oust, vb. (15c) To put out of possession; to deprive of a right or inheritance.

ouster. (16c) 1. The wrongful dispossession or exclusion of someone (esp. a cotenant) from property (esp. real property); DISPOSSESSION. [Cases: Property C—10; Tenancy in Common C—14, 15.] 2. The removal of a public or corporate officer from office. Cf. EJECTMENT. [Cases: Officers and Public Employees C—74.]}

ouster le main (ow-star le mayn). [Law French "remove the hand"] Hist. 1. A delivery of land out of the monarch's hands because the monarch has no right or title to hold it. 2. A judgment or writ granting such a delivery. 3. A delivery of land from a guardian to a ward once the ward attains legal age. — Also written ouster-le-main.

outbuilding. (17c) A detached building (such as a shed or garage) within the grounds of a main building.

outcome-determinative test. (1959) Civil procedure. A test used to determine whether an issue is substantive for purposes of the Erie doctrine by examining the issue's potential effect on the outcome of the litigation. See ERIE DOCTRINE. [Cases: Federal Courts C—373.]

outcome responsibility. The view that those who cause harm are responsible for it even in the absence of fault. Cf. strict liability under LIABILITY.

"Outcome responsibility serves to foster a sense of identity because it does not stretch indefinitely into the future but enables each of us to claim for ourselves, or to share with a few others, outcomes of limited extent, whether successes or failures. Yet outcome responsibility for harm to another does not by itself create a duty to compensate. The form that our responsibility for an outcome should take remains an open question. An apology or telephone call will often be enough. But outcome responsibility is a basis on which the law can erect a duty to compensate if there is reason to do so. There will be some reason to do so if the conduct in question is socially undesirable and if there is also reason to treat the harm suffered as the infringement of a right." Tony Honore, Responsibility and Fault 77-78 (1999).
outer bar. English law. A group of junior barristers who sit outside the dividing bar in the court. • These barristers rank below the King’s Counsel or Queen’s Counsel. — Also termed utter bar. Cf. inner bar.

outer barrister. See barrister.

Outer House. Scots law. The first-instance jurisdiction of the Court of Session. See court of session (1).

outer space. (1842) 1. The known and unknown areas of the universe beyond airspace. • The boundary between airspace and outer space is not fixed or precise. Cf. airspace. 2. Int’l law. The space surrounding the planet that by United Nations treaty is not subject to claim of appropriation by any national sovereignty. • The treaty does not expressly define outer space. See outer space treaty.

Outer Space Treaty. Int’l law. The short title of the United Nations Treaty on Principles Governing the Activities of States in the Exploration and Use of Outer Space, Including the Moon and Other Celestial Bodies, 18 U.S.T. pt. 3, at 2410 (Jan. 27, 1967). • This treaty stipulates that, because space exploration is in the interest of all humanity, no nation may claim territory, establish military bases, or station weapons on any other planet or a moon. The treaty also declares that international law and the United Nations charter apply in space. See outer space.

outfangthief (out-fang-theef). *[fr. Old English ut “out” + fangen “taken” + theof “thief”] Hist. The right of a lord of a manor to pursue a thief outside the manor’s jurisdiction and to bring the thief back for trial and punishment; a lord’s right to punish all thefts committed within his territories, wherever the thief might be caught. — Also spelled utfangthief; utfangthieff; outfangthief. Cf. infangthief.

outlaw, n. (bef. 12c) 1. A person who has been deprived of the benefit and protection of the law; a person under a sentence of outlawry. 2. A lawless person or habitual criminal; esp., a fugitive from the law. 3. Int’l law. A person, organization, or nation under a ban or restriction because it is considered to be in violation of international law or custom.

outlaw, vb. (18c) 1. To deprive (someone) of the benefit and protection of the law; to declare an outlaw <outlaw the fugitive>. 2. To make illegal <outlaw fireworks within city limits>. 3. To remove from legal jurisdiction or enforcement; to deprive of legal force <outlaw a claim under the statute>.

outlawry. 1. Hist. The act or process of depriving someone of the benefit and protection of the law. 2. The state or condition of being outlawed; the status of an outlaw. 3. Disregard or disobedience of the law. See sacer; consecratio capitis.

outlaw strike. See wildcat strike under strike.

outline form. Patents. A style of writing patent claims that uses a numbered or lettered subparagraph for each element. Cf. colon–semicolon form; single-paragraph form; subparagraph form.

out-of-court, adj. (1950) Not done or made as part of a judicial proceeding <an out-of-court settlement>. See extrajudicial.

out-of-court settlement. See settlement (2).

out-of-home placement. Family law. The placing of a child in a living arrangement outside the child’s home (as in foster care or institutional care), usu. as the result of abuse or neglect; specif., in a child-abuse or child-neglect case, state action that removes a child from a parent’s or custodian’s home and places the child in foster care or with a relative, either temporarily or for an extended period. Cf. foster-care placement. [Cases: Infants C=::’226.]

out of order. (18c) 1. (Of a motion) not in order <the motion is out of order because it conflicts with the bylaws>. See in order. • A motion may be “out of order” because it is inherently inappropriate for the deliberative assembly’s consideration at any time (e.g., because it proposes an unlawful action). A motion that is not appropriate simply because it is brought before the meeting at the wrong time but that may be appropriate for consideration at another time is more precisely referred to as “not in order.”

“Movements that conflict with the corporate charter, constitution or bylaws of a society, or with procedural rules prescribed by national, state, or local laws, are out of order, and if any motion of this kind is adopted, it is null and void. Likewise, motions are out of order if they conflict with a motion that has been adopted by the society and has been neither rescinded, nor reconsidered and rejected after adoption. Such conflicting motions, if adopted, are null and void unless adopted by the vote required to rescind or amend the motion previously adopted.” Henry M. Robert, Robert’s Rules of Order Newly Revised § 39, at 332 (10th ed. 2000).

2. (Of a person) guilty of a breach of decorum or other misconduct during a meeting <the member is out of order>.

out-of-pocket expense. See expense.

out-of-pocket loss. See loss.

out-of-pocket rule. (1940) The principle that a defrauded buyer may recover from the seller as damages the difference between the amount paid for the property and the actual value received. Cf. benefit-of-the-bargain rule (2). [Cases: Fraud C=::’59(3).]

out of the money, adj. (Of a creditor) unpaid because a debtor has insufficient assets to pay the claim.

overage, n. (1809) 1. An excess or surplus, esp. of goods or merchandise. 2. A percentage of retail sales paid to a store's landlord in addition to fixed rent. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant ⊃ 200.3.]
overbreadth doctrine. (1970) Constitutional law. The doctrine holding that if a statute is so broadly written that it deters free expression, then it can be struck down on its face because of its chilling effect — even if it also prohibits acts that may legitimately be forbidden. • The Supreme Court has used this doctrine to invalidate a number of laws, including those that would disallow peaceful picketing or require loyalty oaths. Cf. VAGUENESS DOCTRINE. [Cases: Constitutional Law ⊃ 1519.] overdraft. (1843) 1. A withdrawal of money from a bank in excess of the balance on deposit. [Cases: Banks and Banking ⊃ 150.] 2. The amount of money so withdrawn. — Abbr. (in senses 1 & 2) OD; o/d. 3. A line of credit extended by a bank to a customer (esp. an established or institutional customer) who might overdraft on an account.

overreaching, n. (16c) 1. The act or an instance of taking unfair commercial advantage of another, esp. by fraudulent means. [Cases: Contracts ⊃ 1; Sales ⊃ 1(1).] 2. The act or an instance of defeating one's own purpose by going too far. — overreach, vb. overridden veto. See VETO.
override (oh-var-rId), vb. (14c) To prevail over; to nullify or set aside <Congress mustered enough votes to override the President's veto>.
override (oh-var-rId), n. (1931) 1. A commission paid to a manager on a sale made by a subordinate. 2. A commission paid to a real-estate broker who listed a property when, within a reasonable amount of time after the expiration of the listing, the owner sells that property directly to a buyer with whom the broker had negotiated during the term of the listing. [Cases: Brokers ⊃ 56(3).] 3. Royalty (2). overriding royalty. See Royalty (2). overrule, vb. (16c) 1. To rule against; to reject <the judge overruled all of the defendant's objections>; 2. (Of a court) to overturn or set aside (a precedent) by expressly deciding that it should no longer be controlling law <in Brown v. Board of Education, the Supreme Court overruled Plessy v. Ferguson>. Cf. vacate (1). [Cases: Courts ⊃ 100(1).]
"If a decision is not a recent one, and especially if it seems to be very poor, it should not be relied upon without ascertaining whether it may not have been expressly or impliedly overruled by some subsequent one; that is, whether the court may not have laid down a contrary principle in a later case." Frank Hall Childs, Where and How to Find the Law 94 (1922). "Overruling is an act of superior jurisdiction. A precedent overruled is definitely and formally deprived of all authority. It becomes null and void, like a repealed statute, and a new principle is authoritatively substituted for the old." John Saimond, Jurisprudence 189 (Glannon L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).
Overseas Private Investment Corporation. A federally chartered corporation that promotes private investment in developing countries by making or guaranteeing loans; supporting private funds that invest in foreign nations; insuring investments against political risks; and engaging in outreach activities. • It was established as an independent agency by the Foreign Affairs Reform and Restructuring Act of 1998. The oversubscription. A situation in which there are more subscribers to a new issue of securities than there are securities available for purchase. [Cases: Corporations 86.]

overt, adj. (14c) Open and observable; not concealed or secret <the conspirators' overt acts>.

overt act. (17c) Criminal law. 1. An act that indicates an intent to kill or seriously harm another person and thus gives that person a justification to use self-defense. [Cases: Assault and Battery 5, 51; Homicide 767. 2. An outward act, however innocent in itself, done in furtherance of a conspiracy, treason, or criminal attempt. • An overt act is usu. a required element of these crimes. [Cases: Conspiracy 27; Criminal Law 44. 3. Seeactus reus. — Also termed positive act.

over-the-counter, adj. 1. Not listed or traded on an organized securities exchange; traded between brokers and dealers who negotiate directly <over-the-counter stocks>. [Cases: Securities Regulation 35.13. 2. (Of drugs) sold legally without a doctor's prescription <over-the-counter cough medicine>. — Abbr. OTC. [Cases: Health 303, 305.]

over-the-counter market. The market for securities that are not traded on an organized exchange. • Over-the-counter (OTC) trading usu. occurs through telephone or computer negotiations between buyers and sellers. Many of the more actively traded OTC stocks are listed on NASDAQ. — Abbrev. OTC market. [Cases: Securities Regulation 35.13.]

overtime. 1. The hours worked by an employee in excess of a standard day or week. • Under the Fair Labor Standards Act, employers must pay extra wages (usu. 1.5 times the regular hourly rate) to certain employees (usu. nonsalaried ones) for each hour worked in excess of 40 hours per week. [Cases: Labor and Employment 2305. 2. The extra wages paid for excess hours worked.

overtry, vb. (1911) (Of a trial lawyer) to try a lawsuit by expending excessive time, effort, and other resources to explore minutiae, esp. to present more evidence than the fact-trier can assimilate, the result often being that the adversary gains arguing points by disputing the minutiae.

OWCP. abbr. Office of Workers' Compensation Programs.

owlet (oh-al-tee). (16c) 1. Equality as achieved by a compensatory sum of money given after an exchange of parcels of land having different values or after an unequal partition of real property. [Cases: Partition 84. 2. The sum of money so paid.

OWL. abbr. Operating while intoxicated. See driving under the influence. [Cases: Automobiles 332.]

owing, adj. (15c) That is yet to be paid; owed; due .

owing. Hist. The smuggling of wool or sheep out of England. • The term usu. refers to nighttime smuggling.

own, vb. (bef. 12c) To rightfully have or possess as property; to have legal title to.

owned-property exclusion. See exclusion (3).

owner. (bef. 12c) One who has the right to possess, use, and convey something; a person in whom one or more interests are vested. • An owner may have complete property in the thing or may have parted with some interests in it (as by granting an easement or making a lease). See ownership.

adjoining owner. (18c) A person who owns land abutting another's; abutter. [Cases: Adjoining Landowners 1] beneficial owner. (18c) 1. One recognized in equity as the owner of something because use and title belong to that person, even though legal title may belong to someone else; esp., one for whom property is held in trust. • Also termed equitable owner. [Cases: Trusts 139. 2. A corporate shareholder who has the power to buy or sell the shares, but who is not registered on the corporation's books as the owner. [Cases: Corporations 135. 3. Intellectual property. A person or entity who is entitled to enjoy the rights in a patent, trademark, or copyright even though legal title is vested in someone else. • The beneficial owner has standing to sue for infringement. A corporation is typically a beneficial owner if it has a contractual right to the assignment of the patent but the employee who owns the patent has failed to assign it. Similarly, a patent or copyright owner who has transferred title as collateral to secure a loan would be a beneficial owner entitled to sue for infringement.

general owner. (18c) One who has the primary or residual title to property; one who has the ultimate ownership of property. Cf. special owner.

legal owner. (17c) One recognized by law as the owner of something; esp., one who holds legal title to property for the benefit of another. See trustee (1). [Cases: Trusts 133.]

limited owner. (1836) A tenant for life; the owner of a life estate. See life estate under estate (1). [Cases: Life Estates 1] naked owner. Civil law. A person whose property is burdened by a usucaption. • The naked owner has the right to dispose of the property subject to the usucaption, but not to derive its fruits. See usucaption. [Cases: Estates in Property 1] owner of record. See record owner.

owner pro hac vice (proh hak-vee-chay). See bareboat charter under charter (8).

record owner. (1863) 1. A property owner in whose name the title appears in the public records. 2. stockholder of record.

sole and unconditional owner. (1871) Insurance. The owner who has full equitable title to, and exclusive interest in, the insured property. [Cases: Insurance special owner. (18c) One (such as a bailee) with a qualified interest in property. Cf. general owner.

owners' association. (1968) 1. The basic governing entity for a condominium or planned unit developments. It is usu. an unincorporated association or a nonprofit corporation. [Cases: Associations ($-1); Condominium ($-8).] — Also termed homeowners' association. 2. See homeowners' association under association.

owners' equity. (1935) The aggregate of the owners' financial interests in the assets of a business entity; the capital contributed by the owners plus any retained earnings. Owners' equity is calculated as the difference in value between a business entity's assets and its liabilities. — Also termed owner's equity; book value; net book value; (in a corporation) shareholders' equity; stockholders' equity. [Cases: Taxation $-2545.]

"Owner's equity is the residual claim of the owners of the business on its assets after recognition of the liabilities of the business. Owner's equity represents the amounts contributed by the owners to the business, plus the accumulated income of the business since its formation, less any amounts that have been distributed to the owners." Charles H. Meyer, Accounting and Finance for Lawyers in a Nutshell 4 (1995).

ownership. (16c) The bundle of rights allowing one to use, manage, and enjoy property, including the right to convey it to others. Ownership implies the right to possess a thing, regardless of any actual or constructive control. Ownership rights are general, permanent, and heritable. Cf. possession; title (1). [Cases: Property $-7, 11.]

"Ownership does not always mean absolute dominion. The more an owner, for his advantage, opens up his property for use by the public in general, the more do his rights become circumscribed by the statutory and constitutional powers of those who use it." Marsh v. Alabama, 325 U.S. 501, 506, 66 S.Ct. 276, 278 (1946) (Black, J.).

"Possession is the de facto exercise of a claim; ownership is the de jure recognition of one. A thing is owned by me when my claim to it is maintained by the will of the state as expressed in the law; it is possessed by me, when my claim to it is maintained by my own self-assertive will. Ownership is the guarantee of the law; possession is the guarantee of the facts. It is well to have both forms, if possible, and indeed they normally co-exist." John Salmond, jurisprudence 311 (Glaville C. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

bare ownership. See trust ownership.

beneficial ownership. (18c) 1. A beneficiary's interest in trust property. — Also termed equitable ownership. [Cases: Trusts $-139.] 2. A corporate shareholder's power to buy or sell the shares, though the shareholder is not registered on the corporation's books as the owner.

bonitary ownership (bahn-oh-tair-ee). Roman law. A type of equitable ownership recognized by the praetor when the property was conveyed by an informal transfer, or by a formal transfer by one not the true owner. — Also termed bonitarian ownership; in bonis habere.

complete ownership. Hist. Louisiana law. See perfect ownership.

contingent ownership. (1886) Ownership in which title is imperfect but is capable of becoming perfect on the fulfillment of some condition; conditional ownership.

corporeal ownership. (1894) The actual ownership of land or chattels.

eQUITABLE ownership. See beneficial ownership (1).

full ownership. Hist. Louisiana law. See perfect ownership.

imperfect ownership. Louisiana law. Ownership of property subject to a usufruct interest held by another. See La. Civ. Code art. 478. — Also termed naked ownership.

incorporeal ownership. (1931) The ownership of rights in land or chattels.

joint ownership. (18c) Undivided ownership shared by two or more persons. Typically, an owner's interest, at death, passes to the surviving owner or owners by virtue of the right of survivorship. [Cases: Joint Tenancy $-1.]

naked ownership. Louisiana law. See imperfect ownership.

ownership in common. (1838) Ownership shared by two or more persons whose interests are divisible. Typically their interests, at death, pass to the dead owner's heirs or successors. [Cases: Tenancy in Common $-1.]

perfect ownership. Hist. Louisiana law. The complete bundle of rights to use, enjoy, and dispose of property without limitation. — Also termed full ownership; complete ownership. [Cases: Property $-7, 11.]

qualified ownership. (18c) Ownership that is shared, restricted to a particular use, or limited in the extent of its enjoyment.

trust ownership. (1893) A trustee's interest in trust property. — Also termed bare ownership. [Cases: Trusts $-133.]

vested ownership. (1867) Ownership in which title is perfect; absolute ownership.

ownership-in-place theory. Oil & gas. A characterization of oil- and gas rights used in a majority of jurisdictions, holding that the owner has the right to present possession of the oil and gas in place as well as the right to use the land surface to search, develop, and produce from the property, but that the interest in the minerals terminates if the oil and gas flows out from under the owner's land. This theory is used in Texas, New Mexico, Kansas, Mississippi, and other major producing states. The rights of a severed-mineral-interest owner to oil and gas in these states are often described as an estate in fee simple absolute, but ownership of specific oil and-gas molecules is subject to the rule of capture. See also NONOWNERSHIP THEORY. [Cases: Mines and Minerals 47, 55, 62.1, 73.1(6).]

owner's policy. Real estate. A title-insurance policy covering the owner's title as well as the mortgagee's interest. Cf. MORTGAGEE POLICY. [Cases: Insurance 2610; Mortgages 201.]

oxfild (oks-fild). Hist. A restitution made by a county or hundred for a wrong done by someone within that region.

oxgang (oks-gang). Hist. An amount of land equal to what an ox plows in one year, usu. 12 to 15 acres. An oxgang, equaling one-eighth of a carucate, was used to assess land for tax purposes. — Also termed oxgate; bovata terrae. Cf. CARUCATE.

oyer (oy-ar or oh-yar). [fr. Old French oir "to hear"] (15c) Hist. 1. A criminal trial held under a commission of oyer and terminer. See COMMISSION OF OYER AND TERMINER. 2. The reading in open court of a document (esp. a deed) that is demanded by one party and read by the other. 3. Common-law pleading. A prayer to the court by a party opposing a profert, asking to have the instrument on which the opponent relies read aloud. Oyer can be demanded only when a profert has been properly made, but it is disallowed for a private writing under seal. [Cases: Bills and Notes 488; Pleading 306.]

A party having a right to demand oyer is yet not obliged, in all cases, to exercise that right; nor is he obliged, in all cases, after demanding it, to notice it in the pleading he afterwards files or delivers. Sometimes, however, he is obliged to do both, namely, where he has occasion to found his answer upon any matter contained in the deed of which profert is made, and not set forth by his adversary. In these cases the only admissible method of making such matter appear to the court is to demand oyer, and, from the copy given, set forth the whole deed verbatim in his pleading.” Benjamin J. Shipman, Handbook of Common·Law Pleading § 289, at 483 (Henry Winthrop Ballantine ed., 3d ed. 1923).

oyer, demand of. See DEMAND OF OYER.

oyez (oh-yes or oh-yez or oh-yay). [Law French] (15c) Hear ye. The utterance oyez, oyez, oyez is usu. used in court by the public crier to call the courtroom to order when a session begins or when a proclamation is about to be made.
pacer. abbr. PUBLIC ACCESS TO COURT ELECTRONIC RECORDS.

packaging, n. A gerrymandering technique in which a dominant political or racial group minimizes minority representation by concentrating the minority into as few districts as possible. Cf. CRACKING; STACKING (2). [Cases: Elections C-12(6).]

packing a jury. See JURY-PACKING.

Pac-Man defense (pak-man). An aggressive antitakeover defense by which the target company attempts to take over the bidder company by making a cash tender offer for the bidder company’s shares. • The name derives from a video game popular in the 1980s, the object of which was to gobble up the enemy. This defense is seldom used today. Cf. CROWN-JEWEL DEFENSE; SCORCHED-EARTH DEFENSE.

pact. (15c) An agreement between two or more parties; esp., an agreement (such as a treaty) between two or more nations or governmental entities.

“Popular understanding notwithstanding, there is no legal difference between various kinds of international instruments because of the name they are given. In other words, ‘treaties,’ ‘pacts,’ ‘protocols,’ ‘conventions,’ ‘covenants,’ and ‘declarations’ are all terms to convey international agreements. Some of these terms may connote more or less solemnity or formality, but it does not matter for purposes of characterizing an accord as an international agreement, binding under international law.” David J. Bederman, International Law Frameworks 25 (2001).

pacta sunt servanda (pak-to sant sar-van-da). [Latin “agreements must be kept”] The rule that agreements and stipulations, esp. those contained in treaties, must be observed <the Quebec courts have been faithful to the pacta sunt servanda principle>. [Cases: Contracts C-1.]
money to debts of any kind. The pactum could also be used to give security; it differs from fidejussio mainly in its informality. — Also termed pactum constitutae pecuniae. See constitutum. Cf. fidejussio.

pactum de non petendo (pak-tam de non pa-ten-doh). [Latin "agreement not to sue"] An agreement in which a creditor promises not to enforce the debt.

pactum de quota litis (pak-tam dee kwoh-ta li-tis). [Latin "agreement about a portion of the amount in issue"] An agreement in which a creditor promises to pay a portion of a difficult-to-collect debt to a person attempting to collect it; an agreement to share the proceeds of a litigation.

pactum de retrovendendo (pak-tam de re-troh-ven-den-doh). [Latin] An agreement concerning the selling back of an object. • This agreement gave the seller the right to repurchase the item sold within a certain period and at a fixed price.

pactum displícientiae (pak-tam dis pli sen-she-ee). Roman law. A sale on approval. • The buyer had the property on trial and could reject it.

pactum donationis (pak-tam doh-nay-she-oh-nis). [Latin] An agreement to make a gift. • Justinian made such agreements enforceable. If informal, the agreement would be valid up to a fix sum (500 solidi).

pactum legis commissoriae (pak-tam lee-ji kom-i-sor-ee-ee). [Latin] An agreement under which the seller received the benefit of the lex commissoria. See lex commissoria.

pactum legis commissoriae in pignoribus (pak-tam lee-ji kom-i-sor-ee-ee in pig-nor-a-bas). [Law Latin] An agreement giving the pledgee the benefit of a forfeiture clause. See lex commissoria.

"The pactum legis commissoriae in pignoribus was . . . a Roman law pactum, sometimes added to a redeemable right, whereby it was provided, that, if the subject were not redeemed against a determinate day, the right of reversion should be irritated, and the subject should become the irredeemable property of him to whom it was impledged. Such stipulations were held in the Roman law to be contra bonos mores; but, by the law of Scotland, irritant clauses in contracts, obligations, infeftments, and the like, are effective." William Bell, Bell's Dictionary and Digest of the Law of Scotland 1825 (2000).

pactum liberatorium (pak-tam lib-ar-a-tor-ee-am). [Law Latin "a liberating agreement"] An agreement liberating parties from honoring a real right. • This type of agreement appears to have been long defunct.

pactum, vb. (1831) Slang. (Of a lawyer, paralegal, etc.) to overstate the number of (billable hours worked). See billable hour. — padding, n.

padded-payroll rule. See fictitious-payee rule.

paid-in capital. See capital.

paid-in fund. See fund (1).

paid-in surplus. See surplus.

paid-up insurance. See insurance.

paid-up lease. Oil & gas. A mineral lease that does not provide for delay-rental payments and does not subject the lessor to any covenant to drill. • In effect, the lessor makes all delay-rental payments, and perhaps a bonus, when the lease is signed. A paid-up lease may be used to lease a small area or a fractional interest, or for a short primary term or for small delay rentals. The lease is effective through the primary term. [Cases: Mines and Minerals § 78.1(2), 78.1(3),] pair. Parliamentary law. Two voters, usu. legislators, on opposite sides of an issue who agree that they will abstain if either cannot vote on the issue. • A pair is usu. announced and recorded.

"In a legislative body it is a rule that no member can vote who is not present when the question is put, but 'pairing,' which is a type of absentee voting by which a member agrees with a member who would have voted opposite to the first member not to vote, has long been used in Congress and some of the states and has been recognized by the courts. Each house of the legislature, under the authority to make rules for its own governance, has power to recognize what are called 'pairs.'" National Conference of State Legislatures, Mason's Manual of Legislative Procedure § 538, at 385 (2000).

Palace Court. Hist. A court having jurisdiction over all personal actions arising within 12 miles of Whitehall. • This court was created by James I in response to complaints about the inconvenience of using the itinerant Court of the Marshalsea; its jurisdiction was similar to that of the Marshalsea, but the court remained in Whitehall. It was abolished along with the Court of the Marshalsea in 1849. • Formerly also termed curia palatii. See court of the marshalsea.

"The court of the marshalsea, and the palace court at Westminster, though two distinct courts, are frequently confounded together. The former was originally held before the steward and marshal of the king’s house, and was instituted to administer justice between the king’s domestic servants, that they might not be drawn into other courts, and thereby the king lose their service. . . .
But this court being ambulatory, and obliged to follow the king in all his progresses, so that by the removal of the household, actions were frequently discontinued, and doubts having arisen as to the extent of its jurisdiction... [the king] erected a new court of record, called the curia palatii, or palace-court, to be held before the steward of the household and knight marshal, and the steward of the court, or his deputy; with jurisdiction to hold plea of all manner of personal actions whatsoever, which shall arise between any parties within twelve miles of its majesty's palace at Whitehall." 3 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 76 (1768).

Palimony (pal-a-moh-nee). [Portmanteau word from pal + alimony] (1977) 1. A court's award of post-relationship support or compensation for services, money, and goods contributed during a long-term nonmarital relationship, esp. where a common-law marriage cannot be established. ● Though not recognized under most state statutes, caselaw in some jurisdictions authorizes palimony claims. The term originated in the press coverage of Marvin v. Marvin, 557 F.2d 106 (Cal. 1976). Cf. ALIMONY. [Cases: Marriage 54.] 2. Loosely, child support. ● This sense is esp. common in the United Kingdom.

Palio cooperire (pal-i-oh koh-op-ree). [Latin "to cover with a pallium"] Hist. A marriage of persons who have already had a child together. ● The pallium was a veil or cover over the bride, which was extended to cover the bastard child. Its removal at the wedding was deemed to legitimate the child.

Palmers' Act. An English statute, enacted in 1856, giving palimony (pal-oh-moh-nee). [Portmanteau word from pal + alimony]. ● The 50 books constituting Justinian's Digest (one of the four works making up the Corpus Juris Civilis), first published in A.D. 533. ● The substance of 2,000 treatises was distilled into this abridgment. One estimate is that 3 million lines were reduced to 150,000. This prodigious amount of work was carried out in three short years (A.D. 530-533) by a commission of 17 jurists headed by Tribonian. — Also termed (in sense 2) Digest. — Also spelled (in reference to German law) pandekt. Pl. pandects, pandectae. See CORPUS JURIS CIVILIS.

Pander, n. (15c) One who engages in pandering. — Also termed panderer. See PIMP.

Pandering (pan-dar-ing), n. (17c) 1. The act or offense of recruiting a prostitute, finding a place of business for a prostitute, or soliciting customers for a prostitute. — Also termed promoting prostitution. [Cases: Prostitution 17.] 2. The act or offense of selling or distributing textual or visual material (such as magazines or videotapes) openly advertised to appeal to the recipient's sexual interest. ● Although the concept of pandering was invoked by the U.S. Supreme Court in Ginzburg v. United States, 383 U.S. 463, 86 S.Ct. 942 (1966), it has seldom been discussed by the Court since then. — pander, vb.

Panduit test. Patents. A four-factor test for measuring profits lost because of patent infringement. ● The patentee must prove (1) that there was a demand for the product; (2) that the patentee had the manufacturing and marketing capacity to meet that demand; (3) that there were no acceptable noninfringing alternatives on the market; and (4) how much was lost in profits. Panduit Corp. v. Stahlin Bros. Fibre Works, Inc., 575 F.2d 1152 (6th Cir. 1978). [Cases: Patents 318.]

P & L. abbr. Profit and loss. See INCOME STATEMENT.

Panel. (14c) 1. A list of persons summoned as potential jurors; VENIRE. 2. A group of persons selected to serve on a jury; JURY. [Cases: Jury 76.] 3. A set of judges selected from a complete court to decide a specific case; esp., a group of three judges designated to sit for an appellate court. [Cases: Courts 70.] 4. Scots law. A person indicted in a crime; the accused. — Also spelled (in sense 4) panel.

Panel attorney. See ATTORNEY.

Panhandling. The act or practice of approaching or stopping strangers and begging for money or food. [Cases: Vagrancy 1.] — panhandler, n. — panhandle, vb. pannage (pan-i). Hist. 1. The right to feed animals, esp. swine, on the windfallen nuts, etc. in a forest. 2. The payment made to a forest's owner in exchange for the right.

bearer paper. An instrument payable to the person who holds it rather than to the order of a specific person.

chattel paper (chat-3l). See CHATTEL PAPER.

commercial paper. 1. An instrument, other than cash, for the payment of money. • Commercial paper — typically existing in the form of a draft (such as a check) or a note (such as a certificate of deposit) — is governed by Article 3 of the UCC. But even though the UCC uses the term commercial paper when referring to negotiable instruments of a particular kind (drafts, checks, certificates of deposit, and notes as defined by Article 3), the term long predates the UCC as a business and legal term in common use. Before the UCC, it was generally viewed as synonymous with negotiable paper or bills and notes. It was sometimes applied even to nonnegotiable instruments. • Also termed mercantile paper; company's paper. See NEGOTIABLE INSTRUMENT. [Cases: Bills and Notes C::: 210.]

"Commercial paper" is rather a popular than a technical expression, often used, however, both in statutes and in decisions of courts, to designate those simple forms of contract long recognized in the world's commerce and governed by the law merchant. 1 Joseph F. Randolph, A Treatise on the Law of Commercial Paper § 1, at 1 (2d ed. 1899).

"Defined most broadly, commercial paper refers to any writing embodying rights that are customarily conveyed by transferring the writing. A large subset of commercial paper consists of such writings that are negotiable, which means that the law enables a transferee to acquire the embodied rights free of claims and defenses against the transferor." Richard E. Speidel, Negotiable Instruments and Check Collection in a Nutshell 1 (4th ed. 1993).

2. Such instruments collectively. • Also termed bills and notes. 3. Loosely, a short-term unsecured promissory note, usu. issued and sold by one company to meet another company's immediate cash needs.

commodity paper. An instrument representing a loan secured by a bill of lading or warehouse receipt.

order paper. An instrument payable to a specific payee or to any person that the payee designates. • Also termed order document; order instrument. [Cases: Bills and Notes C::: 208.]

paraph (par-af). 1. Hist. A flourish that follows a signature, intended as a safeguard against forgery. 2. Civil law. A signature itself; esp., a notary public's signature on a document, followed by the date, names of the parties, and seal.

paraph (par-af), vb. Civil law. To add a paraph to < paraphred the contract >.

parapherna (par-ə-far-na), n. [Greek "things brought on the side"] 1. Roman law. Property of a wife not forming part of her dowry. See dos (1). 2. Scots law. A married woman's personal property, such as clothing, jewelry, and intimate possessions, which a husband did not acquire by virtue of marriage. See jus marit.

paraphernalia (par-ə-far-nə-lə). (17c) Hist. Property that a wife was allowed to keep, in addition to her dowry, on the death of her husband.

"If in one particular instance the wife may acquire a property in some of her husband's goods which shall remain to her after his death and not go to the executors. These are called her paraphernalia, which is a term borrowed from the civil law... signifying something over and above her dower." 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 435-36 (1765).

paratum habeo (pa-ray-təm hay-bee-oh). [Law Latin "I have him in readiness"] Hist. A sheriff's return of a capias ad respondendum, signifying that the defendant is ready to be brought to court.

paratus est verificare (pa-ray-tas est ver-a-fl-kair-ee). [Law Latin] He is ready to verify. • This phrase formerly came to be associated with a somewhat personal concession by a head of state to the perpetrator of an offense, in mitigation or remission of the full punishment that he has merited." Leslie Sebba, "Amnesty and Pardon," in 1 Encyclopedia of Crime and Justice 59, 59 (Sanford H. Kadish ed., 1983).

absolute pardon. A pardon that releases the wrongdoer from punishment and restores the offender's civil rights without qualification. — Also termed full pardon; unconditional pardon. [Cases: Pardon and Parole ☺–23.]

conditional pardon. A pardon that does not become effective until the wrongdoer satisfies a prerequisite or that will be revoked upon the occurrence of some specified act. [Cases: Pardon and Parole ☺–23.]

faultless pardon. A pardon granted because the act for which the person was convicted was not a crime. [Cases: Pardon and Parole ☺–23.]

general pardon. See amnesty.

partial pardon. A pardon that exonerates the offender from some but not all of the punishment or legal consequences of a crime. [Cases: Pardon and Parole ☺–23.]

unconditional pardon. See absolute pardon.

pardon attorney. A Justice Department lawyer who considers applications for federal pardons and forwards those of promising candidates for review by the President.

pares binus (par-enz bə-nəs). [Latin "twice-married parent"] Roman law. A parent who has remarried.

pares patriae (par-enz pə-tree-ee or pa-tree-ə). [Latin "parent of his or her country"] (18c) 1. Roman law. The emperor as the embodiment of the state. 2. The state regarded as a sovereign; the state in its capacity as provider of protection to those unable to care for themselves <the attorney general acted as pares patriae in the administrative hearing>. [Cases: States ☺–1.] 3. A doctrine by which a government has standing to prosecute a lawsuit on behalf of a citizen, esp. on behalf of someone who is under a legal disability to prosecute the suit <pares patriae allowed the state to institute proceedings>. • The state ordinarily has no standing to sue on behalf of its citizens, unless a separate, sovereign interest will be served by the suit. — Also termed doctrine of pares patriae. [Cases: Inians ☺–2; States ☺–190.]

parlament (par-ləment). [Latin] Equal guilt; equal wrong.
parent. (15c) 1. The lawful father or mother of someone. • In ordinary usage, the term denotes more than responsibility for conception and birth. The term commonly includes (1) either the natural father or the natural mother of a child, (2) either the adoptive father or the adoptive mother of a child, (3) a child’s putative blood parent who has expressly acknowledged paternity, and (4) an individual or agency whose status as guardian has been established by judicial decree. In law, parental status based on any criterion may be terminated by judicial decree. In other words, a person ceases to be a legal parent if that person’s status as a parent has been terminated in a legal proceeding. • Also termed legal parent. [Cases: Parent and Child ⊃ 1.] absent parent. See noncustodial parent.

adoptive parent. (18c) A parent by virtue of legal adoption. See adoption (1). [Cases: Adoption ⊃ 4, 20.]

biological parent. The woman who provides the egg or the man who provides the sperm to form the zygote that grows into an embryo. • Also termed genetic parent. [Cases: Children Out-of-Wedlock ⊃ 1.]

birth parent. Either the biological father or the mother who gives birth to a child. • Sometimes written birthparent.

custodial parent. See equitable parent.

custodial parent. The parent awarded physical custody of a child in a divorce. See physical custody (2). Cf. noncustodial parent. [Cases: Child Custody ⊃ 209.]

de facto parent. An adult who (1) is not the child’s legal parent, (2) has, with consent of the child’s legal parent, resided with the child for a significant period, and (3) has routinely performed a share of the caretaking functions at least as great as that of the parent who has been the child’s primary caregiver without any expectation of compensation for this care. • Because the status of de facto parent is subordinate to that of legal parent, a person who expects to be afforded the status of parent should, if possible, adopt the child. The primary function of this conceptual status is to provide courts with a means for maintaining a relationship between a child and an adult who has functioned as a parent when that adult is prohibited from legally adopting the child. The status is usu. limited to a person who has assumed the role of parent with the knowledge and consent, either express or implied, of the legal parent. But it may also arise when there is a total failure or inability of the legal parent to perform parental duties. Cf. equitable parent; psychological parent.

Disneyland parent. A noncustodial parent who indulges his or her child with gifts and good times during visitation and leaves most or all disciplinary responsibilities to the other parent; esp., a noncustodial parent who provides luxuries that the custodial parent cannot afford but performs no disciplinparent by estoppel. A man who, though not a child's legal father, is estopped from denying liability for child support. • This estoppel usu. arises when the man (1) has lived with the child for at least two years, (2) has believed in good faith that he was the child's father, (3) has accepted parental responsibilities, and (4) has entered into a coparenting agreement with the child's mother — and when the court finds that recognition of the status of parent is in the child's best interests. See ESTOPPEL. [Cases: Children Out-of-Wedlock C-14.]

psychological parent. A person who, on a continuing and regular basis, provides for a child's emotional and physical needs. • The psychological parent may be the biological parent, a foster parent, a guardian, a common-law parent, or some other person unrelated to the child.

residential parent. A parent who has primary residential responsibility for a child who is not a dual-residential parent. See RESIDENTIAL RESPONSIBILITY. Cf. dual-residential parent. [Cases: Child Custody C-147, 209.]

stepparent. (1840) The spouse of one's mother or father by a later marriage. [Cases: Child Custody C-272; Parent and Child C-14.]

surrogate parent. (1972) 1. A person who carries out the role of a parent by appointment or the voluntary assumption of parental responsibilities. [Cases: Parent and Child C-15.] 2. See surrogate mother (2) under MOTHER.

2. See parent corporation under CORPORATION.

parental access. See VISITATION (2).

parental-autonomy doctrine. The principle that a parent has a fundamental right to raise his or her child and to make all decisions regarding that child free from governmental intervention, unless (1) the child's health and welfare are jeopardized by the parent's decisions, or (2) public health, welfare, safety, and order are threatened by the parent's decisions. • The Supreme Court first recognized the doctrine of parental autonomy over the family in Meyer v. Nebraska, 262 U.S. 390, 43 S.Ct. 625 (1923). — Also termed family-autonomy doctrine. Cf. PARENTAL-PRIVILEGE DOCTRINE. [Cases: Infants C-154; Parent and Child C-1.]

parental-consent statute. A statute that requires a minor to obtain his or her parent's consent before receiving elective medical treatment, such as an abortion. • Without parental consent, a physician or other medical professional commits a battery upon a child when giving nonemergency medical treatment. To pass constitutional muster, a parental-consent statute must include a judicial-bypass provision. Planned Parenthood of Southeastern Pa. v. Casey, 505 U.S. 833, 112 S. Ct. 2791 (1992). — Also termed parental-consent treatment statute. See JUDICIAL-BYPASS PROVISION. Cf. PARENTAL-NOTIFICATION STATUTE; MATURE-MINOR DOCTRINE. [Cases: Abortion and Birth Control C-116.]

parental consortium. See CONSORTIUM.

parental-discipline privilege. A parent's right to use reasonable force or to impose reasonable punishment on a child in a way that is necessary to control, train, and educate. • Several factors are used to determine the reasonableness of the action, including whether the actor is the parent; the child's age, sex, and physical and mental state; the severity and foreseeable consequences of the punishment; and the nature of the misconduct. Cf. PARENTAL-PRIVILEGE DOCTRINE. [Cases: Parent and Child C-2.5.]

parent-alienation syndrome. A situation in which one parent has manipulated a child to fear or hate the other parent; a condition resulting from a parent's actions that are designed to poison a child's relationship with the other parent. • Some mental-health specialists deny that this phenomenon amounts to a "psychological syndrome." — Also termed parent-alienation syndrome. [Cases: Child Custody C-57, 569.]

parental-immunity doctrine. See parental immunity (1) under IMMUNITY (2).

parental kidnapping. See KIDNAPPING.

Parental Kidnapping Prevention Act. A federal law, enacted in 1980, providing a penalty for child-kidnapping by a noncustodial parent and requiring states to recognize and enforce a child-custody order rendered by a court of another state. 28 USCA § 1738A; 42 USCA §§ 654, 655, 663. — Abbr. PKPA. Cf. UNIFORM CHILD CUSTODY JURISDICTION ACT; FEDERAL KIDNAPPING ACT. [Cases: Child Custody C-723, 738.]

parental-liability statute. (1963) A law obliging parents to pay damages for torts (esp. intentional ones) committed by their minor children. • All states have these laws, but most limit the parents' monetary liability to about $3,000 per tort. Parents can also be held criminally liable for the acts of their children. One group of laws is aimed at contributing to the delinquency and endangering the welfare of a minor. More recently, the laws have been directed at improper supervision and failure to supervise. The first law aimed at punishing parents for the acts of their children was enacted in... parental-notification statute. A law that requires a physician to notify a minor's parent of her intention to have an abortion. Cf. PARENTAL-CONSENT STATUTE. [Cases: Abortion and Birth Control ⊂ 117.]

parental-preference doctrine. (1974) The principle that custody of a minor child should ordinarily be granted to a fit parent rather than another person. ° The preference can be rebutted by proof that the child's best interests are to the contrary. — Also termed parental-preference doctrine; parental-superior-rights doctrine; parental-presumption rule. Cf. BEST INTERESTS OF THE CHILD. [Cases: Child Custody ⊂ 42, 460.]

parental-privilege doctrine. The parent's right to discipline his or her child reasonably, to use reasonable child-rearing practices free of governmental interference, and to exercise decision-making authority over the child. Cf. PARENTAL-AUTONOMY DOCTRINE; PARENTAL-DISCIPLINE PRIVILEGE. [Cases: Parent and Child ⊂ 1, 2.5.]

parental-responsibility statute. (1956) 1. A law imposing criminal sanctions (such as fines) on parents whose minor children commit crimes as a result of the parents' failure to exercise sufficient control over them. — Also termed control-your-kid law; parental-liability statute. [Cases: Parent and Child ⊂ 13.5(2, 4).]

parental rights. (18c) A parent's rights to make all decisions concerning his or her child, including the right to determine the child's care and custody, the right to educate and discipline the child, and the right to control the child's earnings and property. See TERMINATION OF PARENTAL RIGHTS. [Cases: Parent and Child ⊂ 1-8.]

parentelic method (par-on-tee-like or -tel-ik). (1935) A scheme of computation used to determine the paternal or maternal collaterals entitled to inherit when a childless intestate decedent is not survived by parents or their issue. ° Under this method, the estate passes to grandparents and their issue; if there are none, to great-grandparents and their issue; and so on down each line until an heir is found. The Uniform Probate Code uses a limited parentelic system; it looks first to the grandparents and their issue, but if no heir is found in that line, the search ends and the estate escheats to the state. See DEGREE (5). Cf. GRADUAL METHOD.

parenticide (po-ren-ta-sid). (17c) 1. The act of murdering one's parent. 2. A person who murders his or her parent. — parenticidal, adj.

parenting. n. 1. Performance of the functions of a parent. 2. One or more methods of child-rearing.

parallel parenting. A situation in which divorced parents, although disagreeing on some aspects of child-rearing, allow each other to handle discipline and daily regimens in their own individual ways when with the child.

shared parenting. Cooperation between divorced parents in child-rearing. [Cases: Child Custody ⊂ 120-155.]

parenting function. A task that serves the direct or day-to-day needs of a child or of a child's family. ° Parenting functions include providing necessities, making decisions about the child's welfare, and maintaining the family residence. Cf. CARENTAKING FUNCTIONS.

parenting plan. A plan that allocates custodial responsibility and decision-making authority for what serves the child's best interests and that provides a mechanism for resolving any later disputes between parents. — Also termed parenting agreement. See CUSTODY (2); CUSTODIAL RESPONSIBILITY; DECISION-MAKING RESPONSIBILITY. [Cases: Child Custody ⊂ 209.]

parenting time. See VISITATION.

The lord was, in early times, the legislator and judge over all his feudatories: and therefore the vassals of the inferior lords were bound by their fealty to attend their domestic courts baron, (which were instituted in every manor or barony, for doing speedy and effectual justice to all the tenants) in order as well to answer such complaints as might be alleged against themselves, as to form a jury or homage for the trial of their fellow-tenants; and upon this account, in all the feudal institutions both here and on the continent, they are distinguished by the appellation

Pareto optimality (pa-ray-toh or pa-ret-oh), n. An economic situation in which no person can be made better off without making someone else worse off. • The term derives from the work of Vilfredo Pareto (1848–1923), an Italian economist and sociologist. — Pareto-optimal, adj.

Pareto superiority, n. An economic situation in which an exchange can be made that benefits someone and injures no one. • When such an exchange can no longer be made, the situation becomes one of Pareto optimality. — Pareto-superior, adj.

Paris Convention. See Paris Convention for the Protection of Industrial Property.

Paris Convention for the Protection of Industrial Property. A treaty designed to unify and streamline patent prosecutions and trademark applications among the signatories. • The Convention eased the harsh effects of the first-to-file priority rule by allowing an applicant in any member country one year in which to apply in other member countries while maintaining the application’s original priority date. It also banned patent-protection discrimination against residents of other member nations. Now administered by the World Intellectual Property Organization, an agency of the United Nations, the Convention was first signed in 1883, revised most recently in 1967, and amended in 1970. — Also termed Paris Industrial Property Convention. — Often shortened to Paris Convention.

“The 1883 Paris Convention for the Protection of Industrial Property is the cornerstone of the international patent granting system. It represents the first efforts of several countries to adopt a common approach to industrial property. The fundamental principles of ‘right of priority’ and ‘national treatment’ set out by the Convention have been of capital importance to the internationalization of intellectual property rights over the last century.” Marta Pertegás Sender, Cross-Border Enforcement of Patent Rights 4 (2002).

parish. (14c) 1. In Louisiana, a governmental subdivision analogous to a county in other U.S. states. [Cases: Counties C=1.] 2. Eccles. law. A division of a town or district, subject to the ministry of one pastor.

Parker doctrine. See state-action doctrine.

parking. (1983) 1. The sale of securities subject to an agreement that the seller will buy them back at a later time for a similar price. • Parking is illegal if done to circumvent securities regulations or tax laws. It is often a method of evading the net-capital requirements of the National Association of Securities Dealers (NASDAQ), which requires a brokerage firm to discount the value of any stock it holds in its own account when it files its monthly report about its net-capital condition. To reach technical compliance with the NASD’s net-capital requirements, a brokerage firm “sells” stock from its own account to a customer at market price, thereby avoiding the discount for reporting purposes. Having filed its report, it can then “buy” the shares back from the customer, usu. at the same price at which it “sold” the stock, plus interest. [Cases: Securities Regulation 40.14.] 2. The placement of assets in a safe, short-term investment while other investment opportunities are being considered. — Also termed (in sense 1) stock parking.

parking-lot rule. The principle that workers’ compensation insurance covers the injuries suffered by an employee on the employer’s premises when the employee is arriving at or leaving work. — Also termed premises rule. [Cases: Workers’ Compensation 750.]

parliament. (12c) The supreme legislative body of some nations; esp. (cap.), in the United Kingdom, the national legislature consisting of the monarch, the House of Lords, and the House of Commons.
parliamentarian. (17c) Parliamentary law. A consultant trained in parliamentary law who advises the chair and others on matters of parliamentary law and procedure. • The parliamentarian, who is often a professional, only advises and never "rules" on procedural issues. See parliamentary law under PARLIAMENTARY (2); parliamentary procedure under PARLIAMENTARY (2).

"The parliamentarian is a consultant, commonly a professional, who advises the president and other officers, committees, and members on matters of parliamentary procedure. The parliamentarian's role during a meeting is purely an advisory and consultative one — since parliamentary law gives to the chair alone the power to rule on questions of order or to answer parliamentary inquiries. . . . After the parliamentarian has expressed an opinion on a point, the chair has the duty to make the final ruling and, in doing so, has the right to follow the advice of the parliamentarian or to disregard it." Henry M. Robert, Robert's Rules of Order Newly Revised § 47, at 449–50 (10th ed. 2002).

parliamentary, adj. (17c) 1. Of or relating to a parliament. 2. Parliamentary law. Of or relating to rules of order for the conduct of business in deliberative assemblies.

parody. (16c) Intellectual property. A transformative use of a well-known work for purposes of satirizing, ridiculing, critiquing, or commenting on the original work, as opposed to merely alluding to the original to draw attention to the later work. • In constitutional law, a parody is protected as free speech. In copyright law, a work must meet the definition of a parody and be a fair use of the copyrighted material, or else it may constitute infringement. See FAIR USE. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property C=53.2.]" "Trademark parodies, even when offensive, do convey a message. The message may be simply that business and product images need not always be taken too seriously; a trademark parody reminds us that we are free to laugh at the images and associations linked with the mark." L.L. Bean, Inc. v. Drake Publishers, Inc., 811 F.2d 26, 34 (1st Cir. 1987) (per Bownes, J.).

"We do not, of course, suggest that a parody may not harm the market at all, but when a parody, like a scathing theater review, kills demand for the original, it does not produce a harm cognizable under the Copyright Act. Because 'parody may quite legitimate aim at garrotting the original, destroying it commercially as well as artistically,' the role parol evidence. See evidence.

parol-evidence rule. (1893) Contracts. The common-law principle that a writing intended by the parties to be a final embodiment of their agreement cannot be modified by evidence of earlier or contemporaneous agreements that might add to, vary, or contradict the writing. • This rule usu. operates to prevent a party from introducing extrinsic evidence of negotiations that occurred before or while the agreement was being reduced to its final written form. See integration (2); merger (2). Cf. four-corners rule. [Cases: Evidence C=397.]

“The basic principle is often called the ‘parol evidence rule’, and according to this rule evidence is not admissible to contradict or qualify a complete written contract. The rule is usually stated in the form of a rule of evidence, but it is probably best regarded as a rule of substantive law. The question is not really whether evidence can be admitted which might vary the written document, but whether, if the evidence is admitted, it will have the legal effect of varying the document.” P. S. Atiyah, An Introduction to the Law of Contract 161-62 (3d ed. 1981).

“The parol evidence rule assumes that the formal writing reflects the parties’ minds at a point of maximum resolution and, hence, that duties and restrictions that do not appear in the written document, even though apparently accepted at an earlier stage, were not intended by the parties to survive. In addition, and quite apart from the survival of matters discarded in the course of negotiations, there is the obvious danger of outright fraud.” Marvin A. Chirelstein, Concepts and Case Analysis in the Law of Contracts 82-83 (1990).

parricide (par-a-sid), n. (16c) 1. The act of killing a close relative, esp. a parent. 2. One who kills such a relative. Cf. patricide. — parricidal, adj.

parricideum (par-a-sid-ee-um), n. [Latin] Roman law.

1. The murder of a near relative, esp. a parent. 2. Perhaps in ancient law, the murder of any free citizen.

• This ancient, broad sense of parricideum gave way in pre-imperial law to homicidium (homicide), which extended to the killing of a slave.

“Verbal consensual contracts are binding upon the contracting parties immediately upon their consents being interchanged, and neither of them can afterwards rescile from the transaction . . . But if it be agreed that their contract shall be reduced to writing, such agreement being pars contractus, the contract is not finally entered into, nor does it become binding, until the writing has been executed.” John Trayner, Trayner’s Latin Maxims 436 (4th ed. 1894).

