that their own citizens receive. 25 U.S.T. 1341, T.I.A.S. No. 7868. • Administered by the United Nations Educational, Scientific, and Cultural Organization, the Convention does not apply between nations that are also signatories of the Berne Convention. The United States signed the treaty in 1955. — Abbr. UCC. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property ⊢ 34.]

Universal Declaration of Human Rights. An international bill of rights proclaimed by the United Nations in December 1948, being that body’s first general enumeration of human rights and fundamental freedoms. • The preamble states that “recognition of the inherent dignity and of the equal and inalienable rights of all members of the human family is the foundation of freedom, justice and peace in the world.” The Declaration contains a lengthy list of rights and fundamental freedoms. For the full text of the Declaration, see Appendix C. [Cases: International Law ⊢ 10.45(1).]

"The Universal Declaration is the first comprehensive human rights instrument to be proclaimed by a universal international organization. Because of its moral status and the legal and political importance it has acquired over the years, the Declaration ranks with the Magna Carta, the French Declaration of the Rights of Man and the American Declaration of Independence as a milestone in mankind’s struggle for freedom and human dignity. Its debt to all these great historical documents is unmistakable." Thomas Buergenthal et al., International Human Rights in a Nutshell 35–36 (3d ed. 2002).

universal defense. See real defense under defense (4).

universal inheritance. See inheritance.

universal-inheritance rule. Wills & estates. A doctrine holding that an intestate estate escheats to the state only if the decedent leaves no surviving relatives, no matter how distant. • Through the first half of the 20th century, this rule was broadly followed in American jurisdictions. The Uniform Probate Code abandons the universal-inheritance rule and provides that if no member of the third or a nearer parentela survives the decedent, the intestate estate escheats to the state. — Also termed rule of universal inheritance. See parentela. Cf. laughing heir under heir; gradual method. [Cases: Escheat ⊢ 3.] universalist movement. Copyright. A 19th-century campaign in Europe to recognize a worldwide copyright law based on an author’s moral rights.

"The universalist movement evolved both in and out of France, starting with an International Congress of Authors and Artists in Brussels in 1858, attended by delegates of literary societies and universities, as well as by authors, artists, journalists, librarians, and lawyers. The movement gained momentum at an 1878 international literary congress in Paris presided over by Victor Hugo." Paul Goldstein, International Copyright: Principles, Law, and Practice 19 (2001).

universalality. 1. Equality of applicability. 2. Copyright. A nation’s policy or practice of protecting artists’ rights in their creations irrespective of the creator’s nationality or where the work was created. • Universalism, the most generous approach to international intellectual-property rights, is generally favored in countries that treat copyright as a moral right. Cf. reciprocity; national treatment. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property ⊢ 34.]

universitas (yoo-ni-var-sa-tas), n. [Latin] Roman law. A union of persons or things considered as a whole; a corporation.

universitas facti (yoo-ni-var-sa-tas fak-ti). [Law Latin] A plurality of corporeal things of the same kind regarded as a whole, such as a herd of cattle.

universitas juris (yoo-ni-var-sa-tas joor-is). [Latin] Roman & civil law. The whole of a person’s rights and liabilities; the totality of a person’s legal relations.

"A universitas juris is a collection of rights and duties united by the single circumstance of their having belonged at one time to some one person." Henry S. Maine, Ancient Law 148 (17th ed. 1901).
universitas personarum (yoo-ni-var-so-tas par-so-nay-ram). [Latin] Roman & civil law. A group of people that are legally considered an entity, such as a college or corporation. Pl. universitates personarum.

universitas rerum (yoo-ni-var-so-tas reer-am). [Latin] Roman & civil law. A whole collection of things; a variety of individual things that are together regarded by the law as a whole. See JUS RERUM.

"In the time of Justinian the universitas rerum, or universitas iuris (both expressions are used) is a somewhat abstract conception: it means the sum or whole of a man's legal position so far as it concerns the law. The conception is important in law only on the occasions, of which death is by far the most important, on which the universitas passes from one to another. . . . The expression universitas rerum is also used in another sense, to denote any collection of objects considered as a whole." W.W. Buckland, A Manual of Roman Private Law 172 (2d ed. 1953).

unjudicial, adj. (16c) Not becoming of or appropriate to a judge. [Cases: Judges ☞ 11.]

usage. (13c) 1. A well-known, customary, and uniform practice, usu. in a specific profession or business. See CUSTOM (1). Cf. CONVENTION (6). [Cases: Customs and Usages \( \rightarrow \) 1–22.]

"A 'usage' is merely a customary or habitual practice; a 'convention' is a practice that is established by general tacit consent. 'Usage' denotes something that people are accustomed to do; 'convention' indicates that they are accustomed to do it because of a general agreement that it is the proper thing to do." Herbert W. Horwill, The Usages of the American Constitution 22 (1925).

"Although rules of law are often founded on usage, usage is not in itself a legal rule but merely habit or practice in fact. A particular usage may be more or less widespread. It may prevail throughout an area, and the area may be small or large—a city, a state or a larger region. A usage may prevail among all people in the area, or only in a special trade or other group. Usages change over time, and persons in close association often develop temporary usages peculiar to themselves." Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 219 cmt. a (1979).

custom and usage. See custom and usage.

general usage. (16c) A usage that prevails throughout a country or particular trade or profession; a usage that is not restricted to a local area. [Cases: Customs and Usages C=1.]

immemorial usage. (17c) A usage that has existed for a very long time; longstanding custom. See time immemorial. [Cases: Customs and Usages C=1.]

local usage. (18c) A practice or method regularly observed in a particular place, sometimes considered by a court in interpreting a document. UCC § 1-205(2) (3). See custom and usage. [Cases: Customs and Usages C=9.]

trade usage. (1864) A practice or method of dealing having such regular observance in a region, vocation, or trade that it justifies an expectation that it will be observed in a given transaction; a customary practice or set of practices relied on by persons conversant in, or connected with, a trade or business. While a course of performance or a course of dealing can be established by the parties' testimony, a trade usage is usu. established by expert testimony. — Also termed usage of trade; course of trade. Cf. course of dealing; course of performance. [Cases: Customs and Usages C=1.]

"The existence and scope of a usage of trade are to be determined as questions of fact. If a usage is embodied in a written trade code or similar writing the interpretation of the writing is to be determined by the court as a question of law. Unless otherwise agreed, a usage of trade in the vocation or trade in which the parties are engaged or a usage of trade of which they know or have reason to know gives meaning to or supplements or qualifies their agreement." Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 222 (1979).

2. See conventional custom under custom.

use (yooz), n. (bef. 12c) 1. The application or employment of something; esp., a long-continued possession and employment of a thing for the purpose for which it is adapted, as distinguished from a possession and employment that is merely temporary or occasional <the neighbors complained to the city about the owner's use of the building as a dance club>.

accessory use. Zoning. A use that is dependent on or pertains to a main use. [Cases: Zoning and Planning C=301–308.]

adverse use. A use without license or permission. Cf. adverse possession.

beneficial use. Property. The right to use property and all that makes that property desirable or habitable, such as light, air, and access, even if someone else owns the legal title to the property.

collateral use. Intellectual property. The legal use of a trademark by someone other than the trademark owner, whereby the other party must clearly identify itself, the use of the trademark, and the absence of affiliation with the trademark owner.

commercial use. A use that is connected with or furthers an ongoing profit-making activity. Cf. non-commercial use.

conditional use. Zoning. A use of property subject to special controls and conditions. A conditional use is one that is suitable to a zoning district, but not necessarily to every location within that district. — Also termed special exception. See special exception (2). [Cases: Zoning and Planning C=382.]

conforming use. Zoning. The use of a structure or of the land in conformity with the uses permitted under the zoning classifications of a particular area, such as the building of a single-family dwelling in a residential zone. [Cases: Zoning and Planning C-271.]

double use. Patents. An application of a known principle or process to a new use without leading to a new result or product. [Cases: Patents C-27.]

exclusive use. 1. Trademarks. The right to use a specific mark without exception, and to prevent another from using a confusingly similar mark. [Cases: Trademarks C-1182.] 2. Property. The right of an adverse user to a property, exercised independently of any similar rights held by others; one of the elements of a prescriptive easement. See user. [Cases: Adverse Possession C-36, 37; Easements C-8(4).]

experimental use. Patents. 1. The use or sale of an invention by the inventor for experimental purposes. 2. A defense to liability for patent infringement when the infringement took place only to satisfy curiosity or to complete an experiment, rather than for profit. [Cases: Patents C-260.]

highest and best use. Real estate. In valuing property, the use that will generate the most profit. • This standard is used esp. to determine the fair market value of property subject to eminent domain. — Often shortened to best use. — Also termed most suitable use. [Cases: Eminent Domain C-134; Taxation C-2515.]

incidental use. Zoning. Land use that is dependent on or affiliated with the land’s primary use. [Cases: Zoning and Planning C-301-308.]

most suitable use. See highest and best use.

noncommercial use. A use for private pleasure or business purposes that non involving the generation of income or bestowing a reward or other compensation. Cf. commercial use.

nonconforming use. Zoning. Land use that is impermissible under current zoning restrictions but that is allowed because the use existed lawfully before the restrictions took effect. [Cases: Zoning and Planning C-321-338.]

pious use. The designation and actual use of property for recognized religious or charitable purposes. Cf. superstitious use.

popular use. A person’s imperfect right to enjoy public land. • A popular use is not legally enforceable. It is dependent on the government’s will to allow access to the land.

public use. 1. Property. The public’s beneficial right to use property or facilities subject to condemnation. See condemnation (2). [Cases: Eminent Domain C-12-42.] 2. Patents. Any use of or offer to use a completed or operative invention in a nonsecret, natural, and intended manner. • A patent is invalid if the invention was in public use more than one year before the patent’s application date. [Cases: Patents C-75.]

The term ‘public use’ is misleading, for any use from which the public is not excluded, even though none comes, is held to be public. Similarly, an actual public use of a machine, even though the invention feature be effectively concealed from inspection, is held to be public. It makes no difference whether the patent or other publication is that of the inventor or someone else. Roger Sherman Hoar, Patent Tactics and the Law 48 (3d ed. 1950) (citing Gillman v. Stern, 114 F.2d 28, 31 (2d Cir. 1940)).

reasonable use. Use of one’s property for an appropriate purpose that does not unreasonably interfere with another’s use of property. See reasonable-use theory.

regular use. Insurance. A use that is usual, normal, or customary, as opposed to an occasional, special, or incidental use. • This term often appears in automobile-insurance policies in the definition of a nonowned automobile — that is, an automobile not owned by or furnished for the regular use of the insured. Nonowned automobiles are excluded from coverage under most liability policies. [Cases: Insurance C-2657.]

superstitious use. A designation or use of property for religious purposes not legally recognized or tolerated (such as gifts either favoring an unrecognized religion or supporting the saying of prayers for the dead). Cf. pious use.

2. A habitual or common practice <drug use>. 3. A purpose or end served <the tool had several uses>. 4. A benefit or profit; esp., the right to take profits from land owned and possessed by another; the equitable ownership of land to which another person holds the legal title <cestui que use>. See cestui que use. — use (yooz), vb.

contingent use. (17c) A use that would be a contingent remainder if it had not been limited by way of use. • An example is a transfer “to A, to the use of B for life, with the remainder to the use of C’s heirs.” — Also termed future use.

entire use. A use of property solely for the benefit of a married woman. • When used in the habendum of a trust deed for the benefit of a married woman, this phrase operates to keep her husband from taking anything under the deed. — Also termed entire benefits; sole use; sole and separate use.

executed use. Hist. A use resulting from combining the equitable title and legal title of an estate, done to comply with the Statute of Uses’ mandate that the holder of an estate be vested with legal title to ensure the holder’s liability for feudal dues. See statute of uses.

executory use. See springing use.

future use. See contingent use.

official use. Hist. A use imposing a duty on a person holding legal title to an estate on behalf of another, such as a requirement that a feoffee to uses sell the estate and apportion the proceeds among several beneficiaries. • The Statute of Uses eliminated this type of use.
permisive use. Hist. A passive use resorted to before passage of the Statute of Uses in 1535 to avoid an oppressive feudal law (such as mortmain) by naming one person as the legal owner of property while allowing another to possess the property and enjoy the benefits arising from it.

present use. Hist. A use that has an immediate existence and is subject to the Statute of Uses.

resulting use. (18c) A use created by implication and remaining with the grantor when the conveyance lacks consideration.

secondary use. See shifting use.

shifting use. (18c) A use arising from the occurrence of a certain event that terminates the preceding use. • In the following example, C has a shifting use that arises when D makes the specified payment: "to A for the use of B, but then to C when D pays $1,000 to E." This is a type of conditional limitation. — Also termed secondary use. See conditional limitation under LIMITATION. [Cases: Trusts ☐=131; Wills ☐=625.]

sole and separate use. See entire use.

springing use. (17c) A use arising on the occurrence of a future event. • In the following example, B has a springing use that vests when B marries: "to A for the use of B when B marries." — Also termed executory use. [Cases: Trusts ☐=131; Wills ☐=625.]

use-based license. See LICENSE.

use/derivative-use immunity. See use immunity under IMMUNITY (3).

usee. See use plaintiff.

useful, adj. Patents. (Of an invention) having a practical application. [Cases: Patents ☐=45.]

"[M]ere curiosities of invention, which do not have any intelligent purpose, are not useful in a patentable sense." Roger Sherman Hoar, Patent Tactics and the Law 37 (3d ed. 1950).

"When applied to a machine, 'useful' means that the machine will accomplish its purpose practically when applied in industry. The word is given a practical and not a speculative meaning." 60 Am. Jur. 2d Patents § 131 (1987).

useful-article doctrine. See APPLIED-ART DOCTRINE.

useful life. (1923) The estimated length of time that depreciable property will generate income. • Useful life is used to calculate depreciation and amortization deductions. — Also termed depreciable life. See DEPRECIATION METHOD.

use immunity. See IMMUNITY (3).

use in commerce. Trademarks. Actual use of a trademark in the advertising, marketing, promotion, sale, or distribution of goods or services. • Use of a trademark in commerce is a prerequisite to trademark registration. Regular use demonstrates that the trademark has become associated with currently available goods or services, as contrasted with a token use intended to reserve some right to use the trademark in the future. For goods, a trademark is used in commerce if it is displayed on or with goods offered for sale, or placed on documents related to the goods. For services, a mark is used in commerce if it appears in advertising or on documents related to the services. In addition, the goods must be used or the services rendered in more than one state, because use of a trademark in interstate commerce is a prerequisite to federal trademark registration. [Cases: Trademarks ☐=1136, 1142.]

useless-gesture exception. (1970) Criminal procedure. An exception to the knock-and-announce rule whereby police are excused from having to announce their purpose before entering the premises to execute a warrant when it is evident from the circumstances that people inside the premises are of aware of the police officers’ authority and purpose. See KNOCK-AND-ANNOUNCE RULE. [Cases: Searches and Seizures ☐=54, 143.1.]

use plaintiff. Common-law pleading. A plaintiff for whom an action is brought in another’s name. • For example, when the use plaintiff is an assignee (“A”) of a chose in action and sues in the assignor’s name (“B”), the assignor’s name appears first on the petition’s title: “B for the Use of A against C.” — Also termed see. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ☐=131; Parties ☐=4.]

user (youz-or). (15c) 1. The exercise or employment of a right or property <the neighbor argued that an easement arose by his continuous user over the last 15 years>. Cf. nonuser.

2. Someone who uses a thing <the stapler’s last user did not put it away>.

der user. (1963) The ultimate consumer for whom a product is designed.

user agreement. See POINT-AND-CLICK AGREEMENT.

user confusion. See CONSUMER CONFUSION.

user fee. (1967) A charge assessed for the use of a particular item or facility.

Uses, Statute of. See statute of USES.

USGS. abbr. UNITED STATES GEOLOGICAL SURVEY.

usher, n. English law. A court officer responsible for maintaining silence and order in some English courts, swearing in jurors and witnesses, and otherwise aiding the judge.

USIP. abbr. UNITED STATES INSTITUTE OF PEACE.
usufruct (yoo-za-frakt), n. [fr. Latin ususfractus] Roman & civil law. A right for a certain period to use and enjoy the fruits of another's property without damaging or diminishing it, but allowing for any natural deterioration in the property over time. • In Roman law, the usufruct was considered a personal servitude, resulting in a real right. In modern civil law, the owner of the usufruct is similar to a life tenant, and the owner of the property burdened is known as the naked owner. La. Civ. Code art. 535. — Also termed perfect usufruct; ususfructus; (in Scots law) liferent. Cf. habitation (3). [Cases: Estates in Property \(\rightleftarrows\) 1.]

"Ususfractus is . . . the right of using and enjoying property belonging to another provided the substance of the property remained unimpaired. More exactly, a usufruct was the right granted to a man personally to use and enjoy, usually for his life . . ., the property of another which, when the usufruct ended, was to revert intact to the dominus or his heir. It might be for a term of years, but even here it was ended by death, and in the case of a corporation (which never dies) Justinian fixed the period at 100 years. A usufruct might be in land or buildings, a slave or beast of burden, and is fact in anything except things which were destroyed by use . . ., the reason, of course, being that it was impossible to restore such things at the end of the usufruct intact . . ." R.W. Leage, Roman Private Law 181–82 (C.H. Ziegler ed., 2d ed. 1930).

legal usufruct. A usufruct established by operation of law, such as the right of a surviving spouse to property owned by the deceased spouse. La. Civ. Code art. 890. [Cases: Executors and Administrators \(\rightleftarrows\) 176; Husband and Wife \(\rightleftarrows\) 273(2); Wills \(\rightleftarrows\) 11.]

quasi-ususfruct. 1. A right to use property that cannot be used without being expended or consumed, such as money or food. • Unlike an ordinary usufruct, a quasi-ususfruct actually involves alienation and diminution of the property used. — Also termed imperfect usufruct. 2. Louisiana law. A usufruct over consumable things, such as money or harvested crops, the value of which must be delivered to the naked owner at the end of the usufruct’s term. La. Civ. Code art. 538. • The usufructuary has the right to consume or alienate the consumables and, at the end of the usufruct, to deliver to the naked owner either the value that the things had when the usufruct began or things of the same quantity and quality. [Cases: Executors and Administrators \(\rightleftarrows\) 176.]

"The Roman jurists, therefore, would not acknowledge a usufruct of money; though, in their desire to carry out the wishes of testators, they came at length to recognize a quasi-ususfruct. For testators, being seldom learned in the law, would often set forth as legacies in their wills the usufruct of a designated sum . . . In such a case the person named as legatee was allowed to receive the amount . . . on giving security that when he died the same amount should be paid out of his own estate to the heres, the heir of the testator. The relation here, though bearing some resemblance to the usufruct, was really quite different; the person who received the money became absolute owner of it; the heir had no ownership, nothing but the assurance of receiving an equal amount at some future time." James Hadley, Introduction to Roman Law 193 (1881).

usufructuary (yoo-za-frak-choo-er-ee), adj. Roman & civil law. Of or relating to a usufruct; of the nature of a usufruct.

"There is no principle in all law which the moderns, in spite of its beneficial character, have been so loath to adopt and to carry to its legitimate consequences as that which was known to the Romans as Usucapi, and which has descended to modern jurisprudence under the name of Prescription." Henry S. Maine, Ancient Law 236 (17th ed. 1901).
usurary, n. Roman & civil law. One having the right to a usufruct; specif., a person who has the right to the benefits of another's property; a life-renter. [Cases: Estates in Property ☞ 1] usufructus. See USUFRUCT.

usura (yoo-sas or yoo-zas), [Latin] Civil law. 1. The amount paid for the use of money; interest. 2. USURY. Pl. usurae (yoo-sas or yoo-zes). [Latin] Interest.

usurae centesimae (yoo-sas or yoo-zas-seh-sas or yoo-zes-sas-sas), [Latin] Interest at the rate of 12% per year (1% per month), usu. the highest rate allowed by law. • The Romans calculated interest rates by dividing the principal sum into one hundred parts, with one part being payable monthly as interest.

usura manifesta (yoo-sas or yoo-zas-man-sas-tas), [Latin] Manifest or open usury. Cf. USURA VELATA.

usura maritima (yoo-sas or yoo-zas-mar-ee-tas), [Latin] Interest taken on a bottomry or respondentia bond, proportioned to the risk and so not restricted by any usury laws.

usurarius (yoo-sas or yoo-zas) - rair-ee-as or yoo-zas, adj., n. [Latin] A usurer.

usura velata (yoo-sas or yoo-zas) va-lay-tas), [Latin] Veiled or concealed usury. • A creditor was guilty of usura velata when the creditor added unlawfully high interest to the principal sum as the interest amount were part of the original loan. Cf. UK ABERAT ANIMUS POENERANDII; USURA MANIFESTA.

usurious (yoo-zas or yoo-zas) ee-as or yoo-zas, adj. (17c) 1. Practicing usury, a usurious lender. 2. Characterized by usury. • A usurer.

usurpatio (yoo-sarpay-shee-oh), n. [Latin] Roman law. The interruption of usucapion by reason of loss of physical possession of a law suit by the true legal owner. Pl. usurpationes (yoo-sar-pay-shen or yoo-zar-pay-shen), vb.

usurpation (yoo-sar-pay-shen or yoo-zar-pay-shen), n. (14c) The unlawful seizure and assumption of another's property and got possession of it, but not ownership, of property and got possession of it, but not ownership, and bears the same relation to a usufructuary. A Roman citizen who bought some object of property and got possession of it, but not ownership, because he neglected to go through the mancipation prescribed by jus civile, might nevertheless become owner by usucapion, i.e., lapse of time; thus if the object was a movable, continuous possession for one year made him dominus. In like manner, if a man lived with a woman whom he treated as his wife, but whom he had not married by coemptio (or confarreatio), and the cohabitation lasted without interruption for a year, then at the end of that period the man acquired (power over) the woman as his wife, she passed to him in manum . . . " R.W. Leage, Roman Private Law 100 (C.H. Ziegler ed., 2d ed. 1930).

usus bellici (yoo-sas or yoo-zas) bel-ee-sts), [Latin] Int'l law. Warlike objects or uses. • This phrase refers to items that, while not inherently of a military nature, are considered contraband because they are used by a belligerent to support its war effort.

Usus Feudorum (yoo-sas or yoo-zas) fyoo-do-ram), See FEUDORUM LIBRI.

ut currere solebat (at kar-ee soo-lee-bat), [Latin] As it was wont to run. • This referred to the course of a stream.

ut de feodo (at de feee-doh or fyoo-doh), [Latin] As of fee.

uterine (yoo-tair-in), adj. Born of the same mother but having different biological fathers.

uterine brother. See BROTHER.

uterine sister. See SISTER.

uterque (yoo-tair-kee), [Latin] Each of two; both (considered separately).

uterque nostrum (yoo-tram-kwee nos-ram), See UTRUMQUE NOSTRUM.

utfangthief (at-fang-theef), See OUTFANGTHIEF.

ut hospites (at hos-pays-teez), [Latin] As guests.

uti (yoo-ti), vb. [Latin] Civil law. To use.

uti frui (yoo-ti fyoo-ee), [Latin] Civil law. To have the full use and enjoyment of a thing, without damage to its substance.

utilis (yoo-ti-lis), adj. [Latin] Civil law. Useful; beneficial; equitable. • This word appeared in phrases such as utilitarian-deterrence theory utilitarian-deterrence theory. (1983) The legal theory that a person should be punished only if the punishment benefits society—that is, only if the punishment would help to deter future harmful conduct. See hedonistic utilitarianism under UTILITARIANISM. Cf. RETRIBUTIVISM.

utilitarianism. (1827) The philosophical and economic doctrine that the best social policy is that which does the most good for the greatest number of people; esp., an ethical theory that judges the rightness or wrongness of actions according to the pleasure they create or the pain they inflict and recommends whatever action creates the greatest good for the greatest number of people. • This is a type of consequentialism. For example, utilitarianism analyzes intellectual-property rights from the point of view of society rather than the individual inventor, author, or artist, and justifies the rights as an incentive for social and technological progress. See CONSEQUENTIALISM. Cf. LOCKIAN LABOR THEORY; PERSONALITY THEORY. — utilitarian, adj. & n.

hedonistic utilitarianism. (1943) The theory that the validity of a law should be measured by determining the extent to which it promotes the greatest happiness to the greatest number of citizens. • This theory is found most prominently in the work of Jeremy Bentham, whose "Benthamite utilitarianism" greatly influenced legal reform in nineteenth-century Britain. Hedonistic utilitarianism generally maintains that pleasure is intrinsically good and pain intrinsically bad. Therefore, inflicting pain on an individual, as by punishing a criminal, is justified only if it results in a net increase of pleasure for society by deterring future harmful behavior. — Also termed Benthamism. See utilitarian-deterrence theory; BENTHAMITE. Cf. RETRIBUTIVISM.

utility. (14c) 1. The quality of serving some function that benefits society; meritourousness. 2. Patents. Capacity to perform a function or attain a result for which the patent applicant or holder claims protection as intellectual property. • In patent law, utility is one of the three basic requirements of patentability, the others being nonobviousness and novelty. In the calculation of damages for patent infringement, utility is the benefit or advantage of the patented product or process over the products or processes, if any, that previously had been used to produce similar results. [Cases: Patents $= 47.]

"[T]he utility requirement does not mandate that the invention be superior to existing products and processes in order to qualify for a patent. The utility standard reflects the judgment that society is better served by access to a library of issued patents describing as many inventions as possible, even if many of them do not achieve better results than public domain technology. This liberal view of utility allows subsequent inventors access to a greater variety of previous technologies, some of which may yet be judged the superior solution when employed within a different context." Roger E. Schechter & John R. Thomas, Intellectual Property § 15.1, at 316 (2003).

3. A business enterprise that performs an essential public service and that is subject to governmental regulation.

utility model. Patents. A system of patent registration giving patent-like rights in some countries, usu. for a shorter term than a patent but with little or no search required. • Utility-model registration is not available in the U.S. or Great Britain, but is offered in Japan and many European countries, including Germany and France. They are available for machines only, and not for chemicals. — Also termed petty patent; second-tier patent; small invention.

uti mos est in feudifirmis (yoo-tI mahs est in fyoo-di-fa-ri-mis). [Law Latin] Scots law. As is the custom in feu­holdings.

uti possidetis (yoo-tI pah-si-de-tis). [Latin] 1. Int'l law. The doctrine that the administrative boundaries will become international boundaries when a political subdivision or colony achieves independence. 2. Roman law. An interdict ordering each party to a lawsuit to maintain the possession of real property as it stands pending an official decision on who owns the property. Cf. UTRUBIT. 3. The doctrine that personal property captured during wartime and still held by the captor when the war ends becomes the captor's legal property.

"The restoration of peace put an end . . . to all force, and then the general principle applied, that things acquired in war remain, as to title and possession, precisely as they stood when the peace took place. The uti possidetis is the basis of every treaty of peace, unless it be otherwise agreed. Peace gives a final and perfect title to captures without condemnation; and as it forbids all force, it destroys all hopes of recovery as much as if the vessel was carried infra presidia, and condemned." James Kent, 1 Commentaries on American Law *173 (George Comstock ed., 11th ed. 1866).

uti rogas (yoo-tI roh-gas or -gas). [Latin] Roman law. As you ask. • This phrase was inscribed on a ballot to indicate a vote in favor of a bill or candidate. — Abbr. u.r.

“...cannot be interfered with, even where they are injurious in their effects to the adjoining property. In such case the proprietor is only doing that which he has a right to do, uititur jure suo.” John Trayner, Trayner’s Latin Maxims 618-19 (4th ed. 1894).

uitlagare (at-lag-a-rec or at-la-gair-ee), vb. [Law Latin] Hist. To put (an offender) outside the protection of the law. Cf. inlagare; outlawry (2).

uitlagation (at-la-gay-shon), n. [Law Latin] Hist. The act of placing an offender outside the protection of the law; outlawry. — Also termed uitlagatio. Cf. inlagation; outlawry (2).

utlage (at-lahzh or -lij), n. [Law French] An outlaw.

utlagh (at-law), [Old English] Hist. A person outside the protection of the law; an outlaw.

utland (at-land) [Old English] Hist. The outer portion of a lord’s demesne, used to support the lord’s tenants. — Also termed delantal (di-lan-tal). Cf. inland (2).

utlesse. Hist. A felon’s escape from prison.

utmost care. See great care under care.

ut nihil illi desit (at ni-hil il-1 dee-sit). [Latin] Hist. That nothing may be wanting to him.

ut res magis valeat quam pereat (rays [or reez or rez] may-jis vay-lee-at kwam peer-ee-at). [Latin] “to give effect to the matter rather than having it fail” A maxim of document construction applied when alternative readings are possible, one of which (usu. the broader reading) would achieve the manifest purpose of the document and the other of which (usu. the narrower reading) would reduce the document’s purpose to futility or absurdity, whereby the interpreter chooses the construction that gives greater effect to the document’s primary purpose.

ut res valeat potius quam pereat (at rays [or reez or rez] vay-lee-at kwam peer-ee-at). [Latin] Hist. That the thing may avail rather than perish; that the transaction may be valid rather than invalid.

utrobi (at-ra-bi), n. [Latin] Roman law. An interdict for maintaining the status quo of possession of movable property pending a ruling to determine the property’s rightful owner. • In Roman law, this interdict gave possession of movable property to the party who had held the property longer during the previous year. Justinian applied the rule of uti possidetis to movables. Cf. UTI POSSIDETIS (2).

ut supra (at s[joo-pro also wul). [Latin] Hist. As above.

utter, adj. (15c) Complete; absolute; total <an utter denial>.

utter, vb. (15c) 1. To say, express, or publish <don’t utter another word until your attorney is present>. 2. To put or send (a document) into circulation; esp., to circulate (a forged note) as if genuine <she uttered a counterfeit $50 bill at the grocery store>. [Cases: Counterfeiting ⇐-9; False Pretenses ⇐-6; Forgery ⇐-16.] — utterance (for sense 1), uttering (for sense 2), n.

utter bar. See outer bar.

utter barrister. See outer barrister under barrister.

uttering. (18c) The crime of presenting a false or worthless instrument with the intent to harm or defraud. — Also termed uttering a forged instrument. See forgery. [Cases: Counterfeiting ⇐-9; False Pretenses ⇐-6; Forgery ⇐-16.]

ut voluntas testatoris sortiatur effectum (at vo-lan-tas tes-ta-tor-is sor-shee-ay-tor-i-fek-tum). [Latin] Hist. That the will of the testator may be effectuated.

uxore rapta et abducta (ak-sor-ee also ag-zor-e rap-ta et ab-dak-ta). See de UXORE RAPTA ET ABDUCTA.

uxorial (ak-sor-ag-zor-), adj. Of relating to, or characteristic of a wife <uxorial property>.

uxoricide (ak-sor-ag-stid or ag-zor-), n. (18c) 1. The murder of one’s wife. 2. A man who murders his wife. Cf. matricide. — uxoricidal, adj.
vacancy, n. 1. The state or fact of a lack of occupancy in an office, post, or piece of property. [Cases: Officers and Public Employees ≤ 55.] 2. The time during which an office, post, or piece of property is not occupied. 3. An unoccupied office, post, or piece of property; an empty place. Although the term sometimes refers to an office or post that is temporarily filled, the more usual reference is to an office or post that is unfilled even temporarily. An officer's misconduct does not create a vacancy even if a suspension occurs; a vacancy, properly speaking, does not occur until the officer is officially removed.

vacancy clause. Insurance. A special indorsement allowing premises to be unoccupied beyond the period stipulated in the original insurance policy, so that the insurance remains in effect during policy extensions, often for a reduced amount. [Cases: Insurance ≤ 2133, 3049(5)].

vacant, adj. (13c) 1. Empty; unoccupied (a vacant office). Courts have sometimes distinguished vacant from unoccupied, holding that vacant means completely empty while unoccupied means not routinely characterized by the presence of human beings. 2. Absolutely free, unclaimed, and unoccupied (vacant land). 3. (Of an estate) abandoned; having no heir or claimant.

vacantia (vak-kan-sh[ee]-ə). See bona vacantia under bona.

vacantia bona (vak-kan-sh[ee]-ə boh-να). See bona vacantia under bona.

vacant succession. See succession (2).

vacate, vb. (17c) 1. To nullify or cancel; make void; invalidate (the court vacated the judgment). Cf. overrule. 2. To surrender occupancy or possession; to move out or leave (the tenant vacated the premises).

vacatio (vak-yoo-a-sh[ee]-ō). Civil law. Exemption; immunity; privilege; dispensation.

vacation, n. (15c) 1. The act of vacating (vacation of the office) (vacation of the court's order). 2. The period between the end of one term of court and the beginning of the next; the space of time during which a court holds no sessions. [Cases: Courts ≤ 69.] The traditional vacations in England were Christmas vacation, beginning December 24 and ending January 6; Easter vacation, beginning Good Friday and ending Easter Tuesday; Whitsun vacation, beginning on the Saturday immediately before and ending the Tuesday immediately after Whitsunday (i.e., Pentecost, the seventh Sunday after Easter); and the long vacation, beginning August 13 and ending October 23. 3. Loosely, any time when a given court is not in session. [Cases: Courts ≤ 69.]

vacation barrister. See barrister.

vacatur (vak-ə-kay-tar), n. [Law Latin "it is vacated"] (17c) 1. The act of annulling or setting aside. 2. A rule or order by which a proceeding is vacated.

vacatura (vak-ə-ta-rə), n. [Latin] VACATION (4).

vacua possession (vak-yoo-a-pa-zes[ə]-ee-oh), [Latin "a vacant possession"] Roman & civil law. Free and unburdened possession, which a seller must convey to a purchaser.

vacuus (vak-yoo-əs), adj. [Latin] Hist. Empty; void; vacant; unoccupied.

vades. See vas.

vadiare duellum (vad-ee-ar-ee d[y]oo-əl-am), vb. [Law Latin "to wage the duellum"] Hist. To give pledges mutually for engaging in trial by combat.

vadiare legem (vad-ee-ar-ee lee-jam), vb. [Law Latin "to wage the law"] Hist. (Of a defendant in a debt action) to give security to make one's law on a day assigned — that is, the defendant would pledge, upon giving the security, to do two things on the appointed day in court: (1) take an oath in open court that the debt was not owed, and (2) bring 11 compurgators who would swear that they believed what the defendant said.

vadiatio duelli (vad-ee-ay-see-oh d[y]oo-əl-e-l), [Law Latin "wager of battle"] See TRIAL BY COMBAT.

vadiatio legis (vad-ee-ay-see-oh lee jis), [Law Latin "wager of law"] See WAGER OF LAW.

vadimonium (vad-ə-moh-nee-əm), n. Roman law. 1. A guarantee (originally backed by sureties) that a litigant would appear in court. 2. A solemn promise to this effect. — Also termed vadimony.

vadium mortuum (vay-dee-am mohr-choo-am). [Law Latin “dead pledge”]. A mortgage. • This term became archaic because an estate was granted as security by the borrower, who granted to the lender the estate in fee, on the condition that if the money were not repaid at the specified time, the pledged estate would continue as the lender’s — it would be gone from, or “dead” to, the borrower (mortgagor). — Also termed mortuum vadium. See Mortgage. [Cases: Mortgages ◄1.] vadium vivum (vay-dee-am vee-vum). [Law Latin “live pledge”]. A living pledge, which exists when an estate is granted by a borrower to a lender until a debt is paid out of the estate’s proceeds. • The pledge was so called because neither the money nor the lands were lost; it was a “living pledge” because the profits of the land were constantly paying off the debt. — Also termed vivum vadium; vie-gage.

2. Wages; salary.
vadium ponere (vay-dee-am poh-na-rec). vb. Hist. To take bail for the appearance of a person in court.
vagabond (vag-a-bond), n. Archaic. A homeless wanderer without any means or an honest livelihood; VAGRANT. • This term became archaic over the course of the 20th century, as vagrants won the right not to be forcibly removed from cities in such cases as Papachristou v. City of Jacksonville, 405 U.S. 156, 92 S.Ct. 839 (1972). In the 1980s and 1990s, vagabonds came to be known as street people and homeless people, or the homeless. — Also termed vagabundus (vag-a-ban-das).

“[All idle persons or vagabonds are ... divided into three classes, idle and disorderly persons, rogues and vagabonds, and incorrigible rogues; — all these are offenders against the good order, and blemishes in the government, of any kingdom. They are therefore all punished ... rogues and vagabonds with whipping and imprisonment not exceeding six months ....” 4 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 170 (1769).
vagabondage (vag-a-bon-di). 1. The condition of a vagabond. 2. Vagabonds as a class. — Also termed (in sense 1) vagabondism; (in senses 1 & 2) vagabondry.
vagabundus (vag-a-ban-das). [Law Latin] See VAGABOND.
vagrancy (vay-gran-ssee), n. (17c) 1. The state or condition of wandering from place to place without a home, job, or means of support. • Vagrancy is generally considered a course of conduct or a manner of living, rather than a single act. But under some statutes, a single act has been held sufficient to constitute vagrancy. One court held, for example, that the act of prowling about at night, under circumstances suggesting an intent to commit a crime, constitutes vagrancy. See Smith v. Drew, 26 P.2d 1040 (Wash. 1933). Many state laws prohibiting vagrancy have been declared unconstitutionally vague. — Also termed vagrantsim. [Cases: Vagrancy ◄1.] 2. An instance of such wandering. Cf. LOITERING.

“Vagrancy is a status resulting from misconduct and in the form of a socially harmful condition or mode of life which has been defined and made punishable by law. Until recently it was a misdemeanor, or group of misdemeanors, in most states.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 494 (3d ed. 1982).
vagrant, adj. (15c) 1. Of, relating to, or characteristic of a vagrant; inclined to vagrancy. 2. Nomadically homeless. [Cases: Vagrancy ◄1.] vagrant, n. (15c) 1. At common law, anyone belonging to the several classes of idle or disorderly persons, rogues, and vagabonds. 2. One who, not having a settled habitation, strolls from place to place; a homeless, idle wanderer. • The term often refers to one who spends time in idleness, lacking any property and without any visible means of support. Under some statutes, a vagrant is an offender against or menace to the public peace, usu. liable to become a public burden. Cf. VAGABOND. [Cases: Vagrancy ◄1.]
vague, adj. (16c) 1. Imprecise; not sharply outlined; indistinct; uncertain.
unconstitutionally vague. 1. (Of a penal legislative provision) so unclear and indefinite as not to give a person of ordinary intelligence the opportunity to know what is prohibited, restricted, or required. [Cases: Criminal Law ◄13.1(1); Statutes 47.] 2. (Of a statute) impermissibly delegating basic policy matters to administrators and judges so such a degree as to lead to arbitrary and discriminatory application. [Cases: Statutes 47.]

2. (Of language) describing a distribution around a central norm, as opposed to a neatly bounded class; broadly indefinite; not clearly or concretely expressed. 3. Characterized by haziness of thought.
vague-and-indefinite rejection. See REJECTION. vagueness. (18c) 1. Uncertain breadth of meaning (the phrase “within a reasonable time” is plagued by vagueness — what is reasonable? • Though common in writings generally, vagueness raises due-process concerns if legislation does not provide fair notice of what is required, restricted, or prohibited, because enforcement may become arbitrary. 2. Loosely, ambiguity. See AMBIGUITY.
vagueness doctrine. (1957) Constitutional law. The doctrine — based on the Due Process Clause — requiring that a criminal statute state explicitly and definitely what acts are prohibited or restricted, so as to provide fair warning and preclude arbitrary enforcement. — Also termed void-for-vagueness doctrine. See void for vagueness under VOID. Cf. OVERBREADTH DOCTRINE. [Cases: Constitutional Law ◄4506.]

“a person is said to be valens agere when, from age and position, he is able to protect his rights against the invasion of them by others: against such a person not protecting his rights prescription runs, while prescription does not

value of a marriage. Under ancient tenures, this was the marriage (valorem maritagii) to the guardian, that is, so much as a jury would assess, or any one would bona fide give to the guardian for such an alliance. 2 Alexander M. Burrell, A Law Dictionary and Glossary 572-73 (2d ed. 1867).

valuable, adj. Worth a good price; having financial or market value.

valuable consideration. See CONSIDERATION (1).

valuable improvement. See IMPROVEMENT.

valuable papers. Documents that, upon a person's death, are important in carrying out the decedent's wishes and in managing the estate's affairs. Examples include a will, title documents, stock certificates, powers of attorney, letters to be opened on one's death, and the like. Some statutes require that, to be effective, a holographic will devising reality must be found among the decedent's valuable papers.

valuable papers insurance. See INSURANCE.

valuation, n. (16c) 1. The process of determining the value of a thing or entity. 2. The estimated worth of a thing or entity. — value, value, vb.

assessed valuation. (1825) The value that a taxing authority gives to property and to which the tax rate is applied. [Cases: Taxation — 2512, 2520.]

special-use valuation. (1976) An executor's option of valuating real property in an estate, esp. farmland, based on its current use rather than for its highest potential value. [Cases: Internal Revenue — 4183; Taxation — 3350.]

valuation date. See ALTERNATE VALUATION DATE.

valuation list. Hist. An inventory of all the ratable hereditaments in a parish, each item in the inventory recording the name of the occupier, the owner, the property, the extent of the property, the gross estimated rental, and the ratable value. The list was traditionally prepared by the overseers of each parish.

value, n. (14c) 1. The significance, desirability, or utility of something.

social value. The significance, desirability, or utility of something to the general public.

2. The monetary worth or price of something; the amount of goods, services, or money that something commands in an exchange.

actual market value. See fair market value.

actual value. See fair market value.

agreed value. A property's value that is fixed by agreement of the parties, esp. the property's owner and the person or entity valuating the property. An example is a list of property values contained in an insurance policy. [Cases: Insurance — 2171.]

annual value. 1. The net yearly income derivable from a given piece of property. 2. One year's rental value of the marriage (valorem maritagii) to the guardian, that is, so much as a jury would assess, or any one would bona fide give to the guardian for such an alliance. 2 Alexander M. Burrell, A Law Dictionary and Glossary 572-73 (2d ed. 1867).

property, less the costs and expenses of maintaining the property.

assessed value. The value of an asset as determined by an appraiser for tax purposes. [Cases: Taxation ⊂ 2515.]

book value. See book value.

cash surrender value. Insurance. The amount of money payable when an insurance policy having cash value, such as a whole-life policy, is redeemed before maturity or death. — Abbr. CSV. — Also termed surrender value; cash value. [Cases: Insurance ⊂ 1957, 2037.]

clear annual value. The net annual value of property, after payment of taxes, interest on mortgages, and other charges.

clear market value. See fair market value.

clear value. Tax. For purposes of an inheritance tax, whatever remains of an estate after all claims against it have been paid. [Cases: Taxation ⊂ 3351.]

commuted value (ka-myoo-tid). 1. In the assessment of damages, the present value of a future interest in property. 2. The value of future payments when discounted to their present value.

enterprise value. A measure of a company’s market value, calculated by aggregating the value of the company’s market capitalization, debt, and preferred stock, and subtracting cash and cash equivalents.

exchange value. The amount of money for which property or services could be exchanged or procured if there is a ready market continually resorted to by traders — or, in the absence of such a market, the amount that could be obtained in the usual course of finding a purchaser or hirer of similar property or services. [Cases: Evidence ⊂ 113(20).]

fair market value. (18c) The price that a seller is willing to accept and a buyer is willing to pay on the open market and in an arm’s-length transaction; the point at which supply and demand intersect. — Abbr. FMV. — Also termed actual value; actual cash value; actual market value; cash value; clear market value; fair and reasonable value; fair cash market value; fair cash value; fair market price; fair value; full value; just value; market value; salable value; true value. [Cases: Taxation ⊂ 2515.]

"[A] forced sale price is not fair value though it may be used as evidence on the question of fair value. Likewise, the fair value of salable assets is not what they would sell for in the slow process of the debtor’s trade as if the debtor were continuing business unhampere [3]. The general idea of fair value is the amount of money the debtor could raise from its property in a short period of time, but not so short as to approximate a forced sale, if the debtor operated as a reasonably prudent and diligent businessman with his interests in mind, especially a proper concern for the payment of his debts." David G. Epstein et al., Bankruptcy § 6-18, at 307 (1993).

fair value. See fair market value.

full cash value. Market value for property tax purposes; estimated value derived by standard appraisal methods. — Also termed cash value. [Cases: Taxation ⊂ 2515.]

full value. See fair market value.

future value. The value, at some future time, of a present sum or a series of monetary payments, calculated at a specific interest rate.

going-concern value. The value of a commercial enterprise’s assets or of the enterprise itself as an active business with future earning power, as opposed to the liquidation value of the business or of its assets. • Going-concern value includes, for example, goodwill. — Also termed going value. Cf. goodwill.

highest proved value. In a trover action, the greatest value (as proved by the plaintiff) that the converted property reached from the time of the conversion until trial. • It is the highest amount that a plaintiff is entitled to recover. [Cases: Trover and Conversion ⊂ 44.]

insurable value. See insurable value.

intrinsic value. The inherent value of a thing, without any special features that might alter its market value.

• The intrinsic value of a silver coin, for example, is simply the value of the silver within it.

just value. See fair market value.

liquidation value. 1. The value of a business or of an asset when it is sold in liquidation, as opposed to being sold in the ordinary course of business. 2. See liquidation price under price.

market value. See fair market value.

most-suitable-use value. See optimal-use value.

net value. 1. Insurance. The excess of a policyholder payments over the yearly cost of insurance; the part of an insured’s annual premium that, according to actuarial tables, the insurer must set aside to meet the insurer’s obligations to the insured. — Also termed reserve. [Cases: Insurance ⊂ 2037.] 2. The fair market value of shares of stock. [Cases: Corporations ⊂ 182.4(5), 584.]

new value. 1. A value that is newly given or freshly calculated. 2. The value obtained by taking a security, such as collateral, for any debt other than a preexisting one.

optimal-use value. Tax. The highest and best use of a thing from an economic standpoint. • If a farm would be worth more as a shopping center than as a farm, the shopping-center value will control even if the transferee (that is, a donee or heir) continues to use the property as a farm. — Also termed most-suitable-use value. [Cases: Taxation ⊂ 2515.]

policy value. See policy value.

present value. See present value.

2. VENIRE FACIAS.
venire de novo. See venire facias de novo under Venire Facias.

venire facias (vean-ree-fay-shees) (or -neer-ee or -nir or -neer). (15c) A writ directing a sheriff to assemble a jury. - Often shortened to venire. - Also termed venire facias juratores (juur-\-a-tor-eez). [Cases: Jury C \- 67.]

venire facias ad respondendum (ad ree-spon-den-dam). A writ requiring a sheriff to summon a person against whom an indictment for a misdemeanor has been issued. • A warrant is now more commonly used.

venire facias de novo (dee or di noh-voh). (18c) A writ for summoning a jury panel anew because of some impropriety or irregularity in the original jury's return or verdict such that a judgment cannot be entered on it. • The result of a new venire is a new trial. In substance, the writ is a motion for a new trial, but when the party objects to the verdict because of a procedural error (and not an error on the merits), the form of motion was traditionally for a venire facias de novo. - Often shortened to venire de novo.

venire facias tot matronas (tot ma-troh-nas). A writ requiring a sheriff to summon a jury of matrons to execute a writ de ventre inspiciendo. See de Ventre inspiciendo.

veniremember (vean-ri-mem-bar or va-neer-ee- or va-neer-ee). (1966) A prospective juror; a member of a jury panel. - Also termed venireman; venireperson; talesman. See talesman.

venit et dicit (vee-nit et di-sit). [Latin] Comes and says. • The phrase appeared in old-style pleadings. Remnants of the phrase still occur in some American jurisdictions: Now comes the plaintiff, and respectfully says . . .

vente aléatoire (a-lay-a-twahr). A sale subject to an uncertain event.

vente à réméré (ah ray-may-ray). A conditional sale, in which the seller reserves the right to redeem or repurchase the property at the same price. • The term is used in Louisiana and in some parts of Canada.

vente aux enchères (oh-zawn-shair). An auction. See auction.

venter (ven-tar), n. [Latin "womb"] 1. The womb of a wife or mother. 2. One of two or more women who are sources of the same man's offspring.

"venter . . . is a term nowadays considered objectionable, as it refers to the woman merely as the possessor of a birth canal." Bryan A. Garner, A Dictionary of Modern Legal Usage 910 (2d ed. 1995).

venire inspiciendo. 1. See de Ventre inspiciendo; 2. See venire facias tot matronas under Venire Facias.

venture. (16c) An undertaking that involves risk; esp., a speculative commercial enterprise. Cf. joint venture.

venture capital. See capital.

venturer, n. (16c) 1. One who risks something, and hopes to gain more, in a business enterprise. 2. One who participates in an association of two or more parties in a business enterprise. See joint venture.

venue (ven-yoo). [Law French "coming"] (16c) Procedure. 1. The proper or a possible place for a lawsuit to proceed, usu. because the place has some connection either with the events that gave rise to the lawsuit or with the plaintiff or defendant. [Cases: Federal Courts C \- 71; Venue C \- 15.] 2. The territory, such as a country or other political subdivision, over which a trial court has jurisdiction. Cf. Jurisdiction (1), (2). 3. Loosely, the place where a conference or meeting is being held. 4. In a pleading, the statement establishing the place for trial. [Cases: Federal Courts C \- 94.] 5. In an affidavit, the designation of the place where it was made.

"Venue must be carefully distinguished from jurisdiction. Jurisdiction deals with the power of a court to hear and dispose of a given case; in the federal system, it involves questions of a constitutional dimension concerning the basic division of judicial power among the states and between state and federal courts. Venue is of a distinctly lower level of importance; it is simply a statutory device designed to facilitate and balance the objectives of optimum convenience for parties and witnesses and efficient allocation of judicial resources." Jack H. Friedenthal et al., Civil Procedure § 2.1, at 10 (2d ed. 1993).

"The distinction must be clearly understood between jurisdiction, which is the power to adjudicate, and venue, which relates to the place where judicial authority may be exercised and is intended for the convenience of the litigants. It is possible for jurisdiction to exist though venue in a particular district is improper, and it is possible for a suit to be brought in the appropriate venue though it must be dismissed for lack of jurisdiction. The most important difference between venue and jurisdiction is that a party may consent to be sued in a district that otherwise would be an improper venue, and it waives its objection to venue if it fails to assert it promptly. This is in striking contrast to subject-matter jurisdiction, which cannot be conferred by the parties, if it has not been granted by Congress, whether by consent, waiver, or estoppel." Charles Alan Wright, The Law of Federal Courts § 42, at 257 (5th ed. 1994).

venue, change of. See change of venue.

venue facts. (1936) Facts that need to be pleaded or established in a hearing to determine whether venue is proper in a given court. [Cases: Federal Courts C \- 96; Venue C \- 68.]

verderer (vor-dar-ar), n. [fr. French verdier “caretaker of green things”] Hist. A judicial officer who, being in charge of the king's forest, is sworn to preserve the vert (foliage) and venison, to keep the assizes, and to view, receive, and enroll attachments and presentments on matters involving trespass. • Also spelled verderor.

"In all the forests there were a varying number of officers (usually four) elected in the county court, and styled Verderers. Manwood says that they should be 'gentlemen of good account, ability, and living, and well learned in the laws of the forest.' Their chief duty was to attend the forest courts; they served gratuitously; and they were immediately responsible to the crown. Possibly they were regarded as a check upon the Warden, as the coroner was upon the sheriff." 1 William Holdsworth, A History of English Law 96 (7th ed. 1956).

verdict. (15c) 1. A jury's finding or decision on the factual issues of a case. [Cases: Criminal Law ○ 870–894; Federal Civil Procedure ○ 2191; Trial ○ 318.] 2. Loosely, in a nonjury trial, a judge's resolution of the issues of a case. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ○ 2251; Trial ○ 387.]

choice verdict. (1820) A now-illegal verdict, arrived at by hazard or lot. • Also termed gambling verdict; verdict by lot. [Cases: Criminal Law ○ 798(2), 866; Federal Civil Procedure ○ 1974.1; Trial ○ 315.]

compromise verdict. (1851) A verdict reached when jurors, to avoid a deadlock, concede some issues so that other issues will be resolved as they want. [Cases: Criminal Law ○ 866; Federal Civil Procedure ○ 1974.1; Trial ○ 315.]

defective verdict. (18c) A verdict on which a judgment cannot be based because of irregularities or legal inadequacies.

directed verdict. (1912) A ruling by a trial judge taking a case from the jury because the evidence will permit only one reasonable verdict. • Also termed instructed verdict. [Cases: Criminal Law ○ 753; Federal Civil Procedure ○ 2117; Trial ○ 167.]

excessive verdict. (1817) A verdict resulting from the jury's passion or prejudice and thereby shocks the court's conscience. [Cases: Damages ○ 127.9; Federal Civil Procedure ○ 2194.1, 2345; New Trial ○ 77(2).]

false verdict. Archaic. A verdict so contrary to the evidence and so unjust that the judge may set it aside.

gambling verdict. See chance verdict.

general verdict. (17c) A verdict by which the jury finds in favor of one party or the other, as opposed to resolving specific fact questions. Cf. special verdict. [Cases: Criminal Law ○ 881; Federal Civil Procedure ○ 2191; Trial ○ 318.]
general verdict subject to a special case. Archaic. A court’s verdict rendered without regard to the jury’s general verdict, given when a party does not want to put the legal question on the record but merely wants the court to decide on the basis of a written statement of all the facts in the case, prepared for the opinion of the court by counsel on either side, according to the principles of a special verdict, whereupon the court decides the special case submitted and gives judgment accordingly.

general verdict with interrogatories. (1878) A general verdict accompanied by answers to written interrogatories on one or more issues of fact that bear on the verdict. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure C::=>2211; Trial C::=>348.]

guilty verdict. (18c) A jury’s finding that a defendant is guilty of the offense charged.

instructed verdict. See directed verdict.

joint verdict. (1825) A verdict covering two or more parties to a lawsuit.

legally inconsistent verdict. (1975) A verdict in which the same element is found to exist and not to exist, as when a defendant is acquitted of one offense and convicted of another, even though the offenses arise from the same set of facts and an element of the second offense requires proof that the first offense has been committed. — Also termed legal inconsistency. Cf. repugnant verdict. [Cases: Criminal Law C::=>878(4); Federal Civil Procedure C::=>2237; Trial C::=>358.]

majority verdict. A verdict agreed to by all but one or two jury members. • In some jurisdictions, a civil verdict supported by 10 of 12 jurors is acceptable. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure C::=>2191; Trial C::=>321.5.]

open verdict. A verdict of a coroner’s jury finding that the subject “came to his death by means to the jury unknown” or “came to his death at the hands of a person or persons to the jury unknown.” • This verdict leaves open the question whether any crime was committed or the identity of the criminal.

partial verdict. (1829) A verdict by which a jury finds a criminal defendant not guilty of some charges and guilty of other charges.

perverse verdict. (1870) A jury verdict so contrary to the evidence that it justifies the granting of a new trial. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure C::=>2338; New Trial C::=>68.1.]

privy verdict (priv-ee). Hist. A verdict given after the judge has left or adjourned the court, and the jury, having agreed, obtains leave to give its verdict privately to the judge out of court so that the jurors can be delivered from their confinement. • Such a verdict was of no force unless afterwards affirmed in open court. This practice has been superseded by that of rendering a sealed verdict. See sealed verdict.

public verdict. (17c) A verdict delivered by the jury in open court.

quotient verdict. (1867) An improper damage verdict that a jury arrives at by totaling what each juror would award and dividing by the number of jurors. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure C::=>1974.1; Trial C::=>315.]

repugnant verdict. (1883) A verdict that contradicts itself in that the defendant is convicted and acquitted of different crimes having identical elements. • Sometimes the inconsistency occurs in a single verdict (repugnant verdict), and sometimes it occurs in two separate verdicts (repugnant verdicts). Both terms are used mainly in New York. Cf. legally inconsistent verdict. [Cases: Criminal Law C::=>878(4).]

responsive verdict. Civil law. A verdict that properly answers the indictment with specific findings prescribed by statute, the possible findings being guilty, not guilty, and guilty of a lesser included offense.

sealed verdict. (18c) A written verdict put into a sealed envelope when the jurors have agreed on their decision but court is not in session or the jury is continuing to deliberate other counts. • Upon delivering a sealed verdict, the jurors may separate. When court convenes again, this verdict is officially returned with the same effect as if the jury had returned it in open court before separating. [Cases: Trial C::=>324.]

special verdict. (17c) A verdict in which the jury makes findings only on factual issues submitted to them by the judge, who then decides the legal effect of the verdict. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 49. Cf. general verdict. [Cases: Criminal Law C::=>870; Federal Civil Procedure C::=>2231; Trial C::=>347.]

split verdict. (1886) 1. A verdict in which one party prevails on some claims, while the other party prevails on others. 2. Criminal law. A verdict finding a defendant guilty on one charge but not guilty on another. [Cases: Criminal Law C::=>878.] 3. Criminal law. A verdict of guilty for one defendant and of not guilty for a codefendant. [Cases: Criminal Law C::=>877.]

true verdict. (16c) A verdict that is reached voluntarily — even if one or more jurors freely compromise their views — and not as a result of an arbitrary rule or order, whether imposed by the jurors themselves, the court, or a court officer. [Cases: Trial C::=>314, 315.]

verdict by lot. See chance verdict.

verdict contrary to law. (18c) A verdict that the law does not authorize a jury to render because the conclusion drawn is not justified by the evidence. • Also termed wrong verdict. Cf. JURY NULLIFICATION. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure C::=>2338; New Trial C::=>66.]

verdict subject to opinion of court. (1820) A verdict that is subject to the court’s determination of a legal issue reserved to the court upon the trial, so that judgment is ultimately entered depending on the court’s ruling on a point of law. [Cases: Judgment C::=>199(4).]

wrong verdict. See verdict contrary to law.

veredicto. See NON OBSTANTE VEREDICTO.
veredictum (ver-a-dik-tam), n. Hist. A verdict; a declaration of the truth of a matter in issue, submitted to a jury for trial.

verge (varj), n. Hist. 1. The area within 12 miles of the place where the king held his court and within which the king's peace was enforced. ● This area was commonly referred to as being in the verge. The verge got its name from the staff (called a "verge") that the marshal bore. 2. The compass of the royal court, within which the lord steward and marshal of the king's household had special jurisdiction. ● Also termed (in senses 1 & 2) Court of Verge. 3. The neighborhood of Whitehall, the section of London in which British government offices have traditionally been located. 4. An uncertain quantity of land from 15 to 30 acres. 5. A stick or rod by which a person, after holding the stick and swearing fealty, is admitted as a tenant to a copyhold estate. — Also spelled verge. For tenant by the verge, see copyholder.

verges ad inopiam (var-jenz ad in-oh-pee-am), adj. [Latin "verging on poverty"] Civil law. Tending to become insolvent.