  • A joint venturer, for example, is a quasi-partner.

secret partner. (18c) A partner whose connection with the firm is concealed from the public. — Also termed sleeping partner.

senior partner. (18c) A high-ranking partner, as in a law firm.

silent partner. (18c) A partner who shares in the profits but who has no active voice in management of the firm and whose existence is often not publicly disclosed. — Also termed dormant partner. [Cases: Partnership C:=>90.] "It is worth emphasizing that control does not necessarily mean active involvement. One of the most interesting figures in partnership law, in fact, is the 'silent' partner—typically a person who has invested in a business in return for a profit share, and who reserves the right to, and to some extent may in fact, participate in routine management decisions, may participate in no decisions at all, and may even be unaware of what is happening in the business for long periods of time. The fact of the person's financial interest in the partnership may be a secret from everyone except the other partners (indeed, such secrecy may be vital). Such a person is nonetheless a partner like any other for purposes, among other things, of personal liability for the debts of the partnership. The law simply does not distinguish between active and passive partners." William A. Klein & John C. Coffee Jr., Business Organization and Finance 64 (2002).

special partner. See limited partner.

surviving partner. (17c) The partner who, upon the partnership's dissolution because of another partner’s death, serves as a trustee to administer the firm's remaining affairs. [Cases: Partnership C:=>280.]

partnership. (16c) A voluntary association of two or more persons who jointly own and carry on a business for profit. • Under the Uniform Partnership Act, a partnership is presumed to exist if the persons agree to share proportionally the business's profits or losses. Cf. joint venture; strategic alliance. [Cases: Partnership C:=>1.]

collapsible partnership. (1962) Tax. A partnership formed by partners who intend to dissolve it before they realize any income. • Any partner's gain resulting from unrealized receivables or inventory that has increased substantially in value will be treated by the IRS as ordinary income rather than as capital gain. IRC (26 USCA) § 751. Cf. collapsible corporation under corporation. [Cases: Internal Revenue C:=>3931, 3935.]

family partnership. (1902) A business partnership in which the partners are related. IRC (26 USCA) § 704(e). • In this phrase, the term family includes a person's spouse, ancestors, lineal descendants, siblings, and any trusts established primarily for the benefit of those persons. See family-partnership rules.

general partnership. (18c) A partnership in which all partners participate fully in running the business and share equally in profits and losses (though the partners' monetary contributions may vary). [Cases: Partnership C:=>79, 86, 87.]

limited-liability partnership. (1910) A partnership in which a partner is not liable for a negligent act committed by another partner or by an employee not under the partner's supervision. • All states have enacted statutes that allow a business (typically a law firm or accounting firm) to register as this type of partnership. — Abbr. L.L.P. — Also termed special partnership; (in civil law) partnership in commendam. [Cases: Partnership C:=>371.] limited partnership. (18c) A partnership composed of one or more persons who control the business and are personally liable for the partnership's debts (called general partners), and one or more persons who contribute capital and share profits but who cannot manage the business and are liable only for the amount of their contribution (called limited partners). • The chief purpose of a limited partnership is to enable persons to invest their money in a business without taking an active part in managing the business, and without risking more than the sum originally contributed, while securing the cooperation of others who have ability and integrity but insufficient money. — Abbr. L.P. — Also termed special partnership; (in civil law) partnership in commendam. [Cases: Partnership C:=>349–376.]

"Unknown at common law, the limited partnership was derived from the commandite or societe en commandite of continental Europe to permit a person to invest and share in the profits of a partnership business and yet limit one's liability to one's investment. It was first recognized in the United States by a New York statute of 1822. It is now recognized by statute in all American jurisdictions." Henry G. Henn & John R. Alexander, Laws of Corporations § 28, at 86 (36 ed. 1983).

"[T]he two primary characteristics of a limited partnership [are] liability of limited partners only for their agreed contributions, and a hierarchical structure with management in one or more general partners and very little power or authority in the limited partners. Thus, limited partners are typically — although not necessarily — passive contributors of capital... In this respect they resemble shareholders in a corporation, but, depending on the details of the organizational documents, they may have greater or lesser rights." 3 Alan R. Bromberg & Larry E. Ribstein, Bromberg and Ribstein on Partnerships § 12.01, at 12:5–12:6 (1999).

master limited partnership. See publicly traded partnership.

nontrading partnership. A partnership that does not buy and sell but instead is a partnership of employment or occupation. — Also termed noncommercial partnership. • This type of partnership offers services rather than goods.
particular partnership. A partnership in which the members unite to share the benefits of a single transaction or enterprise.

partnership at will. (1849) A partnership that any partner may dissolve at any time without thereby incurring liability. Cf. partnership for a term. [Cases: Partnership C=259.5.]

partnership by estoppel. (1872) A partnership implied by law when one or more persons represent themselves as partners to a third party who relies on that representation. • A person who is deemed a partner by estoppel becomes liable for any credit extended to the partnership by the third party. — Also termed implied partnership. [Cases: Partnership C=24.]

partnership for a term. A partnership that exists for a specified duration or until a specified event occurs. • Such a partnership can be prematurely dissolved by any partner, but that partner may be held liable for breach of the partnership agreement. Cf. partnership at will.

partnership in commendam. See limited partnership.

publicly traded partnership. A partnership whose interests are traded either over-the-counter or on a securities exchange. • These partnerships may be treated as corporations for income-tax purposes. IRC (26 USCA) § 7704(a). — Abbr. PTP. — Also termed master limited partnership.

special partnership. 1. See limited partnership. 2. A partnership formed only for a single venture.

subpartnership. An arrangement between a firm’s partner and a nonpartner to share the partner’s profits and losses in the firm’s business, but without forming a legal partnership between the partner and the nonpartner.

tiered partnership. An ownership arrangement consisting of one parent partnership that is a partner in one or more subsidiary partnerships.

trading partnership. A partnership whose usual business involves buying and selling. — Also termed commercial partnership.

umbrella limited partnership. A limited partnership used by a real-estate investment trust to acquire investment properties in exchange for shares in the partnership. See umbrella-partnership real-estate investment trust under real-estate investment trust.

universal partnership. A partnership formed by persons who agree to contribute all their individually owned property — and to devote all their skill, labor, and services — to the partnership. [Cases: Partnership C=22.]

partnership agreement. (1802) A contract defining the partners’ rights and duties toward one another — not the partners’ relationship with third parties. — Also termed articles of partnership. [Cases: Partnership C=22, 71.]

partnership association. (1812) A business organization that combines the features of a limited partnership and a close corporation. • Partnership associations are statutorily authorized in only a few states. — Also termed statutory partnership association; limited partnership association. [Cases: Partnership C=349–376.]

partnership at will. See partnership.

partnership certificate. A document that evidences the participation of the partners in a partnership. • The certificate is often furnished to financial institutions when the partnership borrows money.

partnership distribution. See distribution.

partnership insurance. See insurance.

partner's lien. (1870) A partner’s right to have the partnership property applied in payment of the partnership’s debts and to have whatever is due the firm from fellow partners deducted from what would otherwise be payable to them for their shares. [Cases: Partnership C=89.]

partnership life insurance. See partnership insurance (1) under insurance.

part-performance doctrine. (1935) The equitable principle by which a failure to comply with the statute of frauds is overcome by a party’s execution, in reliance on an opposing party’s oral promise, of a substantial portion of an oral contract’s requirements. — Sometimes shortened to part performance. See part performance under performance. [Cases: Frauds, Statute of C=129.]

'Part performance is not an accurate designation of such acts as taking possession and making improvements when the contract does not provide for such acts, but such acts regularly bring the doctrine into play. The doctrine is contrary to the words of the Statute of Frauds, but it was established by English courts of equity soon after the enactment of the Statute. Payment of purchase-money, without more, was once thought sufficient to justify specific enforcement, but a contrary view now prevails, since in such cases restitution is an adequate remedy. English decisions treated a transfer of possession of the land as sufficient, if unequivocally referable to the oral agreement, apparently on the ground that the promise to transfer had been executed by a common-law conveyance. Such decisions are not generally followed in the United States. Enforcement has instead been justified on the ground that repudiation after 'part performance' amounts to a 'virtual fraud.' A more accurate statement is that courts with equitable powers are vested by tradition with what in substance is a dispensing power based on the promisee’s reliance, a discretion to be exercised with caution in the light of all the circumstances." Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 129 cmt. a (1979).

party. (13c) 1. One who takes part in a transaction <$a to the contract>. [Cases: Contracts C=177.]

'Note, that if an indenture be made between two as Parties thereto in the Beginning, and in the Deed one of them grants or lets a Thing to another who is not named in the Beginning, he is not Party to the Deed, nor shall take party of the first part. (18c) Archaic. The party named first in a contract; esp., the owner or seller.

"A person who takes part in a legal transaction or proceeding is said to be a party to it. Thus, if an agreement, conveyance, lease, or the like, is entered into between A. and B., they are said to be parties to it: and the same expression is often, though not very correctly, applied to the persons named as the grantors or releasers in a deed poll." 2 Stewart Ralpilie & Robert L. Lawrence, A Dictionary of American and English Law 930 (1883).

party of the second part. (18c) Archaic. The party named second in a contract; esp., the buyer.

2. One by or against whom a lawsuit is brought . • For purposes of res judicata, a party to a lawsuit is a person who has been named as a party and has a right to control the lawsuit either personally, or, if not fully competent, through someone appointed to protect the person's interests. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 101; Parties 73.]

adverse party. (15c) A party whose interests are opposed to the interests of another party to the action. Cf. hostile witness under witness.

aggrieved party. (17c) A party entitled to a remedy; esp., a party whose personal, pecuniary, or property rights have been adversely affected by another person's actions or by a court's decree or judgment. • Also termed party aggrieved; person aggrieved. [Cases: Action 13; Appeal and Error 151; Federal Civil Procedure 103.2.] coparty. See coparty.

fictitious party. A person who is named in a writ, complaint, or record as a party in a suit, but who does not actually exist, or a person who is named as a plaintiff but is unaware of the suit and did not consent to be named. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 101; Parties 73.]

formal party. See nominal party.

indispensable party. (1821) A party who, having interests that would inevitably be affected by a court's judgment, must be included in the case. • If such a party is not included, the case must be dismissed. 2d. R. Civ. P. 19(b). Cf. necessary party. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 203; Parties 18, 29.]

innocent party. (16c) A party who did not consciously or intentionally participate in an event or transaction.

interested party. (17c) A party who has a recognizable stake (and therefore standing) in a matter. • Abbrev. IP. [Cases: Action 13; Federal Civil Procedure 103.2.]

necessary party. (18c) A party who, being closely connected to a lawsuit, should be included in the case if feasible, but whose absence will not require dismissal of the proceedings. See compulsory joinder under joinder. Cf. indispensable party. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 203; Parties 18, 29.]

nominal party. (18c) A party to an action who has no control over it and no financial interest in its outcome; esp., a party who has some immaterial interest in the subject matter of a lawsuit and who will not be affected by any judgment, but who is nonetheless joined in the lawsuit to avoid procedural defects. • An example is the disinterested stakeholder in a garnishment action. — Also termed formal party. Cf. real party in interest. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 103; Parties 4.]

party cast. The losing party in a lawsuit.

party to be charged. (1923) A defendant in an action to enforce a contract falling within the statute of frauds.

prevailing party. (17c) A party in whose favor a judgment is rendered, regardless of the amount of damages awarded <in certain cases, the court will award attorney's fees to the prevailing party>. • Also termed successful party. See Buckhannon Bd. & Care Home, Inc. v. West Va. Dep't of Health & Human Res., 532 U.S. 598, 603, 121 S.Ct. 1835, 1839 (2001) (relying on the seventh edition of Black's Law Dictionary [1999]). [Cases: Costs 32, 194.14; Federal Civil Procedure 2727, 2737.1.] proper party. (1823) A party who may be joined in a case for reasons of judicial economy but whose presence is not essential to the proceeding. See permissive joinder under joinder. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 241; Parties 14, 25.]

real party in interest. (1804) A person entitled under the substantive law to enforce the right sued upon and who generally, but not necessarily, benefits from the action's final outcome. • Also termed party in interest; (archaically) interesse. Cf. nominal party. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 131; Parties 6(2).]

"[The 'real party in interest' is the party who, by the substantive law, possesses the right sought to be enforced, and not necessarily the person who will ultimately benefit from the recovery, ... The concept of real party in interest should not be confused with the concept of standing. The standing question arises in the realm of public law, when governmental action is attacked on the ground that it violates private rights or some constitutional principle. ... Unfortunately, ... Confusion between standing on the one hand and real party in interest or capacity on the other has been increasing." Charles Alan Wright, The Law of Federal Courts § 70, at 490 & n.2 (5th ed. 1994).]

third party. See third party.

3. political party.

party-column ballot. See ballot (4). party wall. See wall.

parum cavisse videtur (par-am kah-viss-ul eev-dee-toor). [Latin] Hist. He seems to have taken too little care; he seems to have been incautious. This expression was used by a judge when pronouncing a death sentence.

par value. The value of an instrument or security as shown on its face; esp., the arbitrary dollar amount assigned to a stock share by the corporate charter, or the principal of a bond at maturity. — Often shortened to par. — Also termed face value; nominal value; stated value. [Cases: Corporations ⊃ 99(3).]

"At one time par value had considerable importance because it was widely viewed as the amount for which the shares would be issued: shares with a par value of one hundred dollars could be subscribed for at one hundred dollars per share with confidence that all other identical shares would also be issued for $100. This practice, however, long ago fell into disuse. Today, par value serves only a minor function and is in no way an indication of the price at which the shares are issued, with this one exception. The one basic rule about setting the price for shares of common stock with a par value is that the price must be equal to or greater than par value." Robert W. Hamilton, The Law of Corporations in a Nutshell 109 (3d ed. 1991).

par-value stock. See stock.

parvis (pahr-viss). [fr. Old Fr. parvis "paradise," fr. Late Latin paradus "garden"] Hist. An academic exercise, such as a moot court. — Also spelled pervise; parvise.

pass, vb. (14c) 1. To pronounce or render an opinion, ruling, sentence, or judgment <the court refused to pass on the constitutional issue, deciding the case instead on procedural grounds>. 2. To transfer or be transferred <the woman's will passes title to the house to her nephew, much to her husband's surprise>. 3. To enact (a legislative bill or resolution); to adopt <Congress has debated whether to pass a balanced-budget amendment to the Constitution>. See ADOPTION (5). 4. To approve or certify (something) as meeting specified requirements <the mechanic informed her that the car had passed inspection>. 5. To publish, transfer, or circulate (a thing, often a forgery) <she was found guilty of passing counterfeit bills>. 6. To forgo or proceed beyond <the case was passed on the court's trial docket because the judge was presiding over a criminal trial>. 7. Abstain (1).

passage, n. 1. ADOPTION (5); esp., the passing of a legislative measure into law. [Cases: Statutes ⊃ 17.] 2. A right, privilege, or permission to cross land or water; an easement to travel through another's property. 3. The process of traveling, esp. in transit <safe passage>. 4. The act of coming and going <right of passage>.

pass-along, adj. See pass-through.

passbook. A depositor's book in which a bank records all the transactions on an account. — Also termed bankbook.

passed dividend. See dividend.

passim (pas-im), adv. [Latin] (17c) Here and there; throughout (the cited work). In modern legal writing, the citation signal see generally is preferred to passim as a general reference, although passim can be useful in a brief's index of authorities to show that a given authority is cited throughout the brief.

passing off, n. (1900) Intellectual property. The act or an instance of falsely representing one's own product as that of another in an attempt to deceive potential buyers. — Passing off is actionable in tort under the law of unfair competition. It may also be actionable as trademark infringement. — Also termed palming off, misrepresentation of source. Cfr. misappropriation. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation ⊃ 41; Trademarks ⊃ 1428(1).] — pass off, vb.

reverse passing off. The act or an instance of falsely representing another's product as one's own in an attempt to deceive potential buyers. — Also termed reverse palming off. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ⊃ 2727, 2737.]

passive, adj. Not involving active participation; esp., of or relating to a business enterprise in which an investor does not have immediate control over the activity that produces income.

passive activity. (1962) Tax. A business activity in which the taxpayer does not materially participate and therefore does not have immediate control over the income. — A typical example is the ownership and rental of real property by someone not in the real-property business. [Cases: Internal Revenue ⊃ 3418.]

passive adoption-registery statute. See ADOPTION-REGISTRY STATUTE.

passive bond. See bond (3).

passive breach of contract. See BREACH OF CONTRACT.

passive concealment. See concealment.

passive conduct. See conduct.

passive debt. See debt.

passive duty. See DUTY (1).

passive mercy killing. See EUTHANASIA.

passive negligence. See NEGLIGENCE.

passive trust. See trust.

pass-on defense. See defense (1).

passport. 1. A formal document certifying a person's identity and citizenship so that the person may travel to and from a foreign country. [Cases: Aliens, Immigration, and Citizenship ⊃ 674.] 2. Sea Letter. 3. Safe Conduct.

"A passport is the universally accepted evidence of a person's identity and nationality. It does not give its bearer the right to travel in another country, but it does request that other governments permit him to travel in their territories or within their jurisdictions. It also entitles him to the protection and assistance of his own diplomatic and pass the witness. See TAKE THE WITNESS.

pass-through, adj. (1951) (Of a seller's or lessor's costs) chargeable to the buyer or lessee. — Also termed pass-along.

pass-through security. See SECURITY.

pass-through taxation. See TAXATION.

past consideration. See CONSIDERATION (1).

past recollection recorded. Evidence. A document concerning events that a witness once knew about but can no longer remember. • The document itself is evidence and, despite being hearsay, may be admitted and read into the record if it was prepared or adopted by the witness when the events were fresh in the witness's memory. Fed. R. Evid. 803(5). — Also termed recorded recollection; past recorded recollection. Cf. PRESENT RECOLLECTION REFRESHED. [Cases: Criminal Law ☞ 435; Evidence ☞ 355–356.]

Pasula–Robinette test. The principle that if a miner establishes a prima facie case of retaliation for filing a claim under the Mine Safety and Health Act, the mine operator can still prevail based at least in part on that activity. (1) The adverse action was based on the miner's unprotected activity, and (2) the adverse action was not based on the miner's unprotected activity, and (3) the mine operator would have taken the same action based solely on the unprotected activity. • To establish a prima facie case of retaliation, the evidence must show that the miner engaged in a protected activity and that an adverse employment action occurred based at least in part on that activity. 30 USCA § 815(c); Secretary ex rel. Pasula v. Consolidation Coal Co., 2 FMSHRC 2786 (1980); Secretary ex rel. Robinette v. United Coal Co., 3 FMSHRC 802 (1981).

pateat universis per praesentes (pat-ee-at yoo-na-var-sis par pri-zen-teez). [Law Latin] Let it be open to all men by these presents. Cf. KNOW ALL MEN BY THESE PRESENTS: NOVERINT UNIVERSI PER PRAESENTES.

Pate hearing. A proceeding in which the trial court seeks to determine whether a criminal defendant is competent to stand trial. Pate v. Robinson, 383 U.S. 375, 86 S.Ct. 836 (1966); 18 USCA § 4241. — Also termed competency hearing; incompetency hearing. [Cases: Criminal Law ☞ 625.10–625.35.]

patent (pat-ant), n. (14c) 1. The governmental grant of a right, privilege, or authority. 2. The official document so granting. — Also termed public grant. See LETTERS PATENT.

call patent. A land patent in which the corners have been staked but the boundary lines have not been run out at the time of the grant.

escheat patent. See escheat grant under GRANT.

land patent. An instrument by which the government conveys a grant of public land to a private person. [Cases: Public Lands ☞ 114(1).]

lapse patent. A land patent substituting for an earlier patent to the same land that lapsed because the previous patentee did not claim it.

3. The right to exclude others from making, using, marketing, selling, offering for sale, or importing an invention for a specified period (20 years from the date of filing), granted by the federal government to the inventor if the device or process is novel, useful, and nonobvious. 35 USCA §§ 101–103. • The holding of a patent alone does not by itself grant any right to make, use, or sell anything that that activity would infringe another's blocking patent. — Also termed patent right; patent grant. [Cases: Patents ☞ 1.]

'The franchise which the patent grants consists altogether in the right to exclude everyone from making, using or selling the patented article or process, without the permission of the patentee. This is all he obtains by the patent.' Bloomer v. McQuewan, 55 U.S. 539, 549 (1852).

'What, exactly, is a patent and how does it operate to foster the progress of the useful arts? In its simplest terms a patent is an agreement between an inventor and the public, represented by the federal government: in return for a full public disclosure of the invention the inventor is granted the right for a fixed period of time to exclude others from making, using, or selling the defined invention in the United States. It is a limited monopoly, designed not primarily to reward the inventor (this may or may not follow), but to encourage a public disclosure of inventions so that after the monopoly expires, the public is free to take unrestricted advantage of the invention.' Earl W. Kintner & Jack L. Lahr, An Intellectual Property Law Primer 7–11 (2d ed. 1982).

blocking patent. One of two patents, neither of which can be effectively practiced without infringing the other. • For example, if A patents an improvement of B's patented invention, A cannot practice the improvement without infringing B's patent. Nor can B use the improvement without infringing A's patent. Owners of blocking patents often cross-license each other. See fencing patent; DOMINATION.

broadened reissue patent. Patents. A patent that is issued again, having broader claims than the original, surrendered patent. • Under 35 USCA § 251, a patent may be reissued, under certain circumstances, with broader claims than the original patent if the reissue application is filed within two years of the grant of the original patent. See INTERVENING RIGHTS. [Cases: Patents ☞ 141(3).]

business-method patent. A U.S. patent that describes methods for doing business, which, as a whole, constitutes a method of doing business. • Until 1998, methods for doing business were not expressly recognized as being patentable. In that year, the Federal Circuit Court of Appeals held in State Street Bank & Trust Co. v. Signature Fin. Group, Inc., 140 F.3d 1368 (Fed. Cir. 1998), that business methods are subject to the same legal requirements for patentability as any other process or method. — Also termed cyberpatent. [Cases: Patents $\Rightarrow$ 7.14.]

combination patent. A patent granted for an invention that unites existing components in a novel and nonobvious way. [Cases: Patents $\Rightarrow$ 26.]

Community patent. An international patent issued by the European Patent Office. • Community patents are good for 20 years from the application date. They may be registered in any nation in the European Union and other EPC signatories.

copending patent. A patent whose application is being prosecuted at or near the same time as another, similar patent. • Continuing applications must be copending with an existing patent application. A copending patent may affect another patent's validity if it discloses the same invention, or discloses some part of the invention that, combined with other prior art, results in anticipation (esp. if the copending patent is issued before the affected patent). A copending patent may be shown to be an unpatentable improvement on another copending patent's invention. 35 USCA § 102(e). See COPENDING. [Cases: Patents $\Rightarrow$ 110, 7] cyberpatent. 1. See business-method patent. 2. See Internet patent.

design patent. A patent granted for a new, original, and ornamental design for an article of manufacture; a patent that protects a product's appearance or nonfunctional aspects. • Design patents — which, unlike utility patents, have a term of only 14 years from the date the patent is granted — are similar to copyrights. 36 USCA § 171. [Cases: Patents $\Rightarrow$ 15.]

dominating patent. See fencing patent.

fencing patent. A patent procured for some aspect of an invention that the inventor does not intend to produce but that the inventor wants to prevent competitors from using in making improvements. • By making a claim whose only purpose is to protect other claims, the inventor seeks to "fence in" any such competing improvements. Courts disfavor fencing claims. — Also termed dominating patent. [Cases: Patents $\Rightarrow$ 121.]

improvement patent. A patent having claims directed to an improvement on a preexisting invention. • If the preexisting invention is patented by another, the owner of the improvement patent may need a license to practice the invention covered by the claims of the improvement patent. Similarly, the owner of the preexisting invention's patent may need a license to practice the invention in the improvement patent. Cf. pioneer patent. [Cases: Patents $\Rightarrow$ 9.]

in-force patent. A patent that has not expired or been ruled invalid.

Internet patent. A type of utility patent granted on an invention that combines business methods and software programs for Internet applications. — Also termed cyberpatent.

method patent. A patent having method or process claims that define a series of actions leading to a tangible physical result. — Also termed process patent. [Cases: Patents $\Rightarrow$ 7.]

paper patent. A patent granted for a discovery or invention that has never been used commercially. • A paper patent may receive less protection under the law than a patent granted for a device that is actually used in industry. As a prior-art reference, a paper patent may carry less weight with examiners than one for an invention that has been commercially exploited, because it may suggest that the invention did not work as claimed. [Cases: Patents $\Rightarrow$ 172.]

pioneer patent. A patent covering a function or a major technological advance never before performed, a wholly novel device, or subject matter of such novelty and importance as to mark a distinct step in the progress of the art, as distinguished from a mere improvement or perfection of what had gone before. • Under U.S. law, the claims of a pioneer patent are entitled to broader interpretation and to be given a broader range of equivalents. A pioneer patent is usu. the first one documented by a patent-tracking service, although it may not be the first patent published by a national registry, such as the PTO. — Cf. improvement patent. [Cases: Patents $\Rightarrow$ 173.]

“To what liberality of construction these claims are entitled depends to a certain extent upon the character of the invention, and whether it is what is termed on ordinary parlance a 'pioneer.' This word, although used somewhat loosely, is commonly understood to denote a patent covering a function never before performed, a wholly novel device, or one of such novelty and importance as to mark a distinct step in the progress of the art, distinguished from a mere improvement or perfection of what had gone before" Westinghouse v. Beyden Power Brake Co., 170 U.S. 537, 561-62, 18 S.Ct. 707, 718 (1898).

plant patent. A patent granted for the invention or discovery of a new and distinct variety of asexually reproducing plant. 36 USCA § 161. [Cases: Patents $\Rightarrow$ 14.]

process patent. A patent for a method of treating specified materials to produce a certain result; a patent outlining a means of producing a physical result independently of the producing mechanism. • The result might be brought about by chemical action, by applying some element or power of nature, by mixing certain substances together, or by heating a substance to a certain temperature. See method patent. [Cases: Patents $\Rightarrow$ 7.]

reissue patent. A patent that is issued to correct unintentional or unavoidable errors in an original patent, such as to revise the specification or to fix an invalid claim. • A reissue may correct patent defects that might call the validity of the patent into question. It is also used, although rarely, to make the claims broader or narrower. The patentee risks the possibility that previously allowed claims may be rejected. It does not change the term of the patent. 35 USCA § 251. — Sometimes shortened to reissue. [Cases: Patents $\Rightarrow$ 135.] submarine patent. Slang. A patent that is delayed in prosecution by the applicant in order to let an infringing user continue to develop its business, with the intention of taking in later-invented technology once the patent finally "surfaces" from the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office. Typically, the patent applicant is aware of the developments and consciously delays the PTO's issuance of a patent, so that the invention's unwitting users will be forced to pay license fees. As of November 29, 2000, most patent applications must be published within 18 months of filing, so submarine patents are relatively rare now. See CONTINUATION-APPLICATION LACHES DOCTRINE.

utility-model patent. See utility model.

utility patent. A patent granted for one of the following types of inventions: a process, a machine, a manufacture, or a composition of matter (such as a new chemical). Utility patents are the most commonly issued patents. 35 USCA § 101. [Cases: Patents ⊆ 1.]

patentability opinion. See opinion (2).

patentability search. An inventor's research into a field's state of the art to determine whether an invention will qualify for patent protection. Cf. INFRINGEMENT SEARCH; VALIDITY SEARCH.

patentable, adj. Capable of being patented <patentable processes>.

patentable combination. A series of process steps, mechanical elements, or a mixture of materials that produce a desirable result or effect that is not obvious from the qualities of the individual components or steps. [Cases: Patents ⊆ 7.10.]

patentable subject matter. Things that by law can be patented; any machine, process, manufacture, or material composition, or an improvement to such things, that (1) is discovered or invented, (2) is new and useful, and (3) meets the statutory conditions and requirements to qualify for a patent. Patents may be issued for "any new and useful process, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof." 35 USCA § 101. Patents may not be issued for laws of nature, naturally occurring materials, physical phenomena, or abstract ideas and formulas. But if a naturally occurring material is processed in a way that gives it a new use, that process may be patentable. — Often shortened to subject matter. — Also termed statutory subject matter. [Cases: Patents ⊆ 1.]

Patent Act of 1790. Hist. The first U.S. patent statute, establishing a board to examine patent applications, specifications, and drawings to determine whether the invention is "sufficiently useful and important" to justify the granting of a patent. The examining board, comprising the Secretary of State, the Secretary of War, and the Attorney General, was abolished three years later in favor of a simple registration system.

Patent Act of 1793. Hist. An early U.S. patent law that (1) abandoned the examination process in favor of simple registration (2) established the infringement defenses of invalidity for lack of novelty or public use; and (3) articulated the four categories of patentable subject matter as machine, manufacture, composition of matter, and art (now called process). The State Department handled the registration of patents, and their question of their validity was left up to the courts.

Patent Act of 1870. A U.S. statute that shifted the burden of disclosing the exact nature of an invention to the patent applicant by requiring a rigorous listing of distinct claims. Before the Act was passed, patent claims were less important than the description and drawings, and the scope of the patent grant was often ambiguous.

patent ambiguity. See AMBIGUITY.

Patent and Copyright Clause. (1929) The constitutional provision granting Congress the authority to promote the advancement of science and the arts by establishing a national system for patents and copyrights. U.S. Const. art. I, § 8, cl. 8. [Cases: Patents ⊆ 3.]

Patent and Trademark Depository Library. A library that has been designated by the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office as an official repository for information to aid in a patent or trademark search. — Abbr. PTDL.

Patent and Trademark Office. The Department of Commerce agency that examines patent and trademark applications, issues patents, registers trademarks, and furnishes patent and trademark information and services to the public. — Abbr. PTO. [Cases: Patents ⊆ 97.]

patent application. An inventor's request for a patent, filed with the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office and accompanied by a specification (ending with at least one claim), drawings, the filing fee, and (except for a provisional patent application) an oath or a declaration. [Cases: Patents ⊆ 98.]

allowed application. A patent application for which the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office examiner has determined that at least one pending claim meets the application for a reissue patent. An application by a patentee to change the scope of a patent that has already been issued, or to correct clerical or technological errors in the issued patent. • The scope of the claims can be broadened only if the application is made within two years of the date the patent was issued. See reissue patent under Patent (3). Cf certificate of correction. [Cases: Patents $\rightarrow$ 104.]

child application. A later-filed application in a chain of continuing applications filed during the pendency of an earlier application and sharing common subject matter. • The first-filed application is called the parent application. Cf. parent application. [Cases: Patents $\rightarrow$ 110.]

continued-prosecution application. A request to abandon a patent application after final rejection and reopen a new case with the same file wrapper as the parent application. • Continuation, continuation-in-part, divisional, and reissue applications are all forms of continuing applications. [Cases: Patents $\rightarrow$ 110.]

Continuing application. A patent application that is filed while the parent application is pending and that carries on prosecution of some or all of the original application. • Continuation, continuation-in-part, divisional, and reissue applications are all forms of continuing applications. [Cases: Patents $\rightarrow$ 110.]

Convention application. A patent application filed in accordance with the terms of an international patent treaty such as the Paris Convention or the Patent Cooperation Treaty.

divisional application. A patent application based on the same disclosure as the original application but claiming a different invention. • If an examiner finds that a disclosure reveals two or more distinct inventions, the applicant must restrict the original application to claiming one of the inventions. A divisional application can then be filed on any nonelected invention, and it will keep the same filing date as the parent application. • Often shortened to divisional. • Also termed restriction application. [Cases: Patents $\rightarrow$ 109.]

file-wrapper continuation application. 1. See continuation. 2. See continuation-in-part.

grandparent application. The first-filed application in a chain of at least three continuation or continuation-in-part patent applications. [Cases: Patents $\rightarrow$ 110.]

informal application. A patent application that is not in the correct form as required by the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office. • According to the Manual of Patent Examining Procedure, an application is informal if it is printed on both sides of the paper, or is not permanent, legible, or reproducible. An informal application may be corrected and still retain the original filing date. [Cases: Patents $\rightarrow$ 98.]

international application. An application under the Patent Cooperation Treaty for patent protection in specified member nations. • A PCT filing may be added as long as 31 months after the initial filing in a national patent office. It allows for simultaneous patent searches and examinations in multiple countries. • Also termed PCT application; PCT filing. See Patent Cooperation Treaty.

international application designating the United States. An international-patent application that is filed in accordance with the Patent Cooperation Treaty and specifically seeks patent protection in the United States. • The application may be filed in any nation, including the U.S., that is a party to the treaty.

international application originating in the United States. An international-patent application that is filed in the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office in accordance with the Patent Cooperation Treaty. • Under the treaty, the PTO acts as a receiving office for international applications. The applicant may or may not be seeking patent protection in the U.S. [Cases: Patents $\rightarrow$ 97.]

parent application. The first-filed application in a chain of later-filed continuation or continuation-in-part applications. • An application becomes the parent application when another type of application (such as continuation, divisional, or substitute) is filed. The term "parent" is generally not used to refer to a provisional application. Cf. child application. [Cases: Patents $\rightarrow$ 110.]

provisional application. An application that can be filed up to a year before the patent application itself, in order to establish a date for prior art and constructive reduction to practice. • The PPA must include a full description of the invention, but claims, drawings and prior-art disclosures are not required. • Also termed provisional patent application. • Abbr. PPA. [Cases: Patents $\rightarrow$ 98.]

substitute application. A duplicate application filed after the response period for a first office action has expired and the first application has been deemed abandoned. • A substitute application carries some danger for the applicant: the original filing date is lost, and any developments since that date become prior art that the examiner must consider before granting the patent. [Cases: Patents $\rightarrow$ 110.]

patent-application amendment. A modification to a patent application, usu. narrowing or eliminating some claims in response to an examiner's rejection. [Cases: Patents $\rightarrow$ 109.]
amendment after allowance. An amendment submitted to the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office after the PTO has mailed notice of a patent application's approval. • Once a notice of allowance has been mailed, prosecution of the application is closed on the merits, and the entry of any amendment is within the discretion of the patent examiner. Amendments after allowance commonly address such matters as an amendment to the specification or claims, a change in the drawings or the list of inventors, and the submission of prior art. Amendments of greater significance require approval of the supervisory examiner under policies established by the group director. CFR § 1.312. — Also termed 312 amendment; Rule 312 amendment. See amendment after payment of issue fee. [Cases: Patents ☞ 109.] amendment after appeal. An amendment made after an appeal is taken from a patent application's final rejection. • Such an amendment is not made as a matter of right but is frequently allowed if it puts the case in better form for consideration on appeal or helps implement an examiner's recommendation. [Cases: Patents ☞ 109.]

amendment after final action. An amendment made after final rejection of the patent application. • The amendment may drop claims but not add them. To be entered, it may make changes in form, but may not raise new issues for the examiner. CFR § 1.116. — Also termed Rule 116 amendment. [Cases: Patents ☞ 109.]

amendment after payment of issue fee. An amendment made by the applicant after the application has been allowed and the issue fee paid. • Such an amendment is not made as a matter of right but is governed by 37 CFR § 1.312. It must be accompanied by a petition to the Commissioner showing good and sufficient reasons why the amendment was not presented earlier. See amendment after allowance. [Cases: Patents ☞ 109.]

amendment in excess of filing fee. An amendment to a patent application that increases the number of claims in the original application and requires payment of an additional fee.

preliminary amendment. An amendment filed before the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office issues an office action on a patent application. • Amendments that are not filed with the original application are not considered part of the original disclosure. — Also termed amendment before first action. [Cases: Patents ☞ 109.]

Rule 116 amendment. See amendment after final action.

Rule 312 amendment. See amendment after allowance.

312 amendment. See amendment after allowance.

patent attorney. A lawyer who drafts and prosecutes patent applications, and who represents inventors in infringement suits and interference hearings. • In addition to a law license, a patent attorney must have a scientific or technical background, pass the patent bar examination, and be licensed by the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office. [Cases: Patents ☞ 97.]

patent claim. A formal statement describing the novel features of an invention and defining the scope of the patent's protection <claim #3 of the patent describes an electrical means for driving a metal pin>. Cf. specification (3). [Cases: Patents ☞ 101.]

apparatus claim. A patent claim on a mechanical device, explaining how the components are connected and function together. • The preamble of an apparatus claim typically states the function of the machine; the body explains its elements and how they work together.

appendant claim. See dependent claim.

closed-ended claim. A patent claim that expressly limits its scope to a list of elements, typically introduced by the phrase “consisting of.” Cf. nearly closed-ended claim; open-ended claim. [Cases: Patents ☞ 101.3.]

coined-name claim. A chemical-patent claim consisting only of the name of the new material. • A coined-name claim is allowed by the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office only on the rare occasion when the name is established in the field before the patent is applied for. The chemical composition, its physical properties, and the process for making it must still be disclosed in the specification.

dependent claim. A patent claim that refers to and further limits another claim or set of claims in the same patent application. — Also termed appendant claim. [Cases: Patents ☞ 165.5.]

design claim. The single claim allowed in an application for a design patent, incorporating by reference the drawing and other specifications. • The brief claim typically starts with “an ornamental design for” and

fingerprint claim. A chemical-patent claim that differentiates the material from prior art in terms of some physical feature, such as melting point or spectrum, rather than its chemical composition. • Fingerprint claims are allowed only when the chemical composition cannot be determined or cannot be distinguished from prior art.

generic claim. A claim that encompasses a class of elements, any of which could function as equivalents. • For a generic claim to be valid, the specific elements it encompasses must have a definable feature in common that makes them fit for the purpose.— Also termed genus claim. Cf. species claim. [Cases: Patents ☒ 101(5).]

independent claim. A patent claim that does not refer to any other claim.

Jepson claim. An improvement-patent claim characterized by a preamble setting forth the current state of the art, followed by the phrase "the improvement comprising" and a description of the claimed patentable improvement. • The name comes from Ex parte Jepson, 1917 C.D. 62, 243 O.G. 526 (Ass't Comm'r Pat. 1917), in which this type of claim was first approved and sanctioned by the Commissioner of Patents. — Also termed improvement claim.

Markush claim. A patent claim that includes elements listing alternative chemicals, materials, or steps in a process. • A Markush claim typically has language such as "selected from the group consisting of." The alternatives must all give the same result, rather than patentably distinct products. The name derives from Ex parte Markush, 1925 Dec. Comm'r Pat. 126. See MARKUSH DOCTRINE. [Cases: Patents ☒ 101(7).]

means-combination claim. A type of claim in a patent application that includes multiple limitations, at least one of which is in means-plus-function or step-plus-function form. • Means-combination claims are acceptable to examiners. [Cases: Patents ☒ 101(10).]

method claim. A patent claim that describes what is done to a workpiece in order to achieve the useful result claimed. • A method claim is the same thing as a process claim, but "method" is used more often in applications for mechanical and electrical devices. [Cases: Patents ☒ 101(11).]

multiple-dependent claim. A dependent claim that refers to more than one other preceding claim.

nearly closed-ended claim. A patent claim that limits its scope to a list of elements but does not expressly exclude close analogues. The claim is typically introduced by a phrase such as "consisting essentially of." Cf. closed-ended claim; open-ended claim.

new-use claim. A method claim for a new way of using an existing invention. [Cases: Patents ☒ 27(1).]

nonelected claim. A claim that has been withdrawn from consideration based on the examiner's finding that the application claims more than one invention. • The applicant must elect to prosecute one invention. Other claims may either be abandoned or else be prosecuted separately under a divisional application. See RESTRICTION (4).

omnibus claim. A claim in a patent application that does not distinctly narrate a means to carry out a function but rather refers to the drawings or description with phrases such as "as described and shown." • Omnibus claims are rejected in the United States but are accepted elsewhere. — Also termed nonstatutory claim. Cf. design claim.

open-ended claim. A patent claim that contains a nonexclusive list of elements, typically introduced by the phrase "consisting of." • A later patent applicant cannot avoid infringement by merely adding an analogue to the list. Cf. closed-ended claim; nearly closed-ended claim.

plant-patent claim. The single claim in a plant-patent application, describing the principal distinguishing characteristics of the plant.

process claim. A patent claim that describes by steps what is done to the subject matter, usu. a substance, in order to achieve a useful result. • A process claim is the same thing as a method claim, but "process" is used more often in applications for chemical patents. [Cases: Patents ☒ 101(11).]

product-by-process claim. A patent claim defining a product through the process by which it is made. • The product-by-process claim is most often used to define new chemical compounds, such as drugs. [Cases: Patents ☒ 101(11).]

single-means claim. A type of claim in a patent application that indicates a process, result, or function but does not describe the method of reaching that end (. • Where no other method is obvious, such an assertion claims rights to all possible ways of achieving the result — ways not specified in the application and even ways that have not yet been invented. Single-means claims are rejected as too broad. — Also termed single-element means claim. Cf. MEANS-PLUS-FUNCTION CLAUSE. [Cases: Patents ☒ 101(8).]

species claim. A claim that is limited to a single apparatus, process, composition of matter, or article of manufacture, rather than to a range of similar and related items. Cf generic claim.

Squires claim. A utility-patent claim that incorporates a drawing or table by reference. • This claim is allowed by the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office only if there is no practical way to define the invention in words, but the invention is simple to illustrate with the drawing or table. See SQUIRES DOCTRINE. [Cases: Patents ⇑ 101(4)] subcombination claim. A patent claim, usu. on a device, describing a subsystem of a larger combination. • A subcombination may be patented separately if it has its own utility. [Cases: Patents ⇑ 101(10)]

Patent Cooperation Treaty. A 1970 treaty that streamlined the process of securing patents in multiple countries by establishing a single filing date and providing for a single preliminary patent search. • An inventor who wants to qualify for patents from several member countries files a standard application in one country, thus preserving the priority date, then submits a PCT filing that designates which other countries' patents are being applied for. WIPO, the United Nations' World Intellectual Property Organization, administers the treaty. — Often shortened to PCT. See international application under PATENT APPLICATION. [Cases: Patents ⇑ 97]

patentee (pat-an-tee). One who either has been granted a patent or has succeeded in title to a patent. • Although it might seem helpful to distinguish a patentee as a person to whom a patent is issued and a patent-holder as the owner of a patent, including the original grantee's assigns, the Patent Act explicitly includes all title-holders under the term "patentee." 35 USCA § 100(d). — Also termed patent-holder; patent-owner. [Cases: Patents ⇑ 90, 117] patent-exhaustion doctrine. Patents. The rule that the unconditioned sale of a patented article ends the patentee's monopoly right to control its use. • That control may still be exercised by limitations in a contract or license, as long as it does not amount to anticompetitive patent misuse. Adams v. Burke, 84 U.S. (17 Wall.) 453 (1874). See FIRST-SALE DOCTRINE. [Cases: Patents ⇑ 191]

patent infringement. See INFRINGEMENT.

patent insurance. See INSURANCE.

patent marking. The incorporation or affixation of a patent number to a patented article's surface or surrounding packaging. • Affixing the patent number to a product gives constructive notice of patent rights to infringers. Without the number in place, a patentee can not recover losses that occur before the infringer has actual notice of the patent. 35 USCA § 287. See PATENT NUMBER. [Cases: Patents ⇑ 222] patent medicine. A packaged drug that is protected by trademark and is available without prescription. [Cases: Health ⇑ 302-308] patent-misuse doctrine. An equitable rule that patentees should not be allowed to use their patent to effectively broaden the scope of their monopoly in restraint of trade or otherwise against the public interest. • Two common examples of anticompetitive broadening are (1) using a patent to restrain competition from an unpatented product or process, and (2) employing the patent beyond its lifespan to exclude others from gaining commercial advantages by using the product or process. The practical effect of finding patent misuse is the loss of patent protection. The doctrine operates independently of antitrust law but overlays it in many ways and arose in the same era, at the turn of the 20th century. It has been described as an application of the equitable rule of "unclean hands." See nonmetered license under LICENSE. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation ⇑ 587(3), 682, 732] patent number. Patents. The unique eight-character number assigned by the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office to a patent upon issuance. See PATENT MARKING.

Patent Office. See UNITED STATES PATENT AND TRADEMARK OFFICE.

Patent Office Reports. Hist. The former official publication of the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office. • It was replaced in 1872 by the Official Gazette of the United States Patent and Trademark Office.

patent of precedence. Hist. A royal grant to a person by letters patent of a higher social or professional rank than the person would ordinarily hold or be entitled to. • In the 19th and early 20th centuries, the patent was most often used to give certain barristers more rights and privileges. For example, a King's Counsel could not represent a party against the Crown without a patent of precedence. See PREAMBULAND.

patentor (pat-an-tor or pat-an-tor). One who grants a patent.

patent-owner. See PATENTEE.

patent pending. (1917) The designation given to an invention while the Patent and Trademark Office is processing the patent application. • No protection against infringement exists, however, unless an actual patent is granted. — Abbr. pat. pend. [Cases: Patents ⇑ 104] patent pooling. The cross-licensing of patents among patentees. • Patent pooling does not violate antitrust laws unless it is done to suppress competition or control an industry. [Cases: Monopolies ⇑ 12(15)]

Patent Roll. Hist. A list of the letters patent issued in the United Kingdom in any given year. • The first Patent Roll was issued in England in 1201. The Rolls were originally used to grant offices, lands, licenses, peerages, and pensions. In later centuries, they included grants of patents for inventions.

patent search. 1. See infringement search. 2. See patentability search. 3. See validity search.

patent suppression. The deliberate nonuse of a patent, esp. in order to deny the public or competitors the benefit of the invention. • Patent suppression is a rich source of urban legend, such as the rumor of oil companies sitting on inventions that would greatly improve gas mileage, or pantyhose companies suppressing a patent on no-run nylon. But the stories are not always fictional: in 1942 Standard Oil admitted trying to delay synthetic-rubber technology in order to protect its market in natural rubber.

patent-term adjustment. A compulsory extension of the time a utility or plant patent remains in force, following administrative delays in prosecuting the application. • A provision of the American Inventors’ Protection Act of 1999, the extension is available for new applications, continuation applications, and divisional applications filed since May 29, 2000. — Abbr. PTA. Cf. patent-term extension. [Cases: Patents ©-133.]

patent-term extension. A lengthening of the time a patent remains in force, given to compensate inventors for time lost because of administrative delays such as interferences, secrecy orders, or appeals. • The extension applies to original utility and plant patents issued after June 7, 1995 and before May 29, 2000. Its maximum length is five years. Cf. patent-term adjustment. [Cases: Patents ©-133.]

patent-term guarantee. An inventor’s statutory right to extend the term of a patent if the application was delayed by the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office. • The term can be extended up to five years if the application was delayed because of an interference proceeding or appellate review, or if the PTO missed a statutory deadline for certain steps in the prosecution, or failed to grant the patent within three years of the filing date. The guarantee took effect May 29, 2000. [Cases: Patents ©-133.]

patent watch. A system for continually monitoring published patent applications and newly issued patents in a particular scientific or technological field to detect or ensure against infringements.

patent writ. See writ.

pater (pay-tar), n. [Latin] Father.

paterfamilias (pay-tar-fa-mil-ee-as or pah-tar-), n. [Latin] Roman law. The male head of a family or household, the senior ascendant male; esp. one invested with potestas (power) over another. — Also termed homo sui juris. See patria potestas under potestas.

paternal, adj. (15c) Of, relating to, or coming from one’s father <paternal property>. Cf. maternal.

paternalism, n. (1873) A government’s policy or practice of taking responsibility for the individual affairs of its citizens, esp. by supplying their needs or regulating their conduct in a heavyhanded manner. — paternalistic, adj.

paternal property. See property.

patera paternis (pa-tar-na pa-tar-nis). [Law Latin] Hist. Goods acquired through the father descend to those connected with him. • The phrase invoked the distinction between the succession of consanguinean half-brothers and uterine half-brothers. Cf. materna maternis.

paternity (pa-tar-ni-tee). (15c) 1. The state or condition of being a father, esp. a biological one; fatherhood. Cf. filiation. [Cases: Children Out-of-Wedlock ©-1.]

paternity suit. (1945) A court proceeding to determine whether a person is the father of a child (esp. one born out of wedlock), usu. initiated by the mother in an effort to obtain child support. — Also termed paternity action; parentage action; bastardy proceeding; bastardy process. [Cases: Children Out-of-Wedlock ©-30.]

paternity test. (1926) A test, usu. involving DNA identification or tissue-typing, for determining whether a given man is the biological father of a particular child. See DNA IDENTIFICATION; HUMAN-LEUKOCYTE ANTIGEN TEST; BLOOD-GROUPING TEST. [Cases: Children Out-of-Wedlock ©-45, 58.]

pater patriae (pay-tor pay-tree-ee or pa-tree-ee). [Latin] Father of the country. See PARENS PATRiae.

pathology (pa-thol-a-je). (17c) The branch of medical study that examines the origins, symptoms, and nature of diseases. — pathological (path-ol-o-je-i-cal), adj. — pathologist (pa-thol-o-jist), n.

patients (pay-shee-enz), n. [Latin] A person who suffers or permits; the passive party in a transaction. Cf. AGENS (1).

patient, n. A person under medical or psychiatric care. [Cases: Health ©-576.]

patient-physician privilege. See doctor–patient privilege under privilege (3).

patient’s bill of rights. (1973) A general statement of patient rights voluntarily adopted by a healthcare provider or mandated by statute, covering such matters as access to care, patient dignity and confidentiality, personal safety, consent to treatment, and explanation of charges. [Cases: Health ⇐ 582.]

pat. pend. abbr. patent pending.

patria (pay-tree-a or pa-tree-a). n. [Latin] 1. Roman law. The fatherland; a person's home area. 2. Hist. The country or the area within it, such as a county or neighborhood. 3. Hist. A jury, as when a defendant "puts himself upon the country" (ponit se super patriam). See conclusion to the country; going to the country; pays.

"Though our Latin uses patria, our French uses pays, which descends from Latin pagus. The 'country' of this formula is not our father-land but 'the country-side.'" 2 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward 1624 n.1 (2d ed. 1899).

patriation. Canadian law. The process of transferring constitution-related legislation or documents from a former colonial power to a nation that was once a dependency of that power.