When a debtor is clearly vergens ad inopiam, a creditor may legally resort to certain measures, for the purpose of protecting his interests, which would not otherwise be competent to him. Thus if the debtor be bound under a bill, the creditor may, in consideration of his debtor's circumstances, obtain a precept of arrestment on the bill before it becomes due, on which he may arrest any funds due to his debtor. As this proceeding is only allowed, however, as a protective measure... he cannot... render the arrested funds available to himself until the bill falls due... The fact of the debtor's being vergens ad inopiam will be inferred from different circumstances in different cases, and the proof of that fact will also, necessarily, be varied. John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 627 (4th ed. 1894).

verger, n. One who carries a verge (a rod) as an emblem of office; esp., an attendant on a bishop or justice.

veridical (va-rid-a-bl). See VERACIOUS.

very heavy work. See work (1).

VESOA, abbr. VIDEO ELECTRONICS STANDARDS ASSOCIATION.

vessel. A ship, brig, sloop, or other craft used — or capable of being used — to navigate on water. ● To qualify as a vessel under the Jones Act, the structure's purpose... must to some reasonable degree be to transport passengers, cargo, or equipment from place to place across navigable waters. [Cases: Shipping 0=1.]

"Despite the important role a 'vessel' plays in maritime law, there is no settled definition of the term. Congress has defined a vessel as including 'every description of watercraft or other artificial contrivance used, or capable of being used, as a means of transportation on water.' 1 U.S.C.A. § 3. The Supreme Court has defined vessels as 'all navigable structures intended for transportation.' Cope v. Vallette Dry-Dock Co., 119 U.S. 625 (1887)." Frank L. Maraist, Admiralty in a Nutshell 14 (3d ed. 1996).

"The term vessel is defined in 1 U.S.C. § 3 as follows. 'The word "vessel" includes every description of watercraft or other artificial contrivance used, or capable of being used, as a means of transportation on water.' This definition has not been very influential in admiralty and maritime cases. Litigants contending for vessel status often invoke its remarkable breadth. Those opposing vessel status typically respond, 'But the present context indicates otherwise.' When courts mention the definition favorably, it usually seems to be a makeweight argument." David W. Robertson, Steven F. Friedell & Michael F. Sturley, Admiralty and Maritime Law in the United States 59 (2001).

foreign vessel. A vessel owned by residents of, or sailing under the flag of, a foreign nation. [Cases: Shipping 0=2.]

Jones Act vessel. A vessel whose crew members can qualify as seamen under the Jones Act; esp., a craft designed or used for transporting cargo or people on navigable waters, or that was being used for navigation at the time of a worker's injury. See JONES ACT. [Cases: Shipping 0=1.]

public vessel. A vessel owned and used by a nation or government for its public service, whether in its navy, its revenue service, or otherwise. See PUBLIC VESSELS ACT. [Cases: United States 0=125(11).]

seagoing vessel. A vessel that — considering its design, function, purpose, and capabilities — is normally expected both to carry passengers for hire and to engage in substantial operations beyond the boundary line (set by the Coast Guard) dividing inland waters from the high seas. Typically excluded from the definition are pleasure yachts, tugs and tow-boats, fishing boats, and other vessels that do not carry passengers for hire. [Cases: Shipping 0=204.]

seaworthy vessel. A vessel that can withstand the ordinary stress of the wind, waves, and other weather that seagoing vessels might ordinarily be expected to encounter. In some legal contexts, the question whether a vessel is seaworthy includes the question whether it is fit to carry an intended cargo properly. Under federal maritime law, a vessel's owner has the duty to provide a crew with a seaworthy vessel. See SEAWORTHY. [Cases: Seamen 0=9; Shipping 0=42, 121, 207.]

vest, vb. (15c) 1. To confer ownership (of property) upon a person. 2. To invest (a person) with the full title to property. 3. To give (a person) an immediate, fixed right of present or future enjoyment. 4. Hist. To put (a person) into possession of land by the ceremony of investiture. — vesting, n.

vested, adj. (18c) Having become a completed, consummated right for present or future enjoyment; not contingent; unconditional; absolute . [Cases: Estates in Property 0=1.]

"Unfortunately, the word 'vested' is used in two senses. Firstly, an interest may be vested in possession, when there is a right to present enjoyment, e.g. when I own and occupy a house. But an interest may be vested, even where it does not carry a right to immediate possession, if it does confer a fixed right of taking possession in the future." George Whitecross Paton, A Textbook of Jurisprudence 365 (G.W. Paton & David P. Derham eds., 4th ed. 1972).

'A future interest is vested if it meets two requirements: first, that there be no condition precedent to the interest's becoming a present estate other than the natural expiration of those estates that are prior to it in possession; and second, that it be theoretically possible to identify who would get the right to possession if the interest should become a present estate at any time." Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 66-67 (2d ed. 1984).

vested in interest. (18c) Consummated in a way that will result in future possession and use. Reversions, vested remainders, and any other future use or executory devise that does not depend on an uncertain period or event are all said to be vested in interest. [Cases: Wills 0=628–638.]

vested in possession. (18c) Consummated in a way that has resulted in present enjoyment.

offences which amount to an actual disturbance of the peace, or consist, in any way, of acts of violence: but it seems to be the better opinion, that they were never necessary where the offence consisted of a cheat, or non-feasance, or a mere consequential injury.”—Joseph Chitty, A Practical Treatise on the Criminal Law 240 (2d ed. 1828).

view, n. 1. The common-law right of prospect—that is, an outlook from the windows of one’s house. 2. An urban servitude that prohibits the obstruction of the outlook from a person’s house. [Cases: Adjoining Landowners 6–10; Easements 11, 19, 45.] 3. A jury’s trip to inspect a place or thing relevant to the case it is considering; the act or proceeding by which a tribunal goes to observe an object that cannot be produced in court because it is immovable or inconvenient to remove. • The appropriate procedures are typically regulated by state statute. At common law, and today in many civil cases, the trial judge’s presence is not required. The common practice has been for the jury to be escorted by “showers” who are commissioned for this purpose. Parties and counsel are generally permitted to attend, although this is a matter typically within the trial judge’s discretion. Cf. view of an inquest. [Cases: Criminal Law 651; Federal Civil Procedure 1968; Trial 28.] 4. In a real action, a defendant’s observation of the thing at issue to ascertain its identity and other circumstances surrounding it. Cf. demand of view.

villein (vil-an). Hist. A person entirely subject to a lord or attached to a manor, but free in relation to all others; a serf. • At the time of the Domesday Inquest (shortly after the Norman Conquest), about 40% of households were marked as belonging to villeins: they were the most numerous element in the English population. Cf. freeman.

villein in gross. A villein who was annexed to the person of the lord, and transferable by deed from one owner to another.

villein regardant (ri-gahr-dant). A villein annexed to the manor of land.

villeinage (vil-an-nij). Hist. 1. The holding of property through servitude to a feudal lord; a servile type of tenure in which a tenant was obliged to render base services to a lord. Cf. knight service; socage. 2. A villein’s status, condition, or service. — Also spelled villenage; villeinage; vilainage. — Also termed villein tenure.

“The typical tenant in villeinage does not know in the evening what he will have to do in the morning...” There is a large element of real uncertainty; the lord’s will counts for much; when they go to bed on Sunday night they do not know what Monday’s work will be; it may be threshing, ditching, carrying: they cannot tell. This seems the point that is seized by law and that general opinion of which law is the exponent: any considerable uncertainty as to the amount or kind of the agricultural services makes the tenure unfree. The tenure is unfree, not because the vis (vis). [Latin “power”] (17c) 1. Any force, violence, or disturbance relating to a person or property.

“Vis, as a legal term was understood to denote the organizing and arming of tumultuous bodies of men for the purpose of obstructing the constituted authorities in the performance of their duty, and thus interrupting the ordinary administration of the laws. No such offence was recognized by the Criminal Code until the last century of the republic, when violent riots by hired mobs became so frequent, that M. Plautius Silvanus, Tribune of the Plebs, B.C. 89, [secured the passing of] the lex Plautia de Vi, in terms of which, those convicted of such practices were banished.” William Ramsay, A Manual of Roman Antiquities 347 (Rodolfo Lanciani ed., 15th ed. 1894).

2. The force of law. • Thus vim habere (“to have force”) is to be legally valid. Pl. vires.

visitation credit. Family law. A child-support reduction that reflects the amount of time the child lives with the noncustodial parent. [Cases: Child Support C= 165.]

visitation order. (1944) Family law. 1. An order establishing the visiting times for a noncustodial parent with his or her child. [Cases: Child Custody C= 525.] 2. An order establishing the visiting times for a child and a person with a significant relationship to the child. — Such an order may allow for visitation between (1) a grandparent and a grandchild, (2) a child and another relative, (3) a child and a stepparent, or (4) occasionally, a child and the child's psychological parent. — Also termed access order.

visitation right. (1935) 1. _Family law._ A noncustodial parent's or grandparent's court-ordered privilege of spending time with a child or grandchild who is living with another person, usu. the custodial parent. • The noncustodial parent with visitation rights may sometimes be a parent from whose custody the child has been removed because of abuse or neglect. [Cases: Child Custody ↗175-231, 282.] 2. _Int'l law._ A belligerent nation's right to search a neutral vessel to find out whether it is carrying contraband or is otherwise engaged in nonneutral service. • If the searched vessel is doing either of these things, the searchers may seize the contraband and carry out an appropriate punishment. — Also termed (in both senses) right of visita-visitatorial (viz'-a-tor-ee-al), adj. Of or relating to on-site inspection or supervision. — Also termed visitorial.

"To eleemosynary corporations, a visitatorial power is attached as a necessary incident. . . . [P]rivate and particular corporations, founded and endowed by individuals for charitable purposes, are subject to the private government of those who are the efficient patrons and founder. If there be no visitor appointed by the founder, the law appoints the founder himself, and his heirs, to be the visitors. The visitatorial power arises from the property which the founder assigned to support the charity; and as he is the author of the charity, the laws give him and his heirs a visitatorial power: that is, an authority to inspect the actions and regulate the behavior of the members that partake of the charity. This power is judicial and supreme, but not legislative." 2 James Kent, _Commentaries on American Law_ *300-01_ (George Comstock ed., 11th ed. 1866).

vitium clergi ([vish-ee-om kler-ə-st]). [Latin] See clerical error under error.

vitium reale ([vish-ee-om ree-ay-lee]). [Latin "true error"] Hist. & Scots law. A defect in a title that renders the movable property nontransferable; specific, an inherent vice in the title of anyone who holds a stolen thing, even if acquired honestly, so that the true owner can reclaim it. Cf. labes reales quae rei inhaeret.

"A person who comes into possession of movable property without any title to retain custody thereof is obliged to restore it to the person truly entitled to the possession thereof. . . . [Property] so acquired is affected by an inherent vitium reale which prevents the thief or fraudulent person from conferring a good title on anyone, even a taker from him in good faith, who has given value and taken without notice of the thief's defective title; such a person must return the property to the true owner, or pay compensation therefor. . . . An exception to the rule of vitium reale exists in the cases of money, bank-notes and negotiable instruments . . . ." 2 David M. Walker, Principles of Scottish Private Law: Law of Obligations 505-06 (1988).

vitium scriptoris ([vish-ee-om skrip-to-ris]), n. [Latin "the mistake of a scribe"] Hist. A clerical error in writing.

voice exemplar. (1962) A distinctive pattern of curved lines and whorls made by a machine that measures human vocal sounds for the purpose of identifying an individual speaker. • Like fingerprints, voiceprints are thought to be unique to each person. [Cases: Criminal Law C≈339.6; Evidence C≈150.]

voiceprint. (1969) (Of an instrument) patently void upon an inspection of the contents. • Also termed voiceprint on its face.

void, adj. (14c) 1. Of no legal effect; null. • The distinction between void and voidable is often of great practical importance. Whenever technical accuracy is required, void can be properly applied only to those provisions that are of no effect whatsoever — those that are an absolute nullity. — void, avoid, vb. — voidness, n.

facially void. (1969) (Of an instrument) patently void of all legal effect, as from the first moment when a contract is entered into. • A contract is void ab initio if it is an absolute nullity.

void ab initio (ab i-nish-ee-oh). (17c) Null from the beginning, as from the first moment when a contract is entered into. • A contract is void ab initio if it seriously offends law or public policy, in contrast to a contract that is merely voidable at the election of one party to the contract. [Cases: Contracts C≈98, 136.]

void for vagueness. (1814) 1. (Of a deed or other instrument affecting property) having such an insufficient property description as to be unenforceable. [Cases: Deeds C≈37.] 2. (Of a penal statute) establishing a requirement or punishment without specifying what is required or what conduct is punishable, and therefore void because violative of due process. • Also termed void for indefiniteness. See VAGUENESS DOCTRINE. [Cases: Constitutional Law C≈4506; Criminal Law C≈13.1.]

• voidable, adj. (15c) Valid until annulled; esp., (of a contract) capable of being affirmed or rejected at the option of one of the parties. • This term describes a valid act that may be voided rather than an invalid act voiture (vwah-t[y]oor), n. Carriage; transportation by carriage.

volatile stock. See STOCK.

voidability. n.

Most of the disputed questions in the law of infancy turn upon the legal meaning of the word 'voidable' as applied to an infant's acts. The natural meaning of the word imports a valid act which may be avoided, rather than an invalid act which may be confirmed, and the weight of authority as well as reason points in the same direction. Certainly, so far as executed transfers of property are concerned the authority of the decisions clearly supports this view.

The promise of an infant surety is voidable as distinguished from void. The infant may expressly disaffirm or assert the defense of infancy when sued at any time before the expiration of a reasonable time after majority.'

volenti non fit injuria (voh-len-ti non fit in-joor-e-o). [Law Latin "to a willing person it is not a wrong," i.e., a person is not wronged by that to which he or she consents] (17c) The principle that a person who knowingly and voluntarily risks danger cannot recover for any resulting injury. • This is the type of affirmative defense that must be pleaded under Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(c). — Often shortened to volenti. See ASSUMPTION OF THE RISK. [Cases: Negligence C= 550; Torts C= 126.]

"[T]he maxim 'Volenti non fit injuria'... is certainly of respectable antiquity. The idea underlying it has been traced as far back as Aristotle, and it was also recognized in the works of the classical Roman jurists, and in the Canon Law. In English law, Bracton in his De Legibus Angliae (ca. A.D. 1250-1258) uses the maxim, though not with the technicality that attached to it later, and in a Year Book case of 1305 it appears worded exactly as it is now. So far as actual citation of the maxim goes, most of the modern cases use it in connexion with harm to the person rather than to property." P.H. Winfield. A Textbook of the Law of Tort § 13, at 24 (5th ed. 1950).

volition (va-lish-on or voh-), n. (17c) 1. The ability to make a choice or determine something. 2. The act of making a choice or determining something. 3. The choice or determination that someone makes. — volitional, adj.

vote, n. (15c) 1. The expression of one's preference or opinion in a meeting or election by ballot, show of hands, or other type of communication <the Republican candidate received more votes than the Democratic candidate>.
absentee vote. See absentee voting under VOTING.
bullet vote. A vote cast for fewer nominees than are being elected. • A bullet vote slightly enhances the ballot's effect on the outcome. — Also termed bullet ballot.
casting vote. A deciding vote cast by the chair of a deliberative assembly when the votes are tied. • The U.S. Constitution gives the Vice President the casting vote in the Senate. U.S. Const. art. 1, § 3. [Cases: United States ≥18.]
• One is, that to secure at all times the possibility of a definite resolution of the body, it is necessary that the vote

President should have only a casting vote. And to take the senator of any State from his seat as senator, to place him in that of President of the Senate, would be to exchange, in regard to the State from which he came, a constant for a contingent vote.” The Federalist No. 68 (Alexander Hamilton).

effective vote. A vote that counts toward a winning candidate, to the extent needed to win. • A vote that goes to a winning candidate is “effective” to the extent needed to win, and “excess” beyond that point. For example, if a candidate needs 100 votes and gets 150, then 50 votes are excess votes and each vote is two-thirds effective and one-third excess. Cf. excess vote; wasted vote.

excess vote. A vote that counts toward a winning candidate, beyond the extent needed to win. Cf. effective vote.

exhausted vote. A preferential vote on which all the ranked candidates have already been elected or eliminated. • Also termed exhausted ballot.

illegal vote. A vote that does not count because it was cast by someone not entitled to vote or for an ineligible choice, or in a form or manner that does not comply with the applicable rules. See spoiled ballot under ballot (2). [Cases: Elections C=227.]

legal vote. A vote cast in the proper form and manner for an eligible choice by someone entitled to vote.

paired vote. An abstention resulting from a pairing. See pair.

preferential vote. A vote that ranks the choices in order of preference. • A preferential vote may be transferable or weighted. • Also termed preferential ballot. Cf. single transferable vote; weighted vote. [Cases: Elections C=237.]

single transferable vote. A preferential vote that will migrate or “transfer” away from a candidate whom it will no longer help. • Under transferable voting, a candidate wins if his or her first-choice votes reach the number needed to win, or the “threshold.” If no candidate reaches the threshold, the least-preferred candidate is dropped and his or her votes transfer to the next-preferred candidate on each ballot. If a candidate reaches the threshold with an excess, that excess still transfers — after being discounted by the non-excess fraction needed to reach the threshold — among the surviving candidates. Each transfer preserves each vote as long as at least one candidate that the voter ranked survives. The redistribution continues until enough candidates reach the threshold or the number of surviving candidates equals the number of representatives still to be elected. See drop quota. • Also termed STV; transferable vote; choice voting. [Cases: Elections C=237.]

transferable vote. See single transferable vote.

unintelligible vote. An otherwise legal vote cast in a form from which the tellers cannot ascertain the voter’s intent. • On a secret ballot, no voter may properly claim an unintelligible vote for the purpose of explaining it since the vote may have been cast by another voter who cannot contradict the claimant without sacrificing his or her right to secrecy.

vote of no confidence. See no-confidence vote.

wasted vote. A vote that does not count toward any winning candidate. Cf. effective vote; excess vote.

weighted vote. A nontransferable preferential vote whose strength is allocated among the ranked preferences either by the voter or according to a series of fixed weights. [Cases: Elections C=237.]

2. The total number of votes cast in an election <the incumbent received 60% of the vote>. [Cases: Elections C=238.]

majority vote. See majority (2).

plurality vote. See plurality.

tie vote. An equally divided vote. • A tie vote is not a deadlock unless the assembly is obliged to act, for example when electing an officer to an office that will otherwise be vacant. Cf. deadlock. [Cases: Elections C=238.]

unanimous vote. A vote in which every voter concurs. See unanimous (2).

winner-take-all vote. An election in which the majority (or sometimes the plurality) elects all the representatives. Cf. unit rule; proportional representation; proportional voting under voting. [Cases: Elections C=237.]

4. The act of voting, usu. by a deliberative assembly <the Senate postponed the vote on the gun-control bill>. [Cases: States C=35.] — vote, vb.

counted vote. Parliamentary law. A vote taken in a way that individually counts each voter. • Examples of a counted vote are a show of hands, a standing vote, a roll-call vote, or a written ballot. See division (1).

division vote. See division (1).

lobby vote. A counted vote taken by each voter passing through a lobby between tellers. • Also termed teller vote.

rising vote. 1. See standing vote. 2. A vote of appreciation demonstrated by the members standing, sometimes silently but usu. with applause. • Also termed rising vote of thanks.

roll-call vote. A counted vote by roll call, in which the secretary calls each member’s name, in answer to which the member casts aloud his or her vote. • The U.S. Constitution provides that “the Yeas and Nays of the Members of either House on any question shall, at the Desire of one fifth of those Present, be entered on the Journal.” U.S. Const. art. I, § 5, cl. 3. • Also termed vote by yeas and nays; yeas and nays. See roll call under call (1). [Cases: United States C=18.]

serpentine vote. A standing vote in which the voters count off and sit down, with the count progressing up one row and down the next until each member on the side of the question being counted has voted.

standing vote. A counted vote taken by each voter standing up when his or her side of the question is counted. — Also termed rising vote; standing division.

teller vote. See lobby vote.

viva voce vote. See voice vote.

voice vote. A vote taken by the voters collectively answering aloud, usu. with "aye" or "nay," when their side of the question is called. — Also termed viva voce vote. [Cases: Elections C=>214.]

vote by show of hands. A vote taken by the voters raising their hands when their side of the question is counted. — Often shortened to show of hands.

vote by yeas and nays. See roll-call vote.

vote dilution. See dilution (3).

vote immediately. See close debate.

vote of no confidence. See no-confidence vote.

voter. (16c) 1. A person who engages in the act of voting. 2. A person who has the qualifications necessary for voting. — Also termed (in sense 2) legal voter; qualified voter. [Cases: Elections C=>59–87.]

registered voter. A person who is qualified to vote and whose name is recorded in the voting district where he or she resides. [Cases: Elections C=>95–119.]

voting. (16e) The casting of votes for the purpose of deciding an issue.

absentee voting. (1932) 1. Participation in an election by a qualified voter who is unable to appear at the polls on election day. 2. The practice of allowing voters to participate in this way. — Also termed (in sense 1) absentee ballot; absentee vote. See absentee ballot under ballot (2). Cf. early voting. [Cases: Elections C=>126(6), 216.1.]

choice voting. See single transferable vote under vote (1).

class voting. (1941) A method of shareholder voting in which different classes of shares vote separately on fundamental corporate changes that affect the rights and privileges of that class. — Also termed voting by class; voting by voting group. [Cases: Corporations C=>197.]

cumulative voting. (1884) A system in which each voter may cast more than one vote for the same candidate. • Cumulative voting helps a minority elect at least one representative. It is common in shareholder elections. [Cases: Corporations C=>200, 283(2).]

early voting. (1984) Voting before the day of an election, esp. during a period designated for that purpose. • Unlike with absentee voting, taking advantage of early voting does not require the voter to swear to the inability to come to the polling place on election day. Cf. absentee voting. [Cases: Elections C=>205.1.]

first-past-the-post voting. See plurality voting.

Hare–Ware voting. See instant-runoff voting.

instant-runoff voting. A system of preferential voting that mimics a runoff election by using each voter's ranked preferences instead of a second round of voting. See runoff election under election (3). — Also termed Hare–Ware voting; West Australian plan. Abbr. IRV. [Cases: Elections C=>237.]

limited voting. A system in which each voter must cast fewer votes than the number of representatives being elected.

low-total voting. A system of weighted preferential voting that adds up the ranked preferences — "1" for a first choice, "2" for a second choice, and so forth — so that the most-preferred candidate wins by having the lowest total. See preferential voting; weighted vote under vote (1). [Cases: Elections C=>237.]

majority voting. A system in which each voter may cast one vote per representative being elected, and a simple majority is required for election. [Cases: Corporations C=>283(2).]

noncumulative voting. (1956) A corporate voting system in which a shareholder is limited in board elections to voting no more than the number of shares that he or she owns for a single candidate. • The result is that a majority shareholder will elect the entire board of directors. — Also termed straight voting. [Cases: Corporations C=>283(2).]

plurality voting. Election by plurality. See plurality. — Also termed first-past-the-post voting.

preferential voting. A system in which each voter ranks the choices in order of preference. • A preferential vote may be transferable or weighted. — Also termed rank-order voting. See single transferable vote under vote (1); weighted vote under vote (1). [Cases: Elections C=>237.]

proportional voting. A system of transferable preferential voting in a multi-representative election. See preferential vote under vote (1); single transferable vote under vote (1). — Also termed proportional representation. [Cases: Elections C=>237.]

straight voting. See noncumulative voting.

two-round voting. A system in which the voting occurs in two rounds, with the first round determining the candidate's eligibility for the second round. • The second round may be a runoff between the top two candidates from the first round, an election by plurality among candidates who won their political parties' nominations in the first round, or an election by plurality among the candidates from the first round who reached a certain threshold. See runoff election under election (3). [Cases: Elections C=>237.]

voting by voting group. See class voting.

voting by yeas and nays. See roll-call vote under vote (4).
voting agreement. See pooling agreement.

wagonage (wag-o-nij). 1. Transportation by a wagon. 2. The fee for carriage by wagon. 3. A group of wagons.

waif, n. (14c) 1. An abandoned article whose owner is unknown, esp. something stolen and thrown away by the thief in flight, usu. through fear of apprehension. • At common law, if a waif, whether stolen or merely abandoned, was seized before the owner reclaimed it, the title vested in the Crown. The owner was thus punished for leaving the property or for failing to pursue the thief and attempting to recover the property. Today, however, the general rule is that a waif passes to the state in trust for the true owner, who may regain it by proving ownership.

"Waifs, bona waviata, are goods stolen, and waived or thrown away by the thief in flight, for fear of being apprehended. These are given to the king by the law, as a punishment upon the owner, for not himself pursuing the felon, and taking away his goods from him. And therefore if the party robbed do his diligence immediately to follow and apprehend the thief (which is called making fresh suit) or do convict him afterwards, or procure evidence to convict him, he shall have his goods again." 1 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 286–87 (1765).

2. Hist. A homeless person, esp. a woman or child; a social outcast. See WAIVERY.

"[In the thirteenth century] a woman, though she cannot be outlawed, can be 'waived,' declared a 'waif,' and 'waiver' seems to have all the effects of outlawry." 1 Frederick Pollock & Frederic William Maitland, History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 482 (2d ed. 1898).

wainage (way-nij), n. Hist. 1. The plow, team, and other implements used by a person (esp. a villein) to cultivate the soil; instruments of husbandry. 2. Cultivated land or the profits from it. — Also termed wainagium; wainagium (way-nay-gee-am); (in sense 2) gainage.

wait-and-see principle. (1899) A modification to the rule against perpetuities, under which a court may determine the validity of a contingent future interest based on whether it actually vests within the perpetuities period, rather than on whether it possibly could have vested outside the period. — Also termed second-look doctrine. [Cases: Perpetuities C 4.]

waiting clerk. Hist. An officer who waits in attendance on the court of chancery. • The office of the waiting clerk was abolished in 1842 by the Court of Chancery Act. St. 5 & 6 Vict. ch. 103.

waiting period. (1897) A period that must expire before some legal right or remedy can be enjoyed or enforced. • For example, many states have waiting periods for the issuance of marriage licenses or the purchase of handguns.

waive (wayv), n. Archaic. A woman who has by her conduct deprived herself of the protection of the law; a female outlaw. • The term "outlaw" usu. referred only to a male. See OUTLAW (1), (2).

waive, vb. (14c) 1. To abandon, renounce, or surrender (a claim, privilege, right, etc.); to give up (a right or claim) voluntarily. • Ordinarily, to waive a right one must do it knowingly — with knowledge of the relevant facts. [Cases: Estoppel C 52.10.] 2. To refrain from insisting on (a strict rule, formality, etc.); to forgo. 3. Hist. To declare someone a waif. See WAIF (2).

waiver (way-var), n. (17c) 1. The voluntary relinquishment or abandonment — express or implied — of a legal right or advantage; FORFEITURE (2) <waiver of claim, privilege, right, etc.> • The party alleged to have waived a right must have had both knowledge of the existing right and the intention of forgoing it. Cf. ESTOPPEL. [Cases: Estoppel C 52.10.]

"'Waiver' is often inexact as defined as 'the voluntary relinquishment of a known right.' When the waiver is reinforced by reliance, enforcement is often said to rest on 'estoppel.' ... Since the more common definition of estoppel is limited to reliance on a misrepresentation of an existing fact, reliance on a waiver or promise as to the future is sometimes said to create a 'promissory estoppel.' The common definition of waiver may lead to the incorrect inference that the promisor must know his legal rights and must intend the legal effect of the promise. But ... it is sufficient if he has reason to know the essential facts." Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 84 cmt. b (1979).

"'Waiver is often asserted as the justification for a decision when it is not appropriate to the circumstances." Robert E. Keeton & Alan I. Widiss, Insurance Law § 6.8, at 719 (1998).

"Although it has often been said that a waiver is 'the intentional relinquishment of a known right,' this is a misleading definition. What is involved is not the relinquishment of a right and the termination of the reciprocal duty but the excuse of the nonoccurrence of or a delay in the occurrence of a condition of a duty." E. Allan Farnsworth, Contracts § 8.5, at 561 (3d ed. 1999).

express waiver. (18c) A voluntary and intentional waiver. [Cases: Estoppel C 52.10(2).]

implied waiver. (18c) A waiver evidenced by a party's decisive, unequivocal conduct reasonably inferring the intent to waive. [Cases: Estoppel C 52.10(3).]

An implied waiver may arise where a person has pursued such a course of conduct as to evidence an intention to waive a right, or where his conduct is inconsistent with any other intention than to waive it. Waiver may be inferred from conduct or acts putting one off his guard and leading him to believe that a right has been waived. Mere silence, waiver of exemption. (1846) 1. A debtor's voluntary waiver by election of remedies. (1873) A defense arising from waiver of counsel. (1870) A criminal defendant's intentional relinquishment of the right to legal representation. • To be valid, a waiver of counsel must be made before a jury. [Cases: Jury 29(6).]

jury waiver. A form signed by a criminal defendant who relinquishes the right to have the trial conducted before a jury. [Cases: Jury 29(6).]

lien waiver. A written and signed waiver of a subcontractor's mechanic's lien rights, usu. submitted to enable the owner or general contractor to receive a draw on a construction loan. [Cases: Mechanics' Liens 208.]

waiver by election of remedies. (1873) A defense arising when a plaintiff has sought two inconsistent remedies and by a decisive act chooses one of them, thereby waiving the other. [Cases: Election of Remedies 1.]

waiver hearing. See transfer hearing under HEARING.

waiver of claims and defenses. (1975) 1. The intentional relinquishment by a maker, drawer, or other obligor under a contract of the right to assert against the assignee any claims or defenses the obligor has against the assignor. [Cases: Assignments 103; Bills and Notes 314; Secured Transactions 185.] 2. The contractual clause providing for such a waiver.

waiver of counsel. (1870) A criminal defendant's intentional relinquishment of the right to legal representation. • To be valid, a waiver of counsel must be made voluntarily, knowingly, and intelligently. [Cases: Criminal Law 1750-1757.]

waiver of defenses. Real estate. A document by which a mortgagor acknowledges that the mortgage is good and valid for the full amount of the mortgage note. • This document ensures that the mortgagor has no defenses to the mortgage. — Also termed estoppel certificate; no-setoff certificate; declaration of no defenses. [Cases: Mortgages 415.]

waiver of exemption. (1846) 1. A debtor's voluntary relinquishment of the right to an exemption from a creditor's levy or sale of any part of the debtor's personal property by judicial process. [Cases: Exemptions 89-99; Homestead 169-176.] 2. The contractual clause expressly providing for such a waiver. [Cases: Exemptions 92; Homestead 170.]

waiver of immunity. (1883) The act of giving up the right against self-incrimination and proceeding to testify. See IMMUNITY (3). [Cases: Witnesses 305.]

waiver of notice. See WAIVER (1).

waiver-of-premium clause. Insurance. A provision for a waiver of premium payments after the insured has been disabled for a specified length of time, such as six months. [Cases: Insurance 2035.]

waiver of protest. A relinquishment by a party to a negotiable instrument of the formality of protest in case of dishonor. See PROTEST (2). [Cases: Bills and Notes 422.]

waiver of service. A defendant's voluntary submission to the jurisdiction made by signing an acknowledgment of receipt of the petition and stating that he or she waives all further service. [Cases: Process 67.]

waiver of tort. (1815) The election to sue in quasi-contract to recover the defendant's unjust benefit, instead of suing in tort to recover damages. See implied-in-law contract under CONTRACT. [Cases: Action 28.]

"A person upon whom a tort has been committed and who brings an action for the benefits received by the tortfeasor is sometimes said to 'waive the tort.'" Restatement of Restitution § 525 (1937).

"Waiver of tort is a misnomer. A party only waives a tort in the sense that he elects to sue in quasi-contract to recover the defendant's unjust benefit rather than to sue in tort to recover damages; he has a choice of alternative remedies. But the tort is not extinguished. Indeed it is said that it is a sine qua non of both remedies that he should establish that a tort has been committed." Lord Goff of Chieveley & Gareth Jones, The Law of Restitution 605 (3d ed. 1986).

waivery. Hist. The act of putting a woman outside the protection of the law. • At common law, a woman could not be "outlawed" because she was not considered "in law" — that is, she could not undertake legal proceedings on her own. By Bracton's day, the effect of outlawing a woman was achieved by "waiving" her — the act being called waivery.

wakening. Scots law. The revival of an action in which no steps had been taken for at least a year and a day.

walk, vb. (1958) Slang. 1. To be acquitted <though charged with three thefts, Robinson walked each time>. 2. To escape any type of real punishment <despite the seriousness of the crime, Selvidge paid only $750: he walked>.

Walker Process claim. Patents. A counterclaim in an infringement suit, seeking a declaratory judgment that the patent is invalid because its owner defrauded the Patent Office. • The claim is based on antitrust law, alleging that the patentee wrongfully tried to monopolize a market. Walker Process Equip., Inc. v. Food Mach.
walkout. 1. Strike (1). 2. The act of leaving a work assignment, meeting, or other event as a show of protest. [Cases: Labor Relations &– 290.]

wall. An erection of stone, brick, or other material raised to varying heights, esp. inside or surrounding a building, for privacy, security, or enclosure.

ancient wall. A party wall that has stood for at least 20 years, thus giving each party an easement right to refuse to allow the other party to remove or substantially change the wall.

party wall. A wall that divides two adjoining, separately owned properties and that is shared by the two property owners as tenants in common. — Also termed common wall. [Cases: Party Walls &– 1-10.]

wallia (wahl-ee-a), n. [Law Latin] Hist. A wall (such as a mound or bank) erected in marshy areas for protection against the sea; a seawall.

Walsh Act. A statute, originally enacted in 1926, giving federal courts the power to subpoena and compel the return, testimony, and (if requested) production of documents or other items of U.S. citizens or residents who are abroad. • The subpoena is available for criminal proceedings, including grand-jury proceedings. 28 USCA § 1783. [Cases: Grand Jury &– 36.2; Witnesses &– 6.]

Walsh–Healey Act. A federal law, enacted in 1936, stipulating that government contractors must: (1) pay their workers no less than the prevailing minimum wage; (2) observe the eight-hour day and 40-hour workweek (with time-and-a-half for work exceeding those hours); (3) employ no convict labor and no females under 18 or males under 16 years of age; and (4) maintain sanitary working conditions. 41 USCA §§ 35 et seq. — Also termed Public Contracts Act; Walsh–Healey Public Contracts Act.

wampum (wom-pum), n. Hist. Indian money consisting of shells, beads, or animal pelts. • In 1637, it became the first medium of exchange for the New England colonies by order of the General Court of Massachusetts, because England had not provided the colonies with a standard of exchange. The Court ordered that “wampampege should passe at 6 a penny for any sum under 12d.” Wampum was used as the medium of exchange, esp. for small transactions, until 1652, when the General Court ordered the first metallic currency.

The last recorded exchange in wampum was in New York in 1701.

Wands test. Patents. A judicial test of “undue experimentation” for determining if a patent application’s specification teaches one skilled in the art how to make and work the claimed invention. In re Wands, 858 F.2d 731 (Fed. Cir. 1988). • The test takes account of eight factors: (1) how much experimentation would be needed, (2) how much guidance is given, (3) whether there is a working example, (4) the nature of the invention, (5) the state of the prior art, (6) the level of skill of those in the art, (7) how predictable or unpredictable the art is, and (8) the breadth of the claims. The factors (often called Wands factors) are illustrative rather than mandatory. See undue experimentation. [Cases: Patents &– 99.]

wanlass (wahn-las), Hist. An ancient form of tenure requiring the tenant to drive deer to a stand so that the lord can take a shot. — Also spelled wannlace.

wantage (wahn-ij), n. A deficiency of something; specif., a vessel’s deficiency of not being full, due to leakage.

wanted person. A person sought by a law-enforcement agency because the person has escaped from custody or an arrest warrant has been issued for the person’s arrest.

want of amicable demand. Louisiana law. A defensive pleading by a defendant who seeks to avoid, delay, or defeat the plaintiff’s petition. • A defendant may (1) refuse to participate in the suit (a declinatory exception), (2) seek to delay the litigation in the suit (a dilatory exception), or (3) seek to dismiss or defeat the suit (a peremptory exception). See declinatory exception, dilatory exception, peremptory exception under exception (1).

want of consideration. (18c) The lack of consideration for a contract. See consideration (1). Cf. failure of consideration. [Cases: Contracts &– 54(l), 84; Sales &– 21.]

want of jurisdiction. A court’s lack of power to act in a particular way or to give certain kinds of relief. • A court may have no power to act at all, may lack authority over a person or the subject matter of a lawsuit, or may have no power to act until the prerequisites for its jurisdiction have been satisfied. — Also termed lack of jurisdiction. See jurisdiction. [Cases: Courts &– 39, 40; Federal Courts &– 30.]

want of prosecution. (17c) Failure of a litigant to pursue the case <dismissal for want of prosecution>. — Also termed lack of prosecution; no progress. — Abbr. w.o.p. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure &– 1758; Pretrial Procedure &– 581.]

want of repair. (17c) A defective condition, such as a condition on a highway making it unsafe for ordinary travel. [Cases: Automobiles &– 252; Municipal Corporations &– 757(1)].

wanton (wahn-ton), adj. (14c) Unreasonably or maliciously risking harm while being utterly indifferent to the consequences. • In criminal law, wanton usu. connotes malice (in the criminal-law sense), while reckless does not. Cf. reckless; willful. [Cases: Criminal Law $\Rightarrow$ 23; Negligence $\Rightarrow$ 275.

"Wanton differs from reckless both as to the actual state of mind and as to the degree of culpability. One who is acting recklessly is fully aware of the unreasonable risk he is creating, but may be trying and hoping to avoid any harm. One acting wantonly may be creating no greater risk of harm, but he is not trying to avoid it and is indifferent to whether harm results or not. Wanton conduct has properly been characterized as 'vicious' and rates extreme in the degree of culpability. The two are not mutually exclusive. Wanton conduct is reckless plus, so to speak." Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 879-80 (3d ed. 1882).

wanton and reckless misconduct. See wanton misconduct under MISCONDUCT.

wanton misconduct. See MISCONDUCT.

wanton negligence. See gross negligence under NEGLIGENCE.

wantonness. n. (14c) Conduct indicating that the actor is aware of the risks but indifferent to the results. • Wantonness usu. suggests a greater degree of culpability than recklessness, and it often connotes malice in criminal-law contexts. Cf. recklessness. [Cases: Criminal Law $\Rightarrow$ 20, 23; Damages $\Rightarrow$ 87(1), 91.5(1); Negligence $\Rightarrow$ 275.] — wanton, adj.

wapentake (waop-take or warp-), n. [fr. Saxon waepen "weapons" + tac "touch"] Hist. 1. In some English counties, a division corresponding to the hundred or ward in other counties. See HUNDRED. 2. The court within such a division. 3. A bailiff who works in such a court.

war. 1. Hostile conflict by means of armed forces, carried on between nations, states, or rulers, or sometimes between parties within the same nation or state; a period of such conflict <the Gulf War>. • A state of war may also exist without armed conflict; for example, the treaty formally ending the World War II state of war between the United States and Japan was signed seven years after the fighting ended in 1945. [Cases: War and National Emergency $\Rightarrow$ 1.]

civil war. An internal armed conflict between people of the same nation; esp. (usu. cap.), the war from 1861 to 1865, resulting from the Confederate states' attempted secession from the Union.

economic warfare. 1. A hostile relationship between two or more countries in which at least one tries to damage the other’s economy for economic, political, or military ends. 2. The collective measures that might be taken to achieve such ends. [Cases: War and National Emergency \(\Rightarrow\) 12, 14.]

guerrilla warfare. Hostilities that are conducted by individuals or small groups who are usu. not part of an organized army and who fight by means of surprise attacks, ambushes, and sabotage. • Formerly, it was thought that the hostilities had to be conducted in enemy-occupied territory. Typically, guerrilla warfare is carried out only when geographical conditions are favorable and when the civilian population is at least partly cooperative.

land warfare. Hostilities conducted on the ground, as opposed to at sea or in the air.

war-mongering propaganda. See PROPAGANDA.

WARN (word), abbr. WORKER ADJUSTMENT AND RETRAINING NOTIFICATION ACT.

warning. (bef. 12c) The pointing out of a danger, esp. to one who would not otherwise be aware of it. • State and federal laws (such as 21 USCA § 825) require warning labels to be placed on potentially dangerous materials, such as drugs and equipment. [Cases: Products Liability \(\Rightarrow\) 133.]

adequate warning. (1885) A warning that reasonably alerts a product’s average user to a potential hazard, and the nature and extent of the danger. • Four elements have been articulated as comprising an adequate warning: (1) notice that a severe hazard exists, (2) a description of the hazard’s nature, (3) a description of the hazard’s possible consequences, and (4) instructions on how to avoid the hazard. In addition, the warning must be prominently displayed, and may have to illustrate the nature and severity of the hazard with pictographs. [Cases: Products Liability \(\Rightarrow\) 133.]

warrantisura (wor-na-st' i-yoor-a), n. [Law Latin] Hist. Furniture; provision.

warnoth (wor-noht), Hist. A defunct custom by which a tenant who failed to pay rent on a set day had to pay double the amount due, and on failing a second time had to pay triple (and so on).

war of aggression. See WAR.

war power. (18c) The constitutional authority of Congress to declare war and maintain armed forces (U.S. Const. art. I, § 8, cl. 11–14), and of the President to conduct war as commander-in-chief (U.S. Const. art. II, § 2, cl. 1). [Cases: War and National Emergency \(\Rightarrow\) 2.]

War Powers Clause. See WAR CLAUSE.

war-powers resolution. (1954) A resolution passed by Congress in 1973 (over the President’s veto) restricting the President’s authority to involve the United States in foreign hostilities without congressional approval, unless the United States or one of its territories is attacked. 50 USCA §§ 1541–1548. [Cases: War and National Emergency \(\Rightarrow\) 37.]

warrandice (wahr-on-dis or -dis), Scots l aw. An obligation to indemnify the grantee or buyer of land if another person establishes a superior title and takes possession.

personal warrandice. An obligation to indemnify that binds the grantor and the grantor’s heirs.

warrant, n. (14c) 1. A writ directing or authorizing someone to do an act, esp. one directing a law enforcer to make an arrest, a search, or a seizure.

administrative warrant. (1951) A warrant issued by a judge at the request of an administrative agency. • This type of warrant is sought to conduct an administrative search. See administrative search under SEARCH. — Also termed administrative search warrant. [Cases: Searches and Seizures \(\Rightarrow\) 129.]

anticipatory search warrant. See SEARCH WARRANT.

arrest warrant. (1894) A warrant, issued only on probable cause, directing a law-enforcement officer to arrest and bring a person to court. — Also termed warrant of arrest. [Cases: Criminal Law \(\Rightarrow\) 215–220.]

bench warrant. (17c) A writ issued directly by a judge to a law-enforcement officer, esp. for the arrest of a person who has been held in contempt, has been indicted, has disobeyed a subpoena, or has failed to appear for a hearing or trial. • A bench warrant is often issued for the arrest of a child-support obligor who is found in contempt for not having paid the support obligation. [Cases: Criminal Law \(\Rightarrow\) 263.]

border warrant. A writ of arrest or other warrant concerning debts owed, issued on one side of a national border for execution on the other side; esp., such a warrant issued on either side of the border between England and Scotland.

commitment warrant. See warrant of commitment.

death warrant. (18c) A warrant authorizing a warden or other prison official to carry out a death sentence. • A death warrant typically sets the time and place for a prisoner’s execution. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment \(\Rightarrow\) 1795.]

distress warrant. (18c) 1. A warrant authorizing a court officer to distrain property. See DISTRESS. 2. A writ allowing an officer to seize a tenant’s goods for failing to pay rent due to the landlord. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant \(\Rightarrow\) 270(6).]
escape warrant. (18c) 1. A warrant directing a peace officer to rearrest an escaped prisoner. 2. Hist. A warrant granted to retake a prisoner who had escaped from a royal prison after being committed there. It The warrant was obtained on affidavit from the judge of the court in which the action had been brought, and was directed to all sheriffs throughout England, commanding them to retake and commit the prisoner to the nearest jail.

extradition warrant. (1876) A warrant for the return of a fugitive from one jurisdiction to another. Cf. rendition warrant. [Cases: Extradition and Detainers C::> 12, 36.]

fugitive warrant. (1900) A warrant authorizing law-enforcement officers to take into custody a person who has fled from one state to another to avoid prosecution or punishment.

general warrant. (16c) 1. Hist. A warrant issued by the English Secretary of State for the arrest of the author, printer, or publisher of a seditious libel, without naming the persons to be arrested. General warrants were banned by Parliament in 1766. "A practice had obtained in the secretaries office ever since the restoration, grounded on some clauses in the acts for regulating the press, of issuing general warrants to take up (without naming any person in particular) the authors, printers and publishers of such obscene or seditious libels, as were particularly specified in the warrant. When those acts expired in 1694, the same practice was inadvertently continued, in every reign and under every administration, except the four last years of queen Anne, down to the year 1763; when such a warrant being issued to apprehend the authors, printers and publishers of a certain seditious libel, its validity was disputed; and the warrant was adjudged by the whole court of king’s bench to be void, in the case of Money v. Leach. Trin. 5 Geo. III. E.R. After which the issuing of such general warrants was declared illegal by a vote of the house of commons." 4 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 288 n.1 (1769).

2. A warrant giving a law-enforcement officer broad authority to search and seize unspecified places or persons; a search or arrest warrant that lacks a sufficiently particularized description of the person or thing to be seized or the place to be searched. General warrants are unconstitutional because they fail to meet the Fourth Amendment’s specificity requirements.

"But though there are precedents of general warrants to search all suspected places for stolen goods, these are not at common law legal, because it would be extremely dangerous to leave it to the discretion of a common officer to arrest what person, or search what houses he thinks fit. And in the great case of Money v. Leach, it was declared by Lord Mansfield, that a warrant to search for, and secure the person and papers of the author, printer and publisher of a libel, is not only illegal in itself, but is so improper on the face of it, that it will afford no justification to an officer acting under its sanction. And by two resolutions of the House of Commons such general warrants were declared to be invalid." 1 Joseph Chitty, A Practical Treatise on the Criminal Law 66 (2d ed. 1826).

John Doe warrant. (1900) A warrant for the arrest of a person whose name is unknown. A John Doe warrant may be issued, for example, for a person known by sight but not by name. This type of warrant is permitted in a few states, but not in federal practice.

justice’s warrant. See peace warrant.

landlord’s warrant. (1824) A type of distress warrant from a landlord to seize the tenant’s goods, to sell them at public sale, and to compel the tenant to pay rent or observe some other lease stipulation. See distraint; distress.

no-knock search warrant. See search warrant.

outstanding warrant. (1899) An unexecuted arrest warrant.

peace warrant. (18c) A warrant issued by a justice of the peace for the arrest of a specified person. — Also termed justice’s warrant.

possessor’s warrant. (1850) A process, similar to a search warrant, used under certain circumstances by a plaintiff to search for and recover property wrongfully taken or held by another.

preliminary warrant. (1859) A warrant to bring a person to court for a preliminary hearing on probable cause.

probation-violation warrant. See violation warrant.

rendition warrant. (1881) A warrant requesting the extradition of a fugitive from one jurisdiction to another. Cf. extradition warrant. [Cases: Extradition and Detainers C::> 16, 36.]

search warrant. See search warrant.

surreptitious-entry warrant. (1985) A warrant authorizing a law officer to enter and observe an ongoing criminal operation (such as an illegal drug lab).

tax warrant. (18c) An official process issued for collecting unpaid taxes and under which property may be seized and sold.

valid warrant. A warrant that is regular in form and is issued by a court, body, or official having both the authority to issue the warrant for the purpose stated and jurisdiction over the person named, all the requisite proceedings for its proper issuance having taken place. [Cases: Searches and Seizures C::> 101.]

violation warrant. A warrant issued for the arrest of a convict who has violated the terms of probation, parole, or supervised release. — Also termed (narrowly) probation-violation warrant. [Cases: Pardon and Parole C::> 81; Sentencing and Punishment C::> 2012.]

warrant of arrest. See arrest warrant.

warrant of commitment. A warrant committing a person to custody. — Also termed commitment warrant.

warrant upon indictment or information. (1903) An arrest warrant issued at the request of the prosecutor for a defendant named in an indictment or information. Fed. R. Crim. P. 9.
warrant

2. A document conferring authority, esp. to pay or receive money.

deposit warrant. A warehouse receipt used as security for a loan.

interest warrant. 1. An order by a corporation directing a bank to pay the interest due on a note, bond, or other debt to a corporate creditor. 2. A document by which a creditor, usu. a company, asks an insurer to pay all the interest due on the insurer's notes, bonds, or other debts held by the creditor.

municipal warrant. An order to draw money from a municipality's treasury for the payment of the municipality's expenses or debts. [Cases: Municipal Corporations ☞985.]

tax-anticipation warrant. A warrant that is issued to raise public money and that is payable out of tax receipts when collected.

treasury warrant. An order in the form of a check on which government disbursements are paid. [Cases: United States ☞987.]

3. An order by which a drawer authorizes someone to pay a particular sum of money to another. [Cases: Bills and Notes ☞111.]

county warrant. A warrant drawn by a county official, directing the county treasurer to pay a sum of money out of county funds to bearer, to a named individual, or to the named individual's order. [Cases: Counties ☞163.]

4. Securities. An instrument granting the holder a long-term (usu. a five- to ten-year) option to buy shares at a fixed price. • It is commonly attached to preferred stocks or bonds. — Also termed stock warrant; subscription warrant. [Cases: Corporations ☞72.]

warrant, vb. (14) 1. To guarantee the security of (realty or personality, or a person) <the store warranted the safety of the customer's jewelry>. 2. To give warranty of (title); to give warranty of title to (a person) <the seller warrants the property's title to the buyer>. [Cases: Covenants ☞45, 67.]

3. To promise or guarantee <warrant payment>.

"Even today lawyers use the verb 'to warrant' meaning to promise without necessarily indicating that the promise is a warranty." P. S. Atiyah, An introduction to the Law of Contract 145 n.1 (3d ed. 1981).

4. To justify <the conduct warrants a presumption of negligence>. 5. To authorize <the manager warranted the search of the premises>.

warrant arrest. See lawful arrest under arrest.

Warrant Clause. (1962) The clause of the Fourth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution requiring that warrants be issued only on probable cause. [Cases: Arrest ☞63.1; Searches and Seizures ☞23, 24.]

warrant creditor. See creditor.

warranted arrest. See arrest.

warranted search. See search.

warrantee (wor-an-tee or wahr-). A person to whom a warranty is given; esp., a person who receives a written warranty. • The term also sometimes applies to the beneficiary of an implied warranty.

warrantia chartae. See de warrantia chartae.

warrantia custodiae (wo-ran-shee-a-koh-stoh-dee-ee), n. [Law Latin] Hist. A writ for a purchaser of land held in knight's service against the seller (and heirs), who had warranted that the land was free of wardship when a wardship was later claimed.

warrantia diei. See de warrantia diei.

warrantizare (wor-an-to-zair-ee), vb. [Law Latin] Hist. To warrant by covenant (in a deed of conveyance) to defend the grantee's title and possession. — Also spelled warrantizare.

warrantless arrest. See arrest.

warrantless search. See search.

warrant of arrest. See arrest warrant under warrant (1).

warrant of attorney. 1. POWER OF ATTORNEY (1). 2. Archaic. Written authority given by a client to a lawyer to appear in court and to confess judgment in favor of a specified party. • It usu. instructed the attorney not to bring any action, seek a writ of error, or file a bill in equity that might delay the judgment. The warrant was typically given as security for an obligation on which judgment was authorized. Cf. CONFESSION OF JUDGMENT; COGNOVIT. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ☞2396; Judgment ☞43.]

'A warrant of attorney was not required to be under seal, though it generally was so. In order to guard against any imposition in procuring debtors to execute warrants of attorney or cognovits in ignorance of the effect of such instruments, it is provided that a warrant of attorney to confess judgment in any personal action, or cognovit actionem, given by any person, shall not be of any force, unless there is present some attorney of one of the superior courts on behalf of such person, expressly named by him and attending at his request, to inform him of the nature and effect of such warrant or cognovit, before the same is executed ..."' Joshua Williams, Principles of the Law of Personal Property 125 (11th ed. 1881).

warrant of commitment. See warrant (1).

warrant of confession. See confession of judgment.

warrantor (wor-an-tor or -tar or wahr-). (15c) A person who gives a written warranty or becomes obligated under an implied warranty. See 15 USCA § 2301(5).

warrant recall, n. A procedure for removing from government computers information about canceled warrants in order to avoid repeated or mistaken arrests.

warrant to sue and defend. Hist. 1. Written authority given by a client to a lawyer to authorize commencement or defense of a lawsuit. 2. A special warrant from the Crown authorizing a party to appoint an attorney to sue or defend on the party's behalf.
warrant upon indictment or information. See WARRANT (1).

warranty (wor-ante or wahr-), n. (14c) 1. Property. A covenant by which the grantor in a deed promises to secure to the grantee the estate conveyed in the deed, and pledges to compensate the grantee if the grantee is evicted by someone having better title. • The covenant is binding on the grantor's heirs. Historically, a warrantor was expected to turn over land. But cash compensation could be substituted. See COVENANT (4). Cf. quitclaim deed under DEED. [Cases: Covenants C:2-45, 67.]

collateral warranty. (16c) A warranty that is made by a stranger to the title, and that consequently runs only to the covenantee and not with the land. [Cases: Covenants C:2-45, 67.]

general warranty. (17c) A warranty against the claims of all persons. [Cases: Covenants C:2-47, 67.]

lineal warranty. Hist. A warranty existing when an heir derives title to land from the warrantor; a warranty from the same ancestor as the one from whom the land derived.

special warranty. (17c) A warranty against any person's claim made by, through, or under the grantor or the grantor's heirs. [Cases: Covenants C:2-47, 67.]

2. Contracts. An express or implied promise that something in furtherance of the contract is guaranteed by one of the contracting parties; esp., a seller's promise that the thing being sold is as represented or promised. • Although a court may treat a misrepresentation as an implied warranty, in general a warranty differs from a representation in four principal ways: (1) a warranty is conclusively presumed to be material, while the burden is on the party claiming breach to show that a representation is material; (2) a warranty must be strictly complied with, while substantial truth is the only requirement for a representation; (3) a warranty is an essential part of a contract, while a representation is usu. only a collateral inducement; and (4) an express warranty is usu. written on the face of the contract, while a representation may be written or oral. Cf. CONDITION (2), (3); GUARANTEE (1). [Cases: Contracts C:2-205.5; Sales C:2-246-288.5.]

"Two points must be borne in mind. In the first place, the words 'condition' and 'warranty' are not invariably kept as distinct as accuracy of definition demands; and in insurance law especially 'warranty' is very commonly used in the sense ascribed to 'condition'... In the second place, the injured party, if he chooses to waive his right to repelude the contract on breach of a condition, may still bring an action for such damages as he has sustained." William R. Anson, Principles of the Law of Contract 223 (Arthur L. Corbin ed., 3d Am. ed. 1919).

"The terms 'warranty' and 'condition' are generally used interchangeably, for all practical purposes, and they refer to representations or promises by the insureds, incorporated into the contract itself, on the truthfulness or fulfillment of which it is agreed that the rights of the insured shall depend. The primary differences between a mere representation and a warranty or condition are (1) while the insurer has the burden of proving the materiality of a misrepresentation before it will be grounds for avoidance, the materiality of a warranty or condition is conclusively presumed; and (2) while a representation will not be grounds for avoidance as long as it is substantially true, a warranty or condition must be strictly complied with in order to preclude avoidance. As with the majority view in representations, good or bad faith on the part of the insured is irrelevant." John F. Dobyn, Insurance Law in a Nutshell 201 (3d ed. 1996).

as-is warranty. (1976) A warranty that goods are sold with all existing faults. See as is. [Cases: Sales C:2-267.]

construction warranty. (1968) A warranty from the seller or building contractor of a new home that the home is free of structural, electrical, plumbing, and other defects and is fit for its intended purpose. [Cases: Contracts C:2-205.35(2).]

deceptive warranty. (1975) A warranty containing false or fraudulent representations or promises. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation C:2-204.]

express warranty. (17c) A warranty created by the overt words or actions of the seller. • Under the UCC, an express warranty is created by any of the following: (1) an affirmation of fact or promise made by the seller to the buyer relating to the goods that becomes the basis of the bargain; (2) a description of the goods that becomes part of the basis of the bargain; or (3) a sample or model made part of the basis of the bargain. UCC § 2-313. [Cases: Contracts C:2-205.10; Sales C:2-259.]