"The word 'patriation' is a Canadian neologism that describes the bringing of the Canadian Constitution to Canada. Although this may sound strange to non-Canadian readers, Canada's formal Constitution was, before 1982, to be found in a U.K. statute. Therefore, only the U.K. Parliament was competent to amend it and to formally terminate its authority over further constitutional amendments. As a U.K. statute, the Canadian Constitution had never been in Canada. Therefore, it could not be 'repatriated.' Hence the use of the word 'patriation.'" Jean-Francois Gaudreault-Deshbiens, The Quebec Secession Reference and the Judicial Arbitration of Conflicting Narratives About Law, Democracy, and Identity, 23 Vt. L. Rev. 793, 807 n.43 (1999).

patriot. abbr. U.S. adj. 1. Of or relating to the fatherland; pertaining to the fatherland or the country or the people of the fatherland. 2. PATRIOT ACT. See usa patriot act.

patron. (15c) 1. A regular customer or client of a business. 2. A licensee invited or permitted to enter leased land for the purpose for which it is leased. 3. A person who protects or supports some person or thing.

patronage. (pay-tra-nij). (16c) 1. The giving of support, sponsorship, or protection. 2. All the customers of a business; clientele. 3. The power to appoint persons to governmental positions or to confer other political favors. — Also termed (in sense 3) political patronage. See spoils system. [Cases: Officers and Public Employees ⇐ 25.]

patronizing a prostitute. (1956) The offense of requesting or securing the performance of a sex act for a fee; prostitution. Cf. solicitation (3). [Cases: Prostitution ⇐ 15, 16.]

patronus. (pa-troh-nas). n. [Latin] 1. Roman law. Someone who had manumitted a slave, and was therefore entitled to certain services from the slave. 2. ADVOWEE. Pl. patroni (pa-troh-ni).

patruus. (pa-troo-as), n. [Latin] Roman & civil law. A father's brother; a paternal uncle.

patruus magnus. (pa-troo-as mag-nas), n. [Latin] Roman & civil law. A grandfather's brother; a great-uncle.

patruus maximus. (pa-troo-as mak-sa-mas). See abpatruus.

pattern. n. (1883) A mode of behavior or series of acts that are recognizably consistent & a pattern of racial discrimination.

pattern jury charge. See model jury instruction under jury instruction.

pattern jury instruction. See model jury instruction under jury instruction.

pattern of racketeering activity. (1972) Two or more related criminal acts that amount to, or pose a threat of, continued criminal activity. * This phrase derives from the federal Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act. See racketeering. [Cases: Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations ⇐ 24, 104.]

pattern-or-practice case. A lawsuit, often a class action, in which the plaintiff attempts to show that the defendant has systematically engaged in discriminatory activities, esp. by means of policies and procedures. * Typically, such a case involves employment discrimination, housing discrimination, or school segregation. A plaintiff must usu. show that a defendant's behavior forms a pattern of actions or is embedded in routine practices but inferences of executive or official complicity may be drawn from a consistent failure to respond to complaints or implement corrective measures. [Cases: Civil Rights ⇐ 1033(1), 1074, 1139.] payable. (16c) A very poor person, esp. one who receives aid from charity or public funds; INDIGENT. See IN PERSONAM.

pay any bank. A draft indorsement that permits only banks to acquire the rights of a holder until the draft is either returned to the customer initiating collection or specially indorsed by a bank to a person who is not a bank. UCC § 4-201(b). [Cases: Banks and Banking C> 158; Bills and Notes C> 190.]

payback method. An accounting procedure that measures the time required to recover a venture's initial cash investment.

payback period. The length of time required to recover a venture's initial cash investment, without accounting for the time value of money.

paydown. (1935) A final loan payment that is usu. much larger than the preceding regular payments and that discharges the principal balance of the loan. [Cases: Payment C> 1. 2. The money or other valuable thing so delivered in satisfaction of an obligation.

advance payment. (16c) A payment made in anticipation of a contingent or fixed future liability or obligation.

balloon payment. (1935) A final loan payment that is usu. much larger than the preceding regular payments and that discharges the principal balance of the loan. See balloon note under NOTE (1).

conditional payment. (17c) Payment of an obligation only on condition that something be done. • Generally, the payor reserves the right to demand the

constructive payment. (1827) A payment made by the payor but not yet credited by the payee. For example, a rent check mailed on the first of the month is a constructive payment even though the landlord does not deposit the check until ten days later.

direct payment. (18c) 1. A payment made directly to the payee, without using an intermediary, such as a child-support payment made directly to the obligee parent rather than through the court. 2. A payment that is absolute and unconditional on the amount, the due date, and the payee.

down payment. (1926) The portion of a purchase price paid in cash (or its equivalent) at the time the sale agreement is executed. Cf. Binder (2); Earnest Money. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser \(\supseteq 69.1, 334(1)\).]

indefinite payment. 1. A stream of payments with no termination date, or a single payment with no specified due date. 2. A payment that does not specify to which debt it should be applied when it is made to a single creditor who holds several of the payor’s debts. [Cases: Payment \(\supseteq 39–46\).]

installment payment. One of a series of periodic payments made under an installment plan. See installment sale. [Cases: Sales \(\supseteq 192\).]

lump-sum payment. (1914) A payment of a large amount all at once, as opposed to a series of smaller payments over time. Cf. periodic payment.

part payment. A buyer’s delivery of money or other thing of value to the seller, and its acceptance by the seller, when the money or the value of the thing does not equal the full sum owed. [Cases: Sales \(\supseteq 202(7)\); Vendor and Purchaser \(\supseteq 184\).]

periodic payment. One of a series of payments made over time instead of a one-time payment for the full amount. Cf. lump-sum payment.

two-party payment. A single payment made by check to two people, usu. for the sum of the amount due to each person.

payment in due course. (1816) A payment to the holder of a negotiable instrument at or after its maturity date, made by the payor in good faith and without notice of any defect in the holder’s title. See holder in due course.

payment intangible. See intangible.

payment into court. (1829) A party’s money or property deposited with a court for distribution after a proceeding according to the parties’ settlement or the court’s order. See interpleader. [Cases: Deposits in Court \(\supseteq 1–12\).]

payola (pay-oh-la). (1937) An indirect and secret payment for a favor, esp. one relating to business; a bribe.

pay-on-death account. See account.

pay-on-death bank account. See pay-on-death account under account.

payor. (16c) One who pays; esp., a person responsible for paying a negotiable instrument. — Also spelled payer. See drawee; payee.

payor bank. See bank.

pay-or-play contract. See contract.

payout period. The time required for an asset to produce enough revenue to pay back the initial investment; esp., in oil-and-gas law, the time required for a well to produce a sufficient amount of oil or gas to pay back the investment in the well.

payout ratio. The ratio between a corporation’s dividends per share and its earnings per share. Cf. common-stock ratio.

payroll. 1. A list of employees to be paid and the amount due to each of them. 2. The total compensation payable to a company’s employees for one pay period.

payroll tax. See tax.

pays (pay or pays), n. [Law French] The country; a jury. See patria.

pay-when-paid clause. See clause.

PBGC. abbr. PENSION BENEFIT GUARANTY CORPORATION.

PBS. abbr. 1. PUBLIC BUILDINGS SERVICE. 2. Public Broadcasting Service.

P.C. abbr. 1. See professional corporation under corporation. 2. POLITICAL CORRECTNESS. 3. PRIVY COUNCILLOR.

PCT application. See international application under patent application.

PCT filing. See international application under patent application.

PCT filing date. Patents. The date of an international application under the Patent Cooperation Treaty. — Also termed international filing date. See patent cooperation treaty; pct filing.

P.D. abbr. 1. PUBLIC DEFENDER. 2. Police department.

PDA. See pregnancy-discrimination act.

peace, n. 1. A state of public tranquility; freedom from civil disturbance or hostility <breach of the peace>. 2. The termination or absence of armed conflict between nations. See peace treaty under treaty. — peaceable, adj. — peaceful, adj.

armed peace. A situation in which two or more nations, while at peace, are actually armed for possible or probable hostilities.

peace, justice of the. See justice of the peace.

peace bond. See bond (2).

Peace Corps. An independent federal agency that promotes peace and friendship in the world by sending volunteers to other countries to work in education, agriculture, health, small-business development, urban development, the environment, and information technology. The agency was established by the Peace Corps Act of 1961 and became independent in 1988.

pecuniary benefit. See special benefit under benefit.

peculiar benefit. See special benefit under benefit.

peculiar-risk doctrine. (1958) The principle that an employer will be liable for injury caused by an independent contractor if the employer failed to take reasonable precautions against a risk that is peculiar to the contractor's work and that the employer should have recognized. — Also termed peculiar-risk exception. [Cases: Labor and Employment $= 3156.]

pecuniary loss. See loss.
pedis positio [Latin "placement of the foot"] Hist. A putting or placing of the foot. • This term denoted possession of land by actual entry.

[Latin "possession-of-a-foot doctrine"] The principle that a prospector working on land in the public domain is entitled to freedom from fraudulent or forcible intrusions while actually working on the site. [Cases: Mines and Minerals C=> 27(1).]

[Latin "the placement of the foot"] Hist. A putting or placing of the foot. • This term denoted possession of land by actual entry.

[Latin "possession of a foot doctrine"] The principle that a prospector working on land in the public domain is entitled to freedom from fraudulent or forcible intrusions while actually working on the site. [Cases: Mines and Minerals C=> 27(1).]

One who engages in pedophilia.

pedophilia
(1906) 1. A sexual disorder consisting in the desire for sexual gratification by molesting children, esp. prepubescent children. 2. An adult's act of child molestation. • Pedophilia can but does not necessarily involve intercourse. The American Psychiatric Association applies both senses to perpetrators who are at least 16 years old and at least five years older than their victims. Cf. pederasty.

Peeping Tom
(18c) A person who spies on another (as through a window), usu. for sexual pleasure; voyeur. — Also termed peeper. [Cases: Disorderly Conduct C=> 123.]

peer, n.
1. A person who is of equal status, rank, or character with another.

2. A member of the British nobility (such as a duchess, marquis, earl, viscount, or baroness). — peerage (peer-ij), n.

"The Crown has power to create any number of peers and of any degree. In modern practice the power is exercised on the advice of the Prime Minister and the honour is most commonly a reward for political services. Peerages can be, and have been, conferred for party political reasons; 12 were created in 1712 to save the government, and 16 to help pass the Reform Bill in 1832. In 1832 and 1911 the Opposition of the House of Lords was overcome by the threat to create enough peers to secure a majority. . . . The main privilege of a peer is to sit and vote in the House of Lords." — David M. Walker, The Oxford Companion to Law 942 (1980).

(1980) A publication whose practice is to forward submitted articles to disinterested experts who screen them for scholarly or scientific reliability so that articles actually published have already withstood expert scrutiny and comment.

peer-review organization (1978) A governmental agency that monitors health-regulation compliance by private hospitals requesting public funds (such as Medicare payments). — Abbr. PRO. [Cases: Health C=> 270.]

See privilege (3).

Hist. Vassals or tenants of the same lord who judged disputes arising out of fees.

peine forte et dure [pen for tay door or payn fort av dyoor]. [French "strong and hard punishment"] Hist. The punishment of an alleged felon who refused to plead, consisting of pressing or crushing the person's body under heavy weights until the accused either pleaded or died.

"In all other felonies, however, the punishment of peine forte et dure was, until lately, denounced as the consequence of an obstinate silence. The greatest caution and deliberation were indeed to be exercised before it was resorted to; and the prisoner was not only to have 'trino admonitio,' but a respite of a few hours, and the sentence was to be distinctly read to him, that he might be fully aware of the penalty he was incurring." — Joseph Chitty, A Practical Treatise on the Criminal Law 425-26 (2d ed. 1826).

"In old English law, a person charged with felony who, refusing to accept jury trial, was pressed to death (peine forte et dure), was not regarded as committing suicide, so that he did not forfeit his property." — Glenn Williams, The Sanctity of Life and the Criminal Law 270 n.4 (1957).

See clerks of the pells.

adj. (15c) Of, relating to, or being a penalty or punishment, esp. for a crime.

"The general rule is that penal statutes are to be construed strictly. By the word 'penal' in this connection is meant not only such statutes as in terms impose a fine, or corporal punishment, or forfeiture as a consequence of violating laws, but also all acts which impose by way of punishment damages beyond compensation for the benefit of the injured party, or which impose any special burden, or take away or impair any privilege or right." — William M. Lile et al., Brief Making and the Use of Law Books 344 (3d ed. 1914).

penal action. See action (4).

penal bond. See bond (2).

penal clause. See penalty clause.

penal code. (18c) A compilation of criminal laws, usu. defining and categorizing the offenses and setting forth their respective punishments. — Also termed criminal code. See model penal code.

penal colony. A remote place of detention for convicts and political prisoners, usu. in an isolated part of a nation or in a nation's extraterritorial holdings. — Historical examples include the Soviet Union's gulags in Siberia and France's penal colony on Devil's Island off the coast of Guiana.

penal institution. See prison.

penal law. 1. See penal statute under statute. 2. See criminal law.

penal liability. See liability.

penal redress. See redress.

penal sanction. See criminal sanction under sanction.

penal statute. See statute.

penal sum. (17c) The monetary amount specified as a penalty in a penal bond. See penal bond under bond (2).

penalty. (15c) 1. Punishment imposed on a wrongdoer, usu. in the form of imprisonment or fine; esp., a sum of money exacted as punishment for either a wrong to the state or a civil wrong (as distinguished from compensation for the injured party's loss). — Though usu. for crimes, penalties are also sometimes imposed for civil wrongs. [Cases: Penalties ⊑ 1.]

civil penalty. (17c) A fine assessed for a violation of a statute or regulation (the EPA levied a civil penalty of $10,000 on the manufacturer for exceeding its pollution limits).

statutory penalty. (18c) A penalty imposed for a statutory violation; esp., a penalty imposing automatic liability on a wrongdoer for violation of a statute's terms without reference to any actual damages suffered. [Cases: Penalties ⊑ 1.]

2. An extra charge against a party who violates a contractual provision.

prepayment penalty. (1948) A charge assessed against a borrower who elects to pay off a loan before it is due. [Cases: Bills and Notes ⊑ 429; Mortgages ⊑ 298(1); Usury ⊑ 61.]

3. Excessive stipulated damages that a contract purports to impose on a party that breaches. — If the damages are excessive enough to be considered a penalty, a court will usu. not enforce that particular provision of the contract. Some contracts specify that a given sum of damages is intended "as liquidated damages and not as a penalty" — but even that language is not foolproof. [Cases: Damages ⊑ 80.]

penalty clause. (1843) A contractual provision that assesses against a defaulting party an excessive monetary charge unrelated to actual harm. — Penalty clauses are generally unenforceable. — Often shortened to penalty. — Also termed penal clause. Cf. liquidated-damages clause; limitation-of-remedies clause. [Cases: Damages ⊑ 76, 80.]

It not infrequently happens that contracts provide for what is to happen in the event of a breach by the parties, or by one of them. Such provisions may be perfectly simple attempts to avoid future disputes, and to quantify the probable amount of any loss. That is objectionable. But sometimes clauses of this kind are not designed to quantify the amount of the probable loss, but are designed to terrify, or frighten, the party into performance. For example, a contract may provide that the promise is to pay $5 on a certain event, but if he fails to do so, he must then pay $500. Now a clause of that kind is called a penalty clause by lawyers, and for several hundred years it has been the law that such promises cannot be enforced. The standard justification for the law here is that it is unfair and unconscionable to enforce clauses which are designed to act in terrorem." — P.S. Atiyah, Promises, Morals, and Law 57-58 (1981).

penalty phase. (1959) The part of a criminal trial in which the fact-finder determines the punishment for a defendant who has been found guilty. — Also termed sentencing phase. Cf. guilt phase. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment ⊑ 325, 1774.]

penalty point. A punishment levied for a traffic offense and accumulated on the driver's record. — If a driver receives a statutorily set number of points, the driver's license may be restricted, suspended, or terminated. [Cases: Automobiles ⊑ 144, 13.]

penance. Eccles. law. A punishment assessed by an ecclesiastical court for some spiritual offense.

pend, vb. (18c) (Of a lawsuit) to be awaiting decision or settlement.

pendency (pen-dan-see), n. (17c) The state or condition of being pending or continuing undecided.

pendens. See lis pendens.

pendent (pen-dant), adj. (18c) 1. Not yet decided; pending . 2. Of or relating to pendent jurisdiction or pendent-party jurisdiction.

pendentes fructus (pen-den-teez [frak-tas]). [Latin] Hist. Hanging fruits. • These fruits — as distinguished from fruits that have been gathered — must be restored to a real owner who defeats the claims of a bona fide possessor. — Sometimes shortened to pendentes.

pendent jurisdiction. See JURISDICTION.

pendent-party jurisdiction. See JURISDICTION.

pendent-venue doctrine. The principle that once venue is established for a federal claim, proof of venue for additional federal claims, cross-claims, and counterclaims is unnecessary. [Cases: Federal Courts 1â–14.] 3. Contingent; dependent <pendent upon a different claim>.

pendent-claim jurisdiction. See pendent jurisdiction under JURISDICTION.

pendente lite (pen-den-tee li-tee), adv. [Latin “while the action is pending”] During the proceeding or litigation; in a manner contingent on the outcome of litigation. — Also termed lite pendente. Cf. lis pendens.

pendente lite administration. See administration pendente lite under ADMINISTRATION.

pending-ordinance doctrine. The principle that a municipality may properly deny an application for a property use that, although it would satisfy existing law, would violate a law that is pending when the application is made. • This doctrine was judicially created, mainly to short-circuit landowners’ attempts to circumvent a new ordinance by applying for a nonconforming use on the eve of its approval. [Cases: Zoning and Planning 1â–376.]

penetration, n. 1. Criminal law. The entry of the penis or some other part of the body or a foreign object into the vagina or other bodily orifice. • This is the typical meaning today in statutes defining sexual offenses. — Also termed intromission. See RAPE (1). [Cases: Rape 1â–7.] 2. The depth reached by a bullet or other projectile in something against which the projectile is fired. 3. The act of piercing or passing something into or through a body or object. — penetrate, vb.

penetration pricing. Pricing of a new product below its anticipated market price to enter a market and capture market share by breaking down existing brand loyalties.

penitentiary (pen-a-ten-sha-ree), n. (1807) A correctional facility or other place of long-term confinement for convicted criminals; PRISON. [Cases: Prisons 1â–213.] — penitentiary, adj.

penitentiary misdemeanor. See serious misdemeanor under MISDEMEANOR.

Pennoyer rule (pa-noY-ar). (1968) The principle that a court may not issue a personal judgment against a defendant over whom it has no personal jurisdiction. Pennoyer v. Neff, 95 U.S. 714 (1877). [Cases: Judgment 1â–16.]

Pennsylvania rule. Torts. The principle that a tortfeasor who violates a statute in the process of causing an injury has the burden of showing that the violation did not cause the injury. The Pennsylvania, 86 U.S. (19 Wall.) 125, 136 (1874). [Cases: Collision 1â–123; Shipping 1â–86(2,3).]

penology (pee-nol-9-je), n. (1838) The study of penal institutions, crime prevention, and the punishment and rehabilitation of criminals, including the art of fitting the right treatment to an offender. Cf. CRIMINOLOGY. — penological (pee-no-loj-i-kal), adj. — penologist (pee-nol-9-jist), n.

pen register. (1953) A mechanical device that logs dialed telephone numbers by monitoring electrical impulses. • Because a pen register does not record the telephone conversation, it may not constitute a Fourth Amendment search requiring a search warrant (though it does need a court order). Some states, however, do consider the use of a pen register invasive enough to require a search warrant. Cf. wiretapping. [Cases: Telecommunications 1â–1465] pension (pen-shee-oh), n. [Latin] Roman & civil law. A payment for the use of a thing, such as rent for the use of another’s house.

pension. (16c) A fixed sum paid regularly to a person (or to the person’s beneficiaries), esp. by an employer as a retirement benefit. Cf. ANNUITY (3). [Cases: Labor and Employment 1â–419.]

vested pension. A pension in which an employee (or employee’s estate) has rights to benefits purchased with the employer’s contributions to the plan, even if the employee is no longer employed by this employer at the time of retirement. • The vesting of qualified pension plans is governed by ERISA. See EMPLOYEE RETIREMENT INCOME SECURITY ACT. [Cases: Labor and Employment 1â–548.] Pension and Welfare Benefits Administration. A unit in the U.S. Department of Labor that was responsible for regulating employee pension plans under the Employees Retirement Income Security Act (ERISA) and for enforcing the Act through its field offices. It has been replaced by the Employee Benefits Security Administration. — Abbr. PWBA. [Cases: Labor and Employment C=408.]

ggioner. A recipient or beneficiary of a pension plan. [Cases: Labor and Employment C=534.]

Pension plan. 1. Under ERISA, any plan, fund, or program established or maintained by an employer or an employee organization that provides retirement income to employees or results in a deferral of income by employees extending to the termination of employment or beyond. 29 USCA § 1002(2)(A). [Cases: Labor and Employment C=419.] 2. Under the Internal Revenue Code, an employer's plan established and maintained primarily to provide systematically for the payment of definitely determinable benefits to employees over a period of years, usu. for life, after retirement. See Employee Retirement Income Security Act. Cf. Employee Benefit Plan.

contributory pension plan. A pension plan funded by both employer and employee contributions. [Cases: Labor and Employment C=422.] defined-benefit pension plan. A pension plan in which an employer commits to paying an employee a specific benefit for life beginning at retirement. The amount of the benefit is based on factors such as age, earnings, and years of service. [Cases: Labor and Employment C=422.]

defined-contribution pension plan. See defined-contribution plan under Employee Benefit Plan.

defined pension plan. A pension plan in which the employer promises specific benefits to each employee. Also termed fixed-benefit plan. [Cases: Labor and Employment C=422.]

noncontributory pension plan. A pension plan funded solely by the employer's contributions. [Cases: Labor and Employment C=419.]

nonqualified pension plan. A deferred-compensation plan in which an executive increases retirement benefits by annual additional contributions to the company's basic plan. [Cases: Labor and Employment C=430.]

qualified pension plan. A pension plan that complies with federal law (ERISA) and thus allows the employee to receive tax benefits for contributions and tax-deferred investment growth. Often shortened to qualified plan. [Cases: Labor and Employment C=419, 430.]

top-hat pension plan. An unfunded pension plan that is maintained by an employer primarily for the purpose of providing deferred compensation for a select group of managers or highly paid employees. The top-hat plans are generally not subject to the broad remedial provisions of ERISA because Congress recognized that certain individuals, by virtue of position or compensation level, can substantially influence the design or operation of their deferred-compensation plans. Often shortened to top-hat plan. [Cases: Labor and Employment C=432.] pension trust. See Trust.

Pentagon Force Protection Agency. A unit in the U.S. Department of Defense responsible for operating the Pentagon police force and providing basic law enforcement and security for the Pentagon and other military installations in the Washington, D.C. area. The Agency was formed after the Pentagon was attacked on 11 September 2001. — Abbr. PFPA.

penumbra (pi-nam-bra), n. (18c) A surrounding area or periphery of uncertain extent. In constitutional law, the Supreme Court has ruled that the specific guarantees in the Bill of Rights have penumbras containing implied rights, esp. the right of privacy. Pl. penumbrae (pi-nam-bray). — penumbral (pi-nam-bral), adj.

"Problems of fringe meaning are sometimes spoken of as 'problems of the penumbra,' the point being that, in the case of a great many words, there is no doubt about the hard core of their meanings, but different views may well be taken on the question whether the words are applicable to things or situations outside that hard core." — Rupert Cross, Statutory Interpretation 57 (1976).

"The disqualifications formerly attaching to witnesses, and especially that of relationship, were sometimes disregarded in occult or private facts, where there must, from the nature of the case, be a scarcity of unexceptionable witnesses. It was not enough in this sense, to constitute a penumbra testium, to prove that the other evidence was scanty and defective; it had to be shown farther that the penumbra was necessarily occasioned by the very nature of the question at issue." — William Bell, Bell's Dictionary and Digest of the Law of Scotland 798 (George Watson ed., 7th ed. 1890).

peonage (pee-a-nij), n. (1844) Illegal and involuntary servitude in satisfaction of a debt. [Cases: Slaves C=24.] — peon, n.

"Peonage, which is a term descriptive of a condition that existed in Spanish America, and especially in Mexico, and in the territory of New Mexico, and which may be defined as the status or condition of compulsory service based upon the indebtedness of the peon to the master, the basic fact being the indebtedness, is abolished and prohibited by an act of Congress which further declares that any statute, resolution, regulation, ordinance, or usage of any territory or state designed or operating to establish, maintain, or enforce, directly or indirectly, the voluntary or involuntary people. (usu. cap.) (1801) The citizens of a state as represented by the prosecution in a criminal case <People v. Snyder>.

people's court. (1912) 1. A court in which individuals can resolve small disputes. See small-claims court under court: [Cases: Courts ◄ 174.] 2. Hist. (cap.) In Nazi Germany, a tribunal that dealt with political offenses. • In German, Volksgerichtshof.

people-smuggling. The crime of helping a person enter a country illegally in return for a fee. Cf. human trafficking under trafficking; smuggling.

peppercorn. A small or insignificant thing or amount; nominal consideration <the contract was upheld despite involving mere peppercorn>. See nominal consideration under consideration; peppercorn rent under rent. [Cases: Contracts ◄ 54.]

per (par), prep. [Latin] (14c) 1. Through; by <the dissent, per Justice Thomas>. 2. For each; for every <55 miles per hour>. 3. In accordance with the terms of; according to <per the contract>.

per aes et libram (par ees et li-bram). [Latin] Roman law. By bronze (or copper) and scales. • The phrase typically referred to the fictitious sale in a mancipation during which the purchaser struck the scales with a piece of bronze or copper and then gave it to the seller as a symbol of the price. See mancipation.

per alium stetit (par ay-ee-am stet-it). [Latin] Hist. It was owing to (something done by) another.

perambulation. The act or custom of walking around the boundaries of a piece of land, either to confirm the boundaries or to preserve evidence of them.

perambulatione facienda. See de perambulatione facienda.

per annum (par an-am), adv. [Latin] (16c) By, for, or in each year; annually <interest of eight percent per annum>.

P/E ratio. abbr. PRICE-EARNINGS RATIO.

per autre vie. See pur autre vie.

per aversionem (par a-var-zhee-oh-nom). [Latin "for a lump sum"] Roman & civil law. Of or relating to a sale in which goods are taken in bulk or land is bought by estimation of the number of acres. • This type of sale is so called because the buyer "turns away" from a careful scrutiny of the things purchased.

peripient witness. See witness.

percolating water. See water.

per collationem bonorum (par ka-lay-shoo-nam ba-nor-am). [Latin] Scots law. By bringing goods received into account (collation). • When heirs-at-law, or heirs who had received from a deceased ancestor during the ancestor's lifetime, wished to share in the legitim fund, they had to bring in (to collate) what they had received before the legitim could be shared out. See collation (2).

per consequens (par kon-se-kwens). [Latin] By consequence; consequently.

per considerationem curiae (par kon-sid-ray-shoo-nam kyoor-ee-ee). [Law Latin] By the consideration of the court.

per contra (par kon-tra). [Latin] (16c) On the other hand; to the contrary; by contrast.

per cur. abbr. Per curiam. See per curiam opinion under opinion (1).

per curiam (par kyoor-ee-am), adv. & adj. [Latin] (15c) By the court as a whole. [Cases: Courts C=107.]

per curiam, n. See per curiam opinion under opinion (1).

per curiam opinion. See opinion (1).

die (par dt-am or de-am), adv. [Latin] (15c) By the day; for each day. Cf. in die.

diems, adj. (18c) Based on or calculated by the day <per diem interest>.

diem, n. (1812) 1. A monetary daily allowance, usu. to cover expenses. 2. A daily fee.

perdonatio utlagariae (par-do-nay-shoo-oh-at-la-gair-ee-ee). [Law Latin “pardon of outlawry”] Hist. A pardon given to a person outlawed for failing to obey a court's summons. • A person who voluntarily surrendered was eligible for this type of pardon.

perduellio (par-dyllo-eh-oh), n. [Latin “treason”] Roman law. The crime of hostility to one's native country; treasonous conduct, such as joining the enemy or deserting the battlefield. • This term corresponds to the English phrase high treason. In the Roman republic, several acts might constitute perduellio, such as assuming regal power; trying to subvert, by violence, the established form of government, esp. by fomenting internal rebellion; and promoting the designs of external foes. Perduellio was later absorbed into a broader category of crimes against the state, the crimen laesae majestatis. — Also termed (in English) perduellion (par-dyllo-eh-ylun). See crimen majestatis.

perdurable (par-dyluwr-bal), adj. (15c) (Of an estate in land) lasting or enduring; durable; permanent.

peregrinus (par-i-gru-nus), n. Roman law. A free person who was not a Roman citizen; a free foreigner. Pl. peregrini.

perempt (par-empt), vb. 1. Civil law. To quash, do away with, or extinguish. 2. Slang. To exercise a peremptory challenge.

peremption (par-emp-shan), n. Civil law. A period of time fixed by statute for the existence of a right. • If the right is not exercised during this period, it is extinguished. Whereas prescription simply bars a specific remedy, peremption bars the action itself. Cf. prescription (1). See statute of repose. [Cases: Limitation of Actions C=1-165.]

peremptoria litis et causae (par-emp-tor-e-oh-tee-tee-see-ee). [Law Latin] Hist. Decisive of the suit and cause. • The phrase appeared in reference to peremptory defenses, to which there could be no reply.

peremptory (par-emp-teh-ree), adj. (15c) 1. Final; absolute; conclusive; incontrovertible <the king’s peremptory order>. 2. Not requiring any shown cause; arbitrary <peremptory challenges>.

peremptory, n. See peremptory challenge under challenge (2). peremptory challenge. See challenge (2).

peremptory day. See day.

peremptory defense. See defense (1).

peremptory exception. See exception (1).

peremptory instruction. See jury instruction.

peremptory mandamus. See mandamus.

peremptory norm. See jus cogens (2).

peremptory plea. See plea (3).

per eundem (par ee-dee-am), [Latin] By the same. • This term often appears in the phrase per eundem in cadaem (“by the same judge in the same case”).

per expressum (par ek-pres-am), [Latin] Hist. Expressly; explicitly.

per fas aut nefas (par fas awt nee-fas), [Latin] Hist. By lawful or unlawful means.

perfect (par-fekt), vb. (14c) To take all legal steps needed to complete, secure, or record (a claim, right, or interest); to provide necessary public notice in final conformity with the law <perfect a security interest> <perfect the title>. [Cases: Secured Transactions C=81.]

perfect attestation clause. (1875) A testamentary provision asserting that all actions required to make a valid testamentary disposition have been performed. [Cases: Wills C=113, 289, 302(5).]

perfect defense. See defense (1).
perfect duty. See DUTY (1). perfected security interest. See SECURITY INTEREST. perfect equity. See EQUITY. perfect grant. See GRANT.
perfecting amendment. See AMENDMENT (3). perfect instrument. See INSTRUMENT (3). perfection. Validation of a security interest as against other creditors, usu. by filing a statement with some public office or by taking possession of the collateral. Cf. ATTACHMENT (4). [Cases: Secured Transactions C::='83, 138–145.]

automatic perfection. The self-operative perfection of a purchase-money security interest without filing or without possession of the collateral. • The security interest is perfected simply by the attachment of the security interest, without any additional steps. See purchase-money security interest under SECURITY INTEREST. [Cases: Secured Transactions C::='83, 146.]

temporary perfection. The continuous perfection of a security interest for a limited period. • For example, a security interest in proceeds from the original collateral is perfected for ten days after the debtor receives the proceeds; the interest will become unperfected after this ten-day period unless certain statutory requirements are met. On most instruments, a secured party who advances new value under a written security agreement obtains a 21-day perfection period, even if the secured party does not file a financing statement and the collateral remains with the debtor. UCC § 9-304(4). [Cases: Secured Transactions C::='83, 146.]

perfect ownership. See OWNERSHIP.
perfect tender. See TENDER (3).

perfect-tender rule. (1970) Commercial law. The principle that a buyer may reject a seller's goods if the quality, quantity, or delivery of the goods fails to conform precisely to the contract. • Although the perfect-tender rule was adopted by the UCC (§ 2-601), other Code provisions — such as the seller's right to cure after rejection — have softened the rule's impact. Cf. substantial-performance doctrine. [Cases: Sales C::='95, 177.]

"At common law, a buyer of goods possessed a legal right to insist upon 'perfect tender' by the seller. If the goods failed to conform exactly to the description in the contract — whether as to quality, quantity or manner of delivery — the buyer could reject the goods and rescind the contract, which meant that the parties would be returned to the positions they occupied before the contract was entered into." Marvin A. Chirelstein, Concepts and Case Analysis in the Law of Contracts 112 (1990).

perfect trial. See TRIAL.

perfect usufruct. See USUFRUCT.
perfect war. See WAR.

perficere suscepturn munus (par-fis-ar-ee sa-sep-tam myoo-nya). [Latin] Scots law. To perform the duties of an office undertaken. • One assuming an office could not then capriciously resign from the office. See REBUS INTEGRIS.

perfidy (par-fa-dee). Int'l law. A combatant's conduct that creates the impression that an adversary is entitled to, or is obliged to accord, protection under international law, when in fact the conduct is a ruse to gain an advantage. • Acts of perfidy include feigning an intent to negotiate under a flag of truce, or feigning a protected status by using signs, emblems, or uniforms of the United Nations or of a neutral country.

per formam doni (par for-mam doh-nt). [Law Latin] By the form of the gift; by the designation of the giver rather than by operation of law.

performance, n. (16c) 1. The successful completion of a contractual duty, usu. resulting in the performer's release from any past or future liability; execution (2). — Also termed full performance. Cf. nonperformance; misperformance. [Cases: Contracts C::='275.]

defective performance. (1832) A performance that, whether partial or full, does not wholly comply with the contract. • One example is late performance. [Cases: Contracts C::='280(1), 302.]

future performance. (17e) Performance in the future of an obligation that will become due under a contract.

misperformance. See MISPERFORMANCE. nonperformance. See NONPERFORMANCE.

part performance. (18c) 1. The accomplishment of some but not all of one's contractual obligations. [Cases: Contracts C::='319.]. 2. A party's execution, in reliance on an opposing party's oral promise, of enough of an oral contract's requirements that a court may hold the statute of frauds not to apply. [Cases: Frauds, Statute of C::='129.]. 3. PART-PERFORMANCE DOCTRINE.

specific performance. See SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE.

substantial performance. (18c) Performance of the primary, necessary terms of an agreement. See SUBSTANTIAL-PERFORMANCE DOCTRINE. [Cases: Contracts C::='293.]

vicarious performance. Performance carried by an employee, agent, or other nominee.

"It is necessary . . . to distinguish between assignment of a contractual liability and vicarious performance of a contract. Normally a person who contracts to do something must do it himself. But in the case of a duty of performance which involves no personal element, so that it does not matter to the other party who does the promised act, so long as it is done in accordance with the contract, the party liable may do it by a servant or agent or other nominee. This is not an assignment of the contractual liability, for the original contractor remains liable and if the deputy has done the work badly it is not the deputy but the contractor himself who is answerable to the other party.” 2 Stephen’s Commentaries on the Laws of England 76–77 (L. Crispin Warrington ed., 21st ed. 1950).

2. The equitable doctrine by which acts consistent with an intention to fulfill an obligation are construed to be in fulfillment of that obligation, even if the party was silent on the point. 3. A company’s earnings. 4. The ability of a corporation to maintain or increase earnings.

performance bond. 1. A bond given by a surety to ensure the timely performance of a contract. • In major international agreements, performance bonds are typically issued by banks, but sometimes also by insurance companies. The face amount of the bond is typically 2% of the value of performance, but occasionally as much as 5%. [Cases: Principal and Surety C=59-87; Public Contracts C=45.] 2. A third party’s agreement to guarantee the completion of a construction contract upon the default of the general contractor. — Also termed completion bond; surety bond; contract bond. Cf. common-law bond under bond (2). [Cases: Principal and Surety C=82.]

nonoperative performance bond. A performance bond that is not currently in effect but is activated upon the issuance of the buyer’s letter of credit or other approved financing.

operative performance bond. A performance bond that has been activated by the issuance of the buyer’s letter of credit or other approved financing. [Cases: Public Contracts C=45.]

revolving performance bond. A performance bond that is in effect on a continuing basis for the duration of the contract, usu. plus an additional number of days (often 45).

up-front performance bond. A performance bond given before the issuance of the buyer’s letter of credit or other financing.

performance bonus. See bonus.

performance fund. See mutual fund.

performance plan. A bonus compensation plan in which executives are paid according to the company’s growth.

performance right. A copyright holder’s exclusive right to recite, play, act, show, or otherwise render the protected work publicly, whether directly or by technological means (as by broadcasting the work on television). • Every public performance of a copyrighted work requires authorization from the copyright owner or its representative, unless a statutory ephemeral-recording exemption applies. — Also termed public-performance right. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property C=36.]

performance shares. Stock given to an executive when the corporation meets a performance objective.

performance specification. See statement of work.

performance stock. See glamour stock under stock.

per fraudem (par fraud-dam.), adv. [Latin] By fraud; fraudulently.

periculo petentis (pa-rik-yo-loh po-ten-tis), [Latin] Hist. At the risk of the person seeking. • A private person was liable in damages for a judicial warrant wrongfully issued at that person’s insistence.

“[A] creditor seeking a warrant for the apprehension of his debtor as in meditationes fugae, obtains it periculo petentis, and he, not the judge, will be liable in damages if the debtor can show that the obtaining of the warrant and the using of it were illegal.” John Trayner, Trayner’s Latin Maxims 454 (4th ed. 1894).

periculosus (par-ik-yo-loh-sos), adj. [Latin] Dangerous; perilous.

peril. (13c) 1. Exposure to the risk of injury, damage, or loss <the perils of litigation>.

inescapable peril. (1933) A danger that one cannot avoid without another’s help. See last-clear-chance doctrine. [Cases: Negligence C=530(1).]

2. Insurance. The cause of a risk of loss to person or property; esp., the cause of a risk such as fire, accident, theft, forgery, earthquake, flood, or illness <insured against all perils>. Cf. risk (3). [Cases: Insurance C=2140, 2219.]

peril of the sea. An action of the elements at sea of such force as to overcome the strength of a well-founded ship and the normal precautions of good marine practice.

• A peril of the sea may relieve a carrier from liability for the resulting losses. — Also termed danger of navigation; danger of river; marine peril; marine risk; (in regard to the Great Lakes) perils of the lakes; danger of the sea. [Cases: Insurance C=2220; Shipping C=120.]

"Of the marine perils, by far the most important are those ‘of the seas’. What is covered is not any loss that may happen on the sea, but fortuitous losses occurring through extraordinary action of the elements at sea, or any accident or mishap in navigation. By far the greatest number of claims for marine loss, and of the insurance problems connected with other topics treated in this book arise under this clause. Extraordinary action of the wind and waves is a sea peril. Collision, foundering, stranding, striking on rocks and icebergs, are all covered under these words. Even a swell from a passing ship may be a ‘peril of the sea’. On the other hand, ordinary wear and tear are not included under the coverage of this or any other phrase in the clause, nor are losses which are anticipatable as regular incidents of sea carriage in general or of navigation in a particular part of the world.” Grant Gilmore & Charles L. Black Jr., The Law of Admiralty § 2-9, at 72–73 (2d ed. 1975).

perimere causam (po-ri-mree kaw-zam). [Latin] Hist. To put an end to the cause. • The phrase appeared in reference to the legal effect of a peremptory defense. See peremptory defense under defense (1). perinatal (per-i-nay-tl), adj. Of or relating to the period from about the 12th week of gestation through the 28th day of life. Cf. NEONATAL.

per incuriam (per-in-k-yoor-ee-am), adj. (Of a judicial decision) wrongly decided, usu. because the judge or judges were ill-informed about the applicable law.

"There is at least one exception to the rule of stare decisis I refer to judgments rendered per incuriam. A judgment per incuriam is one which has been rendered inadvertently. Two examples come to mind: first, where the judge has forgotten to take account of a previous decision to which the doctrine of stare decisis applies. For all the care with which attorneys and judges may com the case law, errare humanum est, and sometimes a judgment which clarifies a point to be settled is somehow not indexed, and is forgotten. It is in cases such as these that a judgment rendered in contradiction to a previous judgment that should have been considered binding, and in ignorance of that judgment, with no mention of it, must be deemed rendered per incuriam; thus, it has no authority. . . . The same applies to judgments rendered in ignorance of legislation of which they should have taken account. For a judgment to be deemed per incuriam, that judgment must show that the legislation was not invoked. Louis-Philippe Pigeon, Drafting and Interpreting Legislation 60 (1998).

"As a general rule the only cases in which decisions should be held to have been given per incuriam are those of decisions given in ignorance or forgetfulness of some inconsistent statutory provision or of some authority binding on the court concerned, so that in such cases some features of the decision or some step in the reasoning on which it is based is found on that account to be demonstrably wrong. This definition is not necessarily exhaustive, but cases not strictly within it which can properly be held to have been decided per incuriam, must in our judgment, consistently with the stare decisis rule which is an essential part of our law, be of the rarest occurrence." Rupert Cross & J.W. Harris, Precedent in English Law 149 (4th ed. 1991).

perinde est ac si scriptum non esset (par-in-dee est ak si skrip-tom non es-et). [Latin] Scots law. It is the same as if it had not been written. • A deed that failed to convey the grantor's meaning adequately could not be supplemented by extrinsic evidence and would be void for uncertainty.

per in fortunum (par-in-for-t[y]oo-nee-am), adj. or adv. [Latin] By misadventure. • At common law, when one person killed another per in fortunum, a conviction and royal pardon were necessary even when there was no fault. See homicide per in fortunum under HOMICIDE.

"It may seem strange to modern minds that for centuries it was a rule of our law that a man who killed another either by misadventure (per in fortunum) or in reasonable self-defense (against an attack not itself felonious), although he did not commit a felony, must yet be held guilty of unlawful homicide and require the King's pardon if he were to escape punishment, and even if granted pardon would still be liable to suffer forfeiture of his property, and that he was exposed to claims for compensation from the family of the deceased. "J.W. Cecil Turner, Kenny's Outlines of Criminal Law 113 (16th ed. 1952).

(14c) The act or an instance of a person's deliberately making material false or misleading statements while under oath. • Also termed false swearing; false oath; (archaically) forswearing. [Cases: Perjury C=-1-12.] — perjure (par-jor), vb. — perjured (par-jord), perjurious (par juur-ee-as), adj. — perjuror (par-jor-ar), n.

perjury-trap doctrine. (1898) The principle that a perjury indictment against a person must be dismissed if the prosecution secures it by calling that person as a grand-jury witness in an effort to obtain evidence for a perjury charge, esp. when the person's testimony does not relate to issues material to the grand-jury's ongoing investigation. [Cases: Perjury C=-10, 15.]

per legem terrae (par lee-jem ter-ee). [Law Latin] By the law of the land; by due process of law.

Perlman doctrine. The principle that a discovery order directed at a disinterested third party is immediately appealable on the theory that the third party will not risk contempt by refusing to comply. • The doctrine originated in Perlman v. United States, 247 U.S. 7, 13, 38 S.Ct. 417, 420 (1918). The Court reasoned that the third party's ability to protect his or her rights would be thwarted if the party could not appeal immediately. [Cases: Criminal Law C=-1023(3), Federal Courts C=-574.]

permanency plan. A proposed written strategy for the eventual permanent placement of a child who has been removed from his or her parents. • A permanency plan, ideally, provides either for the child's safe return to one or both parents or for the child's adoption. If neither of these alternatives is possible, then the plan will provide for long-term foster care, relative care, or guardianship. Under the Adoption and Safe Families Act, long-term foster care is the choice of last resort. • Also termed permanent plan. [Cases: Infants C=-222, 226.]

permissive subject of bargaining. Labor law. An employment or collective-bargaining issue, other than a basic employment issue, that is not required to be the subject of collective bargaining but that cannot be implemented by management without union approval.
- For example, altering the scope of the bargaining unit does not affect a term or condition of employment, so it is a permissive, instead of mandatory, subject of bargaining. Disagreement on a permissive subject of bargaining cannot be used as the basis for an impasse in negotiating a collective-bargaining agreement, unlike a mandatory subject of bargaining. — Often shortened to permissive subject. Cf. MANDATORY SUBJECT OF BARGAINING. [Cases: Labor and Employment C=1126.]

perpetuity (par-pa-t(y)oo-a-te). 1. The state of continuing forever. 2. Hist. An unbarrable entail. 3. Hist. An inalienable interest. 4. An interest that does not take effect or vest within the period prescribed by law. • In reference to the rule against perpetuities, only sense 4 is now current. See RULE AGAINST PERPETUITIES. [Cases: Perpetuities ⊆ 4.]

"A perpetuity is a thing odious in law, and destructive of the Commonwealth; it would put a stop to commerce and prevent the circulation of the riches of the Kingdom, and therefore is not to be countenanced in equity. If in equity you could come nearer to a perpetuity than the rules of Common Law would permit, all men being desirous to continue their estates in their families, would settle their estates by way of trust, which might perhaps make well for the jurisdiction of the court, but would be destructive of the commonwealth." (1683) 1 Vern. 163 (per Lord North) (as quoted in George W. Keeton, English Law: The Judicial Contribution 118 (1974)).

perpetuity of the king or queen. A fiction of English law that for political purposes the king or queen is immortal; that is, a monarch dies, but the office is never vacant.

per procurationem (par prok-yay-stee-oh-nam). [Latin] By proxy. — Abbr. per pros.; p. proc.; p. pros.; p.p. — Also termed per procuration.

perp walk. Slang. The act of making a suspect in custody walk before an audience, esp. members of the media. • Perp is short for perpetrator.

per quae servitia (par kwee sar-vish-ee-a). [Latin "by which services"] Hist. A real action by which the grantee of a landed estate could compel the tenants of the grantor to attend to him. • This action was abolished in the 19th century.

perquisite (par-kwi-zit). (16c) A privilege or benefit given in addition to one's salary or regular wages. — Often shortened to perk. [Cases: Officers and Public Employees ⊆ 99.]

perquisitor (par-kwiz-a-tar). [Latin "a seeker out"] Hist. A purchaser; esp., one who first acquires an estate by sale or gift.

per quod (par kwod), adv. & adj. [Latin "whereby"] (17c) Requiring reference to additional facts; (of libel or slander) actionable only on allegation and proof of special damages. See actionable per quod under ACTIONABLE; libel per quod under LIBEL; slander per quod under SLANDER. [Cases: Libel and Slander ⊆ 1, 33.]

per quod consortium amisit (par kwod kon-sor-shee-am a-mi-zit). [Law Latin] Hist. Whereby he lost the company (of his wife). • This phrase was used in a trespass description to describe the loss suffered by a husband whose wife had been beaten or otherwise abused. [Cases: Husband and Wife ⊆ 209(3).]

per quod servitium amisit (par kwod sar-vish-ee-um a-mi-zit). [Law Latin] Hist. Whereby he lost the services (of his servant). • This phrase was used in a trespass description to describe the loss suffered by a master whose servant had been injured by another. [Cases: Labor and Employment ⊆ 127.]
per rescriptum principis (par ri-skrip-tam prin-sipis). [Latin] Roman law. By the prince's rescript; by an imperial written reply to a petition.

Perringer release. See Perringer release under RELEASE (2).

per se (par say), adv. & adj. [Latin] (16c) 1. Of, in, or by itself; standing alone, without reference to additional facts. See actionable per se under actionable; libel per se under libel; slander per se under slander. 2. As a matter of law.

persecution, n. Violent, cruel, and oppressive treatment directed toward a person or group of persons because of their race, religion, sexual orientation, politics, or other beliefs. See hate crime under CRIME. persecute, vb.

per se deadly weapon. See deadly weapon per se under WEAPON.

persequi (par-se-kwi), vb. [Latin] Roman law. To claim through a judicial proceeding.

per se rule. Antitrust. The judicial principle that a trade practice violates the Sherman Act simply if the practice is a restraint of trade, regardless of whether it actually harms anyone. See SHERMAN ANTITRUST ACT. Cf. RULE OF REASON.

per se violation. Antitrust. A trade practice (such as price-fixing) that is considered inherently anticompetitive and injurious to the public without any need to determine whether it has actually injured market competition.

person. (13c) 1. A human being. — Also termed natural person.

absent person. Louisiana law. A person who has no representative in the state and whose whereabouts are not known and cannot be ascertained by diligent effort. La. Civ. Code art. 47. [Cases: Absentees ⊆ 2.]

adult disabled person. A child over the age of 18 for whom a parent continues to have a duty of support.

associated person. See ASSOCIATED PERSON.

disabled person. (1872) A person who has a mental or physical impairment. See DISABILITY.

displaced person. A person who remains within an internationally recognized state border after being forced to flee a home or place of habitual residence because of armed conflict, internal strife, the government's systematic violations of human rights, or a natural or man-made disaster. — Also termed inter-nally displaced person. Cf. evacuee; refugee. [Cases: Aliens, Immigration, and Citizenship ⊆ 504.]

interested person. (1844) A person having a property right in or claim against a thing, such as a trust or decedent's estate. • The meaning may expand to include an entity, such as a business that is a creditor of a decedent. — Abbr. IP.

person in loco parentis (in loh-koh p;J-ren-tis) (1827) A person who acts in place of a parent, either temporarily (as a schoolteacher does) or indefinitely (as a stepparent does); a person who has assumed the obligations of a parent without formally adopting the child. See in loco parentis. [Cases: Parent and Child ⊆ 15.]

person not deceased. A person who is either living or has not yet been born.

person of incidence. (1880) The person against whom a right is enforceable; a person who owes a legal duty. • The meaning may expand to include an entity, such as an insurance company.

person of inherence (in-heer-ants). (1909) The person in whom a legal right is vested; the owner of a right. • The meaning may expand to include an entity.

person of interest. A person who is the subject of a police investigation but who has not been identified by investigators as being suspected of committing the crime itself.

person of opposite sex sharing living quarters. See POSSSQ.

private person. 1. A person who does not hold public office or serve in the military. 2. Civil law. An entity such as a corporation or partnership that is governed by private law.

protected person. 1. A person for whom a conservator has been appointed or other protective order has been made. [Cases: Guardian and Ward ⊆ 9.5, 17; Mental Health ⊆ 104.] 2. Int'l law. A person who is protected by a rule of international law; esp., one who is in the hands of an occupying force during a conflict. • Protected persons are entitled to a standard of treatment (including a prohibition on coercion and corporal punishment) under the Geneva Convention Relative to the Protection of Civilian Persons in Time of War (1949). 3. English law. An inhabitant of a protectorate of the United Kingdom. • Though not a British subject, such a person is given diplomatic protection by the Crown.

2. The living body of a human being <contraband found on the smuggler's person>. 3. An entity (such as a corporation) that is recognized by law as having most of the rights and duties of a human being. • In this sense, the term includes partnerships and other associations, whether incorporated or unincorporated.
"So far as legal theory is concerned, a person is any being whom the law regards as capable of rights and duties. Any being that is so capable is a person, whether a human being or not, and no being that is not so capable is a person, even though he be a man. Persons are the substances of which rights and duties are the attributes. It is only in this respect that persons possess juridical significance, and this is the exclusive point of view from which personality receives legal recognition." John Salmond, Jurisprudence 318 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

artificial person. (17c) An entity, such as a corporation, created by law and given certain legal rights and duties of a human being; a being, real or imaginary, who for the purpose of legal reasoning is treated more or less as a human being. • An entity is a person for purposes of the Due Process and Equal Protection Clauses but is not a citizen for purposes of the Privileges and Immunities Clauses in Article IV § 2 and in the Fourteenth Amendment. — Also termed fictitious person; juristic person; juridical person; legal person; moral person. Cf. legal entity. [Cases: Corporations (1.1(2)].

fictitious person. See artificial person.

international person. See international person.

persona designata (par-soh-na deez-ig-nay-to). [Latin] A person considered as an individual (esp. in a legal action) rather than as a member of a class.

persona dignior (par-soh-na dig-nee-or). [Latin] Hist. The more worthy or respectable person; the more fitting person.

persona ficta (par-soh-na fik-ta). [Latin "false mask"] Hist. A fictional person, such as a corporation.

"But units other than individual men can be thought of as capable of acts, or of rights and liabilities: such are Corporations and even hereditates lacentes. Accordingly the way is clear to apply the name of person to these also. The mediaeval lawyers did so, but as they regarded Corporations as endowed with personality by a sort of creative act of the State, and received from the Roman lawyers the conception of the hereditas lacens as representing the persona of the deceased rather than as itself being a person, they called these things Personae Fictae, an expression not used by the Romans." W.M. Buckland, Elementary Principles of the Roman Private Law 16 (1912).

persona miserabilis (par-soh-na miz-a-rab-a-lis). [Latin "a pitiable person"] Roman law. An unfortunate person, esp. because of age, illness, or status. •

A persona miserabilis received certain privileges in litigation.

persona moralis (par-soh-na maw-ray-lis). [Latin] A collective entity that, by law or custom, is recognized as an artificial person (e.g., a church or corporation). See artificial person under person (2).

persona non grata. See persona non grata.