"An express warranty arises from the contract itself, from the 'dickered' aspects of the individual bargain. Any affirmation or promise relating to the goods, any description of the goods, and any sample of the goods becomes an express warranty if it is 'part of the basis of the bargain.'" 1 Julian B. McDonnell & Elizabeth J. Coleman, Commercial and Consumer Warranties ¶ 1.02[1], at 1-7 (1991).

extended warranty. (1936) An additional warranty often sold with the purchase of consumer goods (such as appliances and motor vehicles) to cover repair costs not otherwise covered by a manufacturer's standard warranty, by extending either the standard-warranty coverage period or the range of defects covered. — Also termed extended service warranty; extended service contract. [Cases: Sales C:2-279.]

full warranty. A warranty that fully covers labor and materials for repairs. • Under federal law, the warrantor must remedy the consumer product within a reasonable time and without charge after notice of a defect or malfunction. 15 USCA § 2304. See Magnuson-Moss Warranty Act. Cf. limited warranty. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation C:2-204.]

implied warranty. (18c) An obligation imposed by the law when there has been no representation or promise; esp., a warranty arising by operation of law because of the circumstances of a sale, rather than by the seller's express promise. [Cases: Contracts C:2-205.15; Sales C:2-262.5.]

implied warranty of fitness for a particular purpose. (1923) A warranty — implied by law if the seller has reason to know of the buyer's special purposes for the item — that the item is suitable for those purposes. — Sometimes shortened to warranty of fitness. [Cases: Contracts $\rightarrow$ 205.15(3); Sales $\rightarrow$ 273(1).]

"Those unfamiliar with the differences between the warranty of merchantability (fitness for the ordinary purposes for which such goods are used) and the warranty of fitness for a particular purpose often confuse the two: one can find many opinions in which the judges used the terms ‘merchantability’ and ‘fitness for a particular purpose’ interchangeably. Such confusion under the Code is inexcusable." 1 James J. White & Robert S. Summers, Uniform Commercial Code $\S$ 9-10, at 527 (4th ed. 1995).

implied warranty of habitability. (1900) In a residential lease, a warranty from the landlord to the tenant that the leased property is fit to live in and that it will remain so during the term of the lease. — Also termed covenant of habitability. • This warranty usu. applies to residential property, but a few courts, esp. in Utah, have applied it to commercial property as well. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant $\rightarrow$ 125(1).]

implied warranty of merchantability. (1896) A merchant seller’s warranty — implied by law — that the thing sold is fit for its ordinary purposes. • Under the UCC, an implied warranty of merchantability arises whenever a merchant sells goods unless the agreement expressly provides otherwise. UCC 2-314. — Sometimes shortened to warranty of merchantability. [Cases: Contracts $\rightarrow$ 205.15(3); Sales $\rightarrow$ 272.]

"The implied warranty of merchantability attaches when the seller is a merchant with respect to the goods involved in the exchange. Accordingly, the product must meet certain standards; it must pass without objection in the trade under the contract description and it must be fit for the ordinary purposes for which such goods are used. The concepts of marketability, operability, and repairability have emerged as varying criteria for merchantable goods." 1 Julian B. McDonnell & Elizabeth J. Coleman, Commercial and Consumer Warranties $\S$ 1.02(1), at 1-7 (1991).

limited warranty. (1871) A warranty that does not fully cover labor and materials for repairs. • Under federal law, a limited warranty must be clearly labeled as such on the face of the warranty. See Magnussen-Moss Warranty Act. Cf. full warranty. [Cases: Sales $\rightarrow$ 279.]

personal warranty. (18c) A warranty arising from an obligation to pay all or part of the debt of another.

presentment warranty. (1965) An implied promise concerning the title and credibility of an instrument, made to a payor or acceptor upon presentment of the instrument for payment or acceptance. UCC §§ 3-417, 3-418. [Cases: Banks and Banking $\rightarrow$ 149, 174; Bills and Notes $\rightarrow$ 296, 326.]

transfer warranty. (1964) 1. An implied promise concerning the title and credibility of an instrument, made by a transferee to a transferee and, if the transfer is by endorsement, to remote transferees. UCC §§ 3-417, 4-207. [Cases: Banks and Banking $\rightarrow$ 149, 174; Bills and Notes $\rightarrow$ 296, 326.] 2. A warranty made by a transferee of a document of title upon a transfer of the document for value to the immediate transferee. UCC § 7-507. [Cases: Carriers $\rightarrow$ 58.]

warranty ab initio (ab i-nish-ee-oh). (1206) An independent subsidiary promise whose breach does not discharge the contract, but gives to the injured party a right of action for the damage sustained as a result of the breach. • Ab initio means that the warranty existed from the contract’s inception. Cf. warranty ex post facto. [Cases: Contracts $\rightarrow$ 318; Sales $\rightarrow$ 282.]

warranty against infringement. A merchant’s warranty that the goods being sold or licensed do not violate any patent, copyright, trademark, or other intellectual-property claim. • The warranty does not arise if the buyer provides the seller with the specifications for the goods purchased. Under § 2-312(3) of the Uniform Commercial Code, the warranty against infringement is a part of the warranty of title unless it is explicitly disclaimed.

warranty ex post facto (eks pohst fak-toh). (1961) A broken condition for which the injured party could void the contract, but decides instead to continue the contract, with a right of action for the broken condition (which amounts to a breached warranty). • The warranty is ex post facto because it was not originally part of the contract. It arises only after the injured party elects to continue the contract, thereby reducing the broken condition to a breached warranty. See condition (2). Cf. warranty ab initio. [Cases: Contracts $\rightarrow$ 318; Sales $\rightarrow$ 282.]

warranty of assignment. (18c) An assignor’s implied warranty that he or she (1) has the rights assigned, (2) will do nothing to interfere with those rights, and (3) knows of nothing that impairs the value of the assignment. [Cases: Assignments $\rightarrow$ 97.]

warranty of authorship. Copyright. An author’s contractual warranty that the work is an original work by that author. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property $\rightarrow$ 49.]

warranty of fitness. See implied warranty of fitness for a particular purpose.

warranty of merchantability. See implied warranty of merchantability.

warranty of title. (18c) A warranty that the seller or assignor of property has title to that property, that the transfer is rightful, and that there are no liens or other encumbrances beyond those that the buyer or assignee is aware of at the time of contracting. • This warranty arises automatically whenever anyone sells goods. — Also termed warranty of actual title. [Cases: Covenants $\rightarrow$ 38-48, 62-67; Sales $\rightarrow$ 263.]

written warranty. (1807) A warranty made in writing; specif., any written affirmation or promise by a supplier of a consumer product to a buyer (for purposes other than resale), forming the basis of the bargain and providing that the material or workmanship is free of defects or will be repaired or replaced free of charge if the product fails to meet the required specifications. 15 USCA § 2301. [Cases: Sales $\rightarrow$ 260.]
Y2K warranty. See Y2K WARRANTY.

3. Insurance. A pledge or stipulation by the insured that the facts relating to the person insured, the thing insured, or the risk insured are as stated. [Cases: Insurance \(\supseteq 2967, 3036\).]

affirmative warranty. A warranty — express or implied — that facts are as stated at the beginning of the policy period. • An affirmative warranty is usu. a condition precedent to the policy taking effect. [Cases: Insurance \(\supseteq 2967\).]

executory warranty. A warranty that arises when an insured undertakes to perform some executory stipulation, such as a promise that certain acts will be done or that certain facts will continue to exist. [Cases: Insurance \(\supseteq 3036\).]

promissory warranty. A warranty that facts will continue to be as stated throughout the policy period, such that a failure of the warranty provides the insurer with a defense to a claim under the policy. — Also termed continuing warranty. [Cases: Insurance \(\supseteq 3036\).]

warranty clause. 1. A contractual clause containing a warranty. 2. Oil & gas. A provision in an oil-and-gas lease by which the lessor guarantees that title is without defect and agrees to defend it. • If the warranty is breached, the lessor may be held liable to the lessee to the extent that the lessor has received payments under the lease. Presence of a warranty in an oil-and-gas lease may also cause after-acquired interests to pass from the lessor to the lessee by application of estoppel by deed. [Cases: Estoppel \(\supseteq 23\); Mines and Minerals \(\supseteq 73.1(5)\).]

warranty deed. See Deed.

warren (wor-an or wahr-on). 1. A place for the preservation of certain wildlife (such as pheasants, partridges, or rabbits). 2. A privilege to keep wildlife or game in a warren. 3. The area to which the privilege extends.

free warren. A warren privilege giving the grantee the sole right to kill the wildlife to the extent of the grantee's warren area. — Also termed liberra warren.

'Free warren is a ... franchise, erected for preservation or custody ... of beasts and fowls of warren which being ferae naturae, every one had a right to kill as he could; but upon the introduction of the forest laws ... these animals being looked upon as royal game and the sole property of our savage monarchs, this franchise of free warren was invented to protect them; by giving the grantee a sole and exclusive power of killing such game ... on condition of his preventing other persons. A man therefore that has the franchise of warren is in reality no more than a royal gamekeeper; but no man, not even a lord of a manor, could by common law justify sporting on another's soil, or even on his own, unless he had the liberty of free warren.' 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 38-39 (1766).

war-risk insurance. See Insurance.

Warsaw Convention. Int'l law. A treaty (to which the United States is a party) negotiated in Warsaw, Poland, in 1929, consisting of uniform rules governing claims made for personal injuries arising out of international air travel. Cf. MONTREAL AGREEMENT. [Cases: Carriers \(\supseteq 307\); Treaties \(\supseteq 8\).]

'Under the [Warsaw] Convention ... air carriers are absolutely liable up to a preset monetary ceiling for any accident in which a passenger suffers bodily injury or death, as long as the accident took place on board the aircraft or in the process of any of the operations of embarking or disembarking. The Convention limits the liability of the carrier for each passenger to the sum of $125,000 francs, unless the carrier and passenger by special contract agree to a higher limit of liability, or unless it can be established that the carrier has been guilty of willful misconduct. The Convention contains a two-year time limitation for bringing suit, and also absolves the carrier from liability upon a showing of due care on its part.' 8A Am. Jur. 2d Aviation § 149, at 160-61 (1997).

warship. Int'l law. A ship commissioned by a nation's military, operating with a military command and crew and displaying the nation's flag or other external marks indicating its country of origin. • Under international maritime laws, warships are not subject to many of the safety and environmental regulations that apply to shipping vessels and passenger ships.

wart. See wardpenny.

warwit. See wardwit.

war zone. Int'l law. A designated area, on land or at sea, within which the rights of neutral countries are not respected by belligerent countries. [Cases: War and National Emergency \(\supseteq 32\).]

wash, n. 1. A situation in which two effects offset each other. • For example, if an event produces gross income and also a deduction in the same amount so that taxable income is unchanged, the event creates a wash. 2. The shallow part of a river or the arm of a sea; the sand, rocks, and gravel washed down by a mountain stream and deposited on level land near the mouth of a canyon.

wash sale. See Sale.

wash transaction. See wash sale under Sale.

devastation; vastum. [Cases: Waste \(\supseteq 1\).]

'The old action of waste was a mixed action, being founded in part on the statute of Gloucester (A.D. 1278), which provided that he which shall be attainted of waste shall lose the thing wasted, and moreover shall recompense thrice as much as the waste shall be taxed.' The action was to recover the land in which waste had been done and the treble damages. The statute of Gloucester was imported into this country, but many variant statutes now regulate the subject.” Edwin E. Bryant, The Law of Pleading Under the Codes of Civil Procedure 13 (2d ed. 1899).

active waste. See commissive waste.

affirmative waste. See commissive waste.

ameliorating waste (ə-mel-ə-rē-ing). (1927) A lessee’s unauthorized change to the physical character of a lessor’s property — technically constituting waste, but in fact resulting in improvement of the property. • Generally, equity will not enjoin such waste. — Also termed ameliorative waste.

commissive waste (kə-mis-iv). (1868) Waste caused by the affirmative acts of the tenant. — Also termed active waste; affirmative waste; voluntary waste. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant C=55(2).]

double waste. Hist. The destruction occurring when a tenant having a duty to repair allows a house to deteriorate, and then unlawfully cuts down timber to repair it.

economic waste. See economic waste.

equitable waste. (1842) Waste that abuses a privilege of nonimpeachability at common law, for which equity will restrain the commission of willful, destructive, malicious, or extravagant waste; esp., waste caused by a life tenant who, although ordinarily not responsible for permissive waste, flagrantly damages or destroys the property. [Cases: Waste C=4-4.

“A life tenant with the benefit of an express exemption from liability for voluntary waste will nevertheless be restrained in equity from committing acts of flagrant destruction to the premises; hence the (seemingly paradoxical) term, ‘equitable waste’. A life tenant who has engaged in, or who threatens to engage in, reprehensible acts of voluntary waste will not be permitted unconscientiously to shield from his legal right to commit waste to the detriment of those next entitled to enjoyment of the property, for this would be to abuse the legal right.” Peter Butt, Land Law 114-15 (2d ed. 1988).

permissive waste. (17c) A tenant’s failure to make normal repairs to property so as to protect it from substantial deterioration. [Cases: Waste C=3.]

voluntary waste. (16c) Waste resulting from some positive act of destruction. [Cases: Waste C=1-1.

Voluntary waste. This involves some positive act of injury to the property, diminishing its value for the person next in succession; it is a deliberate and active change to the property. Examples are altering the character of premises by demolishing internal walls and fittings or opening and working a mine on the land (but not working a mine already opened, for the pre-existence of the mine shows an intention on the part of the grantor that the profits from the mine are to be enjoyed by the life tenant). A life tenant is liable for voluntary waste, unless the instrument conferring the interest expressly exempts liability for voluntary waste.” Peter Butt, Land Law 114 (2d ed. 1988).

2. Refuse or superfluous material, esp. that remaining after a manufacturing or chemical process <toxic waste>.

hazardous waste. (1974) Waste that — because of its quantity, concentration, or physical, chemical, or infectious characteristics — may cause or significantly contribute to an increase in mortality or otherwise harm human health or the environment. 42 USCA § 6903(5). — Also termed hazardous substance. [Cases: Environmental Law C=427.

toxic waste. (1964) Hazardous, poisonous substances, such as dichlorodiphenyltrichloroethane (DDT). • Most states regulate the handling and disposing of toxic waste, and several federal statutes (such as the Comprehensive Environmental Response Compensation and Liability Act of 1980 (CERCLA), 42 USCA §§ 9601-9657) regulate the use, transportation, and disposal of toxic waste. [Cases: Environmental Law C=427.

waste book. A merchant’s book for making rough entries of transactions before posting them into a journal. — Also termed blotter.

wasted vote. See vote (1).

wastewater. See water.

wasting asset. See asset.

wasting property. See property.

wasting trust. See trust.

watch, n. Maritime law. 1. A division of a ship’s crew <port or starboard watch>. [Cases: Collision C=77, 81, 99.] 2. The division of the day into time periods of service by officers and the crew <four-hour watch>.

watch, vb. Hist. To stand guard during the night.

watch and ward, n. Hist. A feudal duty that some tenants had to keep guard through continuous vigilance. • The phrase denotes keeping guard by night (watch) and by day (ward). — Also termed watching and warding.

water. 1. The transparent liquid that is a chemical compound of hydrogen and oxygen (H₂O). 2. A body of this liquid, as in a stream, river, lake, or ocean.

backwater. Water in a stream that, because of a dam or obstruction, cannot flow forward and sometimes flows back. [Cases: Waters and Water Courses C=53, 159-175.]

coast water. Tidewater navigable by an ocean vessel; all water opening directly or indirectly into the ocean and navigable by a vessel coming in from the ocean. — Also termed coastal water.

developed water. Water brought to the surface and made available for use by the party claiming the water rights.

diffused surface water. Water, such as rainfall runoff, that collects and flows on the ground but does not form a watercourse. • Surface water is usu. subject to different regulations from water flowing in a watercourse. — Often shortened to surface water. See COMMON-ENEMY DOCTRINE; WATERCOURSE. [Cases: Waters and Water Courses C=115.]
excess water. Water that is flowing in a stream in addition to what may be termed adjudicated waters; any water not needed for the reasonable beneficial uses of those having priority rights. — Also termed surplus water.

floodwater. Water that escapes from a watercourse in large volumes and flows over adjoining property in no regular channel.

foreign water. Water belonging to another nation or subject to another jurisdiction.

groundwater. Water found in layers of permeable rock or soil.

inland waters. See internal waters.

internal waters. See internal waters.

navigable water. See navigable water.

navigable water of the United States. See navigable water.

percolating water. Water that oozes or seeps through the soil without a defined channel (such as rainwater or other water that has lost its status as part of a stream). • Percolating water usu. constitutes part of the land on which it is found. • The owner secures the exclusive use by posting a notice prohibiting others from using the water.

private water. Nonnavigable water owned and controlled by one or more individuals and not subject to public use. • If a body of water is small and of little or no practical value for general public use, it is considered private.

public water. Water adapted for purposes of navigation or public access.

subterranean water. Water that lies or flows beneath the earth’s surface and that is not artificially confined. [Cases: Waters and Water Courses C=99.]

surface water. 1. Water lying on the surface of the earth but not forming part of a watercourse or lake. • Surface water most commonly derives from rain, springs, or melting snow. [Cases: Waters and Water Courses C=115.] 2. See diffused surface water.

surplus water. 1. Water running off irrigated ground; water not consumed by the irrigation process. 2. See excess water.

territorial waters. The waters under a state’s or nation’s jurisdiction, including both inland waters and surrounding sea (traditionally within three miles of the coastline). — Also termed territorial sea; marine belt; maritime belt.

tidewater. See tidewater.

wastewater. 1. Water that escapes from the canals, ditches, or other receptacles of the lawful claimant; water that is not used by the appropriator and is permitted to run off the appropriator’s property. 2. Water that is left over, esp. after a chemical or manufacturing process.

water bayley (bay-lee). Hist. An officer (mentioned in the colony laws of New Plymouth in A.D. 1671) who primarily collects dues for fish taken out of the colony’s waters.

waterboarding. A form of torture in which water is poured over the face of a supine, immobilized victim whose head is pulled back so that the victim cannot avoid inhaling water, and thus experiences the sensation of drowning. • In some variations, fabric or plastic may be draped over the victim’s face or the victim may be gagged before the water is poured. See torture.

watercourse. (16c) A body of water, usu. of natural origin, flowing in a reasonably definite channel with bed and banks. • The term includes not just rivers and creeks, but also springs, lakes, and marshes in which such flowing streams originate or through which they flow. — Also termed waterway. [Cases: Waters and Water Courses C=38.]

"Once water joins a watercourse it becomes subject to state control; in appropriation states it becomes available for appropriation to private uses according to state law . . . [A] watercourse could be defined to include not only rivers and lakes, but every tiny brook flowing into them, all the gullies through which water flows to the brooks, the snowpack and rainfall that feed them, and the evaporating or transpiring water in the process of forming clouds. But we need not require scientists to trace water to such remote sources because it would be beyond the ability of governments to regulate these sources. Legal definitions are intended to define a point beyond which a state does not regulate water use. Usually that point is when water is not in a ‘natural stream.’" David H. Getches, Water Law in a Nutshell 106-107 (3d ed. 1997).

ancient watercourse. A watercourse in a channel that has existed from time immemorial.

artificial watercourse. A man-made watercourse, usu. to be used only temporarily. • If the watercourse is of a permanent character and has been maintained for a sufficient length of time, it may be considered a natural watercourse to which riparian rights can attach. [Cases: Waters and Water Courses C=168.]

"An artificial waterway or stream may, under some circumstances, have the characteristics and incidents of a natural watercourse. In determining the question, three things seem generally to be taken into consideration by the courts: (1) whether the way or stream is temporary or permanent; (2) the circumstances under which it was created; and (3) the mode in which it has been used and enjoyed." 78 Am. Jur. 2d Waters § 196, at 644 (1975).

natural watercourse. A watercourse with its origin in the forces of nature. • A natural watercourse does not include surface water, which often flows intermittently and in an indefinite channel. In addition, a natural stream is distinguished from an artificial ditch or canal, which is typically not the subject of riparian rights. See riparian rights; water. [Cases: Waters and Water Courses C=38.]

watered stock. See stock.
waterfront, n. Land or land with buildings fronting a body of water.

watergage, n. 1. A seawall. 2. An instrument used to measure the height of water.

watergavel, n. Hist. A fee paid for a benefit (such as fishing) obtained from a body of water.

watermark. 1. A mark indicating the highest or lowest point to which water rises or falls.

high-water mark. 1. The shoreline of a sea reached by the water at high tide. • The high-water mark is usually computed as an average or a mean high tide and not as the extreme height of the water. 2. In a freshwater lake created by a dam in an unnavigable stream, the highest point on the shore to which the dam can raise the water in ordinary circumstances. 3. In a river not subject to tides, the line that the river impresses on the soil by covering it long enough to deprive it of agricultural value. • Also termed high-water line.

low-water mark. 1. The shoreline of a sea marking the edge of the water at the lowest point of the ordinary low water. 2. In a river, the point to which the water recedes at its lowest stage.

2. The transparent design or symbol seen when paper is held up to the light, usually to indicate the genuineness of the document or the document’s manufacturer.

water ordeal. See ordeal by water under ORDEAL.

waterpower. 1. The force obtained by converting water into energy. 2. The riparian owner’s right consisting of the fall in the stream as it passes over or through the riparian owner’s land; the difference of the level between the surface where the stream first touches one’s land and the surface where the water leaves the land. [Cases: Waters and Water Courses C=42.]

water right. (often pl.) (18c) The right to use water from a natural stream or from an artificial canal for irrigation, power, domestic use, and the like; RIPARIAN RIGHT. • Also termed aquatic right. [Cases: Navigable Waters =39; Waters and Water Courses =40–47, 141, 168.]

waterscape, n. (1842) An aqueduct or passage for water.

waterway. See watercourse.

waveson (way-san), n. Hist. Goods that float on the sea after a shipwreck. Cf. flotsam; jetsam; lagan (1).

wax scot (wak skot), n. Hist. A duty on wax candles used in churches, usually paid twice a year. • Also termed cerage (seer-i); ceratum (si-ray-see-am).

way. (bef. 12c) 1. A passage or path. 2. A right to travel over another’s property. See RIGHT-OF-WAY. [Cases: Easements =1.]

private way. (17c) 1. The right to pass over another’s land. [Cases: Easements =1] 2. A way provided by local authorities primarily to accommodate particular individuals (usu. at the individual’s expense) but also for the public’s passage. [Cases: Private Roads =1.]

way of necessity. See implied easement under EASEMENT.

waybill. Maritime law. A document acknowledging the receipt of goods by a carrier or by the shipper’s agent and the contract for the transportation of those goods. • Unlike a bill of lading, a waybill is not a document of title and is nonnegotiable. — Abbr. WB. Cf. bill of lading. [Cases: Shipping =106(1).]

air waybill. A waybill for goods shipped by air. Cf. overseas bill of lading under BILL OF LADING. [Cases: Carriers =51, 153.]

way-going crop. A grain crop, formerly sown by a tenant during a tenancy (esp. in Pennsylvania), that did not ripen until after expiration of the lease. • In the absence of an express agreement to the contrary, the tenant was entitled to the crop. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant =139(2).]

way-leave, n. (15c) 1. A right-of-way (usu. created by an express grant) over or through land for the transportation of minerals from a mine or quarry. 2. The royalty paid for such a right.

wainagium (way-nay-je-um). See WAINAGE.

way of necessity. See implied easement under EASEMENT.

ways-and-means committee. (1840) A legislative committee that determines how money will be raised for various governmental purposes. [Cases: United States =23.]

weak trademark. See descriptive trademark under TRADEMARK.

wealref (weel-reef), n. Archaic. The robbery of a dead person in a grave.

wealth. 1. A large quantity of something. 2. The state of having abundant financial resources; affluence.

wealth maximization. A situation resulting from a change in the allocation of resources if the change benefits the winner — i.e., the one who benefits from the change — more than it harms the loser. • A situation in which all possible wealth-maximizing changes have occurred is described as Kaldor-Hicks efficient or as being potentially Pareto superior. See PARETO OPTIMALITY; PARETO SUPERIORITY.

weapon. (bef. 12c) An instrument used or designed to be used to injure or kill someone. [Cases: Weapons =4, 8.]

concealed weapon. (1833) A weapon that is carried by a person but that is not visible by ordinary observation. [Cases: Weapons =10.]
dangerous weapon. (17c) An object or device that, because of the way it is used, is capable of causing serious bodily injury. [Cases: Weapons §>8.]

deadly weapon. (16c) Any firearm or other device, instrument, material, or substance that, from the manner in which it is used or is intended to be used, is calculated or likely to produce death. ● In some states, the definition encompasses the likelihood of causing either death or serious physical injury. — Also termed lethal weapon. Cf. dangerous instrumentality. [Cases: Assault and Battery §>56.]

deadly weapon per se. (1872) A weapon that is deadly in and of itself or would ordinarily result in death by its use . — Also termed per se deadly weapon. [Cases: Assault and Battery §>56.]

lethal weapon. See deadly weapon.

nonlethal weapon. See LESS-LETHAL.

nonlethal weapon. See LESS-LETHAL.

weapon of mass destruction. (usu. pl.) A weapon that is intended to kill human beings, without discriminating between combatants and noncombatants, on a massive scale. ● Among the most frequently cited examples are nuclear weapons and chemical weapons. — Abbr. WMD.

wear, n. [fr. Saxon were “a taking”] Hist. A dam made of stakes interlaced by twigs of willows that are placed across a river to more easily accommodate the netting of fish. — Also termed weir.

wear and tear. (17c) Deterioration caused by ordinary use; the depreciation of property resulting from its reasonable use <the tenant is not liable for normal wear and tear to the leased premises>. — Also termed fair wear and tear; natural wear and tear. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant §>55, 160.]

“Fair wear” is the deterioration caused by the reasonable use of the premises; “fair tear” is the deterioration caused by the ordinary operation of natural forces. A tenant’s repairing covenant commonly exempts the tenant from the obligation to repair damage characterizable as “fair wear and tear” (sometimes called “reasonable wear and tear”), in the absence of such an exempting provision, a covenant to repair requires the repairing of damage characterizable as fair wear and tear. Where a covenant to repair exempts the tenant from liability for “fair wear and tear,” he is not responsible for deterioration or dilapidation caused by “the reasonable use of the house by the tenant and the ordinary operation of natural forces.” Peter Butt, Land Law 256 (2d ed. 1988).

Webb-Pomerene Act. A federal law, originally enacted in 1918, that provides a qualified exemption for an export business against the prohibitions of the antitrust laws. 15 USCA §§ 61 et seq.

“the Webb-Pomerene Act was passed to aid and encourage our manufacturers and producers to extend our foreign trade. Congress believed that American firms needed the power to form joint export associations in order to compete with foreign cartels, but while Congress was willing to create an exemption from the antitrust laws to serve this narrow purpose, the exemption created by the Webb-Pomerene Act was carefully hedged in to avoid substantial injury to domestic interests. Organization under the Webb-Pomerene Act does not give an export association the right to agree with foreign competitors to fix prices . . . or establish exclusive markets . . . .” 54 Am. Jur. 2d Monopolies and Restraints of Trade § 262, at 298 (1996).

web-wrap agreement. See POINT-AND-CLICK AGREEMENT.

wedge principle. (1951) The argument that relaxation of a constitutionally imposed restraint under specific circumstances may justify further relaxation in broader circumstances. ● This principle is most often raised in the context of legalized human euthanasia. But it has frequently been invoked in other contexts, such as the right to protection from unreasonable search and seizure. — Also termed slippery-sloped principle; parade-of-horrors objection.

“[T]here is the familiar argument from the ‘wedge principle,’ which is used to deny the possibility of looking at particular circumstances in applying moral rules.” Glanville Williams, The Sanctity of Life and the Criminal Law 315 (1957).

wedlock. The state of being married; matrimony.

week. 1. A period of seven consecutive days beginning on either Sunday or Monday. 2. Any consecutive seven-day period. [Cases: Time §>6.]

weekend sentence. See intermittent sentence under SENTENCE.

week-work. Hist. In feudal times, the obligation of a tenant to work two to four days in every week for his lord during the greater part of the year, and four or five during the summer months. See VILEIN SERVICE.

weighing. See TRIAL BY COMBAT.

weighage (way-ij). A duty or other payment required in return for weighing merchandise.

weight. A measure of heaviness; a measure of the quantity of matter. [Cases: Weights and Measures §>3.]

gross weight. The total weight of a thing, including its contents and any packaging.

net weight. The total weight of a thing, after deducting its container, its wrapping, and any other extraneous matter. — Also termed neat weight.

weighted vote. See VOTE (1).

weight of the evidence. (17c) The persuasiveness of some evidence in comparison with other evidence <because the verdict is against the great weight of the evidence, a new trial should be granted>. See BURDEN OF PERSUASION. Cf. MANIFEST WEIGHT OF THE EVIDENCE; PREponderance of the evidence. [Cases: Criminal Law §>549; Evidence §>584.]

Weingarten right. Labor law. A union member’s right to have a union representative present during an employment meeting that the member reasonably believes will result in disciplinary action. NLRB v. J. Weingarten, Inc., 420 U.S. 251, 95 S.Ct. 959 (1975). ●
In July 2000, the NLRB extended Weingarten rights to nonunion employees. [Cases: Labor and Employment C⇒1469(1).]

welfare. (14c) 1. Well-being in any respect; prosperity.
   General welfare. (17c) The public’s health, peace, morals, and safety.

   Public welfare. (16c) A society’s well-being in matters of health, safety, order, morality, economics, and politics.

2. A system of social insurance providing assistance to those who are financially in need, as by providing food stamps and family allowances. — Also termed (historically) poor relief. [Cases: Agriculture C⇒2.6; Social Security and Public Welfare C⇒4.]

   Corporate welfare. Governmental financial assistance given to a large company, usu. in the form of a subsidy.

   Welfare clause. See general welfare clause.

   Welfare plan. See employee benefit plan.

   Welfare state. (1894) A nation in which the government undertakes various social insurance programs, such as unemployment compensation, old-age pensions, family allowances, food stamps, and aid to the blind or deaf. — Also termed welfare-regulatory state.

   Well, adj. Marine insurance. Of a vessel in good condition; safe and sound <the vessel was warranted well on January 1>.

   Well, adv. (bef. 12c) In a legally sufficient manner; unobjectionable <well-pleaded complaint>.

   Well, n. A hole or shaft sunk into the earth to obtain a fluid, such as water, oil, or natural gas.

   Limited-capacity well. An oil or gas well that is limited to producing only a portion of its monthly allowable because of market demand.

   Stripper well. An oil or gas well that produces only small quantities. • In some states, such as Kansas and Illinois, stripper wells are common.

   Well-completion clause. Oil & gas. A provision in an oil- and gas lease specifying that a lessee who starts drilling before the lease terminates has the right to complete the well and to maintain the lease if the drilling achieves production. See operating clause. [Cases: Mines and Minerals C⇒78.1(9).]

   Well-knowing, adj. (17c) Intentional . • This term was formerly used in a pleading to allege scienter. See SCIENTER.

   Well-pleaded complaint. See complaint.

   Welshing. (1857) 1. The act or an instance of evading an obligation, esp. a gambling debt. 2. The common-law act of larceny in which one receives a deposit to be paid back with additional money depending on the outcome of an event (such as a horse race) but at the time of the deposit the depositor intends to cheat and defraud the depositor by absconding with the money. • Although this term is sometimes thought to be a slur against those hailing from Wales, etymologists have not been able to establish this connection. Authoritative dictionaries record the origin of the term as being unknown. — Also termed welching. — welsh, vb. — welsher, n.

   Welsh mortgage. See mortgage.

   Wend, n. Hist. A large section of land; a perambulation; a circuit.

   Wer. See blood money (1).

   Wergild (war-gild). Hist. The fixed value of a person’s life, being the amount that a homicide’s kindred must pay to the kindred of the slain person so as to avoid a blood feud. — Also spelled wergeld; weregild; wehrgeld. See effusio sanguinis; lodes.

   West Australian plan. See instant-runoff voting under voting.

   Westlaw. A West Group database for computer-assisted legal research, providing online access to legal resources, including federal and state caselaw, statutes, regulations, legal treatises, legal periodicals, and general and business news. Abbr. WL.

   Westminster Confession of Faith (west-min-star). Hist. A document containing a statement of the religious doctrines of the Presbyterian Church, originating at a conference of British and continental Protestant divines at Westminster in 1643. • It was adopted by the General Assembly of the Kirk of Scotland and the Scottish Parliament, so becoming the basis of the Scottish Presbyterian Church. — Sometimes shortened to Westminster Confession.

   Westminster the First, Statute of. Hist. An English statute divided into 51 chapters (later correlating to separate acts of Parliament), including provisions (1) protecting the property of the church from the violence and spoliation of the Crown and nobles; (2) providing for the freedom of popular elections; (3) enforcing the rules contained in Magna Carta against excessive fines; (4) enumerating and correcting the abuses of tenures (esp. concerning marriages of wards); (5) regulating the levying of tolls; (6) correcting and restraining the powers of the royal escheator and other officers; (7) amending the criminal law (esp. by classifying rape as a most grievous, though not capital, offense); and (8) making criminal and civil procedures more expeditious and less costly. 3 Edw. (1275).

   West Point. See United States Military Academy.

   West-Saxon law. Hist. A system of rules introduced by the West Saxons and one of the three principal legal systems prevailing in England in the beginning of the 11th century. • It was observed primarily in southern English counties from Kent to Devonshire. — Also termed West-Saxon lage. See mercenlage; danelaw.
wharf. A structure on the shores of navigable waters, to which a vessel can be brought for loading or unloading. [Cases: Wharves \( \equiv 4 \).]

private wharf. One that can be used only by its owner or lessee. [Cases: Wharves \( \equiv 4 \).]

wharfing out, right of. See RIGHT OF WHARFING OUT.

Wharton's rule (\( \text{wh} \)wor-t\( \text{n} \)). (1940) Criminal law. The doctrine that an agreement by two or more persons to commit a particular crime cannot be prosecuted as a conspiracy if the crime could not be committed except by the actual number of participants involved. • But if an additional person participates so as to enlarge the scope of the agreement, all the actors may be charged with conspiracy. The doctrine takes its name from the influential criminal-law author Francis Wharton (1820-1889). • Also termed Wharton rule; concert-of-action rule. [Cases: Conspiracy \( \equiv 28(1) \).]

"Wharton's Rule applies only to offenses that require concerted criminal activity, a plurality of criminal agents. In such cases, a closer relationship exists between the conspiracy and the substantive offense because both require collective criminal activity. The substantive offense therefore presents some of the same threats that the law of conspiracy normally is thought to guard against, and it cannot automatically be assumed that the Legislature intended the conspiracy and the substantive offense to remain as discrete crimes upon consummation of the latter. Thus, absent legislative intent to the contrary, the Rule supports a presumption that the two merge when the substantive offense is proved. . . . More important, as the Rule is essentially an aid to the determination of legislative intent, it must defer to a discernible legislative judgment." —Iannelli v. United States, 420 U.S. 770, 785-86, 95 S.Ct. 1284, 1293-94 (1975).

whistleblower, n. (1970) An employee who reports employer wrongdoing to a governmental or law-enforcement agency. • Federal and state laws protect whistleblowers from employer retaliation. [Cases: Labor and Employment ◁ 775; Officers and Public Employees ◁ 65. — whistleblowing, n.]

whistleblower act. (1984) A federal or state law protecting employees from retaliation for properly disclosing employer wrongdoing such as violating a law or regulation, mismanaging public funds, abusing authority, or endangering public health or safety. • Federal laws containing whistleblower provisions include the Whistleblower Protection Act (5 USCA § 1211), the Occupational Safety and Health Act (29 USCA § 660), CERCLA (42 USCA § 9610), and the Air Pollution and Control Act (42 USCA § 7622). [Cases: Labor and Employment ◁ 775; Officers and Public Employees ◁ 69.7.]

Whiteacre. (17c) A fictitious tract of land used in legal discourse (esp. law-school hypotheticals) to discuss real-property issues. See blackacre.

white bonnet. Scots law. A fictitious bidder at an auction; a shell.

whitecapping. (1900) Criminal law. The criminal act of threatening a person — usu. a member of a minority group — with violence in an effort to compel the person either to move away or to stop engaging in a certain business or occupation. • Whitecapping statutes were originally enacted to curtail the activities of the Ku Klux Klan. [Cases: Extortion and Threats ◁ 25.1.]

white-collar crime. (1940) A nonviolent crime usu. involving cheating or dishonesty in commercial matters. • Examples include fraud, embezzlement, bribery, and insider trading.

whitehorse case. (1971) Slang. A reported case with facts virtually identical to those of the instant case, so that the disposition of the reported case should determine the outcome of the instant case. — Also termed horse case; goose case; gray mule case; red-cow case. Cf. on all fours.

white knight. A person or corporation that rescues the target of an unfriendly corporate takeover, esp. by acquiring a controlling interest in the target corporation or by making a competing tender offer. — Also termed friendly suitor. See takeover. Cf. corporate raider.

Whiteley rule. See fellow-officer rule.

White model. Labor law. A method for determining whether a union member’s state-law claim against the employer is preempted by federal law, by focusing on whether state law permits the claim to be waived by a private contract. • In Lingle v. Norge Division of Magic Chef, Inc., 486 U.S. 399, 108 S.Ct. 1877 (1988), the Supreme Court held that a union member’s state-law retaliatory-discharge claim was not preempted by the Labor-Management Relations Act because the claim could be resolved without interpreting the collective-bargaining agreement. There are at least two models for applying the Lingle test: the White model, which focuses on whether the claim is negotiable or nonnegotiable (that is, whether state law allows the claim to be waived by a private contract) and the Marcus model, which focuses on the independence of the claim in relation to the collective-bargaining agreement. Under the White model, all negotiable claims (those waivable by private contract) are necessarily preempted because their resolution will require an interpretation of the collective-bargaining agreement. A nonnegotiable claims (one that state law does not permit to be waived by private contract) will be preempted only if its resolution requires an interpretation of the collective-bargaining agreement. The White model is named for the author of the law-review article in which it was proposed. Rebecca Homer White, Section 301’s Preemption of State Law Claims: A Model for Analysis, 41 Ala. L. Rev. 377 (1990). See lingle test. Cf. marcus model.

white rent. Hist. A feudal rent paid in silver, rather than in work, grain, or money baser than silver. Cf. black rent.

white slavery. The practice of forcing a female (or, rarely, a male) to engage in commercial prostitution. • Trafficking in persons for prostitution is prohibited by the Mann Act (18 USCA §§ 2421–2424). [Cases: Prostitution ◁ 15.]

wildcat strike. See strike.

wild creature. See wild animal under creature.

wild deed. See deed.

Wild’s Case, Rule in. See rule in Wild’s case.

willful. See willful.

will, n. (bef. 12c) 1. Wish; desire; choice <employment at will>. 2. The legal expression of an individual’s wishes about the disposition of his or her property after death; esp., a document by which a person directs his or her estate to be distributed upon death <there was no mention of his estranged brother in the will>. — Also termed testament; will and testament; (archaically) testamentary instrument. [Cases: Wills C:>= 1-202.]

vb.

“The word ‘will’ has two distinct meanings. The first, and strict, meaning is metaphysical, and denotes the sum of what the testator wishes, or ‘wills,’ to happen on his death. The second, and more common, meaning is physical, and denotes the document or documents in which that intention is expressed.” Anthony R. Mellowes, The Law of Succession (3d ed. 1977).

ambulatory will. (1909) A will that can be altered during the testator’s lifetime. [Cases: Wills C:>= 78.]

antenuptial will. See prenuptial will.

attested will. A will that has been signed by a witness. [Cases: Wills C:>= 113.]

bogus will. An unauthentic will, esp. one involving fraud or unauthorized changes.

closed will. See mystic will.

conditional will. A will that depends on the occurrence of an uncertain event for the will to take effect.

• Most jurisdictions hold a conditional will valid even though the testator’s death does not result from or on the occasion of the condition mentioned in the will. The courts generally hold that the condition is the inducement for making the will rather than a condition precedent to its operation. See Eaton v. Brown, 193 U.S. 411, 24 S.Ct. 487 (1904); In re Will of Cohen, 491 A.2d 1292 (N.J. Super. Ct. App. Div. 1985). Cf. contingent will. [Cases: Wills C:>= 80.]

conjoint will. See joint will.

contingent will. A will that takes effect only if a specified event occurs. Cf. conditional will. [Cases: Wills C:>= 80.]

counter will. See mutual will.

double will. See mutual will.

duplicate will. (1855) A will executed in duplicate originals by a testator who retains one copy and gives the second copy to another person. • The rules applicable to wills apply to both wills, and upon application for probate, both copies must be tendered into the registry of the probate court. [Cases: Wills C:>= 175.]

holographic will (hol-a-graf-ik). (1850) A will that is handwritten by the testator. • Such a will is typically unattested. Holographic wills are rooted in the civil-law tradition, having originated in Roman law and having been authorized under the Napoleonic Code.

French and Spanish settlers introduced holographic wills in America, primarily in the South and West. Today they are recognized in about half the states. — Also termed olographic will. See holograph. [Cases: Wills C=>130–135.]

inofficious will. See inofficious testament under testament.

international will. A will that is executed according to formalities provided in an international treaty or convention, and that will be valid although it may be written in a foreign language by a testator domiciled in another country. [Cases: Wills C=>234, 293(4), 302(8).]

In early and classical law, a formal will sealed by and has since been lost. [Cases: Wills C=>238–246.]

In many jurisdictions. But the overwhelming majority of American jurisdictions follow the testator's death. Its contents can be proved by parol evidence in many jurisdictions. But the overwhelming majority of American jurisdictions follow the testator's death. Also termed joint and mutual will. [Cases: Wills C=>56–68, 100.

joint and mutual will. (1841) A single will executed by two or more people — to dispose of property they own separately, in common, or jointly — requiring the surviving testator to dispose of the property in accordance with the terms of the will. • A joint and mutual will is drafted to be contractually binding on the survivor. The word "joint" indicates the form of the will. The word "mutual" describes the substantive provisions. — Also termed joint and reciprocal will. [Cases: Wills C=>56–68, 100.]

joint and reciprocal will. See joint and mutual will.

joint will. (18c) A single will executed by two or more testators, usu. disposing of their common property by transferring their separate titles to one devisee. — Also termed conjoint will. [Cases: Wills C=>56–68, 100.]

last will. (16c) The most recent will of a deceased; the instrument ultimately fixing the disposition of real and personal property at the testator's death. — Also termed last will and testament.

"A will is the disposition of real and personal property to take effect after the death of the testator. When the will operates upon personal property, it is sometimes called a testament, and when upon real estate, a devise; but the more general and the more popular denomination of the instrument, embracing equally real and personal estate, is that of last will and testament." — James Kent, Commentaries on American Law *501 (George Comstock ed., 11th ed. 1866).

last will and testament. See last will.

living will. See living will.

lost will. An executed will that cannot be found at the testator's death. • Its contents can be proved by parol evidence in many jurisdictions. But the overwhelming majority of American jurisdictions follow the common-law presumption of revocation if a will is proved to have been in the possession of the testator and has since been lost. [Cases: Wills C=>234, 293(4), 302(8).]

mancipatory will (man-sip-i-tor-e). Roman law. In early and classical law, a formal will sealed by seven witnesses and submitted to the praetor. See testamentum.

mariner's will. See soldier's will.

mutual will. (usu. pl.) (1837) One of two separate wills in which two persons, usu. a husband and wife, establish identical or similar testamentary provisions disposing of their estates in favor of each other. • It is also possible (though rare) for the testators to execute a single mutual will, as opposed to separate ones. And it is possible (though, again, rare) for more than two parties to execute mutual wills. — Also termed reciprocal will; counter will; double will; mutual testament. [Cases: Wills C=>56–68.]

mystic will. Civil law. A secret will signed by the testator, sealed and delivered to a notary in the presence of three to seven witnesses, accompanied by the testator's declaration that it is a valid will. • The notary is then required to indorse on the envelope containing the will a statement of all the facts surrounding the transaction, and this is signed by the notary and all the witnesses. — Also termed mystic testament; secret will; secret testament; closed will; closed testament; sealed will; sealed testament. [Cases: Wills C=>124.]

nonintervention will. A will that authorizes an independent executor. See independent executor under executor.

notarial will. A will executed by a testator in the presence of two witnesses and a notary public.

nuncupative will (nong-kya-pay-tiv or nang-kyoo-pa-tiv). (18c) An oral will made in contemplation of imminent death, esp. from a recent injury. • Nuncupative wills are invalid in most states. Even in states allowing them, the amount that may be conveyed is usu. limited by statute. Traditionally, only personal property may be conveyed. — Also termed oral will; unwritten will; verbal will. [Cases: Wills C=>136–150.]

"Nuncupative (i.e., oral) wills are by statute in almost all States required to be proved by two (sometimes three) witnesses, who were present and heard the testamentary words." — John H. Wigmore, A Students' Textbook of the Law of Evidence 299 (1935).

nuncupative will by public act. Hist. Louisiana law. A will dictated by the testator to a notary in the presence of a specified number of witnesses. • The notary had to read the will back to the testator. The notary and the witnesses then signed the will. If the testator was physically unable to sign, another person could sign in the testator's presence on the testator's behalf. The number of required witnesses varied depending on the circumstances. This type of will was abolished in 1997. See La. Civ. Code art. 1574. — Also termed nuncupative testament by public act.

olographic will. See holographic will.

oral will. (1853) A will made by the spoken declaration of the testator and usu. dependent on oral testimony for proof. See nuncupative will. [Cases: Wills C=>136–150.]
parliamentary will. Slang. The legislation that governs the distribution of an intestate’s property. • The term arose because the legislature effectively makes an intestate’s will by passing statutes regulating descent and distribution. The terms of the parliamentary will are gathered from the statutes in effect when the intestate died.

postnuptial will (pohst-nap-shal). A will executed after marriage.

pourover will (por-oh-var). (1946) A will giving money or property to an existing trust. Cf. pourover trust under TRUST.

prenuptial will (pree-nap-shal). (1914) A will executed before marriage. • At common law, marriage automatically revoked a spouse’s will, but modern statutes usu. provide that marriage does not revoke a will (although divorce does). But if this marriage was not contemplated by the will and there is nothing otherwise on its face to indicate that the testator intentionally left nothing to any future spouse, the pretermitted spouse may be entitled to a special forced share of the estate. Uniform Probate Code § 2-508. — Also termed antenuptial will. [Cases: Wills C= 60.]

reciprocal will. See mutual will.

sealed will. See mystic will.

seaman’s will. See soldier’s will.

secret will. See mystic will.

self-proved will. (1963) A will proved by a self-proving affidavit. See self-proving affidavit under AFFIDAVIT. • This method of proof, recognized in a growing number of states, eliminates the practical problems of obtaining the live testimony of witnesses. [Cases: Wills C= 113.]

soldier’s will. A soldier’s informal oral or written will that is usu. valid despite its noncompliance with normal statutory formalities, as long as the soldier was in actual service at the time the will was made. — Also termed seaman’s will; mariner’s will; military testament; soldier’s and sailor’s will.

undutiful will. Civil law. See unnatural will.

unnatural will. (1854) A will that distributes the testator’s estate to strangers rather than to the testator’s relatives, without apparent reason. — Also termed (in civil law) undutiful will. [Cases: Wills C= 82.]

unofficious will. See inofficious testament under TESTAMENT.

unsolemn will. Civil law. A will in which an executor is not named.

unwritten will. See nuncupative will.

verbal will. See nuncupative will.

will and testament. See WILL.

will contest. Wills & estates. The litigation of a will’s validity, usu. based on allegations that the testator lacked capacity or was under undue influence. [Cases: Wills C= 203–434.]

willful, adj. (13c) Voluntary and intentional, but not necessarily malicious. — Sometimes spelled wilful. Cf. WANTON. — willfulness, n.

"The word ‘wilful’ or ‘wilfully’ when used in the definition of a crime, it has been said time and again, means only intentionally or purposely as distinguished from accidentally or negligently and does not require any actual impropriety; while on the other hand it has been stated with equal repetition and insistence that the requirement added by such a word is not satisfied unless there is a bad purpose or evil intent." Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 875–76 (3d ed. 1982).

"Almost all of the cases under [Bankruptcy Code § 523(a)(6)] deal with the definition of the two words 'willful' and 'malicious.' Initially one might think that willful and malicious mean the same thing. If they did, Congress should have used one word and not both. Most courts feel compelled to find some different meaning for each of them." David G. Epstein et al., Bankruptcy § 7-30, at 531 (1993).

willful and malicious injury. See INJURY.

willful and wanton misconduct. See MISCONDUCT.

willful and wanton negligence. See gross NEGLIGENCE.

willful blindness. (1927) Deliberate avoidance of knowledge of a crime, esp. by failing to make a reasonable inquiry about suspected wrongdoing despite being aware that it is highly probable. • A person acts with willful blindness, for example, by deliberately refusing to look inside an unmarked package after being paid by a known drug dealer to deliver it. Willful blindness creates an inference of knowledge of the crime in question. See Model Penal Code § 2. [Cases: Criminal Law C= 20, 314.]

willful-blindness instruction. See JURY INSTRUCTION.

willful, continued, and obstinate desertion. See obstinate desertion under DESERTION.

willful homicide. See HOMICIDE.

willful indifference to the safety of others. See willful and wanton misconduct under MISCONDUCT.

willful infringement. SeE INFRINGEMENT.

willful misconduct. See MISCONDUCT.

willful murder. See MURDER.

willful neglect. See NEGLIGENT.

willful negligence. 1. See advertent negligence under NEGLIGENCE. 2. See gross negligence (2) under NEGLIGENCE.

willfulness. (13c) 1. The fact or quality of acting purposely or by design; deliberateness; intention. • Willfulness does not necessarily imply malice, but it involves more than just knowledge. 2. The voluntary, intentional violation or disregard of a known legal duty. — Also termed legal willfulness. [Cases: Negligence C= 275.]

willful tort. See intentional tort under TORT.

willful wrong. See intentional wrong under WRONG.

Wills Act

1. statute of wills (1). 2. An 1837 English statute that allowed people to dispose of every type of property interest by will and that had an elaborate set of requirements for valid execution. • Some states today continue to adhere to these stringent requirements. Cf. Uniform Probate Code § 2-502. — Also termed (in sense 2) Lord Langdale’s Act.

will substitute. A document or instrument that allows a person, upon death, to dispose of an estate in the same or similar manner as a will but without the formalities and expense of a probate proceeding. • The most common will substitutes are trusts, life-insurance plans, and retirement-benefits contracts. The creation of will substitutes has been one of the most important developments in the area of decedents’ estates in the past 50 years. Cf. nonprobate asset under asset. — Cases: Wills C-0-86.

Winchester, Statute of. Hist. A statute passed in the 13th year of the reign of Edward I, requiring every man to provide himself with armor to keep the peace, recognizing and regulating the offices of high and petty constables, organizing the police, and enforcing the old Saxon police laws. • It was repealed in 1827 by the Criminal Statutes (England) Repeal Act. St. 7 & 8 Geo. 4, ch. 27.

windfall. (15c) An unanticipated benefit, usu. in the form of a profit and not caused by the recipient.

windfall-profits tax. See tax.

winding up, n. (1858) The process of settling accounts and liquidating assets in anticipation of a partnership’s or a corporation’s dissolution. Cf. dissolution (4). — Cases: Corporations C-0-618; Partnership C-0-277. — wind up, vb. — wind up, n.

window-dressing. (1898) The deceptive arrangement of something, usu. facts or appearances, to make it appear more attractive or favorable. • The term is often used to describe the practice of some financial managers, esp. some managers of mutual funds, to sell certain positions at the end of a quarter to make an investment’s quarterly performance appear better than it actually was. See portfolio pumping.

window tax. See tax.

winner-take-all vote. See vote (3).

wipe. See swipe (3).

WIPO. abbr. WORLD INTELLECTUAL PROPERTY ORGANIZATION.

WIPO Copyright Treaty. A 1996 treaty that made changes in the Berne Convention in light of the TRIPS Agreement and dealt with new copyright issues raised by the emergence of the Internet and other digital technology. • The WIPO Treaty expressly protects computer software and databases and expressly excludes from protection “ideas, procedures, methods of operation or mathematical concepts as such.” The WIPO Copyright Treaty was adopted simultaneously with the WIPO Performances and Phonograms Treaty. — Abbr. WCT.

WIPO digital agenda. See digital agenda.

wish, vb. 1. To desire; to hope. 2. To will; to devise; to give.

witan (wit-an). [Anglo-Saxon “wise men”] Hist. The members of the king’s council who sat to assist the king in administrative and judicial matters. • Among the members were ealdormen, bishops, abbots, high officers, and occasionally the king’s friends and relatives.

witchcraft. The practices of a witch, esp. in black magic; sorcery. • Under the Witchcraft Act of 1541 (33 Hen. 8, ch. 8) and the Witchcraft Act of 1603 (1 Jac. ch. 12), witchcraft was a felony punishable by death without benefit of clergy. The last execution in England for witchcraft occurred in 1716. The Acts were repealed in 1736. In the United States, the most conspicuous (and nearly the last) persecution for witchcraft occurred in Salem, Massachusetts, where 19 people were hanged for this offense in 1692.

wite (wit). Hist. A penal fine exacted by the Crown or other authority for a serious crime, such as murder. — Also spelled wyte.

witenagemot (wit-a-na-ga-moht). [Anglo-Saxon “a meeting of the wise”] Hist. A national assembly of noblemen, high ecclesiastics, and other great thanes of England who advised and aided the king in the general administration of the government. • Its composition depended on the will of the king. It passed out of existence with the Norman Conquest (1066). Although it was a precursor to the British Parliament, that was a separate growth — not a continuation of the witenagemot. — Also spelled witenagemot; wittenagemot; witanagemote.

were dependent on appointment to that office by the Witan in the early period before the royal succession became hereditary. With the tenth century centralization of power in the Alfredian line of kings, it appears that the power of the Witan began to decline.” Charles Herman Kinnane, A First Book on Anglo-American Law 262 (2d ed. 1952).

withdrawal, n. (18c) 1. The act of taking back or away; removal <withdrawal of consent>. 2. The act of retreating from a place, position, or situation <withdrawal from the moot-court competition>. 3. The removal of money from a depository <withdrawal of funds from the checking account>. 4. Renunciation (3) <withdrawal from the conspiracy to commit arson>. 5. Retraction (4). 6. Parliamentary law. A motion's removal from consideration by its mover. • The mover controls a motion only until the chair states the question, after which the motion belongs to the assembly and the mover cannot withdraw it without the assembly's permission. See request for permission to withdraw a motion under REQUEST. 7. Parliamentary law. See discharge (9). — withdraw, vb.

withdrawal of charges. (1842) The removal of charges by the one bringing them, such as a prosecutor. See NOLLE PROSEQUIT. [Cases: Criminal Law C=303.5.]

withdrawal of counsel. (1875) An attorney's termination of his or her role in representing a party in a case.

withdrawing a juror. (18c) The act or an instance of removing a juror, usu. to obtain a continuance in a case or, sometimes in English practice, to end the case, as when the case has settled, the parties are too anxious to proceed to verdict, or the judge recommends it because the action is not properly before the court.

withdrawing of record. 1. With the court's permission, taking the record or any portion of it out of the office of the clerk of the court. 2. Hist. A plaintiff's removing of the nisi prius or trial record to prevent the case from being tried, usu. either before the jury is sworn or afterwards with the consent of defense counsel.

withdrawn land. 1. See reserved land under land. 2. See reservation (3).

withernam (with-ar-nam), n. [fr. Saxon weder “ether” + naam “a taking”] Hist. A reciprocal taking or distress in place of a previous one. See capias in withernam under withernam.

with full power. See committee with power under committee (1).

withheld sentence. See suspended sentence under sentence.

withholding, n. (1940) 1. The practice of deducting a certain amount from a person's salary, wages, dividends, winnings, or other income, usu. for tax purposes; esp., an employer's practice of taking out a portion of an employee's gross earnings and paying that portion to the government for income-tax and social-security purposes. [Cases: Internal Revenue C=4849; Taxation C=3560.] 2. The money so deducted. — Also termed income-tax withholding. — withhold, vb.

withholding of evidence. (1848) The act or an instance of obstructing justice by stifling or suppressing evidence knowing that it is being sought in an official investigation or a judicial proceeding. See obstruction of justice. [Cases: Obstructing justice C=5.]

withholding tax. See tax.

without day. See go hence without day.

without delay. (13c) 1. Instantly; at once. 2. Within the time reasonably allowed by law.

without dissent. See without objection.

without impeachment of waste. (16c) (Of a tenant) not subject to an action for waste; not punishable for waste. • This clause is inserted in a lease to give a tenant the right to take certain actions (such as cutting timber) without being held liable for waste. But a tenant cannot abuse the right and will usu. be held liable for maliciously committing waste. — Also termed absque imperitione vasti. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant C=55(2).]

without notice. (16c) Lacking actual or constructive knowledge. • To be a bona fide purchaser, one must buy something "without notice" of another's claim to the item or of defects in the seller's title. To be a holder in due course, one must take a bill or note "without notice" that it is overdue, has been dishonored, or is subject to a claim. UCC § 3-302(a)(2). See notice; bona fide purchaser under purchaser. [Cases: Bills and Notes C=331, 336; Sales C=234(1), 473; Vendor and Purchaser C=220.] without objection. With general consent. — Also termed without dissent. See general consent under consent (2).
without prejudice, adv. (15c) Without loss of any rights; in a way that does not harm or cancel the legal rights or privileges of a party <dismissed without prejudice>. See dismissal without prejudice under DISMISSAL (1).

without recourse. (18c) (In an indorsement) without liability to subsequent holders. • With this stipulation, one who indorses an instrument indicates that he or she has no further liability to any subsequent holder for payment. — Also termed sans recours. [Cases: Bills and Notes C=>293.]

without reserve. Of or relating to an auction at which an item will be sold for the highest bid price. [Cases: Auctions and Auctioneers C=>7.]

without this, that. See ABQUE HOC.

with power. See committee with power under COMMITTEE (1).

with prejudice, adv. With loss of all rights; in a way that finally disposes of a party's claim and bars any future action on that claim <dismissed with prejudice>. See dismissal with prejudice under DISMISSAL (1).

with recourse, adv. (In an indorsement) with liability to subsequent holders. • With this stipulation, one who indorses an instrument indicates that he or she remains liable to the holder for payment. [Cases: Bills and Notes C=>280, 286.]

with reserve. Of or relating to an auction at which an item will not be sold unless the highest bid exceeds a minimum price. [Cases: Auctions and Auctioneers C=>7.]

with strong hand. With force. • In common-law pleading, this term implies a degree of criminal force, esp. as used in forcible-entry statutes.

witness, n. (bef. 12c) 1. One who sees, knows, or vouches for something . 2. One who gives testimony under oath or affirmation (1) in person, (2) by oral or written deposition, or (3) by affidavit <the witness to the signature signed the affidavit>. • A witness must be legally competent to testify. [Cases: Witnesses C=>224. — witness, vb.

"The term 'witness,' in its strict legal sense, means one who gives evidence in a cause before a court; and in its general sense includes all persons from whose lips testimony is extracted to be used in any judicial proceeding, and so includes deponents and affiants as well as persons delivering oral testimony before a court or jury." 97 C.J.S. Witnesses § 1, at 350 (1927).

"Every witness is an editor: he tells you not everything he saw and heard, for that would be impossible, but what he saw and heard and found significant, and what he finds significant depends on his preconceptions." Patrick Devlin, The Criminal Prosecution in England 66 (1960).

accomplice witness. (1853) A witness who is an accomplice in the crime that the defendant is charged with. • A codefendant cannot be convicted solely on the testimony of an accomplice witness. [Cases: Criminal Law C=>507–512.] adverse witness. See hostile witness.

alibi witness. (1897) A witness who testifies that the defendant was in a location other than the scene of the crime at the relevant time; a witness who supports the defendant's alibi.

attesting witness. (18c) One who vouches for the authenticity of another's signature by signing an instrument that the other has signed <proof of the will requires two attesting witnesses>. — Also termed subscribing witness. [Cases: Evidence C=>374; Wills C=>113.]

character witness. (1893) A witness who testifies about another person's character traits or community reputation. See character evidence under EVIDENCE. [Cases: Witnesses C=>374, 274.]

competent witness. (17c) A witness who is legally qualified to testify. • A lay witness who has personal knowledge of the subject matter of the testimony is competent to testify. Fed. R. Evid. 601–602. [Cases: Witnesses C=>35–79.]

corroborating witness. (1853) A witness who confirms or supports someone else's testimony. [Cases: Witnesses C=>410.]

court witness. A witness called or re-called to testify by the judge. • The witness called to testify by the court usu. has expertise in the subject matter of the trial and is considered necessary to resolve a conflict in the testimony. The court's discretion to call its own witnesses exists in both civil and criminal cases. [Cases: Witnesses C=>246(2).]

credible witness. (16c) A witness whose testimony is believable.

disinterested witness. (18c) A witness who has no private interest in the matter at issue. [Cases: Witnesses C=>91.]

expert witness. (1858) A witness qualified by knowledge, skill, experience, training, or education to provide a scientific, technical, or other specialized opinion about the evidence or a fact issue. Fed. R. Evid. 702–706. — Also termed skilled witness. See EXPERT; DABERT TEST; EXPERT OPINION under OPINION (3). [Cases: Criminal Law C=>478–480; Evidence C=>535–546.]

going witness. Archaic. A witness who is about to leave a court's jurisdiction, but not the country. • An example is the witness who leaves one state to go to another.

grand-jury witness. (1947) A witness who is called to testify before a grand jury. [Cases: Grand Jury C=>36.]

hostile witness. (1852) A witness who is biased against the examining party, who is unwilling to testify, or who is identified with an adverse party. • A hostile witness may be asked leading questions on direct examination. Fed. R. Evid. 611(c). — Also termed adverse witness. See adverse party under PARTY (2). [Cases: Witnesses C=>244.]
interested witness. (18c) A witness who has a direct and private interest in the matter at issue. • Most jurisdictions provide that a person witnessing a will may not be a devisee under the will. The Uniform Probate Code, however, has abrogated this rule. [Cases: Witnesses § 91.]

lay witness. (1853) A witness who does not testify as an expert and who is therefore restricted to giving an opinion or making an inference that (1) is based on firsthand knowledge, and (2) is helpful in clarifying the testimony or in determining facts. Fed. R. Evid. 701. [Cases: Criminal Law § 448-467; Evidence § 470-503.]

material witness. (17c) A witness who can testify about matters having some logical connection with the consequential facts, esp. if few others, if any, know about those matters. [Cases: Witnesses § 4.]

percipient witness. (1913) A witness who has perceived the things about which he or she testifies. See Eyewitness; Earwitness.

prosecuting witness. (1823) A person who files the complaint that triggers a criminal prosecution and whose testimony the prosecution usually relies on to secure a conviction. [Cases: Criminal Law § 210.]

qualified witness. (1845) A witness who, by explaining the manner in which a business record is made and kept, is able to lay the foundation for the admission of those records under an exception to the hearsay rule. Fed. R. Evid. 803(6). [Cases: Criminal Law § 444.9; Evidence § 373.]

rebuttal witness. (1891) A witness who contradicts or attempts to contradict evidence previously presented.

res gestae witness. (1894) A witness who, having been at the scene of an incident, can give a firsthand account of what happened. See Res Gestae. [Cases: Criminal Law § 363; Evidence § 120.]

skilled witness. 1. See expert witness. 2. A witness whose degree of knowledge in a particular subject or field is short of the standard for an expert but greater than the knowledge possessed by a typical layperson. [Cases: Criminal Law § 452, 478; Evidence § 474, 536.]

subscribing witness. (17c) One who witnesses the signatures on an instrument and signs at the end of the instrument to that effect. See Attesting witness. [Cases: Evidence § 373; Wills § 123.]

supernumerary witness. An unrequired witness, such as a third witness to a will where only two are required. [Cases: Wills § 712.]

swift witness. See zealous witness.

target witness. (1965) 1. The person who has the knowledge that an investigating body seeks. [Cases: Grand Jury § 37.2] 2. A witness who is called before a grand jury and against whom the government is also seeking an indictment.

turncoat witness. (1947) A witness whose testimony was expected to be favorable but who becomes (usu. during the trial) a hostile witness.

zealous witness (zel-əs). (1868) A witness who shows partiality toward the litigant that called him or her to testify and who seems eager to help that side in the lawsuit. — Also termed swift witness.

witness box. See witness stand.

witness clause. See testimonium clause.

witnesseth, vb. Shows; records. • This term, usu. set in all capitals, commonly separates the preliminaries in a contract, up through the recitals, from the contractual terms themselves. Modern drafters increasingly avoid it as an antiquated relic. Traditionally, the subject of this verb was This Agreement: the sentence, boiled down, was This Agreement witnesseth [i.e., shows or records] that, whereas [the parties have agreed to contract with one another], the parties therefore agree as follows . . . . Many modern contracts erroneously retain the Witnesseth even though a new verb appears in the preamble: This Agreement is between [one party and the other party]. After the preamble is a period, followed by an all-capped WITNESSETH. It is an example of a form retained long after its utility, and most lawyers do not know what it means or even what purpose it once served.

witness fee. See fee (1).

witnessing part. 1. See attestation clause. 2. See Testament (2).

witness-protection program. (1970) A federal or state program in which a person who testifies against a criminal is assigned a new identity and relocated to another part of the country to avoid retaliation by anyone convicted as a result of that testimony. • The Federal Witness Protection Program was established by the Organized Crime Control Act of 1970 and is administered by the marshals of the U.S. Justice Department.

witness stand. (1853) The space in a courtroom, usu. a boxed area, occupied by a witness while testifying. — Often shortened to stand. — Also termed witness box. [Cases: Witnesses § 228.]

witness-tampering. (1924) The act or an instance of obstructing justice by intimidating, influencing, or harassing a witness before or after the witness testifies. • Several state and federal laws, including the Victim and Witness Protection Act of 1982 (18 USCA § 1512), provide criminal penalties for tampering with witnesses or other persons in the context of a pending investigation or official proceeding. See obstruction of justice. [Cases: Obstructing Justice § 5.]
witword (wit-ward). Hist. 1. A legally allowed claim; esp., the right to vindicate ownership or possession by one's affirmation under oath. 2. A will or testament.

W.L. abbr. WESTLAW.

wobbler. Slang. A crime that can be charged as either a felony or a misdemeanor. [Cases: Criminal Law ☞ 27.]

wolf's head. Hist. An outlaw, who was formerly often referred to as carrying a wolf's head (caput lupinum) and to be no more than a wild beast or wolf who could be slain and whose head could be carried to the king. — Also termed wooftherfod. See outlaw.

"Outlawry is the last weapon of ancient law, but one that it must often use. As has been well said, it is the sentence of death pronounced by a community which has no police constables or professional hangmen. To pursue the outlaw and knock him on the head as though he were a wild beast is the right and duty of every law-abiding man. 'Let him bear the wolf's head' this phrase is in use even in the thirteenth century." 1 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward 1476 (2d ed. 1898).

Women's Bureau. A unit in the U.S. Department of Labor responsible for formulating policies and standards to promote the welfare of wage-earning women.

women's shelter. See SHELTER.

Women's Suffrage Amendment. See NINETEENTH AMENDMENT.

wood-corn, n. Hist. A quantity of oats or grain paid by customary tenants to a lord for the privilege of picking up dead or broken wood.

wood-geld (wuud-geld). Hist. 1. Money paid for the privilege of taking wood from a forest. 2. Immunity from paying money for this privilege. — Also termed pudzeld.

wood-leave. Hist. A license or right to cut down, remove, and use standing timber.

wood-mote (wuud-moht). See COURT OF ATTACHMENTS.

Wood-Plea Court. Hist. A court held twice a year in Clun Forest, in Shropshire, to determine matters of wood and agistments.

woodshedding. See HORSESHEDDING.

woodward (wuud-word), n. Hist. A forest officer who patrols and protects the forest. [Cases: Woods and Forests ☞ 7.]

wooftherfod. See WOLF'S HEAD.

w.o.p. abbr. WANT OF PROSECUTION.

word of art. See TERM OF ART.

words actionable in themselves. (18c) Language that is libelous or slanderous per se. See slander per se under SLANDER; libel per se under LIBEL. [Cases: Libel and Slander ☞ 33.]

words of limitation. (16c) Language in a conveying instrument — often nonliteral language — describing the extent or quality of an estate. • For example, under long-standing principles of property law, the phrase "to A and her heirs" creates a fee simple in A but gives nothing to A's heirs. See LIMITATION (4). [Cases: Deeds ☞ 120–136; Wills ☞ 591, 597(4).]

"Words of limitation" is the phrase used to describe the words which limit (i.e., delimit or mark out) the estate to be taken. Thus in a conveyance today 'to A in fee simple,' the words 'in fee simple' are words of limitation, for they show what estate A is to have." Robert E. Megarry & M.P. Thompson, A Manual of the Law of Real Property 29 (6th ed. 1993).

words of negotiability. See NEGOTIABLE WORDS.

words of procreation (proh-kree-ay-shan). (18c) Language in a deed essential to create an estate tail, such as an estate "to A and the heirs of his body. [Cases: Deeds ☞ 127.]

words of purchase. (17c) Language in a deed or will designating the persons who are to receive the grant. • For example, the phrase "to A for life with a remainder to her heirs" creates a life estate in A and a remainder in A's heirs. See PURCHASE (2). [Cases: Deeds ☞ 105, 120–136; Wills ☞ 597(4).]

words of severance. In a grant of lands, words showing that the tenants were each to take a distinct share in the property as opposed to undivided portions. • Typical words of severance are share and share alike, to be divided among, equally, and between. [Cases: Deeds ☞ 123, 136.]

work, n. 1. Physical and mental exertion to attain an end, esp. as controlled by and for the benefit of an employer; labor.

additional work. 1. Work that results from a change or alteration in plans concerning the work required, usu. under a construction contract; added work necessary to meet the performance goals under an agreement. [Cases: Contracts ☞ 232(1).] 2. See extra work.

extra work. In construction law, work not required under the contract; something done or furnished in addition to the contract's requirements; work entirely outside and independent of the contract and not contemplated by it. • A contractor is entitled to charge for extra work consisting of labor and materials not contemplated by or subsumed within the original contract, at least to the extent that the property owner agrees to a change order. Materials and labor not contemplated by the contract, but that are required by later changes in the plans and specifications, are considered to be extra work. — Also termed additional work. [Cases: Contracts ☞ 232(1).]

heavy work. Work involving frequent lifting and carrying of large items. • Under the Social Security Administration regulations for describing a worker's physical limitations, heavy work involves lifting no more than 100 pounds, with frequent lifting or carrying of objects weighing up to 50 pounds. 20 CFR § 404. [Cases: Social Security and Public Welfare ☞ 140.40, 143.70–143.80.]

inherently dangerous work. Work that can be carried out only by the exercise of special skill and care and that involves a grave risk of serious harm if done unskilfully or carelessly. [Cases: Labor and Employment C=2872.]

light work. Work involving some limited lifting and moving. • Under the Social Security Administration regulations for describing a worker’s physical limitations, light work includes walking, standing, sitting while pushing or pulling arm or leg controls, and lifting no more than 20 pounds, with frequent lifting or carrying of objects that weigh up to 10 pounds. 20 CFR §404. [Cases: Social Security and Public Welfare C=140.40, 143.85.]

medium work. Work involving some frequent lifting and moving. • Under the Social Security Administration regulations for describing a worker’s physical limitations, medium work includes lifting up to 50 pounds, with frequent lifting or carrying of objects weighing up to 25 pounds. 20 CFR §404. [Cases: Social Security and Public Welfare C=140.40, 143.70–143.80.]

sedentary work. Work involving light lifting and only occasional walking or standing. • Under the Social Security Administration regulations for describing a worker’s physical limitations, sedentary work involves lifting of no more than ten pounds, occasionally carrying small items such as docket files and small tools, and occasional standing or walking. 20 CFR §404. [Cases: Social Security and Public Welfare C=140.40, 143.70–143.85.]

semi-skilled work. Work that may require some alertness and close attention, such as inspecting items or machinery for irregularities, or guarding property or people against loss or injury. 20 CFR §404.1568(b). • Also written semiskilled work. [Cases: Social Security and Public Welfare C=140.40, 143.70–143.85.]

skilled work. Work requiring the worker to use judgment, deal with the public, analyze facts and figures, or work with abstract ideas at a high level of complexity. 20 CFR §404. [Cases: Social Security and Public Welfare C=140.40, 143.70–143.85.]

unskilled work. Work requiring little or no judgment, and involving simple tasks that can be learned quickly on the job. 20 CFR §404. [Cases: Social Security and Public Welfare C=140.40, 143.70–143.85.]

very heavy work. Work involving frequent lifting of very large objects and frequent carrying of large objects. • Under the Social Security Administration regulations for describing a worker’s physical limitations, very heavy work involves lifting 100 pounds or more, and frequent lifting or carrying of objects weighing 30 pounds or more. 20 CFR §404.1567(e). [Cases: Social Security and Public Welfare C=140.40, 143.70–143.80.]

work of necessity. Work reasonably essential to the public’s economic, social, or moral welfare as determined by the community standards at a particular time, and (formerly) excepted from the operation of blue laws. See blue law. [Cases: Sunday C=7.]

2. Copyright. An original expression, in fixed or tangible form (such as paper, audiotape, or computer disk), that may be entitled to common-law or statutory copyright protection. • A work may take many different forms, including art, sculpture, literature, music, crafts, software, and photography. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property C=3.]

anonymous work. A work that, on copies or phonorecords, does not identify any natural person as the author. 17 USCA §101.

architectural work. The copyrightable design of a building, as fixed in tangible media such as plans, drawings, and the building itself. 17 USCA §102(8).

• Only the overall design is protected, not each design element. This category of works was added to U.S. law by the Berne Convention Implementation Act of 1988. It is one of eight categories eligible for copyright protection. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property C=6.]

artistic work. Any visual representation, such as a painting, drawing, map, photograph, sculpture, engraving, or architectural plan. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property C=6.]

audiovisual work. A work consisting of related images that are presented in a series, usu. with the aid of a machine, and accompanied by sound. • An example of an audiovisual work is a lecture illustrated with a film strip, or a movie with a soundtrack. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property C=10.1.]

collective work. (1870) 1. A publication (such as a periodical issue, anthology, or encyclopedia) in which several contributions, constituting separate and independent works in themselves, are assembled into a copyrightable whole. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property C=41(3).] 2. A selection and arrangement of brief portions of different movies, television shows, or radio shows into a single copyrightable work. • If the selecting and arranging involves any originality, the person who selects and arranges the clips may claim a copyright even if copyright cannot be claimed in the individual component parts. Cf. compilation (1). [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property C=12(3).]

"If a work is not joint and not derivative but nevertheless consists of works of authorship created by more than one person, it is a compilation of some sort except for the possibility that it is a work for hire. . . . If the component parts have an independent identity, that is, they are works of authorship, then the compilation is a collective work, a type of compilation." Arthur R. Miller & Michael H. Davis, Intellectual Property in a Nutshell 374 (2d ed. 1990).

composite work (kom-poz it). (1910) An original publication that relates to a variety of subjects and includes discrete selections from many authors. • Although the distinguishable parts are separately protectable, the owner of the composite work — not the individual authors — owns the renewal term, if any. 17 USCA §304(a). [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property C=38.]

creative work. See work of authorship.
derivative work. (1965) A copyrightable creation that is based on a preexisting product; a translation, musical arrangement, fictionalization, motion-picture version, abridgment, or any other recast or adapted form of an original work. • Only the holder of the copyright on the original form can produce or permit someone else to produce a derivative work. 17 USCA § 101. - Sometimes shortened to derivative. Cf. Compilation (1). [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 12(3).]

“A work created or developed by two or more people whose contributions blend inseparably or interdependently into the whole work. • The cocreators have equal legal rights to register and enjoy the copyright, but this does not affect any other contractually unequal ownership arrangements. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 41(3).]

joint work. A work created or developed by two or more people whose contributions blend inseparably or interdependently into the whole work. • The cocreators have equal legal rights to register and enjoy the copyright, but this does not affect any other contractually unequal ownership arrangements. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 41(3).]

literary work. (18c) A nonaudiovisual work that is expressed in verbal, numerical, or other symbols, such as words or musical notation, and embodied in some type of physical object. • Literary works are one of eight general categories that are eligible for copyright protection. 17 USCA § 102. Cf. Literary Composition. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 41(5).]

“A copyright protection extends to literary works which are defined as works, other than audiovisual works, expressed in words, numbers, or other verbal or numerical symbols or indicia, regardless of the nature of the material objects, such as books, periodicals, manuscripts, phonorecords, film, tapes, disks, or cards in which they are embodied. The term ‘literary work’ does not connote any criterion of literary merit or qualitative value and includes catalogs and directories, similar factual, reference or instructional works, compilations of data, computer data bases, and computer programs.” 18 Am. Jur. 2d Copyright and Literary Property § 25, at 360 (1985).

pictorial, graphic, and sculptural work. Two- or three-dimensional works of graphic, fine, or applied art that are eligible for copyright protection. • This is one of eight general classifications covered by copyright law. Examples include globes, architectural drawings, photographs, and models. 17 USCA § 102. — Abbr. PGS. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 41(6).] posthumous work. The product of an author who died before publication. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 33(3).]

pseudonymous work. A work done by an author who uses a fictitious name.

work for hire. A copyrightable work produced either by an employee within the scope of employment or by an independent contractor under a written agreement; esp., a work specially ordered or commissioned for use as (1) a contribution to a collective work, (2) a translation, (3) a supplementary work, (4) a part of a movie or other audiovisual work, (5) a compilation, (6) an instructional text, (7) a test, (8) answer material for a test, or (9) an atlas. • If the work is produced by an independent contractor, the parties must agree expressly in writing that the work will be a work for hire. The employer or commissioning party owns the copyright. 17 USCA § 101. - Also termed work made for hire. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 41(2).]

work of authorship. The product of creative expression, such as literature, music, art, and graphic designs. • Copyright protects a work of authorship if it meets three criteria. First, the work must be original, not a copy. Second, the work must be presented in a fixed medium, such as a computer disk, a canvas, or paper. Finally, some creativity must have been involved in the work’s creation, although the amount of creativity required depends on the particular work. — Also termed creative work. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 41(4).] work of the United States government. A work created by a U.S. government officer or employee in the course of performing official duties. • By statute, federal-government works may not be copyrighted. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 10(3).]

work, vb. 1. To exert effort; to perform, either physically or mentally (lawyers work long hours during trial). 2. To function properly; to produce a desired effect (the strategy worked). 3. Patents. To develop and use (a patented invention, esp. to make it commercially available) (the patentee failed to work the patent). • Failure to work a patent in a specified amount of time is grounds for a compulsory license in some countries. [Cases: Patents 191(1).]

“A patentee has the exclusive right to make, use, or sell the invention. 35 U.S.C.A. § 154. The right includes the right to refrain from making, using, or selling the invention. In many foreign countries, the inventor is obliged to ‘work’ the patent and if he does not do so, he can be required to grant a compulsory license to others who wish to exploit the invention. But an American patentee is under no such duty, although there are antitrust implications involved in the failure to work a patent.” Arthur R. Miller & Michael H. Davis, Intellectual Property in a Nutshell 128-29 (2d ed. 1990).

work and labor. Hist. A common count in an action of assumpsit for the work and labor performed and materials furnished by the plaintiff. See Assumpsit. [Cases: Assumpsit, Action of 5(5).]

worker. 1. One who labors to attain an end; esp., a person employed to do work for another. 2. A person who offers to perform services for compensation in the employ of Worker Adjustment and Retraining Notification Act. A federal law that requires an employer to provide notice of a plant closing or mass layoff, 60 days before the closing or layoff, to the employees, the state-dislocated-workers unit, and the chief elected official of the unit of local government where the plant closing or layoff is to occur. 29 USC A §§ 2101-2109. — Abbr. WARN. [Cases: Labor and Employment C= 3202.]

workers' compensation. A system of providing benefits to an employee for injuries occurring in the scope of employment. • Most workers' compensation statutes both hold the employer strictly liable and bar the employee from suing the employer in tort. — Abbr. WC. — Also termed workmen's compensation; employers' liability. [Cases: Workers' Compensation C= 311.]

"Workers' compensation laws were designed to provide employees with expansive protection against the consequences of employment-related injuries. Injured workers no longer had to establish negligence attributable to their employer in order to obtain legal redress. They merely had to demonstrate that their conditions arose out of and during the course of their employment." Mark A. Rothstein et al., Employment Law §§ 7.3, at 406 (1994).

workers' compensation act. A statute by which employers are made responsible for bodily harm to their workers arising out of and in the course of their employment, regardless of the fault of either the employee or the employer. [Cases: Workers' Compensation C= 311, 6.]

workers' compensation board. An agency that reviews cases arising under workers' compensation statutes and administers the related rules and regulations. — Also termed workers' compensation commission. [Cases: Workers' Compensation C= 1076-1096.10.]

"Workers' compensation boards . . . are tribunals . . . of limited and special jurisdiction and have only such authority and power as have been conferred upon them by express grant, or by implication as necessary and incidental to the full exercise of their authority. The functions of such agencies may include the settlement of disputes with respect to the right to and the amount of compensation, the supervision of voluntary settlements or agreements, the collection and administration of compensation funds, and the supervision and regulation of matters pertaining to compensation insurance." 82 Am. Jur. 2d Workers' Compensation § 56, at 65 (1992).

A corporation's net physical value, calculated by subtracting the liabilities from the value of the tangible assets then dividing by the number of outstanding shares.

A measure of one's wealth, usu. calculated as the excess of total assets over total liabilities. — Also termed net assets. [Cases: Internal Revenue ⊆ 4530.]

tangible worth. The amount of wealth held in the form of physical, valuable assets, such as cash and equipment.

worthier-title doctrine. (1935) 1. Hist. The common-law doctrine that if a beneficiary of a will would receive an identical interest as an heir under the laws of intestacy, the person takes the interest as an heir rather than as a beneficiary. • The doctrine has been abolished in most states. [Cases: Wills ⊆ 713.] 2. Property. The doctrine that favors a grantor's intent by construing a grant as a reversion in the grantor instead of as a remainder in the grantor's heirs. — Also termed doctrine of worthier title. See remainder; reversion.

worthieth blood. n. Hist. Of or relating to males, because of the preference given them in the laws of descent. See PRIMOGENTURE.

"Thus sons shall be admitted before daughters; or, as our male lawgivers have somewhat uncomplaisantly expressed it, the worthiest blood shall be preferred. As if John Stiles nath two sons, Matthew and Gilbert, and two daughters, Margaret and Charlotte, and dies; first Matthew, and (in case of his death without issue) then Gilbert shall be admitted to the succession in preference to both the daughters." 2 William Blackstone. Commentaries on the Laws of England 213 (1766).

worthless, adj. Totally lacking worth; of no use or value.

worthless check. See bad check under check.

worthless security. See SECURITY.

wreckfree, adj. (Of a port, etc.) exempt from the forfeiture of shipwrecked goods and vessels to the Crown.

writ (rit). (bef. 12c) A court's written order, in the name of a state or other competent legal authority, commanding the addressee to do or refrain from doing some specified act. [Cases: Injunction ⊆ 202.]

"[Writs] have a long history. We can trace their formal origin to the Anglo-Saxon formulae by which the king used to communicate his pleasure to persons and courts. The Anglo-Norman writs, which we meet with after the Conquest, are substantially the Anglo-Saxon writs turned into Latin. But what is new is the much greater use made of them, owing to the increase of royal power which came with the Conquest." W.S. Holdsworth, Sources and Literature of English Law 20 (1925).

alias writ. (18c) An additional writ issued after another writ of the same kind in the same case. • It derives its name from a Latin phrase that formerly appeared in alias writs: sicut alias praecipimus, meaning "as we at another time commanded." Cf. alias execution under EXECUTION. [Cases: Process ⊆ 45.]

alternative writ. (1827) A common-law writ commanding the person against whom it is issued either to do a specific thing or to show cause why the court should not order it to be done. [Cases: Mandamus ⊆ 158.]

close writ. Hist. 1. A royal writ sealed because the contents were not deemed appropriate for public inspection. Cf. patent writ; clause rolls. 2. A writ directed to a sheriff instead of to a lord.

concurrent writ. A duplicate of an original writ (esp. a summons), issued either at the same time as the original writ or at any time while the original writ is valid.

counterpart writ. (1841) A copy of an original writ, to be sent to a court in another county where the defendant is located.
extraordinary writ. (17c) A writ issued by a court exercising unusual or discretionary power. • Examples are certiorari, habeas corpus, mandamus, and prohibition. — Also termed prerogative writ. Cf. extraordinary relief under relief. [Cases: Courts <= 207.]

ground writ. Hist. A writ issued in a county having venue of an action in order to allow a writ of capias ad satisfaciendum or of fieri facias to be executed in a county where the defendant or the defendant's property was found. • These two writs could not be executed in a county other than the county having venue of the action until a ground writ and then a testatum writ were first issued. This requirement was abolished in 1852. Cf. testatum.

judicial writ. (16c) 1. A writ issuing from the court to which the original writ was returnable; a writ issued under the private seal of the court and not under the great seal of England. Cf. original writ. 2. Any writ issued by a court.

junior writ. (1839) A writ issued at a later time than a similar writ, such as a later writ issued by a different party or a later writ on a different claim against the same defendant.

optional writ. (18c) At common law, an original writ issued when the plaintiff seeks specific damages, such as payment of a liquidated debt. • The writ commands the defendant either to do a specified thing or to show why the thing has not been done.

original writ. (16c) A writ commencing an action and directing the defendant to appear and answer. • In the United States, this writ has been largely superseded by the summons. At common law, this type of writ was a mandatory letter issuing from the court of chancery under the great seal, and in the king's name, directed to the sheriff of the county where the injury was alleged to have occurred, containing a summary statement of the cause of complaint, and requiring the sheriff in most cases to command the defendant to satisfy the claim or else appear in court to account for not satisfying it. — Sometimes shortened to original. See summons. [Cases: Process <= 8.]

patent writ (pay-tant). Hist. An open writ; one not closed or sealed up. Cf. close writ.

peremptory writ (per-emp-to-ree). (18c) At common law, an original writ issued when the plaintiff seeks only general damages, as in an action for trespass. • The writ, which is issued only after the plaintiff gives security for costs, directs the sheriff to have the defendant appear in court. [Cases: Mandamus <= 179.]

pluries writ. See pluries.

prerogative writ. See extraordinary writ.

testatum writ (tes-tay-tam). See testatum.

vicontiel writ (vi-kon-tee-al). Hist. A writ triable in the county court. • In the 13th–14th centuries, civil litigation could originate in the county court either by oral plaint or by a writ from the Chancery ordering the sheriff to do justice in a case. The writ that began such a proceeding was called vicontiel because it was addressed to the sheriff. See vicontiel (2).

"Vicontiel writs were of two sorts, the one founded on Tort, the other on Contracts. The vicontiel writs adapted for torts, were those of trespass, replegiari facias, nuisance, and others of the like nature; and those of matters of contract were called writs of justicies, which was a command to the sheriff to do justice between the parties . . . . " 1 George Crompton, Practice Common-Placed: Rules and Cases of Practice in the Courts of King's Bench and Common Pleas vii–viii (3d ed. 1787).

writ of covenant. Hist. A writ for one claiming damages as a result of a breach of a promise under seal or other covenant. — Also termed breve de conventione (breev or bree-vee deek kan-ven-chee-oh-nee).

"The writ of covenant (breve de conventione) is not mentioned by Glanvill; but it appears within a short time after the publication of his book and already in the early years of Henry III. It can be had 'as of course,' at all events when the tenement that is in question is of small value. Before Henry's death it has become a popular writ . . . . The great majority of actions of covenant are brought merely in order that they may be compromised; we doubt whether any principle was involved in the choice; but may infer that the procedure instituted by this writ was cheap and expedient for those who wished to get to their final concord."

writ of debt. See DEBT (4).

writ of error. (15c) 1. A writ issued by an appellate court directing a lower court to deliver the record in the case for review. Cf. ASSIGNMENT OF ERROR. [Cases: Appeal and Error $5, 398.]

"The writ of error is the most common of all the forms of remedial process available to an unsuccessful party after a final determination of the action, and is in common use in this country at the present time, where the common-law modes of procedure are followed. Its object . . . is to obtain a reversal of the judgment, either by reason of some error in fact affecting the validity and regularity of the legal decision itself, or on account of some mistake or error in law, apparent upon the face of the record, from which the judgment appears to have been given for the wrong party." Benjamin J. Shipman, Handbook of Common-Law Pleading § 337, at 338 (Henry Winthrop Ballantine ed., 3d ed. 1923).

writ of error coram nobis. See CORAM NOBIS.

writ of error coram vobis. See CORAM VOBIS.

2. Hist. A writ issued by a chancery court, at the request of a party who was unsuccessful at trial, directing the trial court either to examine the record itself or to send it to another court of appellate jurisdiction to be examined, so that some alleged error in the proceedings may be corrected.

writ of prevention. (17c) A writ to prevent the filing of a lawsuit. See QUIA TIMET.

writ of privilege. Hist. An action to enforce or maintain a privilege, usu. one granted by statute or by a court. ● Traditionally, the writ was used to protect legislators from arrest in civil suits during a legislative session. Parties and witnesses who did not reside within a court's jurisdiction were also privileged against service of process in civil suits while attending the court and while traveling to or from it.

"The privilege of a suitor or witness to be exempt from service of process while without the jurisdiction of his residence for the purpose of attending court in an action to which he is a party, or in which he is to be sworn as a witness, is a very ancient one. It has always been held to extend to every proceeding of a judicial nature taken in or emanating from a duly-constituted tribunal which directly relates to the trial of the issues involved. It is not simply a personal privilege, but it is also the privilege of the court, and is deemed necessary for the maintenance of its authority and dignity and in order to promote the due and efficient administration of justice. At common law a writ of privilege or protection would be granted to the party or witness by the court in which the action was pending, which would be respected by all other courts.... [T]he writ may still be granted by courts possessing a common law jurisdiction; but while the granting of the writ is proper, it is not necessary for the enjoyment of the privilege, and the only office which it can is to afford convenient and authentic notice to those about to do what would be a violation of the privilege, and to set it forth and command due respect to it. The tendency has been not to restrict, but to enlarge, the right of privilege so as to afford full protection to parties and witnesses from all forms of civil process during their attendance at court, and for a reasonable time in going and returning." Parker v. Marco 32 N.E. 989, 989 (N.Y. 1893) (citations omitted).

wrong, n. (bef. 12c) Breach of one's legal duty; violation of another's legal right. [Cases: Torts C–>107.] — wrong, vb.

"A wrong may be described, in the largest sense, as anything done or omitted contrary to legal duty, considered in so far as it gives rise to liability." Frederick Pollock, A First Book of Jurisprudence 68 (1896).

"A wrong is simply a wrong act — an act contrary to the rule of right and justice. A synonym of it is injury, in its true and primary sense of injuria (that which is contrary to jure) . . . .", John Salmond, Jurisprudence 227 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

civil wrong. (17c) A violation of noncriminal law, such as a tort, a breach of contract or trust, a breach of statutory duty, or a defect in performing a public duty; the breach of a legal duty treated as the subject matter of a civil proceeding. See Tort (1). Cf. Crime.

continuing wrong. (1846) An ongoing wrong that is capable of being corrected by specific enforcement. • An example is the nonpayment of a debt.

tntiopnal wrong. (18c) A wrong in which the mens rea amounts to intention, purpose, or design. — Also termed willful wrong.

legal wrong. (18c) An act that is a violation of the law; an act authoritatively prohibited by a rule of law.

moral wrong. (18c) An act that is contrary to the rule of natural justice. — Also termed natural wrong.

personal wrong. An invasion of a personal right.

positive wrong. (18c) A wrongful act willfully committed.

private wrong. (16c) An offense committed against a private person and dealt with at the instance of the person injured.

public wrong. (16c) An offense committed against the state or the community at large, and dealt with in a proceeding to which the state is itself a party. • Not all public wrongs are crimes. For example, a person that breaches a contract with the government commits a public wrong, but the offense is a civil one, not a criminal one.

real wrong. An injury to the freehold.

transitory wrong. (2004) A wrong that, once committed, belongs to the irrevocable past. • An example is defamation.

willful wrong. See intentional wrong.

wrong of negligence. (1902) A wrong in which the mens rea is a form of mere carelessness, as opposed to wrongful intent.

wrong of strict liability. (1986) A wrong in which a mens rea is not required because neither wrongful intent nor culpable negligence is a necessary condition of responsibility.

wrongdoer, n. (15c) One who violates the law <both criminals and tortfeasors are wrongdoers>. — wrong-doing, n.

wrongful, adj. (14c) 1. Characterized by unfairness or injustice <wrongful military invasion>. 2. Contrary to law; unlawful <wrongful termination>. 3. (Of a person) not entitled to the position occupied <wrongful possessor>. — wrongfully, adv.

wrongful act. See wrongful conduct under Conduct.

wrongful adoption. 1. An adoption in which the adoption agency fails to provide adoptive parents with full or accurate information regarding the child's physical or psychological background. • The adoptive parents normally do not seek to nullify the adoption. Rather, they seek damages, usu. for medical care and for emotional distress. 2. An adoptive parent's legal claim against an adoption agency for not fully or accurately disclosing the child's physical or psychological background. Cf. ABROGATION OF ADOPTION. [Cases: Infants ☞ 17.]

wrongful-birth action. (1972) A lawsuit brought by parents against a doctor for failing to advise them prospectively about the risks of their having a child with birth defects. [Cases: Health ☞ 687.]

wrongful-conception action. See WRONGFUL-PREGNANCY ACTION.

wrongful conduct. See CONDUCT.

wrongful-death action. (1926) A lawsuit brought on behalf of a decedent's survivors for their damages resulting from a tortious injury that caused the decedent's death. — Also termed death action; death case. Cf. SURVIVAL ACTION. [Cases: Death ☞ 7-33.]

wrongful-death statute. (1904) A statute authorizing a decedent's personal representative to bring a wrongful-death action for the benefit of certain beneficiaries. — Formerly also termed death-damage statute. [Cases: Death ☞ 11.]

wrongful discharge. See DISCHARGE (7).

wrongful-discharge action. (1957) A lawsuit brought by an ex-employee against the former employer, alleging that the termination of employment violated a contract or was illegal. — Also termed wrongful-termination action. [Cases: Labor and Employment ☞ 850.]

wrongful dishonor, n. (1895) A refusal to accept or pay (a negotiable instrument) when it is properly presented and is payable. Cf. DISHONOR (1).

wrongful-eviction action. A lawsuit brought by a former tenant or possessor of real property against one who has put the plaintiff out of possession, alleging that the eviction was illegal. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant ☞ 180, 278, 278.17, 292, 318.]

wrongful garnishment. See GARNISHMENT.

wrongful levy. See LEVY.

wrongful-life action. (1963) A lawsuit brought by or on behalf of a child with birth defects, alleging that but for the doctor-defendant's negligent advice, the parents would not have conceived the child or, if they had, would have aborted the fetus to avoid the pain and suffering resulting from the child's congenital defects. • Most jurisdictions reject these claims. [Cases: Health ☞ 687.]

wrongful-pregnancy action. (1979) A lawsuit brought by a parent for damages resulting from a pregnancy following a failed sterilization. — Also termed wrongful-conception action. [Cases: Health ☞ 686.]

wrongful process. See ABUSE OF PROCESS.

wrongful-termination action. See WRONGFUL-DISCHARGE ACTION.

wrong of negligence. See WRONG.

wrong of strict liability. See WRONG.

wrong verdict. See verdict contrary to law under VERDICT.

WTO. See WORLD TRADE ORGANIZATION.

wyte (wit). Hist. 1. An immunity from an amercement. See AMERCEMENT. 2. See wite.
X. abbr. 1. ex dividend. 2. ex rights. 3. ex distribution. 4. ex warrants.

X. 1. A mark serving as the signature of a person who is physically handicapped or illiterate. • The signer's name usu. appears near the mark, and if the mark is to be notarized as a signature, two signing witnesses are ordinarily required in addition to the notary public. [Cases: Signatures ≥ 5.] 2. A symbol equivalent to "by" when used in giving dimensions, as in 3 x 5 inches. 3. A mark placed on a document (such as an application) to indicate a selection, such as "yes" or "no"; esp., a mark on a ballot to indicate a vote.

XD. abbr. ex dividend.

XDIS. abbr. ex distribution.

xenodochium (zen-a-da-kI-am or -dok ee-am), n. [fr. Greek xenos "a guest" + dochein "to receive"] Roman law. 1. An inn. 2. A hospital. • This was a charitable institution to which donations and legacies might validly be given. — Also termed xenodochion; xenodochium; xenodochy.

X-patent. Patents. An early U.S. patent, granted before the numbering system set up in the Patent Act of 1836 and so named because an X was added to the numbers of existing patents to avoid duplicate numbers.

XQ. See cross-question under question (1).

XR. abbr. ex-rights.

XW. abbr. ex-warrants.

xylon (zI-Ion), n. [fr. Greek xulon "wood"] Archaic. A Greek punishment apparatus similar to stocks.

XYY-chromosome defense. Criminal law. A defense, usu. asserted as the basis for an insanity plea, whereby a male defendant argues that his criminal behavior is due to the genetic abnormality of having an extra Y chromosome, which causes him to have uncontrollable aggressive impulses. • Most courts have rejected this defense because its scientific foundations are uncertain. — Also termed XYY defense. See insanity defense.

"As one commentator has suggested ... 'an attorney defending an XYY individual will be required to call upon both a geneticist and a psychiatrist to give expert testimony. The geneticist's role would be to testify with respect to the individual's genetic structure, any distinguishing characteristics which are relevant to an insanity defense, and the result of family studies designed to determine the influence of genetics and environment on the development of this individual. The psychiatrist's testimony would focus upon the defendant's mental capacity or condition.' But in the absence of sound medical support for an XYY defense, courts are understandably unsympathetic to defense efforts to obtain such expert testimony." Wayne R. LaFave & Austin W. Scott Jr., Criminal Law § 4.8, at 380 (2d ed. 1986) (quoting Note, 57 Geo. L.J. 892, 902-03 (1969)).

XYY syndrome. The abnormal presence of an extra Y chromosome in a male, theoretically resulting in increased aggressiveness and antisocial behavior sometimes resulting in criminal conduct. See XYY-chromosome defense.
Y2K warranty. abbr. Year 2000 warranty; a warranty that software, hardware, or a product having computer hardware or software components will function properly on and after January 1, 2000. • These warranties were common in the late 1990s.

yank-cheating, n. The illegal practice of inserting paper money into a vending machine, then pulling the money out again after the machine has recognized it, thereby retaining the cash and unlawfully obtaining merchandise.

yardstick theory. Antitrust. A method of determining damages for lost profits (and sometimes overcharges) whereby a corporate plaintiff identifies a company similar to the plaintiff but without the impact of the antitrust violation. Cf. before-and-after theory; market-share theory.

"To the extent that either the markets or firms being compared are dissimilar, the yardstick theory will not produce a trustworthy estimate of what the plaintiff would have earned but for the defendant's conduct. The method therefore works best in markets that are both local and relatively homogeneous." Herbert Hovenkamp, Economics and Federal Antitrust Law § 16.7, at 454 (1985).

yea and nay (yay / nay). Yes and no. • In old records, this was a mere assertion and denial without the necessity of an oath.

year. 1. Twelve calendar months beginning January 1 and ending December 31. — Also termed calendar year. 2. A consecutive 365-day period beginning at any point; a span of twelve months. [Cases: Time C=4.]

fiscal year. An accounting period of 12 consecutive months <the company's fiscal year is October 1 to September 30>. • A fiscal year is often different from the calendar year, esp. for tax purposes. — Also termed fiscal period.

half-year. In legal computation, a period of 182 days.

natural year. Hist. The period of 365 days and about 6 hours, or the time it takes the earth to orbit the sun.

tax year. The period used for computing federal or state income-tax liability, usu. either the calendar year or a fiscal year of 12 months ending on the last day of a month other than December. — Also termed taxable year. [Cases: Internal Revenue C=3075-3093; Cases: Taxation C=3509, 3538.] Year 2000 warranty. See Y2K WARRANTY.

year and a day. The common-law time limit fixed for various purposes, such as claiming rights, exemptions, or property (such as rights to wreckage or estrays), or for prosecuting certain acts — so called because a year was formerly counted to include the first and last day, meaning that a year from January 1 was December 31, so a year and a day would then mean a full year from January 1 through January 1. — Also termed year and day; (formerly in Scots law) zeir and day. See YEAR-AND-A-DAY RULE; YEAR, DAY, AND WASTE.

year-and-a-day rule. (1876) Criminal law. The common-law principle that an act causing death is not homicide if the death occurs more than a year and a day after the act was committed. • In Latin, the phrase year and a day was commonly rendered annus et dies. [Cases: Homicide C=510.]

"It has long been the rule that no one can be convicted of the murder or manslaughter of another person who does not die within a year and a day of the blow received or other cause of death. 'Day' was here added merely to indicate that the 365th day after that of the injury must be included. Such an indication was rendered necessary by an old rule (now obsolete) that, in criminal law, in reckoning a period 'from' the doing of any act, the period was (in favour of prisoners) to be taken as beginning on the very day when this act was done." J. W. Cecil Turner, Kenny's Outlines of Criminal Law 105 (16th ed. 1952).

"The phrase 'year and a day,' in this test [for proving causa tion of a person's death], means no more than a year. The accepted method of computing time today is by excluding the first day and including the last. Thus a year from January first is the first day of the following January. In ancient times, however, there was a tendency to include both the first day and the last day so that a year from January first was thought of as the thirty-first of the following December, and 'the day was added that there might be a whole year.' The use of this peculiar phrase to mean just a year in the homicide cases has found expression in some of the statutes. Other enactments have wisely dropped this ancient jingle." Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 778 (3d ed. 1982).

"Several centuries ago, when doctors knew very little about medicine, the judges created an absolute rule of law: one cannot be guilty of murder if the victim lives for a year and a day after the blow. The difficulty in proving that the blow caused the death after so long an interval was obviously the basis of the rule. Now that doctors know infinitely more, it seems strange that the year-and-a-day rule should survive to the present, but it has done so in most of the American states, either by judicial decision or by statute." Wayne R. LaFave & Austin W. Scott Jr., Criminal Law § 3.12, at 299 (2d ed. 1986).

year and day. See YEAR AND A DAY.

Year Books. Hist. Books of cases anonymously and fairly regularly reported covering primarily the period from the reign of Edward I to the time of Henry VIII. • The title "Year Books" derives from their being grouped under the regnal years of the sovereigns in whose reigns the reported cases were cited. The reports were probably originally prepared by law teachers and students and later by professional reporters or scribes. — Also written Year-Books; year-books; yearbooks. — Also termed terms. Cf. abbreviatio placitorum.

"[From 1300 there is a continuous stream of reports of arguments in the common pleas. The reports were written in Anglo-French, the language of courtly speech. Their authorship is unknown, and they are referred to by the generic name 'year-books’ . . . . If we have to account for their beginning, the most likely explanation is that they arose from a case-method of instruction in the law school which served the apprentices of the Bench before the emergence of the Inner Court. . . . For the same reason, the contemporary value of the earliest reports lay not in their historical authenticity as precedents but in the ideas and suggestions which they contained . . . . Once the age of experiment was over, the reports settled into a more uniform and at times apparently single series . . . . The year-books did not end at any fixed date. What has usually been taken as their end is the result of two concurrent factors: the advent of printing, and the practice of identifying reports by the name of the author."

year, day, and waste. Hist. A right of the Crown to the profits and waste for a year and a day of the land of persons convicted of petty treason or felony (unless the lord made redemption), after which the Crown had to restore the property to the lord of the fee. The right was abrogated by the Corruption of Blood Act of 1814. — Also termed (in Law French) ann, jour, et wast; (in Law Latin) annus, dies, et vastum.

year-end dividend. See dividend.

year in mourning. See annus luctus.

Year of Our Lord. See anno domini.

year-to-year tenancy. See periodic tenancy under tenancy.

yeas and nays. The affirmative and negative votes on a bill or resolution before a deliberative assembly. See roll-call vote under vote (4). [Cases: Statutes C=19.]

yellow-dog contract. An employment contract forbidding membership in a labor union. • Such a contract is generally illegal under federal and state law.

yeoman (yoh-man). 1. Hist. An attendant in a royal or noble household. 2. Hist. A commoner; a freeholder (under the rank of gentleman) who holds land yielding 40 shillings per year.

"A yeoman is he that hath free land of forty shillings by the year, who was thereby qualified to serve on juries, vote for knights of the shire, and do any other act, where the law requires one that is probus et lealissimus homo [an upright and law-abiding man]." — William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 394 (1765).

4. A petty officer performing clerical work in the U.S. Navy. — Also sometimes spelled yoman.

yeoman of the guard. A member of a corps of officers whose primary duties are to ceremonially guard the English royal household. • A yeoman is usu. at least six feet tall, is of the best rank under the gentry, and is generally exempt from arrest on civil process. — Also termed yeoman of the guard of the royal household.

yeomanry (yoh-man-ree). 1. The collective body of yeomen. 2. Volunteer cavalry units in Great Britain, later transferred to the Territorial Army.

yeven (yev-an or yiv-an). Hist. Given; dated. — Also spelled yeoven (yoh-van).

Yick Wo doctrine (yik woh). (1958) The principle that a law or ordinance giving a person or entity absolute discretion to give or withhold permission to carry on a lawful business violates the 14th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution. Yick Wo v. Hopkins, 118 U.S. 356, 6 S.Ct. 1064 (1886).

yield, n. (bef. 12c) Profit expressed as a percentage of the investment. — Also termed yield on investment; return. See rate of return.

coupon yield. The annual interest paid on a security (esp. a bond) divided by the security's par value. — Also termed nominal yield.

current yield. The annual interest paid on a security (esp. a bond) divided by the security's current market price.

discount yield. The yield on a security sold at a discount.

earnings yield. The earnings per share of a security divided by its market price. • The higher the ratio, the better the investment yield. — Also termed earnings-price ratio. Cf. price-earnings ratio.

net yield. The profit or loss on an investment after deducting all appropriate costs and loss reserves.

nominal yield. See coupon yield.

yield, vb. 1. To give up, relinquish, or surrender (a right, etc.) <yield the floor>. 2. Parliamentary law. (Of a motion) to give way to a higher-ranking motion. Cf. precedence (3).

"If two motions 'A' and 'B' are related under rules of parliamentary procedure in such a way that motion 'B' can be made while motion 'A' is pending and, when stated by the chair, can thus temporarily replace 'A' as the immediately pending question, motion 'B' takes precedence over (or takes precedence of) motion 'A,' and motion 'A' yields to motion 'B.' A secondary motion thus takes precedence over the main motion, and a main motion takes precedence over nothing and yields to all applicable secondary motions." — Henry M. Robert, Robert's Rules of Order Newly Revised § 5, at 57–58 (10th ed. 2000).

3. Hist. To perform a service owed by a tenant to a lord <yield and pay>. See yielding and paying.

yield on investment. See yield.

yield spread. The differences in yield between various securities issues.

yield to maturity. The rate of return from an investment if the investment is held until it matures. Abbr. YTM. Cf. time value.

yokelet (yohk-lit), n. Hist. A small farm requiring only one yoke of oxen to till it.

yoman. See yeoman.

York, custom of. Hist. A custom prevalent in York whereby a male intestate's effects were divided according to the doctrine of pars rationabilis ("a reasonable part") — that is, one-third each to the widow, children, and administrator, one-half to the administrator if the man was married but had no children or was single but had children, or all to the administrator if the man was single with no children.

York, Statute of. Hist. An English statute passed in York in the twelfth year of Edward II's reign, and including provisions on the subject of attorneys, witnesses, and the taking of inquests by nisi prius.

York-Antwerp rules. Maritime law. A set of rules relating to the settlement of maritime losses and disputes arising from bills of lading. • Although these rules have no statutory authority, they are incorporated into almost all bills of lading. The Rules are maintained and updated by the Comité Maritime International (CMI). [Cases: Shipping C–186, 187, 197]

younger-generation devise. See devise.

young offender. See youthful offender under offender.

your Honor. (16c) A title customarily used when directly addressing a judge or other high official. Cf. his honor.

your witness. See take the witness.

Youth Correction Authority Act. A model act, promulgated by the American Law Institute in 1940, that proposed the creation of central state commissions responsible for setting up appropriate agencies that would determine the proper treatment for each youthful offender committed to the agency by the courts. • The Act is noteworthy for its emphasis on rehabilitating juvenile offenders, as opposed to punishing them.

youth court. See teen court under court.

youthful offender. 1. See offender. 2. juvenile delinquent.

youth shelter. See shelter.

yo-yo stock. See volatile stock under stock.

YTM. abbr. yield to maturity.
zap. See intersubjective zap.
ZBA. abbr. zero-bracket amount.
Z-bond. See accrual bond under bond (3). zealous witness. See witness.
zeir and day (yeer). See year and day. • Zeir is an obsolete graphic variant of year.
zero-bracket amount. A tax deduction formerly available to all individual taxpayers, regardless of whether they itemized their deductions. • In 1944 this was replaced by the standard deduction. — Abbr. ZBA. See standard deduction under deduction.
zero-coupon bond. See bond (3).
zero-coupon security. See security.
zero-rate mortgage. See mortgage.
zero-tolerance policy. (1990) An established plan or method of action stating that certain acts will not be permitted or condoned. • School districts often have a zero-tolerance policy regarding the use of drugs and alcohol on school premises or at school-sponsored functions. In 1995 Congress enacted a nationwide zero-tolerance statute to combat underage drinking.
ZIFT. abbr. ZYGOTE INTRAFALLOPIAN TRANSFER.
zipper clause. Contracts. A contractual provision that operates both as an integration clause and as a no-oral-modification clause. See integration clause; no-oral-modification clause.
 "[A] zipper clause' . . . so called because the combination of the integration clause and the no-oral-modification clause is intended to foreclose claims of any representations outside the written contract . . . . " Pace v. Honolulu Disposal Serv., 227 F.3d 1150, 1159 (9th Cir. 2000).
zone. 1. An area that is different or is distinguished from surrounding areas (zone of danger). 2. An area in a city or town that, through zoning regulations, is under particular restrictions as to building size, land use, and the like (the capitol is at the center of the height-restriction zone). [Cases: Zoning and Planning C=:>31.]
floating zone. An amount of land assigned for a particular use but in no particular location. • An applicant who owns the specified amount of land can apply for a use permit in a specific location. See floating zoning under zoning.
holding zone. Temporary, low-density zoning used until a community determines how the area should be rezoned.
zone-of-danger rule. (1966) Torts. The doctrine allowing the recovery of damages for negligent infliction of emotional distress if the plaintiff was both located in the dangerous area created by the defendant's negligence and frightened by the risk of harm. [Cases: Damages C=:>57.10, 57.16(2), 57.23(2), 57.27.]
zone of employment. Workers' compensation. The physical place of employment within which an employee, if injured there, can receive compensation. Cf. course of employment; scope of employment. [Cases: Workers' Compensation C=:>604–618, 704–770.]
zone of interests. (1969) The class or type of interests or concerns that a statute or constitutional guarantee is intended to regulate or protect. • To have standing to challenge a ruling (esp. of an administrative agency), the plaintiff must show that the specific injury suffered comes within the zone of interests protected by the statute on which the ruling was based. [Cases: Action C=:>13; Administrative Law and Procedure C=:>666; Federal Civil Procedure C=:>103.2.] zone of privacy. (1964) Constitutional law. A range of fundamental privacy rights that are implied in the express guarantees of the Bill of Rights. See penumbra: right of privacy. [Cases: Constitutional Law C=:>1210–1275.]
zone search. See search.
zoning, n. (1912) The legislative division of a region, esp. a municipality, into separate districts with different regulations within the districts for land use, building size, and the like. [Cases: Zoning and Planning C=:>1, 4.] = zone, vb.
aesthetic zoning. Zoning designed to preserve the aesthetic features or values of an area. [Cases: Zoning and Planning C=:>36.]
bonus zoning. See incentive zoning.
cluster zoning. Zoning that favors planned-unit development by allowing a modification in lot size and frontage requirements under the condition that other land in the development be set aside for parks, schools, or other public needs. — Also termed density zoning. See planned-unit development. [Cases: Zoning and Planning C=:>85, 245.]
conditional zoning. Zoning in which a governmental body (without definitively committing itself) grants a zoning change subject to conditions that are usu. not imposed on similarly zoned property. [Cases: Zoning and Planning C=:>382, 382.1.]

"Conditions imposed are designed to protect adjacent land from the loss of use value which might occur if the newly authorized use was permitted without restraint of any kind. Thus, conditional zoning seeks to minimize the potentially deleterious effect of a zone change on neighboring properties through reasonably conceived conditions which harmonize the landowner's need for rezoning with the contextual zoning. An approach to zoning that considers appropriate use of a lot based on the scale and types of nearby buildings. • Contextual zoning has been used, for example, to prevent the destruction of older, smaller residences to make room for larger houses disparagingly called "monster homes" or "mc mansions." in established neighborhoods.

contract zoning. 1. Zoning according to an agreement, by which the landowner agrees to certain restrictions or conditions in exchange for more favorable zoning treatment. • This type of contract zoning is usu. considered an illegal restraint of the government’s police power, because by private agreement, the government has committed itself to a particular type of zoning. 2. Rezoning of property to a less restrictive use when property is located in a more restrictive zone. • Sometimes used, for example, to prevent the destruction of older, smaller residences to make room for larger houses disparagingly called "monster homes" or "mc mansions." in established neighborhoods.

cumulative zoning. A method of zoning in which any use permitted in a higher-use, less intensive zone is permissible in a lower-use, more intensive zone. • For example, under this method, a house could be built in an industrial zone but a factory could not be built in a residential zone.

density zoning. See cluster zoning.