"This phrase signifies one person who, among others appointed with him as colleagues in some office, enjoys the confidence and esteem of the person appointing, more than those appointed with him. Thus a testator not frequently appoints among his trustees one who shall be a sine qua non — that is, one whose concurrence and consent shall be indispensable to every act of administration under the trust. Such a trustee falls within the description of a persona praedilecta." John Trayner, Trayner’s Latin Maxims 456 (4th ed. 1894).

personable, adj. (16c) Having the status of a legal person (and thus the right to plead in court, enter into contracts, etc.) .

person aggrieved. See aggrieved party under party (2).

persona gratia (par-soh-na gray-to or grah-to or grat-aj), n. [Latin] An acceptable person; esp., a diplomat who is acceptable to a host country. Pl. personae gratiae (par-soh-ne gray-tee or grah-tee or gralt ee). Cf. persona non grata.

personaliter (par-sa-nay-la-tar), adv. [Latin] Personally; in person.

personality. (1870) 1. The legal status of one regarded by the law as a person; the legal conception by which the law regards a human being or an artificial entity as a person. — Also termed legal personality.

"Legal personality . . . refers to the particular device by which the law creates or recognizes units to which it ascribes certain powers and capacities." George Whitecross Paton, A Textbook of Jurisprudence 593 (G.W. Paton & D. Herder eds., 4th ed. 1972).

2. Parliamentary law. (usu. pl.) An improper reference to a member by name or in his or her personal capacity.

"No person in speaking, is to mention a member then present by his name; but to describe him by his seat in the house, or who spoke last, or on the other side of the question, nor to dignify from the matter to fall upon the person, by speaking, reviling, nipping, or unmannerly words against a particular member. The consequences of a measure may be reproved in strong terms; but to arraign the motives of those who propose or advocate it, is a personality, and against order." Thomas Jefferson, A Manual of Parliamentary Practice 36–37 (1801) (citations omitted).

personality theory. Intellectual property. A rationalization of intellectual-property laws, esp. copyright, drawing on the philosophy of G.W.F. Hegel, holding that personal expression is a form of self-actualization that gives the creator inalienable moral rights in the creations. • As a way of analyzing intellectual-property rights, personality theory takes the point of view of the individual inventor, author, or artist rather than that of society as a whole. Cf. lockean labor theory; utilitarianism.

personal judgment. See judgment.
personal jurisdiction. See jurisdiction.
personal justice. See justice.
personal knowledge. See knowledge.
personal law. (18c) The law that governs a person's family matters, usu. regardless of where the person goes. • In common-law systems, personal law refers to the law of the person's domicile. In civil-law systems, it refers to the law of the individual's nationality (and so is sometimes called lex patriae). Cf. Territorial law.

"The idea of the personal law is based on the conception of man as a social being, so that those transactions of his daily life which affect him most closely in a personal sense, such as marriage, divorce, legitimacy, many kinds of capacity, and succession, may be governed universally by that system of law deemed most suitable and adequate for the purpose . . . . [A]lthough the law of the domicile is the chief criterion adopted by English courts for the personal law, it lies within the power of any man of full age and capacity to establish his domicile in any country he chooses, and thereby automatically to make the law of that country his personal law." Personal Responsibility and Work Opportunity Reconciliation Act. A 1996 federal law that overhauled the welfare system, as well as requiring states to provide a means for collecting child support by (1) imposing liens on a child-support obligor's assets, and (2) facilitating income-withholding. • The Act did away with Aid to Families with Dependent Children in favor of Temporary Assistance to Needy Families. It also limited the length of time that persons could receive welfare and tied states' receipt of federal child-support funds to their implementing enhanced paternity-establishment services. • Also termed Welfare Reform Act. See Aid to Families with Dependent Children; Temporary Assistance to Needy Families. — Abbr. PRWORA. [Cases: Social Security and Public Welfare see].

persona non grata (par-;soh-na non grah-da), n. [Latin] An unwanted person; esp., a diplomat who is not acceptable to a host country. Pl. personae non gratae. Cf. persona grata.

persona standi in judicio (par-soh-na stan-di in joo-dish-ee-oh), m. [Law Latin] 1. Capacity of standing in judgment; the right to appear in court. 2. One with personal standing to vindicate a legal right. "What persona standi is, may be more easily learned by considering the loss of it by civil death or outlawry . . . . But there are others besides outlaws who have no persona standi. A pupil cannot pursue or defend; that must be done by his tutor in his name. And companies, as such, have not a persona standi . . . . Persona standi applies to the status of the person, as qualified to pursue or defend in actions generally; title to pursue applies to particular actions, and requires, in addition to a persona standi, that the party have a proper legal interest in the particular action pursued or defended." William Bell, Bell's Dictionary and Digest of the Law of Scotland 800 (George Watson ed., 7th ed. 1890).

person-endangering state of mind. (1990) An intent to kill, inflict great bodily injury, act in wanton disregard of an unreasonable risk to others, or perpetrate a dangerous felony. — Also termed man-endangering state of mind.

person with ordinary skill in the art. Patents. A fictional construct of the patent laws, denoting someone who has reasonably developed abilities in the field of the invention at issue. The patent application must be clear and complete enough to teach a person skilled in the art how to make and use the invention without undue experimentation. [Cases: Patents C=6(3).]

"The term 'person skilled in the art . . . ' has been interpreted to mean a person having ordinary or fair information in that particular line, not necessarily a person of high scientific attainments. The skill or knowledge to be imputed to such a person will vary with the complexity of the art to which the invention relates." Archie R. McCrady, Patent Office Practice 61 (2d ed. 1946).

per stirpes (par star peez), adv. & adj. [Latin "by roots or stocks"] (17c) Proportionately divided between beneficiaries according to their deceased ancestor's share. — Also termed in stirpes; per stirpem. Cf. per capita. [Cases: Descent and Distribution C=6(3); Wills C=530.]

petit cape. See cape parvum under CAPE.

petite assize. See ASIZE (5).

Petite policy. The Department of Justice rule forbidding a federal prosecution after a previous state or federal prosecution based on the same acts unless (1) an Assistant Attorney General has approved the prosecution, (2) a substantial federal interest supports the prosecution, (3) the previous prosecution failed to vindicate the federal interest, and (4) there is sufficient evidence to sustain a conviction. United States Attorneys’ Manual § 9-2.031 (Sept. 1997); Petite v. United States, 361 U.S. 529, 80 S.Ct. 450 (1960). [Cases: Criminal Law 29].

“(‘Petite Policy’) . . . The purpose of this policy is to vindicate substantial federal interests through appropriate federal prosecutions, to protect persons charged with criminal conduct from the burdens associated with multiple prosecutions and punishments for substantially the same act(s) or transaction(s), to promote efficient utilization of Department resources, and to promote coordination and cooperation between federal and state prosecutors.” United States Attorneys’ Manual § 9-2.031 (Sept. 1997).

“In response to the Court’s continuing sensitivity to the fairness implications of the multiple prosecution power, the Justice Department adopted the policy of refusing to bring a federal prosecution following a state prosecution except when necessary to advance compelling interests of federal law enforcement. The Petite policy was designed to limit the exercise of the power to bring successive prosecutions for the same offense to situations comporting with the rationale for the existence of that power. Although not constitutionally mandated, this Executive policy serves to protect interests which, but for the ‘dual sovereignty’ principle inherent in our federal system, would be embraced by the Double Jeopardy Clause. In light of the parallel purposes of the Government’s Petite policy and the fundamental constitutional guarantee against double jeopardy, the federal courts should be receptive, not circumspect, when the Government seeks leave to implement that policy.” Rinaldi v. United States, 454 U.S. 22, 28-29, 98 S.Ct. 81, 85 (1977) (citation omitted).

piepowder court (pi-pow-dar). Hist. In medieval England, a court having jurisdiction over a fair or market and presided over by the organizer's steward.

The name is a corruption of two French words (pied and poudre) meaning "dusty feet." Also termed court of piepowder. Also spelled piedpoudre; piedpoudre; pipower; py-powder.

piercing the corporate veil. (1928) The judicial act of imposing personal liability on otherwise immune corporate officers, directors, or shareholders for the corporation's wrongful acts. Also termed disregarding the corporate entity; veil-piercing. See CORPORATE VEIL. [Cases: Corporations C>1.4(1.)]

"Courts sometimes apply common law principles to 'pierce the corporate veil' and hold shareholders personally liable for corporate debts or obligations. Unfortunately, despite the enormous volume of litigation in this area, the case law fails to articulate any sensible rationale or policy that explains when corporate existence should be disregarded. Indeed, courts are remarkably prone to rely on labels or characterizations of relationships (such as 'alter ego,' 'instrumentality,' or 'sham') and the decisions offer little in the way of predictability or rational explanation of why enumerated factors should be decisive." Barry R. Furrow et al., Health Law S 5-4, at 182 (2d ed. 2000).

Pierringer release. See RELEASE (2).

pigeon drop. See Jamaican switch.

finger pillory. Hist. Eccles. law. A miniature stock used to confine the fingers of a person who misbehaved during church services.

bar pilot. See BRANCH PILOT.

branch pilot. A pilot, esp. one who is trained and licensed to navigate rivers and their tributaries. • The term originated in England when pilots were licensed to navigate the River Thames and its tributaries. — Also termed bar pilot. See TRINITY HOUSE. [Cases: Pilots ¶ 5.]

compulsory pilot. A ship pilot entitled by law to guide a ship for a particular purpose, such as piloting the ship into harbor. • The compulsory nature of the appointment relieves the vessel’s owner of personal liability if the pilot causes a collision. Cf. voluntary pilot. [Cases: Pilots ¶ 7.]

"The compulsory pilot presents a special problem. Statutes that impose a fine or imprisonment for the failure to take a pilot obviously create compulsory pilotage. Some statutes, however, allow the ship to refuse the pilot provided she pays his fee or half of it (‘half-pilotage’). The Supreme Court has indicated that it does not regard the tendering of this alternative as amounting to compulsion. It makes a difference, because it is pretty well settled that if the pilotage is ‘compulsory’ the respondent superior nexus is broken, and the shipowner cannot be held personally liable for the fault of the pilot resulting in collision. The ship’s liability in rem, however, is unaffected by the fact that the pilotage is compulsory. This is one of the more striking consequences of the endowment of the ship with a juristic personality independent of that of her owner.” Grant Gilmore & Charles L. Black Jr., The Law of Admiralty § 7-16, at 520-21 (2d ed. 1975).

voluntary pilot. A ship pilot who controls a ship with the permission of the vessel’s owner. • The vessel’s owner is personally liable for damage resulting from a collision caused by a voluntary pilot. Cf. compulsory pilot.

"If a vessel is in the hands of a harbor pilot at the time of the collision, the question arises whether the fault of the pilot is imputed to the vessel owner or operator. American law draws an unwarranted distinction between the ‘voluntary pilot,’ who is taken on voluntarily, and the ‘compulsory pilot,’ who is mandated by a statute or local regulation. The voluntary pilot is considered to be the same as any crew member, and his fault is fully attributable to the vessel owner. A compulsory pilot’s fault, however, cannot be imputed to the shipowner personally; the doctrine of respondent superior does not apply. At most, the vessel is liable in rem since the compulsory pilot’s negligence is attributable to the ship. The distinction makes little sense in that it throws the loss upon potentially innocent parties and ignores the fact that the vessel owner commonly carries insurance against this liability. In any collision case, therefore, care should be taken to assert a maritime lien and to sue the vessel in rem if a compulsory pilot may be involved.” Thomas J. Schoenbaum, Admiralty and Maritime Law § 13-1, at 450-51 (1987).

pilotage (pi-la-tij). 1. The navigating of vessels; the business of navigating vessels. [Cases: Pilots ¶ 14.]

2. Compensation that a pilot receives for navigating a vessel, esp. into and out of harbor or through a channel or passage. [Cases: Pilots ¶ 9.]

compulsory pilotage. A requirement, imposed by law in some jurisdictions, that vessels approaching or leaving a harbor must take on a licensed pilot to guide the vessel into or out of the harbor. [Cases: Pilots ¶ 7.]

half-pilotage. Compensation equaling half the value of services that a pilot has offered to perform. • Shipowners can avoid compulsory pilotage in some jurisdictions by payment of half-pilotage. [Cases: Pilots ¶ 11.]

[Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property $\succeq 53; Patents $\succeq 226; Trademarks $\succeq 1418]. — pirate, vb. — piratical (pir-uh-tih-kul), adj. — pirate, n.

"[T]he test of piracy is not whether the identical language, the same words, are used, but whether the substance of the production is unlawfully appropriated." Eaton S. Drake, A Treatise on the Law of Property in Intellectual Productions 97 (1879).

"[I]n some countries the problem is what might be called the 'cycle of piracy' — legitimate copyright owners refuse to sell in the country because of the piracy problem, which means that the only way the public can obtain the goods it wants is to turn to piracy. This in turn only strengthens the resolve of copyright owners not to do business in the country." Intellectual Property in the New Technological Age 514 (Robert P. Merges et al. eds., 1997).

video piracy. The illegal copying and sale or rental of copyrighted motion pictures.

placitare (plas-a-tair-ee), vb. [Law Latin] To plead; to bring an action in a court of law.
placatory (plas-ə-tor-ē), adj. [Law Latin] Of or relating to pleas or pleading.

placitum (plas-ə-tam), n. [Latin] Hist. 1. Roman law. An imperial constitution. 2. A judicial decision. 3. A court; a judicial tribunal. 4. A judicial proceeding; a trial. 5. A fine, mulct, or pecuniary punishment. 6. A pleading or plea. 7. A paragraph or section of a title or page where the point decided in a case is set forth separately. — Abbr. (in sense 7) pl. Pl. placita.

placitum et conventio. See consensus ad idem under consensus.

plagiarism. (17c) The deliberate and knowing presentation of another person's original ideas or creative expressions as one's own. • Generally, plagiarism is immoral but not illegal. If the expression's creator gives unrestricted permission for its use and the user claims the expression as original, the user commits plagiarism but does not violate copyright laws. If the original expression is copied without permission, the plagiarist may violate copyright laws, even if credit goes to the creator. And if the plagiarism results in material gain, it may be deemed a passing-off activity that violates the Lanham Act. It can also be a criminal act under 17 USCA § 5-6. Cf. infringement. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property ☑ 53(1).] — plagiarize (pla-ja-riz), vb. — plagiarist (pla-ja-rist), n.

"Plagiarism, which many people commonly think has to do with copyright, is not in fact a legal doctrine. True plagiarism is an ethical, not a legal, offense and is enforceable by academic authorities, not courts. Plagiarism occurs when someone — a hurried student, a neglectful professor, an unscrupulous writer — falsely claims someone else's words, whether copyrighted or not, as his own. Of course, if the plagiarized work is protected by copyright, the unauthorized reproduction is also a copyright infringement." Paul Goldstein, Copyright's Highway 12 (1994).

"That the supporting evidence for the accusation of plagiarism may on occasion be elusive, insufficient, or uncertain, is not the same as thinking that the definition of plagiarism is uncertain. The gray areas may remain resistant to adjudication without being resistant to definition. It may be perfectly clear what constitutes plagiarism ('using the work of another with an intent to deceive') without its being clear that what faces us is truly a case of this." Christopher Ricks, "Plagiarism," 97 Proceedings of the British Academy 149, 151 (1998).

plagium (play-je-əm), n. [Latin] Roman law. The act of kidnapping, esp. a slave or child, which included harboring another's slave. — Also termed crimen plagii.

plaideur (play- or pie-dar), n. [Law French "pleader"] Archaic. An attorney at law; an advocate.

plain bond. See debenture (3).

plain-feel doctrine. (1984) Criminal procedure. The principle that a police officer, while conducting a legal pat-down search, may seize any contraband that the officer can immediately and clearly identify, by touch but not by manipulation, as being illegal or incriminating. — Also termed plain-touch doctrine. [Cases: Searches and Seizures ☑ 47.1.]

plain-language law. (1978) Legislation requiring nontechnical, readily comprehensible language in consumer contracts such as residential leases or insurance policies. • Many of these laws have genuinely simplified the needlessly obscure language in which consumer contracts have traditionally been couched. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation ☑ 126; Insurance ☑ 1773.]

plain-language movement. (1978) 1. The loosely organized campaign to encourage legal writers and business writers to write clearly and concisely — without legalese — while preserving accuracy and precision. 2. The body of persons involved in this campaign.

plain meaning. See meaning.

plain-meaning rule. (1937) 1. The rule that if a writing, or a provision in a writing, appears to be unambiguous on its face, its meaning must be determined from the writing itself without resort to any extrinsic evidence. • Though often applied, this rule is often condemned as simplistic because the meaning of words varies with the verbal context and the surrounding circumstances, not to mention the linguistic ability of the users and readers (including judges). Cf. golden rule; mischief rule; equity-of-the-statute rule. [Cases: Contracts ☑ 143, 152; Statutes ☑ 188.]

"On its positive side, the plain meaning rule states a tautology: Words should be read as saying what they say. The rule tells us to respect meaning but it does so without disclosing what the specific meaning is. At best, it reaffirms the preeminence of the statute over materials extrinsic to it. In its negative aspect, on the other hand, the rule has sometimes been used to read ineptly expressed language out of its proper context, in violation of established principles of meaning and communication. To this extent it is an impediment to interpretation." Reed Dickerson, The Interpretation and Application of Statutes 229 (1975).

2. Ordinary-meaning rule.

plain-sight rule. See plain-view doctrine.

plaint. 1. Archaic. A complaint, esp. one filed in a replevin action. See complaint (1). 2. Civil law. A complaint or petition, esp. one intended to set aside an allegedly invalid testament.

plaintiff. (14c) The party who brings a civil suit in a court of law. — Abbr. pltf. Cf. defendant.

involuntary plaintiff. A plaintiff who is joined in a lawsuit by court order when the party's joinder is imperative for the litigation and the party is subject to the court's jurisdiction but refuses to join the suit.
plaintiff in error. ● Under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 19(a), a party is usu. joined as a defendant but may be joined as an involuntary plaintiff in “a proper case.” [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ☑ 201; Parties ☑ 18.]

use plaintiff. See use plaintiff.

plaintiff in error. (17c) Archaic. 1. See appellant. 2. See petitioner.

plaintiff's-viewport rule. The principle that courts should measure the amount in controversy in a case by analyzing only the amount of damages claimed by the plaintiff. [Cases: Federal Courts ☑ 339.]

plain-touch doctrine. See plain-feel doctrine.

plain-vanilla swap. See interest-rate swap.

plain-view doctrine. (1963) Criminal procedure. The rule permitting a police officer's warrantless seizure and use as evidence of an item seen in plain view from a lawful position or during a legal search when the officer has probable cause to believe that the item is evidence of a crime. — Also termed clear-view doctrine; plain-sight rule. Cf. open-fields doctrine. [Cases: Controlled Substances ☑ 106, 115, 131; Searches and Seizures ☑ 47.]

PLAM. See price-level-adjusted mortgage under mortgage.

plan, n. 1. Bankruptcy plan. 2. Employee benefit plan.

planned obsolescence. See obsolescence.

planned-unit development. A land area zoned for a single-community subdivision with flexible restrictions on residential, commercial, and public uses. — Abbr. PUD. Cf. residential cluster. [Cases: Zoning and Planning ☑ 245.]

“A PUD is primarily an alternative to traditional zoning since it provides a mixing of uses. The location and identification of the permitted uses are provided on the PUD map or plat, which closely resembles a subdivision plat. Development approval is generally granted for the PUD at one time rather than on a lot by lot basis and in that way closely tracks the subdivision approval process.” Julian Conrad Juergensmeyer & Thomas E. Roberts, Land Use Planning and Development Regulation Law § 7.15, at 288 (2003).

planning board. A local government body responsible for approving or rejecting proposed building projects. ● In most jurisdictions, the planning board's decisions are subject to the review of the city council. — Also termed planning commission. [Cases: Zoning and Planning ☑ 351.]

plan of arrangement. Bankruptcy. An insolvent debtor's written proposal for partially or completely settling outstanding debts. [Cases: Bankruptcy ☑ 3661.101.]

plan of reorganization. See bankruptcy plan.

plan-of-the-convention doctrine. The principle that each U.S. state, by ratifying the U.S. Constitution, has consented to the possibility of being sued by each of the other states, and has no immunity from such a suit under the 11th Amendment. [Cases: Federal Courts ☑ 273.]

plant patent. See patent (3).

Plant Patent Act. Patents. The 1930 federal law that extended patent protection for developing “any distinct and new” varieties of asexually reproducing plants. ● Before passage of the Act, plant patents were rejected because the subject matter was considered naturally occurring and therefore unpatentable. 35 USCA §§ 161–164. — Abbr. PPA. [Cases: Patents ☑ 14.]

plant-patent claim. See patent claim.

Plant Variety Protection Act, Patents. The 1970 federal law that extended patent-like protection for developing new and distinct varieties of seed-producing plants. ● A Certificate of Plant Variety Protection gives the holder exclusive rights to sell, reproduce, and develop further hybrids from the plant. 7 USCA §§ 2321–2582. — Abbr. PVPA. [Cases: Patents ☑ 14.]

plat. (15c) 1. A small piece of land; plot (1). 2. A map describing a piece of land and its features, such as boundaries, lots, roads, and easements. [Cases: Zoning and Planning ☑ 245.]

platform. A statement of principles and policies adopted by a political party as the basis of the party's appeal for public support. [Cases: Elections ☑ 121 (1).]

platform committee. See committee.

plat map. (1941) A document that gives the legal descriptions of pieces of land by lot, street, and block number. ● A plat map is usu. drawn after the property has been described by some other means, such as a government survey. Once a plat map is prepared, property descriptions are defined by referring to the map. Plat maps are usu. recorded by a government agency.

plea, n. (13c) 1. An accused person's formal response of "guilty," "not guilty," or "no contest" to a criminal charge. — Also termed criminal plea. [Cases: Criminal Law ☑ 267–275.]

blind plea. (1972) A guilty plea made without the promise of a concession from either the judge or the prosecutor. Cf. negotiated plea.

conditional plea. A plea of guilty or nolo contendere entered with the court's approval and the government's consent, the defendant reserving the right to appeal any adverse determinations on one or more pretrial motions. ● If an appeal is successful, the plea is withdrawn and a new one entered. Fed. R. Crim. P. 11(a)(2). [Cases: Criminal Law ☑ 273(4.1), 275.3.]

guilty plea. (1942) An accused person's formal admission in court of having committed the charged offense. ● A guilty plea must be made voluntarily and only after the accused has been informed of and understands his or her rights. It ordinarily has the same effect as a guilty verdict and conviction after a trial on the merits. A guilty plea is usu. part of a plea bargain. [Cases: Criminal Law ☑ 273–274.]
insanity plea. See insanity defense.

negotiated plea. (1956) The plea agreed to by a criminal defendant and the prosecutor in a plea bargain. See plea bargain. Cf. blind plea. [Cases: Criminal Law $273.1(2).]

no-contest plea. See no contest.

nolo plea. A plea by which the defendant does not contest or admit guilt. See Fed. R. Crim. P. 11(b); nolo contendere. [Cases: Criminal Law $275.]

not-guilty plea. See no contest or admit guilt.

nolo plea. See no contest or admit guilt.

affirmative plea. See pure plea.

anomalous plea. (1851) An equitable plea in which a party states new facts and negates some of the opponent's stated facts. • Partly confession and avoidance and partly traverse, the plea is appropriate when the defendant, in the bill, has anticipated the plea, and the defendant then traverses the anticipatory matters. • Also termed plea not pure. Cf. pure plea.

common plea. (17c) 1. A common-law plea in a civil action as opposed to a criminal prosecution. • Also termed common cause; common suit. 2. Hist. A plea made by a commoner. "By 'common pleas' Magna Carta meant no more than ordinary pleas between commoners." Alan Harding, A Social History of English Law 51 (1966).

dilatory plea (di-l-a-tor-e). (16c) A plea that does not challenge the merits of a case but that seeks to delay or defeat the action on procedural grounds. [Cases: Pleading $101-111.49.]

"Dilatory pleas are those which do not answer the general right of the plaintiff, either by denial or in confession and avoidance, but assert matter tending to defeat the particular action by resisting the plaintiff's present right of recovery. They may be divided into two main classes: (1) pleas to the jurisdiction and venue. (2) pleas in abatement. A minor class, sometimes recognized, is pleas in suspension of the action." Benjamin J. Shipman, Handbook of Common Law Pleading § 220, at 382 (Henry Winthrop Ballantine ed., 3d ed. 1923).

double plea. (16c) A plea consisting in two or more distinct grounds of complaint or defense for the same issue. Cf. alternative pleading under pleading (2); duplicity (2).

general plea. See general denial under denial.

issuable plea. (17c) A plea on the merits presenting a cognizable complaint to the court. Cf. issuable defense under defense (1).

jurisdictional plea. (1900) A plea asserting that the court lacks jurisdiction either over the defendant or over the subject matter of the case. • Also termed plea to the jurisdiction. [Cases: Pleading $104.]

negative plea. (16c) A plea that traverses some material fact or facts stated in the bill. • Also termed plea to the action.

nonissuable plea. (1841) A plea on which a court ruling will not decide the case on the merits, such as a plea in abatement.

peremptory plea. (18c) A plea that responds to the merits of the plaintiff's claim.

plea in abatement. (17c) A plea that objects to the place, time, or method of asserting the plaintiff's claim but does not dispute the claim's merits. • A defendant who successfully asserts a plea in abatement leaves the claim open for continuation in the current action or reassertion in a later action if the defect is cured. • Also termed abater. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure $740; Pleading $106.]

plea in confession and avoidance. See confession and avoidance.

plea in discharge. (18c) A plea that the defendant has previously satisfied and discharged the plaintiff's claim.

plea in equity. (17c) A special defense relying on one or more reasons why the suit should be dismissed, delayed, or barred. • The various kinds are (1) pleas to the jurisdiction, (2) pleas to the person, (3) pleas to the form of the bill, and (4) pleas in bar of the bill. Pleas in equity generally fall into two classes: pure pleas and anomalous pleas.

plea in estoppel. (1831) Common-law pleading. A plea that neither confesses nor avoids but rather pleads a previous inconsistent act, allegation, or denial on the part of the adverse party to preclude that party from maintaining an action or defense.

plea in reconvention. Civil law. A plea that sets up a new matter, not as a defense, but as a cross-complaint, setoff, or counterclaim. [Cases: Pleading $143.]

plea in suspension. (1875) A plea that shows some ground for not proceeding in the suit at the present time and prays that the proceedings be stayed until that ground is removed, such as a party's being a minor or the plaintiff's being an alien enemy. [Cases: Pleading $105.]

plea of confession and avoidance. See confession and avoidance.

plea of privilege. (17c) A plea that raises an objection to the venue of an action. See change of venue. [Cases: Venue $52.5, 69.]
plea of release. (18c) A plea that admits the claim but sets forth a written discharge executed by a party authorized to release the claim. See release (2).

plea puis darrein continuance (pwis dar-ayn kan-tin-yoo-ants). [Law French "plea since the last continuance"] (18c) A plea that alleges new defensive matter that has arisen during a continuance of the case and that did not exist at the time of the defendant's last pleading. [Cases: Pleading C=272.]

plea to further maintenance to the action. Hist. A defensive plea asserting that events occurring after the commencement of the action necessitate its dismissal. • The plea is obsolete because of the pleading requirements in federal and state rules of civil procedure.

plea to the action. See negative plea.

plea to the declaration. (1820) A plea in abatement that objects to the declaration and applies immediately to it. — Also termed plea to the count.

plea to the jurisdiction. See jurisdictional plea.

plea to the person of the defendant. (1872) A plea in abatement alleging that the defendant has a legal disability to be sued.

plea to the person of the plaintiff. (1821) A plea in abatement alleging that the defendant's action is personal to the plaintiff.

plea to the writ. (17c) A plea in abatement that objects to the writ (summons) and applies (1) to the form of the writ for a matter either apparent on the writ's face or outside the writ, or (2) to the way in which the writ was executed or acted on.

pure plea. (18c) An equitable plea that affirmatively alleges new matters that are outside the bill. • If proved, the effect is to end the controversy by dismissing, delaying, or barring the suit. A pure plea must track the allegations of the bill, not evade it or mistake its purpose. Originally, this was the only plea known in equity. — Also termed affirmative plea. Cf. anomalous plea.

rolled-up plea. (1929) Defamation. A defendant's plea claiming that the statements complained of are factual and that, to the extent that they consist of comment, they are fair comment on a matter of public interest. See fair comment. [Cases: Libel and Slander C=48(1), 93, 94.]

special plea. (16c) A plea alleging one or more new facts rather than merely disputing the legal grounds of the action or charge. • All pleas other than general issues are special pleas. See general issue under issue (1).

plea bargain, n. (1963) A negotiated agreement between a prosecutor and a criminal defendant whereby the defendant pleads guilty to a lesser offense or to one of multiple charges in exchange for some concession by the prosecutor, usu. a more lenient sentence or a dismissal of the other charges. — Also termed plea agreement; negotiated plea; sentence bargain. [Cases: Criminal Law C=273.1(2).] — plea-bargain, vb. — plea-bargaining, n.

charge bargain. (1890) A plea bargain in which a prosecutor agrees to drop some of the counts or reduce the charge to a less serious offense in exchange for a plea of either guilty or no contest from the defendant. [Cases: Criminal Law C=273.1(2), 275.4(2).]

sentence bargain. (1973) A plea bargain in which a prosecutor agrees to recommend a lighter sentence in exchange for a plea of either guilty or no contest from the defendant. [Cases: Criminal Law C=273.1(2), 275.4(2).]

plead, vb. (13c) 1. To make a specific plea, esp. in response to a criminal charge <he pleaded not guilty>. [Cases: Criminal Law C=267–301.] 2. To assert or allege in a pleading <fraud claims must be pleaded with particularity>. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure C=621, 636; Pleading C=1, 18.] 3. To file or deliver a pleading <the plaintiff hasn't pleaded yet>.

pleader. (13c) 1. A party who asserts a particular pleading. 2. A person who pleads in court on behalf of another. 3. Hist. At common law, a person who (though not an attorney) specialized in preparing pleadings for others. — Also termed special pleader.

pleading, n. (16c) 1. A formal document in which a party to a legal proceeding (esp. a civil lawsuit) sets forth or responds to allegations, claims, defenses, or admissions. • In federal civil procedure, the main pleadings are the plaintiff's complaint and the defendant's answer. — Also termed special pleading.

accusatory pleading. (1908) An indictment, information, or complaint by which the government begins a criminal prosecution.

amended pleading. (1809) A pleading that replaces an earlier pleading and that contains matters omitted from or not known at the time of the earlier pleading. Cf. supplemental pleading. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure C=621; Pleading C=1.]

rolled-up pleading. (1908) An indictment, information, or complaint by which the government begins a criminal prosecution.

anomalous pleading. (1845) A pleading that is partly affirmative and partly negative in its allegations.

argumentative pleading. A pleading that states allegations rather than facts, and thus forces the court to infer or hunt for supporting facts. • Conclusory statements in court papers are a form of argumentative pleading. — Also termed inferential pleading. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure \(\geqslant \frac{641}{641} \); Pleading \(\geqslant \frac{8}{8} \), 17.]

artculated pleading. (1953) A pleading that states each allegation in a separately numbered paragraph. [Cases: Pleading \(\geqslant \frac{52}{52} \)] defective pleading. (17c) A pleading that fails to meet minimum standards of sufficiency or accuracy in form or substance.

hypothetical pleading. A pleading asserting that if a certain fact is true, then a certain result must follow.

- Hypothetical pleadings are generally improper. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure \(\geqslant \frac{675.1}{675.1} \).]

inferential pleading. See argumentative pleading.

pleading to the merits. A responsive pleading that addresses the plaintiff's cause of action, in whole or in part.

responsive pleading. (1833) A pleading that replies to an opponent's earlier pleading. See answer. [Cases: Pleading \(\geqslant \frac{76}{76} \).]

sham pleading. (1825) An obviously frivolous or absurd pleading that is made only for purposes of vexation or delay. — Also termed sham plea; false plea; (archaically) deceitful plea. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure \(\geqslant \frac{1139}{1139} \); Pleading \(\geqslant \frac{359}{359} \), 362(3).]

shotgun pleading. (1964) A pleading that encompasses a wide range of contentions, usu. supported by vague factual allegations.

supplemental pleading. (1841) A pleading that either corrects a defect in an earlier pleading or addresses facts arising since the earlier pleading was filed.

- Unlike an amended pleading, a supplemental pleading merely adds to the earlier pleading and does not replace it. Cf. amended pleading. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure \(\geqslant \frac{861}{861} \), 871; Pleading \(\geqslant \frac{273}{273} \).]

2. A system of defining and narrowing the issues in a lawsuit whereby the parties file formal documents alleging their respective positions.

alternative pleading. (1868) A form of pleading whereby the pleader alleges two or more independent claims or defenses that are not necessarily consistent with each other, such as alleging both intentional infliction of emotional distress and negligent infliction of emotional distress based on the same conduct. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(e)(2). — Also termed pleading in the alternative. Cf. duplicity (2); double plea under plea (3). [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure \(\geqslant \frac{675}{675} \); Pleading \(\geqslant \frac{20}{20} \), 50–53, 89.]

artful pleading. (1950) A plaintiff's disguised phrasing of a federal claim as solely a state-law claim in order to prevent a defendant from removing the case from state court to federal court. [Cases: Removal of Cases \(\geqslant \frac{25}{25} \)(1).]

code pleading. (1860) A procedural system requiring that the pleading merely the facts of the case giving rise to the claim or defense, not the legal conclusions necessary to sustain the claim or establish the defense. — Also termed fact pleading. Cf. issue pleading. [Cases: Pleading \(\geqslant \frac{8}{8} \), 9, 48.]

common-law pleading. The system of pleading historically used in the three common-law courts of England (the King's Bench, the Common Pleas, and the Exchequer) up to 1873.

equity pleading. (18c) The system of pleading used in courts of equity. • In most jurisdictions, rules unique to equity practice have been largely supplanted by one set of rules of court, esp. where law courts and equity courts have merged. [Cases: Equity \(\geqslant \frac{128}{128} \), 335.]

fact pleading. See code pleading.

issue pleading. (1916) The common-law method of pleading, the main purpose of which was to frame an issue. Cf. code pleading. [Cases: Pleading \(\geqslant \frac{1}{1} \), 16, 48.]

notice pleading. (1918) A procedural system requiring that the pleader give only a short and plain statement of the claim showing that the pleader is entitled to relief, and not a complete detailing of all the facts. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a). [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure \(\geqslant \frac{673}{673} \); Pleading \(\geqslant \frac{16}{16} \), 48.]

pleading in the alternative. See alternative pleading.

special pleading. See special pleading.

3. The legal rules regulating the statement of the plaintiff's claims and the defendant's defenses today, pleading is a much simpler subject than it was in former years.

pleading the baby act. See baby act, pleading the.

pleading the Fifth. (1953) The act or an instance of asserting one's right against self-incrimination under the Fifth Amendment. — Also termed taking the Fifth. See right against self-incrimination. [Cases: Witnesses \(\geqslant \frac{297}{297} \).]

plead (one's) belly. Hist. Slang. (Of a female defendant) to claim pregnancy as a defense, usu. to postpone or avoid a court's sentence of capital punishment or transportation. • A woman who pleaded that she was pregnant was treated with suspicion. The judge would appoint a jury of matrons (often consisting of 12 married mothers) to examine the claimant (under the writ de ventre inspiciendo). If the woman was declared to be "quick with child" (in an advanced state of pregnancy rather than "barely with child" or only newly or just possibly pregnant), she enjoyed a reprieve from execution or transportation until after the child's birth (or miscarriage). Because juries of matrons often declared barren defendants to be pregnant, a court would keep track of a reprieved woman to see if the delay was justified or if she should be made to suffer the sentence ("called down") at the next session. Although the plea and the special jury are no longer in use, the prohibition against executing a pregnant woman persists in modern law. 18 USCA § 3596(b). plea to the person of the defendant. See plea (3).
plea to the person of the plaintiff. See plea (3). plea to the writ. See plea (3). plebeian (pli-bee-an). n. Roman law. A member of the Roman plebs; an ordinary citizen, not a member of the upper class (patricians).
plebiscite (pleb-a-sit or pleb-a-sit). n. (1860) 1. A binding or nonbinding referendum on a proposed law, constitutional amendment, or significant public issue. Cf. referendum; initiative. 2. Int'l law. A direct vote of a country's electorate to decide a question of public importance, such as union with another country or a proposed change to the constitution. — plebiscitary (pleb-i-sar-ee), adj.
plebiscitus (pleb-a-stam). n. [Latin] Roman law. An enactment passed at the request of a tribune by the assembly of the common people (the concilium plebis). See concilium plebis. Pl. plebiscita.
paign, n. (14c) 1. A formal promise or undertaking. Cf. oath. 2. The act of providing something as security for a debt or obligation. [Cases: Pledges C-298.] 3. A bailment or other deposit of personal property to a creditor as security for a debt or obligation; pawn (2). See contract to pledge under contract. Cf. lien (1). 4. The item of personal property so deposited; pawn (1). 5. The thing so provided. — Formerly also termed safepledge. 6. A security interest in personal property represented by an indispensable instrument, the interest being created by a bailment or other deposit of personal property for the purpose of securing the payment of a debt or the performance of some other duty. 7. Hist. A person who acts as a surety for the prosecution of a lawsuit. • In early practice, pledges were listed at the end of the declaration. Over time the listing of pledges became a formality, and fictitious names (such as "John Doe" or "Richard Roe") were allowed. — pledge, vb. — pledgeable, adj.

"A pledge is a bailment of personal property to secure an obligation of the bailor. If the purpose of the transaction is to transfer property for security only, then the courts will hold the transaction a pledge, even though in form it may be a sale or other out-and-out transfer." Ray Andrews Brown, The Law of Personal Property § 128, at 622 (2d ed. 1936).

"The pledge is as old as recorded history and is still in use, as the presence of pawnbrokers attests. In this transaction the debtor borrows money by physically transferring to a secured party the possession of the property to be used as security, and the property will be returned if the debt is repaid. Since the debtor does not retain the use of pledged goods, this security device has obvious disadvantages from the debtor's point of view." Ray D. Henson, Secured Transactions § 3-1, at 17 (3d ed. 1983).

pledged account. See account.
pledgee. One with whom a pledge is deposited. [Cases: Pledges (8-18)] plus petitio (plas-pa-tish-ee-oh). [Latin “overclaim” or “claiming too much”] Roman law. A claim for more than is due; esp., the mistake of claiming more in one's pleadings than is due. • This was fatal to the action under classical law. Under cognitio extraordinaria, however, a claimant could continue the action, but could be liable for treble damages to any person injured by the overstated claim. — Also spelled (erroneously) pluspetitio. — Also termed pluris petitio. "A plaintiff may overclaim . . . in substance (vis) when he claims a bigger amount than is due to him; in time (tempore) when he claims before the payment is due; in place (loco), when he claims at a place (in a city) other than that where the payment had to be performed . . . or in cause (causa) when he claims a certain thing although the debtor had the right to choose between two or more things . . . . After the abolition of the formula-regime the pluspetitio lost its actuality. Imperial legislation modified the severe provisions against overclaims . . . . In Justinian's law the plaintiff lost the case only if he maliciously persisted during the whole trial in his overclaim." Adolf Berger, Encyclopedic Dictionary of Roman Law 653 (1953).

portorum (por-tohr-ee-am). [Law Latin] Hist. 1. A tax or toll levied at a port or at the gates of a city. 2. A toll for passing over a bridge.

port-risk insurance. See INSURANCE.

portsale. Hist. A public sale of goods to the highest bidder; an auction.

port-state control. Maritime law. The exercise of authority by international conventions for a state to stop, board, inspect, and when necessary detain vessels sailing under foreign flags while they are navigating in the port state’s territorial waters or are in one of its ports. • The purpose is to ensure the safety of the vessels as well as to enforce environmental regulations. Cf. COASTAL-STATE CONTROL; FLAG-STATE CONTROL.

port toll. A duty paid for bringing goods into a port.

portwarden. An official responsible for the administration of a port.

po. se. abbr. PONTI SE SUPER PATRIAM.

posit, vb. 1. To presume true or to offer as true. 2. To present as an explanation.

position. The extent of a person’s investment in a particular security or market.

positional-risk doctrine. The principle by which the workers’-compensation requirement that the injury arise out of employment is satisfied if the injured worker's employment required the worker to be at the place where the injury occurred at the time it occurred. — Also termed positional risk analysis; positional risk test. [Cases: Workers’ Compensation 607.

position of the United States. (1981) The legal position of the federal government in a lawsuit, esp. in a case involving the Equal Access to Justice Act. • Under the EAJA, the reasonableness of the position in light of precedent determines whether the government will be liable for the opposing party’s attorney’s fees. [Cases: United States v. Rinaldo 147(10).]

positive law. (14c) A system of law promulgated and implemented within a particular political community by political superiors, as distinct from moral law or law existing in an ideal community or in some non-political community. • Positive law typically consists of enacted law — the codes, statutes, and regulations that are applied and enforced in the courts. The term derives from the medieval use of positum (Latin “established”), so that the phrase positive law literally means law established by human authority. • Also termed jus positivum; made law. Cf. NATURAL LAW.

"A judge is tethered to the positive law but should not be Shackled to it." Patrick Devlin, The Enforcement of Morals 94 (1968).

positivist, adj. Of or relating to legal positivism. See LEGAL POSITIVISM.

positivist jurisprudence. See positivist jurisprudence under JURISPRUDENCE.

possibility. See PSO. See in posse. Cf. IN ESSE.

possible test. See TEST.

possess, vb. (14c) To have in one's actual control; to have possession of.

possessio (poz-ë-së) [Latin] The de facto control of a thing that the holder intends to control.

pedis possessio (peë-dis or ped-is) [Latin] The legal control over something of which one has the apparent power of use or possession.

possessio civilis (poz-ë-së-cë-vë-lee-së-vë-li-së). [Latin] Roman law. Legal possession; that is, possession accompanied by an intent to hold it as one's own. Also termed possession in law. See possessory interdict under INTERDICT (1); usucapio; possession in law under POSSESSION. Cf. possessio naturalis.

possessio corporis. See corporeal possession under POSSESSION.

possessio fictitia. See constructive possession under POSSESSION.

possessio fratris (poz-ë-së-frat-tris). [Latin] Hist. The possession or seisin of a brother; that is, a possession of an estate by a brother that would entitle his full sister to succeed him as heir, to the exclusion of a half-brother.

possessio juris. See INCORPOREAL POSSESSION under POSSESSION.

possessio naturalis (poz-ë-së-nä-tur-äl-is). [Latin "natural possession"] Roman law. The simple holding of a thing, often under a contract, with no intent of keeping it permanently. • This type of possession exists when the possessor's holding of the object is limited by a recognition of another person's outstanding right. The holder may be a usufructuary, a bailee, or a servant. — Also termed naturalis possessio; nuda detentio; detentio; possession in fact. See natural possession under POSSESSION. Cf. possessio civilis.

possessio pedis. See pedis possessio.

possession, (14c) 1. The fact of having or holding property in one's power; the exercise of dominion over property. [Cases: Property ¶ 10.] 2. The right under which one may exercise control over something to the exclusion of all others; the continuing exercise of a claim to the exclusive use of a material object. 3. Civil law. The detention or use of a physical thing with the intent to hold it as one's own. La. Civ. Code art. 3421(1).

possession of goods. Something that a person owns or controls; PROPERTY (2). Cf. OWNERSHIP; TITLE (1). 5. A territorial dominion of a state or nation.

"As the name of Possession is ... one of the most important in our books, so it is one of the most ambiguous. Its legal senses (for they are several) overlap the popular sense, and even the popular sense includes the assumption of matters of fact which are not always easy to verify. In common speech a man is said to possess or to be in possession of anything of which he has the apparent control, or from the use of which he has the apparent power of excluding others. ... [Any of] the usual outward marks of ownership may suffice, in the absence of manifest power in some one else, to denote as having possession the person to whom they attach. Law takes this popular conception as a provisional groundwork, and builds up on it the notion of possession in a technical sense, as a definite legal relation to something capable of having an owner, which relation is distinct and separable both from real and from apparent ownership, though often concurrent with one or both of them." Frederick Pollock & Robert Samuel Wright, An Essay on Possession in the Common Law 1-2 (1888).

"In the whole range of legal theory there is no conception more difficult than that of possession. The Roman lawyers brought their usual acumen to the analysis of it, and since their day the problem has formed the subject of a voluminous literature, while it still continues to tax the ingenuity of jurists. Nor is the question one of mere curiosity or scientific interest, for its practical importance is not less than its difficulty. The legal consequences which flow from the acquisition and loss of possession are many and serious. Possession, for example, is evidence of ownership, the possessor of a thing is presumed to be the owner of it, and may put all other claimants to proof of their title. John Salmond, Jurisprudence 285 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

del non possession. (1815) Possession of property by a person who in good faith does not know that the possessor ceases to the thing corporeally. Though the person no longer occupies or has physical control of it, and may put all other claimants to proof of their title. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser ⊂ 220.]

civil possession. 1. Civil law. Possession existing by virtue of a person's intent to own property even though the person no longer occupies or has physical control of it. 2. Louisiana law. The continuation of possession through the possessor's presumed intent to continue holding the thing as his or her own, after the possessor's ceases to possess the thing corporeally. La. Civ. Code arts. 3431-32. • Civil possession may be evidenced by such things as paying taxes on the property or granting rights of interest in it. [Cases: Property ⊂ 10.]

constructive possession. (18c) 1. Control or dominion over a property without actual possession or custody of it. • Also termed effective possession. [Cases: Property ⊂ 10.] 2. Civil law. Possession by operation of law of an entirety by virtue of corporeal possession of a part. • When a possessor holds title to a property and physically possesses part of it, the law will deem the possessor to hold constructive possession of the rest of the property described in the title. La. Civ. Code art. 3426. • Also termed possessio fictitia; possession in law. Cf. actual possession.

corporeal possession. Possession of a material object, such as a farm or a coin. • Also termed natural possession; possesio corporis; (Ger.) Sachenbesitz. [Cases: Property ⊂ 10.]

criminal possession. (1811) The unlawful possession of certain prohibited articles, such as illegal drugs or drug paraphernalia, firearms, or stolen property. [Cases: Controlled Substances ⊂ 24; Receiving Stolen Goods ⊂ 1; Weapons ⊂ 4.] derivative possession. (1851) Lawful possession by one (such as a tenant) who does not hold title.

direct possession. See immediate possession.

double possession. The doctrine that, in a bailment, both the bailor and the bailee have possession of the item that has been bailed. • This doctrine does not apply to any Anglo-American jurisdictions.

"It has been suggested that the essence of bailment is that the bailor secures possession and therefore that the bailor loses possession. This elementary proposition is sometimes obscured by the fact that some dicta treat the possession of the bailee as the possession of the bailor. The theoretical justification for this is the doctrine of "double possession" — a principal may have possession through the possession of an agent. This view is in accord with some foreign systems, but it does not suit the basic principles of English law which treats possession as exclusive." G.W. Paton, Bailment in the Common Law 6 (1952).

exclusive possession. (18c) The exercise of exclusive dominion over property, including the use and benefit of the property.

hostile possession. (1812) Possession asserted against the claims of all others, esp. the record owner. See adverse possession. [Cases: Adverse Possession ⊂ 58-85.]

immediate possession. (17c) Possession that is acquired or retained directly or personally. • Also termed direct possession.

immemorial possession. Possession that began so long ago that no one still living witnessed its beginning.

incorporeal possession. (1964) Possession of something other than a material object, such as an easement over a neighbor's land, or the access of light to the windows of a house. • Also termed possessio juris; quasi-possession.

"It is a question much debated whether incorporeal possession is in reality true possession at all. Some are of opinion that all genuine possession is corporeal, and that the other is related to it by way of analogy merely. They maintain that there is no single generic conception which includes possessio corporis and possessio juris as its two specific forms. The Roman lawyers speak with hesitation and even inconsistency on the point. They sometimes include both forms under the title of possessio, while at other times they are careful to qualify incorporeal possession as quasi possessio — something which is not true possession, but is analogous to it. The question is one of no little difficulty, but the opinion here accepted is that the two forms do in truth belong to a single genus. The true idea of possession is wider than that of corporeal possession, just as the true idea of ownership is wider than that of corporeal ownership." John Salmond, Jurisprudence 288-89 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

insular possession. An island territory of the United States, such as Guam. [Cases: Territories ⊂ 7.]

joint possession. Possession shared by two or more persons.

mediate possession (mee-dee-ee). Possession of a thing through someone else, such as an agent. • In every instance of mediate possession, there is a direct possessor (such as an agent) as well as a mediate possessor (the principal). • Also termed indirect possession.

"If I go myself to purchase a book, I acquire direct possession of it; but if I send my servant to buy it for me, I acquire mediate possession of it through him, until he has brought it to me, when my possession becomes immediate." John Salmond, Jurisprudence 300 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

naked possession. (16c) The mere possession of something, esp. real estate, without any apparent right or colorable title to it. [Cases: Estates in Property ⊂ 1; Property ⊂ 10.] natural possession. Civil law. The exercise of physical detention or control over a thing, as by occupying a building or cultivating farmland. • Natural possession may be had without title, and may give rise to a claim of unlawful possession or a claim of ownership by acquisitive prescription. The term "natural possession" has been replaced by the term "corporeal possession" in the Louisiana Civil Code, by virtue of a 1982 revision. La. Civ. Code Ann. art. 3425. See corporeal possession; prescription (2). Cf. possessio naturalis under possession. [Cases: Adverse Possession <– 14; Property <– 10.]

notorious possession. (16c) Possession or control that is evident to others; possession of property that, because it is generally known by people in the area where the property is located, gives rise to a presumption that the actual owner has notice of it. • Notorious possession is one element of adverse possession. — Also termed open possession; open and notorious possession. See adverse possession. [Cases: Adverse Possession <– 28–33.]

open possession. See notorious possession.

peaceable possession. (16c) Possession (as of real property) not disturbed by another's hostile or legal attempts to recover possession; esp., wrongful possession that the rightful possessor has appeared to tolerate. Cf. scrambling possession (1); adverse possession.

pedal possession. (1839) Actual possession, as by living on the land or by improving it. • This term usu. appears in adverse-possession contexts.

possession animo domini. Civil law. Possession with the intent to own a thing, moveable or immovable; possession as an owner. See La. Civ. Code art. 3427.

possession by relation of law. A person's legally recognized possession of land despite the person's not having actual possession after being improperly or unlawfully dispossessed by another.

possession in fact. (17c) Actual possession that may or may not be recognized by law. • For example, an employee's possession of an employer's property is for some purposes not legally considered possession, the term detention or custody being used instead. — Also termed possessio naturalis.

possession in law. (16c) 1. Possession that is recognized by the law either because it is a specific type of possession in fact or because the law for some special reason attributes the advantages and results of possession to someone who does not in fact possess. 2. See constructive possession. — Also termed possessio civilis.

"There is no conception which will include all that amounts to possession in law, and will include nothing else, and it is impossible to frame any definition from which the concrete law of possession can be logically deduced." John Saimond, jurisprudence 287 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

possession of a right. (17c) The continuing exercise and enjoyment of a right. • This type of possession is often unrelated to an ownership interest in property. For example, a criminal defendant possesses the right to demand a trial by jury. — Also termed possessio juris; (Ger.) Rechtsbesitz.

precarious possession. Civil law. Detention of property by someone other than the owner or possessor on behalf of or with permission of the owner or possessor. • A lessee has precarious possession of the leased property.