Euclidean zoning (yoo-klid ee-an). Zoning by specific and uniform geographical division. • The purpose of Euclidean zoning is to ensure a municipality’s orderly development by detailing what uses are permitted and where, and seeing that conflicting land uses are clearly separated. Its name comes from the Supreme Court case that approved it: Village of Euclid v. Ambler Realty Co., 273 U.S. 365, 47 S.Ct. 114 (1926). — Also termed use zoning. Cf. non-Euclidean zoning. [Cases: Zoning and Planning § 35, 162.]

"Operating from the premise that everything has its place, zoning is the comprehensive division of a city into different use zones. Use zoning is also known as Euclidean zoning, taking the name from the leading case of Euclid v. Ambler Realty Co., which upheld its validity. ... In the typical zoning ordinance each zone has three varieties of uses: permitted, accessory and conditional. Ordinances may also specifically prohibit some uses." Julian Conrad Juergensmeyer & Thomas E. Roberts, Land Use Planning and Development Regulation Law § 4.2, at 69 (2003).

exclusionary zoning. Zoning that excludes a specific class or type of business from a district. [Cases: Zoning and Planning § 35, 162.]

floating zoning. Zoning that allows land for particular uses but does not specify the geographic locations for those uses. • This is a type of non-Euclidean zoning. It allows a zoning board to make individual rulings on every application for a particular use and take into account the community’s current feelings about where or if the use should be allowed. See non-Euclidean zoning.

incentive zoning. A relaxation in zoning restrictions (such as density limits) that offers an incentive to a developer to provide certain public benefits (such as building low-income housing units). — Also termed bonus zoning. [Cases: Zoning and Planning § 35, 162.]

interim zoning. Temporary emergency zoning pending revisions to existing ordinances or the development of a final zoning plan. — Also termed stopgap zoning. [Cases: Zoning and Planning § 218.]

inverse zoning. Zoning that attempts to disperse particular types of property use rather than concentrate them.

non-Euclidean zoning. Zoning that allows a mix of land uses in the same area if the uses are or can be made nonconflicting • For example, a business might be permitted to operate in a residential area if the business adopts a certain architecture to blend in with other structures and has sufficient landscaping and setback to guarantee that nearby residents will not suffer excessive noise, pollution, or other nuisances. Cf. Euclidean zoning.

partial zoning. Zoning that affects only a portion of a municipality’s territory, and that is usu. invalid because it contradicts the comprehensive zoning plan. — Also termed piecemeal zoning. [Cases: Zoning and Planning § 35, 162.]

private zoning. The use of restrictive covenants in private agreements to restrict the use and occupancy of real property. • Private zoning often covers such things as lot size, building lines, architectural specifications, and property uses. [Cases: Covenants § 1, 49, 69.]

reverse spot zoning. Zoning of a large area of land without regard for the zoning of a small piece of land within that area. [Cases: Zoning and Planning § 35, 162.]

"When parcels around a given property are rezoned to allow for higher uses leaving an island of less intensive use, reverse spot zoning is the result." Donald G. Hagman & Julian Conrad Juergensmeyer, Urban Planning and Land Development Control Law § 5.4, at 136 (2d ed. 1986).

spot zoning. Zoning of a particular piece of land without regard for the zoning of the larger area surrounding the land. [Cases: Zoning and Planning § 35, 162.]

"To the popular mind, spot zoning means the improper permission to use an ‘island’ of land for a more intensive use than permitted on adjacent properties. The popular definition needs several qualifications. ... The set of facts usually involves an ‘island’ of more intensive use than surrounding property. ... Usually the ‘island’ is small.... Furthermore, the term is not properly applied to development permission that comes about by variance or special exception. Rather, the term refers to a legislative act, such as a rezoning, or to a situation in which the ‘island’ is created by the original ordinance." Donald G. Hagman & Julian Conrad Juergensmeyer, Urban Planning and Land Development Control Law § 5.4, at 136 (2d ed. 1986).
stopgap zoning. See interim zoning.

use zoning. See Euclidean zoning.

zoning map. The map that is created by a zoning ordinance and shows the various zoning districts. [Cases: Zoning and Planning C==30.]

zoning ordinance. (1919) A city ordinance that regulates the use to which land within various parts of the city may be put. It allocates uses to the various districts of a municipality, as by allocating residences to certain parts and businesses to other parts. A comprehensive zoning ordinance usu. regulates the height of buildings and the proportion of the lot area that must be kept free from buildings. [Cases: Zoning and Planning C==4, 21.]

zoning variance. See variance (2).

zygologic (zig-noh-mik), adj. Of, relating to, or involving an act whose evolution directly abridges the freedom of a person who bears a duty in the enjoyment of a legal advantage. This rather abstract term was coined by the philosopher Albert Kocourek in his book Jural Relations (1927). Cf. mesonomic.

zygocephalum (zi-goh-sef-ə-lam), n. [Greek fr. zygo- "yoke, pair" + kephalos "head"] Hist. A measure of land, esp. the amount that can be plowed in one day.

zygostates (zi-goh-stay-teez), n. [Greek] Roman law. An officer who resolved controversies over weight; a public weigher.

zygote. A two-celled organism formed by the joining of egg and sperm. Cf. embryo; fetus.

zygote intrafallopian transfer. A procedure in which mature eggs are fertilized in a test tube or petri dish and then injected into a woman’s fallopian tubes. — Abbr. ZIFT. — Also termed zygote intrafallopian-tube transfer. Cf. artificial insemination; gamete intrafallopian transfer; in vitro fertilization.

Table of Legal Abbreviations

L. Kurt Adamson

This table is a working table of abbreviations, i.e. abbreviations cited in American cases, books, articles, and texts, and not restricted to standard abbreviations found in legal citation manuals. The scope of abbreviations includes the names of common federal and state primary sources, legal periodicals, treatises, and organizations, as well as selected words or phrases commonly found in American publications from the 19th century forward. There are also selected abbreviations for English, Canadian, Australian, and international sources.

The table has unique features in its two-part format. The main table lists fuller publication titles than may be found in other abbreviation tables. The second part lists the full names of individual authors referred to in the main abbreviation table. These fuller titles and author names may help in finding publications through a library catalog.

Not every variation for a publication’s abbreviation is listed. But the table can be used to interpret abbreviations not listed. First, the same publication or organization may be abbreviated with or without periods, such as “UPA” or “U.P.A.” This table lists only one version. Second, standardized citations and abbreviations were not adopted until the 20th century. For example, Willard Phillips’s Treatise on the Law of Evidence is cited in various sources as:

- Phillips, Law of Evidence
- Phillips on Evidence
- Phillips, Evidence
- Phillips, Ev.
- PhiL Ev.

So the reader may use this table’s information to interpret other variations of a publication’s abbreviation. Many 19th-century treatises were published in numerous editions. Other parts of the citation are therefore essential to identify which edition of a work is being cited. Furthermore, the format “author on _____” (such as Phillips on Evidence) was a common citation practice throughout the 19th and early 20th centuries, even though it was only a common shorthand for the work or perhaps the title that appeared on its spine, but not the formal title of the work as found on its title page. Thus, this table provides at least the beginning portion of titles to treatises.

The table is arranged in alphabetical order as if each abbreviation is one word without punctuation or spacing. Organizations are commonly cited without periods in the abbreviation. If an author’s name is abbreviated, the full last name precedes the listed title. An author’s initials are also included if there is more than one author with the same last name in the table. Finally, the ampersand (&) is treated, for purposes of order, as the word “and” in the abbreviation.

This table is not intended to be comprehensive. Other abbreviations may be found in the following sources, Mary M. Prince, Bieber’s Dictionary of Legal Abbreviations: A Reference Guide for Attorneys, Legal Secretaries, Paralegals and Law Students, 5th ed. (2001), Donald Raistrick, Index to Legal Citations and Abbreviations, 2d ed. (1993), Charles C. Soule, The Lawyer’s Reference Manual (1884), or John G. Marvin, Legal Bibliography, or A Thesaurus of American, English, Irish and Scotch Law Books (1847). For non-English language abbreviations, see Bieber and Raistrick, above, but also Igor I. Kavass and Mary M. Prince, A World Dictionary of Legal Abbreviations (1991–) or Arturo L. Torres and Francisco Avalos, Latin American Legal Abbreviations: A Comprehensive Spanish/Portuguese Dictionary with English Translations (1989).

Appendix B

Legal Maxims

In the first edition of this dictionary, published in 1891, Henry Campbell Black remarked that the book contained "a complete collection of legal maxims," adding: "These have not been grouped in one body, but distributed in their proper alphabetical order through the book. This is believed to be the more convenient arrangement" (p. iv). Although it might indeed have been more convenient for readers who knew the maxims they wanted to look up · · as 19th-century readers might have been apt to — spreading Latin sentences throughout the book is decidedly inconvenient for most dictionary users today. We have therefore collected them for ease of reference. A bibliography of works cited appears on page 1909.

Of course, many scholars have long been intolerant with those who use maxims to decide cases. As James Fitzjames Stephen, one of the great 19th-century legal scholars, incisively put it before Black's work appeared:

It seems to me that legal maxims in general are little more than pert headings of chapters. They are rather minims than maxims, for they give not a particularly great but a particularly small amount of information. As often as not, the exceptions and disqualifications to them are more important than the so-called rules.¹

Other scholars have been equally derisive.²

But there is an element of fun in legal maxims: they sometimes express surprising insights — and these from ancient writers. Though they will not clinch arguments, they will delight many readers who have a historical bent.

—B.A.G.

². For a collection of critical comments, see Garner, A Dictionary of Modern Legal Usage 552 (2d ed. 1995).
Ab abusu ad usum non valet consequentia. A conclusion about the use of a thing from its abuse is invalid.

Ab assuetis non fit injuria. No injury is done by things long acquiesced in.

Abbreviationum ille numerus et sensus accipiendus est ut concessio non sit inanis. Such number and sense is to be given to abbreviations that the grant may not be void.

Absentem accipere debemus eum qui non est eo loco in quo petitur. We must consider a person absent who is not in that place in which he is sought.

Absentiae ejus qui reipublicae causa abest neque ei neque alii damnosa esse debet. The absence of a person who is abroad in service to the state ought to be prejudicial neither to that person nor to another. Dig. 50.17.140.

Absoluta sententia expositore non indiget. A simple proposition needs no expositor.

Abbreviationum ille numerus et sensus accipiendus est ab assuetis non fit injuria. No injury is done by things long acquiesced in.

Actio non datur non damnificato. An action is not given to one who is not injured.

Actio non facit reum nisi mens sit rea. An act does not make a person guilty unless the mind is guilty. • Properly, Actus non reum (q.v.).
things in which he is usually employed is considered the act of his master.

Additio probat minoritatem. An addition proves inferiority. That is, if it be said that a person has a fee tail, it is less than if the person has the fee.

Ad ea quaes frequentius accident jura adaptantur. The laws are adapted to those cases that occur more frequently.

A digniori fieri debet denominatio et resolutio. The denomination and explanation ought to be derived from the more worthy.

Ad officium justiciariorum spectat unicuique coram eis.

Surely we ought to be helped by a benefit, not be entrapped by it.

Ad quaestiones facti non respondent judices; ad quaestiones legis non respondunt juratores. Judges do not answer questions of fact; jurors do not answer questions of law.

Additio probat minoritatem. An addition proves inferiority.

Aequitas agit in personam. Equity acts on the person.

Aequitas est correctio legis generaliter latae qua parte deficit. Equity is the correction of some part of the law where by reason of its generality it is defective.
alienation is prohibited, it may yet take place by the consent of all in whose favor it is prohibited; it is in the power of anyone to renounce a right introduced for his own benefit.

Alienatio rei praefertur juri accrescendi. Alienation of property is favored over the right to accumulate.

A l'impossible nul n'est tenu. No one is bound to do what is impossible.

Aliquid conceditur ne injuria remaneat impunita quod alias non concederetur. Something is conceded that otherwise would not be conceded, so that a wrong not remain unpunished.

Aliquis non debet esse judex in propria causa, quia non potest esse judex et pars. A person ought not to be judge in his own cause, because he cannot act both as judge and party.

Aliu est celare, aliu tacere. To conceal is one thing, to be silent another.

Aliu est distinctio, aliu separatio. Distinction is one thing, separation another.

Aliu est possidere, aliu esse in possessione. It is one thing to possess, another to be in possession.

Aliu est vendere, aliu vendenti consentire. To sell is one thing, to give consent to the seller another.

Alius non debet esse judex in propria causa, quia non potest esse judex et pars. A person ought not to be judge in his own cause, because he cannot act both as judge and party.

Aliquid conceditur ne injuria remaneat impunita quod alias non concederetur. Something is conceded that otherwise would not be conceded, so that a wrong not remain unpunished.

Argumentum a divisione est fortissimum in jure. An argument based on a subdivision of the subject is most powerful in law.

Argumentum a majori ad minus negative non valet; valet e converso. An argument drawn from the lesser is of no force in the negative; conversely (in the affirmative) it is valid.

Argumentum a simili valet in lege. An argument by analogy (from a similar case) has force in law.

Arma in armatos sumere jura sinunt. The laws permit taking up arms against the armed.

Assignatus utitur jure auctoris. An assignee is clothed with the rights of the principal.

A summoremedio ad inferiorem actionem non habetur regressus neque auxilium. From the highest remedy to an inferior action there is no recourse or assistance.

Auctoritates philosophorum, medicorum et poetarum sunt in causis allegandae et tenendae. The authoritative opinions of philosophers, physicians, and poets are to be adduced and regarded in causes.

Audi alteram partem. Hear the other side. • No one should be condemned unheard.

A verbis legis non est recedendum. From the words of the law there is to be no departure.

Baratrum committit qui propter pecuniam justitiam baractat. A person is guilty of barratry who sells justice for money.

Bastardus non potest habere haeredem nisi de corpore suo legitime procreatum. A bastard cannot have an heir unless it be one lawfully begotten of his own body.

Bastardus nullius est filius, aut filius populi. A bastard is nobody’s son, or the son of the people.

Bello pacta cedunt reipublicae. In war contracts give way to the state.

Benedicta est expositio quando res redimitur a destructione. Blessed is the exposition when a thing is saved from destruction.

Beneficium invito non datur. A privilege or benefit is not granted against a person’s will.

Beneficium non datum nisi propter officium. A remuneration is not given, unless on account of a duty performed.

Beneficium non datur nisi officii causa. A benefice is not granted except on account or in consideration of duty.

Beneficium principis debet esse mansurum. The benefaction of a prince ought to be lasting.

Benigne faciandae sunt interpretationes chartarum, ut res magis valeat quam pereat; et quaelibet concessio fortissime contra donatorem interpretanda est. Deeds should be subject to liberal interpretation, so that the matter may take effect rather than fail; and every grant is to be taken most strongly against the grantor.

Benigne faciandae sunt interpretationes propter simplicitatem laicorum, ut res magis valeat quam pereat; et verba intentioni, non e contra, debent inservere. Constructions (of written instruments) are to be made liberally, for the simplicity of laymen, in order that the matter may have effect rather than fail (or become void); and words must be subject to the intention, not the intention to the words.

Benignior sententia in verbis generalibus seu dubiis est preferenda. The more favorable construction is to be preferred in general or doubtful expressions.

Benignius leges interpretandae sunt quo voluntas earum conservetur. Laws are to be more liberally interpreted so that their intent may be preserved.

Bigamus seu trigamus, etc., est qui diversis temporibus et successive duas seu tres uxores habuit. A bigamus or trigamus, etc., is one who has had two or more wives in succession, each at a different time. 3 Co. Inst. 88.

Bis dat qui cito dat. He pays twice who pays promptly.

Bis idem exigi bona fides non patitur, et in satisfactionibus non permittitur amplius fieri quam semel factum est. Good faith does not allow the same thing to be exacted twice; and in satisfying claims, it is not permitted that more should be done after satisfaction has once been rendered.

Bonae fidei non congruit de apicibus juris disputare. It is incompatible with good faith to insist on the extreme subtleties of the law.

Bonae fidei possessor in id tantum quo ad se pervenerit tenetur. A possessor in good faith is liable only for that which he himself has obtained (literally, what has come to him). 2 Co. Inst. 285.

Bona fide possessor facit fructus consumptos suos. A possessor in good faith is entitled to the fruits (or produce) that he consumes.

Bona fides exigit ut quod convenit fiat. Good faith demands that what is agreed on shall be done.
Bona fides non patitur ut bis idem exigatur. Good faith does not allow payment to be exacted twice for the same thing.

Bonii judicii est ampliare jurisdictiorem (or justitiam). It is the role of a good judge to enlarge (or use liberally) his jurisdiction (or remedial authority). [Cases: Courts C=c200.5.]

Bonii judicii est ampliare justitiam. It is the role of a good judge to remove causes of litigation.

Bonii judicii est causas litium dirimere. It is the role of a good judge to render judgment for execution without delay.

Bonii judicii est lites dirimere, ne lis ex lite oriatur. It is the role of a good judge to dispose of litigations so that one suit should not grow from another. 5 Coke 31a.

Bonum defendentis ex integra causa; malum ex quolibet defectu. A good outcome for the defendant comes from a sound case; a bad outcome from some defect.

Bonum necessarium extra terminos necessitatis non est bonum. A thing good from necessity is not good beyond the limits of the necessity.

Bonus judex secundum aequum et bonum judicat, et aequitatem stricto juri praefert. A good judge decides according to fairness and the good and prefers equity to strict law.

Breve ita dicitur, quia rem de qua agitur, et intentionem petentis, paucis verbis breviter enarrat. A writ is called a “breve” because it briefly states, in few words, the matter in dispute, and the object of the party seeking relief.

Breve judiciale debet sequi suum originale, et accessorium suum principalae. A judicial writ ought to follow its original, and an accessory its principal.

Breve judiciale non cedit pro defectu formae. A judicial writ does not fail for a defect of form.

Brevia, tam originalia quam judicialia, patiuntur anglica nomina. Writs, original as well as judicial, bear English names.

Cancellarii angliae dignitas est, ut secundus a rege in regno habetur. The dignity of the chancellor of England is (such) that he is considered second in the realm from the sovereign.

Carcer ad homines custodiendos, non ad puniendos, dari debet. Imprisonment should be imposed for keeping people in confinement, not for punishing them (further). Co. Litt. 260a.

Carcer non supplicii causa sed custodiae constitutus. A prison is established not for the sake of punishment, but for detention under guard.

Casus fortuitus non est sperandus, et nemo tenetur divinare. A chance event is not to be expected, and no one is bound to foresee it. [Cases: Carriers C=c199.]

Casus fortuitus non est supponendus. A chance event is not to be presumed.

Casus omissus et oblivioni datus dispositioni communis juris relinquitur. A case omitted and forgotten (not provided for in statute) is left to the disposal of the common law.

Casus omissus pro omisso habendus est. A case omitted is to be held as (intentionally) omitted.

Catalla juste possessa amitti non possunt. Chattels rightly possessed cannot be lost.

Catalla reputantur inter minima in lege. Chattels are considered in law among things of least consequence.

Causa causal est causa causati. The cause of a cause is the cause of the effect.

Causa causantis causa est causati. The cause of the thing causing is the cause of the effect.

Causa ecclesiae publicis aequiparatur; et summum est ratio qua re religione fact. The cause of the church is equal to public causes; and paramount is the reason that acts in favor of religion.

Causae dotis, vitae, libertatis, fisci sunt inter favorabilia in lege. Causes of dower, life, liberty, revenue are among the things favored in law.

Causae ecclesiae publicis causis aequiparantur. The causes of the church are equal to public causes.

Causa et origo est materia negotii. The cause and origin of a matter are the substance of it. • “The law regards the original act”: as in the case of a man who attempts suicide in madness, but dies after regaining sanity; such is not suicide. 1 Coke 99.

Causa patet. The reason is obvious.

Causa proxima non remotaspectatur. The immediate and not the remote cause is considered. [Cases: Damages C=c17; Insurance C=c2165 (1), 2230, 2590(1).]

Causa vagae et incertae non est causa rationabilis. A vague and uncertain cause is not a reasonable cause.

Caveat empor. Let the buyer beware. [Cases: Sales C=c41; Vendor and Purchaser C=c37.]

Caveat empor qui ignarum non debuit quod jus alienum emit. Let the buyer beware; for he ought not act in ignorance when he buys what another has right to. [Cases: Sales C=c43, 269.]

Caveat venditor. Let the seller beware.

Caveat viator. Let the traveler beware.

Cavendum est a fragmentis. Beware of fragments.

Certa debet esse intentio et narratio et certum fundamentum et certa res quae deducitur in judicium. The design and narration ought to be certain, the foundation certain, and the matter certain that is brought into court to be tried.

Certum est quod certum reddi potest. That is certain which can be rendered certain. [Cases: Contracts C=c9; Deeds C=c38.] Cessante causa, cessat effectus. The cause ceasing, the effect ceases.

Cessante ratione legis cessat et ipsa lex. When the reason of the law ceases, the law itself also ceases.

Cessante statu primitivo, cessat derivativus. When the original estate comes to an end, the derivative estate is also at an end.

Cessa regnare, si non vis judicare. Cease to reign if you wish not to adjudicate.

C'est le crime qui fait la honte, et non pas véchafaud. It is the crime that causes the shame, and not the scaffold.

Cestuy que doit inheriter al pere doit inheriter al fils. The person who should have inherited from the father should also inherit from the son.

Chacea est ad communem legem. A chase (or hunting ground) exists by common law.

Charta de non ente non valet. A deed of a thing not in being is not valid.

Charta non est nisi vestimentum donationis. A deed is nothing else than the vestment (or clothing) of a gift.

Chartarum super fidem, mortuis testibus, ad patriam de necessitudine recurrendum est. (A dispute) regarding the veracity of deeds, with the witnesses dead, must necessarily be referred to the country (or jury).

Chirographum apud debitorem repertum praesumitur. When the evidence (or voucher) is found in the debtor's possession, the debt is presumed to be paid.

Chirographum non extans praesumitur solutum. When the evidence of a debt is not in existence, it is presumed to have been discharged.

Circuitus est evitandum. Circuity (roundabout proceeding) is to be avoided.

Circuitus est evitandum, et boni judicis est lites dirimere, ne lis ex lite oriatur. Circuity is to be avoided; and it is the role of a good judge to determine (or dispose of) litigations so that one lawsuit may not arise from another.

Citatio est de juri naturali. A summons is by natural right.

Citationes non concedantur priusquam exprimatur super qua re fieri debet citatio. Citations should not be granted before it is stated about what matter the citation is to be made.

Clam delinquens magis punitur quam palam. A person who does wrong secretly is punished more severely than one who acts openly. 8 Coke 127.

Clam factum id videtur esse, quod quisque, quum controversiam haberet, habiturumve se putaret, fecit. That is considered done secretly which someone did when he had a legal dispute or thought he would have one.

Clausulae inconstuetae semper inducunt suspicicionem. Unusual clauses always arouse suspicion.
Communis error non facit jus. A common error does not make law. • This maxim expresses a view directly contradictory to the view of the immediately preceding maxim. Both are attested in legal literature.

Compromissum ad similitudinem judiciorum redigi. A compromise is brought into affinity with judgments.

Concessio per regem fieri debet de certitudine. A grant by the king ought to be made of a certainty. • Coke explains, “If the king grants to me that I shall not be sheriff, without showing of what county, it is void for uncertainty.” 9 Coke 46b.

Concessio versus concedentem latam interpretationem habere debet. A grant ought to have a liberal interpretation against the grantor.

Concordare leges legibus est optimus interpretandi modus. To make laws agree with laws is the best mode of interpreting them.

Concordia parvae res crescant et opulentia lites. Small means increase by concord and litigations by opulence.

Conditio beneficialis, quae statum construit, benigne secundum verborum intentionem est interpretaba; odiosa autem quae statum destruct stricte, secundum verborum proprietatem, accipienda. A beneficial condition that creates an estate ought to be construed favorably, according to the intention of the words; but a condition that destroys an estate is odious and ought to be construed according to the strict sense of the words.

Conditio dicitur cum quid in casum incertum qui potest tendere ad esse aut non esse confertur. It is called a condition when something is given for an uncertain event that may or may not come into existence.

Conditio illicita habetur pro non adjecta. An unlawful condition is considered unconnected.

Conditiones quaelibet odiosae; maxime autem contra matrimonium et commercium. Any conditions are odious, but especially those against matrimony and commerce.

Conditio praecedens adimipleri debet prius quam sequatur effectus. A condition precedent ought to be fulfilled before the effect can follow.

Confessio facta in judicio omni probatione major est. A confession made in court is of greater effect than any proof.

Confessus in judicio pro judicato habetur et quodam modo sua sententia damnatur. A person who has confessed his guilt when arraigned is considered to have been tried and is, as it were, condemned by his own sentence.

Confirmare est id quod prius infirmum fuit simul firmare. To confirm is to make firm at once what before was not firm.

Confirmare nemo potest priusquam jus ei acciderit. No one can confirm before the right accrues to him.

Confirmatio est nulla ubi donum praecedens est invalidum. A confirmation is null where the preceding gift is invalid.

Confirmatio omnes supplet defectus, licet id quod actu est ab initio non valuit. Confirmation supplies all defects, even if that which has been done was not valid at the beginning.

Confirmat usum qui tollit abusum. One confirms a use who removes an abuse.

Conjunctio mariti et feminae est de jure naturae. The union of husband and wife derives from the law of nature.

Conscientia dicitur a con et scio, quasi scire cum Deo. Conscience is so called from con and scio, to know, as it were, with God.

Consecratio est periodus electionis; electio est praemacula consecrationis. Consecration is the termination of election; election is the preamble of consecration.

Consensus est voluntas plurium ad quos res pertinet, simul juncta. Consent is the conjoint will of several people to whom the thing belongs.

Consensus facit legem. Consent makes law. • A contract constitutes law between the parties agreeing to be bound by it.

Consensus, non concubitus, facit matrimonium. Consent, not coition (or sharing a bed), constitutes marriage.

Consensus, non concubitus, facit nuptias vel matrimonium, et consentire non possunt ante annos nubiles. Consent, and not coition (or sharing a bed), constitutes nuptials or marriage, and persons cannot consent before marriageable years.

Consensus tollit errorem. Consent removes an error. • A person cannot object to something he has consented to. [Cases: New Trial ⊜ 10.]

Consensus voluntas multorum ad quos res pertinet simul juncta. Consent is the united will of several interested in one subject matter.

Consentientes et agentes pari poena plectentur. Those consenting and those perpetrating will receive the same punishment.

Consentire matrimonio non possunt infra (ante) annos nubiles. Persons cannot consent to marriage before marriageable years.

Consequentiae non est consequentia. The consequence of a consequence does not exist.
Consilia multorum quaeruntur (requiruntur) in magnis. The advice of many is sought in great affairs.

Consortio malorum me quoque malum facit. The company of wicked men makes me also wicked.

Constitutiones tempore posteriores potiores sunt his quae ipsas praecesserunt. Later laws prevail over those that preceded them.

Consitutum esse eam domum unicuique nostrum debere existimari, ubi quisque sedes et tabulas haberet, suasorum rerum constitutionem fecisset. It is a settled principle that what ought to be considered the home of each of us is where he has his dwelling, keeps his records, and has established his business.

Constructio legis non facit injuriam. The construction of the law does not work an injury.

Consuetudo contra rationem introducta potius usurpatio quam consuetudo appellari debet. A custom introduced against reason ought rather to be called a usurpation than a custom.

Consuetudo debet esse certa. Custom ought to be fixed. Custom ought to be fixed. For if variable it is held as null (or of no account).

Consuetudo debet esse certa, nam incerta pro nulla (nullius) habetur. Custom ought to be fixed. For if variable it is held as null (or of no account).

Consuetudo est altera lex. Custom is another law.

Consuetudo est optimus interpres legum. Custom is the best expounder of the law.

Consuetudo et communis assuetudo vinit legem non scriptam, si sit specialis; et interpretatur legem scriptam, si lex sit generalis. Custom and common usage overcome the unwritten law if it is special; and interpret the written law if the law is general.

Consuetudo ex certa causa rationabili usitata privat communem legem. Custom observed by reason of a certain and reasonable cause supersedes the common law.

Consuetudo, licet sit magnae auctoritatis, nunquam tamen praesudicat manifestae veritati. A custom, even if it is of great authority, is never prejudicial to plain truth.

Consuetudo loci observanda est. The custom of the place is to be observed.

Consuetudo manerii et loci observanda est. The custom of a manor and place is to be observed.

Consuetudo neque injuria oriri neque tolli protest. A custom can neither arise nor be abolished by a wrong.

Consuetudo non habitur (trahitur) in consequentiam. Custom is not held as (or drawn into) a precedent.

Consuetudo praescripta et legitima vincit legem. A prescriptive and lawful custom overrides the law.

Consuetudo regni Angliae est lex Angliae. The custom of the kingdom of England is the law of England.

Consuetudo semel reprobata non potest amplius induci. A custom once disallowed cannot again be introduced.

Consuetudo tollit communem legem. Custom takes away the common law.

Consuetudo vincit communem legem. Custom overrules common law.

Consuetudo volentes ducit, lex nolentes trahit. Custom leads the willing; law drags the unwilling.

Contemporanea expositio est optima et fortissima in lege. A contemporaneous exposition is the best and most powerful in the law. A statute is best explained by following the construction put on it by judges who lived at the time it was made, or soon after.

Contestatio litis eget terminos contradictarios. An issue requires terms of contradiction. That is, there can be no issue without an affirmative on one side and a negative on the other.

Contractus est quasi actus contra actum. A contract is, as it were, act against act.

Contractus ex turpi causa vel contra bonos mores nullus est. A contract founded on a wrongful consideration or against good morals is null.

Contractus legem ex conventione accipiunt. Contracts receive legal validity from the agreement of the parties.

Contra legem facit qui id facit quod lex prohibit; in fraudem vero qui, salvis verbis legis, sententiam ejus circumvenit. A person acts contrary to the law who does what the law prohibits; a person acts in fraud of the law who, without violating the wording, circumvents the intention. Dig. 1.3.29.

Contra negantem principia non est disputandum. There is no disputing against one who denies first principles.

Contra non valentem agere nulla currit praescriptio. No prescription runs against a person unable to act (or bring an action). [Cases: Limitation of Actions 43, 70, 95.]

Contrariorum contraria est ratio. The reason of contrary things is contrary.

Contra veritatem lex nunquam aliquid permittit. The law never allows anything contrary to truth.

Contractio rei alienae animo furandi est furtum. Touching or taking another’s property with an intention of stealing is theft.

Conventio omnis intelligitur clausula rebus sic stantibus. Every contract is to be understood as being based on the assumption of things remaining as they were (that is, at the time of its conclusion).
Conventio privorum non potest publico juri derogare. An agreement of private persons cannot derogate from public right. • That is, it cannot prevent the application of general rules of law, or render valid any contravention of law.

Conventio vincit legem. The express agreement of the parties overrides the law.

Convicia si irrascaris tua divulgas; spretata exolescunt. If you are moved to anger by insults, you spread them abroad; if despised, they die out.

Copulatio verborum indicat acceptationem in eodem sensu. Coupling words together shows that they ought to be understood in the same sense.

Corporalis injuria non recipit aestimationem. A personal injury does not receive satisfaction from proceedings yet in the future.

Corpus humanum non recipit aes timationem. The person of a human being can have no price put on it.

Creditorum appellatione non hi tantum accipiuntur qui pecuniam crediderunt, sed omnes quibus ex qualibet causa debetur. Under the name of creditors are included not only those who have lent money, but also all to whom a debt is owed from any cause.

Crescente malitia crescere debet et poena. With increase of malice, punishment ought also to increase.

Crimen falsi dicitur, cum quis illicitus, cui non fuerit ad crescente malitia crescere debet et poena. With increase of malice, punishment ought also to increase.

Corpus humanum non recipit aestimationem. The person of a human being can have no price put on it.

Cuique in sua arte credendum est. Everyone is to be believed in his own area of expertise. [Cases: Evidence C—508.]

Cuius est commodum, ejus debet esse incommodum. The person who has the advantage should also have the disadvantage.

Cuius est commodum, ejus est onus. The person who has the benefit has also the burden.

Cuius est dare, ejus est disponere. The person who has a right to give has the right of disposition. • That is, the bestower of a gift has a right to regulate its disposal.

Cuius est divisi, alterius est electio. When one of two parties has the division (of an estate), the other has the choice (of the shares). • In partition between coparceners, where the division is made by the eldest, the rule in English law is that she shall choose her share last.

Cuius est dominium, ejus est periculum. The risk lies on the owner.

Cuius est instituere, ejus est abrogare. Whoever can institute can also abrogate.

Cuius est solum, ejus est usque ad coelum. The person who owns the soil owns up to the sky. • One who owns the surface of the ground owns, or has an exclusive right to everything that is on or above it to an indefinite height. [Cases: Property C—7.]

Cuius est solum, ejus est usque ad coelum et ad inferos. Whoever owns the soil owns everything up to the sky and down to the depths. [Cases: Mines and Minerals C—47; Property C—7; Waters and Water Courses C—101.]

Cuius juris (i.e., jurisdictionis) est principale, ejusdem juris erit accessorium. An accessory matter is subject to the same jurisdiction as its principal.

Cuius per errorem dati repetitio est, ejus consulto dati donatio est. A thing given by mistake can be recovered; if given purposely, it is a gift. Dig. 50.17.53.

Cuiusque rei potissima pars est principium. The principal part of everything is the beginning.
Culpa caret qui scit sed prohibere non potest. A person is free of blame who knows but cannot prevent.

Culpae poena par esto. Let the punishment be equal to the crime.

Culpa est immiscere se rei ad se non pertinenti. It is a fault for anyone to meddle in a matter not pertaining to him.

Culpa lata dolo aequiparatur. Gross negligence is equivalent to fraud.

Culpa tenet (teneat) suos auctores. A fault binds (or should bind) its own authors.

Cum actio fuerit mere criminalis, institu; poterit ab initio criminaliter vel civiliter. When an action is purely criminal, it can be instituted from the beginning either criminally or civilly.

Cum aUquis renunciaverit societati, solvitur societas. When any partner has renounced the partnership, the partnership is dissolved.

Cum adsunt testimonia rerum, quid opus est verbis? When the proofs of facts are present, what need is there of words?

Cum aliquis renunciaverit societati, solvitur societas. When any partner has renounced the partnership, the partnership is dissolved.

Cum confitente sponte mitius est agendum. One making a voluntary confession is to be dealt with more leniently.

Cum de lucro duorum quaeritur melior est causa pos-sidentis. When there is a question of gain between two people, the cause of the possessor is the better.

Cum duo inter se pugnanti reperiantur in testamento, ultimum ratum est. When two clauses in a will are found to be contradictory, the last in order prevails.

Cum duo jura concurrunt in una persona, aequum est ac si essent in duobus. When two rights meet in one person, it is the same as if they were in two persons.

Cum in corpore dissentitur, apparent nullam esse accep-tionem. When there is a disagreement in the substance, there is clearly no acceptance.

Cum in testamento ambigae aut etiam perperam scriptum, est benigne interpretari, et secundum id quod credible est cogitatum credendum est. When an ambiguous or even an erroneous expression occurs in a will, it should be construed liberally, and in accordance with the testator’s probable meaning.

Cum legitimae nuptiae factae sunt, patrem liberi sequuntur. Children born under a legitimate marriage follow the condition of the father.

Cum par delictum est duorum, semper oneratur petitor, et melior habetur possessoris causa. Where two parties are equally at fault, the claimant always is at the disadvantage, and the party in possession has the better cause.

Cum quod ago non valet ut ago, valeat quantum valere potest. When that which I do is of no effect as I do it, let it have as much effect as it can (that is, in some other way).

Curatus non habet titulum. A curate has no title (to tithes).

Curia cancellariae officina justitiae. The court of chancery is the workshop of justice.

Curia parliamenti suis propriis legibus subsistit. The court of parliament is governed by its own laws.

Curiosa et captiosa interpretatio in lege reprobatur. An overnice and captious interpretation in the law is rejected.

Currit tempus contra desides et sui juris contemptores. Time runs against the indolent and those who are not mindful of their rights.

Cursus curiae est lex curiae. The practice of the court is the law of the court.

Custome serra prise stricte. Custom shall be construed strictly.

Custos statum haeredis in custodia existentis meliorem, non deteriorem, facere potest. A guardian can make the estate of an heir living under his guardianship better, not worse.

Damnum sentit dominus. The damage falls on the owner.

Damnum sine injuria esse potest. There can be damage without any act of injustice.

Dans et retinens nihil dat. One who gives and yet retains (possession) does not give effectually (literally, gives nothing).

Da tua dum tua sunt, post mortem tunc tua non sunt. Give the things which are yours while they are yours; after death they are not yours.

Datur digniori. It is given to the more worthy.

Debet esse finis litium. There ought to be a limit to litigation.

Debet quis juri subjacere ubi delinquit. Any offender should be subject to the law of the place where he offends.

Debet sua cuique domus esse perfugium tutissimum. Every person’s house should be his safest refuge.

Debile fundamentum famt opus. A weak foundation frustrates the work (built on it).

Debita sequuntur personam debitoris. Debts follow the person of the debtor. That is, debts belong to no locality and may be collected wherever the debtor can be found.

Debitor non praesumitur donare. A debtor is not presumed to make a gift.

Debitorum pactionibus creditorum petitio nee tolli nec diminui potest. The creditors’ suit can be neither quashed nor diminished by the contracts of their debtors.

Debitum et contractus sunt nullius loci. Debt and contract belong to no particular place.

Decepsis, non decipientibus, jura subveniunt. The laws help persons who have been deceived, not those deceiving.
Decet (tamen) principem servare leges quibus ipse servatus est. It is proper (nonetheless) for the prince to preserve the laws by which he himself is preserved.

Decimae de decimatis solvi non debent. Tithes ought not to be paid from that which is given for tithes.

Decimae de jure divino et canonica institutione pertinent ad personam. Tithes belong to the parson by divine right and canonical institution.

Decimae non debent solvi ubi non est annua renovatio, et ex annuatibus renovantibus simul semel. Tithes ought not to be paid where there is not an annual renovation, and from annual renovations only once.

Decipi quam fallere est tutius. It is safer to be deceived than to deceive.

Decreta conciliorum non ligant reges nostros. The decrees of councils do not bind our kings.

De facto jus oritur. From fact springs law; law arises from fact.

Deficiente uno sanguine, non potest esse haeres. For lack of one blood, he cannot be heir. • Coke explains, “The blood of the father and of the mother are but one inheritable blood, and both are necessary to procreation of an heir.” 3 Coke 41.

De fide et officio judicis non recipitur quaestio, sed de scientia sive error juris sive facti. The good faith and honesty of purpose of a judge cannot be questioned, but his knowledge may be impugned if there is an error either of law or of fact.

De jure decimarum, originem ducentis de jure patrornatus, tunc cognitio spectat at legem civilem, i.e., communem. With regard to the right of tithes, deducing its origin from the right of the patron, then the cognizance of them belongs to the civil law, i.e., common law.

De jure judicis, de facto juratores, respondent. The judges answer regarding the law, the jury on the facts.

Delegata potestas non potest delegari. A delegated authority cannot be delegated.

Deliberandum est diu quod statuendum est semel. What is to be resolved once and for all should be long deliberated on.

Delicatus debitor est odiosus in lege. A luxurious debtor is hateful in the law.

Delinquens per iram provocatus puniri debet mitius. A wrongdoer provoked by anger ought to be punished less severely. 3 Co. Inst. 55.

De majori et minori non variant jura. Concerning greater and lesser, rights do not vary (or justice does vary).

De minimis non curat lex. The law does not notice or concern itself with trifling matters. [Cases: Common Law C≈9.]

De molendino de novo erecto non jaceat prohibitoio. A prohibition does not lie against a newly erected mill.

De morte hominis nulla est cunctatio longa. When the death of a human being is concerned, no delay is long.

Denominatio fieri debet a dignioribus. Denomination should be made from the more worthy.

De nomine proprio non est curandum cum in substantia non erretur; quia nomina mutabilia sunt, res autem immobiles. As to the proper name, it is not to be regarded when there is no error in substance; because names are changeable, but things are immutable.

De non apparentibus et non existentibus eadem est ratio. The rule is the same respecting things that do not appear and things that do not exist.

De nullo quod est sua natura indivisible et divisionem non patitur nullum partem habebit vidua, sed satisfaciat ei ad valentiam. A widow shall have no part from that which in its own nature is indivisible and is not susceptible of division; but let (the heir) satisfy her with an equivalent.

De nullo tenemento, quod tenetur ad terminum, fit homagii; fit tamen inde fidelitatis sacramentum. For no tenement that is held for a term is there the oath of homage, but there is the oath of fealty.

Derivativa potestas non potest esse major primitiva. Power that is derived cannot be greater than that from which it is derived.

Derogatur legi cum pars detrahitur; abrogatur legi, cum ratio. There is derogation from a law when part of it is taken away; there is abrogation of a law when it is abolished entirely.

Designatio justiciariorum est a rege; jurisdictio vero ordinaria a lege. The appointment of justices is by the king, but their ordinary jurisdiction is by the law.

Designatio unius est exclusio alterius, et expressum facit cessare tacitum. The designation of one is the exclusion of the other; and what is expressed prevails over what is implied.

De simulibus ab similia eadem ratione procedendum est. From like things to like things we are to proceed by the same rule. • That is, we are allowed to argue from the analogy of cases.

De simulibus idem est judicium. Concerning like things the judgment is the same.

Destrueere, id quod prius structum, et factum fuit, penitus evertere et diruere. To destroy that which was previously built and made is utterly to overturn and wreck it; to destroy is to overturn and demolish what was built and done before. • This is a maxim cited against any type of revolutionary action.

Deus solus haeredem facere potest, non homo. God alone, and not man, can make an heir.

Dies dominicus non est juridicus. Sunday is not a judicial day. [Cases: Sunday C≈1, 30.]
Dies inceptus pro completo habetur. A day begun is held as complete.

Dies incertus pro conditione habetur. An uncertain day is considered as a condition.

Dilaciones in lege sunt odiosae. Delays in law are odious.

Discretio est discernere per legem quid sit justum. Discretion is to discern through law what just is.

Discretio est scire per legem quid sit justum. Discretion consists in knowing what is just in law.

Disparata non debent jungi. Dissimilar things ought not to be joined.

Dispensatio est mali prohibitii provida relaxatio, utilitatem seu necessitatem pensata; et est de jure domino regi concessa, propter impossibilitatem praevidendi de omnibus particularibus. A dispensation is the provision of a malum prohibitum weighed from utility or necessity; and it is conceded by law to the king on account of the impossibility of foreknowledge concerning all particulars.

Dispensatio est vulnus, quod vulnerat jus commune. A dispensation is a wound, because it wounds a common right.

Disseisinam satis facit qui uti non permitit possessorem, vel minus commode, licet ominino non expellat. A person commits disseisin if he does not permit the possessor to enjoy, or makes the possessor’s enjoyment less useful, even if the disseisor does not expel the possessor altogether. Co. Litt. 331.

Dissimilium dissimilis est ratio. Of dissimilars the rule is dissimilar.

Dissimulatione tollitur injuria. Injury is wiped out by reconciliation.

Distinguenda sunt tempora; aliud est facere, aliud perficere. Times must be distinguished; it is one thing to do a thing, another to complete it.

Distinguenda sunt tempora; distingue tempora, et concordabis leges. Times are to be distinguished; distinguish times, and you will harmonize laws.

Divinatio, non interpretatio, est quae omnino recedit a litera. It is a guess, not interpretation, that altogether departs from the letter.

Divortium dicitur a divertendo, quia vir divertitur ab uxore. Divorce is so called from divertendo, because a man is diverted from his wife.

Dolo facit qui petit quod redditterus est. A person acts with deceit who seeks what he will have to return.

Dolo malo pactum senon servabit. A pact made with evil intent will not be upheld. This maxim is sometimes written Dolo malo pactum se nonservaturum (meaning “an agreement induced by fraud will not stand”).

Dolus versatur in generalibus. A deceiver deals in generalities.

Dolum ex indicis perspicuis probari convenit. Fraud should be proved by clear proofs.

Dolus auctoris non nocet successori. The fraud of a predecessor does not prejudice the successor.

Dolus circuitu non purgatur. Fraud is not purged by circuity.

Dolus est machinatio, cum alius dissimulal alius agit. Deceit is an artifice, since it pretends one thing and does another.

Dolus et fraud nemini patrocinentur (patrocinari debent). Deceit and fraud should excuse or benefit no one (they themselves require some excuse).

Dolus et fraud una in parte sanaridebent. Deceit and fraud should always be remedied.

Dolus laetet in generalibus. Fraud lurks in generalities.

Dominus capitalis loco haeredis habetur, quoties per impossibilitatem praevidendi de omnibus particularibus. The supreme lord takes the place of the heir, as often as the blood of the tenant is extinct through deficiency or crime.

Dominus non potest esse in pendenti. The right of property cannot be in abeyance.

Dominus capitalis loco haeredis habetur, quoties per impossibilitatem praevidendi de omnibus particularibus. The supreme lord takes the place of the heir, as often as the blood of the tenant is extinct through deficiency or crime.

Dominus non maritabit pupillum nisi semel. A lord cannot give a ward in marriage but once.

Dominus rex nullum habere potest parem, multo minus superiorem. The king cannot have an equal, much less a superior.

Domus sua cuique est tutissimum refugium. Everyone’s house is his safest refuge.

Dona clandestina sunt semper suspicosa. Clandestine gifts are always suspicious.

Donari videtur quod nullu jure cogente conceditur. That is considered to be given which is granted when no law compels.

Donatio non praesumitur. A gift is not presumed.

Donationum alia perfecta, alia incepta et non perfecta; ut si donatio lecta fuit et concessa, actio traditionum fuerit subsecuta. Some gifts are perfect, others incipient and not perfect; for example, if a gift were read and agreed to, but delivery had not then followed.

Donatio pericurit possessione accipientis. A gift is rendered complete by the possession of the receiver.

Donatio principis intelligitur sine praedicto tertii. A gift of the prince is understood without prejudice to a third party.

Donator nunquam desinit possidere antequam donarius incipiat possidere. A donor never ceases to have possession until the donee obtains possession.
Dormiunt aliquando leges, nunquam moriuntur. Laws sometimes sleep but never die.

Dower ought not to be sought from dower.

Dos rationabilis vel legitima est cujuslibet mulieris de quocunque tenemento tertia pars omnium terrarum et tenementorum, quae vir suas tenuit in dominio suo ut de feodo, etc. Reasonable or legitimate dower belongs to every woman of a third part of all the lands and tenements of which her husband was seised in his demesnes, as of fee, etc.

Doti lex favet; praemium pudoris est, ideo parcatur. The law favors dower; it is the reward of chastity; therefore let it be preserved.

Do ut facias. I give that you may give.

Do ut des. I give that you may do.

Droit ne done plus que soit demaunde. The law gives no more than is demanded.

Droit ne poet plus que soit demaunde. Right cannot die.

Duas uxores eodem tempore habere non licet. It is not lawful to have two wives at one time.

Duo non possunt in solido unam rem possidere. Two cannot possess one thing each in entirety.

Duorum in solidum dominium vel possesio esse non potest. Ownership or possession in entirety cannot belong to two persons.

Duo sunt instrumenta ad omnes res aut confirmandas aut impugnandas, ratio et auctoritas. There are two instruments for confirming or impugning everything: reason and authority.

D processionem possibilis lex non patitur. The law does not allow a duplication of possibility.

Eadem causa diversis rationibus coram judicibus ecclesiasticis et secularibus venturatur. The same cause is argued on different principles before ecclesiastical and secular judges.

Eadem est ratio, eadem est lex. (If) the reason is the same, the law is the same.

Eadem mens praesumitur regis quae est juris et quae esse debet, praesertim in dubiis. The mind of the sovereign is presumed to be the same as that of the law, and the same as what it ought to be, especially in ambiguous matters.

Ea est accipienda interpretationi quae vitio caret. That interpretation is to be received that is free from fault.

Ea quae commendandi causa in venditionibus dicuntur, si palam appareant venditorem non obligant. Those things that, by way of commendation, are stated at sales, if they are openly apparent, do not bind the seller.

Ea quae dari impossibilita sunt, vel quae in rerum natura non sunt, pro non adjectis habentur. Those things that cannot be given, or that are not in the nature of things, are considered as not added (as no part of the agreement).

Ea quae in curia nostra rite acta sunt debitae executione demandaridebent. Those things that are properly transacted in our court ought to be committed to a due execution.

Ea quae raro accident non temere in agenda negotiis computantur. Those things that rarely happen are not to be taken into account in the transaction of business, without sufficient reason.

Ecclesia ecclesiae decima solvere non debet. A church should not pay tithes to a church.

Ecclesia est domus mansionalis omnipotens dei. The church is the mansion house of the omnipotent God.

Ecclesia est infra aetatem et in custodia domini regis, qui tenetur jura et haereditates ejusdem manu teneret et defendere. The church is underage and in the custody of the king, who is bound to uphold and defend its rights and inheritances.

Ecclesia fungitur vice minoris; meliore conditionem suam facere potest, deteriorem nequaquam. The church enjoys the privilege of a minor; it can make its own condition better but not worse.

Ecclesiae magis favendum est quam personae. The church is to be more favored than the parson (or an individual).

Ecclesia meliorari non deteriorari potest. A church can (lawfully) be improved but not made worse.

Ecclesia non moritur. The church does not die.

Effectus sequitur causam. The effect follows the cause.

Ei incumbit probatio qui dicit, non qui negat. The burden of the proof rests on the person who affirms, not the one who denies. [Cases: Evidence C=92.]

Ei nihil turpe, cui nihil sati. Nothing is immoral to the person to whom nothing is enough.

Eisdem modis dissolvituro obligatio quae nascitur ex contractu, vel quasi, quibus contrahit. An obligation that arises from a contract or quasi contract is dissolved in the same ways in which it is contracted.

Eius est interpretari cujus est condere. It is that person’s to interpret whose it is to enact.

Eius est nolle, qui potest velle. A person who can will (exercise volition) has a right to refuse to will (withhold consent).

Eius est non nolle qui potest velle. A person may consent tacitly who can consent expressly.

Eius est periculum cujus est dominium aut commodum. He who has the dominion or advantage has the risk.

Eius nulla culpa est cui parere necesse sit. No guilt attaches to a person who is compelled to obey.

Elecra una via, non latur recursus ad alteram. When one way has been chosen, no recourse is given to another.

Electio interna libera et spontanea separatio unius rei ab alia, sine compulsione, consistens in animo et voluntate. Choice is an internal, free, and spontaneous Electiones fiant rite et libere sine interruptione aliqua. Let choices be made in due form and freely, without any interruption.

Electione semel facta, et placitum testatum, non patitur regressum. A choice once made, and a plea witnessed (or intent shown), allows no going back.

Electione semel facta non patitur regressum. An election once made cannot be recalled.

Emptor emit quam minimo potest; venditor vendit quam maximo potest. The buyer buys for as little as possible; the vendor sells for as much as possible.

En eschange il covent que les estates soient egales. In an exchange it is desirable that the estates be equal.

Enitia pars semper praeferenda est propter privilegium aetatis. The part of the elder sister is always to be preferred on account of the privilege of age.

Enumeratio infirmat regulam in casibus non enumeratis. Enumeration disaffirms the rule in cases not enumerated.

Enumeratio unius est exclusio alterius. Specification of one thing is an exclusion of the other.

Eodem modo quo ligatum est dissolvitur. An obligation is dissolved by the same bond by which it is contracted.

Eodem modo quo oritur, eodem modo dissolvitur. It is discharged in the same way as it is created.

Eodem modo quo quid constituitur, dissolvitur. In the same way as anything is constituted, it is dissolved (or destroyed). 6 Coke 53.

Episcopus alterius mandato quam regis non tenetur obtemperare. A bishop need not obey any mandate save the king’s.

Equitas sequitur legem. Equity follows the law.

Errores ad sua principia referre est refellere. To refer errors to their origin is to refute them.

Errores scribentis nocere non debet. The mistakes of the scribe (or copyist) ought not to injure.

Erubescit lex filios castigare parentes. The law blushes when children correct their parents.

Est aliquid quod non oportetiam si licet; quicquid vero non licet certe non oportet. There is that which is not proper, even though permitted; but whatever is not permitted is certainly not proper.

Est autem jus publicum et privatum quod ex naturalibus praeceptis aut gentium aut civilibus est collectum; et quod in jure scripto jus appellatur, id in leges Angliae rectum esse dicitur. Public and private law is that which is collected either from natural precepts of the (law of) nations or from civil precepts; and that which in the civil law is called is said in the law of England to be right. Co. Litt. 558.

Est autem vis legem simulans. Violence may also put on the mask of law.

Est boni judicis ampliare jurisdictioinem. It is the role of a good judge to extend the jurisdiction.

Est ipsorum legislatorum tanquam viva vox. The voice of the legislators themselves is like a living voice. That is, the provisions of a statute are to be understood and interpreted as practical rules for real circumstances. Coke adds, Rebus et non verbis legem imponimus. 10 Coke 101.

Estoveria sunt arendi, arandi, construendi et claudendi. Estovers (tenants’ rights to material at hand) are for burning, plowing, building, and fencing.

Est quiddam perfectius in rebus licitis. There is something more perfect in things that are permitted.

Eum qui nocentem infamat, non est aequum et bonum ob eam rem condemnari; delicta enim nocentium nota esse oportet et expedir. It is not just and proper that one who speaks ill of a bad person should be condemned on that account; for it is fitting and expedient that the wrongdoings of bad people should be known.

Eventus est qui ex causa sequitur; et dicitur eventus quia ex causis event. An event is what follows from a cause; and is called an event, because it results from causes.

Eventus varios res nova semper habet. A novel matter always produces various results.

Ex antecedentibus et consequentibus fit optima interpretatio. The best interpretation is made from what precedes and what follows. [Cases: Wills C—470.]

Exceptio ejus rei cuius petitur dissoluto nulla est. There is no exception based on the very matter for which a solution is being sought.

Exceptio falsi est omnium ultima. The exception for falsehood is last of all.

Exceptio firmat regulam in casibus non exceptis. An exception affirms the rule in cases not excepted.

Exceptio firmat regulam in contrarium. An exception affirms a rule to the contrary.
Exceptio nulla est versus actionem quae exceptionem perimit. There is no exception against an action that extinguishes the exception.

Exceptio probat regulam de rebus non exceptis. An exception proves a rule concerning things not excepted.

Exceptio quae firmat legem exponit legem. An exception that confirms the law expounds the law.

Exceptio quoque regulam declarat. The exception also declares the rule.

Exceptio semper ultima ponenda est. An exception is always to be put last.

Excessus in jure reprobatur. Excess in law is condemned.

Excessus in re qualibet jure reprobatur communi. Excess in anything at all is condemned by common law.

Exceptat aut extenuat delictum in capitalibus, quod non operatur idem in civilibus. That excuses or extenuates a wrong in capital causes which does not have the same effect in civil suits.

Ex diuturnitate temporis omnia praesumuntur solen­niter esse acta. From length of time, all things are presumed to have been done in due form.

Ex dolo malo non oritur actio. An action does not arise from a fraud. [Cases: Action C=4.]

Ex judicio est executio juris secundum judicium. Execution is the execution of the law according to the judgment.

Ex judicio est finis et fructus legis. Execution of the law is its end and fruition.

Ex judicio legis non habet injuriams. Execution of the law cannot work an injury.

Exempla illustrant, non restringunt, legem. Examples make the law clearer, and do not restrict it.

Ex facto jus oritur. The law arises out of the fact.

Ex frequenti delicto augetur poena. Punishment increases with repeated offense. 2 Co. Inst. 479.

Ex maleficio non oritur contractus. A contract does not arise out of an illegal act.

Ex malis moribus bonae leges natae sunt. Good laws are born from evil morals.

Ex multitudine signorum colligitur identitas vera. From a great number of signs true identity is ascertained.

Ex nihilo nihil fit. From nothing nothing comes.

Ex non scripto jus venit quod usus comprobavit. Unwritten law is that which custom has sanctioned.

Ex nudo pacto non oritur actio. No action arises on a contract without a consideration. [Cases: Contracts C=47.]

Ex pacto illicito non oritur actio. From an illicit contract no action arises.

Expedite rei publicae ut sit finis litium. It is to the advantage of the state that there should be a limit to litigation.

Experientia per varios actus legem facit. Experience through various acts makes law.

Expositio quae ex visceribus causae nascitur, est aptis­simu et fortissima in lege. An exposition that springs from the vitals of a cause is the fittest and most powerful in law.

Ex praecessentibus et consequentibus est optima interpre­tatio. The best interpretation takes account of what precedes and follows.

Expressa nocent, non expressa non nocent. Things expressed do harm; things not expressed do not.

Expressa non prosunt quae non expressa proderunt. There is no benefit in expressing what will benefit when unexpressed.

Expressio eorum quae tacite insunt nihil operatur. The expression of those things that are tacitly implied is of no consequence.

Expressio unius est exclusio alterius. The expression of one thing is the exclusion of another. • Also termed Inclusio unius est exclusio alterius or enumeratio unius est exclusio alterius. [Cases: Contracts C=152; Statutes C=195.]