"Article 3437 of the Louisiana Civil Code defines precarious possession as 'exercise of possession over a thing with the permission of or on behalf of the owner or possessor.' The definition indicates the difference between possession in the proper sense of the word and precarious possession, that is, detention. A possessor is one who possesses as owner, whereas a precarious possessor or detainer is one who exercises factual authority over a thing with the permission of or on behalf of another person." A.N. Yianopoulos, Civil Law Property § 319, at 629 (4th ed. 2001).

quasi-possession. See incorporeal possession.

scrambling possession. (1823) 1. A wrongful possession that the rightful possessor has not appeared to tolerate. Cf. peaceable possession. 2. Possession that is uncertain because it is in dispute. • With scrambling possession, the dispute is over who actually has possession — not over whether a party's possession is lawful.

substantial possession. See pedis possessio under possession.

possession unity. See unity of possession under unity.

possessio pedis. See pedis possessio under possession.

possessor. (15c) One who has possession of real or personal property; esp., a person who is in occupancy of land with the intent to control it or has been but no longer is in that position, but no one else has gained occupancy or has a right to gain it. — possessorial (pos-ə-sor-əl), adj.

legal possessor. (17c) One with the legal right to possess property, such as a buyer under a conditional sales contract, as contrasted with the legal owner who holds legal title. See legal owner under owner.

possessor bona fide (boh-na fī-dee). A possessor who believes that no other person has a better right to the possession.

possessor mala fide (mal-a fī-dee). A possessor who knows that someone else has a better right to the possession.

possessorium (pos-ə-sor-əm). See possessory action under action (4).

possessory (pa-zes-ə-ree), adj. Of, relating to, or having possession.

possessory action. See action (4).

possessory claim. (1833) Title to public land held by a claimant who has filed a declaratory statement but has not paid for the land. [Cases: Public Lands <– 31.]
possessory conservator. See noncustodial parent under PARENT.

possessory estate. See ESTATE (1).

possessory garageman's lien. See LIEN.

possessory interdict. See INTERDICT (1).

possessory interest. (18c) 1. The present right to control property, including the right to exclude others, by a person who is not necessarily the owner. [Cases: Property C=10.] 2. A present or future right to the exclusive use and possession of property.

"We shall use the term 'possessory interest' to include both present and future interests, and to exclude such interests as easements and profits. The reader should note that the Restatement of Property uses the term 'possessor' to refer only to interests that entitle the owner to present possession. See Restatement, Property §§ 7, 9, 153 (1936)." Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 19-20 n.1 (2d ed. 1984).

possessory lien. See LIEN.

possessory warrant. See WARRANT (1).

possibility. (14c) 1. An event that may or may not happen. 2. A contingent interest in real or personal property.

bare possibility. See naked possibility.

naked possibility. (18c) A mere chance or expectation that a person will acquire future property. • A conveyance of a naked possibility is usu. void for lack of subject matter, as in a deed conveying all rights to a future estate not yet in existence. — Also termed bare possibility; naked expectancy. [Cases: Assignments C=8.]

possibility coupled with an interest. (18c) An expectation recognized in law as an estate or interest, as occurs in an executory devise or in a shifting or springing use. • This type of possibility may be sold or assigned. See shifting use, springing use under use. [Cases: Assignments C=9.]

remote possibility. (17c) A limitation dependent on two or more facts or events that are contingent and uncertain; a double possibility. — Also termed possibility on a possibility.

possibility of reverter. (18c) A revocatory interest that is subject to a condition precedent; specific, a future interest retained by a grantor after conveying a fee simple determinable, so that the grantee's estate terminates automatically and reverts to the grantor if the terminating event ever occurs. • In this type of interest, the grantor transfers an estate whose maximum potential duration equals that of the grantor's own estate and attaches a special limitation that operates in the grantor's favor. — Often shortened to reverter. See fee simple determinable under FEE SIMPLE. Cf. REMAINDER (1); REVERSION.

1 American Law of Property § 4.12; Simes & Smith § 281. Although this definition is all right as far as it goes, it fails to provide for interests less than the fee simple that are granted on special limitation. • Although we call the possibility of reverter an 'estate,' the courts of an earlier era would probably have called it a 'possibility of becoming an estate.' "Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 58 n.5 (2d ed. 1984).

possibility on a possibility. See remote possibility under possibility.

possidere (pos-;}-dee-ree). [Latin fr. potis "having power" + sedere "to sit"] Hist. To possess (a thing), esp. as a person with an interest protected by law (e.g., an owner or mortgagee) rather than a mere custodian.

"A distinction was made in the civil law, and adopted by Bracton, between possidere, (to possess), and esse in possessione, (to be in possession). . . . Thus, a guardian, holding in demesne though not in fee was said to be in possession, though he did not possess. The same language was applied to a bailiff, . . . a domestic, . . . a fermor or lessee, . . . and a tenant at will from day to day, and from year to year." 2 Alexander M. Burrill, A Law Dictionary and Glossary 314 (2d ed. 1867).

POSSLQ (pahs-al-kyoo). abbr. A person of opposite sex sharing living quarters. • Although this term (which is used by the Census Bureau) is intended to include only a person's roommate of the opposite sex to whom the person is not married, the phrase literally includes those who are married. This overbreadth has occasionally been criticized. See CUPOS.

"In the 1980 census, the United States Census Bureau — recognizing a societal change with numerous persons living together without being 'officially' married — counted not only persons who were 'Single' and 'Married,' but also 'Persons of the Opposite Sex Sharing Living Quarters.' The acronym is POSSLQ — and, of course, is pronounced possi-le-kw. It has been suggested that, although the source was stunningly unlikely, it was the Very Word that society has been looking for to describe these relationships: POSSLQ. Precise, businesslike, nonjudgmental. And, in its own way, sort of poetic, too . . . ." Fischer v. Dallas Federal Savings and Loan Ass'n, 106 F.R.D. 465 (N.D. Tex. 1983).

post, vb. (17c) 1. To publicize or announce by affixing a notice in a public place <foreclosure notice was posted at the county courthouse>. 2. To transfer (accounting entries) from an original record to a ledger <post debits and credits>. 3. To place in the mail <post a letter>. [Cases: Postal Service C=19.] 4. To make a payment or deposit; to put up <post bail>.

postal currency. See CURRENCY.

Postal Rate Commission. An independent federal agency that recommends changes in postage rates, fees, and mail classifications to the governors of the United States Postal Service. • It was created by the Postal Reorganization Act. 39 USCA §§ 3601–04. — Abbr. PRC. [Cases: Postal Service C=15.]

post-answer default judgment. See DEFAULT JUDGMENT.

post audit. See AUDIT.

post bail, vb. See GIVE BAIL.

post contractum debitum (pohst kan-trak-tam deb-i-tam). [Latin] Hist. After debt has been contracted.

postconviction-relief proceeding. (1964) A state or federal procedure for a prisoner to request a court to vacate or correct a conviction or sentence. — Also termed postconviction-remedy proceeding; PCR action; postconviction proceeding. [Cases: Criminal Law C. 1400–1669.]

postdate, vb. (17c) To put a date on (an instrument, such as a check) that is later than the actual date. Cf. antedate; backdate. [Cases: Bills and Notes C. 8.]

post diem (pohst di-am). [Latin] After the day. • A plea of payment post diem is made after the day when the money becomes due.

post disseisina. See de post disseisina.

postea (pohb-stee-a), n. [Latin “afterwards”] Hist. A formal statement, endorsed on the trial record, giving an account of the proceedings at trial; a record of what occurred at nisi prius after the issue had been joined.

"With the verdict of the jury [in the 15th–18th centuries] ... the proceedings at nisi prius closed, and the case was sent back to the court at Westminster from which it issued for judgment, after a statement of the holding of the trial and of the verdict had been added to the record. This statement, from the fact that it began with the Latin word ‘postea,’ or ‘afterwards,’ was known as the ‘postea’ and was in fact drafted by the party in whose favour the verdict had gone, whence the phrase ‘postea to the plaintiff’ or ‘the defendant,’ which is found in the old reports." Geoffrey Radcliffe & Geoffrey Cross, The English Legal System 185 (G.J. Hand & D.J. Bentley eds., 6th ed. 1977).

posteriores (pah-steer-ee-or-eez), n. pl. [Latin] Roman law. Descendants in a direct line beyond the sixth degree.

posterity (pah-steer-ee-or-tee). The condition or state of being subsequent. • This word was formerly used to describe the relationships existing between a tenant and the two or more lords the tenant held of; the tenant held the older tenancy “by priority” and the more recent one “by posterity.”

posterity, n. (14c) 1. Future generations collectively. 2. All the descendants of a person to the furthest generation.

post-expiration-sales theory. Patents. A theory of lost-profits remedy by which compensation is sought for sales lost after a patent expired, on the basis that infringement gave the competitor a head start on entering the market. — Also termed accelerated reentry theory. [Cases: Patents C. 318(3).]

post facto (pohst fak-toh). [Latin] After the fact. See EX POST FACTO.

post-glossators (pohst-glah-say-tarz), n. pl. (often cap.) A group of mainly Italian jurisconsults who were active during the 14th and 15th centuries writing commentaries and treatises that related Roman law to feudal and Germanic law, canon law, and other contemporary bodies of law. • The postglossators constituted the second wave of Roman-law study after its revival in the 11th century, the first being that of the glossators. — Also termed commentators. See GLOSSATORS.

post hoc (pohst hok). [Latin fr. post hoc, ergo propter hoc “after this, therefore because of this”] (1844) 1. adv. After this; subsequently. 2. adj. Of or relating to the fallacy of assuming causality from temporal sequence; confusing sequence with consequence.

posthumous (pos-cha-mas), adj. Occurring or existing after death; esp., (of a child) born after the father’s death.

posthumous adoption. See ADOPTION.

posthumous child. See CHILD.

posting. (17c) 1. Accounting. The act of transferring an original entry to a ledger. 2. The act of mailing a letter. 3. A method of substituted service of process by displaying the process in a prominent place (such as the courthouse door) when other forms of service have failed. See SERVICE (1). [Cases: Process C. 81.] 4. A publication method, as by displaying municipal ordinances in designated localities. [Cases: Municipal Corporations C. 110.] 5. The act of providing legal notice, as by affixing notices of judicial sales at or on the courthouse door. [Cases: Judicial Sales C. 11.] 6. The procedure for processing a check, including one or more of the following steps: (1) verifying any signature, (2) ascertaining that sufficient funds are available, (3) affixing a “paid” or other stamp, (4) entering a charge or entry to a customer’s account, and (5) correcting or reversing an entry or erroneous action concerning the check. [Cases: Banks and Banking C. 137.]

post-issue activity. Patents. Any acts done during a patent’s term, including making, using, or selling a patented invention or process, esp. without authorization.

postliminium (pohst-I03-min-ee-m). By ‘limen’ (threshold) we mean the frontier of the Roman State; so that the word postliminium is used to describe the relationships existing between a tenant and the two or more lords the tenant held of; the tenant held the older tenancy “by priority” and the more recent one “by posterity.”

postlittor (pohst-lit-tor). [Latin fr. post litora, post “after” + “litora” “coast,” “shore,” “frontier”] I. Roman & civil law. The recentering of one’s residence. 2. Roman & civil law. The doctrine that a restoration of a person’s lost rights or status relates back to the time of the original loss or deprivation, esp. in regard to the restoration of the status of a prisoner of war.

"[A] person who is taken captive and comes back within the limits of the Empire is correctly described as returning by postlittorium. By ‘litora’ (threshold) we mean the frontier of a house, and the old lawyers applied the word to the frontier of the Roman State; so that the word postlittorium conveys the idea of recrossing the frontier. If a prisoner is recovered from a beaten foe he is deemed to have come back by postlittorium," R.W. Lee, The Elements of Roman Law 85–86 (4th ed. 1958).

post meridiem

postmaster. A U.S. Postal Service official responsible for postmark. An official mark put by the post office on postmarital,

postman (pohst-mon). Hist. A barrister in the Court postnuptial settlement. See POSTNUPTIAL AGREEMENT.

postnuptial (pohst-nup-shul). adj. (1807) Made or occurring during marriage . Cf. PRENUPTIAL.

postnuptial agreement (pohst-nup-shul). (1834) An agreement entered into during marriage to define each spouse's property rights in the event of death or divorce. • The term commonly refers to an agreement between spouses during the marriage at a time when separation or divorce is not imminent. When dissolution is intended as the result, it is more properly called a property settlement or marital agreement. — Often shortened to postnup. — Also termed postnuptial settlement. Cf. PRENUPTIAL AGREEMENT. [Cases: Husband and Wife 30, 31.]

postnuptial will. See WILL.

post-obit agreement. See BOND (3).

PRP. See superfund.

potential Pareto superiority. See wealth maximization.

potestas (pa-tes-tas or -tas), n. [Latin "power"] Roman law. Authority or power, such as the power of a magistrate to enforce the law, or the authority of an owner over a slave.

patria potestas (pay-tree-ah or pa-tree-a). [Latin "paternal power"] The authority held by the male head of a family (the senior descendant male) over his legitimate and adopted children, as well as further descendants in the male line, unless emancipated. • Initially, the father had extensive powers over the family, including the power of life and death; until Justinian’s time, the father alone in his familia had proprietary capacity but he could give a son or save a peculium. Over time, the broad nature of the patria potestas gradually became more in the nature of a responsibility to support and maintain family members. But except in early Roman history, a wife did not fall into her husband’s power but remained in her father’s until she became sui juris by his death. — Also termed fatherly power.

The power of the father continued ordinarily to the close of his life, and included not only his own children, but also the children of his sons, and those of his sons’ sons, if any such were born during his lifetime. . . . Originally and for a long time the patria potestas had a terribly despotic character. Not only was the father entitled to all the service and all the acquisitions of his child, as much as to those of a slave, but he had the same absolute control over his person. He could inflict upon him any punishment however severe. . . . Consider now that the patria potestas had this character and extent down to the Christian era: that, in general, every citizen of the republic who had a living father was in this condition, unable to hold property, unable to acquire any thing for himself, wholly dependent on his father in property and person . . . without help or vindication from the law, . . . The reason which caused the Romans to accept and uphold the patria potestas, to maintain it with singular tenacity against the influence of other systems with which they came in contact, must have been the profound impression of family unity, the conviction that every family was, and of right ought to be, one body, with one will and one executive. — James Hadley, Introduction to Roman Law 119-21 (1881).

"Nature and Extent of Patra Potestas. — From the most remote ages the power of a Roman father over his children, including those by adoption as well as by blood, was unlimited. A father might, without violating any law, scourge or imprison his son, or sell him for a slave, or put him to death, even after that son had risen to the highest honours in the state. This jurisdiction was not merely nominal, but, in early times, was not infrequently exercised to its full extent, and was confirmed by the laws of the XII Tables, . . . By degrees the right of putting a child to death (ius vitae at necis) fell into desuetude; and long before the close of the republic, the execution of a son by order of his father, although not forbidden by any positive statute, was regarded as something strange, and, unless under extraordinary circumstances, monstrous. But the right continued to exist in theory . . . after the establishment of the empire. [In the Christian empire, these extreme punishments were forbidden and disciplinary powers were reduced to those of reasonable chastisement. — Ed.] William Ramsay, A Manual of Roman Antiquities 291-92 (Rodolfo Lanciani ed., 15th ed. 1894).

pouvoir will. See pourover will.
pourparler (poor-pahr-lar), vb. [French] To informally discuss before actual negotiating begins. — pourparler, n.

pour seisir terres (poor si-zar ter-eez). [Law French "for seizing the lands"] Hist. A writ by which the Crown could seize land that the wife of its deceased tenant, who held in capite, had for her dower if she married without leave.

power. (13c) 1. The ability to act or not act; esp., a person's capacity for acting in such a manner as to control someone else's responses. 2. Dominance, control, or influence over another; control over one's subordinates. 3. The legal right or authorization to act or not act; a person's or organization's ability to act, by an act of will, the rights, duties, liabilities, or other legal relations either of that person or of another.

"A power is the capacity to change a legal relationship. In this terminology the offeree has, before the contract is made, a power to create a contract by means of acceptance." E. Allan Farnsworth, Contracts § 3.4, at 114 n.3 (3d ed. 1999).

agent's power. The ability of an agent or apparent agent to act on behalf of the principal in matters connected with the agency or apparent agency. [Cases;: Principal and Agent 49, 91–126.]

concurrent power. (1812) A political power independently exercisable by both federal and state governments in the same field of legislation.

congressional power. The authority vested in the U.S. Senate and House of Representatives to enact laws and take other constitutionally permitted actions. U.S. Const. art. I. [Cases;: United States 22.]

delegated power. Power normally exercised by an authority that has temporarily conferred the power on a lower authority. [Cases;: Powers 1.]

derivative power. Power that arises only from a grant of authority. ♦ Power may be derived, for example, by an agent from a principal, or by a head of state from constitutional or statutory provisions. [Cases;: Powers 1.]

discretionary power. A power that a person may choose to exercise or not, based on the person's judgment.

enumerated power. (1805) A political power specifically delegated to a governmental branch by a constitution. — Also termed express power. [Cases;: Constitutional Law 635–639.]

fatherly power. See patria potestas under potestas.

implied power. (1807) A political power that is not enumerated but that nonetheless exists because it is needed to carry out an express power. [Cases;: Administrative Law and Procedure 325; Powers 1.]

incident power. (17c) A power that, although not expressly granted, must exist because it is necessary to the accomplishment of an express purpose. — Also termed incidental power.

inherent power. (17c) A power that necessarily derives from an office, position, or status.

institorial power (in sto-ter ee-al). Civil law. The power given by a business owner to an agent to act in the owner's behalf.

investigatory power (in-ves-to-ga-tor-ee). (usu. pl.) The authority conferred on a governmental agency to inspect and compel disclosure of facts germane to an investigation. [Cases;: Administrative Law and Procedure 346.]

judicial power. See judicial power.

mediate powers. See mediate powers.

naked power. (18c) The power to exercise rights over something (such as a trust) without having a corresponding interest in that thing. Cf. power coupled with an interest.

particular power. See special power.

plenary power (plee-na-rec or plean-tee). (16c) Power that is broadly construed; esp., a court's power to dispose of any matter properly before it. [Cases;: Courts 1, 26, 30, 207.1.]

power coupled with an interest. (18c) A power to do some act, conveyed along with an interest in the subject matter of the power. ♦ A power coupled with an interest is not held for the benefit of the principal, and it is irrevocable due to the agent's interest in the subject property. For this reason, some authorities assert that it is not a true agency power. — Also termed power given as security; proprietary power. See irrevocable power of attorney under power of attorney. Cf. naked power. [Cases;: Powers 27.]

"[S]uppose that the principal borrows money from the agent and by way of security authorizes the agent to sell Blackacre if the loan is not repaid and pay himself out of the proceeds. In such case there is no more reason why the principal should be permitted to revoke than if he had formally conveyed or mortgaged Blackacre to the agent. Hence it would be highly unfair to the agent to allow his principal to revoke. The reason why such a case is not properly governed by the considerations usually making an agency revocable is that this is in reality not a case of agency at all. In a normal agency case the power is conferred upon the agent to enable him to do something for the principal while here it is given to him to enable him to do something for himself. Coupled with an interest means that the agent must have a present interest in the property upon which the power is to operate." Harold Gill Reuschlein & William A. Gregory, The Law of Agency and Partnership § 47, at 99 (1990).

power given as security. See power coupled with an interest.
power of acceptance. An offeree’s power to bind an offeror to a contract by accepting the offer. [Cases: Contracts C-16, 22(1).]

power of revocation (rev-a kay-shan). (17c) A power that a person reserves in an instrument (such as a trust) to revoke the legal relationship that the person has created. [Cases: Contracts C-217; Powers C-19; Trusts C-59.]

power of sale. A power granted to sell the property that the power relates to. • The power’s exercise is often conditioned on the occurrence of a specific event, such as the nonpayment of a debt. [Cases: Powers C-20.]

power over other persons. See authority (1).

primary powers. See primary powers.

private power. A power vested in a person to be exercised for personal ends and not as an agent for the state.

proprietary power. See power coupled with an interest.

public power. A power vested in a person as an agent or instrument of the functions of the state. • Public powers comprise the various forms of legislative, judicial, and executive authority. [Cases: Officers and Public Employees C-103.]

quasi-judicial power. (152) An administrative agency’s power to adjudicate the rights of those who appear before it. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure C-108.]

quasi-legislative power. (1864) An administrative agency’s power to engage in rulemaking. 5 USC A § 553. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure C-106, 385.]

reserved power. (1831) A political power that is not enumerated or prohibited by a constitution, but instead is reserved by the constitution for a specified political authority, such as a state government. See TENTH AMENDMENT.

restraining power. A power to restrict the acts of others.

resulting power. A political power derived from the aggregate powers expressly or impliedly granted by a constitution.

special power. (18c) 1. An agent’s limited authority to perform only specific acts or to perform under specific restrictions. — Also termed particular power. [Cases: Powers C-19.] 2. See limited power of appointment under power of appointment.

spending power. (1923) The power granted to a governmental body to spend public funds; esp., the congressional power to levy and collect taxes as a means of effectuating Congress’s delegated powers. U.S. Const. art. I, § 8, cl. 1. See SIXTEENTH AMENDMENT. [Cases: Internal Revenue C-3001–3008; [Cases: Taxation C-2003–2007.]

visitorial power. The power to inspect or make decisions about an entity’s operations. — Also termed visitorial power.

4. A document granting legal authorization. See authority. 5. An authority to affect an estate in land by (1) creating some estate independently of any estate that the holder of the authority possesses, (2) imposing a charge on the estate, or (3) revoking an existing estate. See power of appointment; permit. [Cases: Powers C-1.]

The word ‘power’ is normally used in the sense of an authority given to a person to dispose of property which is not his. The person giving the power is called the donor and the person to whom it is given the donee.” Robert E. Megarry & P.V. Baker, A Manual of the Law of Real Property 253 (4th ed. 1969).

appendant power (a-pen-dant). (17c) 1. A power that gives the donee a right to appoint estates that attach to the donee’s own interest. 2. A power held by a donee who owns the property interest in the assets subject to the power, and whose interest can be divested by the exercise of the power. • The appendant power is generally viewed as adding nothing to the ownership and thus is not now generally recognized as a true power. — Also termed power appurtenant. [Cases: Powers C-23.]

avoiding power. Bankruptcy. The power of a bankruptcy trustee or debtor in possession to void certain transfers made or obligations incurred by a debtor, including fraudulent conveyances, preferences transferred to creditors, unperfected security interests in personal property, and unrecorded mortgages. 11 USC A §§ 544–53. [Cases: Bankruptcy C-2703, 2704.]

beneficial power. (18c) A power that is executed for the benefit of the power’s donee, as distinguished from a trust power, which is executed for the benefit of someone other than the power’s donee (i.e., a trust beneficiary). [Cases: Powers C-25.]

collateral power. A power created when the donee has no estate in the land, but simply the authority to appoint. [Cases: Powers C-25.]

limited power. See power of appointment.

mandatory power. A power that the donee must exercise and must do so only as instructed, without discretion.

power given as security. See power coupled with an interest under power (3).

power of alienation. (16c) The capacity to sell, transfer, assign, or otherwise dispose of property.

power of appointment. (18c) A power created or reserved by a person having property subject to disposition, enabling the donee of the power to designate transferees of the property or shares in which it will be received; esp., a power conferred on a donee by will or deed to select and determine one or more recipients of the donor’s estate or income. • If the power is exercisable before the donee’s death, it is exercisable wholly in favor of the donee. If the power is testamentary, it is exercisable wholly in favor of the donee’s estate. • Often shortened to power. • Also termed enabling power. [Cases: Powers v. Powers (1940); Wills v. Wills (1961).]

general power of appointment. (18c) A power of appointment by which the donee can appoint — that is, dispose of the donor’s property — in favor of anyone at all, including oneself or one’s own estate; esp., a power that authorizes the alienation of a fee to any alienee. • Often shortened to general power. [Cases: Powers v. Powers (1940); Wills v. Wills (1961).] limited power of appointment. (1830) A power of appointment that either does not allow the entire estate to be conveyed or restricts to whom the estate may be conveyed; esp., a power by which the donee can appoint to only the person or class specified in the instrument creating the power, but cannot appoint to oneself or one’s own estate. • Often shortened to limited power. • Also termed special power of appointment. [Cases: Powers v. Powers (1940); Wills v. Wills (1961).] special power of appointment. See limited power of appointment.

testamentary power of appointment (tes-ta-men-to-tree or treeree). (1858) A power of appointment created by a will. • Often shortened to testamentary power. [Cases: Wills v. Wills (1961).]

power of attorney. (18c) 1. An instrument granting someone authority to act as agent or attorney-in-fact for the grantor. • An ordinary power of attorney is revocable and automatically terminates upon the death or incapacity of the principal. • Also termed letter of attorney, warrant of attorney. See attorney (1). [Cases: Principal and Agent v. Smith (1901).] 2. The authority so granted; specif., the legal ability to produce a change in legal relations by doing whatever acts are authorized. Pl. powers of attorney.

durable power of attorney. (1980) A power of attorney that remains in effect during the principal’s incompetency. • Such instruments commonly allow an agent to make health care decisions for a patient who has become incompetent. [Cases: Principal and Agent v. Smith (1901).]

general power of attorney. (18c) A power of attorney that authorizes an agent to transact business for the principal. Cf. special power of attorney. [Cases: Principal and Agent v. Smith (1901).]

irrevocable power of attorney (i-rev-a-ka-bal). (18c) A power of attorney that the principal cannot revoke. • Also termed power of attorney coupled with an interest. See power coupled with an interest under power (3). [Cases: Principal and Agent v. Smith (1901).]

coupled with an interest. See irrevocable power of attorney.

power of attorney for healthcare. See advance directive (1).

special power of attorney. (18c) A power of attorney that limits the agent’s authority to only a specified matter. Cf. general power of attorney.

springing power of attorney. A power of attorney that becomes effective only when needed, at some future date or upon some future occurrence, usu. upon the principal’s incapacity. • Also termed springing durable power of attorney. See durable power of attorney; advance directive.

power of revocation (rev-a-kay-shun). See power (3).

power-of-sale clause. (1883) A provision in a mortgage or deed of trust permitting the mortgagee or trustee to sell the property without court authority if the payments are not made. [Cases: Mortgages v. Smith (1901).]

power-of-sale foreclosure. See foreclosure.

power of termination. (1919) A future interest retained by a grantor after conveying a fee simple subject to a condition subsequent, so that the grantee’s estate terminates (upon breach of the condition) only if the grantor exercises the right to retake it. • Also termed right of entry; right of reentry; right of entry for breach of condition; right of entry for condition broken. See fee simple subject to a condition subsequent under fee simple. Cf. possibility of reverter. [Cases: Deeds v. Smith (1901).]

power politics. int'l law. An approach to foreign policy that encourages a nation to use its economic and military strength to enlarge its own power as an end in itself; a system in which a country is willing to bring its economic and (esp.) military strength to bear in an effort to increase its own power.

power to inspect. Patents. The authority of a third party to review a patent application. • The power may be given by the applicant or an assignee, often to a potential buyer. It must specify which application the person is authorized to see, and it becomes part of the record of the application. See access (4), (5). [Cases: Patents C--;97.]

practice guide. A written explanation of how to proceed in a particular area of law or in a particular court or locality.

practice of law. (17c) The professional work of a duly licensed lawyer, encompassing a broad range of services such as conducting cases in court, preparing papers necessary to bring about various transactions from conveying land to effecting corporate mergers, preparing legal opinions on various points of law, drafting wills and other estate-planning documents, and advising clients on legal questions. • The term also includes activities that comparatively few lawyers engage in but that require legal expertise, such as drafting legislation and court rules. — Also termed legal practice. Cf. law practice. [Cases: Attorney and Client C--;11.]

multidisciplinary practice of law. See multidisciplinary practice.

unauthorized practice of law. (1928) The practice of law by a person, typically a nonlawyer, who has not been licensed or admitted to practice law in a given jurisdiction. — Abbr. UPL. [Cases: Attorney and Client C--;11.]

The definitions and tests employed by courts to delineate unauthorized practice by non-lawyers have been vague or conclusory, while jurisdictions have differed significantly in describing what constitutes unauthorized practice in particular areas.

Certain activities, such as the representation of another person in litigation, are generally proscribed. Even in that area, many jurisdictions recognize exceptions for such matters as small claims and landlord-tenant tribunals and certain proceedings in administrative agencies. Moreover, many jurisdictions have authorized law students and others not locally admitted to represent indigent persons or others as part of clinical legal education programs.

Controversy has surrounded many out-of-court activities such as advising on estate planning by bank trust officers, advising on estate planning by insurance agents, stock brokers, or benefit-plan and similar consultants, filling out or providing guidance on forms for property transactions by real estate agents, title companies, and closing-service companies, and selling books or individual forms containing instructions on self-help legal services accompanied by personal, non-lawyer assistance on filling them out in connection with legal procedures such as obtaining a marriage dissolution. The position of bar associations has traditionally been that non-lawyer provisions of such services denies the person served the benefit of such legal measures as the attorney-client privilege, the benefits of such extraordinary duties as that of confidentiality of client information and the protection against conflicts of interest, and the protection of such measures as those regulating lawyer trust accounts and requiring lawyers to supervise non-lawyer personnel. Several jurisdictions recognize that many such services can be provided by non-lawyers without significant risk of incompetent service, that actual experience in several states with extensive non-lawyer provision of traditional legal services indicates no significant risk of harm to consumers of such services, that persons in need of legal services may be significantly aided in obtaining assistance at a much lower price than would be entailed by segregating out a portion of a transaction to be handled by a lawyer for a fee, and that many persons can ill afford, and most persons are at least inconveniently, by the typically higher cost of lawyer services.” Restatement (Third) of the Law Governing Lawyers § 4 cmt. c (1998).

practicks (prak-tiks). Hist. Scots law. (usu. pl.) An old collection of notes about points of practice, decisions of the Court of Sessions, statutes, and forms, compiled by members of the court. • An example is Balfour’s Practicks (1469–1579). A precursor of law reports, the notes remain historical legal literature of some authority.

practitioner. (16c) A person engaged in the practice of a profession, esp. law or medicine.

"Praeciptio haeredatis . . . . This is one of the passive titles known in law, which, if incurred by the heir, renders him in some measure liable for his ancestor’s debts. It was introduced to prevent an heir from receiving and enjoying, under a gratuitous disposition inter vivos from his ancestor, that heritable estate to which he would be entitled to succeed on the ancestor’s death, and of thus avoiding responsibility for his ancestor’s debts and other obligations." John Trayner, Trayner’s Latin Maxims 466–67 (4th ed. 1894).

praeceipe (pree-sa-pee or pres-a-pee), n. [Latin “command”] (15c) 1. At common law, a writ ordering a defendant to do some act or to explain why inaction is appropriate. • Also termed writ of praecipe. 2. A written motion or request seeking some court action, esp. a trial setting or an entry of judgment. • Also spelled precipe. • praecipe, vb.

praecipe quod reddat (pree-sa-pee or pres-a-pee kwod red-at). [Latin “command that he render”] Hist. A writ directing the defendant to return certain property. • An action for common recovery was often begun with this writ. When the writ was brought to recover land, it was termed ingressus. See COMMON RECOVERY.

"The praecipe quod reddat was the proper writ when the plaintiff’s action was for a specific thing; as for the recovery of a debt certain, or for the restoration of such a chattel, or for giving up such a house, or so much land, specifying the nature and quantity of it. By this writ the sheriff was commanded to summon the tenant or defendant to appear at Westminster, at such a day in term.* 1 George Crompton, Cases and Cases of Practice in the Courts of King’s Bench and Common Pleas xxxix (3d ed. 1787).

praecipiitum (pree-sipish-ee-am or pres-a-)., n. [Latin “headlong fall”] Roman law. The punishment of casting a criminal from the Tarpeian rock.

praecipuum (pri-sip-yoo-am), n. [Latin] Hist. The estate portion that is not subject to rules of division; the part of an estate that one claimant (usu. the eldest heir-portion) receives to the exclusion of all others.

praeco (pree-koh), n. [Latin] Roman law. A herald or crier.

praedia (pree-dee-ah), n. [Latin] The plural of praedium (land; an estate). See PRAEDIAM.

praedial tithe. See PRAEDIAL TITHE.

praedictus (pri-dik tas), adj. [Law Latin] Hist. Aforesaid. • In pleading, praedictus usu. referred to a defendant, a town, or lands, idem to a plaintiff, and praefatus to a person other than a party. Cf. PRAEFATUS.

praedum urbanum (pree-dee-ah bay-nam). [Latin] An estate used for business or for dwelling; any estate other than a praedium rusticum. See urban servitude (2) under SERVITUDE (2).

praefatus (pri-fay-tos), adj. [Latin] Aforesaid. • Also termed praefat; p. fat. Cf. PRAEDITUS.

praefectura (pri-fek-char-ah), n. [Latin] Roman law. 1. The office of prefect. 2. A town or territory administered by a prefect.

praefectus urbi (pri-fek-tus ar-bi). [Latin “prefect of the city”] Roman law. A senator charged with keeping law and order in the city of Rome. • This duty originated in the early Empire. The praefectus had both criminal and civil jurisdiction; the latter was gradually taken over from the praetor, although the praefectus’s civil jurisdiction was always cognito. • Also termed urban prefect; prefect of the city.

"Praefectus urbi. The prefect of the city was originally a mere delegate appointed in case of the temporary absence of the emperor, but the office became a permanency owing to Tiberius’ continued residence away from Rome in the latter part of his reign, and under subsequent emperors..."
praemunire (pri-pree-moo-nI-ree), n. [Latin "the price of chastity"] Roman law. An objection on the ground that the person objecting is not subject to the court's jurisdiction.

praescriptio (pri-skrip-shee-oh), n. [Latin] Roman law. A preliminary portion of a formula that defines the scope of action. 1. A defensive plea in an action to recover land by which the defendant asserts ownership based on continuous possession for a prescribed time. — Also termed (in sense 2) praescriptio longi temporis. Pl. praescriptiones (pri-skrip-shee-oh-neez).

praescriptio fori (pri-skrip-shee-oh for-i), [Latin] Roman law. An objection on the ground that the person objecting is not subject to the court's jurisdiction.

praescriptio verbis (pri-skrip-tis var-bis), [Latin] "in the words before written" 1. Roman law. An action on a bilateral agreement under which one party had performed and required the other to perform in turn. 2. Roman law. The grounds given for the existence of a contract that falls into the class later described as innominate. • Innominate contracts were developed and recognized late in classical law.
praeses (pree-seez), n. [Latin] 1. Roman law. A governor of a province. 2. The president of a college or university.

praestare (pree-stair-ee), vb. [Latin] Roman law. 1. To perform an obligation. 2. To undertake liability.

praestatia culpa levis (pri-stay-shee-oh kol-pee lee-vis). [Law Latin] Hist. An obligation for the middle degree of diligence — that is, the diligence and care required by a person of ordinary prudence. • This phrase was a forerunner of the modern terms reasonable care and reasonable person.

praesumitur pro negante (pri-zoom-meet-ur proh ni-gan-tee). [Latin] It is presumed for the negative. • This is the rule of the House of Lords when the votes are equal on a motion.

praesumptio fortior (pri-zamp-shee-oh for-shee-oh or -or). [Latin] A strong presumption (of fact); a presumption strong enough to shift the burden of proof to the opposing party.

praesumptio hominis (pri-zamp-shee-oh hom-a-nis). [Latin] The presumption of an individual; that is, a natural presumption unfettered by rules.

praesumptio juris (pri-zamp-shee-oh joor-is). [Latin] A presumption of law; that is, one in which the law assumes the existence of something until it is disproved. See presumption of law and rebuttable presumption under presumption.

praesumptio Muciana (pri-zamp-shee-oh myoo-shee-ay-na). [Latin] Roman law. The rebuttable presumption that in case of doubt a thing possessed by a married woman had been given to her by her husband. • The presumption was named after the jurist Quintus Mucius.

praetor (pree-tar), n. [Latin] Roman law. The magistrate responsible for identifying and framing the legal issues in a case and for ordering a lay judge (judex) to hear evidence and decide the case in accordance with the formula. See FORMULA (1).

praetor fideicommissarius (pree-tar fi-dee-kom-a-sair-ee-as). A special praetor having jurisdiction over cases involving trusts.

praetorian edict. See edictum praetoris under EDICTUM.

praevardicatio (pri-va-ray-shee-oh). n. [Latin] "collusion with an opponent". Roman law. An accuser's colluding with the defense in such a way that the accused will be acquitted. • An accuser might do this in various ways, as by de-emphasizing the most important charges, refraining from calling the most important witnesses, or refraining from exercising peremptory challenges against jurors who would tend to favor the accused. See CAULMINIA. Cf. TERGIVERSATIO.

praevardicator (pree-var-a-kay-tar). See PREVARICATOR.

praevento termino (pri-ven-toh tar-ma-noh). [Law Latin "by anticipating the term"]. Scots law. An action in the Court of Session to prevent a delay in a suspension or an appeal. See SUSPENSION (6).

pratique (pra-teek or prat-ik). Maritime law. A license allowing a vessel to trade in a particular country or port after complying with quarantine requirements or presenting a clean bill of health.

praxis (prak-sis). [Greek "doing; action"] (1933) In critical legal studies, practical action; the practice of living the ethical life in conjunction and in cooperation with others.

prayer conference. See CHARGE CONFERENCE.

prayer for relief. (18c) A request addressed to the court and appearing at the end of a pleading; esp., a request for specific relief or damages. — Often shortened to prayer. — Also termed demand for relief; request for relief. See AD DAMNUM CLAUSE. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure C=680; Pleading C=72.]

“The prayer for relief. The plaintiff prays in his bill for the relief to which he supposes himself entitled on the case made out in the bill. This is called the special prayer. He then prays for general relief, usually in these words: 'And the plaintiff (or your orator) prays for such further or other relief as the nature of the case may require, and as may be agreeable to equity and good conscience.' Both prayers are generally inserted in the bill, — the special prayer first, the general following." Edwin F. Bryant. The Law of Pleading Under the Codes of Civil Procedure 69 (2d ed. 1899).

general prayer. (18c) A prayer for additional unspecified relief, traditionally using language such as, "Plaintiff additionally prays for such other and further relief to which she may show herself to be justly entitled." • The general prayer typically follows a special prayer. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure C=2585; Judgment C=252; Pleading C=72.]

special prayer. (18c) A prayer for the particular relief to which a plaintiff claims to be entitled. [Cases: Judgment C=252; Pleading C=72.]

prayer in aid. See AID PRAYER.

prayer of process. (18c) A conclusion in a bill in equity requesting the issuance of a subpoena if the defendant fails to answer the bill. [Cases: Equity C=139.]

P.R.C. abbr. POSTAL RATE COMMISSION.

preamble (pree-am-bal), n. (14c) 1. An introductory statement in a constitution, statute, or other document explaining the document’s basis and objective; esp., a
The statutory recital of the inconveniences for which the statute is designed to provide a remedy. A preamble often consists of a series of clauses introduced by the conjunction whereas. Such a preamble is sometimes called the whereas clauses. [Cases: Statutes C±210.]

The preamble cannot control the enacting part of the statute, in cases where the enacting part is expressed in clear, unambiguous terms; but in case any doubt arises on the enacting part, the preamble may be resorted to explain it, and show the intention of the law maker.” Den v. Urison, 2 N.Y. 121 (1807).

2. Patents. The first words of a patent claim, often a single phrase indicating the field of art. The preamble is typically nonlimiting unless it “breathes life and meaning into the claims.” Corning Glass Works v. Sumitomo Elec. U.S.A., Inc., 686 F.2d 1251, 1257 (Fed. Cir. 1989). Elements, the later parts of the claim, narrow this broad identification more and more specifically. Cf. body of a claim; transition phrase. [Cases: Patents C±165(4).] — prebailable (pre-am-bi-able), adj.

prebend (preb-;md), n. 1. A stipend granted in a cathedral church for the support of the members of the chapter. 2. The property from which the stipend comes. [Latin] prebendary (preb-;:ln-der-ee). A person serving on the cathedral’s endowment. [English law. The right of a senior barrister to be heard in court before other barristers.]

prebankruptcy, adj. Occurring before the filing of a bankruptcy petition <prebankruptcy transactions>.

prebent (preb-;and), n. 1. A stipend granted in a cathedral church for the support of the members of the chapter. 2. The property from which the stipend comes. [Latin] prebendarry (preb-;an-der-ee). A person serving on the staff of a cathedral who receives a stipend from the cathedral’s endowment. [Latin] prebut (pree-bat), vb. Slang. To rebut an argument in advance of an opponent’s making it; to engage in anticipatory refutation. [Latin] precatiæ (pri-kair-ee-ee). [Law Latin “favors”] Hist. Day labor that tenants of certain manors were bound to give their lords at harvest time. — Also termed peces.

precarious, adj. (17c) Dependent on the will or pleasure of another; uncertain.

precarious loan. See loan.

precarious possession. See possession.

precarious trade. See trade.

precarium (pri-kair-ce-am), n. [Latin] 1. Roman law. The gratuitous grant of the enjoyment of property, revocable at will. 2. The property so granted. 3. Hist. An estate or tenure arising from a precarious grant, and usu. characterized by uncertainty or arduous conditions of tenure.

precatory (prek-a-tor-ee), adj. (17c) (Of words) requesting, recommending, or expressing a desire for action, but usu. in a nonbinding way. — An example of precaratory language is “it is my wish and desire to . . . .” [Cases: Trusts C±29; Wills C±467.]

precatory trust. See trust.

precautionary appeal. See protective appeal under appeal.

prece (pre-sé), n. [medieval Latin. Now used mainly as a plural.]

precedence (pre-sé-dants or pra-seed-ants), n. (16c) 1. The order or priority in place or time observed by or for persons of different statuses (such as political dignitaries) on the basis of rank during ceremonial events. 2. Generally, the act or state of going before something else according to some system of priorities. 3. Parliamentary law. The ranked priority that determines whether a motion is in order while another motion is pending, or whether a pending motion yields to another motion.

“there is a principle that determines the precedence of motions. The closer a motion is to final disposition of the matter under consideration, the lower it is in the order of precedence. The further removed the motion is from final disposition of the matter, the higher it is in the order of precedence.” National Conference of State Legislatures, Mason’s Manual of Legislative Procedure 6 (2000).

4. Parliamentary law. The priority in which a member is entitled to speak. — Also termed precedence in recognition; preference in being recognized. 5. The order in which persons may claim the right to administer an intestate’s estate. The traditional order is (1) surviving spouse, (2) next of kin, (3) creditors, and (4) public administrator. [Cases: Executors and Administrators C±17.]

precedent (pra-seed-ant and also pres-a-dant), adj. (14c) Preceding in time or order <condition precedent>.

precedent (pres-a-dant), n. (16c) 1. The making of law by a court in recognizing and applying new rules while administering justice. [Cases: Courts C±87.] 2. A decided case that furnishes a basis for determining later cases involving similar facts or issues. See stare decisis. [Cases: Courts C±88.] — precedential, adj.

“in law a precedent is an adjudged case or decision of a court of justice, considered as furnishing a rule or authority for the determination of an identical or similar case afterwards arising, or of a similar question of law. The only theory on which it is possible for one decision to be an authority for another is that the facts are alike, or, if the facts are different, that the principle which governed the first case is applicable to the variant facts.” William M. Lile et al., Brief Making and the Use of Law Books 288 (3d ed. 1914).

“A precedent . . . is a judicial decision which contains in itself a principle, the underlying principle which thus forms its authoritative element is often termed the ratio decidendi. The concrete decision is binding between the parties to it, but it is the abstract ratio decidendi which alone has the force of law as regards the world at large.” John Salmond, jurisprudence 191 (Clayborne L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

“One may say, roughly, that a case becomes a precedent only for such a general rule as is necessary to the actual decision reached, when shorn of unessential circumstances.” James Parker Hall, Introduction, American Law and Procedure xliii (1952).

“One may often accord respect to a precedent not by embracing it with a frozen logic but by drawing from its thought the elements of a new pattern of decision.” Lon L. Fuller, Anatomy of the Law 151 (1968).
binding precedent. (17c) A precedent that a court must follow. • For example, a lower court is bound by an applicable holding of a higher court in the same jurisdiction. — Also termed authoritative precedent; binding authority. Cf. imperative authority under AUTHORITY (4). [Cases: Courts ⊆88, 107.]

declaratory precedent. (1900) A precedent that is merely the application of an already existing legal rule.

original precedent. (17c) A precedent that creates and applies a new legal rule.

persuasive precedent. (1905) A precedent that is not binding on a court, but that is entitled to respect and careful consideration. • For example, if the case was decided in a neighboring jurisdiction, the court might evaluate the earlier court’s reasoning without being bound to decide the same way. [Cases: Courts ⊆88.]

precedent sub silentio (sub sa-len-shee-oh). (1825) A legal question that was neither argued nor explicitly discussed in a judicial decision but that seems to have been silently ruled on and might therefore be treated as a precedent.

superprecedent. 1. A precedent that defines the law and its requirements so effectively that it prevents divergent holdings in later legal decisions on similar facts or induces disputants to settle their claims without litigation. • This sense was posited by W. Landes and Richard Posner in Legal Precedent: A Theoretical and Empirical Analysis, 19 J. Law & Econ. 249, 251 (1976). 2. A precedent that has become so established in the law by a long line of reaffirmations that it is very difficult to overturn it; specif., a precedent that has been reaffirmed many times and whose rationale has been extended to cover cases in which the facts are dissimilar, even wholly unrelated, to those of the precedent. • For example, Roe v. Wade has been called a superprecedent because it has survived more than three dozen attempts to overturn it and has been relied on in decisions protecting gay rights and the right to die. Cf. super stare decisis under STARE DECISIS.

DOCTRINE OF PRECEDENT. 4. A form of pleading or property-conveyancing instrument. • Precedents are often compiled in book form and used by lawyers as guides for preparing similar documents.

“Collections of Precedents have existed from very early times. In this connection precedents must not be confused with judicial precedents or case law. We refer here simply to common-form instruments compiled for use in practice, whereby the lawyer can be more or less certain that he is using the correct phraseology for the particular case before him. They were used both in conveyancing and litigation. . . . It is interesting to note that these precedents were apparently among the first legal works to be published after printing was introduced. Collections of conveyancing precedents continued to be brought up to date or new volumes issued . . . .” A.K.R. Kiralfy, Potter’s Outlines of English Legal History 42–43 (5th ed. 1958).

predatory pricing. Unlawful below-cost pricing intended to eliminate specific competitors and reduce overall competition, pricing below an appropriate measure of cost for the purpose of eliminating competitors in the short run and reducing competition in the long run. — Also termed predation. See Antitrust. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation ☞ 832.]

“In its most orthodox form, ‘predatory pricing’ refers to a practice of driving rivals out of business by selling at a price below cost. The predator’s intent — and the only intent that can make predatory pricing rational, profit-maximizing behavior — is to charge monopoly prices after rivals have been dispatched or disciplined. Predatory pricing is analyzed under the antitrust laws as illegal monopolization or attempt to monopolize under § 2 of the Sherman Act, or sometimes as a violation of the Clayton Act § 2, generally called the Robinson-Patman Act.” Herbert Hovenkamp, Federal Antitrust Policy 335 (2d ed. 1999).

predecessor. 1. One who precedes another in an office or position. 2. An ancestor. predessional, adj. Of, relating to, or occurring during the time before a decision.

predial (pree-dee-ahl), adj. (1c) Of, consisting of, relating to, or attached to land <predial servitude>. — Also spelled praedial.

predial servitude. See servitude appurtenant under servitude (2).

predial tithe. See tithe.

predicate act. (1977) 1. See predicate offense under offense (1). 2. See lesser included offense under offense (1). 3. Under RICO, one of two or more related acts of racketeering necessary to establish a pattern. See Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act. 4. See predicate act under act (2). [Cases: Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations ☞ 5, 103.]

predicate fact. See fact.

predicate offense. See lesser included offense under offense (1).

prediction theory. 1. See bad-man theory. 2. See predictive theory of law.

predictive theory of law. (1956) The view that the law is nothing more than a set of predictions about what the courts will decide in given circumstances. • This theory is embodied in Holmes’s famous pronouncement, “The prophecies of what the courts will do in a particular activity; esp., an inclination that vitiates a criminal defendant’s claim of entrapment.” [Cases: Criminal Law ☞ 37(4).]

predominant-purpose test. An assessment of whether Article 2 of the UCC applies to an exchange, conducted by considering whether the exchange’s chief aspect, viewed in light of all the circumstances, is the sale of goods. • If goods account for most of the exchange’s value, it is probably a sale; if services account for most of the value, it probably is not. The leading case is Bonebrake v. Cox, 499 F.2d 951, 960 (8th Cir. 1974). — Also termed predominant-aspect test. [Cases: Sales ☞ 3.]

preemption (pree-emp-shun), n. (18c) 1. The right to buy before others. See right of preemption. [Cases: Contracts ☞ 16.5; Sales ☞ 24; Vendor and Purchaser ☞ 18.(5).] 2. The purchase of something under this right. 3. An earlier seizure or appropriation. 4. The occupation of public land so as to establish a preemptive title. [Cases: Public Lands ☞ 34.] 5. Constitutional law. The principle (derived from the Supremacy Clause) that a federal law can supersede or supplant any inconsistent state law or regulation. — Also termed (in sense 5) federal preemption. See complete-preemption doctrine. [Cases: States ☞ 18.3.] — preempts, vb. — preemptive, adj.

conflict preemption. See obstacle preemption.

Garmon preemption. Labor law. A doctrine prohibiting state and local regulation of activities that are actually or arguably (1) protected by the National Labor Relations Act’s rules relating to the rights of employees to organize and bargain collectively, or (2) prohibited by the National Labor Relations Act’s provisions that govern unfair labor practices. San Diego Bldg. Trades Council v. Garmon, 359 U.S. 236, 79 S.Ct. 773 (1959). — Also termed Garmon doctrine. See collective bargaining; unfair labor practice. [Cases: Labor and Employment ☞ 968, 1670; States ☞ 18, 46.]

obstacle preemption. The principle that federal or state law can supersede or supplant state or local law that stands as an obstacle to accomplishing the full purposes and objectives of the overriding federal or state law. — Also termed conflict preemption. [Cases: States ☞ 18.5.]

preemption claimant. (1824) One who has settled on land subject to preemption, intending in good faith to acquire title to it.

preemption right. (18c) The privilege to take priority over others in claiming land subject to preemption. • The privilege arises from the holder’s actual settlement of the land. See preemption (3).

preemptive right. A shareholder’s privilege to purchase newly issued stock — before the shares are offered to the public — in an amount proportionate to the preexisting condition. See CONDITION (2).

preexisting-duty rule. (1990) Contracts. The rule that if a party does or promises to do what the party is already legally obligated to do — or refrains or promises to refrain from doing what the party is already legally obligated to refrain from doing — the party has not incurred detriment. • This rule’s result is that the promise does not constitute adequate consideration for contractual purposes. For example, if a builder agrees to construct a building for a specified price but later threatens to walk off the job unless the owner promises to pay an additional sum, the owner’s new promise is not enforceable because, under the preexisting-duty rule, there is no consideration for that promise. • Also termed preexisting-legal-duty rule. [Cases: Contracts C=75.]

prefect (pree-fekt), n. 1. A high official or magistrate put in charge of a particular command, department, or region. 2. In New Mexico, a probate judge.

prefer, vb. (14c) 1. To put forward or present for consideration; esp. (of a grand jury), to bring (a charge or indictment) against a criminal suspect «the defendant claimed he was innocent of the charges preferred against him». 2. To give priority to, such as to one creditor over another «the statute prefers creditors who are first to file their claims».

preference. 1. The act of favoring one person or thing over another; the person or thing so favored. 2. Priority of payment given to one or more creditors by a debtor; a creditor’s right to receive such priority. 3. Bankruptcy. Preferential Transfer.

insider preference. A transfer of property by a bankrupt debtor to an insider more than 90 days before but within one year after the filing of the bankruptcy petition. [Cases: Bankruptcy C=2608(2).]

liquidation preference. A preferred shareholder’s right, once the corporation is liquidated, to receive a specified distribution before common shareholders receive anything. [Cases: Corporations C=629.]

voidable preference. See Preferential Transfer.

preference case. See preferred cause under CAUSE (3).

preference cause. See preferred cause under CAUSE (3).

preference in being recognized. See Precedence (4).

preference shares. See preferred stock under STOCK.

preferential assignment. See Preferential Transfer.

preferential ballot. See Preferential Transfer.

preferential debt. See DEBT.

preferential nonunion shop. See SHOP.

preferential rule. (1959) Evidence. A rule that prefers one kind of evidence to another. • It may work provisionally, as when a tribunal refuses to consider one kind of evidence until another kind (presumably better) is shown to be unavailable, or it may work absolutely, as when the tribunal refuses to consider anything but the better kind of evidence. [Cases: Criminal Law C=398.]