Expressum facit cessare tacitum. Something expressed nullifies what is unexpressed. [Cases: Constitutional Law C=594; Statutes C=195.]

Ex procedentibus et consequentibus optima fit interpre­tatio. The best interpretation is made from things proceeding and following (i.e., the context). [Cases: Wills C=470.]

Exterus non habet terras. An alien holds no lands.

Extincto subjecto, tollitur adjunctum. When the sub­stance is gone, the adjunct disappears.

Extortio est crimem quando quis colore officii extorquet quod non est debitum, vel supra debitum, vel ante tempus quod est debitum. Extortion is a crime when by color of office, any person extorts what is not due, or more than due, or before the time when it is due.

Ex tota materia emergat resolutio. The construction or explanation should arise out of the whole subject matter.

Extra legem positus est civiliter mortuus. An outlaw is dead as a citizen.

Extra territorium jus dicenti impune non paretur. One who gives a judgment outside his jurisdiction is disobeyed with impunity. • There is no punishment for disobeying. Dig. 2.1.20.

Extra territorium jus dicenti non paretur impune. One who gives a judgment outside his jurisdiction is not obeyed with impunity. • Anyone who executes such a judgment may be punished. 10 Coke 77.

Ex mortuis probatis praesumuntur media. Extremeshaving been proved, intermediate things are presumed.

Ex turpi causa non oritur actio. No action arises out of a wrongful consideration. [Cases: Action C⇒4; Contracts C⇒138.]

Ex turpi contractu non oritur actio. No action arises from a wrongful contract.

Facinus quos inquinat aequat. Guilt makes equal those whom it stains.

Facio ut des. I do that you may give.

Facio ut facias. I do that you may do.

Facta sunt potentiora verbis. Deeds (or facts) are more powerful than words.

Facta tenent multa quae fieri prohibentur. Many things that are prohibited to be done.

Factum a judece quod ad ejus officium non spectat, non ratum est. A judge’s act that does not pertain to his office is of no force.

Factum cuique suum, non adversario, nocere debet. Anyone’s act should injure himself, not his adversary.

Factum infectum fieri nequit. What is done cannot be undone.

Factum negantis nulla probatio. No proof is incumbent on a person who denies a fact.

Factum non dicitur quod non perseverat. That is not said to be done which does not last.

Factum unius alteri nocere non debet. The deed of one should not hurt the other.

Facturi quod ad justitiam pertinet secundum legem, et consuetudinem Angliae. (One is bound) to do justice according to the law and custom of England. • This was once a part of judicial oaths.

Facultas probationum non est angustanda. The capability of offering proofs is not to be narrowed.

Falsa causa non nocet. A false motive does no injury. • Generally, an erroneous motive does not invalidate.

Falsa demonstratione legatum non perim. A legacy is not destroyed by an incorrect description. • This maxim is sometimes written Falsa demonstratione legatum non perimitur (same sense).

Falsa demonstratio non nocet, cum de corpore (persona) constat. False description does not injure or vitiate, provided the thing or person intended has once been sufficiently described. • Mere false description does not make an instrument inoperative. [Cases: Deeds C⇒42; Wills C⇒520, 581.]

Falsa grammatica non vitiat chartam. False grammar does not vitiate a charter.

Falsa grammatica non vitiat concessionem. False or bad grammar does not vitiate a grant. • Neither false Latin nor false English will make a deed void when the intent of the parties plainly appears.

Falsa orthographia sive falsa grammatica non vitiat concessionem. Error in spelling or grammar does not vitiate a grant.

Falsus in uno, falsus in omnibus. False in one thing, false in everything. [Cases: Trial C⇒236(2); Witnesses C⇒317.]

Fama, fides, et oculus non patiuntur ludum. Reputation, pledged faith, and eyesight do not endure deceit.

Fama, quae suspicacionem inducit, oriri debet apud bonos et graves, non quidem malevolos et malolicios, sed provides et fide dignas personas, non semel sed saepius, quia clamor minuit et defamatione manifestat. Report, which induces suspicion, ought to arise from good and grave men; not, indeed, from malevolent and malicious men, but from cautious and credible persons; not only once, but frequently, for clamor diminishes, and defamation manifests.

Fatetur facinus qui judicium fugit. A person who flees judgment confesses guilt.

Fatuus, apud jurisconsultos nostros, accipitur pro non compostus; et fatuus dicitur, qui omnino desipit. “Fatuous,” among our jurisconsults, is applied to a man not of sound mind; one is also called “fatuous” who is altogether foolish.

Fatuus praesumitur qui in proprio nomine errat. A person is presumed to be incompetent who makes a mistake in his own name (that is, does not know his own name).

Favorabilia in lege sunt fiscus, dos, vita, libertas. The treasury, dower, life, and liberty are things favored in law.

Favoribiles rei potius quam actores habentur. Defendants are rather to be favored than plaintiffs.

Favoribiles sunt executiones aliis processibus quibus-cunque. Executions are preferred to all other processes whatever.

Favores ampliandi sunt; odia restringenda. Favorable inclinations are to be enlarged; animosities restrained.

Felix qui potuit rerum cognoscere causas. Happy is he who could apprehend the causes of things.

Felonia, ex vi termini, significat quodlibet capitale crimen felleo animo perpetratum. Felony, by force of the term, signifies any capital crime perpetrated with a malicious intent.

Felonia implicatur in quolibet predicione. Felony is implied in every treason.

Feodum est quod quis tenet ex quacunque causa, sive sit tenementum sive redditus. A fee is what anyone holds from whatever cause, whether tenement or rent.

Feodum simplex quia feodum idem est quod haereditas, et simplex idem est quod legitiuum vel purum; et sic feodum simplex idem est quod haereditas legitima vel haereditas pura. “Fee simple” is so called because fee is the same as inheritance and simple is the same as lawful or pure; and thus fee simple is the same as a lawful inheritance or a pure inheritance.

Fere secundum promissorem interpretamur. We generally interpret in favor of the promisor.

Festinatio justitiae est noverca infortunii. The hurrying of justice is the stepmother of misfortune.

Fiat justitia pereat mundus. Let justice be done though the world perish.

Fiat justitia ruat caelum. Let justice be done though the heavens fall. • The word caelum sometimes appears coelum, but the form caelum is considered better Latin.

Fiat prout fieri consuevit, nih temere novandum. Let it be done as it is accustomed to be done; let no innovation be made rashly.

Fictio cedit veritati; fictio juris non est ubi veritas. Fiction yields to truth; where the truth appears, there is no fiction of law.

Fictio est contra veritatem, sed pro veritate habetur. Fiction is contrary to the truth, but it is regarded as truth.

Fictio juris non est ubi veritas. Where truth is, fiction of law does not exist.

Fictio legis inique operatur alicui damnum vel injuriam. Fiction of law works unjustly if it works loss or injury to anyone.

Fictio legis neminem laedit. A fiction of law injures no one.

Fides est obligatio conscientiae alicujus ad intentionem alterius. Faith is an obligation of conscience of one to the will of another.

Fides servanda est. Faith must be observed. • An agent must not violate the confidence reposed in him or her.

Fides servanda est; simplicitas juris gentium praevaleat. Faith is to be preserved; the simplicity of the law of nations should prevail.

Fieri non debet, sed factum valet. It ought not to be done, but if done it is valid.

Filiatio non potest probari. Filiation cannot be proved. • That is, the husband is presumed to be the father of a child born during coverture.

Filius est nomen naturae, sed haeres nomen juris. “Son” is a name of nature, but “heir” a name of law.

Filius in utero matrix est pars viscerum matrix. A child in the mother’s womb is part of the mother’s vitals.

Finis est amicabilis compositio et finalis concordia ex concensu et concordia domini regis vel justiciarum. A fine is an amicable settlement and decisive agreement by consent and agreement of our lord, the king, or his justices.

Finis finem litibus imponit. A fine puts an end to litigation.

Finis rei attendendus est. The end of a thing is to be attended to.

Finis unius diei est principium alterius. The end of one day is the beginning of another.

Firmior et potentior est operatio legis quam dispositio hominis. The operation of law is firmer and more powerful than the will of man.

Flumina et portus publica sunt, ideoque jus piscandi omnibus commune est. Rivers and ports are public; and therefore the right of fishing is common to all.

Foeminae ab omnibus officiis civilibus vel publicis remotae sunt. Women are excluded from all civil and public charges or offices.

Foeminae non sunt capaces de publicis officiis. Women are not qualified for public offices.

Forma dat esse. Form gives being.

Forma legalis forma essentialis. Legal form is essential form.

Forma non observata, infertur adnullatio actus. When form is not observed, a nullity of the act is inferred.

Forstellarius est pauperum depressor, et totius communis et patriae publicus inimicus. A forestaller is an oppressor of the poor, and a public enemy of the whole community and the country.

Fortior est custodia legis quam hominis. The custody of the law is stronger than that of man.

Fortior et potentior est dispositio legis quam hominis. The disposition of the law is stronger and more powerful than that of man.

Fractionem diei non recipit lex. The law does not regard a fraction of a day.

Fratris fratris uterino non succedit in haereditate paterna. A brother shall not succeed a uterine brother in the paternal inheritance.

Fraus est celare fraudem. It is a fraud to conceal a fraud.

Fraus est odioa et non praesumenda. Fraud is odious and not to be presumed.

Fraus et dolus nemini patrocinari debent. Fraud and deceit should excuse no one.

Fraus et jus nunquam cohabitant. Fraud and justice never dwell together.

Fraus latet in generalibus. Fraud lies hidden in general expressions.

Fraus meretur fraudem. Fraud deserves fraud.

Frequenta actus multum operatur. The frequency of an act has much effect. • Continual usage establishes a right.

Fructus augent haereditatem. Fruits enhance an inheritance.

Fructus pendentes pars fundi videntur. Hanging fruits are considered part of the parcel of land.
Fructus perceptos villae non esse constat. It is agreed that gathered fruits are not a part of the farm.

Frumenta quae sata sunt solo cedere intelliguntur. Grain that has been sown is understood to belong to the soil.

Frustra agit qui judicium prosequi nequit cum effectu. A person sues in vain who cannot prosecute his judgment with effect.

Frustra est potentia quae nunquam venit in actum. Power that never comes to be exercised is useless.

Frustra expectatur eventus cujus effectus nullus. An event is vainly awaited from which no effect follows.

Frustra legis auxilium quaerit qui in legem committit. Vainly does a person who offends against the law seek the help of the law.

Frustra petis quod statim alter; reddere cogeris. Vainly you seek what you will immediately be compelled to give back to another.

Frustra probatur quod probatum non relevat. It is useless to prove what if proved would not aid the matter in question.

Furor contrahi matrimonium non sinit, quia consensu opus est. Insanity prevents marriage from being contracted, because consent is needed.

Furiosi nulla voluntas est. An insane person has no will.

Furiosus absentis loco est. An insane person is considered as absent.

Furiosus nullum negotium contrahere (gerere) potest (quia non intelligit quod agit). An insane person cannot make a contract (because he does not understand what he is doing).

Furiosus solo furore punitur. An insane person is punished by insanity alone.

Furor contrahi matrimonium non sinit, quia consensu opus est. Insanity prevents marriage from being contracted, because consent is needed.

Haereditas est successio in universum jus quod defunctus habuerat. Inheritance is the succession to every right possessed by the late possessor.

Haereditas nihil aliud est quam successio in universum jus, quod defunctus habuerat. The right of inheritance is nothing other than the faculty of succeeding to all the rights of the deceased.
Haereditas nunquam ascendit. An inheritance never ascends.

Haeredum appellatione veniunt haeredes haeredum in infinitum. By the title of heirs, come the heirs of heirs to infinity.

Haeres est alter ipse, et filius est pars patris. An heir is another self, and a son is a part of the father.

Haeres est aut jure proprietatis aut jure representationis. A person is an heir by either right of property or right of representation.

Haeres est eadem persona cum antecessore. The heir is the same person as the ancestor.

Haeres est nomen collectivum. “Heir” is a collective noun.

Haeres est nomen juris, filius est nomen naturae. “Heir” is a term of law; “son” is one of nature.

Haeres est pars antecessoris. An heir is a part of the ancestor.

Haeres haeredis mei est meus haeres. The heir of my heir is my heir.

Haeres legitimus est quem nuptiae demonstrant. The lawful heir is the one whom the marriage indicates (i.e., who is born in wedlock).

Haeres minor uno et viginti annis non respondebit, nisi in casu dotis. An heir under 21 years of age is not answerable, except in the matter of the dower.

Hoc servabitur quod initio con venit. This maxim is sometimes written "Homo et capax et incapax esse potest in diversis temporibus. A person may be capable and incapable at different times. • This maxim is sometimes written Homo potest esse habilis et inabilis diversis temporibus (same sense).

Homo vocabulum est naturae; persona juris civilis. “Man” (homo) is a term of nature; “person” (persona), a term of civil law.

Hora non est multum de substantia negotii, licet in appello de ea aliquando fiat mentio. The hour is not of much consequence to the substance of business, although in appeal it is sometimes mentioned.

Hostes sunt qui nobis vel quibus nos bellum decernimus; caeteri proditores vel praedones sunt. Enemies are those on whom we declare war, or who declare it against us; all others are traitors or pirates.

Ibi semper debet fieri triatio ubi juratores meliorem possunt habere notitiam. A trial should always be held where the jurors can have the best information.

Id certum est quod certum reddi potest. That is certain which can be made certain.

Id certum est quod certum reddi potest, sed id magis certum est quod de semetipso est certum. That is certain which can be made certain, but that is more certain which is certain of itself.

Idem agentes et patientes esse non potest. The same person cannot be both agent and patient (i.e., the doer and person to whom the thing is done).

Idem est facere et non prohibere cum possis. It is the same thing to commit an act and to refuse to prohibit it when you can.

Idem est facere et non prohibere cum possis; et qui non prohibet cum prohibere possit in culpa est (aut jubet). It is the same thing to commit an act and not to prohibit it when you can; and he who does not prohibit when he can prohibit is at fault (or does the same as ordering it to be done).

Idem est nihil dicere et insufficienter dicere. It is the same thing to say nothing and not to say enough. • To say a thing in an insufficient manner is the same as not to say it at all. Applied to the plea of a prisoner.

Idem est non esse et non apparere. It is the same thing not to be as not to appear. • What does not appear on the record is considered nonexistent.

Idem est non probari et non esse; non deficit jus sed probatio. It is the same thing not to be proved and not to exist; the law is not deficient but the proof.

Idem est scire aut scire debere aut potuisse. To be bound to know or to have been able to know is the same as to know.

Idem non esse et non apparere. It is the same thing not to exist and not to appear.

Idem semper antecedenti proximo referitur. Idem (the same) always refers to the nearest antecedent.

Identitas vera colligitur ex multitudo signorum. True identity is collected from a great number of signs.

Id perfectum est quod ex omnibus suis partibus constat. That is perfect which is complete in all its parts.

Id perfectum est quod ex omnibus suis partibus constat; et nihil perfectum est dum aliquid restat agendum. That is perfect which is complete in all its parts; and nothing is perfect while anything remains to be done.

Id possimus quod de jure possimus. We are able to do that which we can do lawfully.

Id quod est magis remotum non trahit ad se quod est magis junctum, sed e contrario in omni casu. That which is more removed does not draw to itself what is more closely joined, but to the contrary in every case.

Id quod nostrum est sine facto nostro ad alium transferri non potest. What belongs to us cannot be transferred to another without our act (or deed).

Id solum nostrum quod debitis deductis nostrum est. That alone is ours which is ours after debts have been deducted.
Id tantum possimus quod de jure possimus. We can do only what we can lawfully do.

Ignorantia eorum quae quis scire tenetur non excusat. Ignorance of those things that anyone is bound to know does not excuse.

Ignorantia excusatur non juris sed facti. Ignorance of fact is excused but not ignorance of law.

Ignorantia facti excusat, ignorantia juris non excusat. Ignorance of fact excuses; ignorance of law does not excuse. • Every person must be considered cognizant of the law; otherwise, there is no limit to the excuse of ignorance. [Cases: Contracts C=93; Criminal Law C=33; Equity C=6.]

Ignorantia judicis est calamitas innocentis. The ignorance of the judge is the misfortune of the innocent.

Ignorantia juris non excusat. Ignorance of the law does not excuse. [Cases: Criminal Law C=32; Equity C=7.]

Ignorantia juris quod quisque scire tenetur neminem excusat. Ignorance of the law, which everyone is bound to know, excuses no one.

Ignorantia juris sui non praepredicit juri. Ignorance of one’s right does not prejudice the right.

Ignorantia legem neminem excusat. Ignorance of law excuses no one.

Ignorantia praemunitur ubi scientia non probatur. Ignorance is presumed where knowledge is not proved.

Ignorare leges est lata culpa. To be ignorant of the law is gross neglect of it.

Ignoratius terminis artis, ignoratur et ars. Where the terms of an art are unknown, the art is also unknown.

Ignoscitur ei qui sanguinem suum qualiter redemptum. A person is forgiven who chose to purchase his own blood (or life) on any terms whatsoever.

Illud quod alias licitum non est, necessitas facit licitum, et necessitas induct privilegium quod jure privatur. That which is not otherwise lawful, necessity makes lawful; and necessity brings in as a privilege what is denied by right. 10 Coke 61.

Immobilia situm sequuntur. Immovables follow (the law of) their locality.

Imperii majestas est tutelae salus. The majesty of the empire is the safety of its protection.

Imperitia culpae annumeratur. Unskillfulness is reckoned as a fault (as blameworthy conduct or neglect). • Also termed Imperitia enumeratur culpae.

Imperitia est maxima mechanicorum poena. Unskillfulness is the greatest punishment of mechanics (i.e., from its effect in making them liable to those by whom they are employed).

Impersonalitas non concludit nec ligat. Impersonality neither concludes nor binds.

Impius et crudelis judicandus est qui libertati non faveat. A person is to be judged impious and cruel who does not favor liberty.

Impotentiala nulla obligatio est. There is no obligation to perform impossible things.

Impunitas semper ad deteriora invitat. Impunity invites (an offender) to ever worse offenses.

In aequali jure melior est conditio possidentis. When the parties have equal rights, the condition of the possessor is the better.

In alta proditione nullus potest esse accessorius sed principalis solummodo. In high treason no one can be an accessory but only a principal.

In alternativis electio est debitoris. The debtor has the choice among alternatives.

In ambiguis orationibus maxime sententia spectanda est e jure qui eas protulisset. In ambiguous expressions, the opinion (or meaning) of the person who made them is chiefly to be regarded.

In ambiguis casibus semper praesumitur pro rege. In doubtful cases the presumption is always in favor of the king.

In ambiguis orationibus maxime sententia spectanda est ejus qui eas protulisset. In ambiguous expressions, the opinion (or meaning) of the person who made them is chiefly to be regarded.

In ambiguo sermone non utrumque dicimus sed id duntaxat quod volumus. When the language we use is ambiguous, we do not use it in a double sense, but merely in the sense that we intend.

In Anglia non est interregnum. In England there is no interregnum. • The heir to the throne is understood to succeed from the instant of his predecessor’s death or removal.

In atrociaribus delictis punitur affectus licet non sequatur effectus. In the more atrocious crimes, the intent (or attempt) is punished even if the effect does not follow.
In casu extremae necessitatis omnia sunt communia. In a case of extreme necessity, everything is in common.

Incaute factum pro non facto habetur. An alteration done carelessly (inadvertently) will be taken as not done. Dig. 28.4.1.

Incendium aere alieno non exuit debitorem. A fire does not release a debtor from his debt.

Incerta pro nullis habentur. Things uncertain are considered as nothing.

Incerta quantitas vitiat actum. An uncertain quantity vitiates the act.

Incivile est, nisi tota sententia inspecta, de aliqua parte judicare vel respondere. It is improper, unless the whole law has been examined, to give judgment or advice on any single clause of it.

Incivile est, nisi tota lege prospecta, una aliqua pars rationis est consideranda. It is improper to give an opinion on any part of a passage without examining the whole.

In claris non est locus conjecturis. In obvious instances there is no room for conjectures.

Inclusio unius est exclusio alterius. See Exessio unius est exclusio alterius.

Incolas domicilium facit. Literally, the domicile makes the residents. • That is, the principal place of residence establishes legal residency. Often rendered conversely, Incola domicilium fact (residence creates domicile).

In commodato haec pactio, ne dolus praestetur, rata non est. In a loan for use (commodatum), a pact excluding liability for fraud is invalid. • Often extended to contracts for loans in general. Dig. 13.6.17.

Incommode non solvit argumentum. An inconvenience does not solve (or demolish) an argument.

In conjunctivis aportet utramque partem esse veram. In conjunctive constructions, each part must be true.

In consimili casu consimile debet esse remedium. In a similar case, the remedy should be similar.

In consuetudinibus non diuturnitas temporis sed soliditas rationis est consideranda. In customs, not length of time but the soundness of the reason should be considered.

In contractibus, benigna; in testamentis, benignior; in restitutionibus, benignissima interpretatio facienda est. In contracts, the interpretation or construction should be liberal; in wills, more liberal; in restitutions, most liberal.

In contractibus, rei veritas potius quam scriptura perspici debet. In contracts, the truth of the matter ought to be regarded rather than the writing.

In contractibus tacite insunt quae sunt moris et consuetudinis. In contracts, matters of custom and usage are tacitly implied. • A contract is understood to contain the customary clauses, although they are not expressed.

In contrahenda venditione, ambiguum pactum contra venditorem interpretandum est. In the contract of sale, an ambiguous agreement is to be interpreted against the seller.

In conventionibus, contrahentium voluntas potius quam verba spectari placuit. In agreements, the intention of the contracting parties should be regarded more than their words.

Incrorpalia bello non adquiruntur. Incorporeal things are not acquired by war.

In criminalibus probationes debent esse luce dariores. In criminal cases, the proofs ought to be clearer than light.

In criminalibus sufficit generalis malitia intentionis cum facto paris gradus. In criminal cases, a general wickedness of intention is sufficient if combined with an act of equal or corresponding degree.

In criminalibus voluntas reputabitur pro facto. In criminal matters, the intent will be reckoned as the deed. • In criminal attempts or conspiracy, the intention is considered in place of the act. 3 Inst. 106.

In dubio, haec legis constructio quam verba ostendunt. The interpretation of words is considered rather than the writing.

Indefinitum acquipollet universali. The undefined is equivalent to the whole.

Inde datae leges ne fortior omnia posset. Laws were made lest the stronger should have unlimited power.

Indefinitum supplet locum universalis. The undefined supplies the place of the whole.

Independerter se habet assuecario a viaggio navis. The route insured is distinct from the voyage of the ship.

Index animi sermo. Speech is the index of the mind. • This maxim is also sometimes written Index animi sermo est (and can also be translated as, “Speech is an indication of thought”).

Indictment de felony est contra pacem domini regis, coronam et dignitatem suam, in genere et non in individuo; quia in Anglia non est interregnum. Indictment for felony is against the peace of our lord the king, his crown and dignity, in general and not in his individual person; because in England there is no interregnum.

In disjunctivis sufficit alteram partem esse veram. In disjunctive constructions, it is sufficient if either part is true.

In dubis benigniora praefectio sunt. In doubtful cases, the more liberal constructions are to be preferred.

In dubis magis dignum est accipienda. In doubtful cases, the more worthy is to be accepted.

In dubis non praesumitur pro testamento. In doubtful cases, there is not presumption in favor of the will.

In dubio, haec legis constructio quam verba ostendunt. In a doubtful case, the construction of the law is what the words indicate.
In dubio, pars mitior est sequenda. In a doubtful case, the gentler course is to be followed.

In dubio, pro lege fori. In a doubtful case, the law of the forum (is to be favored).

In dubio, sequendum quod tutius est. In a doubtful case, the safer course is to be followed.

In eo quod plus sit semper inest et minus. The lesser is always included in the greater.

Inese potest donationi modus, conditio sive causa; ut modus est; si conditio; quia causa. In a gift there may be manner, condition, or cause; as (ut) introduces a manner; if (si), a condition; because (quia), a cause.

In expositione instrumentorum, mala grammatica, quod fieri potest, vitanda est. In the construction of instruments, bad grammar is to be avoided as much as possible.

In facto quod se habet ad bonum et malum magis de bona quam de malo lex intendit. In an act (or deed) that may be considered good or bad, the law looks more to the good than to the bad.

Infans non multum a furioso distat. An infant does not differ much from a lunatic.

In favorabilibus magis attenditur quod prodest quam quod nocet. In things favored, what does good is more regarded than what does harm.

In favorem vitae, libertatis, et innocentiae omnia prae­sumuntur. All presumptions are in favor of life, liberty, and innocence.

In fictione juris semper aequitas existit. In a fiction of law there is always equity. • A legal fiction is always consistent with equity.

In fictione juris semper subsistit aequitas. In a legal fiction equity always abides (or prevails).

Infinitum in jure reprobutur. That which is endless is condemned in law.

In generalibus latet error. Error lurks in general expressions. • This maxim is sometimes written In generalibus versatur error (meaning "error dwells in general expressions").

In genere quicunque aliquid dicit, sive actor sive reus, necesse est ut probat. In general, whoever alleges anything, whether plaintiff or defendant, must prove it.

In haeredes non solent transire actiones quae poenales ex maleficio sunt. Penal actions arising from anything of a criminal nature do not pass to heirs.

In his enim quae sunt favorabilia animae, quamvis sunt damnosa rebus, fiat aliquando extensio statuti. In things that are favorable to the spirit, though injurious to property, an extension of the statute should sometimes be made.

In his quae de jure communi omnibus conceduntur, consuetudo aliquijus patriae vel loci non est alleganda. In those things that by common right are conceded to all, the custom of a particular country or place is not to be adduced.

Iniquissima pax est anteponenda justissimo bello. The most unjust peace is to be preferred to the justest war.

Iniquum est alium permittere, alioshibere mercaturam. It is inequitable to permit some to trade and to prohibit others to do so.

Iniquum est aliquem rei sui esse judicem. It is unjust for anyone to be judge in his own cause.

Iniquum est ingenuis hominibus non esse libiram rerum suarum alienationem. It is unjust for freeborn individuals not to have the free disposal of their own property.

In judiciis minori aetati succurritur. In judicial proceedings, allowance is made for a minor (in age).

In judicio non creditur nisi juratis. In court no one is trusted except those sworn.

In jurce non remota causa, sed proxima, spectatur. In law, the proximate, and not the remote, cause is regarded. [Cases: Negligence §383.]

In jurce omnis definitio periculosae est. In law every definition is dangerous.

Injurja fit ei cui convicium dictum est, vel de eo factum carmen famosum. An injury is done to the person of whom an insult was said, or concerning whom an infamous song was made.

Injuriallata judici, seu locum tenenti regis, videtur ipsi regi illata, maxime si fiat in exercente officium. An injury offered to a judge, or person representing the king, is considered as offered to the king himself, especially if it is done in the exercise of his office.

Injurja non excusat injuriam. A wrong does not excuse a wrong.

Injurja non praesumitur. A wrong is not presumed.

Injurja propria non cadet beneficium facientis. No benefit shall accrue to a person from his own wrongdoing.

Injurja servidominumpertingit. The servant’s wrongdoing reaches the master. • The master is liable for injury done by his servant.

Injustum est, nisi tota lege inspecta, de una aliqua ejus particula proposita judicare vel respondere. It is unjust to give judgment or opinion concerning any particular clause of a law without having examined the whole law.

In majore summa continetur minor. In the greater sum is contained the less.

In maleficiis voluntasspectatur, non exitus. In criminal offenses, the intention is regarded, not the event.

In maleficio ratihabitum mandato comparatur. In delict (or tort), ratification is equivalent to authorization. Dig. 43.16.1.15.

In maxima potentia minima licentia. In the greatest power there is the least license.
In mercibus illicitis non sit commercium. Let there be no commerce in illicit goods.

In novo casu novum remedium apponendum est. In a novel case a new legal remedy must be applied.

In obscuris inspicisolore quod verisimilium est, aut quod plerumque fieri soleat. In obscure cases it is usual to regard what is more probable or what is more often done.

In obscuris quod minimum est sequimur. In obscure cases, we follow what is least so.

In odium spoliatoris omnia praesumuntur. Everything is presumed to the prejudice of the despoiler. [Cases: Evidence C⇒78.]

In omnibus contractibus, sive nominatis sive innominatis, permutatio continetur. In all contracts, whether express or implied, there must be something given in exchange. 2 Bl. Com. 444.

In omnibus (fere) poenalibus judicis, et aetati et imprudentiae succurratur. In almost all penal judgments, allowance is made for age (or youth) and lack of discretion. Dig. 50.17.108.

In omnibus obligationibus, in quibus dies non ponitur, prae senti die debetur. In all obligations, when no date is fixed (for performance), the thing is due the same day.

In omnibus quidem, maxime tamen in jure, aequitas spectanda sit. In all affairs indeed, but especially in those that concern the administration of justice, equity should be regarded.

In omnire nascitur res quae ipsam rem externamin. In everything, the thing is born that ends the thing itself.

In pari causa possessor potior haberi debet. When two parties have equal claims, the possessor should be considered the stronger. ● The phrase is also translated in this way; in an equal case the possessor ought to be preferred.

In pari causa potior est conditio possidentis. When two parties have equal claims, the position of the possessor is the stronger.

In pari delicto melior est conditio possidentis. When both parties are equally at fault, the position of the possessor is the better.

In pari delicto potior est conditio defendentis. Where both parties are equally in the wrong, the position of the defendant is the stronger. [Cases: Action C⇒-4; Equity C⇒65.]

In poenalibus causis benignius interpretandum est. In penal cases, the more liberal interpretation is to be made.

In praeparatorii ad judicium favetur actori. In things preparatory to trial, the plaintiff is favored.

In praesentia majoris cessat potentia minoris. In the presence of the superior, the power of the inferior ceases. ● This maxim is sometimes written In praesent ia majoris potestatis, minor potestas cessat (meaning “in the presence of the superior power, the minor power ceases”).

In pretio emptionis et venditionis naturaliter licet con trahentibus se circumvenire. In setting the price for buying and selling, it is naturally allowed to the contracting parties to get the better of each other.

In propria causa nemo judex. No one can be judge in his own cause.

In quo quis delinquit, in eo de jure est puniendus. In whatever matter one offends, in that the person is rightfully to be punished. ● Coke refers to forfeiture of the office abused. Co. Litt. 233b.

In rebus manifestis errat qui auctoritates legum allegat; quia perspicua vera non sunt probanda. A person errs who adduces authorities on the law in matters self-evident; because obvious truths need not be proved.

In rebus quae sunt favorabilia animae, quamvis sunt damnosa rebus, fiat aliquando extensio statuti. In things that are favorable to people, though injurious to the things, a statute should sometimes be extended.

In re communem neminem dominorum jure facere quicquam, invito altero, possit. In common property no one of the coproprietors can do (or make) anything against the will of the other. Dig. 10.3.28.

In re dubia benigniorem interpretationem sequi non minus justius est quam tutius. In a doubtful matter, to follow the more liberal interpretation is as much the more just as it is the safer course.

In re dubia magis inspiratio quam affirmatio intel ligenda. In a doubtful matter, the negation is to be understood rather than the affirmation.

In re lupanari testes lupanares admittentur. In a matter concerning a brothel, prostitutes will be admitted as witnesses.

In re pari potiorem causam esse prohibentis constat. Where the parties have equal rights (in common property), it is an established principle that the one prohibiting has the stronger cause. Dig. 10.3.28.

In re propria iniquum admodum est alicui licentiamtribuere sententiae. It is extremely unjust to assign anyone the privilege of judgment in his own cause.

In republica maxime conservanda sunt jura belli. The laws of war must be especially preserved in the state.

In restitutionem, non in poenam, haeres succedit. The heir succeeds to the restitution, not the penalty.
In restitutionibus benignissima interpretatio facienda est. The most favorable construction is to be made in restitutions.

Insanus est qui, abjecta ratione, omnia cum impetu et furore facit. The person is insane who, having cast aside reason, does everything with violence and rage.

In satisfactionibus non permittitur amplius fieri quam semel factum est. In payments, it is not permitted that more be received than has been received once for all (i.e., after payment in full).

Instans est finis unius temporis et principium alterius. An instant is the end of one time and the beginning of another.

In stipulationibus cum quaeritur quid actum sit, verba contra stipulatorem interpretanda sunt. In agreements, when there is a question whether action has been taken, the terms are to be interpreted against the party offering them.

In stipulationibus id tempus spectatur quo contrahimus. In payments, it is not permitted that more be received than has been received once for all (i.e., after payment in full).

Instans est finis unius temporis et principium alterius. An instant is the end of one time and the beginning of another.

In suo quisque negotio hebetior est quam in alieno. Everyone is less perceptive (of flaws) in his own business than in that of another.

Intentio caeca mala. A concealed intention is an evil one.

Intentio inservire debet legibus, non leges intentioni. The intention ought to be subject to the laws, not the laws to the intention.

Intentio mea imponit nomen operi meo. My intent gives a name to my act.

Inter alios res gestas aliis non posse praecipsum facere saepe constitutum est. It has been often decided that matters transacted between other parties cannot cause prejudice (to those who were not involved).

Inter arma silent leges. Amid the arms of war the laws are silent.

Interdum venit ut exceptio quae prima facie justa videtur tamen inique noceat. It sometimes happens that a plea that seems prima facie just is nevertheless injurious and unfair.

Interest reipublicae ne maleficia remaneant impunita. It is in the interest of the state that crimes not remain unpunished.

Interest reipublicae ne sua quis male utatur. It is in the interest of the state that no one misuse his own property.

Interest reipublicae quod homines conserventur. It is in the interest of the state that people should be protected.

Interest reipublicae res judicatas non rescindi. It is in the interest of the state that judgments already given not be rescinded.

Interest reipublicae suprema hominum testamenta rata haberi. It is in the interest of the state that a person's last will should be held valid.

Interest reipublicae ut carceres sint in tuto. It is in the interest of the state that prisons should be secure.

Interest reipublicae ut pax in regno conservetur et quaeque paci adversentur provide declinentur. It is in the interest of the state to preserve peace in the kingdom and prudently to decline whatever is adverse to it.

Interest reipublicae ut quilibet re sua bene utatur. It is in the interest of the state that each person make good use of his own property.

Interest reipublicae ut sit finis litium. It is in the interest of the state that there be a limit to litigation.

Interpretare et concordare leges legibus est optimus interpretandi modus. To interpret and reconcile laws so they harmonize is the best mode of construction.

Interpretatio chartarum benigne facienda est ut res magis valeat quam pereat. The construction of a deed is to be made liberally, that the thing may rather take effect than perish.

Interpretatio fienda est ut res magis valeat quam pereat. Such a construction should be made that the measure may take effect rather than fail.

Interpretatio talis in ambiguis semper fienda est ut evitetur inconveniens et absurdum. In ambiguities, a construction should always be found such that what is unsuitable and absurd may be avoided.

Interruptio multiplex non tollit praescriptionem semel obtentam. Repeated interruptions do not remove a prescription (or acquisition by long use) once it has been obtained.

In testamentis plenius testatoris intentionem scrutumur. In wills we diligently examine the testator's intention.

In toto et pars continetur. In the whole the part also is included.

In traditionibus scriptorum (chartarum) non quod dictum est, sed quod gestum (factum) est, inspicitur. In the delivery of writings (deeds), not what is said but what is done is to be considered.

Inutilis labor et sine fructu non est effectus legis. Useless and fruitless labor is not the effect of law.
Inveniens libellum famosum et non corrumpens punitur. A person who discovers a libel and does not destroy it is punished.

In veram quantitatem fidejussor teneatur, nisi pro certa quantitate accessit. Let the surety be held for the true amount unless he agreed for a certain amount.

In verbis non verba sed res et ratio quae renda est. In wording, it is not the words but the substance and the meaning that is to be sought.

Invito beneficium non datur. No benefit is given to one unwilling. • No one is obliged to accept a benefit against his consent. Dig. 50.17.69.

In vocibus videndum non a quo sed ad quid sumatur. In discourse it is not the point from which but the end to which it is drawn that should be regarded.

Ipsae legescupiunt ut jure regantur. The laws themselves desire that they should be governed by right.

Ira furor brevis est. Anger is a short insanity.

Ita lex scripta est. So the law is written.

Ita semper fiat relatio ut valeat dispositio. Let the relation be so made that the disposition may stand.

Iter est jus eundi, ambulandi hominis; non etiam jumentum agendi vel vehiculum. A way is a right of going or walking for a human being, and does not include the right of driving a beast of burden or a carriage.

Judex acquisitatem semper spectare debet. A judge ought always to regard equity.

Judex ante oculos aequisitatem semper habere debet. A judge ought always to have equity before his eyes.

Judex bonus nihil ex arbitrio suo faciat nec proposizione domesticae voluntatis, sed juxta leges et jura pronunciet. A good judge should do nothing from his own preference or from the prompting of his private desire; but he should pronounce according to law and justice.

Judex damnatur cum nocens absolvitur. The judge is condemned when the guilty party is acquitted.

Judex debet judicare secundum allegata et probata. The judge ought to give judgment according to the allegations and the proofs.

Judex est lex loquens. The judge is the speaking law.

Judex habere debet duos sales, salem sapientiae, ne sit insipidus, et salem conscientiae, ne sit diabolus. A judge should have two salts: the salt of wisdom, lest he be foolish; and the salt of conscience, lest he be devilish.

Judex non potest esse testis in propria causa. A judge cannot be a witness in his own cause.

Judex non potest injuriam sibi datum punire. A judge cannot punish a wrong done to himself.

Judex non reddit plus quam quod petens ipse requirit. The judge does not give more than the plaintiff himself demands.

Judicandum est legibus non exemplis. Judgment must be given by the laws, not by examples.

Judices non tenentur exprimere causam sententiae suae. Judges are not bound to explain the reason of their judgments.

Judicia in curia regis non adnihilentur, sed stent in robore suo quousque per errorem aut attinctam adnullentur. Let judgments in the king’s court not be invalidated but remain in force until annulled by error or attain. 2 Inst. 360.

Judicia posteriora sunt in lege fortiora. The later decisions are stronger in law.

Judicia sunt tanquam juris dicta, et pro veritate accipuntur. Judgments are, as it were, the dicta (or sayings) of the law, and are received as truth.

Judicis posterioribus fides est adhibenda. Trust should be put in the later decisions.

Judici officium suum excedenti non paretur. A judge who exceeds his office (or jurisdiction) is not obeyed.

Judici satis poena est quod Deum habet ultorem. It is punishment enough for a judge that he has God to take vengeance on him.

Judicis est in pronuntiando sequi regulam, exceptione non probata. It is the proper role of a judge in rendering his decision to follow the rule, when the exception has not been proved.

Judicis est judicare secundum allegata et probata. It is the proper role of a judge to decide according to the allegations and proofs.

Judicis est jus dicere, non dare. It is the proper role of a judge to state the right, not to endow it. Generally interpreted, it is the duty of the judge to administer justice and not to make law.

Judicis officium est opus diei in die suo perficere. It is the duty of a judge to finish the work of each day within that day.

Judicis officium est ut res ita tempora rerum quaerere; quae sit tempore tutus eris. It is the duty of a judge to inquire into the timing of events as much as the matters themselves; by inquiring into the time, you will be safe.

Judicium a non suo judicte datum nullius est momenti. A judgment given by a person who is not its proper judge (not in the proper jurisdiction) is of no consequence. 10 Coke 76.

Judicium est quasi juris dictum. Judgment is, as it were, a pronouncement of the right (or a saying of the law).

Judicium non debet esse illusorium, suum effectum habe. A judgment ought not to be illusory (or deceptive); it ought to have its proper effect. 2 Co. Inst. 341.
Judicium redditur in invitum, in praesumptione legis. In presumption of law, a judgment is given against one’s will.

Judicium semper pro veritate accipitur. A judgment is always taken for truth.

Juncta juvunt. Things joined together are helpful.

Jura ecclesiastica limitata sunt infra limites separatos. Ecclesiastical laws are limited within separate bounds.

Jura eodem modo destituuntur quo constituuntur. Laws are abrogated or repealed by the same means by which they are made.

Juramentum est indivisible, et non est admissendum in parte verum et in parte falsum. An oath is indivisible; it is not to be accepted as partly true and partly false.

Jura naturae sunt immutabilia. The laws of nature are unchangeable.

Jura publica ante ferenda privatis. Public rights are to be preferred to private.

Jura publica ex privato promiscue decidi non debent. Public rights ought not to be determined in confusion, from private considerations. In Coke’s example, the validity of a sheriff’s warrant is not affected by a dispute among the parties. Co. Litt. 181b.

Jurare est Deum in testem vocare, et est actus divini cultus. To swear is to call God to witness, and is an act of religion.

Jura regis specialia non conceduntur per generalia verba. The special rights of the king are not granted by general words.

Jura sanguinis nullo jure civili dirimi possunt. The rights of blood (or kinship) cannot be destroyed by any civil law.

Jurato creditur in judicio. In judgment credit is given to the swearer.

Juratores debent esse vicini, sufficientes et minus suspecti. Jurors ought to be neighbors, of sufficient means and free from suspicion (literally, less suspected).

Juratores sunt judices facti. The jurors are the judges of fact.

Juratus creditur in judicio. In judgment a person who has sworn an oath is believed.

Jure naturae aequum est neminem cum alius facere detrimentum et injuriam. By the law of nature, it is just that no one should be enriched to the detriment and injury of another.

Juri non est consonum quod aliquis accessorius in curia regis convincatur ante quem aliquis de facto fuerit attinctus. It is not consonant to justice that any accessory should be convicted in the king’s court before anyone has been attainted of the fact (i.e., under sentence of attainer for committing the act). Generally interpreted, to declare the law (and) not to make it.

Jus accrescendi inter mercatores locum non habet. For the benefit of commerce, there is no right of accrual among merchants.

Jus accrescendi inter mercatores, pro beneficio commercedi. For the good of commerce, the right of survivorship has no place among merchants. [Cases: Partnership & 76.]

Jurus quidem ignorantiam cuique nocere, facti verum ignorantiam non nocere. Ignorance of law is prejudicial to everyone, but ignorance of fact is not.

Jurus praecipua sunt haec, honeste vivere, alterum non laedere, suum quique tribuere. These are the precepts of the law: to live honorably, not to injure another, to render to each person his due. Just. Inst. 1.1.

Jurisprudentia est divinarum atque humanarum rerum notitia, justi atque injusti scientia. Jurisprudence is the knowledge of things divine and human, the science of the just and the unjust. Just. Inst. 1.1.1.

Jurisprudentia legis communis Angliae est scientia socialis et copiosa. The jurisprudence of the common law of England is a social science comprehensive in scope.

Jus accrescendi inter mercatores, pro beneficio commercii. For the good of commerce, the right of survivorship is preferred to incumbrances.

Jus accrescendi praefertur oneribus. The right of survivorship is preferred to burdens.

Jus accrescendi praefertur ultimae voluntati. The right of survivorship is preferred to a last will.

Jus civilis est quod sibi populus constituit. The civil law is what a people has established for itself.

Jus constitui oportet in his quae ut plurimum accidunt, non quae ex inopinato. Law ought to be made with a view to the cases that happen most frequently, and not to those that are unexpected.

Jus descendit, et non terra. A right descends, and not the land.

Jus dicere (et) non jus dare. To state the right (and) not to make it. Generally interpreted, to declare the law (and) not to make it.

Jus est ars boni et aequi. Law is the science of what is good and just.

Jus est norma recti; et quicquid est contra normam recti est injuria. The law is the rule of right; and whatever is contrary to the rule of right is an injury.

Jus et fraudes nunquam cohabitant. Right and fraud never abide together.
Jus ex injuria non oritur. A right does not arise from a wrong.

Jus in re inhaerit ossibus usufructuarii. A right in the thing cleaves to the person (literally, the bones) of the usufructuary.

Jusjurandi forma verbis differt, re convenit; hunc enim sensum habebet, ut Deus invocetur. The form of taking an oath differs in language, but agrees in meaning; for it ought to have this sense, that God is invoked.

Jusjurandum inter alios factum nec nocere nec proferre debebt. An oath made between third parties ought neither to hurt nor to profit.

Justitiae firmatur solium. By justice the throne is strength­ened.

Justice is a steady and unceas­ing disposition to render to every person his due.

Justice is double: punishing with severity, and truly preventing.

Justice is an excellent virtue and pleasing to the Most High.

Justice is to be denied to no one.

Justice is not to be denied or delayed.

Justice knoweth neither father nor mother; justice looks to truth alone.

Justice is not to be denied or delayed.

Justice is not to be denied or delayed.

Justice is pleasing to the Most High.

Justice is a steady and unceas­ing disposition to render to every person his due.

Justice is double: punishing with severity, and truly preventing.

Justice is an excellent virtue and pleasing to the Most High.

Justice is to be denied to no one.

La conscience est la plus changeante des règles. Con­science is the most changing of rules.

La ley favou la vie d’un home. The law favors a man’s life.

La ley favou l’inheritance d’un home. The law favors a man’s inheritance.

La ley voit plus tost suffer un mischiefe que un inconve­niency. The law will sooner suffer a mischief than an inconvenience.

Lata culpa dolo aequiparatur. Gross negligence is equiva­lent to fraud.

Le contrat fait la loi. The contract makes the law.

Legatos violare contra jus gentium est. It is contrary to the law of nations to do violence to ambassadors.

Legatum morte testatoris tantum confirmatur, sicut donatio inter vivos traditione sola. A legacy is confirmed by the death of the testator, in the same manner as a gift from a living person is by delivery alone.

Legatus regis vice fungitur a quo destinatur et honoran­dus est sicul ille cujus vicem gerit. An ambassador fills the place of the king by whom he is appointed, and is to be honored in the same way as the person whose place he fills.

Legem enim contractus dat. The contract gives the law.

Legem terrae amittentes perpetuum infamiae notam inde merito incurrunt. Those who lose the law of the land thereby justly incur an eternal stigma of infamy.

Leges Angliae sunt tripartitae: jus commune, consue­tudines, ac decreta comitiorum. The laws of England are threefold: common law, customs, and decrees of parliament.

Leges et constitutiones futuris certum est dare formam negotiis non ad facta praelater revocari; nisi nominatim et de praeterito tempore et adhuc pendentibus negotiosis cautum sit. Laws and statutes are regarded as regulating future negotiations not past transactions; unless they are expressly made to apply to both past and to pending matters.

Leges figendi et refigendi consuetudo est periculosissima. The practice of adding and annulling laws is a most dangerous one. 4 Coke pref.
Leges fixit pretio atque refixit. He shaped and reshaped laws for a price; he promulgated and annulled laws at a price. ● The reference is to a judge who took bribes.

Leges humanae nascuntur, vivunt, et moriuntur. Laws that humans have made are born, live, and die.

Leges naturae perfectissimae sunt et immutabiles; humani vero juris conditio semper in infinitum decurrit, et nihil est in eo quod perpetuo stare possit. The laws of nature are most perfect and immutable; but the condition of human law is an unending succession, and there is nothing in it that can stand forever.

Leges non verbis sed rebus impositae. Laws are imposed on affairs, not words.

Leges posterioris priori contrarias abrogant. Subsequent laws repeal prior conflicting ones. [Cases: Statutes 159, 162.]

Leges suum ligent latorem. Laws should bind their own author.

Leges vigilantibus, non dormientibus subveniunt. The laws aid those who keep watch, not those who sleep (that is, the vigilant, not the negligent). [Cases: Action 63; Equity 64.]

Legibus sumptis desinentibus, lege naturae utendum est. Where manmade laws fail, the law of nature must be used.

Legis constructio non facit injuriam. The construction of law does not do wrong.

Legis interpretatio legis vi omninom. The interpretation of law obtains the force of law. [Cases: Courts 108.]

Legislatorum est viva vox, rebus et non verbis legem imponere. The voice of legislators is a living voice, to impose laws on (actual) affairs and not on (mere) words.

Legis minister non tenetur, in executione officii sui, fugere aut retrocedere. The minister of the law is not bound, in the execution of his office, either to flee or to retreat.

Legit ime imperanti parere necesse est. One who commands lawfully must be obeyed.

Legitus haeres et filius est quem nuptiae demonstrant. A lawful son and heir is he whom the marriage declares to be lawful.

Le ley de Dieu et ley de terre sont tout un, et l’un et l’autre preferer et favor le common et publique bien del terre. The law of God and the law of the land are all one; and both promote and favor the common and public good of the land.

Le ley est le plus haut enheritance que le roy ad, car par le ley, il mesme et tous ses sujets sont rules, et si le ley ne fuit, nul roy ne nul enheritance serra. The law is the highest inheritance that the king possesses; for by the law both he and all his subjects are ruled; and if there were no law, there would be neither king nor inheritance.

Le salut du peuple est la supreme loi. The safety of the people is the highest law.

Les fictions naissent de la loi, et non la loi des fictions. Fictions arise from the law, and not law from fictions.

Les lois ne se chargent de punir que les actions exterieures. Laws undertake to punish only outward actions.

Lex aequitate gaudet. Law delights in equity.

Lex aequitate gaudeat; appetit perfectum; est norma recti. The law delights in equity: it covets perfection; it is a rule of right.

Lex aliquando sequitur aequitatem. The law sometimes follows equity.

Lex Angliae est lex misericordiae. The law of England is a law of mercy.

Lex Angliae lex terrae est. The law of England is the law of the land.

Lex Angliae non patitur absurdum. The law of England does not allow an absurdity.

Lex Angliae nunquam matris sed semper patris conditionem imitari partum judicat. The law of England rules that the offspring always follows the condition of the father, never that of the mother.

Lex Angliae nunquam sine parliamento mutari potest. The law of England can never be changed without (act of) parliament. ● This maxim is sometimes written Lex Angliae sine Parliamento mutari non potest (also translatable as “the law of England cannot be changed but by Parliament”).

Lex beneficia a consiliis remedium praestat. A beneficial law affords a remedy in a similar case.

Lex citius tolerare vult privatum damnum quam publicum malum. The law would sooner endure a private loss than a public evil.

Lex contra id quod praesumit probationem non recipit. The law accepts no proof against that which it presumes.

Lex deficere non potest in justitia exhibenda. The law cannot fail in dispensing justice.

Lex de futuro, judex de praeterito. The law (provides) for the future, the judge for the past.

Lex dilationes semper exhorret. The law always abhors delays.

Lex est ab aeterno. The law is from eternity.

Lex est dictamen rationis. Law is the dictate of reason.

Lex est exercitus judicum tutissimus dux. The law is the safest leader of the army of judges.

Lex est norma recti. Law is a rule of right.

Lex est ratio summa, quae jubet quae sunt utilia et necessaria, et contraria prohibet. Law is the highest form of reason, which commands what is useful and necessary and forbids the contrary.
Lex est sanction sancta, jubens honesta et prohibens contraria. Law is a sacred sanction, commanding what is right and prohibiting the contrary.

Lex est summa ratio. Law is the highest reason.

Lex est tutissima cassis; sub clypeo legis nemo decipitur. Law is the safest helmet; under the shield of the law no one is deceived.

Lex facit regem. Law makes the king (i.e., makes the monarch king).

Lex favet doti. The law favors dower.

Lex fingit ubi subsistit aequitas. The law creates a fiction where equity abides.

Lex intendit vicinum vicini facta scire. The law presumes that one neighbor knows the actions of another.

Lex judicat de rebus necessario faciendis quasi re ipsa factis. The law judges of things that must necessarily be done as if actually done.

Lex necessitatis est lex temporis, i.e., instantis. The law of necessity is the law of time, i.e., time present.

Lex neminem cogit ostendere quod nescire praesumit. The law forces no one to make known what he is presumed not to know.

Lex nemini facit injuriam. The law does wrong to no one. [Cases: Equity 1844.

Lex nemini operatur iniquum, nemini facit injuriam. The law works an injustice to no one and does wrong to no one. [Cases: Equity 1844.

Lex nil facit frustra, nil jubet frustra. The law does nothing in vain and commands nothing in vain.

Lex non a rege est violanda. The law is not to be violated by the king.

Lex non cogit ad impossibilita. The law does not compel to impossible ends.

Lex non curat de minimis. The law is not concerned with matters of least consequence. [Cases: Appeal and Error 112; Equity 134.

Lex non debet ducere conquerentibus in justitia exhibenda. The law ought not to fail in dispensing justice to those with a grievance.

Lex non deficit in justitia exhibenda. The law does not fail in showing justice.

Lex non exacte definit, sed arbitrario boni viri permittit. The law does not define exactly, but trusts in the judgment of a good man.

Lex non favor votis delicatorum. The law does not favor the wishes of the fastidious.

Lex non intendit aliquid impossibile. The law does not intend anything impossible.

Lex non novit patrem, nec matrem, solam veritatem. The law knows neither father nor mother; only the truth.

Lex non oritur ex injuria. The law does not arise from an unlawful act.

Lex non patitur fractiones et divisiones statuum. The law does not tolerate fractions and divisions of estates. 1 Coke 87a.

Lex non praecipit inutilia, quia inutilis labor stultus. The law does not command useless things, because useless labor is foolish. [Cases: Mandamus 1844.

Lex non requirit verificari quod appetur curiae. The law does not require that to be proved which is apparent to the court.

Lex plus laudatur quando ratione probatur. The law is more praised when it is consonant with reason.

Lex posterior derogat priori. A later statute repeals an earlier one.

Lex prospicit, non respicit. The law looks forward, not backward.

Lex punit mendaciam. The law punishes falsehood.

Lex rejecit superflua, pugnantia, incongrua. The law rejects superfluous, contradictory, and incongruous things.

Lex reprobat moram. The law disapproves of delay.

Lex respicit aequitatem. Law regards equity.

Lex scripta si cesset, id custodiri oportet quod moribus servari oportet. If the written law is silent, that which is drawn from manners and custom ought to be observed; and, if that is in any manner defective, then what is next and consistent with it; and, if that does not appear, then the law that Rome uses should be followed.

Lex semper dabit remedium. The law will always give a remedy.

Lex semper intendit quod convenit rationi. The law always intends what is agreeable to reason.

Lex spectat naturae ordinem. The law regards the order of nature.

Lex succurrit ignorantii. The law assists the ignorant.

Lex succurrit minoribus. The law assists minors.

Lex uno ore omnes alloquitur. The law speaks to all with one mouth.

Lex vigilantibus, non dormientibus. Law aids the watchful, not the sleeping.

Liberata pecunia non liberat offerentem. The return of money does not free the party presenting it (from liability).

Libertas est naturalis facultas ejus quod cuique facere libet, nisi quod de jure aut vi prohibetur. Liberty is the natural power of doing whatever one pleases, except what is prevented by law or force.

Libertas est res inestimabilis. Liberty is an inestimable thing.
Libertas inaestimabilis res est. Liberty is a priceless good.

Libertas non recipit aestimationem. Freedom does not admit of valuation.

Libertas omnibus rebus favorabili est. Liberty is more favored than all things.

Libertates regales ad coronam spectantes ex concessione regum a corona exierunt. Royal franchises relating to the Crown have emanated from the Crown by grant of kings.

Libertinum ingratum leges civiles in pristinam servitudinem reducunt. The civil laws reduce an ungrateful freedman to his original slavery; but the laws of England regard a person once manumitted as ever after free.

Liberum corpus nullam recipit aestimationem. The body of a free person allows no price to be set on it. Dig. 9.3.7.

Liberum est cuique apud se explorare an expediat sibi consilium. Everyone is free to ascertain for himself whether a recommendation is advantageous to him.

Librorum appellatione continetur omnia volumina. Under the name of books are contained all volumes, whether on paper, or on parchment, or on any other material.

Licita bene miscentur, formula nisi juris obstet. Lawful acts are well joined together, unless some form of law prevents it.

Ligeantia est quasi legis essentia; est vinculum fidei. Allegiance is, as it were, the essence of the law; it is the bond of faith.

Ligeantia est vinculum fidei; ligeantia est legis essentia. Allegiance is the bond of fealty and the essence of law.

Ligeantia naturalis nullis claustris coercetur, nullis metis refranatur, nullis finibus premitur. Natural allegiance is restrained by no barriers, curbed by no bounds, compressed by no limits.

Ligna et lapides sub armorum appellazione non continentur. Sticks and stones are not contained under the name of arms.

Linea recta est index sui et obliqui; lex est linea recta. A right line is an index of itself and of an oblique; law is a right line. Co. Litt. 158b.

Linea recta semper praefertur transversali. The right line is always preferred to the collateral.

Literae patentes regis non erunt vacuae. Letters patent of the king will not be void.

Literae scriptae manent. Written words last.

Litis nomen omnem actionem significat, sive in rem, sive in personam sit. The word "lis" (a lawsuit) signifies every action, whether it is in rem or in personam.

Litus est quoque maximus fluctus a mari pervenit. The shore is where the highest wave from the sea has reached.

L'obligation sans cause, ou sur une fausse cause, ou sur cause illicite, ne peut avoir aucun effet. An obligation without consideration, or on a false consideration, or on unlawful consideration, cannot have any effect.

Locus contractus regit actum. The place of the contract governs the act. [Cases: Contracts C-144.]

Locus pro solutione ediritus aut pecuniae secundum conditionem dimensionem aut obligationis est strie observandus. The place for the payment of rent or money is to be strictly observed according to the condition of the lease or obligation.

Longa patientia trahitur ad consensum. Long sufferance is construed as consent.

Longa possessio est pacis jus. Long possession is a right of peace.

Longa possessio jus parit. Long possession begets a right.

Longa possessio parit jus possidendi et tollit actionem vero domino. Long possession produces the right of possession and deprives the true owner of his action.

Longum tempus et longus usus qui excedit memoriam hominum sufficit pro jure. Long time and long use beyond the memory of men suffice for right.

Loquendum ut vulgus, sentiendum ut docti. We should speak as the common people; we should think as the learned.

Lucrum facere ex pupilli tutela tutor non debet. A guardian ought not to make money out of the guardianship of his ward.

Lunaticus, qui gaudet in lucidis intervallis. A person is (still) a lunatic who enjoys lucid intervals.

Magis de bono quam de malo lex intendit. The law favors a good rather than a bad construction. When an agreement's words are susceptible of both a favorable and unfavorable meaning, the former is adopted. Thus, a bond conditioned to assign all offices will be construed to apply to assignable offices.
Magister rerum usus; magistra rerum experientia. Use is the master of things; experience is the mistress of things.

Magna Charta et Charta de Foresta sont appelés les deux grandes charters. Magna Carta and the Charter of the Forest are called the two great charters.

Magna culpa dolus est. Great fault (or gross negligence) is equivalent to fraud.

Magna negligentia culpa est; magna culpa dolus est. Great negligence is fault; great fault is fraud.

Maihemium est homicidium inchoatum. Mayhem is incipient homicide.

Maihemium est inter crimina majora minimum, et inter minora maximum. Mayhem is the least of great crimes, and the greatest among small.

Maihemium est membri mutilatio, et dici poterit, ubi maihemium est inter crimina majora minimum, et inter minora maximum. Mayhem is the mutilation of a limb, and can be said (to occur) when a person is injured in any part of his body so as to be useless in a fight.

Major continet in se minus. The greater includes the less.

Majore poena affectus quam legibus statuta est non est infamis. A criminal afflicted with a greater punishment than is provided by law is not infamous. 4 Co. Inst. 66.

Major haereditas venit uniciuque nostrum a jure et legibus quam a parentibus. A greater inheritance comes to every one of us from right and the laws than comes from parents.

Majori summae minor inest. The lesser is included in the greater sum.

Major numerus in se continet minorem. The greater number contains in itself the less.

Majus continet minus. The greater contains the less.

Majus dignum trahit ad se minus dignum. The more worthy draws to itself the less worthy.

Majus est delictum seipsum occidere quam alium. It is a greater crime to kill one’s self than another.

Mala grammatica non vitiat chartam; sed in expositione instrumentorum mala grammatica quoad fieri possit evitanda est. Bad grammar does not vitiate a deed; but in the construction of instruments, bad grammar, as far as possible, is to be avoided.

Maledicta expositio quae corruumit textum. It is a cursed construction that corrupts the text.

Maleficia non debent remanere impunita, et impunitas continuum affectum tribuit delinquendu. Evil deeds ought not to remain unpunished, and impunity affords continual incitement to wrongdoing. 4 Coke 45.

Maleficia propositis distinguuntur. Misdeeds are distinguished from proposals; crimes are distinguished by the intention (with which they are committed).

Malitia est acida, est mali animi affectus. Malice is sour; it is the quality of a bad mind.

Malitia supplet aetatem. Malice makes up for age.

Malitiis hominum est obviandum. The malicious designs of men must be thwarted. • Also found as Malum hominum est obviandum.

Malum non habet efficientem sed deficientem causam. Evil has not an efficient but a deficient cause.

Malum non praesumitur. Evil is not presumed.

Malum quo communii eo pejus. The more common the evil, the worse.

Malus usus est abendus. An evil custom ought to be abolished; a bad usage should be abolished.

Malus usus est abendus, quia in consuetudinibus, non diurnitas temporis, sed soliditas rationis est considenda. An evil custom is to be abolished, because, in customs, not length of time, but solidity of reason, is to be considered.

Mandata licita strictam recipiunt interpretationem, sed illicita latam et extensam. Lawful commands receive a strict interpretation, but unlawful ones receive a wide and an expansive interpretation.

Mandatarius terminos sibi positos transgredi non potest. A mandatary cannot exceed the bounds of his authority.

Mandatum nisi gratuitum nullum est. Unless a mandate is gratuitous (without payment), it is not a mandate.

Manifestum non indigent. Obvious facts are not in need of proof.

Maris et feminae conjunctio est de jure naturae. The union of male and female is founded on the law of nature.

Matrimonio debet esse libera. Marriages ought to be free.

Matrimonium subsequens legitimus facit quoad sacerdotium non quod successionem propter consuetudinem regni quae se habet in contrarium. Subsequent marriage legitimates as regards priesthood but not as regards succession because of the custom of the kingdom, which is to the contrary.

Matrimonium subsequens tollit peccatum praecedens. A subsequent marriage removes preceding fault.

Matter en ley ne serra mise en bouche del jurors. Matter of law shall not be put into the mouths of jurors.

Maturiora sunt vota mulierum quam virorum. The wishes of women are of quicker maturity than those of men. • That is, women arrive earlier at eligibility for marriage. 6 Coke 71.

Maxime ita dicta quia maxima est ejus dignitas et certissima auctoritas, atque quod maxime omnibus probetur. A maxim is so called because its dignity is chiefest and its authority is the most certain, and because it is most approved by all.
Maxime paci sunt contraria vis et injuria. The greatest enemies to peace are force and wrong.
Maximus erroris populus magister. The people are the greatest master of error.
Meliora conditionem suam facere potest minor, detegriorem nequaquam. A minor can improve or make his condition better, but in no way worse. This maxim is sometimes written Meliorem conditionem facere potest minor, deterioriorem nequaquam (also translatable as “a minor can make his condition better, but by no means worse”).
Meli est causa possidenti. The cause of the possessor is preferable.
Meli est conditio defendenti. The condition of the defendant is the better.
Meli est conditio possidentis et rei quam actoris. Better is the condition of the possessor, and that of the defendant (is better) than that of the plaintiff.
Meli est conditio possidentis, ubi neuter jus habet. Better is the condition of the possessor where neither of the two has the right.
Meli est justitia vere praeveniens quam severe punient. Justice that truly prevents a crime is better than that which severely punishes it.
Meli est in tempore occurrere quam post causam vulneratum remedium quaerere. It is better to oppose in time than to seek a remedy after a wrong has been inflicted. Coke introduces this maxim with the phrase ne per negligentiam damnum incurat: “lest he incur damage through negligence.” 2 Co. Inst. 299.
Melius est jus deficiens quam jus incertum. It is better to suffer every wrong than to consent to which severely punishes it.
Melius est omnia mala pati quam mala consentire. It is better to suffer every wrong than to consent to wrong.
Melius est petere fontem quam sectari rivulos. It is better to go to the fountainhead than to follow the streams.
Melius est recurrere quam male currere. It is better to run back than to run wrong (or badly). It is better to retrace one’s steps than to proceed improperly.
Mens testatoris in testamentis spectanda est. In wills, the intention of the testator is to be regarded.
Mentiri est contra mentem ire. To lie is to go against the mind.
Mercis appellatio ad res mobiles tantum pertinent. The term “merchandise” belongs to movable things only.
Mercis appellacione homines non contineri. Under the name of merchandise human beings are not included.
Merito beneficium legis amittit qui legem ipsam subvertere intendit. A person deservedly loses the protection of the law who attempts to overturn the law itself.
Merito retribuat Rex legi quod lex attribuat ei. The king rightly repays the law what (i.e., the power that) the law ascribes to him; let the king repay to the law what the law attributes to him.
Merx est quidquid vendi potest. Merchandise is whatever can be sold.
Meum est promittere, non dimittere. It is mine to promise, not to discharge.
Minatur innocentibus qui parcit nocentibus. A person threatens the innocent who spares the guilty.
Minima poena corporalis est major qualibet pecunia. The smallest bodily punishment is greater than any pecuniary one.
Minime mutanda sunt quae certam habuerunt interpretationem. Things that have had a fixed interpretation are to be altered as little as possible.
Minimum est nihil proximum. The least is next to nothing.
Minor ante tempus agere non potest in casu proprietatis, nec etiam convenire. A minor before majority cannot act in a case of property, not even to agree.
Minor ante tempus agere non potest in casu proprietatis, nec etiam convenire; differetur usque aetatem sed non cadit breve. A minor before majority cannot act in a case of property, not even to agree; it will be deferred until majority; but a writ does not fail.
Minor jurare non potest. A minor cannot take an oath.
Minor minorem custodire non debet; alios enim prae­sumitur maius regere qui se ipsum regere nescit. A minor ought not be guardian of a minor, for he is presumed to govern others ill who does not know how to govern himself.
Minor non tenetur respondere durante minori aetati, nisi in causa dotis, propter favorem. A minor is not bound to answer during his minority, except as a matter of favor in a cause of dower.
Minor qui infra aetatem 12 annorum fuerit utlagari non potest nec extra legem poni, quia ante talem aetatem non est sub legie aliqua nec in decennia. A minor who is under 12 years of age cannot be outlawed nor placed beyond the law, because before that age he is not under any law nor in a decennary.
Minor septemdecim annis non admittitur fore executorem. A person under 17 years of age is not admitted to be an executor.
Minus solvit qui tardius solvit; nam et tempore minus solvit. A person pays too little who pays too late; for, from the delay, the payment is less.
Misera est servitus ubi jus est vagum aut incertum. A miserable slavery where the law is vague or uncertain.
Mitius imperanti melius paretur. The more mildly one commands, the better is he obeyed.
Mobilia non habent situm. Movable have no fixed site or locality.
Mobilia personam sequuntur, immobilia situm. Movable things follow the person; immovable ones, their locality.

Mobilia sequuntur personam. Movable things follow the person. [Cases: Taxation 98.]

Modica circumstancia facti jus mutat. A small circumstance attending an act alters the right.

Modus de non decimando non valet. A prescription not to pay tithes is void.

Modus et conventio vinctum legem. Customary form and the agreement of the parties overcome the law. One of the first principles relative to the law of contract. Co. Litt. 73.

Modus legem dat donationi. Custom (or form) gives law to a gift.

Moneta est justum medium et mensura rerum commutabilium, nam per medium monetae fit omnium rerum conveniens et justa aestimatio. Money is the just medium and measure of all exchangeable things, for by the medium of money a suitable and just estimation of all things is made.

Monetandi jus comprehenditur in regalibus quae nunquam a regio sceptro abdicantur. The right of coining is included among those rights of royalty that are never relinquished by the kingly scepter.

Monumenta quae nos recorda vocamus sunt veritatis et vetustatis vestigia. The monuments that we call records are the vestiges of truth and antiquity.

Mora debitoris non debet esse creditori damnosa. Delay by a debtor ought not to be injurious to a creditor.

Mora reprobatur in lege. Delay is disapproved of in law.

Mors dicitur ultimum supplicium. Death is called the extreme penalty.

Mors omnia solvit. Death dissolves all things.

Mortis momentum est ultimum vitae momentum. The moment of death is the last moment of life.

Mortuus exitus non est exitus. A dead issue is not issue. That is, a child born dead is no child.

Mos retinendus est fidelissimae vetustatis. The custom of the true antiquity is to be retained.

Multa damnam famae non irrogat. A fine does not impose a loss of reputation.

Multa conceduntur per obliquum quae non conceduntur de directo. Many things are conceded indirectly that are not allowed directly.

Multa fidem promissa levant. Many promises lessen confidence.

Multa ignoramus quae nobis non laterent si veterum lectio nobis fuit familiaris. We are ignorant of many things that would not be hidden from us if the reading of old authors were familiar to us.

Multa in jure communi contra rationem disputandi pro communi utilitate introducta sunt. Many things have been introduced into the common law, with a view to the public good, that are contrary to logical reasoning. Co. Litt. 70b.

Multa multo exercitatione facilius quam regulis percipiantur. Many things pass with the whole that would not pass separately.

Multi multa, nemo omnia novit. Many men know many things; no one knows everything.

Multiplex et indistinctum parit confusionem; et quæstiones quo simpliciores, eo lucidiores. Multiplicity and indistinctness produce confusion: the simpler questions are, the more lucid they are.

Multiplicata transgressione crescat poenae inflictio. The infliction of punishment should increase with the repetition of the offense. Coke continues, Ex frequenti delicto augetur poena (q.v.). Co. Inst. 479.

Multitudinem decem faciunt. Ten make a multitude.

Multitudo errantium non parit errori patrocinium. The multitude of those who err does not produce indulgence for error.

Multitudo imperitorum perdit curiam. A multitude of ignorant practitioners destroys a court.

Mutuo utilius est pauca idonea effundere, quam multis ignoran践e practicis destructione aedificium. One about to be born is held as already born as long as the issue is to his benefit; a child conceived is treated as born to the extent that it is to his or her benefit.

Natura appetit perfectum, ita et lex. Nature aspires to perfection, and so does the law.

Naturae vis maxima; natura bis maxima. The force of nature is greatest; (and, as some say,) nature is doubly greatest. 2 Co. Inst. 564.

Natura fide jussiones sit strictissimi juris et non durat velle extendatur de re ad rem, de persona ad personam, de tempore ad tempus. The nature of the contract of suretyship is strictissimi juris, and does not endure or should not be extended from thing to thing, from person to person, or from time to time.

Naturale est quidlibet dissolvi eo modo quo ligatur. It is natural for a thing to be dissolved in the same way in which it is bound.

Natura non facit saltum, ita nec lex. Nature makes no leap, and neither does the law.

Natura non facit vacuum, nec lex supervacuum. Nature makes no vacuum, and the law nothing purposeless.
Nec curia deficeret in justitia exhibenda. Nor should the court be deficient in showing justice.

Necessarium est quod non potest aliter se habere. That is necessary which cannot be otherwise.

Necessitas est lex temporis et loci. Necessity is the law of time and place.

Necessitas excusat aut extenuat delictum in capitalibus, quod non operatur idem in civilibus. Necessity excuses or extenuates delinquency in capital cases, but does not have the same effect in civil cases.

Necessitas facit licitum quod alias non est licitum. Necessity makes lawful what otherwise is unlawful. [Cases: Criminal Law 29938.]

Necessitas inducit privilegium quoad jura privata. Necessity creates a privilege with regard to private rights.

Necessitas non habet legem. Necessity has no law.

Necessitas publica major est quam privata. Public necessity is greater than private necessity.

Necessitas quod cogit defendit. Necessity defends what it compels.

Necessitas sub lege non continetur, quia quod alias non est licitum necessitas facit licitum. Necessity is not restrained by law; since what otherwise is not lawful necessity makes lawful.

Necessitas vincit legem. Necessity overcomes the law.

Necessitas vincit legem; legum vincula irridet. Necessity overcomes the law; it laughs at the fetters of laws.

Nec super eum ibimus, nec super eum mittemus, nisi per legale judicium parium suorum. Nor shall we go upon him, nor send upon him, except by the lawful judgment of his peers; we will not go against him or send against him except by the lawful judgment of his peers. This language appears in Magna Carta, ch. 39.

Nec tempus nec locus occurrit regi. Neither time nor place thwarts the king.

Nec veniam effuso sanguine casus habet. Where blood has been spilled, the case is unpardonable.

Nec veniam, laeso numine, casus habet. Where the Divinity has been insulted, the case is unpardonable.

Negatio conclusionis est error in lege. The denial of a conclusion is error in law.

Negatio destructit negationem, et ambae faciunt affirmationem. A negative destroys a negative, and both make an affirmative.

Negatio duplex est affirmatione. A double negative is an affirmative.

Negligentia semper habet infortunium comitem. Negligence always has misfortune for a companion.

Neminem laedit qui jure suo utitur. A person who exercises his own rights injures no one.

Neminem operet esse sapientiorum legibus. No one ought to be wiser than the laws.
Nemo debet esse judex in propria causa. No one should be judge in his own cause. [Cases: Judges 50.17.42.]

Nemo debet immissere se rei alienae ad se nihil pertinenti. No one should interfere in another's business that does not at all concern him.

Nemo debet in communione invitus teneri. No one should be retained in a partnership against his will.

Nemo debet locupletari aliena jactura. No one ought to be enriched out of another's disadvantage.

Nemo debet rem suam sine factu aut defectu suo amittere. No one should lose his property without his own act or negligence.

Nemo duobus statutar officis. No one should exercise two offices.

Nemo ejusdem tenementi simul potest esse haeres et dominus. No one can be both heir and owner of the same land at the same time.

Nemo enim aliquam partem recte intelligere possit antequam totum iterum atque iterum perlegerit. No one may be rightly to understand one part before he has again and again read through the whole.

Nemo est haeres viventis. No one is an heir of someone living. [Cases: Descent and Distribution 50.17.68; Wills 50.17.506(6).]

Nemo est supra leges. No one is above the laws.

Nemo ex alterius facto praegravari debet. No one ought to be burdened in consequence of another's act.

Nemo ex consilio obligatur. No one is bound for the advice he gives.

Nemo ex dolo suo proprio relevetur aut auxilium capiat. No one can be relieved or gain advantage by his own fraud.

Nemo ex proprio dolo consequitur actionem. No one acquires a right of action from his own wrong (or deception). [Cases: Action 50.17.4.]

Nemo ex suo delicto meliorem suam conditionem facere potest. No one can improve his condition by his own wrong.

Nemo inauditus condemnari debet, si non sit contumax. No one ought to be condemned unheard, unless for contempt. ● This maxim is sometimes written Nemo inauditus nec insunmonitus condemnari debetur, si non sit contumax (meaning "no one should be condemned unheard and unsummoned, unless for contempt").

Nemo in communiione potest invitus detineri. No one can be held (to act) in common against his will; no one can be forced to remain in common ownership against his will. ● This maxim states the premise that a coowner can always insist on the division of the property owned.

Nemo in propria causa testis esse debet. No one can be a witness in his own cause.

Nemo jus sibi dicere potest. No one can give judgment for himself.

Nemo militans Deo implicetur secularibus negotiis. No one warring for God should be troubled by secular business.

Nemo nascitur artifex. No one is born an expert. ● Wisdom in the law is acquired only through diligent study. Co. Litt. 97b.

Nemo patriam in qua natus est exuere, nec ligeantiae debitis ejurare possit. No one can cast off his native land or refuse the obligation of allegiance to it.

Nemo plus commodi haeredi suo relinquit quam ipse habuit. No one leaves a greater asset to his heir than he had himself.

Nemo plus juris ad alienum transferre potest quam ipse habet. No one can transfer to another a greater right than he himself might have. Dig. 50.17.54. [Cases: Sales 50.17.326.]

Nemo potest contra recordum verificare per patriam. No one can verify by the country against a record. ● Certain matters of record cannot be contested in court. 2 Co. Inst. 380.

Nemo potest esse dominus et haeres. No one can be both owner and heir.

Nemo potest esse simul actor et judex. No one can be at the same time suitor and judge.

Nemo potest esse tenens et dominus. No one can be at the same time tenant and landlord (of the same tenement).

Nemo potest exuere patriam. No one can cast off his own country.

Nemo potest facere per alium quod per se non potest. No one can do through another what he cannot do by himself.

Nemo potest facere per obliuium quod non potest facere per directum. No one can do indirectly what he cannot do directly.

Nemo potest mutare consilium suum in alterius injuriarum. No one can change his purpose to the injury of another.

Nemo potest nisi quod de jure potest. No one is able to do a thing, unless he can do it lawfully.

Nemo potest plus juris ad alienum transferre quam ipse habet. No one can transfer to another a greater right than he himself (actually) has. Co. Litt. 309.

Nemo potest praecise cogi ad factum. No one can be compelled to perform a specific act. ● The effect of this maxim is that an order of specific performance is not available.

Nemo potest sibi debere. No one can owe to himself.

Nemo praesens nisi intelligat. One is not present unless he understands.
Nemo praesumitur alienam posteritatem suae praetulisse. No one is presumed to have preferred another's posterity to his own.

Nemo praesumitur donare. No one is presumed to make a gift.

Nemo praesumitur esse immemor suae aeternae salutatis, et maxime in articulo mortis. No one is presumed to be forgetful of his eternal welfare, and especially at the point of death.

Nemo praesumitur ludere in extremis. No one is presumed to trifle at the point of death.

Nemo praesumitur malus. No one is presumed to be bad.

Nemo prohibetur pluribus defensionibus uti. No one is forbidden to employ several defenses.

Nemo qui condemnare potest absolvere non potest. No one who can condemn is unable to acquit.

Nemo punitur sine injuria, facto, seu defaltea. No one is punished unless for some wrong, act, or default.

Nemo prudens punit ut praeterita revocentur, sed ut futura praeveniantur. No one who is wise gives punishment so that past deeds may be revoked, but so that future deeds may be prevented.

Nemo punitur pro alieno delicto. No one is punished for the crime or wrong of another.

Nemo punitur sine injuria, facto, seu defaltea. No one is punished unless for some wrong, act, or default.

Nemo qui condemmare potest absolvere non potest. No one who can condemn is unable to acquit.

Nemo sibi esse judex vel suis jus dicere debet. No one ought to be his own judge or to administer justice in cases where his relations are concerned.

Nemo sine actione experitur, et hoc non sine breve sive libello conventionali. No one goes to trial without an action, and no one can bring an action without a writ or bill.

Nemo tenetur ad impossibile. No one is bound to an impossibility.

Nemo tenetur armare adversarium contra se. No one is bound to arm his adversary against himself.

Nemo tenetur dividare. No one is bound to foretell the future.

Nemo tenetur edere instrumenta contra se. No one is bound to produce writings against himself.

Nemo tenetur informare qui nescit sed quisquis scire quod informaret. No one who is ignorant of a thing is bound to give information of it, but everyone is bound to know what he gives information of.

Nemo tenetur jurare in suam turpitudinem. No one is bound to swear to his own criminality.

Nemo tenetur prodere seipsum. No one is bound to betray himself. • In other words, no one can be compelled to incriminate himself.

Nemo tenetur seipsum accusare. No one is bound to accuse himself. • This is a formulation of the privilege against self-incrimination. In good Latin, se ipsum appears as two words; but in law the phrase is usually combined to one (seipsum).

Nemo tenetur seipsum infortunis et periculis exponere. No one is bound to expose himself to misfortune and dangers.

Nemo tenetur seipsum prodere. No one is bound to betray himself.

Nemo unquam judicet in se. Let no one ever be a judge in his own cause.

Nemo unquam vir magnus fuit sine aliquo divino afflatu. No one was ever a great man without some divine inspiration.

Nemo videtur fraudare eos qui scint et consentiant. No one is considered as deceiving those who know and consent.

Neque leges neque senatus consulta ita scribi possunt ut omnes casus qui quandoque incidenter comprehendantur; sed sufficit ea quae plurumque accidunt contineri. Neither laws nor acts of senate can be so written as to include all cases that have happened at any time; it is sufficient that those things that usually occur are encompassed. Dig. 1.3.10. pr.

Ne quid in loco publico vel itinere fiat. Let nothing be done (put or erected) in a public place or way. • The title of an interdict in the Roman law.

Nigrum nunquam excedere debet rubrum. The black should never go beyond the red. • That is, the text of a statute should never be read in a sense more comprehensive than the rubric, or title.

Nihil aliud potest rex quam quod de jure potest. The king can do nothing but what he can do legally; the king can do nothing except by law.

Nihil consensui tam contrarium est quam vis atque metus. Nothing is so opposite to consent as force and fear.

Nihil dat qui non habet. A person gives nothing who has nothing.

Nihil de re accrescit ei qui nihil in re quando jus accresceret habet. Nothing from a property accrues to a person who had no interest in the property when the right accrued. Co. Litt. 188.

Nihil dictum quod non dictum prius. Nothing is said that was not said before.

Nihil est enim liberale quod non idem justum. For there is nothing generous that is not at the same time just.

Nihil est magis rationi consentaneum quam eodem modo quodquae dissolvisse quo conflatum est. Nothing is more consonant to reason than that everything should be dissolved in the same way as it was made.

Nihil facit error nominis cum de corpore constat. An error in the name is nothing when there is certainty as to the person.

Nihil habet forum ex scena. The court has nothing to do with what is not before it.
Nihil infra regnum subditos magis conservat in tranquil-itate et concordia quam debita legum administratio.
Nothing better preserves the subjects of the realm in tranquility and concord than a due administration of the laws. 2 Co. Inst. 158.

Nihil iniquius quam aequitatem nimis intendere.
Nothing is more unjust than to extend equity too far.

Nihil praescribitur nisi quod possidetur.
Nothing can be demanded before the Nihil in lege intolerabilius est (quam) eandem rem diverso jure censeri. Nothing in law is more intolerable than that the same case should be subject (in different courts) to different views of the law.

Nihil magis justum est quam quod necessarium est.
Nothing is more just than what is necessary.

Nihil tam naturale est quam eo genere quidque dissol-vere quo colligatum est; ideo verborum obligatio verbis tollitur; nudi consensus obligatio contrario consensu dissolvitur. Nothing is so natural as to dissolve anything in the way in which it was bound together; therefore the obligation of words is taken away by words; the obligation of mere consent is dissolved by the contrary consent.

Nihil tam proprium imperio quam legibus vivere.
Nothing is so becoming to authority as to live according to the law.

Nil agit exemplum litem quod lite resolvit. A precedent accomplishes nothing if it settles one dispute by raising another.

Nil facit error nominis cum de corpore vel persona constat. An error in the name is immaterial when the body or person is certain.

Nil sine prudenti fecit ratione vetustas. Antiquity did nothing without a good reason.

Nil temere novandum. Nothing should be rashly changed.

Nimia certitudo certitudinem ipsam destruit. Too great certainty destroys certainty itself.

Nimia subtilitas in jure reprobatur. Too much subtlety in law is condemned.

Nimia subtilitas in jure reprobatur, et talis certitudo cer-titudinem confundit. Too much subtlety is disapproved of in law, and such certainty confounds certainty.

Nimium altercando veritas amittitur. By too much quarreling truth is lost.

Nobiles magis plectuntur pecunia, plebes vero in corpore.
The higher classes are more punished in money, but the lower in person.

Nobiles sunt qui arma gentilitia antecessorum suorum proferre possunt. The gentry are those who are able to produce the heraldic arms of their own ancestors.

Nobiliores et benigniores praesumptiones in dubiis sunt praeferendae. When in doubt, the more generous and kind presumptions are to be preferred.

Nobilius est duplex, superior et inferior. There are two sorts of nobility, the higher and the lower.

Nomen non sufficit si res non sit de jure aut de facto. A name does not suffice if the thing does not exist by law or by fact.

Nominem si nescis, perit cognitio rerum. If you do not know the names of things, the knowledge of things themselves perishes.

Nominem si nescis, perit cognitio rerum; et nomina si perdas, certe distinctio rerum perditur. If you do not know the names of things, the knowledge of things themselves perishes; and, if you lose the names, the distinction of the things is certainly lost.

Nomina sunt mutabilia, res autem immobiles. Names are mutable, but things immutable.

Nomina sunt notae rerum. Names are the marks of things.

Nomina sunt symbola rerum. Names are the symbols of things.

Non accipi debent verba in demonstrationem falsam, quaepetuntur in limitationem veram. Words ought Non alio modo puniatur aliquis, quam secundum quod se habet condemnatio. A person may not be punished otherwise than according to what the sentence enjoins.

Non aliter a significacione verborum recedi oportet quam cum manifestum est aliud sensisse testatorem. We must depart from the (ordinary) significance of words only when it is evident that the testator had a different understanding. Dig. 32.69. pr.

Non auditur perire volens. One who wishes to perish is not heard.

Non bis in idem (or imperative, ne bis in idem). Not twice for the same thing. That is, a person shall not be twice tried for the same crime. This maxim of the civil law expresses the same principle as the familiar rule against "double jeopardy. [Cases: Double Jeopardy C;= 183.1.]

Non concedatur citationes priusquam exprimatur super qua re fieri decet citatio. Summonses should not be granted before it is expressed on what ground a summons should be issued.

Non consentit qui errat. A person who errs does not consent.

Non dat qui non habet. A person who does not have does not give.

Non debito melioris conditionis esse quam auctor meus a quo jure in me transit. I ought not to be in better condition than the person to whose rights I succeed.

Non deberet aliis nocere quod inter alios actum esset. A person ought not to be injured by what has taken place between other parties.

Non debet actori licere quod reo non permittitur. What is not permitted to the defendant ought not to be allowed to the plaintiff.

Non debet adduci exceptio ejus rei cuius petitur disso­lutio. An exception (or plea) should not be made on the very matter of which a determination is sought (in the case at hand).

Non debet alii nocere quod inter alios actum est. A person ought not to be prejudiced by what has been done between others.

Non debet alteri per alterum iniqua conditio inferri. An unfair condition ought not to be brought on one person by the act of another.

Non debet cui plus licet quod minus est non licere. A person who is permitted to do the greater thing ought not to be forbidden to do the lesser.

Non debet dici tendere in praecipue ecclesiasticae liberatatis quod pro rege et republica necessarium videtur. What seems necessary for the king and the state ought not to be said to tend to the prejudice of spiritual liberty.

Non decet homines dedere causa non cognita. It is unbe­coming to surrender people when no cause has been shown.

Non decipitur qui scit se decipi. A person is not deceived who knows himself to be deceived.

Non definitur in jure quid sit conatus. What an attempt is, is not defined in law.

Non differunt quae concordant re, tametsi non in verbis eiusmodem. Those things that agree in substance, even if not in the same words, do not differ.

Non dubitatatur, etsi specialiter venditor evictionem non promiserit, re evicta, exempto competere actionem. It is certain that even if the vendor has not given a special guarantee, an action ex emplo lies against him, if the purchaser is evicted.

Non efficit affectus nisi sequatur effectus. The intention amounts to nothing unless some effect follows.

Non est arctius vinculum inter homines quam jusjuris­putandi. It is unreasonable that the cognizance of an accessory matter should be impeded in an ecclesiastical court, when the cognizance of the principal cause is admitted to appertain to an ecclesiastical court.

Non est legum unius tempus alterius. There is no closer (or firmer) link among men than an oath.

Non est regula quin fallat. There is no rule that may not deceive (or disappoint).

Non est novum ut priores leges ad posteriores trahant­tur. It is not an innovation to adapt earlier laws to later ones. Dig. 1.3.26.

Non est recedendum a communi observantia. There should be no departure from a common observance.

Non est regula quin fallat. There is no rule that may not deceive (or disappoint).

Non est reus nisi mens sit rea. A person is not guilty unless his mind is guilty. [Cases: Criminal Law C;= 20.]

Non est singulis concedendum quod per magistratum publice possit fieri, ne occasio sit majoris tumultus...
Non impedit clausula derogatoria quo minus ab eadem. A derogatory clause does not prevent things from being dissolved by the same power by which they were originally made.

Non exemplis sed legibus judicandum est. Not by examples but by the laws must judgment be made.

Non ex opinionibus singulorum, sed ex communi usu, nominæ exaudiri debent. Names of things ought to be understood according to common usage, not according to the opinions of individuals.

Non facias malum ut inde veniat bonum. You are not to do evil that good may come of it.

Non officit affectus nisi sequatur effectus. An attempt does not harm unless a consequence follows.

Non in tabulis est jus. It is not in books that the law is to be found.

Non jussus ex regula, sed regula ex jure. The law does not arise from the rule (or maxim), but the rule from the law.

Non iustus, sed seisinà facit stipitem. Not right, but seisin, makes a stock (from which the inheritance must descend).

Non licet quod dispendio licet. That which is permitted only at a loss is not permitted.

Non nasci et natum mori paria sunt. Not to be born and to be born dead are equivalent.

Non obligat lex nisi promulgata. A law is not binding unless it has been promulgated.

Non observata forma, infœrter adnullatio actus. When the form has not been observed, an annulment of the act is inferred.

Non officit affectus nisi sequatur effectus. Sed in actricihibus delictis punitur affectus, licet non sequatur effectus. The intention is not an offense unless an effect follow. But in the most atrocious crimes the intention is punished, although no effect follow.

Non officit conatus nisi sequatur effectus. An attempt does not harm unless a consequence follows.

Non omne damnum inducit injuriam. Not every loss produces an injury (i.e., gives a right to action).

Non omne quod licet honestum est. Not everything that is lawful is honorable; not everything that is allowable is morally right.

Non omnium quae a majoribus nostris constituta sunt ratio reddi potest. Reason cannot always be given for the institutions of our ancestors.

Non pertinet ad judicem secularem cognoscere de iis quae sunt mere spiritualia annixa. It belongs not to the secular judge to take cognizance of things that are merely spiritual.

Non potest probari quod probatum non relevat. That cannot be proved which, when proved, is irrelevant.

Non potest quis sine brevi agere. No one can sue without a writ.

Non potest rex gratiam facere cum injuria et damno aliorum. The king cannot confer a favor that occasions injury and loss to others.

Non potest rex subditum renitentem onerare impositionsibus. The king cannot load a subject with impositions against his consent.

Non potest videri desisse habere quin nunquam habuit. A person cannot be considered as having ceased to have a thing who never had it.

Non praestat impedimentum quod de jure non sortitur effectum. A thing that has no effect in law is not an impediment.

Non quod dictum est, sed quod factum est, insipitum. Not what has been said but what has been done is regarded. [Cases: Wills 108.]

Non quod voluit testator, sed quod dixit in testamento insipitum. Not what the testator wanted, but what he said in the will, is regarded.

Non refert an quis assensum suum praefert verbis an rebus ipsis et factis. Is immaterial whether a person gives assent by words or by acts themselves and deeds.

Non refert quid ex aequipollentibus fiat. It does not matter which of two equivalents happens.

Non refert quod notum sit judici, si notum non sit in forma judicii. It matters not what is known to the judge if it is not known to him judicially.

Non refert verbis an factis fit revocatio. It does not matter whether a revocation is made by words or by acts.

Non respondet minor, nisi in causa dotis, et hoc pro favore doti. A minor shall not answer except in a case of dower, and here in favor of dower.

Non solent quae abundant vitiare scripturas. Superfluous expressions do not usually vitiate writings.

Non solum quid licet sed quid est conveniens considerandum, quia nihil quod inconvenientis est licitum. Not only what is permitted but what is proper is to be considered, because nothing improper is lawful.

Non sunt longa ubi nihil est quod demere possis. There is no prolixity where there is nothing that you can omit.

Non temere credere est nervus sapientae. Not to believe rashly is the sinew of wisdom.
Non videntur qui errant consentire. They who err are not considered to have maintained his consent.

Non valet confirmatio, nisi ille, qui confirmat, sit in possessione rei vel juris unde fieri debet confirmatio; et eodem modo, nisi ille cui confirmatio fit sit in possessione. Confirmation is not valid unless the person who confirms is in possession either of the thing or of the right of which confirmation is to be made, and, in like manner, unless that person to whom confirmation is made is in possession.

Non valet donatio nisi subsequeatur traditio. A gift is not valid unless delivery (or transference) follows.

Non valet exceptio ejusdem rei cuius petitur dissolutio. An exception based on the very matter of which the determination is sought is not valid.

Non valet impedimentum quod de jure non sortitur effectum. An impediment that does not derive its effect from the law has no force.

Non verbis sed ipsis rebus leges imponimus. Not on words, but on affairs themselves do we impose laws.

Non videntur qui errant consentire. They who err are not considered as consenting. [Cases: Contracts C=93.]

Non videntur rem amittere quibus propria non fuit. They are not considered as losing a thing if it was not their own.

Non videtur consensum retinuisse si quis ex praescripto minantis aliquod immutavit. If a person has changed anything at the demand of a party threatening, he is not considered to have maintained his consent.

Non videtur perfecte cujusque id esse quod ei necesse est aliis restitueri. A person is not considered to acquire property in a thing that he must restore to another. Dig. 50.17.51.

Non videtur vim facere qui jure suo utitur et ordinaria actione experitur. A person is not judged to use force who exercises his own right and proceeds by ordinary determination. Dig. 2.14.7.4.

Non videntur qui errant consentire. They who err are not considered as consenting. [Cases: Contracts C=152; Statutes C=193.]

Non videntur qui errant consentire. They who err are not considered as consenting. [Cases: Contracts C=193.]

Noscitur a sociis. It is known from its associates. [Cases: Contracts C=152; Statutes C=193.]

Noscitur ex socii quem non cognoscitur ex se. A person who is not known for himself is known from his associate.

Notitia dicitur a noscendo; et notitia non debet claudicar. Notice is named from knowledge; and notice ought not to limp (that is, be imperfect).

Non videntur rem amittere quibus propria non fuit. They who err are not considered to have maintained his consent.

Nova constitutio futuris formam imponere debet, non praeteritis. A new enactment ought to impose form on what is to come, not on what is past. • A new regulation should not apply retroactively but from its enactment. 2 Co. Inst. 292.

Novatio non praeassertur. A novation is not presumed.

Novitas non tam utilitate prodest quam novitate perturbat. Novelty does not as much benefit by its utility as it disturbs by its novelty.

Novum judicium non dat novum jus, sed declarat antiquum. A new judgment does not make a new right, but declares the old.

Novum judicium non dat novum jus, sed declarat antiquum; quia judicium est juris dictum, et per judicium jus est noviter revelatum quod diu fuit velatum. A new judgment does not make a new right, but declares the old; because adjudication is the declaration of a right, and by adjudication the right is newly revealed which has long been hidden. 10 Coke 42.

Nuxa caput sequitur. The liability follows the head or person. • Liability to make good an injury caused by a slave attaches to the master. Dig. 2.14.7.4.

Nuda pactio obligationem non parit. A naked agreement (i.e., without consideration) does not create an obligation. Dig. 2.14.7.4.

Nuda ratio et nuda pactio non ligant aliquem debitorem. Bare reason and naked agreement do not bind any debtor.

Nudum pactum est ubi nulla subest causa praeterea conventionem; sed ubi subest causa, fit obligatio, et parit actionem. Naked agreement (nudum pactum) is where there is no consideration besides the agreement; but when there is a consideration, an obligation is created and it gives a right of action.

Nudum pactum ex quo non oritur actio. Naked agreement (nudum pactum) is that from which no action arises. [Cases: Contracts C=75.]

Nul charter, nul vente, nul don; nul vente perpetualment, si le donor n’est seise au temps de contracts de deux droits, sc. del droit de possession et del droit de propriete. No grant, no sale, no gift, is valid forever unless the donor, at the time of the contract, is seised of two rights, namely, the right of possession and the right of property.

Nulla curia quae recordum non habet potest imponere finem neque aliquem mandare carceri; quia ista spectant tantummodo ad curias de recordo. No court that does not have a record can impose a fine or commit any person to prison; because those powers look only to courts of record.

Nulla emptio sine pretio esse potest. There can be no sale without a price.

Nulla impossibilia aut inhonesta sunt praesumenda; vera autem et honesta et possibilia. No impossible or dishonorable things are to be presumed; but things true, honorable, and possible.
Nulla pactione effici potest ne dolus praestetur. No agreement is sufficient to effect that there be no liability for fraud. Dig. 2.14.27.3.

Nulla virtus, nulla scientia locum suum et dignitatem conservare potest sine modestia. Without moderation, no virtue, no knowledge can preserve its place and dignity.

Nulle régle sans faute. There is no rule without fault.

Nulle terre sans seigneur. No land without a lord.

Nulli enim res sua jure servitutis. No one can have a servitude over his own property.

Nullius hominis auctoritas apud nos valere debet, ut meliora non sequeretur si quis attulerit. The authority of no person ought to have (such) power among us that we should not follow better (opinions) if anyone presents them.

Nulli vendemus, nulli negabimus, aut differemus rectum. We shall sell to no one, deny to no one, or delay to no one, equity or justice. This language appeared in Magna Carta.

Nullum crimen majus est inobedientia. No crime is greater than disobedience.

Nullum exemplum est idem omnibus. No example is the same for all purposes.

Nullum iniquum est praesumendum in jure. Nothing unjust is to be presumed in law.

Nullum matrimonium, ibi nulla dos. No marriage, there is no dower.

Nullum simile est idem. Nothing that is like another is the same. That is, no likeness is exactly identical.

Nullum simile est idem nisi quatuor pedibus currit. Nothing similar is identical, unless it run on all fours.

Nullum simile quatuor pedibus currit. No simile runs on four feet (on all fours). No simile holds in every respect.

Nullum tempus aut locus occurrit regi. No time or place bars the king.

Nullum tempus occurrit regi. No period of time bars the Crown; no length of time runs against the king. This maxim expresses the idea that the king is not bound by any statute of limitations. Cases: Limitation of Actions (42-11.)

Nullum tempus occurrit reipublicae. No time runs against the commonwealth (or state). Cases: Limitation of Actions (42-11.)

Nullus alius quam rex possit episcopo demandare inquisitionem faciendam. No other than the king can command the bishop to make an inquisition.

Nullus commodum capere potest de injuria sua propria. No one can gain advantage by his own wrong.

Nullus debet agere de dolo, ubi alia actio subest. Where another form of action is given, no one ought to sue in the action de dolo.

Nullus dicetur accessorius post feloniam sed ille qui novit principalem feloniam faciisse, et illum receptavit et confortavit. No one is called an accessory after the fact but that person who knew the principal to have committed a felony, and received and comforted him.

Nullus dicetur felo principalis nisi actor aut qui praesens est, abettans aut auxilians actorem ad feloniam faciendam. No one is called a principal felon except the party actually committing the felony, or the party who was present aiding and abetting the perpetrator in its commission.

Nullus idoneus testis in re sua intelligitur. No one is understood to be a competent witness in his own cause.

Nullus jus alienum forisfacere potest. No one can forfeit another’s right.

Nullus liber homo capiatur, aut imprisonetur. Let no free man be taken or imprisoned. This expression derives from Magna Carta, ch. 39

Nullus recedat e curia cancellaria sine remedio. Let no one depart from the court of chancery without a remedy.

Nullus videtur dolo facere qui suo jure utitur. No one is to be regarded as acting by fraud who exercises his legal right.

Nul ne doit s’enrichir aux dépens des autres. No one ought to enrich himself at the expense of others.

Nul prendra avantage de son tort demesne. No one shall take advantage of his own wrong.

Nul sans damage avera error ou attaint. No one shall have error or attain unless there has been damage.

Nunquam crescit ex post facto praetereunt delicti aestimatio. The valuation (or assessment of damage) for a past offense is never increased by what happens subsequently. Dig. 50.17.138.1.

Nunquam decurritur ad extraordinarium sed ubi deficit ordinarium. One never resorts to the extraordinary but when the ordinary fails.

Nunquam fictio sine lege. There is no fiction without law.

Nunquam nimis dicetur quod nunquam satis dicitur. What is never sufficiently said is never said too much.

Nunquam praescribitur in falso. There is never prescription in case of falsehood (or forgery).

Nunquam res humanae prospere succidunt ubi negligentia divinae. Human affairs never prosper when divine ones are neglected.

Nuptias non concubitus sed consensus facit. Not sharing a bed but consent makes the marriage.

Obiedientia est legis essentia. Obedience is the essence of the law.

Obtemperandum est consuetudini rationabili tanguam legi. A reasonable custom is to be obeyed like law.
Occultatio thesauri inventi fraudulosa. The concealment of discovered treasure is fraudulent.

Occupantis funt derelicta. Things abandoned become the property of the (first) occupant.

Odiosa et inhonesta non sunt in lege praesumenda. Odious and dishonest acts are not to be presumed in law.

Odiosa non praesumuntur. Odious things are not presumed.

Officia judicia praebentur antequam vacent. Judicial offices ought not to be granted before they are vacant.

Officia magistrati debent esse venalicia. The offices of magistrates ought not to be sold.

Officium conatus si effectus sequatur. The attempt becomes of consequence if the effect follows.

Officium nemini debet esse damnosum. An office ought to be injurious to no one.

Omissio eorum quae tacite insunt nihil operatur. The omission of those things that are silently implied is of no consequence.

Omne actum ab intentione agentis est judicandum. Every act is to be judged by the intention of the doer.

Omne crimen ebrietatis et incendii et detegit. Drunkenness both inflames and reveals every crime.

Omne jus aut consensus fecit, aut necessitas constituit, aut firmavit consuetudo. Every right has been derived by custom, established by necessity, or confirmed by custom.

Omne magis dignum trahit ad se minus dignum, quamvis minus dignum sit antiquius. Every worthier thing draws to it the less worthy, even if the less worthy is more ancient.

Omne magnus exemplum habet aliquam ex iniquo, quod publica utilitate compensatur. Every great example has some portion of evil, which is compensated by its public utility.

Omne majus continet in se minus. Every greater thing contains in itself the lesser. [Cases: Indictment and Information ☑ 189.]

Omne magis dignum continet in se minus dignum. Every more worthy thing contains in itself the less worthy.

Omne majus minus in se completit. Every greater thing embraces in itself the lesser.

Omne principale trahit ad se accessorium. Every principal thing draws to itself the accessory.

Omne quod solo inaedificatur solo cedit. Everything that is built on the soil belongs to the soil.

Omne sacramentum debet esse de certa scientia. Every oath ought to be founded on certain knowledge.

Omnes actiones in mundo infra certa tempora habent limitationem. All actions in the world are limited within certain periods.

Omnes licentiam habere his quae pro se indulta sunt renunciare. All have liberty to renounce these things that have been granted in their favor.

Omnes prudentes illa admittere solent quae probantur is qui in arte sua bene versati sunt. All prudent people are accustomed to admit those things that are approved by those who are skilled in their profession.

Omnes sores sunt quasi unus haeres de una haereditate. All sisters are as it were one heir to one inheritance.

Omnes subditis sunt regis servi. All subjects are the king’s servants.

Omne testamentum morte consummatur est. Every will is consummated by death.

Omnia delicata in aperto leviora sunt. All crimes committed openly are considered lighter.

Omnia praesumuntur contra spoliatorem. All presumptions are against one who wrongfully dispossesses another (a despoiler). [Cases: Evidence ☑ 8.]

Omnia praesumuntur legitime facta donec probetur in contrarium. All things are presumed to be done legitimately until the contrary is proved.

Omnia praesumuntur rite ac sollemniter esse acta. All things are presumed to be done in proper and regular form; all things are presumed to have been rightly and regularly done. • Sollemniter is sometimes written sollemniter. — Also written Omnia praesumuntur rite et sollemniter acta.

Omnia praesumuntur rite et sollemniter esse acta donec probetur in contrarium. All things are presumed to have been done regularly and with due formality until the contrary is proved.

Omnia quae jure contrahuntur contrario jure pereunt. All obligations contracted under a law are destroyed by a law to the contrary.

Omnia quae sunt uxoris sunt ipsius viri. All things that are the wife’s belong to her husband.

Omnia rite esse acta praesumptur. All things are presumed to have been done in due form. [Cases: Evidence ☑ 82, 83.]

Omnis actio est loquela. Every action is a complaint.

Omnis conclusio boni et veri judicii sequitur ex bonis et veris praemissis et dictis juratorum. Every conclusion of a good and true judgment follows from good and true premises and the verdicts of jurors.

Omnis consentium tollit errorem. Every consent removes an error. 2 Co. Inst. 123. [Cases: New Trial ☑ 10.]

Omnis definitio in jure civilis periculo est, parum est enim ut non subverti possit. Every definition in the civil law is dangerous, for there is very little that cannot be overthrown.

Omnis exceptio est ipsa quoque regula. Every exception is itself also a rule.
Omnis indemnatus pro innoxio legibus habetur. Every uncondemned person is held by the law as innocent.

Omnis innovatio plus novitate perturbat quam utilitate prodest. Every innovation disturbs by its novelty more than it benefits by its usefulness.

Omnis interpretatio si fieri potest ita fienda est in instru­ments, ut omnes contrarietates amoveantur. Every interpretation of instruments is to be made, if it can be, so that all contradictions may be removed.

Omnis interpretatio vel declarat, vel extendit, vel restringit. Every interpretation explains, or extends, or restricts.

Omnis nova constitutio futuris formam imponere debet, et non praeteritis. Every new enactment should regulate future, not past transactions; every new law must impose its form on future cases and not past ones. • This maxim states the presumption against retroactivity. The phrase is sometimes written Omnis nova constitutio futuris (temporibus) formam imponere debet, non praeteritis.

Omnis persona est homo, sed non vicissim. Every person is a human being, but not every human being is a person.

Omnis privatio praesupponit habitum. Every privation presupposes possession. • “Every discontinuance is a privation ... and he cannot discontinue that estate which he never had.” Co. Litt. 339a.

Omnis querela et omnis actio injuriarum limitata est infra certa tempora. Every plaint and every action for injuries is limited within fixed times.

Omnis ratihabitio retrotrahitur et mandato priori aequaliter debet, et non praeteritis. Every subsequent ratification has a retrospective effect and is equivalent to a prior command. [Cases: Principal and Agent 175(3); Torts 130.]

Omnis regula suas patitur exceptiones. Every rule of law allows its own exceptions.

Omnium contributione sarciatur quod pro omnibus datum est. What has been given for all should be compensated by the contribution of all.

Omnium rerum quorum usus est, potest esse abusus, virtute solo excepta. Of everything of which there is a use, there can be abuse, virtue alone excepted.

Opinio quae favet testamento est tenenda. That opinion is to be followed which favors the will.

Oportet quod certa res deducatur in judicium. A thing, to be brought to judgment, must be definite.

Oportet quod certa sit res quae venditur. A thing, to be sold, must be definite.

Optima enim est legium interpres consuetudo. Custom is the best interpreter of laws. Dig. 1.3.37.

Optima est lex quae minimum relinquit arbitrio judicis; optimus judex qui minimum sibi. It is the best law that leaves the least to the discretion of the judge; the best judge is he who leaves least to himself.

Optima legum interpres est consuetudo. Custom is the best interpreter of law.

Optimam esse legem quae minimum relinquit arbitrio judicis; id quod certitudo ejus praestat. The law is the best that leaves the least discretion to the judge; this advantage results from its certainty.

Optima statuti interpretatrix est (omnibus particulis ejusdem inspectis) ipsum statutum. The best interpreter of a statute is (when all the separate parts of it have been considered) the statute itself.

Optimus interpres rerum usus. USAGE is the best interpreter of things.

Optimus interpretandi modus est sic leges interpretare ut leges legibus accordant. The best mode of interpreting laws is to make laws agree with laws.

Optimus judex qui minimum sibi. He is the best judge who (leaves) the least to his own discretion.

Optimus legum interpres consuetudo. Custom is the best interpreter of laws.

Ordine placitandi servato, servatur et jus. When order of pleading has been preserved, the law is also preserved.

Origine propria neminem posse voluntate sua eximiri manifestum est. It is manifest that no one by his own will can be stripped of his origin (or be banished from his place of origin).

Origo rei inspecti debet. The origin of a thing ought to be regarded.

Pacta conventa quae neque contra leges neque dolo malo inita sunt, omni modo observanda sunt. Contracts that have been entered neither illegally nor with fraud must in all respects be observed.

Pacta dant legem contractui. Agreements give law to the contract.

Pacta privata juri publico derogare non possunt. Private contracts cannot restrict (or take away from) public law.

Pacta quae contra leges constitutionesque vel contra bonos mores fiunt nullam vim habere, indubitati juris est. It is a matter of unquestionable law that contracts against the laws and statutes, or against moral standards, have no force.

Pacta quae turpem causam continent non sunt observanda. Contracts founded on an immoral consideration are not to be observed.

Pactis privatorum juri publico non derogatur. There is no derogation from public law by private contracts.

Pacto aliquid licitum est quod sine pacto non admititur. By agreement (or contract) something is permitted that, without agreement, is not allowed. • Coke continues, “but not in violation of public law.” Co. Litt. 166.

Parens est nomen generale ad omne genus cognitionis. “Parent” is a general name for every kind of relationship.
Parentum est liberos alere etiam nothos. It is the role of parents to support their children even when illegal.

Paria copulantur paribus. Similar things unite with similar.

Paribus sententiis reus absolvitur. When opinions are evenly divided, the defendant is acquitted. 4 Co. Inst. 64.

Par in parem imperium non habet. An equal has no power over an equal.

Partem aliquam recte intelligere nemo potest, antequam totum iterum atque iterum perlegerit. No one can rightly understand any part until he has read the whole again and again.

Parte quacumque integrante sublata, tollitur totum. When any essential part has been removed, the whole is removed (or destroyed).

Partus ex legitimo thoro non certius noscit materem quam genitorem suum. The offspring of a legitimate bed does not know his mother more certainly than his father.

Partus sequitur ventrem. The offspring follows the condition of the mother (literally, the womb).

Parum est latam esse sententiam, nisi mandetur executio. It does little good to know what ought to happen, if you do not know how it will take effect.

Parum proficit scire quid fieri debet si non cognoscas quomodo sit facturum. It does little good to know what is to be done if you do not know how it is to be done.

Parum est latam esse sententiam, nisi mandetur executio. It is not enough that judgment has been given if it is not committed to execution.

Parum proficit scire quid fieri debet si non cognoscas quomodo sit facturum. It does little good to know what ought to happen, if you do not know how it will take effect.

Pater est quem nuptiae demonstrant. The father is he whom the marriage indicates. This expresses the idea that a child born to a married woman is presumed begotten by her husband. [Cases: Children Out-of-Wedlock C—3,] Pater est quem nuptiae demonstrant. The father is the man whom the marriage indicates.

Pater is quem nuptiae demonstrant. The father is he whom the marriage indicates.

Patria laboribus et expensis non debet fatigari. The father is not to be wearied with labors and expenses.

Patria potestas in pietate debet, non in atrocitate consistere. Parental authority should consist in devotion, not dread.

Peccata contra naturam sunt gravissima. Offenses against nature are the most serious.

Peccatum peccato addit qui culpae quam facit patroniuium defenseonis adjungit. A person adds one offense to another, who, when he commits a crime, joins to it the protection of a defense.

Pendente lite nihil innovetur. During litigation, let nothing be changed.

Per alluvionem id videtur adici, quod ita paulatim adicitur ut intelligere non possimus quantum quoque momento temporis adiciatur. That is considered "added by alluvion" which accumulates so gradually that we cannot tell how much is added at any one moment of time. Dig. 41.1.7.1.

Perfectum est cui nihil deest secundum suae perfectionis vel naturae modum. That is perfect which lacks nothing according to the measure of its perfection or nature.

Periculosum est res novas et inusitatas inducere. It is dangerous to introduce new and unaccustomed things.

Periculum rei venditae, nondum traditae, est emptoris. The purchaser assumes the risk for a thing sold, but not yet delivered.

Perjuri sunt qui servatis verbis juramenti decipiunt aures eorum qui accipient. Those who preserve the words of an oath but deceive the ears of those who accept it are perjurors. Coke adds, "By ancient law of England, in all oaths equivocation is utterly condemned." 3 Co. Inst. 166.

Perpetua lex est nullam legem humanam ac positivam perpetuam esse; et clausula quae abrogationem excludit ab initio non valeit. It is a perpetual law that no human or positive law can be perpetual; and a clause in a law that precludes abrogation is void from the outset.

Per rationes pervenitur ad legitimam rationem. By reasoning we come to legal reason.

Per rerum naturam factum negantis nulla probatio est. By the nature of things, a person who denies a fact is not bound to give proof.

Persona conjuncta aequiparatur interesse proprio. A personal connection is equivalent to one's own interest.

Persona est homo cum statu quodam consideratus. A person is a human being considered with reference to a certain status.

Personae vice fungitur municipium et decuria. Towns and boroughs act in the role of persons.

Personalia personam sequuntur. Personal things follow the person.

Plena et celeris justitia fiat partibus. Let the parties have full and speedy justice.

Pluralis numerus est duobus contentus. The plural number is satisfied with two.

Plures cohaeredes sunt quasi unum corpus, propter unitatem juris quod habent. Several coheirs are as one body, by reason of the unity of right that they possess.
Plus valet vulgaris consuetudo quam regalis concessio. Several coheirs (or parceners) are as one body in that they have one right. Co. Litt. 164.

Plus exempla quam peccata nocent. Examples hurt more than offenses.

Plus peccat auctor quam actor. The instigator of a crime is a worse offender than the perpetrator.

Plus valet unus oculatus testis quam auriti decem. One eyewitness is better than ten earwitnesses.

Plus peccat auctor quam actor. The instigator of a crime is a worse offender than the perpetrator.

Plus exempla quam peccata nocent. Examples hurt more than offenses.

Plus valet vulgaris consuetudo quam regalis concessio. Several coheirs (or parceners) are as one body in that they have one right. Co. Litt. 164.

Postliminium fingi! eum qui captus est semper in civitate aetere. A person captured by the enemy, who later returns, is restored to all his former rights. Just. Inst. 1.12.5.

Potentia debet sequi justitiam, non antecedere. Power ought to follow, not to precede, justice.

Potentia inutilis frustra est. Useless power is in vain.

Potentia non est nisi ad bonum. Power is not conferred but for the (public) good.

Potestas stricte interpretatur. A power should be strictly interpreted.

Potestas suprema seipsum dissolvere potest, ligare non potest. Supreme power can dissolve (or release), but cannot bind, itself.

Potest quis renunciare, pro se et suis, jus quod pro se introductum est. A person may relinquish, for himself and his heirs, a right that was introduced for his own benefit.

Potior est conditio defendentis. Stronger is the condition of the defendant (than that of the plaintiff).

Potior est conditio possidentis. Stronger is the condition of the possessor.

Praedium servit praedio. Land is under servitude to land.

Praesumptiones sunt conjecturae ex signo verisimili ad praesumptio cedit veritati. Conjectures are not so reliable as the truth.

Praesumptio ex eo quod plerumque fit. Presumption is considered as though born (before the father's death).