There are only three or four . . . sets of [preferential] rules. There is a rule preferring the production of the original of a document, in preference to a copy. There is a rule requiring the attesting witness to a will to be summoned to evidence its execution. And there is a rule preferring the magistrate’s official report of testimony taken before him. Then there are a few miscellaneous rules, such as the officially certified enrollment of a statute, etc.” John H. Wigmore, A Students’ Textbook of the Law of Evidence 219 (1955).

preferential shop. See preferential union shop under SHOP.

preferential transfer. Bankruptcy. A prebankruptcy transfer made by an insolvent debtor to or for the benefit of a creditor, thereby allowing the creditor to receive more than its proportionate share of the debtor’s assets; specif., an insolvent debtor’s transfer of a property interest for the benefit of a creditor who is owed on an earlier debt, when the transfer occurs no more than 90 days before the date when the bankruptcy petition is filed or (if the creditor is an insider) within one year of the filing, so that the creditor receives more than it would otherwise receive through the distribution of the bankruptcy estate. • Under the circumstances described in 11 USCA § 547, the bankruptcy trustee may recover — for the estate’s benefit — a preferential transfer from the transferee. • Also termed preference; voidable preference; voidable transfer; preferential assignment. Cf. Fraudulent Conveyance (2). [Cases: Bankruptcy C=2601–2623.]

preferential vote. See vote (1).

preferential voting. See voting.

preferred, adj. Possessing or accorded a priority or privilege «a preferred claim».

preferred cause. See cause (3).

preferred creditor. See CREDITOR.

preferred dividend. See DIVIDEND.

preferred-provider organization. (1984) A group of healthcare providers (such as doctors, hospitals, and pharmacies) that agree to provide medical services at a discounted cost to covered persons in a given geographic area. • Abbr. PPO. Cf. Health-Maintenance Organization; Managed-Care Organization. [Cases: Health C=294; Insurance C=1259, 2501.]

preferred stock. See STOCK.
preferring of charges. Military law. The formal completion of a charge sheet, which includes signing and swearing to the charges and specifications. • Only a person subject to the Uniform Code of Military Justice can prefer charges. Cf. INITIATION OF CHARGES. [Cases: Military Justice C=951.]

prefiled bill. See BILL (3).

Pregnancy-Discrimination Act. A federal statute that prohibits workplace discrimination against a pregnant woman or against a woman affected by childbirth or a related medical condition. 42 USCA § 2000. • The Pregnancy-Discrimination Act is part of Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964. — Abbr. PDA. [Cases: Civil Rights C=1176.]

pregnant chad. See dimpled chad under CHAD.

prehire agreement. An employment contract between a union and an employer, in which the employer agrees to hire union members. See closed shop under SHOP.

prejudice, n. (14c) 1. Damage or detriment to one’s legal rights or claims. See dismissal with prejudice and dismissal without prejudice under DISMISSAL.

legal prejudice. (18c) A condition that, if shown by a party, will usu. defeat the opposing party’s action; esp., a condition that, if shown by the defendant, will defeat a plaintiff’s motion to dismiss a case without prejudice. • The defendant may show that dismissal will deprive the defendant of a substantive property interest or that so arouses the emotions that calm and logical reasoning is abandoned.

2. A preconceived judgment formed with little or no factual basis; a strong bias. [Cases: Judges C=49.] — prejudice, vb. — prejudicial, adj.

prejudicial error. See reversible error under ERROR (2).

prejudicial publicity. (1935) Extensive media attention devoted to an upcoming civil or criminal trial. • Under the Due Process Clause, extensive coverage of a criminal trial may deprive the defendant of a fair trial. [Cases: Criminal Law C=633(1); Federal Civil Procedure C=1951; Trial C=20.]

preliminary, adj. Coming before and usu. leading up to the main part of something <preliminary negotiations>.

preliminary amendment. See PATENT-APPLICATION AMENDMENT.

preliminary availability search. Trademarks. A cursory or moderate search of registered trademarks and common-law uses of proposed-trademark names or phrases, done to narrow the list of names phrases before conducting a thorough search.

preliminary complaint. See COMPLAINT.

preliminary crime. See inchoate offense under OFFENSE (1).

preliminary evidence. See EVIDENCE.

preliminary examination. 1. See EXAMINATION (3). 2. See PRELIMINARY HEARING.

preliminary hearing. A criminal hearing (usu. conducted by a magistrate) to determine whether there is sufficient evidence to prosecute an accused person. • If sufficient evidence exists, the case will be set for trial or bound over for grand-jury review, or an information will be filed in the trial court. — Also termed PRELIMINARY EXAMINATION; probable-cause hearing; bindover hearing; examining trial. Cf. ARRAIGNMENT. [Cases: Criminal Law C=222–238.]

preliminary injunction. See INJUNCTION.

preliminary inquiry. Military law. The initial investigation of a reported or suspected violation of the Uniform Code of Military Justice. Cf. PRETRIAL INVESTIGATION.

preliminary-inquiry officer. See OFFICER (2).

preliminary letter. See INVITATION TO NEGOTIATE.

preliminary objection. See OBJECTION (2).

preliminary-protection hearing. See PROTECTION HEARING.

preliminary proof. See PROOF.

preliminary prospectus. See PROSPECTUS.

preliminary protective hearing. See PROTECTION HEARING.

preliminary statement. (1834) The introductory part of a brief or memorandum in support of a motion, in which the advocate summarizes the essence of what follows. • In at least two jurisdictions, New York and New Jersey, the preliminary statement is a standard part of court papers. In many other jurisdictions, advocates do not routinely include it. But preliminary statements are typically allowed, even welcomed, though not required. — Also termed summary of argument.

premarital, adj. Of, relating to, or occurring before marriage. Cf. postmarital.

prematurity. 1. The circumstance existing when the facts underlying a plaintiff’s complaint do not yet create a live claim. Cf. ripeness. [Cases: Action $\Rightarrow$ 6, 62; Federal Courts $\Rightarrow$ 12.1] 2. The affirmative defense based on this circumstance.

premeditated, adj. (16c) Done with willful deliberation and planning; consciously considered beforehand a premeditated killing. [Cases: Homicide $\Rightarrow$ 535; Sentencing and Punishment $\Rightarrow$ 1676.]

premeditation, n. (15c) Conscious consideration and planning that precedes some act (such as committing a crime). [Cases: Homicide $\Rightarrow$ 535; Sentencing and Punishment $\Rightarrow$ 1676.] — premeditate, vb.

premise (prem- is), n. (14c) A previous statement or contention from which a conclusion is deduced. — Also spelled (in BrE) premiss. — premise (prem- is or prim-tz), vb.

premises (prem-a-siz). (15c) 1. Matters (usu. preliminary facts or statements) previously referred to in the same instrument <wherefore, premises considered, the plaintiff prays for the following relief>. 2. The part of a deed that describes the land being conveyed, as well as naming the parties and identifying relevant facts or explaining the reasons for the deed. 3. A house or building, along with its grounds <smoking is not allowed on these premises>.

"Premises (= a house or building) has a curious history in legal usage. Originally, in the sense of things mentioned previously, it denoted the part of a deed that sets forth the names of the grantor and grantee, as well as the things granted and the consideration. Then, through hypallage in the early 18th century, it was extended to refer to the subject of a conveyance or bequest as specified in the premises of the deed. Finally, it was extended to refer to a house or building along with its grounds. In short, someone who says, "No alcohol is allowed on these premises," is engaging unconsciously in a popularized legal technicality," Bryan A. Garner, A Dictionary of Modern Legal Usage 685 (2d ed. 1995).

demised premises. Leased property. — Also termed premises demised.

premises liability. (1950) A landowner’s or landlord’s tort liability for conditions or activities on the premises. [Cases: Negligence $\Rightarrow$ 1000, 1001.]

premises rule. See parking-lot rule.

premium, n. 1. The periodic payment required to keep an insurance policy in effect. — Also termed insurance premium. [Cases: Insurance $\Rightarrow$ 2000.]

advance premium. A payment made before the start of the period covered by the insurance policy. [Cases: Insurance $\Rightarrow$ 1760.]

earned premium. The portion of an insurance premium applicable to the coverage period that has already expired. • For example, if the total premium for a one-year insurance policy is $1,200, the earned premium after three months is $300. [Cases: Insurance $\Rightarrow$ 2000.]

gross premium. 1. The net premium plus expenses (i.e., the loading), less the interest factor. See loading; interest factor. [Cases: Insurance $\Rightarrow$ 1127, 2005.]

2. The premium for participating life insurance. See participating insurance under insurance.

natural premium. The actual cost of life insurance based solely on mortality rates. • This amount will be less than a net premium. See net premium.

net level annual premium. A net premium that stays the same each year.

net premium. 1. Generally, the premium amount for an insurance policy less agent commissions. [Cases: Insurance $\Rightarrow$ 1652, 2000.] 2. The portion of the premium that covers the estimated cost of claims. 3. The money needed to provide benefits under an insurance policy. • The net premium in a life-insurance policy is calculated by using an assumed interest and mortality-table rate; it does not include additional expense amounts that will be charged to the policyholder. — Also termed net valuation premium.

net single premium. The money that must be collected from a policyholder at one time to guarantee enough money to pay claims made on an insurance policy. • This amount assumes that interest accrues at an expected rate and is based on a prediction of the likelihood of certain claims. [Cases: Insurance $\Rightarrow$ 2037.]

net valuation premium. See net premium.

unearned premium. The portion of an insurance premium applicable to the coverage period that has not yet occurred. • In the same example as above under earned premium, the unearned premium after three months is $900. [Cases: Insurance $\Rightarrow$ 1371, 1930, 2046.]

2. A sum of money paid in addition to a regular price, salary, or other amount; a bonus. 3. The amount by which a security’s market value exceeds its face value. — Also termed (specif.) bond premium. Cf. discount (3).

control premium. A premium paid for shares carrying the power to control a corporation. • The control premium is often computed by comparing the aggregate value of the controlling block of shares with the cost that would be incurred if the shares could be... acquired at the going market price per share. [Cases: Corporations $174.] 4. The amount paid to buy a securities option. — Also termed (in sense 4) option premium.

premium bond. See bond (3).

premium loan. See loan.

premium note. See note (1).

premium on capital stock. See paid-in surplus under surplus.

premium pudoris. See praemium pudicitiae.

premium rate. Insurance. The price per unit of life insurance. • It is usu. expressed as a cost per thousands of dollars of coverage. Life insurers use three factors — the interest factor, the mortality factor, and the risk factor — to calculate premium rates. • Sometimes shortened to rate. See interest factor; mortality factor; risk factor. [Cases: Insurance $1541-1546.]

premium stock. See stock.

premium tax. See tax.

prenatal injury. Harm to a fetus or an embryo. Cf. birth injury.

prenatal tort. See tort.

prendre. The right to take a thing before it is offered. — Also spelled prendre.

prendre de baron (prender da bar-an). [Law French “a taking of husband”] Hist. A plea asserting that the former wife of a murder victim should not be allowed to appeal a murder case against the alleged killer because she has since remarried.

prendre. See prendre.

prenup. n. Slang. See prenuptial agreement.

prenuptial (pre-nap-shal), adj. (1857) Made or occurring before marriage; premarital. — Also termed antenuptial (an-tee-nap-shal). Cf. postnuptial.

prenuptial agreement. (1882) An agreement made before marriage usu. to resolve issues of support and property division if the marriage ends in divorce or by the death of a spouse. — Also termed antenuptial agreement; antenuptial contract; premarital agreement; premarital contract; marriage settlement. — Sometimes shortened to prenup. Cf. postnuptial agreement; cohabitation agreement. [Cases: Husband and Wife $29, 31.]

prenuptial gift. See gift.

prenuptial will. See will.

prepaid card. See stored-value card.

prepaid expense. See expense.

prepaid income. See income.

prepaid interest. See interest (3).

prepaid legal services. (1963) An arrangement — usu. serving as an employee benefit — that enables a person to make advance payments for future legal services. [Cases: Attorney and Client $137.]

preparation. Criminal law. The act or process of devising the means necessary to commit a crime. Cf. attempt.

prepayment clause. (1935) A loan-document provision that permits a borrower to satisfy a debt before its due date. • Although any interest not yet due is waived, the lender may impose a penalty for prepayment. [Cases: Bills and Notes $129, 429.]

prepayment penalty. See penalty (2).

prepense (pre-pens), adj. Rare. Planned; deliberate <malice prepense>.

prepetition (pre-pa-tish-an), adj. (1938) Occurring before the filing of a petition (esp. in bankruptcy) <prepetition debts>.

preponderance (pri-pon-dar-ants), n. (17c) Superiority in weight, importance, or influence. — preponderate (pri-pon-dar-ate), vb. — preponderant (pri-pon-dar-ant), adj.

preponderance of the evidence. (18c) The greater weight of the evidence, not necessarily established by the greater number of witnesses testifying to a fact but by evidence that has the most convincing force; superior evidentiary weight that, though not sufficient to free the mind wholly from all reasonable doubt, is still sufficient to incline a fair and impartial mind to one side of the issue rather than the other. • This is the burden of proof in most civil trials, in which the jury is instructed to find for the party that, on the whole, has the stronger evidence, however slight the edge may be. — Also termed preponderance of proof; balance of probability. See reasonable doubt. Cf. clear and convincing evidence under evidence. [Cases: Evidence $598.] prerogative (pri-rog-a-tiv), n. (15c) An exclusive right, power, privilege, or immunity, usu. acquired by virtue of office. — prerogative, adj.

“Criminal convictions are so serious in their consequences that it is felt that an accused person should be freed, if there is any fair or reasonable doubt about his guilt, even though there seems to be considerable likelihood that he did commit the crime. . . . In civil cases, however, the consequence of losing a case, although serious enough in many cases, is not considered to be such as to require so stringent a rule. Accordingly the plaintiff is entitled to a verdict if he proves the case 'by the preponderance of the evidence.' In other words, he is entitled to a verdict even though there may be a reasonable doubt as to the liability of the accused, if the jury is satisfied nevertheless that the plaintiff has proved his case.” Charles Herman Kinnane, A First Book on Anglo-American Law 562 (2d ed. 1952).

prerogative of mercy. The discretionary power of a supreme authority, such as a state governor, national president, or sovereign, to commute a death sentence, change the method of execution, or issue a pardon.

prerogative court. See court.

prerogative of mercy. The limited right of a chief executive to commute a death sentence or to pardon a convicted person, esp. one convicted of a capital crime.
prescriptive easement. See easement.

prescriptive right. (17c) A right obtained by prescription <after a nuisance has been continuously in existence for 20 years, a prescriptive right to continue it is acquired as an easement appurtenant to the land on which it exists>. [Cases: Nuisance ☐=11–17.]

presence, n. 1. The state or fact of being in a particular place and time <his presence at the scene saved two lives>. 2. Close physical proximity coupled with awareness <the agent was in the presence of the principal>.

contuctive presence. 1. Criminal law. Legal imputation of having been at a crime scene, based on having been close enough to the scene to have aided and abetted the crime’s commission. See CONSPIRACY. [Cases: Criminal Law ☐=59(3).] 2. Wills & estates. Legal imputation of a witness’s having been in the room when a will was signed, based on the fact that the testator and the witness were able to see each other at the time of the signing. • This principle was commonly employed until the 20th century, when the presence-of-the-testator rule became dominant. See PRESENCE-OF-THE-TESTATOR RULE. [Cases: Wills ☐=123(5).] presence-of-defendant rule. The principle that a felony defendant is entitled to be present at every major stage of the criminal proceeding. Fed. R. Crim. P. 43. [Cases: Criminal Law ☐=636.]

presence-of-the-court. (18c) The company or proximity of the judge or other courtroom official. • For purposes of contempt, an action is in the presence of the court if it is committed within the view of the judge or other person in court and is intended to disrupt the court’s business.

"Some decisions indicate that the term 'in the presence of the court' is to be given a liberal interpretation, that 'the court' consists not of the judge, the courtroom, the jury, or the jury room individually, but of all of these combined, and that the court is present wherever any of its constituent parts is engaged in the prosecution of the business of the court according to law." 17 Am. Jur. 2d Contempt § 19 (1990).

presence-of-the-testator rule. The principle that a testator must be aware (through sight or other sense) that the witnesses are signing the will. • Many jurisdictions interpret this requirement liberally, and the Uniform Probate Code has dispensed with it. [Cases: Wills ☐=117.]

present, adj. (14c) 1. Now existing; at hand . 2. Being considered; now under discussion <the present appeal does not deal with that issue>. 3. In attendance; not elsewhere <all present voted for him>.

present ability. See ability.

present and voting. Parliamentary law. (Of a member) casting a vote. • The result of a vote is ordinarily determined with reference to the members voting (often termed, somewhat redundantly, as "present and presentation. (15c) 1. The delivery of a document to an issuer or named person for the purpose of initiating action under a letter of credit; presentment (3). [Cases: Banks and Banking C—191.] 2. Hist. Eccles. law. A benefice patron’s nomination of a person to fill a vacant benefice. • If the bishop rejected the appointee, the patron could enforce the right to fill the vacancy by writ of quare impedit in the Court of Common Pleas. See quare impedit. Cf. advowson; institution (5).

next presentation. Hist. Eccles. law. In the law of advowsons, the right to present to the bishop a clerk to fill the first vacancy that arises in a church or other ecclesiastical office.

present case. See case at bar under case.

present conveyance. See conveyance.

present covenant. See covenant (4).

presentence hearing. (1940) A proceeding at which a judge or jury receives and examines all relevant information regarding a convicted criminal and the related offense before passing sentence. — Also termed sentencing hearing. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment C—325.]

presentence-investigation report. (1943) A probation officer’s detailed account of a convicted defendant’s educational, criminal, family, and social background, conducted at the court’s request as an aid in passing sentence. See Fed. R. Crim. P. 32(c). — Abbr. PSI; PIR. — Often shortened to presentment report. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment C—275–301.]

present enjoyrment. See enjoyment.

presenter. Commercial law. Any person presenting a document (such as a draft) to an issuer for honor. UCC § 5-102.

present estate. 1. Estate (1). 2. See present interest under interest (3).

presenting bank. See bank.

presenting jury. See grand jury.

present interest. See interest (2).

presentment (pri-zent-mant). (15c) 1. The act of presenting or laying before a court or other tribunal a formal statement about a matter to be dealt with legally. 2. Criminal procedure. A formal written accusation returned by a grand jury on its own initiative, without a prosecutor’s previous indictment request. • Presentments are obsolete in the federal courts. [Cases: Grand Jury C—42.]

“A grand jury has only two functions, either to indict or to return a ‘no bill.’ The Constitution speaks also of a ‘presentment,’ but this is a term with a distinct historical meaning now not well understood. Historically presentment was the process by which a grand jury initiated an independent investigation and asked that a charge be drawn to cover the facts should they constitute a crime. With United States attorneys now always available to advise grand juries, proceeding by presentment is an outmoded practice.” 1 Charles Alan Wright, Federal Practice and Procedure § 110, at 459 (3d ed. 1999).

3. The formal production of a negotiable instrument for acceptance or payment. — Also termed (in sense 3) presentment. [Cases: Bills and Notes C—385–407.]

‘Presentment and dishonor occur, for instance, when the holder of a check attempts to cash it at the drawee bank, but payment is refused because the drawer lacks sufficient funds on deposit. The demand for payment is presentment. The bank’s refusal to pay is dishonor.” 2 James J. White & Robert S. Summers, Uniform Commercial Code § 16-8, at 100 (4th ed. 1995).

presentment for acceptance. (18c) Production of an instrument to the drawee, acceptor, or maker for acceptance. • This type of presentment may be made anytime before maturity, except that with bills payable at sight, after demand, or after sight, presentment must be made within a reasonable time. [Cases: Bills and Notes C—388.]

presentment for payment. (18c) Production of an instrument to the drawee, acceptor, or maker for payment. • This type of presentment must be made on the date when the instrument is due. [Cases: Bills and Notes C—399.]

presentment of Englishry. Hist. The offering of proof that a slain person was English rather than (before the Conquest) a Dane or (after the Conquest) a Norman. • This requirement was issued first by the conquering Danes and then by the Normans to protect these groups from the English by the threat of a village- or hundredwide amercement if the inhabitants failed to prove that a dead person found among them was English.

present recollection refreshed. (1908) Evidence. A witness’s memory that has been enhanced by showing the witness a document that describes the relevant events. • The document itself is merely a memory stimulus and is not admitted in evidence. Fed. R. Evid. 612. — Also termed refreshing recollection; refreshing memory; present recollection revived. Cf. past recollection recorded. [Cases: Witnesses C—253.]

present, n. pl. (14c) Archaic. The instrument under consideration. • This is usu. part of the phrase these presents, which is part of the longer phrase know all men by these presents (itself a loan translation from the Latin noverint universi per praesentes). See know all men by these presents.

present sale. See sale.

present sense impression. (1942) Evidence. One’s perception of an event or condition, formed during or immediately after the fact. • A statement containing a present sense impression is admissible even if it is hearsay. Fed. R. Evid. 803(1). Cf. excited utterance. [Cases: Criminal Law C—419(2.15); Evidence C—120.]

present use. See use (4).

present value. The sum of money that, with compound interest, would amount to a specified sum at a specified future date; future value discounted to its value today. — Also termed present worth.

adjusted present value. An asset's value determined by adding together its present value and the value added by capital-structure effects. — Abbr. APV.

net present value. The present value of net cash flow from a project, discounted by the cost of capital. • This value is used to evaluate the project's investment potential. — Abbr. NPV.

preservation order. A direction to a property owner to maintain a historic building or conserve a natural habitat.

preside, vb. (15c) 1. To occupy the place of authority, esp. as a judge during a hearing or trial <preside over the proceedings>. 2. To exercise management or control <preside over the estate>.

president, n. 1. The chief political executive of a government; the head of state. [Cases: United States <326> 2. The chief executive officer of a corporation or other organization. 3. CHAIR (1). 4. CHAIR (3). See (in senses 3 & 4) presiding officer (3) under OFFICER (2). — presidential, adj.

immediate past president. The last president who held office before the incumbent. See EMERITUS.

president-elect. An officer who automatically succeeds to the presidency when the incumbent president's term expires. • If the organization's governing documents so provide, the president-elect may act as president in the incumbent president's absence, or may assume the presidency early if the incumbent does not finish the term.

president emeritus. See EMERITUS.

president of a court-martial. Military law. The senior member in rank present at a court-martial trial. [Cases: Military Justice <870>]

[President of the United States. The highest executive officer of the federal government of the United States. • The President is elected to a four-year term by a majority of the presidential electors chosen by popular vote from each of the states. The President must be a natural citizen, must be at least 35 years old, and must have been a resident for 14 years within the United States. U.S. Const. art. II, § 1. [Cases: United States <326>] presiding judge. See JUDGE.

presiding juror. See JUROR.

presiding officer. See OFFICER (2).

press, n. 1. The news media; print and broadcast news organizations collectively. [Cases: Constitutional Law <90(2)>]

"The Constitution specifically selected the press, which includes not only newspapers, books, and magazines, but also humble leaflets and circulars, to play an important role in the discussion of public affairs." Mills v. Alabama, 384 U.S. 214, 219, 86 S.Ct. 1434, 1437 (1966).

"Press" could refer to one or more subsets of media, defined either by function or form. To the extent that existing law defines 'the press' at all, it does so mostly in terms of specific media forms. The Supreme Court has addressed the matter only obliquely. ... It has never had to decide whether a particular litigant was 'press.' In most cases the question does not arise because the claimed right would be protected as fully by the Speech Clause as by the Press Clause. The cases in which the Court seems to rely on the Press Clause have involved newspapers or magazines whose status as press was unquestioned. The Court on other occasions has mentioned 'publishers and broadcasters,' 'the media,' 'editorial judgment,' 'editorial control,' 'journalistic discretion,' and 'newsgathering' as possible objects of protection. The most famous discussion of the meaning of the Press Clause, a 1974 speech by Justice Stewart, identified its beneficiaries as 'the daily newspapers and other established media, or 'newspapers, television, and magazines.' David A. Anderson, Freedom of the Press, 80 Texas L. Rev. 429, 436 (2002).

2. Hist. A piece of parchment, as one sewed together to make up a roll or record of judicial proceedings.

Press Clause. The First Amendment provision that "Congress shall make no law . . . abridging the freedom . . . of the press." U.S. Const. amend I. — Also termed Freedom of the Press Clause. [Cases: Constitutional Law <2070–2081>] prest (prest). Hist. A duty to be paid by the sheriff upon his account in the Exchequer or for money remaining in his custody.

prestable (pres-ta-bal), adj. Scots law. Payable. 2. Enforceable; exigible. • This term appears generally in reference to a debt. Cf. EXIGIBLE.

prestation (pre-stay-shan). Hist. 1. A payment (or presting) of money. 2. The rendering of a service.

prest money. Hist. A monetary payment made to a soldier or sailor on enlistment.

presume, vb. To assume beforehand; to suppose to be true in the absence of proof.

presumed bias. See implied bias under BIAS.

presumed crime. See constructive crime under CRIME.

presumed fact. See FACT.

presumed father. See FATHER.

presumed-seller test. A method of imposing product liability on a manufacturer if the manufacturer, having full knowledge of the product's dangerous propensities, would be negligent in placing the product on the market.

presumption. (15c) A legal inference or assumption that a fact exists, based on the known or proven existence of some other fact or group of facts. • Most presumptions are rules of evidence calling for a certain result in a given case unless the adversely affected party overcomes it with other evidence. A presumption shifts the burden of production or persuasion to the opposing party, who can then attempt to overcome the presumption. See BURDEN OF PRODUCTION. [Cases: Criminal Law <305>; Evidence <53–89>].
A presumption may be defined to be an inference as to the existence of one fact from the existence of some other fact founded upon a previous experience of their connection. William P. Richardson, The Law of Evidence § 53, at 25 (3d ed. 1928).

absolute presumption. See conclusive presumption.

adverse presumption. See adverse inference under inference.

artificial presumption. See presumption of law.

conclusive presumption. (18c) A presumption that cannot be overcome by any additional evidence or argument if it is a conclusive presumption that a child under the age of seven is incapable of committing a felony. — Also termed absolute presumption; irrebuttable presumption; mandatory presumption; presumption juris et de jure. Cf. rebuttable presumption. [Cases: Constitutional Law C--53(5); Evidence C--53 -- 89.]

“Conclusive presumptions’ or ‘irrebuttable presumptions’ are usually mere fictions, to disguise a rule of substantive law (e.g., the conclusive presumption of malice from an unexcused defamation); and when they are not fictions, they are usually repudiated by modern courts.” John H. Wigmore, A Students’ Textbook of the Law of Evidence 454 (1935).

“Conclusive presumptions, sometimes called irrebuttable presumptions of law, are really rules of law. Thus it is said that a child under the age of fourteen years is conclusively presumed to be incapable of committing rape. This is only another way of saying that such a child cannot be found guilty of rape.” Richard Eggleston, Evidence, Proof and Probability 92 (1978).

conditional presumption. See rebuttable presumption.

conflicting presumption. (1830) One of two or more presumptions that would lead to opposite results. — Also termed inconsistent presumption. [Cases: Criminal Law C--325; Evidence C--88.]

“Conflicting presumptions” are simply two ordinary presumptions that would give opposite results, usually they are really successive presumptions. E.g., where A proves himself to be the son of N, wife of M, but M and N were already separated, and later M married P, and had a son B, the later marriage of M might presume a prior divorce from N before separation to make it valid, and yet the birth of A from a married mother might be presumed legitimate, and thus the question whether A or B was the legitimate son would be attended by opposing presumptions. But in this aspect the doctrine of presumptions is clouded with difficulties and leads to much vain speculation and logical unrealism.” John H. Wigmore, A Students’ Textbook of the Law of Evidence 454 (1935).

disputable presumption. See rebuttable presumption.

dry presumption. A presumption that has no probative value unless the party with the burden of proof presents evidence to support the presumption. [Cases: Evidence C--53.]

factual presumption. See presumption of fact.

heeding presumption. (1990) A rebuttable presumption that an injured product user would have followed a warning label had the product manufacturer provided one. [Cases: Products Liability C--351(2).] inconsistent presumption. See conflicting presumption.

irrebuttable presumption. See conclusive presumption.

legal presumption. See presumption of law.

mandatory presumption. See conclusive presumption.

McClanahan presumption. See McClanahan presumption.

mixed presumption. (1838) A presumption containing elements of both law and fact.

Morgan presumption. See Morgan presumption.

natural presumption. (16c) A deduction of one fact from another, based on common experience. [Cases: Criminal Law C--305.1; Evidence C--53.]

permissive presumption. (1827) A presumption that a trier of fact is free to accept or reject from a given set of facts. — Also termed permissive inference. [Cases: Criminal Law C--306, 324; Evidence C--53, 87.]

presumption of a quorum. Parliamentary law. The presumption that a quorum, once established, is present until the chair or a member notices otherwise.

presumption of fact. A type of rebuttable presumption that may be, but as a matter of law need not be, drawn from another established fact or group of facts the possessor of recently stolen goods is, by presumption of fact, considered the thief. — Also termed factual presumption. [Cases: Criminal Law C--306.; Evidence C--53, 87.]

presumption of general application. A presumption that applies across the board to all legislation, as a result of which lawmakers need not list each such presumption in all bills. [Cases: Criminal Law C--305; Evidence C--53 -- 89.]

“One function of the word ‘presumption’ in the context of statutory interpretation is to state the result of this legislative reliance (real or assumed) on firmly established legal principles. There is a ‘presumption’ that mens rea is required in the case of statutory crimes, and a ‘presumption’ that statutory powers must be exercised reasonably. These presumptions apply although there is no question of linguistic ambiguity in the statutory wording under construction, and they may be described as ‘presumptions of general application.’ At the level of interpretation, their function is the promotion of brevity on the part of the draftsman. Statutes make dreary enough reading as it is, and it would be ridiculous to insist in each instance upon an enumeration of the general principles taken for granted.” Rupert Cross, Statutory Interpretation 142-43 (1976).

presumption of innocence. See presumption of innocence.

presumption of intent. (18c) A permissive presumption that a criminal defendant who intended to commit an act did so. [Cases: Criminal Law C--312.]

presumption of law. (16c) A legal assumption that a court is required to make if certain facts are established and no contradictory evidence is produced by presumption of law, a criminal defendant is considered innocent until proven guilty beyond a reasonable doubt. — Also termed legal presumption; artificial presumption; praesumptio juris; pseudopresumption of law. [Cases: Criminal Law C:\305; Evidence C:\86.]

procedural presumption. A presumption that may be rebutted by credible evidence. [Cases: Criminal Law C:\305; Evidence C:\53.]

rebuttable presumption. (1852) An inference drawn from certain facts that establish a prima facie case, which may be overcome by the introduction of contrary evidence. — Also termed prima facie presumption; disputable presumption; conditional presumption; praesumptio juris. Cf. conclusive presumption. [Cases: Criminal Law C:\324; Evidence C:\89.]

statutory presumption. (1819) A rebuttable or conclusive presumption that is created by statute. [Cases: Criminal Law C:\305; Evidence C:\53.]

presumption of death. (18c) A presumption that arises on the unexpected disappearance and continued absence of a person for an extended period, commonly seven years. [Cases: Damages C:\2.]

presumption-of-fertility rule. See fertile-octogenarian rule.

presumption-of-identity rule. The common-law rule that unless there is a specific, applicable statute in another state, a court will presume that the common law has developed elsewhere identically with how it has developed in the court's own state, so that the court may apply its own state's law. • Today this rule applies primarily in Georgia. See Shorewood Packaging Corp. v. Commercial Union Ins., 865 F. Supp. 1577 (N.D. Ga. 1994). [Cases: Criminal Law C:\320; Evidence C:\80.]

presumption of innocence. (18c) Criminal law. The fundamental principle that a person may not be convicted of a crime unless the government proves guilt beyond a reasonable doubt, without any burden placed on the accused to prove innocence. [Cases: Criminal Law C:\308; Evidence C:\60.]

presumption of maternity. Family law. The presumption that the woman who has given birth to a child is both the genetic mother and the legal mother of the child. — Also termed maternity presumption. Cf. presumption of paternity.

presumption of natural and probable consequences. (1980) Criminal law. The presumption that the father of a child is the man who (1) is married to the child's mother when the child was conceived or born (even though the marriage may have been invalid), (2) married the mother after the child's birth and agreed either to have his name on the birth certificate or to support the child, or (3) welcomed the child into his home and later held out the child as his own. — Also termed paternity presumption; presumption of legitimacy; legitimacy presumption. See presumed father under father. [Cases: Criminal Law C:\312.]

presumption of paternity. (1829) Family law. The presumption that the father of a child is the man who (1) is married to the child's mother when the child was conceived or born (even though the marriage may have been invalid), (2) married the mother after the child's birth and agreed either to have his name on the birth certificate or to support the child, or (3) welcomed the child into his home and later held out the child as his own. — Also termed paternity presumption; presumption of legitimacy; legitimacy presumption. See presumed father under father. [Cases: Children Out-of-Wedlock C:\3.] presumption of survivorship. (1844) The presumption that one of two or more victims of a common disaster survived the others, based on the supposed survivor's youth, good health, or other reason rendering survivorship likely. [Cases: Death C:\5.]

presumption of validity. Patents. The doctrine that the holder of a patent is entitled to a statutory presumption that the patent is valid and that the burden is on a challenger to prove invalidity. See born valid. [Cases: Patents C:\112.1.]

presumptive (pri-zamp-tiv), adj. (15c) 1. Giving reasonable grounds for belief or presumption. 2. Based on a presumption. [Cases: Criminal Law C:\305.1; Evidence C:\53.] — presumptively, adv.

pretax, adj. Existing or occurring before the assessment or deduction of taxes <pretax income>. [Cases: Internal Revenue C= 3110; Taxation C⇒ 3446.]

pretax earnings. See EARNINGS.

pretensive joinder. See JOINDER.

preterlegal (preh-tar-leeg-al), adj. Rare. Beyond the range of what is legal; not according to law <preterlegal customs>.

pretermission (preh-tar-mish-an). (18c) 1. The condition of one who is pretermitted, as an heir of a testator. 2. The act of omitting an heir from a will. [Cases: Descent and Distribution C⇒ 47.]

pretermission statute. See PRETERMITTED-HEIR STATUTE.

pretermitted heir. See HEIR.

pretermitted defense. See DEFENSE (1).

pretermitted child. See pretermitted heir under heir.

pretermitted spouse. See pretermitted heir under heir.

pretermitted-heir statute. (1955) A state law that, under certain circumstances, grants an omitted heir the right to inherit a share of the testator’s estate, usu. by treating the heir as though the testator had died intestate. • Most states have a pretermitted-heir statute, under which an omitted child or spouse receives the same share of the estate as if the testator had died intestate, unless the omission was intentional. The majority rule, and that found in the Uniform Probate Code, is that only afterborn children — that is, children born after the execution of a will — receive protection as pretermitted heirs. Under that circumstance, an inference arises that their omission was inadvertent rather than purposeful. — Also termed pretermission statute. [Cases: Descent and Distribution C⇒ 47.]

pretermit (preh-tar-mit), vb. (15c) 1. To ignore or disregard purposely <the court pretermitted the constitutional question by deciding the case on procedural grounds>. 2. To neglect, overlook, or omit accidentally <the third child was pretermitted in the will>. • Although in ordinary usage sense 1 prevails, in legal contexts (esp. involving heirs) sense 2 is usual. [Cases: Descent and Distribution C⇒ 47.]

pretertrial conference. (1938) An informal meeting at which opposing attorneys confer, usu. with the judge, to work toward the disposition of the case by discussing matters of evidence and narrowing the issues that will be tried. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 16; Fed. R. Crim. P. 17.1. • The conference takes place shortly before trial and ordinarily results in a pretrial order. — Often shortened to pretrial. — Also termed pretrial hearing. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure C⇒ 1921; Pretrial Procedure C⇒ 741.] pretertrial detention. See DETENTION.

pretertrial discovery. See DISCOVERY.

pretertrial diversion. See DIVERSION PROGRAM (1).

pretertrial hearing. See PRETRIAL CONFERENCE.

pretertrial intervention. 1. DIVERSION PROGRAM (1). 2. See deferred judgment under JUDGMENT.

pretertrial investigation. Military law. An investigation to decide whether a case should be recommended for forwarding to a general court-martial. [Cases: Military Justice C⇒ 921.]

pretertrial order. (1939) A court order setting out the claims and defenses to be tried, the stipulations of the parties, and the case’s procedural rules, as agreed to by the parties or mandated by the court at a pretrial conference. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 16(e). • In federal court, a pretrial order supersedes the pleadings. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure C⇒ 1935; Pretrial Procedure C⇒ 747.]

prevail, vb. (17c) 1. To obtain the relief sought in an action; to win a lawsuit <the plaintiff prevailed in the Supreme Court>. 2. To be commonly accepted or predominant <it’s unclear which line of precedent will prevail>.

prevarication (pri-var-a-kay-shun), n. (16c) The act or an instance of lying or avoiding the truth; equivocation. — prevaricate (pri-var-a-kayt), vb.

previcator (pri-var-a-kay-tar), n. [Latin] 1. A liar; an equivocator. 2. Roman law. One who betrays another’s trust, such as an advocate who aids the opposing party by betraying the client. — Also spelled (in sense 2) praevaricator.

prevent, vb. To hinder or impede .

preventative law. See PREVENTIVE LAW.

prevention. Civil law. The right of one of several judges having concurrent jurisdiction to exercise that jurisdiction over a case that the judge is first to hear.

prevention doctrine. (1979) Contracts. The principle that each contracting party has an implied duty to not do... preventive custody. See custody (1).

preventive detention. See detention.

preventive injunction. See injunction.

preventive justice. See justice (1).

preventive law. A practice of law that seeks to minimize a client’s risk of litigation or secure more certainty with regard to the client’s legal rights and duties. • Emphasizing planning, counseling, and the nonadversarial resolution of disputes, preventive law focuses on the lawyer’s role as adviser and negotiator. • Also termed (less correctly) preventative law.

preventive punishment. See punishment.

previously taxed income. See INCOME.

price. The amount of money or other consideration asked for or given in exchange for something; the cost at which something is bought or sold. [Cases: Contracts ☞ 229(1); Sales ☞ 74.1.]

agreed price. The price for a sale, esp. of goods, arrived at by mutual agreement. Cf. open price. [Cases: Sales ☞ 75.1.]

arm’s-length price. The price at which two unrelated, unaffiliated, and nondesperate parties would freely agree to do business. See arm’s-length transaction under TRANSACTION; fair market value under VALUE.

asked price. The lowest price at which a seller is willing to sell a security at a given time. See spread (2).

asking price. The price at which a seller lists property for sale, often implying a willingness to sell for less. • Also termed ask price; offering price.

at-the-market price. A retail price that store owners in the same vicinity generally charge.

bid price. The highest price that a prospective buyer is willing to pay for a security at a given time. See spread (2).

call price. 1. The price at which a bond may be retired before its maturity. [Cases: Corporations ☞ 468.1.]

2. See strike price.

ceiling price. 1. The highest price at which a buyer is willing to buy. 2. The highest price allowed by a government agency or by some other regulatory institution. [Cases: War and National Emergency ☞ 108.1.]

closing price. The price of a security at the end of a given trading day. • Also termed close.

exercise price. See strike price.

ex-works price. The price of goods as they leave the factory. See EX WORKS.

fixed price. A price that is agreed upon by a wholesaler and a retailer for the later sale or resale of an item. • Agreements to fix prices are generally prohibited by state and federal statutes.

floor price. The lowest price at which a seller is willing to sell.

liquidating price. See redemption price.

liquation price. A price that is paid for property sold to liquidate a debt. • Liquidation price is usu. below market price. • Also termed liquidation value.

list price. A published or advertised price of goods; retail price.

market price. The prevailing price at which something is sold in a specific market. See fair market value under VALUE (2).

mean trading price. Securities. The average of the daily trading price of a security determined at the close of the market each day during a 90-day period.

net price. The price of something, after deducting cash discounts.

offering price. See asking price.

open price. The price for a sale, esp. of goods, that has not been settled at the time of a sale’s conclusion. UCC § 2-305. Cf. agreed price. [Cases: Sales ☞ 78.1.] predatory price. See predatory pricing.

put price. See strike price.

redemption price. 1. The price of a bond that has not reached maturity, purchased at the issuer's option. 2. The price of shares when a mutual-fund shareholder sells shares back to the fund. • Also termed liquidating price; repurchase price. [Cases: Corporations ☞ 468.1.]

reserve price. In an auction, the amount that a seller of goods stipulates as the lowest acceptable offer. • The reserve price may or may not be announced. See with RESERVE; without RESERVE.

sales price. The total amount for which property is sold, often including the costs of any services that are a part of the sale. • Under sales-tax statutes, the amount is typically valued in money even if the value is not received in money. • Also termed selling price.

spot price. The amount for which a commodity is sold in a spot market.

strike price. Securities. The price for which a security will be bought or sold under an option contract if the option is exercised. • Also termed striking price; exercise price; call price; put price. See option.

subscription price. See subscription price.

suggested retail price. The sales price recommended to a retailer by a manufacturer of the product.

support price. A minimum price set by the federal government for a particular agricultural commodity. [Cases: Agriculture ☞ 3.5.]

target price. A price set by the federal government for particular agricultural commodities. • If the market price falls below the target price, farmers receive a... subsidy from the government for the difference. [Cases: Agriculture C-3.5.]

trade price. The price at which a manufacturer or wholesaler sells to others in the same business or industry.

transfer price. The price charged by one segment of an organization for a product or service supplied to another segment of the same organization; esp. the charge assigned to an exchange of goods or services between a corporation's organizational units.

unit price. A price of a food product expressed in a well-known measure such as ounces or pounds.

upset price. The lowest amount that a seller is willing to accept for property or goods sold at auction. [Cases: Auctions and Auctioneers C-7.]

wholesale price. The price that a retailer pays for goods purchased (usu. in bulk) from a wholesaler for resale to consumers at a higher price.

price amendment. Securities. A change in a registration statement, prospectus, or prospectus supplement affecting the offering price, the underwriting and selling discounts or commissions, the amount of proceeds, the conversion rates, the call prices, or some other matter relating to the offering price.

price/cost analysis. A technique of determining, for antitrust purposes, whether predatory pricing has occurred by examining the relationship between a defendant's prices and either its average variable cost or its average total cost.

price discrimination. (1915) The practice of offering identical or similar goods to different buyers at different prices when the costs of producing the goods are the same. • Price discrimination may violate antitrust laws if it reduces competition. It may be either direct, as when a seller charges different prices to different buyers, or indirect, as when a seller offers special concessions (such as favorable credit terms) to some but not all buyers. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation C-839.]

persistent price discrimination. A monopolist's systematic policy of obtaining different rates of return from different sales groupings.

price-earnings ratio. The ratio between a stock's current share price and the corporation's earnings per share for the last year. • Some investors avoid stocks with high price-earnings ratios because those stocks may be overpriced. — Abbr. P/E ratio. Cf. earnings yield under yield.

price-erosion theory. Patents. A theory of lost-profits remedy that measures the difference between what an item could have sold for with patent protection and what it actually sold for while having to compete against an infringing item. [Cases: Patents C-318(3).]

price-fixing. (1889) The artificial setting or maintenance of prices at a certain level, contrary to the workings of the free market. • Price-fixing is usu. illegal per se under antitrust law. See fix (3). [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation C-821.]

"Price-fixing agreements may or may not be aimed at complete elimination of price competition. The group making those agreements may or may not have the power to control the market. But the fact that the group cannot control the market prices does not necessarily mean that the agreement as to prices has no utility to the members of the combination. The effectiveness of price-fixing agreements is dependent on many factors, such as competitive tactics, position in the industry, the formula underlying price policies. Whatever economic justification particular price-fixing agreements may have to have, the law does not permit an inquiry into their reasonableness. They are all banned because of their actual or potential threat to the central nervous system of the economy." United States v. Socony-Vacuum Oil Co., 310 U.S. 150, 225-26 n.59, 60 S.Ct. 811, 845 n.59 (1940).

horizontal price-fixing. (1935) Price-fixing among competitors on the same level, such as retailers throughout an industry. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation C-822.]

vertical price-fixing. (1936) Price-fixing among parties in the same chain of distribution, such as manufacturers and retailers attempting to control an item's resale price. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation C-821.]

price index. An index of average prices as a percentage of the average prevailing at some other time (such as a base year). See consumer price index; producer price index.

price leadership. (1942) A market condition in which an industry leader establishes a price that others in the field adopt as their own. • Price leadership alone does not violate antitrust laws without other evidence of an intent to create a monopoly.

price-level-adjusted mortgage. See mortgage.

price memorandum. Securities. A document created by an underwriter to explain how securities are priced for a public offering and, typically, to show estimates and appraisals that are not allowed as part of the offering documents.

price-renegotiation clause. Oil & gas. A provision in a gas contract allowing for price renegotiation from time to time or upon election of one of the parties.

price squeeze. Antitrust. Discriminatory pricing practiced by a manufacturer or distributor who also supplies materials or products to a competitor, and charges a high wholesale price in an attempt to reduce or eliminate a competitor's ability to make a retail profit. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation C-811.]

price support. (1927) The artificial maintenance of prices (as of a particular commodity) at a certain level, esp. by governmental action (as by subsidy). [Cases: Agriculture C-3.5.]

price war. (1895) A period of sustained or repeated price-cutting in an industry (esp. among retailers), designed to undersell competitors or force them out of business.

primae preces. See preces primariae.

primae facie (pri-may fay-she) adv. [Latin] (15c) At first sight; on first appearance but subject to further evidence or information <the agreement is prima facie valid>. [Cases: Evidence C-53, 85, 584(1)].

primae facie, adj. (18c) Sufficient to establish a fact or raise a presumption unless disproved or rebutted .

primae facie case. (1805) 1. The establishment of a legally required rebuttable presumption. [Cases: Evidence C-53, 85, 584(1)] 2. A party's production of enough evidence to allow the fact-trier to infer the fact at issue and rule in the party's favor. [Cases: Evidence C-584(1)].

primary caregiver. Family law. 1. The parent who has had the greatest responsibility for the daily care and rearing of a child. See tender-years doctrine; primary-caregiver doctrine. [Cases: Child Custody C-44, 459]. 2. The person (including a nonparent) who has had the greatest responsibility for the daily care and rearing of a child. — Also termed primary caretaker.

primary-caregiver doctrine. Family law. The presumption that, in a custody dispute, the parent who is a child's main caregiver will be the child's custodian, assuming that he or she is a fit parent. • This doctrine includes the quality and the quantity of care that a parent gives a child — but excludes supervisory care by others while the child is in the parent's custody. Under this doctrine, courts sometimes divide children into three age groups: those under the age of 6, those 6 to 14, and those 14 and older. For children under the age of 6, an absolute presumption exists in favor of the primary caretaker as custodian. For those 6 to 14, the trial court may hear the child's preference on the record but without the parents being present. For those 14 and older, the child may be allowed to choose which parent will be the custodian, assuming that both parents are fit. — Also termed primary-caretaker doctrine; primary-caregiver presumption; primary-caretaker presumption; primary-caregiver preference. Cf. maternal-preference presumption; tender-years doctrine. [Cases: Child Custody C-44, 459].

primary caretaker. See primary caregiver.

See primary jurisdiction under jurisdiction. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure C-228.1].

primary lease. See headlease.

primary liability. See liability.

primary-line competition. See horizontal competition under competition.

primary-line injury. Antitrust. Under the price-discrimination provisions of the Robinson-Patman Act, the practice of charging below-cost, predatory prices in an attempt to eliminate the seller's competition in the market. 15 USCA § 13(a). • A primary-line injury, which hinders or seeks to hinder competition among the seller's competitors, is distinguishable from a secondary-line injury, which refers to discriminatory pricing that hinders or seeks to hinder competition among the seller's customers, by favoring one customer over another in the prices the seller charges. Cf. secondary-line injury.

"Liggett contends that Brown & Williamson's discriminatory volume rebates to wholesalers threatened substantial competitive injury by furthering a predatory pricing scheme designed to purge competition from the economy segment

primogeniture (prim-ma-jen-a-char). (15c) 1. The state of being the firstborn child among siblings. 2. The common-law right of the firstborn son to inherit his ancestor's estate, usu. to the exclusion of younger siblings. — Also termed (in sense 2) primogenitureship. See Borough English. [Cases: Descent and Distribution ± 7.]

"If by primogeniture we only mean 'that the male issue shall be admitted before the female, and that, when there are two or more males in equal degrees, the eldest only shall inherit, but the females "all together"' [Blackstone's definition], then ancient records may indeed contain but scant references. But primogeniture embraces all the cases of single inheritance, and may indeed be defined as the prerogative enjoyed by an eldest son or occasionally an eldest daughter, through law or custom, to succeed to their ancestor's inheritance in preference to younger children. Nay, we might even make it more comprehensive, extending it to all cases of single succession depending upon priority in birth." Radhabinod Pal, The History of the Law of Primogeniture 11 (1929).

"We might note here, parenthetically, that the English preference for single-file male descent — that is, the system of descent known as primogeniture — was never cordially received in this country. Our statutes of descent and distribution uniformly provide for sons' and daughters' sharing the inheritance equally. Although this seems a fairer method than primogeniture, which was finally abolished in Britain with the 1925 reforms, the descent of property to an ever-expanding group of heirs can seriously complicate the clearing of old titles." Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 9 (2d ed., 1984).

primo venienti (pri-moh ven-ee-ent-ee). [Latin] To the one first coming. • This refers to the former practice by estate executors of paying debts as they were presented without regard to whether the estate had enough assets to pay all the debts.

princeps (prin-seps), n. [Latin] Roman law. A leading person, esp. the emperor.

principal, n. (14c) 1. One who authorizes another to act on his or her behalf as an agent. Cf. agent (2). [Cases: Principal and Agent ≤ 1, 130.]

apparent principal. A person who, by outward manifestations, has made it reasonably appear to a third person that another is authorized to act as the person’s agent. [Cases: Principal and Agent ≤ 92–99.]

displaced principal. (1858) A principal whose identity is revealed by the agent to a third party. • A displaced principal is always liable on a contract entered into by the agent with the principal’s authority, but the agent is usu. not liable. [Cases: Principal and Agent ≤ 92–137.]

partially displaced principal. (1934) A principal whose existence but not actual identity is revealed by the agent to a third party. [Cases: Principal and Agent ≤ 138–146.]

undeclared principal. (1835) A principal whose identity is kept secret by the agent; a principal for whom the other party has no notice that the agent is acting. • An undeclared principal and the agent are both liable on a contract entered into by the agent with the principal’s authority. [Cases: Principal and Agent ≤ 138–146.]

1. One who commits or participates in a crime. Cf. accessory (2); accomplice (2). [Cases: Criminal Law ≤ 59–67.]

The student should notice that in criminal law the word ‘principal’ suggests the very converse of the idea which it represents in mercantile law. In the former, as we have seen, an accessory proposes an act, and the ‘principal’ carries it out. But in the law of contract, and in that of tort, the ‘principal’ only authorizes an act, and the ‘agent’ carries it out. Where the same transaction is both a tort and a crime, this double use of the word may cause confusion. For example, if, by an innkeeper’s directions, his chambermaid steals jewels out of a guest’s portmanteau, the maid is the ‘principal’ in a crime, wherein her master is an accessory before the fact; whilst she is also the agent in a tort, wherein her master is the ‘principal.’” J.W. Cecil Turner, Kenny’s Outlines of Criminal Law 89 (16th ed. 1952).

principal in the first degree. (18c) The perpetrator of a crime. — Also termed first-degree principal. [Cases: Criminal Law ≤ 61, 78.]