Praesumptio omnium falsorum non tollit errorem nominis. The presence of the body cancels an error in the name; the truth of the name cancels an error in the description.

Praesumatur pro justitia sententiae. Let there be a presumption of sentence's justice.

Praesumptio est titulus ex usu et tempore substantiae capiens ab auctoritate legis. Presumption is a title derived from usage and time, given substance by the authority of law. Co. Litt. 113.

Praescriptio et executio non pertinent ad valorem contractus, sed ad tempus et modum actionis instituenda. Prescription and execution do not affect the validity of the contract, but affect the time and manner of bringing an action.

Praesumptiones sunt conjecturae ex signo verisimili ad probandum assumptae. Presumptions are conjectures... based on indications of probable truth, assumed for the purpose of establishing proof.

Præsumptio opponitur probationi. A presumption is distinguished from proof.

Semper ita fiat relatio ut valeat dispositio. Let the reference always be so made that the disposition may avail.

Semper necessitas probandi incumbit ei qui agit. The necessity of proving always rests on the claimant.

Semper praesumitur pro legatione puerorum, et filiatione non potest probari. The presumption is always in favor of legitimacy of children, and filiation cannot be proved.

Semper praesumitur pro negante. The presumption is always in favor of the one who denies.

Semper praesumitur pro sententia. The presumption is always in favor of a judgment (or sentence).

Semper pro matrimonio praesumitur. There is always a presumption in favor of marriage.

Semper qui non prohibit pro se intervire mandare creditur. A person who does not prohibit the intervention of another in his behalf is always believed to authorize it. [Cases: Principal and Agent 119(2).]

Semper sexus masculinus etiam faeminarum continet. The masculine gender always includes the feminine as well. Dig. 32.63.

Semper specialia generalibus insunt. Special clauses are always included in general ones.

Senatores sunt partes corporis regis. Senators are part of the body of the king.

Sensus verborum est anima legis. The meaning of words is the spirit of the law.

Sensus verborum est duplex, mitis et asper, et verba semper accipienda sunt in mitiore sensu. The meaning of words is twofold, mild and harsh; and words are always to be received in their milder sense.

Sensus verborum ex causa dicendi accipiendus est, et sermones semper accipiendi sunt secundum subjectam materiam. The sense of words is to be taken from the occasion of speaking them, and discourses are always to be interpreted according to the subject matter.

Sententia a non judice lata nemini debet nocere. A judgment pronounced by one who is not a judge should harm no one.

Sententia contra matrimonium nunquam transit in rem judicatam. A sentence against marriage never becomes a final judgment (i.e., res judicata).

Sententia facit jus, et legis interpretatio legis vim obtinet. The judgment creates the right, and the interpretation of the law obtains the force of law.

Sententia facit jus, et res judicata pro veritate accipitur. The judgment creates the right, and what is adjudicated is taken for truth.

Sententia interlocutoria revocari potest, definitiva non potest. An interlocutory judgment may be revoked, but not a final one.

Sententia non fertur de rebus non liquidis. Judgment is not given on matters that are not clear.

Sequi debet potentia justitiam, non praecedere. Power should follow justice, not precede it.

Sermo index animi. Speech is an index of the mind.

Servanda est consuetudo loci ubi causa agitur. The custom of the place where the action is brought is to be observed.

Servitia personalia sequuntur personam. Personal services follow the person (of the lord). Such "personal services" were those "annexed to the person of the Mesne, as homage, fealty, etc." 2 Co. Inst. 374.

Si aes pro auro veneat non valet. If bronze is sold for gold (the contract) is invalid.

Si a jure discedes, vagus eris et erunt omnia omnibus incerta. If you depart from the law, you will wander (without a guide), and everything will be in a state of uncertainty to everyone.

Si nulla sit conjectura quae ducat alio, verba intelligenda sunt ex proprietate, non grammatica sed populari ex usu. If there is no inference that leads to a different result, words are to be understood according to their proper meaning, not in a grammatical but in a popular and ordinary sense.

Si plures conditiones ascriptae fuerunt donationi conjunctim, omnibus est pars et verba. If several conditions are conjunctively written in a gift, the whole of them must be complied with; and with respect to their truth, it is necessary that every part be true, taken jointly: if the conditions are separate, it is sufficient to comply with either one or the other of them; and being disjunctive, that one or the other be true.

Si plures sint fidejussores, quotquot erunt numero, singuli in solidum tenentur. If there are more sureties than one, however many they will be in number, they are individually liable for the whole.

Si quidem in nomine, cognomine, praenomine, agnomine legatur et testator errore, cum de persona constat, nihilominus valet legatum. If the testator has erred in the name, cognomen, praenomen, or title of the legatee, when there is certainty about the person, the legacy is nonetheless valid.

Si quid universitati debetur, singulis non debetur, nec quod debet universitas singuli debent. If anything is due to a corporation, it is not due to the individual members of it, nor do the members individually owe what the corporation owes.

Si quis cum totum petitisset partem petat, exceptio rei judicatae vocet. If anyone sues for a part when he should have sued for the whole, the judgment should constitute res judicata (against another suit). [Cases: Judgment $592.]

Si quid custos fraudem pupillo fecerit, a tutela removet. If a guardian commits fraud against his ward, he is to be removed from the guardianship.

Si quis praegnantem uxorem reliquit, non videtur sine libris decessisse. If anyone dies leaving his wife pregnant, he is not considered as having died childless.

Si quis unum percusserit cum alium percutere vellet, in feloniam tenet. If a person kills one when he meant to kill another, he is held guilty of felony.

Si suggestio non sit vera, literae patentes vacuae sunt. If the suggestion is not true, the letters patent are void.

Sive tota res evincatur, sive pars, habet regressum emptor in venditorem. If the property is taken from the purchaser by eviction, whether whole or in part, he has an action against the vendor. Dig. 21.2.1.

Socii plures sunt quasi unum corpus, in eo quod unum jus habet, et oportet quod corpus sit integrum et quod in nulla parte sit defectus. Several partners are as one body, since they have one right, and it is necessary that the body be perfect, and that there be defect in no part.

Sola ac per se senectus donationem, testamentum aut transactionem non vitiat. Old age does not alone and of itself vitiate gift, will or transaction.

Solemnitates juris sunt observandas. The solemnities of law must be observed.

Solo cedit quod solo implantat. What is planted in the soil belongs to the soil. • This maxim is sometimes written Solo cedit, quicquid solo plantatur (translatable as “what is affixed to the soil belongs to the soil”).

Solo cedit quod solo inaedificatur. Whatever is built on the soil belongs to the soil.

Solus Deus haeredem facit. God alone makes the heir.

Solutio pretii emptionis loco habetur. The payment of the price stands in the place of a sale.

Solvenso esse nemo intelligitur nisi qui solidum potest solvere. No one is understood to be in a state of solvency except the one who can pay all that he owes. Dig. 50.16.114.

Solvitur adhuc societas etiam morte socii. A partnership is also dissolved by the death of a partner.

Solvitur ex ligamine quo ligatur. It is released by the bond with which it is bound.

Solvitur in modo solventis. A payment is made for the purpose the payer intends.

Sommonitiones aut citationes nullae liceant fieri infra palatium regis. No summonses or citations should be permitted to be served within the king’s palace.

Specilia generalibus derogant. Special words derogate from general ones.

Spes impunitatis continuum affectum tribuit delinquendi. The hope of impunity supplies a constant inclination to wrongdoing.

Spoliatus debet ante omnia restitui. A party forcibly deprived of possession ought first of all to have restitution.

Spoliatus episcopus ante omnia debet restitui. A bishop despoiled of his see ought, above all, to be restored.

Spondet peritiam artis. He promises (to use) the skill of his art. • That is, he engages to do the work in a skillful manner.

Sponsalia dicuntur futurum nuptiarum conventio et repromissio. A betrothal is the agreement and promise of a future marriage.

Sponte virum fugiens mulier et adultera facta, doti sua careat, nisi sponsi sponte retracta. A woman leaving her husband of her own accord and committing adultery should lose her dower, unless she is taken back by her husband of his own accord.
Stabit præsumptio donec probetur in contrarium. A presumption will stand until proof is given to the contrary.

Stare decisis et non quieta movere. Literally, to stand by previous decisions and not to disturb settled matters. - To adhere to precedents, and not to depart from established principles. [Cases: Courts $\cong$ 89, 90.]

Stat pro ratione voluntas. The will stands in place of a reason. [Cases: Wills $\cong$ 82.]

Stat pro ratione voluntas populi. The will of the people stands in place of a reason.

Statuta pro publico commodo late interpretantur. Statutes made for the public advantage ought to be broadly construed.

Statuta suo clauduntur territorio, nec ultra territorium disponunt. Statutes are confined to their own territory and have no extraterritorial effect.

Statutum affirmativum non derogat communi legi. An affirmative statute does not take away from the common law.

Statutum generaliter est intelligendum quando verba statuti sunt specialia, ratio autem generalis. A statute is to be understood generally when the words of the statute are special but its reason is general.

Statutum speciale statuto speciali non derogat. One special statute does not take away from another special statute.

Sublata causa tollitur effectus. Remove the cause and the effect ceases.

Sublata veneratione magistratum, respublica ruit. When respect for magistrates has been destroyed, the commonwealth perishes.

Sublato fundamento, cadit opus. When the foundation has been removed (or demolished), the structure collapses. [Cases: Principal and Surety $\cong$ 112.]

Sublato principali, tollitur adjunctum. When the principal has been taken away, the adjunct is also taken away.

Subsequens matrimonium tollit peccatum praecedens. A subsequent marriage removes the previous sin.

Tantum bona valent, quantum vendi possunt. Things are worth as much as they can be sold for.

Tantum habent de lege, quantum habent de justitia. (Precedents) have value in the law to the extent that they represent justice.

Tantum operatur fictio in casu facto quantum veritas in casu vero. A legal fiction operates to the same extent and effect in the supposed case as the truth does in a real case.

Tantum praescriptum quantum possessorum. There is only prescription insofar as there has been possession.

Tempus enim modus tollendi obligationes et actiones, quia tempus currit contra desidies et sui juris contemporares. For time is a means of destroying obligations and actions, because time runs against those who are inactive and show little respect for their own rights.

Tempus exsuapte natura vim nullam effectricem habet. Time, of its own nature, has no effectual force.

Tempus mortis inspiciendum. (One must) look to the time of death.

Summum jus, summa injuria. The highest right is the utmost injury. † That is, law too rigidly interpreted produces the greatest injustice.

Super falsa et certo fingit, super incerto et vero jure sumitur. A fiction assumes that the thing feigned is certainly untrue.

Superficies solo cedit. The surface goes with the land. † That is, whatever is attached to the land forms part of it.

Superflua non nocent. Superfluities do no injury.

Suppressio veri, expressio falsi. Suppression of the truth (is equivalent to) the expression of what is false. [Cases: Deeds $\cong$ 70(4); Fraud $\cong$ 16.]

Suppressio veri, suggestio falsi. Suppression of the truth (is equivalent to) the suggestion of what is false.

Talis non est eadem, nam nullum simile est idem. “Such” is not “the same,” for nothing similar is the same thing.

Tacita quaedam habentur pro expressis. Certain things though unexpressed are considered as expressed.

Talis interpretatio semper fienda est ut superfluum, absurdum, et inconveniens, et ne judicium sit illusionem. Interpretation is always to be made in such a manner that what is absurd and improper is avoided, and so that the judgment is not a mockery.

Tempus ex suapte natura vim nullam effectricem habet. Time, of its own nature, has no effectual force.

Summa caritas est facere justitiam singulis et omni tempore quando necesse fuerit. The greatest charity is to do justice to each individual and at every time when it is necessary.
Tenor est pactio contra communem feudi naturam ac rationem in contractu interposita. The tenure (of an agreement) is a compact contrary to the common nature and reason of the fee, put into a contract.

Tenor est qui legem dat feudo. It is the tenor that gives law to the fee. • That is, the tenor of the feudal grant regulates its effect and extent.

Triennalis pacificus possessor beneficci est inde securus. The undisturbed possessor of a benefic for three years is thereafter secure (from challenge).

Turpis est pars quae non convenit cum suo toto. The part is bad that does not accord with its whole.

Tuta est custodia quae sibimet creditur. The guardianship is safe which is entrusted to itself alone.

Tutius erratur ex parte mitiori. It is safer to err on the gentler side (or on the side of leniency).

Tutius est rei incumbere quam personae. It is safer to rely on a thing than on a person. • Real security is safer than personal security.

Tutius semper est errare in acquietando quam in puniendo, ex parte misericordiae quam ex parte justitiae. It is always safer to err in acquitting than in punishing, (and) on the side of mercy than of justice.

Tutor praesumitur intus habere, ante redditas rationes. A tutor is presumed to have funds in his own hands until his accounts have been rendered.

Tutor incertus dari non potest. An uncertain person cannot be given or appointed as tutor.

Tutor in rem suam auctor fieri non potest. A tutor cannot act for his own interest.

Tutor rem pupilli emere non potest. A tutor cannot purchase the property of his ward.

Ubi eadem ratio, ibi idem jus. Where there is the same reason, there is the same law. — Also rendered Ubi eadem est ratio, ibi idem est jus.

Ubi eadem ratio, ibi idem jus; et de similibus idem est judicium. Where there is the same reason, there is the same law; and the same judgment should be rendered on comparable facts.

Ubi est forum, ibi ergo est jus. Where the forum (or place of jurisdiction) is, there accordingly is the law.

Ubi est forum, ibi ergo est jus. Where the forum (or place of jurisdiction) is, there accordingly is the law.

Ubi nullum matrimonium, ibi nulla dos. Where there is no marriage, there is no dower.
Ubi quid generaliter conceditur, inest haec exceptio, si non aliquid sit contra jus fasque. Where a thing is granted in general terms, this exception is implied: if there is not anything contrary to law and right.

Ubi verba conjuncta non sunt, sufficit alterum esse factum. Where words are not conjoined, it is enough that one or another (of the things enumerated) has been done.

Unumquodque dominium fiduciariurn. Use is a fiduciary ownership.

Unumquodque eodem modo dissolvitur quo colligatur. Any obligation is discharged in the same manner as it is constituted.

Unumquodque eodem modo quo colligatur est dissolvitur. In the same manner in which anything was bound, it is loosened.

Unumquodque est id quod est principalius in ipso. That which is the principal part of a thing is the thing itself.

Unumquodque ligamen dissolvitur eodem ligamine qui et ligatur. Every obligation is dissolved in the same manner in which it is contracted.

Unusquisque debet esse gnarus conditionis ejus cum quo contrahit. Everyone ought to be cognizant of the condition of the person with whom he makes contract.

Usus est dominium fiduciariurn. Use is a fiduciary ownership.

Usus fit ex iteratis actibus. Usage arises from repeated acts.

Utile per inutile non vitiatu r. What is useful is not vitiated by the useless. [Cases: Trial 336.]

Utlagatus est quasi extra legem positus: caput gerit lupinum. An outlaw is, as it were, put out of the protection of the law: he carries the head of a wolf.

Ut poena ad paucos, metus ad omnes perveniat. So that punishment afflict few, (and) fear affect all. ● Blackstone cites Cicero (pro Cluentio 46) emphasizing deterrence. 4 Bl. Com. 11.

Ut res magis valeat quam pereat. (Interpret the law, contract, etc.) so that the transaction is upheld rather than lost (or so that a matter may avail rather than perish). ● The phrase can be literally translated as "that the matter may have effect rather than fail." [Cases: Contracts 153; Patents 157(2); Wills 449.]
Vana est illa potentia quae nunquam venit in actum. Vain is that power that never comes into action.

Vani timores sunt aestimandi, qui non cadunt in constantem virem. Those fears are to be considered groundless that do not affect a man of steady character.

Vani timoris justa excusatio non est. There is no legal excuse based on a groundless fear.

Velle non creditur qui obsequitur imperio patris vel domini. A person is not presumed to act of his own will who obeys the orders of his father or his master.

Vendens eadem rem duobus falsarius est. A vendor is fraudulent if he sells the same thing to two (separate) buyers.

Veniae facilitas incentivum est delinquendi. Ease of winning pardon is an incentive to committing crime.

Verba accipienda sunt secundum subjectam materiam. Words are to be interpreted according to the subject matter.

Verba accipienda ut sortiantur effectum. Words are to be taken so that they may have some effect.

Verba aequipovca ac in dubio sensu posita intelliguntur digniori et potentiiori sensu. Equivocal words and those in a doubtful sense are understood in the more suitable and more effective sense.

Verba aliquid operari debent — debent intelligi ut aliquid operentur. Words ought to have some effect — words ought to be understood so as to have some effect.

Verba aliquid operari debent; verba cum effectu sunt accipienda. Words ought to have some effect; words must be taken so as to have effect.

Verba artis ex arte. Terms of art (should be explained) from the art.

Verba chartarum fortius accipiuntur contra proferentem. The words of deeds are taken most strongly against the person offering them.

Verba cum effectu accipienda sunt. Words must be taken so as to have effect.

Verba currentis monetae tempus solutionis designant. The words "current money" refer to the time of payment.

Verba debit intelligi cum effectu. Words ought to be understood with effect.

Verba debit intelligi ut aliquid operentur. Words ought to be so understood that they may have some effect.

Verba dicta de persona intelligi debent de conditione personae. Words spoken of the person are to be understood of the condition of the person.

Verba fortius accipiuntur contra proferentem. Words are interpreted more strongly against the party who puts them forward; words are most readily accepted against the one putting them forward.

Verba generalia generaliter sunt intelligenda. General words are to be understood generally.

Verba generalia restringuntur ad habilitatem rei vel aptitudinem personae. General words are limited to the capability of the subject matter or the aptitude of the person.

Verba generalia restringuntur ad habilitatem rei vel personae. General words are limited to the capability of the subject matter or of the person. [Cases: Release ☞31.]

Verba illata (relata) inesse videntur. Words referred to are considered as if incorporated.

Verba in differenti materia per prius, non per posterius, intelligenda sunt. Words referring to a different subject are to be understood by what goes before, not by what follows.

Verba intelligenda sunt in casu possibili. Words are to be understood in reference to a possible case.

Verba intentioni, et non e contra, debent inservire. Words should be subject to the intention, not the reverse.

Verba ita sunt intelligenda, ut res magis valeat quam pereat. Words are to be so understood that the matter may have effect rather than fail.

Verba mere aequipovca, si per communem usum locundis in intellectu certo sumuntur, talis intellectus praefundus est. When words are purely equivocal, if by common usage of speech they are taken in a certain meaning, such meaning is to be preferred.

Verba nihil operari melius est quam absurde. It is better that words should have no effect than an absurd effect.

Verba non tam intuenda quam causa et natura rei, ut mens contrahentium ex eis potius quam ex verbis appareat. The words (of a contract) are not to be looked to so much as the cause and nature of the matter, so that the intention of the contracting parties may appear from these rather than from the (mere) words.

Verba offendi possunt, immo ab eis recedere licet, ut verba ad sanum intellectum reducantur. The words can be faulted — indeed, it is permitted to depart from them, in order that the words may be restored to a sensible meaning.

Verba ordinatio, quando verificari possunt in sua vera significacione, trahi ad extraneum intellectum non debent. When the words of an ordinance can be made true in their true significance, they ought not to be warped to a foreign meaning.

Verba posterioria propter certitudinem addita, ad prioria quae certitudine indigent, sunt referenda. Later words added for the purpose of certainty are to be referred to preceding words in which certainty is wanting.

Verba pro re et subjecta materia accipi debent. Words should be taken most in favor of the thing and the subject matter.
Verba quae aliquid operari possunt non debent esse superflu.a. Words that can have some effect ought not to be (treated as) superfluous.

Verba quantumvis generalia ad aptitudinem restringuntur. etiamsi hum cum ali am patenentur restrictionem. Words, howsoever general, are confined to fitness (i.e., to harmonize with the subject matter), even if they would bear no other restriction.

Verba relata hoc maxime operantur per referentiam ut in eis ini esse videntur. Words to which reference is made have, by the reference, this particular effect, that they are considered to be incorporated in those (clauses). Words to which reference is made in an instrument have the same effect and operation as if they were inserted in the clause referring to them.

Verba secundum materiam subj ect am intelligi nemo est qui nescit. There is no one who does not know that words should be understood according to the subject matter.

Verba semper accipienda sunt in mitiori sensu. Words are always to be taken in their milder sense.

Verba strictae significationis ad latam extenduntur. Words of a strict signification can be given a wide signification if there is reason for it.

Vulgaris opinio est duplex: orta inter graves et discre­tos, quae multum veritatis habeat, et opinio orta inter leves et vulgares homines, absque specie veritatis. Common opinion is double: that proceeding from grave and discreet men, which has much truth in it, and that proceeding from foolish vulgar men, without any semblance of truth in it.

Maxims Bibliography

The Senate shall choose their other Officers, and also a President pro tempore, in the Absence of the Vice President, or when he shall exercise the Office of President of the United States.

The Senate shall have the sole Power to try all Impeachments. When sitting for that Purpose, they shall be on Oath or Affirmation. When the President of the United States is tried, the Chief Justice shall preside: And no Person shall be convicted without the Concurrence of two thirds of the Members present.

Judgment in Cases of Impeachment shall not extend further than to removal from Office, and disqualification to hold and enjoy any Office of Honor, Trust or Profit under the United States; but the Party convicted shall nevertheless be liable and subject to Indictment, Trial, Judgment and Punishment, according to Law.

Section 4. The Times, Places and Manner of holding Elections for Senators and Representatives, shall be prescribed in each State by the Legislature thereof; but the Congress may at any time by Law make or alter such Regulations, except as to the Places of chusing Senators.

The Congress shall assemble at least once in every Year, and such Meeting shall be on the first Monday in December, unless they shall by Law appoint a different Day.

Section 5. Each House shall be the Judge of the Elections. Returns and Qualifications of its own Members, and a Majority of each shall constitute a Quorum to do Business; but a smaller Number may adjourn from day to day, and may be authorized to compel the Attendance of absent Members, in such Manner, and under such Penalties as each House may provide.

Each House may determine the Rules of its Proceedings, punish its Members for disorderly Behavior, and, with the Concurrence of two thirds, expel a Member.

Each House shall keep a Journal of its Proceedings, and from time to time publish the same, excepting such Parts as may in their Judgment require Secrecy; and the Yeas and Nays of the Members of either House on any question shall, at the Desire of one fifth of those Present, be entered on the Journal.

Neither House, during the Session of Congress, shall, without the Consent of the other, adjourn for more than three days, nor to any other Place than that in which the two Houses shall be sitting.

Section 6. The Senators and Representatives shall receive a Compensation for their Services, to be ascertained by Law, and paid out of the Treasury of the United States. They shall in all Cases, except Treason, Felony and Breach of the Peace, be privileged from Arrest during their Attendance at the Session of their respective Houses, and in going to and returning from the same; and for any Speech or Debate in either House, they shall not be questioned in any other Place.

No Senator or Representative shall, during the Time for which he was elected, be appointed to any civil Office under the Authority of the United States, which shall have been created, or the Emoluments whereof shall have been increased during such time; and no Person holding any Office under the United States, shall be a Member of either House during his Continuance in Office.

Section 7. All Bills for raising Revenue shall originate in the House of Representatives; but the Senate may propose or concur with Amendments as on other Bills.

Every Bill which shall have passed the House of Representatives and the Senate, shall, before it become a Law, be presented to the President of the United States; If he approve he shall sign it, but if not he shall return it, with his Objections to the House in which it shall have originated, who shall enter the Objections at large on their Journal, and proceed to reconsider it. If after such Reconsideration two thirds of that House shall agree to pass the Bill, it shall be sent, together with the Objections, to the other House, by which it shall likewise be reconsidered, and if approved by two thirds of that House, it shall become a Law. But in all such Cases the Votes of both Houses shall be determined by yeas and nays, and the Names of the Persons voting for and against the Bill shall be entered on the Journal of each House respectively. If any Bill shall not be returned by the President within ten Days (Sundays excepted) after it shall have been presented to him, the Same shall be a Law, in like Manner as if he had signed it, unless the Congress by their Adjournment prevent its Return, in which Case it shall not be a Law.

Every Order, Resolution, or Vote to which the Concurrence of the Senate and House of Representatives may be necessary (except on a question of Adjournment) shall be presented to the President of the United States; and before the Same shall take Effect, shall be approved by him, or being disapproved by him, shall be repassed by two thirds of the Senate and House of Representatives, according to the Rules and Limitations prescribed in the Case of a Bill.

Section 8. The Congress shall have Power To lay and collect Taxes, Duties, Imposts and Excises, to pay the Debts and provide for the common Defence and general Welfare of the United States; but all Duties, Imposts and Excises shall be uniform throughout the United States;

To borrow Money on the credit of the United States;
To regulate Commerce with foreign Nations, and among the several States, and with the Indian Tribes;
To establish an uniform Rule of Naturalization, and uniform Laws on the subject of Bankruptcies throughout the United States;
To coin Money, regulate the Value thereof, and of foreign Coin, and fix the Standard of Weights and Measures;
To provide for the Punishment of counterfeiting the Securities and current Coin of the United States;
To establish Post Offices and post Roads;
To promote the Progress of Science and useful Arts, by securing for limited Times to Authors and Inventors the exclusive Right to their respective Writings and Discoveries;
To constitute Tribunals inferior to the supreme Court;
To define and punish Piracies and Felonies committed on the high Seas, and Offences against the Law of Nations;
To declare War, grant Letters of Marque and Reprisal, and make Rules concerning Captures on Land and Water;
To raise and support Armies, but no Appropriation of Money to that Use shall be for a longer Term than two Years;
To provide and maintain a Navy;
To make Rules for the Government and Regulation of the land and naval Forces;
To provide for calling forth the Militia to execute the Laws of the Union, suppress Insurrections and repel Invasions;
To provide for organizing, arming, and disciplining, the Militia, and for governing such Part of them as may be employed in the Service of the United States, reserving to the States respectively, the Appointment of the Officers, and the Authority of training the Militia according to the discipline prescribed by Congress;
To exercise exclusive Legislation in all Cases whatsoever, over such District (not exceeding ten Miles square) as may, by Cession of particular States, and the Acceptance of Congress, become the Seat of the Government of the United States, and to exercise like Authority over all Places purchased by the Consent of the Legislature of the State in which the Same shall be, for the Erection of Forts, Magazines, Arsenals, dock-Yards, and other needful Buildings;—And
To make all Laws which shall be necessary and proper for carrying into Execution the foregoing Powers, and all other Powers vested by this Constitution in the Government of the United States, or in any Department or Officer thereof.

Section 9. The Migration or Importation of such Persons as any of the States now existing shall think proper to admit, shall not be prohibited by the Congress prior to the Year one thousand eight hundred and eight, but a Tax or duty may be imposed on such Importation, not exceeding ten dollars for each Person.

The Privilege of the Writ of Habeas Corpus shall not be suspended, unless when in Cases of Rebellion or Invasion the public Safety may require it.

No Bill of Attainder or ex post facto Law shall be passed.

No Capitation, or other direct, Tax shall be laid, unless in Proportion to the Census or Enumeration herein before directed to be taken.

No Tax or Duty shall be laid on Articles exported from any State.

No Preference shall be given by any Regulation of Commerce or Revenue to the Ports of one State over those of another: nor shall Vessels bound to, or from, one State, be obliged to enter, clear or pay Duties in another.

No Money shall be drawn from the Treasury, but in Consequence of Appropriations made by Law; and a regular Statement and Account of Receipts and Expenditures of all public Money shall be published from time to time.

No Title of Nobility shall be granted by the United States: And no Person holding any Office of Profit or Trust under them, shall, without the Consent of the Congress, accept of any present, Emolument, Office, or Title, of any kind whatever, from any King, Prince, or foreign State.

Section 10. No State shall enter into any Treaty, Alliance, or Confederation; grant Letters of Marque and Reprisal; coin Money; emit Bills of Credit; make any Thing but gold and silver Coin a Tender in Payment of Debts; pass any Bill of Attainder, ex post facto Law, or Law impairing the Obligation of Contracts, or grant any Title of Nobility.

No State shall, without the Consent of the Congress, lay any Imposts or Duties on Imports or Exports, except what may be absolutely necessary for executing its inspection Laws: and the net Produce of all Duties and Imposts, laid by any State on Imports or Exports, shall be for the Use of the Treasury of the United States; and all such Laws shall be subject to the Revision and Control of the Congress.

No State shall, without the Consent of Congress, lay any Duty of Tonnage, keep Troops, or Ships of War in time of Peace, enter into any Agreement or Compact with another State, or with a foreign Power, or engage in War, unless actually invaded, or in such imminent Danger as will not admit of delay.

Article II

Section 1. The executive Power shall be vested in a President of the United States of America. He shall hold his Office during the Term of four Years, and, together with the Vice President, chosen for the same Term, be elected, as follows:

Each State shall appoint, in such Manner as the Legislature thereof may direct, a Number of Electors, equal to the whole Number of Senators and Representatives to which the State may be entitled in the Congress: but no Senator or Representative, or Person holding an Office of Trust or Profit under the United States, shall be appointed an Elector.

The Electors shall meet in their respective States, and vote by Ballot for two Persons, of whom one at least shall not be an Inhabitant of the same State with themselves. And they shall make a List of all the Persons voted for, and of the Number of Votes for each; which List they shall sign and certify, and transmit sealed to the Seat of the Government of the United States, directed to the President of the Senate. The President of the Senate shall, in the Presence of the Senate and House of Representatives, open all the Certificates, and the Votes shall then be counted. The Person having the greatest Number of Votes shall be the President, if such Number be a Majority of the whole Number of Electors appointed; and if there be more than one who have such Majority, and have an equal Number of Votes, then the House of Representatives shall immediately chuse by Ballot one of them for President; and if no Person have a Majority, then from the five highest on the List the said House shall in like Manner chuse the President.
But in chusing the President, the Votes shall be taken by States, the Representation from each State having one Vote; A quorum for this Purpose shall consist of a Member or Members from two thirds of the States, and a Majority of all the States shall be necessary to a Choice. In every Case, after the Choice of the President, the Person having the greatest Number of Votes of the ELECTORS shall be the Vice President. But if there should remain two or more who have equal Votes, the Senate shall chuse from them by Ballot the Vice President.

The Congress may determine the Time of chusing the Electors, and the Day on which they shall give their Votes; which Day shall be the same throughout the United States.

No Person except a natural born Citizen, or a Citizen of the United States, at the time of the Adoption of this Constitution, shall be eligible to the Office of President; neither shall any Person be eligible to that Office who shall not have attained to the Age of thirty five Years, and been fourteen Years a Resident within the United States.

In Case of the Removal of the President from Office, or of his Death, Resignation, or Inability to discharge the Powers and Duties of the said Office, the Same shall devolve on the Vice President, and the Congress may by Law provide for the Case of Removal, Death, Resignation or Inability, both of the President and Vice President, declaring what Officer shall then act as President, and such Officer shall act accordingly, until the Disability be removed, or a President shall be elected.

The President shall, at stated Times, receive for his Services, a Compensation, which shall neither be increased nor diminished during the Period for which he shall have been elected, and he shall not receive within that Period any other Emolument from the United States, or any of them.

Before he enter on the Execution of his Office, he shall take the following Oath or Affirmation: "I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will faithfully execute the Office of President of the United States, and will to the best of my Ability, preserve, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States."

Section 2. The President shall be Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy of the United States, and of the Militia of the several States, when called into the actual Service of the United States; he may require the Opinion, in writing, of the principal Officer in each of the executive Departments, upon any Subject relating to the Duties of their respective Offices, and he shall have Power to grant Reprieves and Pardons for Offences against the United States, except in Cases of Impeachment.

He shall have Power, by and with the Advice and Consent of the Senate, to make Treaties, provided two thirds of the Senators present concur; and he shall nominate, and by and with the Advice and Consent of the Senate, shall appoint Ambassadors, other public Ministers and Consuls, Judges of the supreme Court, and all other Officers of the United States, whose Appointments are not herein otherwise provided for, and which shall be established by Law: but the Congress may by Law vest the Appointment of such inferior Officers, as they think proper, in the President alone, in the Courts of Law, or in the Heads of Departments.

The President shall have Power to fill up all Vacancies that may happen during the Recess of the Senate, by granting Commissions which shall expire at the End of their next Session.
Section 3. He shall from time to time give to the Congress Information of the State of the Union, and recommend to their Consideration such Measures as he shall judge necessary and expedient; he may, on extraordinary Occasions, convene both Houses, or either of them, and in Case of Disagreement between them, with Respect to the Time of Adjournment, he may adjourn them to such Time as he shall think proper; he shall receive Ambassadors and other public Ministers; he shall take Care that the Laws be faithfully executed, and shall Commission all the Officers of the United States.

Section 4. The President, Vice President and all civil Officers of the United States, shall be removed from Office on Impeachment for, and Conviction of, Treason, Bribery, or other high Crimes and Misdemeanors.

Article III

Section 1. The judicial Power of the United States, shall be vested in one supreme Court, and in such inferior Courts as the Congress may from time to time ordain and establish. The Judges, both of the supreme and inferior Courts, shall hold their Offices during good Behaviour, and shall, at stated Times, receive for their Services a Compensation, which shall not be diminished during their Continuance in Office.

Section 2. The judicial Power shall extend to all Cases, in Law and Equity, arising under this Constitution, the Laws of the United States, and Treaties made, or which shall be made, under their Authority;—to all Cases affecting Ambassadors, other public Ministers and Consuls;—to all Cases of admiralty and maritime Jurisdiction;—to Controversies to which the United States shall be a Party;—to Controversies between two or more States;—between a State and Citizens of another State;—between Citizens of different States;—between Citizens of the same State claiming Lands under the Grants of different States, and between a State, or the Citizens thereof, and foreign States, Citizens or Subjects.

In all Cases affecting Ambassadors, other public Ministers and Consuls, and those in which a State shall be a Party, the supreme Court shall have original Jurisdiction. In all the other Cases before mentioned, the supreme Court shall have appellate Jurisdiction, both as to Law and Fact, with such Exceptions, and under such Regulations as the Congress shall make.

The Trial of all Crimes, except in Cases of Impeachment, shall be by Jury; and such Trial shall be held in the State where the said Crimes shall have been committed; but when not committed within any State, the Trial shall be at such Place or Places as the Congress may by Law have directed.

Section 3. Treason against the United States, shall consist only in levying War against them, or in adhering to their Enemies, giving them Aid and Comfort. No Person shall be convicted of Treason unless on the Testimony of two Witnesses to the same overt Act, or on Confession in open Court.

The Congress shall have Power to declare the Punishment of Treason, but no Attainder of Treason shall work Corruption of Blood, or Forfeiture except during the Life of the Person attainted.

Article IV

Section 1. Full Faith and Credit shall be given in each State to the public Acts, Records, and judicial Proceedings of every other State. And the Congress may by general Laws prescribe the Manner in which such Acts, Records and Proceedings shall be proved, and the Effect thereof.

Section 2. The Citizens of each State shall be entitled to all Privileges and Immunities of Citizens in the several States.

A Person charged in any State with Treason, Felony, or other Crime, who shall flee from Justice, and be found in another State, shall on demand of the executive Authority of the State from which he fled, be delivered up, to be removed to the State having Jurisdiction of the Crime.

No Person held to Service or Labour in one State, under the Laws thereof, escaping into another, shall, in Consequence of any Law or Regulation therein, be discharged from such Service or Labour, but shall be delivered up on Claim of the Party to whom such Service or Labour may be due.

Section 3. New States may be admitted by the Congress into this Union; but no new State shall be formed or erected within the Jurisdiction of any other State; nor any State be formed by the Junction of two or more States, or Parts of States, without the Consent of the Legislatures of the States concerned as well as of the Congress.

The Congress shall have Power to dispose of and make all needful Rules and Regulations respecting the Territory or other Property belonging to the United States; and nothing in this Constitution shall be so construed as to Prejudice any Claims of the United States, or of any particular State.

Section 4. The United States shall guarantee to every State in this Union a Republican Form of Government, and shall protect each of them against Invasion; and on Application of the Legislature, or of the Executive (when the Legislature cannot be convened) against domestic Violence.

Article V

The Congress, whenever two thirds of both Houses shall deem it necessary, shall propose Amendments to this Constitution, or, on the Application of the Legislatures of two thirds of the several States, shall call a Convention for proposing Amendments, which, in either Case, shall be valid to all Intents and Purposes, as Part of this Constitution, when ratified by the Legislatures of three fourths of the several States, or by Conventions in three fourths thereof, as the one or the other Mode of Ratification may be proposed by the Congress; Provided that no Amendment which may be made prior to the Year One thousand eight hundred and eight shall in any Manner affect the first and fourth Clauses in the Ninth Section of the first Article; and that no State, without its Consent, shall be deprived of its equal Suffrage in the Senate.

Article VI

All Debts contracted and Engagements entered into, before the Adoption of this Constitution, shall be as valid against the United States under this Constitution, as under the Confederation.

This Constitution, and the Laws of the United States which shall be made in Pursuance thereof; and all Treaties made, or which shall be made, under the Authority of the United States, shall be the supreme Law of the Land; and the Judges in every State shall be bound thereby, any Thing in the Constitution or Laws of any State to the Contrary notwithstanding.

The Senators and Representatives before mentioned, and the Members of the several State Legislatures, and all executive and judicial Officers, both of the United States and of the several States, shall be bound by Oath or Affirmation, to support this Constitution; but no religious Test shall ever be required as a Qualification to any Office or public Trust under the United States.

Article VII

The Ratification of the Conventions of nine States, shall be sufficient for the Establishment of this Constitution between the States so ratifying the Same.
Articles in addition to, and amendment of, the Constitution of the United States of America, proposed by Congress, and ratified by the Legislatures of the Several States pursuant to the Fifth Article of the original Constitution.

Amendment I [1791]

Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances.

Amendment II [1791]

A well regulated Militia, being necessary to the security of a free State, the right of the people to keep and bear Arms, shall not be infringed.

Amendment III [1791]

No Soldier shall, in time of peace be quartered in any house, without the consent of the Owner, nor in time of war, but in a manner to be prescribed by law.

Amendment IV [1791]

The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures, shall not be violated, and no Warrants shall issue, but upon probable cause, supported by Oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched, and the persons or things to be seized.

Amendment V [1791]

No person shall be held to answer for a capital, or otherwise infamous crime, unless on a presentment or indictment of a Grand Jury, except in cases arising in the land or naval forces, or in the Militia, when in actual service in time of War or public danger; nor shall any person be subject for the same offence to be twice put in jeopardy of life or limb; nor shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself, nor be deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor shall private property be taken for public use, without just compensation.

Amendment VI [1791]

In all criminal prosecutions, the accused shall enjoy the right to a speedy and public trial, by an impartial jury of the State and district wherein the crime shall have been committed, which district shall have been previously ascertained by law, and to be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation: to be confronted with the witnesses against him; to have compulsory process for obtaining witnesses in his favor, and to have the Assistance of Counsel for his defence.

Amendment VII [1791]

In Suits at common law, where the value in controversy shall exceed twenty dollars, the right of trial by jury shall be preserved, and no fact tried by jury, shall be otherwise re-examined in any Court of the United States, than according to the rules of the common law.

Amendment VIII [1791]

Excessive bail shall not be required, nor excessive fines imposed, nor cruel and unusual punishments inflicted.

Amendment IX [1791]

The enumeration in the Constitution, of certain rights, shall not be construed to deny or disparage others retained by the people.
Amendment X [1791]

The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people.

Amendment XI [1798]

The Judicial power of the United States shall not be construed to extend to any suit in law or equity, commenced or prosecuted against one of the United States by Citizens of another State, or by Citizens or Subjects of any Foreign State.

Amendment XII [1804]

The Electors shall meet in their respective states and vote by ballot for President and Vice-President, one of whom, at least, shall not be an inhabitant of the same state with themselves; they shall name in their ballots the person voted for as President, and in distinct ballots the person voted for as Vice-President, and they shall make distinct lists of all persons voted for as President, and of all persons voted for as Vice-President, and of the number of votes for each, which lists they shall sign and certify, and transmit sealed to the seat of the government of the United States, directed to the President of the Senate;—The President of the Senate shall, in the presence of the Senate and House of Representatives, open all the certificates and the votes shall then be counted;—The person having the greatest Number of votes for President, shall be the President, if such number be a majority of the whole number of Electors appointed; and if no person have such majority, then from the persons having the highest numbers not exceeding three on the list of those voted for as President, the House of Representatives shall choose immediately, by ballot, the President. But in choosing the President, the votes shall be taken by states, the representation from each state having one vote; a quorum for this purpose shall consist of a member or members from two-thirds of the states, and a majority of all the states shall be necessary to a choice. And if the House of Representatives shall not choose a President whenever the right of choice shall devolve upon them before the fourth day of March next following, then the Vice-President shall act as President, as in the case of the death or other constitutional disability of the President.—The person having the greatest number of votes as Vice-President, shall be the Vice-President, if such number be a majority of the whole number of Electors appointed, and if no person have a majority, then from the two highest numbers on the list, the Senate shall choose the Vice-President; a quorum for the purpose shall consist of two-thirds of the whole number of Senators, and a majority of the whole number shall be necessary to a choice. But no person constitutionally ineligible to the office of President shall be eligible to that of Vice-President of the United States.

Amendment XIII [1865]

Section 1. Neither slavery nor involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime whereof the party shall have been duly convicted, shall exist within the United States, or any place subject to their jurisdiction.

Section 2. Congress shall have power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation.

Amendment XIV [1868]

Section 1. All persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and of the State wherein they reside. No State shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States; nor shall any State deprive any person of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law; nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws.

Section 2. Representatives shall be apportioned among the several States according to their respective numbers, counting the whole number of persons in each State, excluding Indians not taxed. But when the right to vote at any election for the choice of electors for President and Vice-President of the United States, Representatives in Congress, the Executive and Judicial officers of a State, or the members of the Legislature thereof, is denied to any of the male inhabitants of such State, being twenty-one years of age, and citizens of the United States, or in any way abridged, except for participation in rebellion, or other crime, the basis of representation therein shall be reduced in the proportion which the number of such male citizens shall bear to the whole number of male citizens twenty-one years of age in such State.

Section 3. No person shall be a Senator or Representative in Congress, or elector of President and Vice-President, or hold any office, civil or military, under the United States, or under any State, who, having previously taken an oath, as a member of Congress, or as an officer of the United States, or as a member of any State legislature, or as an executive or judicial officer of any State, to support the Constitution of the United States, shall have engaged in insurrection or rebellion against the same, or given aid or comfort to the enemies thereof. But Congress may by a vote of two-thirds of each House, remove such disability.

Section 4. The validity of the public debt of the United States, authorized by law, including debts incurred for payment of pensions and bounties for services in suppressing insurrection or rebellion, shall not be questioned. But neither the United States nor any State shall assume or pay any debt or obligation incurred in aid of insurrection or rebellion against the United States, or any claim for the loss or emancipation of any slave; but all such debts, obligations and claims shall be held illegal and void.

Section 5. The Congress shall have power to enforce, by appropriate legislation, the provisions of this article.

Amendment XV [1870]

Section 1. The right of citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any State on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude.

Section 2. The Congress shall have power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation.

Amendment XVI [1913]

The Congress shall have power to lay and collect taxes on incomes, from whatever source derived, without apportionment among the several States, and without regard to any census or enumeration.

Amendment XVII [1913]

[1] The Senate of the United States shall be composed of two Senators from each State, elected by the people thereof, for six years; and each Senator shall have one vote. The electors in each State shall have the qualifications requisite for electors of the most numerous branch of the State legislatures.

[2] When vacancies happen in the representation of any State in the Senate, the executive authority of such State shall issue writs of election to fill such vacancies: Provided, That the legislature of any State may empower the executive thereof to make temporary appointments until the people fill the vacancies by election as the legislature may direct.

[3] This amendment shall not be so construed as to affect the election or term of any Senator chosen before it becomes valid as part of the Constitution.

Amendment XVIII [1919]

Section 1. After one year from the ratification of this article the manufacture, sale, or transportation of intoxicating liquors within, the importation thereof into, or the exportation thereof from the United States and all territory subject to the jurisdiction thereof for beverage purposes is hereby prohibited.
Section 2. The Congress and the several States shall have concurrent power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation.

Section 3. This article shall be inoperative unless it shall have been ratified as an amendment to the Constitution by the legislatures of the several States, as provided in the Constitution, within seven years from the date of the submission hereof to the States by the Congress.

Amendment XIX [1920]

[1] The right of citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any State on account of sex.

[2] Congress shall have power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation.

Amendment XX [1933]

Section 1. The terms of the President and Vice President shall end at noon on the 20th day of January, and the terms of Senators and Representatives at noon on the 3d day of January, of the years in which such terms would have ended if this article had not been ratified; and the terms of their successors shall then begin.

Section 2. The Congress shall assemble at least once in every year, and such meeting shall begin at noon on the 3d day of January, unless they shall by law appoint a different day.

Section 3. If, at the time fixed for the beginning of the term of the President, the President elect shall have died, the Vice President elect shall become President. If the President shall not have been chosen before the time fixed for the beginning of his term, or if the President elect shall have failed to qualify, then the Vice President elect shall act as President until a President shall have qualified; and the Congress may by law provide for the case wherein neither a President elect nor a Vice President elect shall have qualified, declaring who shall then act as President, or the manner in which one who is to act shall be selected, and such person shall act accordingly until a President or Vice President shall have qualified.

Section 4. The Congress may by law provide for the case of the death of any of the persons from whom the House of Representatives may choose a President whenever the right of choice shall have devolved upon them, and for the case of the death of any of the persons from whom the Senate may choose a Vice President whenever the right of choice shall have devolved upon them.

Section 5. Sections 1 and 2 shall take effect on the 15th day of October following the ratification of this article.

Section 6. This article shall be inoperative unless it shall have been ratified as an amendment to the Constitution by the legislatures of three-fourths of the several States within seven years from the date of its submission.

Amendment XXI [1933]

Section 1. The eighteenth article of amendment to the Constitution of the United States is hereby repealed.

Section 2. The transportation or importation into any State, Territory, or possession of the United States for delivery or use therein of intoxicating liquors, in violation of the laws thereof, is hereby prohibited.

Section 3. The article shall be inoperative unless it shall have been ratified as an amendment to the Constitution by conventions in the several States, as provided in the Constitution, within seven years from the date of the submission hereof to the States by the Congress.

Amendment XXII [1951]

Section 1. No person shall be elected to the office of the President more than twice, and no person who has held the office of President, or acted as President, for more than two years of a term to which some other person was elected President shall be elected to the office of the President more than once. But this Article shall not apply to any person holding the office of President when this Article was proposed by the Congress, and shall not prevent any person who may be holding the office of President, or acting as President, during the term within which this Article becomes operative from holding the office of President or acting as President during the remainder of such term.

Section 2. This article shall be inoperative unless it shall have been ratified as an amendment to the Constitution by the legislatures of three-fourths of the several States within seven years from the date of its submission to the States by the Congress.

Amendment XXIII [1961]

Section 1. The District constituting the seat of Government of the United States shall appoint in such manner as the Congress may direct:

A number of electors of President and Vice President equal to the whole number of Senators and Representatives in Congress to which the District would be entitled if it were a State, but in no event more than the least populous State; they shall be in addition to those appointed by the States, but they shall be considered, for the purposes of the election of President and Vice President, to be electors appointed by a State; and they shall meet in the District and perform such duties as provided by the twelfth article of amendment.

Section 2. The Congress shall have power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation.

Amendment XXIV [1964]

Section 1. The right of citizens of the United States to vote in any primary or other election for President or Vice President, for electors for President or Vice President, or for Senator or Representative in Congress, shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or any State by reason of failure to pay any poll tax or other tax.

Section 2. The Congress shall have power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation.

Amendment XXV [1967]

Section 1. In case of the removal of the President from office or of his death or resignation, the Vice President shall become President.

Section 2. Whenever there is a vacancy in the office of the Vice President, the President shall nominate a Vice President who shall take office upon confirmation by a majority vote of both Houses of Congress.

Section 3. Whenever the President transmits to the President pro tempore of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives his written declaration that he is unable to discharge the powers and duties of his office, and until he transmits to them a written declaration to the contrary, such powers and duties shall be discharged by the Vice President as Acting President.

Section 4. Whenever the Vice President and a majority of either the principal officers of the executive departments or of such other body as Congress may by law provide, transmit to the President pro tempore of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives their written declaration that the President is unable to discharge the powers and duties of his office, the Vice President shall immediately assume the powers and duties of the office as Acting President.

Thereafter, when the President transmits to the President pro tempore of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives his written declaration that no inability exists, he shall resume the powers and duties of his office unless the Vice President and a majority of either the principal officers of the executive department or of such other body as Congress may by law provide, transmit within four days to the President pro tempore of the Senate and the Speaker of the House of Representatives their written declaration that the President is unable to discharge the powers and duties of his office. Thereupon Congress shall decide the issue, assembling within forty-eight hours for that purpose if not in session. If the Congress, within twenty-one days after receipt of the latter written declaration, or, if Congress is not in session, within twenty-one days after Congress is required to assemble, determines by two-thirds vote of both Houses that the President is unable to discharge the powers and duties of his office, the Vice President shall continue to discharge the same as Acting President; otherwise, the President shall resume the powers and duties of his office.

Amendment XXVI [1971]

Section 1. The right of citizens of the United States, who are eighteen years of age or older, to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any State on account of age.

Section 2. The Congress shall have power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation.

Amendment XXVII [1992]

No law, varying the compensation for the services of the Senators and Representatives, shall take effect, until an election of Representatives shall have intervened.
Appendix D

Universal Declaration of Human Rights

On December 10, 1948, the General Assembly of the United Nations adopted and proclaimed the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, the full text of which appears in the following pages. Following this historic act, the Assembly called upon all Member countries to publicize the text of the Declaration and “to cause it to be disseminated, displayed, read and expounded principally in schools and other educational institutions, without distinction based on the political status of countries or territories.”

Preamble

Whereas recognition of the inherent dignity and of the equal and inalienable rights of all members of the human family is the foundation of freedom, justice and peace in the world,

Whereas disregard and contempt for human rights have resulted in barbarous acts which have outraged the conscience of mankind, and the advent of a world in which human beings shall enjoy freedom of speech and belief and freedom from fear and want has been proclaimed as the highest aspiration of the common people,

Whereas it is essential, if man is not to be compelled to have recourse, as a last resort, to rebellion against tyranny and oppression, that human rights should be protected by the rule of law,

Whereas it is essential to promote the development of friendly relations between nations,

Whereas the peoples of the United Nations have in the Charter reaffirmed their faith in fundamental human rights, in the dignity and worth of the human person and in the equal rights of men and women and have determined to promote social progress and better standards of life in larger freedom,

Whereas Member States have pledged themselves to achieve, in cooperation with the United Nations, the promotion of universal respect for and observance of human rights and fundamental freedoms,

Whereas a common understanding of these rights and freedoms is of the greatest importance for the full realization of this pledge,

Now, Therefore THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY proclaims
THIS UNIVERSAL DECLARATION OF HUMAN RIGHTS

as a common standard of achievement for all peoples and all nations, to the end that every individual and every organ of society, keeping this Declaration constantly in mind, shall strive by teaching and education to promote respect for these rights and freedoms and by progressive measures, national and international, to secure their universal and effective recognition and observance, both among the peoples of Member States themselves and among the peoples of territories under their jurisdiction.
Article 1. All human beings are born free and equal in dignity and rights. They are endowed with reason and conscience and should act towards one another in a spirit of brotherhood.

Article 2. Everyone is entitled to all the rights and freedoms set forth in this Declaration, without distinction of any kind, such as race, colour, sex, language, religion, political or other opinion, national or social origin, property, birth or other status. Furthermore, no distinction shall be made on the basis of the political, jurisdictional or international status of the country or territory to which a person belongs, whether it be independent, trust, non-self-governing or under any other limitation of sovereignty.

Article 3. Everyone has the right to life, liberty and security of person.

Article 4. No one shall be held in slavery or servitude; slavery and the slave trade shall be prohibited in all their forms.

Article 5. No one shall be subjected to torture or to cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment.

Article 6. Everyone has the right to recognition everywhere as a person before the law.

Article 7. All are equal before the law and are entitled without any discrimination to equal protection of the law. All are entitled to equal protection against any discrimination in violation of this Declaration and against any incitement to such discrimination.

Article 8. Everyone has the right to an effective remedy by the competent national tribunals for acts violating the fundamental rights granted him by the constitution or by law.

Article 9. No one shall be subjected to arbitrary arrest, detention or exile.

Article 10. Everyone is entitled in full equality to a fair and public hearing by an independent and impartial tribunal, in the determination of his rights and obligations and of any criminal charge against him.

Article 11. (1) Everyone charged with a penal offence has the right to be presumed innocent until proved guilty according to law in a public trial at which he has had all the guarantees necessary for his defence.

(2) No one shall be held guilty of any penal offence on account of any act or omission which did not constitute a penal offence, under national or international law, at the time when it was committed. Nor shall a heavier penalty be imposed than the one that was applicable at the time the penal offence was committed.

Article 12. No one shall be subjected to arbitrary interference with his privacy, family, home or correspondence, nor to attacks upon his honour and reputation. Everyone has the right to the protection of the law against such interference or attacks.

Article 13. (1) Everyone has the right to freedom of movement and residence within the borders of each State.

(2) Everyone has the right to leave any country, including his own, and to return to his country.

Article 14. (1) Everyone has the right to seek and to enjoy in other countries asylum from persecution.
Article 15. (1) Everyone has the right to a nationality.
(2) No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his nationality nor denied the right to change his nationality.

Article 16. (1) Men and women of full age, without any limitation due to race, nationality or religion, have the right to marry and to found a family. They are entitled to equal rights as to marriage, during marriage and at its dissolution.
(2) Marriage shall be entered into only with the free and full consent of the intending spouses.
(3) The family is the natural and fundamental group unit of society and is entitled to protection by society and the State.

Article 17. (1) Everyone has the right to own property alone as well as in association with others.
(2) No one shall be arbitrarily deprived of his property.

Article 18. Everyone has the right to freedom of thought, conscience and religion; this right includes freedom to change his religion or belief, and freedom, either alone or in community with others and in public or private, to manifest his religion or belief in teaching, practice, worship and observance.

Article 19. Everyone has the right to freedom of opinion and expression; this right includes freedom to hold opinions without interference and to seek, receive and impart information and ideas through any media and regardless of frontiers.

Article 20. (1) Everyone has the right to freedom of peaceful assembly and association.
(2) No one may be compelled to belong to an association.

Article 21. (1) Everyone has the right to take part in the government of his country, directly or through freely chosen representatives.
(2) Everyone has the right to equal access to public service in his country.
(3) The will of the people shall be the basis of the authority of government; this shall be expressed in periodic and genuine elections which shall be by universal and equal suffrage and shall be held by secret vote or by equivalent free voting procedures.

Article 22. Everyone, as a member of society, has the right to social security and is entitled to realization, through national effort and international cooperation and in accordance with the organization and resources of each State, of the economic, social and cultural rights indispensable for his dignity and the free development of his personality.

Article 23. (1) Everyone has the right to work, to free choice of employment, to just and favourable conditions of work and to protection against unemployment.
(2) Everyone, without any discrimination, has the right to equal pay for equal work.
(3) Everyone who works has the right to just and favourable remuneration ensuring for himself and his family an existence worthy of human dignity, and supplemented, if necessary, by other means of social protection.
(4) Everyone has the right to form and to join trade unions for the protection of his interests.
Article 24. Everyone has the right to rest and leisure, including reasonable limitation of working hours and periodic holidays with pay.

Article 25. (1) Everyone has the right to a standard of living adequate for the health and well-being of himself and of his family, including food, clothing, housing and medical care and necessary social services, and the right to security in the event of unemployment, sickness, disability, widowhood, old age or other lack of livelihood in circumstances beyond his control.

(2) Motherhood and childhood are entitled to special care and assistance. All children, whether born in or out of wedlock, shall enjoy the same social protection.

Article 26. (1) Everyone has the right to education. Education shall be free, at least in the elementary and fundamental stages. Elementary education shall be compulsory. Technical and professional education shall be made generally available and higher education shall be equally accessible to all on the basis of merit.

(2) Education shall be directed to the full development of the human personality and to the strengthening of respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms. It shall promote understanding, tolerance and friendship among all nations, racial or religious groups, and shall further the activities of the United Nations for the maintenance of peace.

(3) Parents have a prior right to choose the kind of education that shall be given to their children.

Article 27. (1) Everyone has the right freely to participate in the cultural life of the community, to enjoy the arts and to share in scientific advancement and its benefits.

(2) Everyone has the right to the protection of the moral and material interests resulting from any scientific, literary or artistic production of which he is the author.

Article 28. Everyone is entitled to a social and international order in which the rights and freedoms set forth in this Declaration can be fully realized.

Article 29. (1) Everyone has duties to the community in which alone the free and full development of his personality is possible.

(2) In the exercise of his rights and freedoms, everyone shall be subject only to such limitations as are determined by law solely for the purpose of securing due recognition and respect for the rights and freedoms of others and of meeting the just requirements of morality, public order and the general welfare in a democratic society.

(3) These rights and freedoms may in no case be exercised contrary to the purposes and principles of the United Nations.

Article 30. Nothing in this Declaration may be interpreted as implying for any State, group or person any right to engage in any activity or to perform any act aimed at the destruction of any of the rights and freedoms set forth herein.