“By a principal in the first degree, we mean the actual offender — the man in whose guilty mind lay the latest blamable mental cause of the criminal act. Almost always, of course, he will be the man by whom this act itself was done. But occasionally this will not be so; for the felony may have been committed by the hand of an innocent agent who, having no blamable intentions in what he did, incurred no criminal liability by doing it. In such a case the man who instigates this agent is the real offender; his was the last mens rea that preceded the crime, though it did not cause it immediately but mediately.” J.W. Cecil Turner, Kenny’s Outlines of Criminal Law 85–86 (16th ed. 1952).

principal in the second degree. (18c) One who helped the perpetrator at the time of the crime. — Also termed accessory at the fact; second-degree principal. See abettor. [Cases: Criminal Law C–63, 78.]

“The distinction between principals in the first and second degrees is a distinction without a difference except in those rare instances in which some unusual statute has provided a different penalty for one of these than for the other. A principal in the first degree is the immediate perpetrator of the crime while a principal in the second degree is one who did not commit the crime with his own hands but was present and abetting the principal. It may be added, in the words of Mr. Justice Miller, that one may perpetrate a crime, not only with his own hands, but ‘through the agency of mechanical or chemical means, as by instruments, poison or powder, or by an animal, child, or other innocent agent acting under his direction.’” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 736 (3d ed. 1982) (quoting Beausoleil v. United States, 107 F.2d 292, 297 (D.C. Cir. 1939)).

3. One who has primary responsibility on an obligation, as opposed to a surety or indorser. 4. The corpus of an estate or trust. [Cases: Trusts ≤ i. 5. The amount of a debt, investment, or other fund, not including interest, earnings, or profits.

The rule that printed matter may not be patented unless it is a physical part of a patentable invention. • For example, the doctrine has been used to deny patents for systems of representing sheet music and for methods of compiling directories. But it cannot be used to deny a patent for computer software. [Cases: Patents 5.]

Printers Ink Statute. A model statute drafted in 1911 and adopted in a number of states making it a misdemeanor to print an advertisement that contains a false or deceptive statement.

prior, adj. (17c) 1. Preceding in time or order <under this court's prior order>. 2. Taking precedence .

prior, n. (1919) Criminal law. Slang. A previous conviction <because the defendant had two priors, the judge automatically enhanced his sentence>.

prior-acts coverage. Insurance. A claims-made professional-liability policy endorsement that makes the effective date retroactive and extends the policy’s protection to claims made and lawsuits filed during the policy period for negligent acts that occurred before the policy was actually purchased. • Also termed nose coverage. Cf. tail coverage. [Cases: Insurance 2266.]

prior and persistent offender. See recidivist.

prior-appropriation doctrine. (1959) The rule that, among the persons whose properties border on a waterway, the earliest users of the water have the right to take all they can use before anyone else has a right to it. Cf. riparian-rights doctrine. [Cases: Waters and Water Courses 149.]

prior art. See art.

prior-claim rule. The principle that before suing for a tax refund or abatement, a taxpayer must first assert the claim to the Internal Revenue Service. [Cases: Internal Revenue 5003.]

prior consistent statement. See statement.

prior creditor. See creditor.

prior-exclusive-jurisdiction doctrine. The rule that a court will not assume in rem jurisdiction over property that is already under the jurisdiction of another court of concurrent jurisdiction.

prior inconsistent statement. See statement.

priori petenti (pri-or-i pa-ten-ti). [Latin “to the first person applying”] Wills & estates. The principle that when two or more persons are equally entitled to administer an estate, the court will appoint the person who applies first.

priority. (15c) 1. The status of being earlier in time or higher in degree or rank: precedence. 2. Commercial law. An established right to such precedence; esp., a creditor’s right to have a claim paid before other creditors of the same debtor receive payment. [Cases: Secured Transactions 138-145.] 3. The doctrine that, as between two courts, jurisdiction should be accorded the court in which proceedings are first begun. [Cases: Courts 475, 493, 514; Federal Courts 1145.] 4. Patents & Trademarks. The status of being first to invent something (and therefore be potentially eligible for patent protection) or to use a mark in trade (and therefore be potentially eligible for trademark registration). [Cases: Patents 90; Trademarks 1131.]

priority of adoption. Trademarks. Priority in designing or creating a trademark. • Priority of adoption does not confer the right to exclusive use of a mark if someone else was first to use it in commerce. • Also termed priority of appropriation; priority of invention. Cf. priority of use. [Cases: Trademarks 1131.] priority of appropriation. Trademarks. See priority of adoption.

priority of invention. 1. Patents. The determination that one among several patent applications, for substantially the same invention, should receive the patent when the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office has declared interference. • This determination depends on the date of conception, the date of reduction to practice, and diligence. [Cases: Patents 90, 106.] 2. Trademarks. See priority of adoption.

priority of use. Trademarks. Priority in using a mark in actual commerce. • The priority of use, not the priority of adoption, determines who has the right to protection. Cf. priority of adoption. [Cases: Trademarks 1137.]

priority award. Patents. A final judgment by the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office designating one party in an interference contest as the first inventor. • Also termed award in interference.

priority claim. See claim (5).

priority contest. See interference (3).

priority date. See date.

priority-jurisdiction rule. See first-to-file rule.

priority lien. See prior lien under lien.

priority of lien. The ranking of liens in the order in which they are perfected.

prior laesit (pri-ar lee sit). [Law Latin] Scots law. He (or she) first injured. • The phrase usu. referred to the provocation for an assault.

prior lien. See lien.
prior petens \((\text{pré} \text{-} \text{or} \text{pet}-\text{énz})\). [Latin] The person first applying.

prior preferred stock. See stock.

prior publication. Patents. Public disclosure of the basis for or existence of an invention, made before filing a patent application for the invention. • If the publication was made more than a year before the application is filed, the patent is barred by statute. Publication occurs when the information is made available to any member of the general public. See limited publication under PUBLICATION. [Cases: Patents \(\odot 67\).]

prior relationship rape. See relationship rape under RAPE.

prior restraint. (1833) A governmental restriction on speech or publication before its actual expression. • Prior restraints violate the First Amendment unless the speech is obscene, is defamatory, or creates a clear and present danger to society. [Cases: Constitutional Law \(\odot 1525\).]

Prior restraints violate the First Amendment unless the speech is obscene, is defamatory, or creates a clear and present danger to society. [Cases: Constitutional Law \(\odot 1525\).]

prior sale. Patents. Sale or offer of sale of an invention before a patent is applied for. • If the sale occurred more than one year before the application is filed, the patent is barred by statute. 35 USCA § 102(b). [Cases: Patents \(\odot 76\).]

prior sentence. See SENTENCE.

prior-use bar. See PUBLIC-USE BAR.

prior-use doctrine. (1856) The principle that, without legislative authorization, a government agency may not appropriate property already devoted to a public use. [Cases: Eminent Domain \(\odot 47\).]

prior-user right. Patents. The right of a first inventor to continue using an invention after someone else has patented it. • This right protects first inventors in most countries from the harsh effects of a first-to-file system. [Cases: Patents \(\odot 90(1)\).]

prisage \((\text{pré} \text{-} \text{zi} \text{-} \text{jë})\). Hist. A royal duty on wine imported into England. • Prisage was replaced by butlerage in the reign of Edward I. Cf. BUTLERAGE.

prisel en auer lieu \((\text{pré} \text{-} \text{zal} \text{aw} \text{oh} \text{-} \text{tayl} \text{-} \text{yoo})\). [Law French "a taking in another place"] A plea in abatement in a replevin action.

prison. (bef. 12c) A state or federal facility of confinement for convicted criminals, esp. felons. • Also termed penitentiary; penal institution; adult correctional institution. Cf. JAIL. [Cases: Prisons \(\odot 213\).]

private prison. (1865) A prison that is managed by a private company, not by a governmental agency. [Cases: Prisons \(\odot 12\).]

prison breach. (17c) A prisoner's forcible breaking and departure from a place of lawful confinement; the offense of escaping from confinement in a prison or jail. • Prison breach has traditionally been distinguished from escape by the presence of force, but some jurisdictions have abandoned this distinction. — Also termed prison breaking; breach of prison. Cf. ESCAPE (2). [Cases: Escape \(\odot 4\).]

"Breach of prison by the offender himself, when committed for any cause, was felony at the common law; or even conspiring to break it. But this severity is mitigated by the statute de fragentibus prisonam, 1 Edw. II, which enacts that no person shall have judgment of life or member, for breaking prison, unless committed for some capital offence. So that to break prison, when lawfully committed for any treason or felony, remains still a felony as at the common law; and to break prison, when lawfully confined upon any other inferior charge, is still punishable as a high misdemeanor by fine and imprisonment." 4 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 130–31 (1769).

prison camp. (1864) A usu. minimum-security camp for the detention of trustworthy prisoners who are often employed on government projects.

prisoner. 1. A person who is serving time in prison. 2. A person who has been apprehended by a law-enforcement officer and is in custody, regardless of whether the person has yet been put in prison. Cf. CAPTIVE (1). • "While breach of prison, or prison breach, means breaking out of or away from prison, it is important to have clearly in mind the meaning of the word 'prison.' If an officer arrests an offender and takes him to jail the layman does not think of the offender as being 'in prison' until he is safely behind locked doors, but no one hesitates to speak of him as a 'prisoner' from the moment of apprehension. He is a prisoner because he is "in prison" ... whether he were actually in the walls of a prison, or only in the stocks, or in the custody of any person who had lawfully arrested him . . . ." Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 566 (3d ed. 1982) (quoting 2 Hawk. P.C. ch. 18, § 1 (6th ed. 1788)).

prisoner at the bar. (16c) Archaic. An accused person who is on trial.

prisoner of conscience. Human-rights law. A person who is imprisoned because of his or her beliefs, race, sex, ethnic origin, language, or religion. • The range of "beliefs" that fall within this definition is not settled but may include political ideologies and objections to military service, esp. in wartime.

prisoner of war. A person, usu. a soldier, who is captured by or surrenders to the enemy in wartime. — Also termed captive. — Abbr. POW. [Cases: War and National Emergency \(\odot 11\).]

prisoner's dilemma. A logic problem — often used by law-and-economics scholars to illustrate the effect of cooperative behavior — involving two prisoners who are being separately questioned about their participation in a crime: (1) if both confess, they will each receive a 5-year sentence; (2) if neither confesses, they will each receive a 3-year sentence; and (3) if one confesses but the other does not, the confessing prisoner will receive a 1-year sentence while the silent prisoner will receive a 10-year sentence. See EXTERNALITY.

Prison Litigation Reform Act. A federal statute designed to reduce the number of frivolous lawsuits and petitions filed by prisoners and to reduce the power of federal courts over state prison systems. 110 Stat. 1321-66-1321-77 (1996).

prist (prist). [Law French] Hist. Ready. • In oral pleading, this term was used to express a joinder of issue.

privacy. The condition or state of being free from public attention to intrusion into or interference with one’s acts or decisions.

autonomy privacy. An individual’s right to control his or her personal activities or intimate personal decisions without outside interference, observation, or intrusion. • If the individual’s interest in an activity or decision is fundamental, the state must show a compelling public interest before the private interest can be overcome. If the individual’s interest is acknowledged to be less than fundamental or is disputed, then a court must apply a balancing test. Hill v. NCAA, 865 F.2d 633, 653, 654 (Cal. 1994). [Cases: Constitutional Law C≈1210–1275.]

informational privacy. Tort. A private person’s right to choose to determine whether, how, and to what extent information about oneself is communicated to others, esp. sensitive and confidential information. [Cases: Constitutional Law C≈1227.]

Privacy Act of 1974. An act that regulates the government’s creation, collection, use, and dissemination of records that can identify an individual by name, as well as other personal information. 18 USCA § 552a. [Cases: Records C≈31.]

privacy law. (1936) 1. A federal or state statute that regulates the government’s assets primarily to further the interests of a private individual or entity, rather than for a public interest. • Under most circumstances, this type of benefit is prohibited. See IRC (26 USCA) § 501(c)(3). Cf. private inurement under INUREMENT.

qualitatively incidental private benefit. A permissible private benefit arising from circumstances under which a benefit to the public cannot be achieved without necessarily also benefiting a private interest.

private judging. (1979) A type of alternative dispute resolution whereby the parties hire a private individual to hear and decide a case. This process may occur as a matter of contract between the parties or in connection with a statute authorizing such a process. — Also termed rent-a-judging.

"In contrast to arbitration, private judging is a less contractual, less privatized process. Party agreement, usually formed post-dispute, does send a case to private judging. And the parties have the freedom of contract to determine the time and place of trial, as well as the identity of the judge. Unlike arbitration, however, privately judged trials may . . . be: (1) required to use the same rules of procedure and evidence used in ordinary litigation, (2) exposed to public view by court order, (3) adjudicated only by a former judge, and (4) subject to appeal in the same manner as other trial verdicts. In sum, private judging is essentially an ordinary bench trial except that the parties select, and pay for, the judge." Stephen J. Ware, Alternative Dispute Resolution § 2.54, at 113 (2001).

privigna (pri-vig-na), n. [Latin] Roman & civil law. A daughter of one's husband or wife by a previous marriage; a stepdaughter.

privignus (pri-vig-nus). [Latin] Roman & civil law. A son of one's husband or wife by a previous marriage; a stepson.

privilege. (bef. 12c) 1. A special legal right, exemption, or immunity granted to a person or class of persons; an exception to a duty. A privilege grants someone the legal freedom to do or not to do a given act. It immunizes conduct that, under ordinary circumstances, would subject the actor to liability.

absolute privilege. (18c) A privilege that immunizes an actor from suit, no matter how wrongful the action might be, and even though it is done with an improper motive. Cf. qualified privilege. [Cases: Libel and Slander 9-36; Torts 9-121.]

audit privilege. See audit privilege.

conditional privilege. See qualified privilege.

courtroom privilege. See judicial privilege.

defamation privilege. See litigation privilege.

deliberative-process privilege. (1977) A privilege permitting the government to withhold documents relating to policy formulation to encourage open and independent discussion among those who develop government policy. [Cases: Privileged Communications and Confidentiality 9-361.]

judicial privilege. (1845) Defamation. 1. The privilege protecting any statement made in the course of and with reference to a judicial proceeding by any judge, juror, party, witness, or advocate. 2. See litigation privilege. — Also termed courtroom privilege. [Cases: Libel and Slander 9-38.]

judicial-proceedings privilege. See litigation privilege.

legislative privilege. (1941) Defamation. The privilege protecting (1) any statement made in a legislature by one of its members, and (2) any paper published as part of legislative business. — Also termed (in a parliamentary system) parliamentary privilege. [Cases: Libel and Slander 9-37.]

litigation privilege. A privilege protecting the attorneys and parties in a lawsuit against tort claims based on certain acts done and statements made when related to the litigation. • The privilege is most often applied to defamation claims but may be extended to encompass other torts, such as invasion of privacy and disclosure of trade secrets. The facts of each case determine whether the privilege applies and whether it is qualified or absolute. — Also termed judicial-proceedings privilege; judicial privilege; defamation privilege. [Cases: Libel and Slander 9-38.]

official privilege. (1927) The privilege immunizing a defamatory statement based on official duty by one state officer to another in the course of official duty. [Cases: Libel and Slander 9-39, 42.]

privilege from arrest. (1840) An exemption from arrest, as that enjoyed by members of Congress during legislative sessions. U.S. Const. art. I, § 6, cl. 1. [Cases: Arrest 9-60.]

qualified privilege. (1865) A privilege that immunizes an actor from suit only when the privilege is properly exercised in the performance of a legal or moral duty. — Also termed conditional privilege. Cf. absolute privilege. [Cases: Libel and Slander 9-41; Officers and Public Employees 9-114; Torts 9-121.]

special privilege. (17c) 1. A privilege granted to a person or class of persons to the exclusion of others and in derogation of the common right. 2. See personal privilege under privilege (5).

testimonial privilege. (1907) A right not to testify based on a claim of privilege; a privilege that overrides a witness's duty to disclose matters within the witness's knowledge, whether at trial or by deposition. [Cases: Witnesses 9-297.]

viatorial privilege (vi-a-tor-ee-al). (1904) A privilege that overrides a person's duty to attend court in person and to testify.

work-product privilege. See work-product rule.

2. An affirmative defense by which a defendant acknowledges at least part of the conduct complained of but asserts that the defendant's conduct was authorized or sanctioned by law; esp., in tort law, a circumstance justifying or excusing an intentional tort. See justification (2). Cf. immunity (2). [Cases: Torts 9-121.]

antimarial-facts privilege. See marital privilege (2).

attorney-client privilege. (1934) The client's right to refuse to disclose and to prevent any other person from disclosing confidential communications between the client and the attorney. • The privilege is not widely recognized. — Also termed lawyer-client privilege; client's privilege. [Cases: Privileged Communications and Confidentiality 9-1, 17.]

accountant-client privilege. (1956) The protection afforded to a client from an accountant's unauthorized disclosure of materials submitted to or prepared by the accountant. • The privilege is not widely recognized. [Cases: Privileged Communications and Confidentiality 9-405.]

"There are a number of ways to organize the essential elements of the attorney-client privilege to provide for an orderly analysis. One of the most popular is Wigmore's schema: '(1) Where legal advice of any kind is sought (2) from a professional legal adviser in his capacity as such, (3) the communications relating to that purpose (4) made in confidence (5) by the client (6) are at his instance permanently protected (7) from disclosure by himself or by the legal adviser, (8) except the privilege be waived.' Though this organization has its virtues, there is some question as to whether it completely states the modern privilege." 24 Charles Alan Wright & Kenneth W. Graham Jr., Federal Practice and Procedure § 5473, at 103-04 (1986) (quoting 8 John Henry Wigmore, Evidence § 2292, at 554 (John F. McNaughton rev., 1961)).

"At the present time it seems most realistic to portray the attorney-client privilege as supported in part by its traditional utilitarian justification, and in part by the integral role it is perceived to play in the adversary system itself. Our system of litigation casts the lawyer in the role of fighter for the party whom he represents. A strong tradition of loyalty attaches to the relationship of attorney and client, and this tradition would be outraged by routine examination of the lawyer as to the client's confidential disclosures regarding professional business. To the extent that the evidentiary privilege, then, is integrally related to an entire code of professional conduct, it is futile to envision drastic curtailment of the privilege without substantial modification of the underlying ethical system to which the privilege is merely ancillary." John W. Strong, McCormick on Evidence § 87, at 121–22 (4th ed. 1992).

clergyman-penitent privilege. See priest-penitent privilege.

client's privilege. See attorney-client privilege.

doctor-patient privilege. (1954) The right to exclude from discovery and evidence in a legal proceeding any confidential communication that a patient makes to a physician for the purpose of diagnosis or treatment, unless the patient consents to the disclosure. — Also termed patient-physician privilege; physician-client privilege. [Cases: Privileged Communications and Confidentiality ¶ 022.]

editorial privilege. See journalist's privilege (2).

executive privilege. (1909) A privilege, based on the constitutional doctrine of separation of powers, that exempts the executive branch of the federal government from usual disclosure requirements when the matter to be disclosed involves national security or foreign policy. Cf. executive immunity under immunity (1). [Cases: Privileged Communications and Confidentiality ¶ 353.]

husband-wife privilege. See marital privilege.

informer's privilege. (1962) The qualified privilege that a government can invoke to prevent disclosure of the identity and communications of its informants. In exercising its power to formulate evidentiary rules for federal criminal cases, the U.S. Supreme Court has consistently declined to hold that the government must disclose the identity of informants in a preliminary hearing or in a criminal trial. McCray v. Illinois, 386 U.S. 300, 312, 87 S.Ct. 1056, 1063 (1967). A party can, however, usu. overcome the privilege by demonstrating that the need for the information outweighs the public interest in maintaining the privilege. — Also termed informer's privilege. [Cases: Criminal Law ¶ 627.6; Privileged Communications and Confidentiality ¶ 374.]

joint-defense privilege. (1975) The rule that a defendant can assert the attorney-client privilege to protect a confidential communication made to a codefendant's lawyer if the communication was related to the defense of both defendants. — Also termed common-interest doctrine; common-interest privilege; common-interest exception. [Cases: Privileged Communications and Confidentiality ¶ 122.]

journalist's privilege. (1970) 1. A reporter's protection, under constitutional or statutory law, from being compelled to testify about confidential information or sources. — Also termed reporter's privilege; newsman's privilege. See SHIELD LAW (1). [Cases: Privileged Communications and Confidentiality ¶ 404.] 2. A publisher's protection against defamation lawsuits when the publication makes fair comment on the actions of public officials in matters of public concern. — Also termed editorial privilege; common-interest privilege; common-interest exception. See FAIR COMMENT. [Cases: Libel and Slander ¶ 49.] lawyer-client privilege. See attorney-client privilege.

marital privilege. (1902) 1. The privilege allowing a spouse not to testify, and to prevent another person from testifying, about confidential communications between the spouses during the marriage. — Also termed maritalcommunications privilege. [Cases: Privileged Communications and Confidentiality ¶ 60.] 2. The privilege allowing a spouse not to testify in a criminal case as an adverse witness against the other spouse, regardless of the subject matter of the testimony. — Also termed (in sense 2) privilege against adverse spousal testimony; antimarital-facts privilege. [Cases: Witnesses ¶ 51.] 3. The privilege immunizing from a defamation lawsuit any statement made between husband and wife. — Also termed (in all senses) spousal privilege; husband-wife privilege.

national-security privilege. See state-secrets privilege.

newsman's privilege. See journalist's privilege (1).

patient-physician privilege. See doctor-patient privilege.

peer-review privilege. (1979) A privilege that protects from disclosure the proceedings and reports of a medical facility's peer-review committee, which reviews and oversees the patient care and medical services provided by the staff. [Cases: Privileged Communications and Confidentiality ¶ 422.]

physician-client privilege. See doctor-patient privilege.

political-vote privilege. A privilege to protect from compulsory disclosure a vote cast in an election by secret ballot. [Cases: Elections ¶ 28.]

priest-penitent privilege. (1958) The privilege barring a clergy member from testifying about a confessor's communications. — Also termed clergyman-penitent privilege. [Cases: Privileged Communications and Confidentiality ¶ 403.]

privacy privilege. A defendant's right not to disclose private information unless the plaintiff can show that (1) the information is directly relevant to the case, and (2) the plaintiff's need for the information outweighs the defendant's need for nondisclosure. This privilege is recognized in California but in few other jurisdictions. [Cases: Witnesses ¶ 184(10)].

privilege against self-incrimination. Criminal law. 1. Right against self-incrimination. 2. A criminal defendant's right not to be asked any questions by the judge or prosecution unless the defendant chooses to testify. — Also termed right not to be questioned. [Cases: Witnesses ^2299.

"According to the rule, neither the judge nor the prosecution is entitled at any stage to question the accused unless he chooses to give evidence. . . . This rule may be called the accused's right not to be questioned; in America it is termed the privilege against self-incrimination. The latter expression is more apt as the name for another rule, the privilege of any witness to refuse to answer an incriminating question: this is different from the rule under discussion, which, applying only to persons accused of crime, prevents the question from being asked. The person charged with crime has not merely the liberty to refuse to answer a question incriminating himself; he is freed even from the embarrassment of being asked the question." Glanville Williams, The Proof of Guilt 37-38 (3d ed. 1963).

psychotherapist-patient privilege. (1968) A privilege that a person can invoke to prevent the disclosure of a confidential communication made in the course of diagnosis or treatment of a mental or emotional condition by or at the direction of a psychotherapist. • The privilege can be overcome under certain conditions, as when the examination is ordered by a court. — Also termed psychotherapist-client privilege. [Cases: Privileged Communications and Confidentiality ^312.]

self-critical-analysis privilege. (1982) A privilege protecting individuals and entities from divulging the results of candid assessments of their compliance with laws and regulations, to the extent that the assessments are internal, the results were intended from the outset to be confidential, and the information is of a type that would be curtailed if it were forced to be disclosed. • This privilege is founded on the public policy that it is beneficial to permit individuals and entities to confidentially evaluate their compliance with the law, so that they will monitor and improve their compliance with it. — Also termed self-policing privilege; self-evaluation privilege. [Cases: Privileged Communications and Confidentiality ^418.] spousal privilege. See marital privilege.

state-secrets privilege. (1959) A privilege that the government may invoke against the discovery of a material that, if divulged, could compromise national security. — Also termed national-security privilege. [Cases: Privileged Communications and Confidentiality ^360.]

tax-return privilege. A privilege to refuse to divulge the contents of a tax return or certain related documents. • The privilege is founded on the public policy of encouraging honest tax returns. [Cases: Witnesses ^216.

4. Civil law. A creditor’s right, arising from the nature of the debt, to priority over the debtor’s other creditors. 5. Parliamentary law. The status of a motion as outranking other business because of its relationship to the meeting’s or a member’s rights. — Also termed parliamentary privilege. See question of privilege under question (3).

general privilege. A privilege that concerns the deliberative assembly as a body, rather than any particular member or members. — Also termed privileged assembly; privilege of the house. Cf. personal privilege.

parliamentary privilege. 1. A privilege under parliamentary law. 2. See legislative privilege under privilege (1).

personal privilege. A privilege that concerns an individual member or members (e.g., a member’s reputation or physical ability to hear the proceedings) rather than the deliberative assembly generally. — Also termed special privilege. See procedural point under point. Cf. general privilege.

privilege of the assembly. See general privilege.

privilege of the floor. Parliamentary law. (usu. pl.) The right of entering, passing through, and sitting on the floor during a meeting. See floor (1).

"The expression 'privileges of the floor,' sometimes used in legislative bodies or conventions, has nothing to do with having the floor, but means merely that a person is permitted to enter the hall. It carries no right to speak or any other right of membership, except as may be determined by rules or action of the body." Henry M. Robert, Robert’s Rules of Order Newly Revised § 3, at 28 n. (10th ed. 2000).

privilege of the house. See general privilege.

special privilege. See personal privilege.

privilege of palace. The exemption of a dwelling that is used as a royal residence from the execution of legal process within its precincts. • The monarch does not have to be in residence at the time but must intend to retain the power to take up personal residence in the dwelling at will. Not all palaces are royal residences; England’s Westminster Palace, for example, is occupied by the Parliament of the United Kingdom, not the queen, who relinquished all control of the palace in 1965.
Privileges and Immunities Clause. (1911) The constitutional provision (U.S. Const. art. IV, § 2, cl. 1) prohibiting a state from favoring its own citizens by discriminating against other states' citizens who come within its borders. [Cases: Constitutional Law 2935–2963.]

Privileges or Immunities Clause. (1918) The constitutional provision (U.S. Const. amend. XIV, § 1) prohibiting state laws that abridge the privileges or immunities of U.S. citizens. • The clause was effectively nullified by the Supreme Court in the Slaughter-House Cases, 83 U.S. (16 Wall.) 36 (1873). Cf. DUE PROCESS CLAUSE; EQUAL PROTECTION CLAUSE. [Cases: Constitutional Law 2910–2932.]

privilegium (priv-a-lee-jee-am), n. [Latin] 1. Roman law. A law passed against or in favor of a specific individual. 2. Roman law. A special right, esp. one giving priority to a creditor. 3. Civil law. Every right or favor that is granted by the law but is contrary to the usual rule.

privity (priv-a-tee). (16c) 1. The connection or relationship between two parties, each having a legally recognized interest in the same subject matter (such as a transaction, proceeding, or piece of property); mutual interest of privity <privity of contract>. [Cases: Contracts 186; Judgment 678(2).]

horizontal privity. (1968) Commercial law. The legal relationship between a party and a nonparty who is related to the party (such as a buyer and a member of the buyer's family). [Cases: Sales 255.]

privity of blood. (16c) 1. Privity between an heir and an ancestor. 2. Privity between coparceners.

privity of contract. (17c) The relationship between the parties to a contract, allowing them to sue each other but preventing a third party from doing so. • The requirement of privity has been relaxed under modern laws and doctrines of implied warranty and strict liability, which allow a third-party beneficiary or foreseeable user to sue the seller of a defective product. [Cases: Contracts 186; Sales 255.]

"To many students and practitioners of the common law privity of contract became a fetish. As such, it operated to deprive many a claimant of a remedy in cases where according to the mores of the time the claim was just. It has made many learned men believe that a choate in action could not be assigned. Even now, it is gravely asserted that a man cannot be made the debtor of another against his will. But the common law was gradually influenced by equity and by the law merchant, so that by assignment a debtor could become bound to pay a perfect stranger to himself, although until the legislature stepped in, the common-law courts characterized made use of a fiction and pretended that they were not doing that which they really were doing." William R. Anson, Principles of the Law of Contract 335 (Arthur L. Corbin ed., 3d Am. ed. 1919).

"It is an elementary principle of English law — known as the doctrine of 'Privity of Contract' — that contractual rights and duties only affect the parties to a contract, and this principle is the distinguishing feature between the law of contract and the law of property. True proprietary rights are 'binding on the world' in the lawyer's traditional phrase. Contractual rights, on the other hand, are only binding on, and enforceable by, the immediate parties to the contract. But this distinction, fundamental though it be, wears a little thin at times. On the one hand, there has been a constant tendency for contractual rights to be extended in their scope so as to affect more and more persons who cannot be regarded as parties to the transaction. On the other hand, few proprietary rights are literally 'binding on the world.'" P.S. Atiyah, An Introduction to the Law of Contract 265 (3d ed. 1981).

"The doctrine of privity means that a person cannot acquire rights or be subject to liabilities arising under a contract to which he is not a party. It does not mean that a contract between A and B cannot affect the legal rights of C indirectly." C.H. Treitel, The Law of Contract 538 (8th ed. 1991).

privity of estate. (17c) A mutual or successive relationship to the same right in property, as between grantor and grantee or landlord and tenant. — Also termed privity of title; privity in estate. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 20, 53.]

privity of possession. (1818) Privity between parties in successive possession of real property. • The existence of this type of privity is often at issue in adverse-possession claims. [Cases: Adverse Possession 43.]

privity of title. See privity of estate.

vertical privity. (1968) 1. Commercial law. The legal relationship between parties in a product's chain of distribution (such as a manufacturer and a seller). [Cases: Sales 255.] 2. Privity between one who signs a contract containing a restrictive covenant and one who acquires the property burdened by it.

2. Joint knowledge or awareness of something private or secret, esp. as implying concurrence or consent <privity to a crime>.

privy (priv-ee), n. pl. (15c) A person having a legal interest of privity in any action, matter, or property; a person who is in privity with another. • Traditionally, there were six types of privies: (1) privies in blood, such as an heir and an ancestor; (2) privies in representation, such as an executor and a testator or an administrator and an intestate person; (3) privies in estate, such as grantor and grantee or lessor and lessee; (4) privies in respect to a contract — the parties to a contract; (5) privies in respect of estate and contract, such as a lessor and lessee where the lessee assigns an interest, but the contract between lessor and lessee continues because the lessor does not accept the assignee; and (6) privies in law, such as husband and wife. The term also appears in the context of litigation. In this sense, it includes someone who controls a lawsuit though not a party to it; someone whose interests are represented by a party to the lawsuit; and a successor in interest to anyone having a derivative claim. Pl. privies.

Prize. 1. Something of value awarded in recognition of a person's achievement. 2. A vessel or cargo captured at sea or seized in port by the forces of a nation at war, and therefore liable to being condemned or appropriated as enemy property. [Cases: War and National Emergency \(\leq 28\).]

Prize court. See Court.

Prize fighting. Fighting for a reward or prize; esp., professional boxing. [Cases: Public Amusement and Entertainment \(\leq 27\).] "Prize fighting . . . was not looked upon with favor by the common law as was a friendly boxing match or wrestling match. On the other hand it was not punishable by the common law unless it was fought in a public place, or for some other reason constituted a breach of the peace." Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 480 (3d ed. 1982).

Prize goods. See Goods.

Prize law. The system of laws applicable to the capture of prize at sea, dealing with such matters as the rights of captors and the distribution of the proceeds. [Cases: War and National Emergency \(\leq 28\).]

Prize money. 1. A dividend from the proceeds of a captured vessel, paid to the captors. 2. Money offered as an award.

PRO. abbr. PEER-REVIEW ORGANIZATION.

Pro (prob.). [Latin] (15c) For.

Probabilis causa litigandi (pra-bab-a-lis kaw-za lit-i-gan-di). [Law Latin] SCOTS LAW. A probable cause of action. • A person applying for legal aid has to show a reasonable basis for the proposed legal action.

Probabilis causa. (16c) 1. Criminal law. A reasonable ground to suspect that a person has committed or is committing a crime or that a place contains specific items connected with a crime. • Under the Fourth Amendment, probable cause — which amounts to more than a bare suspicion but less than evidence that would justify a conviction — must be shown before an arrest warrant or search warrant may be issued. — Also termed reasonable cause; sufficient cause; reasonable grounds; reasonable excuse. Cf. reasonable suspicion under suspicion. [Cases: Arrest \(\leq 63.4(2)\).] "Probable cause may not be established simply by showing that the officer who made the challenged arrest or search subjectively believed he had grounds for his action. As emphasized in Beck v. Ohio [379 U.S. 89, 85 S.Ct. 223 (1964)]. 'if subjective good faith alone were the test, the protection of the Fourth Amendment would evaporate, and the people would be 'secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects' only in the discretion of the police.' The probable cause test, then, is an objective one: for there to be probable cause, the facts must be such as would warrant a belief by a reasonable man." Wayne R. LaFave & Jerold H. Israel. Criminal Procedure § 3.3, at 140 (2d ed. 1992).

1. Toris. A reasonable belief in the existence of facts on which a claim is based and in the legal validity of the claim itself. • In this sense, probable cause is usu. assessed as of the time when the claimant brings the claim (as by filing suit). 3. A reasonable basis to support issuance of an administrative warrant based on either (1) specific evidence of an existing violation of administrative rules, or (2) evidence showing that a particular business meets the legislative or administrative standards permitting an inspection of the business premises. [Cases: Searches and Seizures \(\leq 129\).]

Probable-cause hearing. 1. See Preliminary hearing. 2. See shelter hearing under hearing.

Probable consequence. (16c) An effect or result that is more likely than not to follow its supposed cause.

proceeds (proh-seedz), n. (13c) 1. The value of land, goods, or investments when converted into money; the amount of money received from a sale <the proceeds are subject to attachment>. 2. Something received upon selling, exchanging, collecting, or otherwise disposing of collateral. UCC § 9-102(a)(67). • Proceeds differ from other types of collateral because they constitute any collateral that has changed in form. For example, if a farmer borrows money and gives the creditor a security interest in the harvest, the harvested wheat is subject to attachment. 2. Something received upon selling, exchanging, collecting, or otherwise disposing of collateral. If the farmer then exchanges the harvest for a tractor, the tractor becomes the proceeds of the wheat. [Cases: Secured Transactions C=164.]

net proceeds. (18c) The amount received in a transaction minus the costs of the transaction (such as expenses and commissions). — Also termed net balance.

proceeds and avails. The cash-surrender value of a life-insurance policy, together with values built up since the policy's issue date and the benefits payable on maturity and at the death of the insured. [Cases: Exemptions C=50(1); Insurance C=3487.] Proceeds differ from other types of collateral because they constitute any collateral that has changed in form. proceses (pros-a-reez). [Latin] Nobles; lords. See DOMUS PROCERUM.

process, n. (14c) 1. The proceedings in any action or prosecution <due process of law>. 2. A summons or writ, esp. to appear or respond in court <service of process>. — Also termed judicial process; legal process. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure C=401; Process C=1, 3,]

"Process is so denominated because it proceeds or issues forth in order to bring the defendant into court, to answer the charge preferred against him, and signifies the writs or judicial means by which he is brought to answer." 1 Joseph Chitty, A Practical Treatise on the Criminal Law 338 (2d ed. 1826).

"The term 'process' is not limited to 'summons'. In its broadest sense it is equivalent to, or synonymous with, 'procedure,' or 'proceeding.' Sometimes the term is also broadly defined as the means whereby a court compels a compliance with its demands."

"Process' and 'writ' or 'writs' are synonymous, in the sense that every writ is a process, and in a narrow sense of the term 'process' is limited to judicial writs in an action, or at least to writs or writings issued from or out of a court, under the seal thereof and returnable thereto; but it is not always necessary to construe the term so strictly as to limit it to a writ issued by a court in the exercise of its ordinary jurisdiction." 72 CJS Process § 2, at 589 (1987).

alias process. A process issued after an earlier process has failed for some reason. • Among the types of alias process are alias execution, alias subpoena, alias summons, and alias writ. [Cases: Process C=45.]

bailable process. A process instructing an officer to take bail after arresting a defendant. • The defendant's discharge is required by law after the tender of suitable security.

civil process. A process that issues in a civil lawsuit. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure C=401; Process C=1.]

compulsory process. A process, with a warrant to arrest or attach included, that compels a person to appear in court as a witness. [Cases: Witnesses C=2.]

criminal process. A process (such as an arrest warrant) that issues to compel a person to answer for a crime. [Cases: Criminal Law C=216.]

defective process. Void or voidable process. See void process; voidable process.

final process. A process issued at the conclusion of a judicial proceeding; esp., a writ of execution. [Cases: Execution C=1.]

irregular process. A process not issued in accordance with prescribed practice. • Whether the process is void or merely voidable depends on the type of irregularity. Cf. regular process.

legal process. Process validly issued. — Also termed lawful process.

mesne process (meen). 1. A process issued between the commencement of a lawsuit and the final judgment or determination. 2. The procedure by which a contumacious defendant is compelled to plead. — Also termed writ of mesne process; writ of mesne.

original process. A process issued at the beginning of a judicial proceeding. [Cases: Process C=1.]

"Original process is any writ or notice by which a defendant is called upon to appear and answer the plaintiff's declaration. The commencement of the suit at common law was formerly by original writ. Judicial process was by summons, attachment, arrest and outlawry." Benjamin J. Shipman, Handbook of Common-Law Pleading § 3, at 17 (Henry Winthrop Ballantine ed., 3d ed. 1923).

regular process. A process that issues lawfully according to prescribed practice. Cf. irregular process.

summary process. 1. An immediate process, issuing and taking effect without intermediate applications or delays. 2. A legal procedure used to resolve a controversy more efficiently and expeditiously than ordinary methods. 3. The legal documents achieving such a result. 4. A procedure for repossessing real property from a tenant upon default. See summary eviction under eviction. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant C=293.] 5. SHOW-CAUSE PROCEEDING.

trust process. In some states (particularly in New England), garnishment or foreign attachment. [Cases: Garnishment C=1.]

voidable process. A defective process with a curable defect. [Cases: Process C=151-167.]

void process. Legal process that, in some material way, does not comply with the required form.

3. Patents. A method, operation, or series of actions intended to achieve some new and useful end or result by changing a material's chemical or physical characteristics. • Process is a statutory category of patentable invention. Cf. MACHINE; MANUFACTURE. [Cases: Patents C=7.]

products liability, n. (1925) 1. A manufacturer’s or seller’s tort liability for any damages or injuries suffered by a buyer, user, or bystander as a result of a defective product. Products liability can be based on a theory of negligence, strict liability, or breach of warranty. [Cases: Products Liability C= 111.] 2. The legal theory by which liability is imposed on the manufacturer or seller of a defective product. 3. The field of law dealing with this theory. — Also termed product liability; (specific.) manufacturer’s liability. See liability. — products-liability, adj.

"The law of products liability is that body of common and statutory law permitting money reparation for substantial conduct of others resulting in product-related injury to the injured party’s person or property. Resistance to the description of products liability as a doctrine having receded, there is today a guiding tenet in the law of product-related injury that is the distillate of seventy years of decisional law. The birth of the doctrine can be dated at 1916, the publication of the immensely influential decision in MacPherson v. Buick Motor Co., [217 N.Y. 382, 111 N.E. 1050 (1916)], in which the New York Court of Appeals held that the manufacturer of any product capable of serious harm if incautiously made owed a duty of care in the design, inspection, and fabrication of the product, a duty owed not only to the immediate purchaser but to all persons who might foreseeably come into contact with the product. Following MacPherson, the doctrine as formed by decisions of the ensuing decades is that a buyer, user, consumer or bystander in proximity to an unreasonably dangerous product, and who is injured in person or in property by its dangerous propensities, may recover in damages from the manufacturer or intermediate seller.” 1 M. Stuart Madden, Products Liability § 1.1, at 1–2 (2d ed. 1988).

strict products liability. (1964) Products liability arising when the buyer proves that the goods were unreasonably dangerous and that (1) the seller was in the business of selling goods, (2) the goods were defective when they were in the seller’s hands, (3) the defect caused the plaintiff’s injury, and (4) the product was expected to and did reach the consumer without substantial change in condition. [Cases: Products Liability C= 113.]

products-liability action. A lawsuit brought against a manufacturer, seller, or lessor of a product — regardless of the substantive legal theory or theories upon which the lawsuit is brought — for personal injury, death, or property damage caused by the manufacture, construction, design, formulation, installation, preparation, or assembly of a product. — Also termed product-liability action. [Cases: Products Liability C= 110; Sales C= 425.]

profit à prendre (a prawn-dar or a prahn-dar). [Law] French "profit to take" (usu. pl.)(17c) A right or privilege to go on another's land and take away something of value from its soil or from the products of its soil (as by mining, logging, or hunting). — Also termed right of common. Pl. profits à prendre. Cf. easement. [Cases: Licenses C-43.]

"A profit à prendre has been described as 'a right to take something off another person's land.' This is too wide, the thing taken must be something taken out of the soil, i.e., it must be either the soil, the natural produce thereof, or the wild animals existing on it; and the thing taken must at the time of taking be susceptible of ownership. A right to 'hawk, hunt, fish, and fowl' may thus exist as a profit, for this gives the right to take creatures living on the soil which, when killed, are capable of being owned. But a right to take water from a spring or a pump, or the right to water cattle at a pond, may be an easement but cannot be a profit; for the water, when taken, was not owned by anyone nor was it part of the soil." Robert E. Megarry & M.P. Thompson, A Manual of the Law of Real Property 377-76 (6th ed. 1993).

profitable, adj. Making a profit. See profit motive.

profit margin. 1. The difference between the cost of something and the price for which it is sold. 2. The ratio, expressed as a percentage, between this difference and the selling price. — For example, a widget costing $10 and selling for $15 has a profit margin of 33% ($5 difference divided by $15 selling price). — Often shortened to margin.

profit-sharing plan. An employee benefit plan that allows an employee to share in the company’s profits. ERISA governs the administration of many profit-sharing plans, which provide for discretionary employer contributions and provide a definite predetermination formula for allocating the contributions to the plan among the participants. Contributions are frequently allocated in proportion to each participant’s compensation. See employee benefit plan; employee retirement income security act. [Cases: Labor and Employment C-491.]

qualified profit-sharing plan. A plan in which an employer’s contributions are not taxed to the employee until distribution. — The employer is allowed to deduct the contributions. IRC (26 USCA) § 401(a). — Often shortened to qualified plan. [Cases: Internal Revenue C-3578.]

pro forma (proh for-ma). adj. [Latin "for form"] (16c) 1. Made or done as a formality. 2. (Of an invoice or financial statement) provided in advance to describe items, predict results, or secure approval.

pro forma amendment. See amendment (3).

pro forma earnings. See operating earnings under earnings.

pro forma session. See session (1).

progeny (pruh-nee). n. pl. (14c) 1. Children or descendants; offspring <only one of their progeny attended law school>. 2. In a figurative sense, a line of precedents that follow a leading case <Erie and its progeny>.— Also termed right of common. Pl. profits à prendre. Cf. easement. [Cases: Licenses C-43.]

profiteering. n. (1814) The taking advantage of unusual or exceptional circumstances to make excessive profits, as in the selling of scarce goods at inflated prices during war. [Cases: War and National Emergency C-59.] — profiteer, vb.

profit insurance. See insurance.

profit margin. 1. The difference between the cost of something and the price for which it is sold. 2. The ratio, expressed as a percentage, between this difference and the selling price. — For example, a widget costing $10 and selling for $15 has a profit margin of 33% ($5 difference divided by $15 selling price). — Often shortened to margin.

profit-sharing plan. An employee benefit plan that allows an employee to share in the company’s profits. ERISA governs the administration of many profit-sharing plans, which provide for discretionary employer contributions and provide a definite predetermination formula for allocating the contributions to the plan among the participants. promise, n. (15c) 1. The manifestation of an intention to act or refrain from acting in a specified manner, conveyed in such a way that another is justified in understanding that a commitment has been made; a person's assurance that the person will or will not do something. • A binding promise — one that the law will enforce — is the essence of a contract. [Cases: Contracts

"By common usage, a promise is an expression leading another person justifiably to expect certain conduct on the part of the promisor. Such an expression is a promise, whether enforceable at law or not. It is indeed an essential element in every contract. Society does not guarantee the fulfillment of all expectations so induced." William R. Anson, Principles of the Law of Contract 6 n. 3 (Arthur L. Corbin ed., 3d Am. ed. 1919).

"[Promise] means not only the physical manifestations of assurance by words or conduct, but also the moral duty to make good the assurance by performance. If by reason of other operative facts the promise is recognized as creating a legal duty, the promise is a contract." Samuel Williston, A Treatise on the Law of Contracts § 1A, at 4 (Walter H.E. Jaeger ed., 3d ed. 1957).

"It is well to make clear two points at the outset . . . . The first is that I do not believe that all promises are morally binding; accordingly, I use the term 'promise' without prejudging the question whether the promise creates an obligation. The second is that, where a promise does create an obligation, the reason for that may depend upon whether the promise was explicit or implied. There is thus, in my view, a fundamental distinction between explicit and implied promises, and when I use the word 'promise' without qualification, I normally mean an explicit promise." P.S. Atiyah, Promises, Morals, and Law 8 (1981).

2. The words in a promissory note expressing the maker's intention to pay a debt. • A mere written acknowledgment that a debt is due is insufficient to constitute a promise. [Cases: Bills and Notes ง 30.]

promise, vb.

aleatory promise (ay-lee-a-tor-ee). A promise conditional on the happening of a fortuitous event, or on an event that the parties believe is fortuitous. [Cases: Contracts ง 218.]

alternative promise. (17c) A contractual promise to do one of two or more things, any one of which qualifies as consideration.

"A promise in the alternative may be made because each of the alternative performances is the object of desire to the promisee. Or the promisee may desire one performance only, but the promisor may reserve an alternative which he may deem advantageous. In either type of case the promise is consideration if it cannot be kept without some action or forbearance which would be consideration if it alone were bargained for. But if the promisor has an unfettered choice of alternatives, and one alternative would not have been considered if separately bargained for, the promise in the alternative is not consideration." Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 77 cmt. b (1981).

bare promise. See gratuitous promise.

collateral promise. A promise to guarantee the debt of another, made primarily without benefit to the party making the promise. • Unlike an original promise, a collateral promise must be in writing to be enforceable. See main-purpose rule. [Cases: Guaranty ง 1.]

corresponding promise. A mutual promise calling for the performance of an act substantially similar to the act called for by the other mutual promise, both acts being in pursuit of a common purpose.

counterpromise. See counterpromise.

dependent promise. (1829) A promise to be performed by a party only when another obligation has first been performed by another party. [Cases: Contracts ง 173, 278(1).]

divisible promises. Promises that are capable of being divided into independent parts.

definite promise. A promise made with no intention of carrying it out. Cf. promissory fraud under fraud.

divisibility promise. See implied promise.

gratuitous promise. (17c) A promise made in exchange for nothing; a promise not supported by consideration. • A gratuitous promise is not ordinarily legally enforceable. — Also termed bare promise; naked promise. [Cases: Contracts ง 47.]

illusory promise. (1841) A promise that appears on its face to be so insubstantial as to impose no obligation on the promisor; an expression cloaked in promissory terms but actually containing no commitment by the promisor. • An illusory promise typically, by its terms, makes performance optional with the promisor. For example, if a guarantor promises to make good on the principal debtor's obligation "as long as I think it's in my commercial interest," the promisor is not really bound. [Cases: Contracts ง 10(1).]

"An apparent promise which, according to its terms, makes performance optional with the promisor no matter what may happen, or no matter what course of conduct in other respects he may pursue, is in fact no promise. Such an expression is often called an illusory promise." Samuel Williston, A Treatise on the Law of Contracts § 1A, at 5 (Walter H.E. Jaeger ed., 3d ed. 1957).

implied promise. (18c) A promise created by law to render a person liable on a contract so as to avoid fraud or unjust enrichment. — Also termed fictitious promise. [Cases: Implied and Constructive Contracts ง 1.]

"Under some circumstances the promise inferred is called an implied promise and in others it is referred to as a constructive promise. But whichever conclusion is reached, the result is the same. In other words an implied promise and a constructive promise are not treated differently. The theoretical difference between the two is that a promise implied from the conduct of the parties arises by construction of law, only when justice requires it under the circumstances." John D. Calamari & Joseph M. Perillo, The Law of Contracts §§ 4-12, at 234-35 (3d ed. 1987).

pronounce, vb. (14c) To announce formally <pronounce judgment>.

pronunciation (pra-nan-see-ay-shan). Archaic. A sentence or decree.

proof, n. (13c) 1. The establishment or refutation of an alleged fact by evidence; the persuasive effect of evidence in the mind of a fact-finder. [Cases: Evidence 584.] 2. Evidence that determines the judgment of a court. 3. An attested document that constitutes legal evidence.

affirmative proof. (18c) Evidence establishing the fact in dispute by a preponderance of the evidence. [Cases: Evidence 99.]

conditional proof. (1931) A fact that amounts to proof as long as there is no other fact amounting to disproof. — Also termed presumptive proof.

double proof. (1955) 1. Bankruptcy. Proof of claims by two or more creditors against the same debt. • This violates the general rule that there can be only one claim with respect to a single debt. [Cases: Bankruptcy 2891.] 2. Evidence. Corroborating government evidence (usu. by two witnesses) required to sustain certain convictions.

full proof. 1. Civil law. Proof by two witnesses or by public instrument. 2. Evidence that satisfies the minds of the jury of the truth of the fact in dispute beyond a reasonable doubt. [Cases: Evidence 584.]

negative proof. (16c) Proof that establishes a fact by showing that its opposite is not or cannot be true. Cf. positive proof. [Cases: Criminal Law 551; Evidence 586.]

positive proof. (17c) Direct or affirmative proof. Cf. negative proof. [Cases: Criminal Law 551; Evidence 586.]

preliminary proof. Insurance. The first proof offered of a loss occurring under a policy, usu. sent in to the underwriters with a notification of the claim. [Cases: Insurance 3164.]

presumptive proof. See conditional proof.

proof beyond a reasonable doubt. (1834) Proof that precludes every reasonable hypothesis except that which it tends to support. See reasonable doubt. • Formerly, this standard required evidence to “establish the truth of the fact to a reasonable and moral certainty” and “proof to a moral certainty as distinguished from an absolute certainty.” Moral certainty is no longer a synonym for proof beyond a reasonable doubt. See Victor v. Nebraska, 511 U.S. 1, 8, 12, 114 S.Ct. 1239, 1244, 1246 (1994). [Cases: Criminal Law 561.]

proof brief. See BRIEF.

proof of acknowledgment. (18c) An authorized officer’s certification — based on a third party’s testimony — that the signature of a person (who usu. does not appear before the notary) is genuine and was freely made. • Also termed certificate of proof. See ACKNOWLEDGMENT (3). [Cases: Acknowledgment 8–39.]

proof of claim. Bankruptcy. A creditor’s written statement that is submitted to show the basis and amount of the creditor’s claim. Pl. proofs of claim. [Cases: Bankruptcy 2891–2904.]

informal proof of claim. A proof of claim stating a creditor’s demand for payment and intent to hold the debtor’s bankruptcy estate liable, but that does not comply with the Bankruptcy Code’s form for proofs of claim. • A late-filed proof of claim may be given effect if the creditor had timely filed an informal proof of claim. [Cases: Bankruptcy 2902.]

proof of debt. The establishment by a creditor of a debt in some prescribed manner (as by affidavit) as a first proof of loss. An insured’s formal statement of loss required by an insurance company before it will determine whether the policy covers the loss. [Cases: Insurance ☞ 3164.]

proof of service. (18c) 1. A document filed (as by a sheriff) in court as evidence that process has been successfully served on a party. — Also termed return of service; return of process. See service (1). [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ☞ 511–518; Process ☞ 127–150.] 2. Certificate of service.

proof of will. See probate (1).

pro omni alio onere (proh om-ni -nee ay-lee-oh on-ar ee). [Law Latin “for all other burden”] Hist. A portion of a charter clause restricting the vassal’s duties to those explicitly named in the charter.

propaganda. Int'l law. 1. The systematic dissemination of doctrine, rumor, or selected information to promote or injure a particular doctrine, view, or cause. 2. The ideas or information so disseminated. • The word propaganda originated as an abbreviated form of Congregatio de propaganda fide, a committee (of cardinals) for propagating the (Christian) faith.

defamatory propaganda. Propaganda used to promote dissatisfaction among a nation’s citizens and undermine government authority. • Defamatory propaganda is common in wartime but is also used in peacetime as a means of incitement.

hostile propaganda. Propaganda employed by a nation to manipulate the people of another nation to support or oppose their government. — Also termed ideological aggression. See subversive propaganda.

Ideological aggression...is the spreading of ideas intentionally and deliberately so as to manipulate by symbols controversial attitudes and positions. It is hostile propaganda indulged in by a state directly or vicariously to incite and influence the people of another state so as to maintain or alter the institutions and policies of that state. The campaign of hostile propaganda may emanate from within or without the territory of the victim state and can be carried on by any means of communications.” Ann Van Wyen Thomas & A.J. Thomas, Jr., The Concept of Aggression in International Law 84 (1972).

subversive propaganda. Propaganda calculated to incite a civil war or revolution. • When the instigator is another nation, it is termed hostile propaganda or ideological aggression.

war-mongering propaganda. Propaganda calculated to produce national support for a war and to encourage the government to declare or join in a war regardless of any legal constraints.

pro parte legitemus, pro parte illegitemus (proh pahr-tee la-jit-ah-mas, proh pahr-tee eel-la-jit-ah-mas). [Law Latin] Hist. Partly legitimate, partly illegitimate. • In Roman and civil law, an illegitimate child could be later legitimated through the marriage of the child’s parents. But England did not fully recognize this legitimate status.

pro per., adv. & adj. See pro persona.

pro per., n. 1. See pro se. 2. See propri a persona.

proper care. See reasonable care under care.

proper evidence. See admissible evidence under evidence.

proper feud. See feud (1).

proper impropriation. See impropriation.

proper independent advice. See independent advice.

proper law. Conflict of laws. The substantive law that, under the principles of conflict of laws, governs a transaction. [Cases: Action ☞ 17.]

proper lookout, n. (1842) The duty of a vehicle operator to exercise caution to avoid collisions with pedestrians or other vehicles. [Cases: Automobiles ☞ 150.]

proper means. Trade secrets. Any method of discovering trade secrets that does not violate property-protection statutes or standards of commercial ethics. • Proper means include independent invention, reverse engineering, observing the product in public, and studying published literature. Restatement of Torts § 757 cmt. f (1977). [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation ☞ 414.]

Trade secrets are protected...in a manner akin to private property, but only when they are disclosed or used through improper means. Trade secrets do not enjoy the absolute monopoly afforded patented processes, for example, and trade secrets will lose their character as private property when the owner divulges them or when they are discovered through proper means...Thus, it is the employment of improper means to produce the trade secret, rather than mere copy or use, which is the basis of liability” Chicago Lock Co. v. Fanberg, 676 F.2d 400, 404 (9th Cir. 1982).

proper party. See party (2).

pro persona (proh par-soh-na), adv. & adj. [Latin] For one’s own person; on one’s own behalf . — Sometimes shortened to pro per. See pro se.

property. (14c) 1. The right to possess, use, and enjoy a determinable thing (either a tract of land or a chattel); the right of ownership <the institution of private property is protected from undue governmental interference>. — Also termed bundle of rights. [Cases: Constitutional Law ☞ 277; Property ☞ 1.] 2. Any external thing over which the rights of possession, use, and enjoyment are exercised <the airport is city property>. [Cases: Property ☑ 1.]

"In its widest sense, property includes all a person's legal rights, of whatever description. A man's property is all that is his in law. This usage, however, is obsolete at the present day, though it is common enough in the older books. ... In a second and narrower sense, property includes not all a person's rights, but only his proprietary as opposed to his personal rights. The former constitute his estate or property, while the latter constitute his status or personal condition. In this sense a man's land, chattels, shares, and the debts due to him are his property; but not his life or liberty or reputation. ... In a third application, which is that adopted here, the term includes not even all proprietary rights, but only those which are both proprietary and in rem. The law of property is the law of proprietary rights in rem, the law of proprietary rights in personam being distinguished from it as the law of obligations. According to this usage a freehold or leasehold estate in land, or a patent or copyright, is property; but a debt or the benefit of a contract is not. ... Finally, in the narrowest use of the term, it includes nothing more than corporeal property — that is to say, the right of ownership in a material object, or that object itself." John Salmond, Jurisprudence 423-24 (Clanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

abandoned property. (1841) Property that the owner voluntarily surrenders, relinquishes, or disclaims. Cf. lost property; mislaid property. [Cases: Abandoned and Lost Property ☑ 1.] absolute property. Property that one has full and complete title to and control over.

adventitious property. 1. Roman law. Property coming to a son or daughter from another than the paterfamilias. — Also termed peculium adventitium. 2. Hist. Property coming to one from a stranger or collateral relative.

appointive property. A property interest that is subject to a power of appointment. [Cases: Powers ☑ 4.]

common property. (17c) 1. Real property that is held by two or more persons with no right of survivorship. Cf. joint property. [Cases: Common Lands ☑ 1.] 2. common area.

community property. See community property.

complete property. The entirety of the rights, privileges, powers, and immunities that it is legally possible for a person to have with regard to land or any other thing, apart from those that all other members of society have in the land or thing.

corporeal property. 1. The right of ownership in material things. 2. Property that can be perceived, as opposed to incorporeal property: tangible property. [Cases: Property ☑ 1, 2.]

distressed property. (1927) Property that must be sold because of mortgage foreclosure or because it is part of an insolvent estate. [Cases: Bankruptcy ☑ 3067.1] domestic-partnership property. Property that would be marital property if the domestic partners were married to each other. See domestic partnership; domestic-partnership period. [Cases: Marriage ☑ 54.]

dotal property. Civil law. Separate property that the wife brings to the marriage to assist the husband with the marriage expenses. Cf. extradotal property. [Cases: Dower and Curtesy ☑ 10.]

exempt property. See exempt property.

extradotal property (ek-stra-doh-tal). Civil law. 1. That portion of a wife's property over which she has complete control. 2. All of a wife's effects that have not been settled on her as dowry; any property that a wife owns apart from her dowry. • In Louisiana, after January 1, 1980, all property acquired by the wife that is not community is neither dotal nor extradotal; it is simply her separate property, as has always been true of the husband, La. Civ. Code art. 2341. — Also termed paraphernal property. Cf. dotal property.

general property. Property belonging to a general owner. See general owner under owner.

income property. Property that produces income, such as rental property.

incorporeal property. (18c) 1. An in rem proprietary right that is not classified as corporeal property. • Incorporeal property is traditionally broken down into two classes: (1) jura in re aliena (encumbrances), whether over material or immaterial things, examples being leases, mortgages, and servitudes; and (2) jura in re propria (full ownership over immaterial things), examples being patents, copyrights, and trademarks. 2. A legal right in property having no physical existence. • Patent rights, for example, are incorporeal property. — Also termed incorporeal chattel; incorporeal thing.

intangible property. (1843) Property that lacks a physical existence. • Examples include stock options and business goodwill. Cf. tangible property. [Cases: Property ☑ 1, 2.] intellectual property. See intellectual property.

joint property. Real or personal property held by two or more persons with a right of survivorship. Cf. common property. [Cases: Joint Tenancy ☑ 1.] limited-market property. See special-purpose property.

literary property. See literary property.

lost property. (1810) Property that the owner no longer possesses because of accident, negligence, or carelessness, and that cannot be located by an ordinary, diligent search. Cf. abandoned property; mislaid property. [Cases: Abandoned and Lost Property ☑ 10.]

marital property. (1855) Property that is acquired during marriage and that is subject to distribution or division at the time of marital dissolution. • Generally, it is property acquired after the date of the marriage and before a spouse files for separation or divorce. The phrase marital property is used in equitable-distribution states and is roughly equivalent to community property. — Also termed marital estate. See community property; equitable distribution. [Cases: Divorce \(\supseteq 248\); Husband and Wife \(\supseteq 6-15(6)\].

maternal property. Property that comes from the mother of a party or other ascendants of the maternal stock.

mislaid property. (1915) Property that has been voluntarily relinquished by the owner with an intent to recover it later — but that cannot now be found. Cf. abandoned property; lost property. [Cases: Abandoned and Lost Property \(\supseteq 1, 10\].

‘A distinction is drawn between lost property and mislaid property. An article is ‘mislaid’ if it is intentionally put in a certain place for a temporary purpose and then inadvertently left there when the owner goes away. A typical case is the package left on the patron’s table in a bank lobby by a depositor who put the package there for a moment while he wrote a check and then departed without remembering to take it with him. There is always a ‘clue’ to the ownership of property which is obviously mislaid rather than lost, because of the strong probability that the owner will know where to return for his chattel when he realizes he has gone away without it.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 310-11 (3d ed. 1982).

mixed property. (18c) Property with characteristics of both real property and personal property — such as heirlooms and fixtures. [Cases: Property \(\supseteq 4\).]

neutral property. See neutral property.

nonancestral property. See nonancestral property.

nonexempt property. See nonexempt property.

paraphernal property. See paraphernal property.

paternal property. Property that comes from the father of a party or other ascendants of the paternal stock.

personal property. (18c) 1. Any movable or intangible thing that is subject to ownership and not classified as real property. — Also termed personalty; personal estate; movable estate; (in plural) things personal. Cf. real property. [Cases: Property \(\supseteq 4\]. 2. Tax. Property not used in a taxpayer’s trade or business or held for income production or collection. [Cases: Taxation \(\supseteq 2176\].

private property. (17c) Property — protected from public appropriation — over which the owner has exclusive and absolute rights.

public property. (17c) State- or community-owned property not restricted to any one individual’s use or possession. [Cases: States \(\supseteq \).]

qualified property. A temporary or special interest in a thing (such as a right to possess it), subject to being totally extinguished by the occurrence of a specified contingency over which the qualified owner has no control.

qualified-terminable-interest property. (1982) Property that passes by a QTIP trust from a deceased spouse to the surviving spouse and that (if the executor so elects) qualifies for the marital deduction provided that the surviving spouse is entitled to receive all income in payments made at least annually for life and that no one has the power to appoint the property to anyone other than the surviving spouse. • The purpose of the marital deduction is to permit deferral of estate taxes until the death of the surviving spouse. But this property is included in the surviving spouse’s estate at death, where it is subject to the federal estate tax. — Abbr. QTIP. See QTIP trust under trust. [Cases: Internal Revenue \(\supseteq 4169(4)\].

quasi-community property. See community property.

real property. (18c) Land and anything growing on, attached to, or erected on it, excluding anything that may be severed without injury to the land. • Real property can be either corporeal (soil and buildings) or incorporeal (easements). — Also termed realty; real estate. Cf. personal property (1). [Cases: Property \(\supseteq 4\].

‘Historically, the line between real and personal property stems from the types of assets administered on death respectively, in the king’s and in the church’s courts. The king’s courts, concerned with the preservation of the feudal structure, dealt with fees simple, fees tail and life estates. Estates for years, gradually evolving out of contracts made by feudally unimportant persons, clearly became interests in land but never fully attained the historical dignity of being ‘real property.’ The early economic unimportance of money, goods and things other than land permitted the church courts to take over the handling of all such assets on the death of the owner. When the development of trade and of capitalism caused assets of these types to assume great, and sometimes paramount, importance we found ourselves with the two important categories of property, namely ‘real’ and ‘personal’ property, each with its set of rules evolved from a different matrix. The pressure of modern society has been strongly for assimilation and the resultant elimination of this line, but this movement is far from complete attainment of its goal.” Richard R. Powell, Powell on Real Property § 5.04, at 5-7 to 5-8 (Patrick J. Rohan ed., rev. ed. 1998).

scheduled property. Insurance. Property itemized on a list (usu. attached to an insurance policy) that records property values, which provide the basis for insurance payments in the event of a loss under an insurance policy. [Cases: Insurance \(\supseteq 2169\].

separate property. See separate property.

special-design property. See special-purpose property.

special property. Property that the holder has only a qualified, temporary, or limited interest in, such as (from a bailee’s standpoint) bailed property.

special-purpose property. Property that has a unique design or layout, incorporates special construction materials, or has other features that limit the property’s utility for purposes other than the one for which it was built. • Because of the property’s specialized nature, the market for the property may be quite limited. — Also termed limited-market property; special-design property. [Cases: Eminent Domain \(\supseteq 134\); Taxation \(\supseteq 2514\].

specialty property. See specialty (3).

tangible personal property. (1843) Corporeal personal property of any kind; personal property that can be seen, weighed, measured, felt, or touched, or is in any other way perceptible to the senses, such as furniture, cooking utensils, and books.

tangible property. (1802) Property that has physical form and characteristics. Cf. intangible property. [Cases: Property C-1, 2.]

terminable property. Property (such as a leasehold) whose duration is not perpetual or indefinite but is limited in time or is liable to termination upon the occurrence of some specified event.

wasting property. (1853) 1. Property that is consumed in its normal use, such as a wasting asset, a leasehold interest, or a patent right. 2. A right to or an interest in such property.

property, law of. See LAW OF PROPERTY.

property crimes. See CRIMES AGAINST PROPERTY.

property-damage insurance. See property insurance under INSURANCE.

property dividend. See asset dividend under DIVIDEND.

property division. See PROPERTY SETTLEMENT (1).

property of the debtor. Bankruptcy. Property that is owned or (in some instances) possessed by the debtor, including property that is exempted from the bankruptcy estate. 11 USCA § 541(b). — Also termed debtor’s property. [Cases: Bankruptcy C-2531-2559.]

property of the estate. Bankruptcy. The debtor’s tangible and intangible property interests (including both legal and equitable interests) that fall under the bankruptcy court’s jurisdiction because they were owned or held by the debtor when the bankruptcy petition was filed. 11 USCA § 541. — Also termed estate’s property. [Cases: Bankruptcy C-2491-2559.]

property ratione privilegii (ray-shee-oh-nee priv-i-leed-ee-i-l). Hist. A common-law right, granted by a royal franchise, to take wild animals on another’s land. • This principle made its way into American law. See, e.g., Hanson v. Fergus Falls Nat’l Bank, 65 N.W.2d 857, 862 (Minn. 1954). Cf. property ratione soli.

"Property Ratione privilegii is the right which, by a peculiar franchise anciently granted by the Crown in virtue of its prerogative, one man had of killing and taking animals Ferarum naturae on the land of another; and in like manner the game, when killed or taken by virtue of the privilege, became the absolute property of the owner of the franchise, just as in the other case it becomes the absolute property of the owner of the soil." Blades v. Higgs, 11 Eng. Rep. 1474, 1479 (H.L. 1865).

property ratione soli (ray-shee-oh-nee soh-lit). The common-law right to take wild animals found on one’s own land. Cf. property ratione privilegii.

"The exclusive common law right of a landowner to take game on his land, known as property ratione soli . . . has been recognized throughout the history of common law, with one exception: Following the Norman Conquest the King contended that he was lord paramount of the field, possessed of the right to the universal soil and of the exclusive right to take the game, but the irate landowners, vehemently objecting, quickly and decisively recaptured their rights and re-established the common law." Alford v. Finch, 155 So. 2d 790, 792 (Fla. 1963).

property settlement. 1. A judgment in a divorce case determining the distribution of the marital property between the divorcing parties. • A property settlement includes a division of the marital debts as well as assets. — Also termed property division: division of property. [Cases: Husband and Wife C-248.]

2. A contract that divides up the assets of divorcing spouses and is incorporated into a divorce decree. — Also termed integrated property settlement; property settlement agreement. Cf. divorce agreement. [Cases: Husband and Wife C-277.]

3. Marital agreement.

property settlement agreement. See PROPERTY SETTLEMENT (2).

property tax. See TAX.

property tort. See TORT.

prophylactic (proh-fy-lak-tik), adj. (16c) Formulated to prevent something . — prophylaxis (proh-fy-lak-sis), prophylactic, n.

proinquity (pro-in-kwity), (15c) The state of being near; specific, kindred or parentage <degrees of proinquity>.

propior sobrina (proh-pee-ar soh-bree-nah), n. [Latin] Civil law. The daughter of a great-uncle or great-aunt, paternal or maternal.

propior sobrino (proh-pee-ar soh-bree-noh), n. [Latin] Civil law. The son of a great-uncle or great-aunt, paternal or maternal.

propone (proh-pohn), vb. To put forward for consideration or adjudication <propone a will for probate>.

proponent, n. (16c) 1. A person who puts forward a legal instrument for consideration or acceptance; esp., one who offers a will for probate. — Also termed proponent. [Cases: Wills C-211, 219.]

2. A person who puts forward a proposal; one who argues in favor of something . 3. Parliamentary law. A member who speaks in favor of a pending motion. Cf. opponent (3).

proportionality. Int’l law. The principle that the use of force should be in proportion to the threat or grievance provoking the use of force.

proportionality review. (1976) Criminal law. An appellate court’s analysis of whether a death sentence is arbitrary, capricious, or excessive by comparing the case in which it was imposed with similar cases in which the death penalty was approved or disapproved. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment C-1788(6).]

proportional quorum. See QUORUM.

proportional representation. 1. An electoral system that allocates legislative seats to each political group in proportion to its popular voting strength. 2. See proportional voting under VOTING. • The term refers to two related but distinguishable concepts: proportional outcome (having members of a group elected in proportion to their numbers in the electorate) and proportional involvement (more precisely termed proportional voting and denoting the electoral system also known as single transferable voting).

proportional tax. See flat tax under tax.

proportional voting. See voting.

proportionate-reduction clause. See lesser-interest clause.

proposal. Something offered for consideration or acceptance.

proposed agenda. See agenda.

proposed regulation. See regulation.

proposition. See main motion under motion (2).

propositus (proh pоз- a-tas). [Law Latin] Civil law. 1. A person from whom descent is to be traced. 2. The person whose rights or obligations are in issue. — Also termed persona proposita. Pl. propositi.

pro posse suo (proh поз- ee s[y]oo-oh). [Latin] To the extent of one's power or ability.

propound (pra-pownd), vb. (16c) 1. To offer for consideration or discussion. 2. To make a proposal. 3. To put forward (a will) as authentic.

propounder. An executor or administrator who offers a will or other testamentary document for admission to probate; proponent.

prop. reg. abbr. See proposed regulation under regulation.

propria persona (proh-pee- a par-soh-na), adj. & adv. [Latin] In his own person; pro se. — Sometimes shortened to pro per. — Abbr. p.p. [Cases: Attorney and Client C=62.]

proprietary (pra- pri-a-ter-ee), adj. (15c) 1. Of or relating to a proprietor <the licensee's proprietary rights>. 2. Of, relating to, or holding as property <the software designer sought to protect its proprietary data>.

proprietary act. See proprietary function.

proprietary article. See article.

proprietary capacity. See capacity (1).

proprietary capital. See capital.

proprietary drug. See drug.

proprietary duty. See duty (2).

proprietary function. (1902) Torts. A municipality's conduct that is performed for the profit or benefit of the municipality, rather than for the benefit of the general public. • Generally, a municipality is not immune from tort liability for proprietary acts. But the distinction between proprietary acts and governmental functions has been abrogated by statute in many states. — Also termed proprietary act. Cf. governmental function. [Cases: Municipal Corporations C=725.]

proprietary government. See government.

proprietary information. Information in which the owner has a protectable interest. See trade secret. [Cases: Contracts C=118.]

proprietary interest. See interest (2).

proprietary lease. See lease.

proprietary license. See license.

proprietary name. See name.

proprietary power. See power coupled with an interest under power (3).

proprietary software. Software that cannot be used, redistributed, or modified without permission. • Proprietary software is usu. sold for profit, consists only of machine-readable code, and carries a limited license that restricts copying, modification, and redistribution. A user may usu. make a backup copy for personal use; but if the software is sold or given away, any backup copies must be passed on to the new user or destroyed. Cf. freeware; shareware; semi-free software.

proprietary technology. Intellectual property. A body of knowledge or know-how that is owned or controlled by a person whose authorization is required before any other party may use that know-how or knowledge for commercial purposes. See trade secret.

proprietas nuda (pra-pri-a-tas n[y]oo-d;». Naked ownership; the mere title to property, without the usufruct.

proprietas plena (pra-pri-a-tas plec-na). Full ownership, including both the title and the usufruct.

proprietor, n. (16c) An owner, esp. one who runs a business. See sole proprietorship. — proprietorship, n.

propriety. Hist. Privately owned possessions; property.

propter affectum (prop-tar o-tek-tom). See challenge propter affectum under CHALLENGE (2). propter curam et culturam (prop-tar kyor-am et kal-t(y)oor-am). [Latin] Hist. For care and cultivation.
propter commodum curiae (prop-tar da-tek-tom). See challenge propter affectum under CHALLENGE (2). propter defectum (prop-tar da-tek-tom). See challenge propter affectum under CHALLENGE (2). propter deflect personae (prop-tar da-tek-tam par-soh-ne). [Law Latin] Hist. On account of the selection of persons. • For example, a person could not delegate the principal duties of an office when that person had been specifically chosen to perform those duties.
propter delictum (prop-tar da-lit-tom). See challenge propter delictum under CHALLENGE.
propter honoris respectum (prop-tar ha-nor-is ri-spekt-tom). [Latin] On account of respect of honor or rank.
propter impotentiam (prop-tar im-pa-ten-shee-am). [Latin] On account of helplessness. • This was formerly given as a ground for gaining a property interest in a wild animal, based on the animal’s inability to escape (as where, for example, a young bird could not yet fly away).
propter ingratiudinem (prop-tar in-gra-ta-t(y)oo-dam). [Latin] Hist. On account of ingratitude. • In some instances, a superior could revoke a gift based on the vassal’s ingratitude, and a slave-owner could revoke the manumission of a slave.
propter negligi mai eridis jus suum non prosequentis (prop-tar neg-li-jen-shee-am ha-ree-dis ja s(y)oo-am non prahs-a-kwen-tis). [Law Latin] Hist. On account of the negligence of the heir in not following up the heir’s right. • If a vassal’s heir failed, for a year and a day, to enter the estate, then the heir forfeited the right to the land.
propter privilegium (prop-tar priv-ah-lee-jee-am). [Latin] On the account of privilege. • This describes a way of acquiring a property interest in a wild animal, based on the claimant’s exclusive right to hunt in a particular park or preserve.
propter quad fecerunt per alium (prop-tar kwod fi-seer-unt par ay-lee-am). [Law Latin] Hist. On account of what they have done by another. • The phrase usu. referred to an agent’s actions.
propter rem ipsam non habitem (prop-tar rem ip-sam non hab-a-tom). [Law Latin] Hist. On account of not having had possession of the thing itself. • The phrase appeared in reference to damages suffered by a party who failed to receive a thing for which he had contracted.
pro quer. abbr. PRO QUERENTE.
pro querente (pro kwon-ren-tee). [Latin] For the plaintiff. • In old law reports, the plaintiff’s advocate is designated pro querente and the opposing advocate contra. — Abbr. pro quer. Cf. PRO DEFENDENTE.
pro rata (pro ray-ta or rah-ta or ra-ta), adv. (16c) Proportionately; according to an exact rate, measure, or interest <the liability will be assessed pro rata between the defendants>. See RATABLE. — pro rata, adj.
pro rata clause. An insurance-policy provision — usu. contained in the “other insurance” section of the policy — that limits the insurer’s liability to payment of the portion of the loss that the face amount of the policy bears to the total insurance available on the risk. — Also termed pro rata distribution clause. Cf. ESCAPE CLAUSE; EXCESS CLAUSE. [Cases: Insurance C-211212.]
pro rata itineris (pro ray-ta t-tin-a-tis). [Latin] Scots law. For the proportion of the journey.
“Where a ship, chartered to convey a cargo to a certain port . . . is prevented from completing the voyage . . . the master of the ship may transship the goods, and thus conveying them to their destination, earn his full freight. But if, when the ship has been prevented from proceeding on her voyage, the freighter himself transships the cargo, the master is entitled to freight pro rata itineris, for the proportion of the voyage which he has accomplished.” John Trayer, Trayer’s Latin Maxims 486 (4th ed. 1894).
prorate (proh-rayt or proh-rayt), vb. (1858) To divide, assess, or distribute proportionately <prorate taxes between the buyer and the seller>. — proration, n.
pro re nata (proh ree nay-ta), [Latin “in the light of what has arisen”] Hist. By reason of emergency; arising from exigent circumstances. • The phrase appeared, for example, in reference to a meeting called to address an emergency.
“So far as may be, the state leaves the rule of right to be declared and constituted by the agreement of those concerned with it. So far as possible, it content itself with executing the rules which its subjects have made for themselves. And in so doing it acts wisely. For, in the first place, the administration of justice is enabled in this manner to escape in a degree not otherwise attainable the disadvantages inherent in the recognition of rigid principles of law. Such principles we must have; but if they are established pro re nata by the parties themselves, they will possess a measure of adaptability to individual cases which is unattainable by the more general legislation of the state itself.” John Salmond, Jurisprudence 352 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947). prorogated jurisdiction. See JURISDICTION.
prorogation (proh-roh-ga-shun). (14c) 1. The act of putting off to another day; esp., the discontinuance of a legislative session until its next term. [Cases: States C=32.] 2. Civil law. The extension of a court's or judge's jurisdiction by consent of the parties to a case that it would otherwise be incompetent to hear. — prorogative, adj.

tacit prorogation. Civil law. Consent to jurisdiction that arises when a party does not request recusal despite awareness that the judge is not qualified to try the case. Cf. prorogated jurisdiction under jurisdiction.

prorogue (proh-roh-g or pra), vb. (15c) 1. To postpone or defer. 2. To discontinue a session of a legislative assembly, esp. the British Parliament) without dissolution. 3. To suspend or discontinue a legislative session. [Cases: States C=32.]

proscription, n. (14c) 1. The act of prohibiting; the state of being prohibited. 2. A prohibition or restriction. Cf. prescription (1). — prescriptive, adj.

pro se (proh say or see), adv. & adj. [Latin] (1817) For oneself; on one's own behalf; without a lawyer <the defendant proceeded pro se> a pro se defendant. — Also termed pro persona; in propria persona; propria persona; pro per. See propria persona. [Cases: Attorney and Client C=62; Criminal Law C=1750.]

pro se, n. (1857) One who represents oneself in a court proceeding without the assistance of a lawyer <the third case on the court's docket involving a pro se>. — Also termed pro per; self-represented litigant; (rarely) pro se er. [Cases: Attorney and Client C=62; Criminal Law C=1750.]

prosecutable, adj. (Of a crime or person) subject to prosecution; capable of being prosecuted.

prosecute, vb. (15c) 1. To commence and carry out a legal action <because the plaintiff failed to prosecute its contractual claims, the court dismissed the suit>. 2. To institute and pursue a criminal action against (a person) <the notorious felon has been prosecuted in seven states>. 3. To engage in; carry on <the company prosecuted its business for 12 years before going bankrupt>. — prosecutory, adj.

prosecuting attorney, See district attorney.

prosecution. (16c) 1. The commencement and carrying out of any action or scheme <the prosecution of a long, bloody war>. 2. A criminal proceeding in which an accused person is tried <the conspiracy trial involved the prosecution of seven defendants>. — Also termed criminal prosecution.

deferred prosecution. See deferred judgment under judgment.

private prosecution. Hist. A criminal prosecution initiated by a privately employed attorney or by a layperson or private organization, rather than a district attorney or other government-employed prosecutor. • Until the 19th century, victims often had the burden of directly prosecuting criminals who had harmed them. With the rise of public-prosecution services, the need for private prosecutions declined. Though uncommon, they are still sometimes permitted in England. [Cases: Criminal Law C=1704.]

sham prosecution. (1903) A prosecution that seeks to circumvent a defendant's double-jeopardy protection by appearing to be prosecuted by another sovereignty, when it is in fact controlled by the sovereignty that already prosecuted the defendant for the same crime. • A sham prosecution is, in essence, a misuse of the dual-sovereignty doctrine. Under that doctrine, a defendant's protection against double jeopardy does not provide protection against a prosecution by a different sovereignty. For example, if the defendant was first tried in federal court and acquitted, that fact would not forbid the state authorities from prosecuting the defendant in state court. But a sham prosecution — for example, a later state-court prosecution that is completely dominated or manipulated by the federal authorities that already prosecuted the defendant, so that the state-court proceeding is merely a tool of the federal authorities — will not withstand a double-jeopardy challenge. See dual-sovereignty doctrine. [Cases: Double Jeopardy C=37.15.]

vindictive prosecution. (1834) A prosecution in which a person is singled out under a law or regulation because the person has exercised a constitutionally protected right. Cf. selective enforcement. [Cases: Criminal Law C=37.15.]

3. The government attorneys who initiate and maintain a criminal action against an accused defendant <the prosecution rests>. 4. Patents. The process of applying for a patent through the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office and negotiating with the patent examiner. — Also termed patent-prosecution process. [Cases: Patents C=104.]}

prospectsus (pra-spek-tas). A printed document that describes the main features of an enterprise (esp. a corporation’s business) and that is distributed to prospective buyers or investors; esp., a written description of a securities offering. • Under SEC regulations, a publicly traded corporation must provide a prospectus before offering to sell stock in the corporation. Pl. prospectuses. See REGISTRATION STATEMENT. Cf. TOMSTONE. [Cases: Securities Regulation Ğ 25.50–25.75.]

newspaper prospectus. A summary prospectus that the SEC allows to be disseminated through advertisements in newspapers, magazines, or other periodicals sent through the mails as second-class matter (though not distributed by the advertiser), when the securities involved are issued by a foreign national government with which the United States maintains diplomatic relations.

preliminary prospectus. A prospectus for a stock issue that has been filed but not yet approved by the SEC. • The SEC requires such a prospectus to contain a notice — printed in distinctive red lettering — that the document is not complete or final. That notice, which is usu. stamped or printed in red ink, typically reads as follows: “The information here given is subject to completion or amendment. A registration statement relating to these securities has been filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission. These securities cannot be sold — and offers to buy cannot be accepted — until the registration statement becomes effective. This prospectus does not constitute an offer to buy. And these securities cannot be sold in any state where the offer, solicitation, or sale would be unlawful before registration or qualification under the securities laws of that state.” — Also termed red-herring prospectus; red herring. [Cases: Securities Regulation Ğ 25.51.]

prostitute, n. (16c) A person who engages in sexual acts in exchange for money or anything else of value.

child prostitute. A child who is offered or used for sex acts in exchange for money. • Some people object to this phrase because the term “prostitute” suggests a degree of voluntariness or choice on the child’s part, which is often not true. An alternative without those connotations is prostituted child. [Cases: Infants Ğ 13.]

prostituted child. See child prostitute under PROSTITUTION.

prostitution, n. (16c) 1. The act or practice of engaging in sexual activity for money or its equivalent; commercialized sex. [Cases: Prostitution Ğ 1.]

"Prostitution is not itself a crime in England or Scotland, although certain activities of prostitutes and those who profit from prostitution are prohibited, such as soliciting in a public place, procuring, letting premises for the purpose of prostitution and so forth. On the other hand, prostitution was, at least at one time, prohibited in all American jurisdictions.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 470 (3d ed. 1982).
child prostitution. The act or practice of offering or using a minor for sex acts in exchange for money. See child prostitute under PROSTITUTE.

2. The act of debasing. — prostitute, vb. — prostitute, n.

protected activity. (1918) Conduct that is permitted or encouraged by a statute or constitutional provision, and for which the actor may not legally be retaliated against.

• For example, Title VII of the Civil Rights Act prohibits an employer from retaliating against an employee who opposes a discriminatory employment practice or helps in investigating an allegedly discriminatory employment practice. An employee who is retaliated against for engaging in one of those activities has a claim against the employer. 42 USCA § 2000e-3(a).

protected power. Int’l law. A country responsible for protecting another country’s citizens and interests during a conflict or a suspension of diplomatic ties between the citizens’ country and a third party.

• After a protecting power has accepted by both belligerents, it works to ensure the proper treatment of nationals who are in a belligerent’s territory, esp. prisoners of war. If the parties cannot agree on a protecting power, the International Committee of the Red Cross is often appointed to this position.

protection, n. (14c) 1. The act of protecting. 2. PROTECTIONISM. 3. COVERAGE (1). 4. A document given by a notary public to sailors and other persons who travel abroad, certifying that the bearer is a U.S. citizen. — protect, vb.

Protection and Advocacy for Individuals with Mental Illness Act. A 1986 federal statute that provides funding for the state-level establishment of independent organizations dedicated to monitoring and protecting the rights of mentally ill citizens. 42 U.S.C. §§ 10801–10851. • Formerly titled the Protection and Advocacy for Mentally Ill Individuals Act, this statute was renamed in the Children’s Health Act of 2000 (114 Stat. 1101).

Protection and Advocacy for Mentally Ill Individuals Act. See PROTECTION AND ADVOCACY FOR INDIVIDUALS WITH MENTAL ILLNESS ACT.

protection covenant. Oil & gas. The implied promise in an oil-and-gas lease that the lessee will protect the property against the loss of oil and gas by drainage from the producing reservoir by drilling one or more offsetting wells. • The covenant applies only if a reasonably prudent operator would drill the additional wells. — Also termed covenant to protect against drainage. See REASONABLY PRUDENT-OPERATOR STANDARD. [Cases: Mines and Minerals C–78.1(11).]

protectionism. (1844) The protection of domestic businesses and industries against foreign competition by imposing high tariffs and restricting imports. — protectionist, adj.

protection money. (18c) 1. A bribe paid to an officer as an inducement not to interfere with the criminal activities of the briber. • Examples include payments to an officer in exchange for the officer’s releasing an arrestee, removing records of traffic violations from a court’s files, and refraining from making a proper arrest. [Cases: Bribery C–1(1).] 2. Money extorted from a business owner by one who promises to “protect” the business premises, with the implied threat that if the owner does not pay, the person requesting the payment will harm the owner or damage the premises.

protective appeal. See APPEAL.

protective committee. A group of security holders or preferred stockholders appointed to protect the interests of their group when the corporation is liquidated or reorganized.

protective custody. See CUSTODY (1).

protective order. See RESTRAINING ORDER (1).

protective order. (1884) A court order prohibiting or restricting a party from engaging in conduct (esp. a legal procedure such as discovery) that unduly annoys or burdens the opposing party or a third-party witness. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure C–1271.5; Pretrial Procedure C–41.] 2. RESTRAINING ORDER (1).

blanket protective order. A protective order that covers a broad subject or class. — Often shortened to blanket order. — Also termed umbrella protective order.

emergency protective order. A temporary protective order granted on an expedited basis, usu. after an ex parte hearing (without notice to the other side), most commonly to provide injunctive relief from an abuser in a domestic-violence case; esp. a short-term restraining order that is issued at the request of a law-enforcement officer in response to a domestic-violence complaint from a victim who is in immediate danger. • A victim of domestic violence can obtain an EPO only through a law-enforcement officer. There is no notice requirement, but the abuser must be served with the order. The duration of an EPO varies from three to seven days, depending on state law. — Abbr. EPO. Cf. TEMPORARY RESTRAINING ORDER. [Cases: Breach of the Peace C–20.]

permanent protective order. A protective order of indefinite duration granted after a hearing with notice to both sides; esp., a court order that prohibits an abuser from contacting or approaching the protected person for a long period, usu. years. Despite the name, permanent orders often have expiration dates set by state law. An order may also require the abuser to perform certain acts such as attending counseling or providing financial support for the protected protective principle. Int'l law. The doctrine that a sovereign state has the power to assert jurisdiction over a person whose conduct outside its boundaries threatens its security or could interfere with the operation of its government functions. [Cases: International Law (3d ed. 1922)].

protective sweep. (1973) A police officer's quick and limited search — conducted after the officer has lawfully entered the premises — based on a reasonable belief that such a search is necessary to protect the officer or others from harm.

protective trust. See Trust.

protector. 1. An unrelated, disinterested overseer of a trust who possesses broader authority than a trustee. Protectors are usu. appointed to manage offshore trusts, trusts, Protectors often possess broad powers to act for the benefit of the trust, as by removing trustees and clarifying or modifying trusts terms to promote the settlor's objectives. For these reasons, a protector is generally not a trustee or beneficiary of the trust. Cf. TRUSTEE. 2. A person who, having been named in an instrument creating a fee tail, has the responsibility of exercising discretion over whether the tenant in tail may bar the entail. — Also termed protector of the settlement.

The only additional restriction imposed upon the alienation of an estate tail is that the consent of the person who is called the Protector of the settlement is necessary to its being effectually barred. Alienation by tenant in tail without this consent binds his own issue, but not remaindermen or reversioners, and creates what is called a "base fee." The Protector of the settlement is usually the tenant for life in possession; but the settlor of the lands may appoint in his place any number of persons not exceeding three to be together Protector during the continuance of the estates preceding the estate tail." Kenelm E. Digby, An Introduction to the History of the Law of Real Property 255 (5th ed. 1897).

protectorate (pro-tek-ta-rat). 1. Int'l law. The relationship between a weaker nation and a stronger one when the weaker nation has transferred the management of its more important international affairs to the stronger nation. 2. Int'l law. The weaker or dependent nation within such a relationship. 3. (usu. cap.) The period in British history — from 1653 to 1659 — during which Oliver Cromwell and Richard Cromwell governed. 4. The British government in the period from 1653 to 1659.

protégé. 1. A person protected by or under the care or training of another person or an entity, esp. one who is established or influential. 2. International law. A nation that is under the protection of another nation. 3. International law. A person who is a citizen of a protected nation or otherwise recognized by treaty as a protected person.

pro tem. abbr. PRO TEMPORE.

pro tempore (proh tem-pee-re), adv. & adj. [Latin] (15c) For the time being; appointed to occupy a position temporarily -15.]

protest, n. (15c) 1. A formal statement or action expressing dissent or disapproval. • Under some circumstances, a protest is lodged to preserve a claim or right. 2. A notation public's written statement that, upon presentation, a negotiable instrument was neither paid nor accepted. — Also termed initial protest; noting protest. Cf. NOTICE OF DISHONOR. [Cases: Bills and Notes C<>-408.]

"Noting or initial protest is a memorandum made on a dishonored instrument, with the notation's initial, date, and the amount of noting charges, together with a statement of the cause of dishonor, such as 'no effects,' 'not advice,' or 'no account.' This is done to charge the memory of the notary, and should be done on the day of dishonor." Frederick M. Hinch, John's American Notary and Commission of Deeds Manual § 442, at 281 (3d ed. 1922).

3. A formal statement, usu. in writing, disputing a debt's legality or validity but agreeing to make payment while reserving the right to recover the amount at a later time. • The disputed debt is described as under protest. [Cases: Payment C<>-88. 4. Fax. A taxpayer's statement to the collecting officer that payment is being made unwillingly because the taxpayer believes the tax to be invalid. 5. Int'l law. A formal communication from one subject of international law to another objecting to conduct or a claim by the latter as violating international law. 6. Patents. A proceeding in the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office to determine patentability of an invention after a third party has challenged it in a petition. • Unlike in a public use proceeding, the protestant has no right to participate in the proceeding beyond filing the petition and supporting documentation. 37 CFR 1.291. Cf. PUBLIC-USE PROCEEDING. [Cases: Patents C<>-104.] — protest, vb.

• This emphatic word was used in a protestation to allege or deny something in an oblique manner.

protestant, Patents. A person who files a protest petition with the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office challenging the patentability of an invention. See PROTEST. [Cases: Patents C<>-104.]

protestation (proh-thee-shun). (14c) 1. Common-law pleading. A declaration by which a party makes an oblique allegation or denial of some fact, claiming that it does or does not exist or is or is not legally sufficient, while not directly affirming or denying the fact. [Cases: Pleading C<>-128.]

The practice of protestation of facts not denied arose where the pleader, wishing to avail himself of the right to contest in a future action some traversable fact in the pending action, passes it by without traverse, but at the same time makes a declaration collateral or incidental to his main pleading, importing that the fact so passed over is untrue. The necessity for this arose from the rule that pleadings must not be double, and that every pleading is taken to admit such matters as it does not traverse. Such being its only purpose, it is wholly without effect in the action in which it occurs. — Benjamin J. Shipman, Handbook of Common-Law Pleading 5 207, at 358 (Henry Winthrop Ballantine ed., 3d ed. 1923).

2. Scots law. A defendant’s act in a civil case to compel a pursuer (plaintiff) who has failed to take the necessary procedural steps either to proceed or to allow the action to fall.

protest certificate. A notarial certificate declaring (1) that a holder in due course has recruited the notary public to present a previously refused or dishonored negotiable instrument, (2) that the notary has presented the instrument to the person responsible for payment or acceptance (the drawee), (3) that the instrument was presented at a given time and place, and (4) that the drawee refused or dishonored the instrument. • In former practice, the notary would issue a protest certificate, which could then be presented to the drawee and any other liable parties as notice that the holder could seek damages for the dishonored negotiable instrument. — Also termed notarial protest certificate. See NOTICE OF DISHONOR. [Cases: Bills and Notes 408.]

protest fee. A fee charged by a bank or other financial institution when an item (such as a check) is presented but cannot be collected.

proxy. n. (15c) 1. One who is authorized to act as a substitute for another; esp., in corporate law, a person who is authorized to vote another's stock shares. Cf. absentee vote under vote (1). [Cases: Corporations 198(1); Securities Regulation 49.10–49.30.] 2. The grant of authority by which a person is so authorized. 3. The document granting this authority. • Also termed (for sense 3 in Roman law) procuratorium.

proxy contest. A struggle between two corporate factions to obtain the votes of uncommitted shareholders. • A proxy contest usu. occurs when a group of dissenting shareholders mounts a battle against the corporation's managers. • Also termed proxy fight. [Cases: Corporations 198(3).]

proxy directive. A document that appoints a surrogate decision-maker for the declarant’s healthcare decisions. Cf. advance directive; instruction directive; living will.

proxy marriage. See marriage (3).

proxy solicitation. A request that a corporate shareholder authorize another person to cast the shareholder's vote at a corporate meeting. [Cases: Corporations 198(3); Securities Regulation 49.11.]
proxy statement. An informational document that accompanies a proxy solicitation and explains a proposed action (such as a merger) by the corporation.

PRP. abbr. POTENTIALLY RESPONSIBLE PARTY.

prudent, adj. (14c) Circumspect or judicious in one's dealings; cautious. — prudence, n.

prudent-investor rule. (1960) Trusts. The principle that a fiduciary must invest in only those securities or portfolios of securities that a reasonable person would buy. • The origin of the prudent-investor rule is Harvard College v. Amory, 26 Mass. 446 (1830). This case stressed two points for a trustee to consider when making investments: probable income and probable safety. The trustee must consider both when making investments. Originally termed the prudent-man rule, the Restatement (Third) of Trusts changed the term to prudent-investor rule. — Also termed prudent-person rule. [Cases: Trusts C= 217.3(5).]

prudent-operator standard. See REASONABLY PRUDENT-OPERATOR STANDARD.

prudent person. See REASONABLE PERSON.

prudent-person rule. See PRUDENT-INVESTOR RULE.

puberes (pyoo-ba-rez), n. pl. [Latin] Roman law.

puberty. 1. The stage of physical development in which a person takes on secondary sexual characteristics, when it becomes possible to reproduce. • In females, the beginning of this stage is marked by the menarche. 2. Hist. The earliest age at which one could presumptively consent and to legally enter into a binding marriage. • At English common law, children became marriageable at the onset of legal puberty (age 12 for girls and 14 for boys). At French civil law, a marriage was invalid if contracted before the end of legal puberty (age 15 for girls and 18 for boys). An underage spouse had the power to... void the marriage. — Also termed (in English common law) age of discretion.

Public, adj. (14c) 1. Relating to or belonging to an entire community, state, or nation. [Cases: Municipal Corporations — 721.] 2. Open or available for all to use, share, or enjoy. 3. (Of a company) having shares that are available on an open market. [Cases: Corporations — 3.] 4. A publican.

Public, n. (16c) 1. The people of a nation or community as a whole . 2. A place open or visible to the public <in public>.

Public Access to Court Electronic Records. A computer system by which subscribers can obtain online information from the federal courts, including information from a court's docket sheet about the parties, filing, and orders in a specific case. — Abbr. PACER.

Publican. (pab-li-kan). 1. A person authorized by license to keep a public house for consumption of alcoholic beverages on or off the premises. 2. Publicanus.

Publicanus. (pab-li-kay-nas). [Latin] Hist. Roman law. A tax collector. • A publicanus was described as "a farmer of the public revenue," although the publicanus reaped only the money from that sown by the labor of others. — Often shortened to publican.

Public appointment. See Appointment (1).

Public, n. (14c) 1. Generally, the act of declaring or announcing to the public. 2. Copyright. The offering or distribution of copies of a work to the public. • At common law, publication marked the dividing line between state and federal protection, but the Copyright Act of 1976 superseded most of common-law copyright and thereby diminished the significance of publication. Under the Act, an original work is considered published only when it is first made publicly available without restriction. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property — 31.]

"The concept of publication was of immense importance under the 1909 Act. It became a legal word of art, denoting a process much more esoteric than is suggested by the lay definition of the term. That it thus evolved was due largely to the American dichotomy between common law and statutory copyright, wherein the act of publication constituted the dividing line between the two systems of protection [state and federal]." Melville S. Nimmer & David Nimmer, Nimmer on Copyright § 4.01, at 4-3 (Supp. 1997).

Divestive publication. Archaic. The public distribution of an author's work on a scale large enough to divest the author of any claim to state common-law copyright protection. • The Copyright Act of 1976 preempted most common-law copyright. — Sometimes (erroneously) written divestive publication.

General publication. Distribution of an author's work to the public, as opposed to a selected group, whether or not restrictions are placed on the use of the work. • Before the Copyright Act of 1976, a general publication was generally held to divest common-law rights in a work. Rather, the author was deemed to have dedicated the work to the public. Cf. Limited publication. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property — 31.]

Investive publication. Archaic. The public distribution of an author's work on a scale large enough to qualify for federal statutory copyright protection. • Since 1976 copyright has protected works since their creation, rather than their publication.

Limited publication. Distribution of copies of an author's work to a selected group for a limited purpose and with no permission to copy the work, at a time when copies are not available to the general public. • Before the Copyright Act of 1976 made publication irrelevant, courts distinguished between limited publication and general publication to decide whether federal copyright laws applied. Under that Act, a work published before January 1, 1978 without proper copyright notice entered the public domain unless the publication was limited. — Also termed private publication. Cf. General publication. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property — 31.]

Private publication. See limited publication.

3. Defamation. The communication of defamatory words to someone other than the person defamed. • The communication may be in any form, verbal or nonverbal. [Cases: Libel and Slander — 23.]

"Publication means the act of making the defamatory statement known to any person or persons other than the plaintiff himself. It is not necessary that there should be any publication in the popular sense of making the statement public. A private and confidential communication to a single individual is sufficient. Nor need it be published in the sense of being written or printed; for we have seen that actions as well as words may be defamatory. A communication to the person defamed himself, however, is not a sufficient publication on which to found civil proceedings; though it is otherwise in the case of a criminal prosecution, because such a communication may provoke a breach of the peace. Nor does a communication between husband and wife amount to publication; domestic intercourse of this kind is exempt from the restrictions of the law of libel and slander. But a statement by the defendant to the wife or husband of the plaintiff is a ground of action." R.F.V. Heuston, Salmond on the Law of Torts 154 (17th ed. 1977).

"The publication of a libel might be in the form of a book, pamphlet or newspaper, but nothing of that nature is required. A letter sent to a single individual is sufficient." Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 489 (3d ed. 1982).
4. Wills & estates. The formal declaration made by a testator when signing the will that it is the testator's will. • There is no requirement that the provisions of the will or the identities of the beneficiaries be revealed to the witnesses.

publication-quality drawings. Patents. Illustrations or drawings filed with a patent application and capable of being scanned. [Cases: Patents C≥ 100.]

publication right. Copyright. The right of an author or artist to decide when to reveal or display a creative work. • Publication is one of the moral rights of artists recognized in civil-law countries and much of Europe, but largely unavailable in the United States. — Also termed right of disclosure. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property C≥ 36.]

exchange views. • To be constitutional, the government’s regulation of a public forum must be narrowly tailored to serve a significant government interest and must usu. be limited to time-place-or-manner restrictions. — Also termed open forum. See time-place-or-manner restriction. Cf. nonpublic forum. [Cases: Constitutional Law C= 1732.]

"[T]raditional public fora are open for expressive activity regardless of the government’s intent. The objective characteristics of these properties require the government to accommodate private speakers. The government is free to open additional properties for expressive use by the general public or by a particular class of speakers, thereby creating designated public fora. Where the property is not a traditional public forum, the property is either a nonpublic forum or not a forum at all." Arkansas Educ. Television Comm’n v. Forbes, 523 U.S. 666, 678, 118 S.Ct. 1633, 1641 (1998).
	designated public forum. (1985) Public property that has not traditionally been open for public assembly and debate but that the government has opened for use by the public as a place for expressive activity, such as a public-university facility or a publicly owned theater. • Unlike a traditional public forum, the government does not have to retain the open character of a designated public forum. Also, the subject matter of the expression permitted in a designated public forum may be limited to accord with the character of the forum; reasonable, content-neutral time, place, and manner restrictions are generally permissible. But any prohibition based on the content of the expression must be narrowly drawn to effectuate a compelling state interest, as with a traditional public forum. — Also termed limited public forum; nontraditional public forum. [Cases: Constitutional Law C= 1744.]

traditional public forum. (1973) Public property that has by long tradition — as opposed to governmental designation — been used by the public for assembly and expression, such as a public street, public sidewalk, or public park. • To be constitutional, the government’s content-neutral restrictions of the time, place, or manner of expression must be narrowly tailored to serve a significant government interest, and leave open ample alternative channels of communication. Any government regulation of expression that is based on the content of the expression must meet the much higher test of being necessary to serve a compelling state interest. — Also termed quintessential public forum. [Cases: Constitutional Law C= 1736]

public-function rationale. See governmental-function theory.

public-function test. (1966) In a suit under 42 USCA § 1983, the doctrine that a private person’s actions constitute state action if the private person performs functions that are traditionally reserved to the state. — Also termed public-function doctrine; public-function theory. [Cases: Civil Rights C= 1326(4, 7)].

public interest. (16c) 1. The general welfare of the public that warrants recognition and protection. 2. Something in which the public as a whole has a stake; esp., an interest that justifies governmental regulation.

public-interest exception. (1957) The principle that an appellate court may consider and decide a moot case — although such decisions are generally prohibited — if (1) the case involves a question of considerable public importance, (2) the question is likely to arise in the future, and (3) the question has evaded appellate review. [Cases: Appeal and Error C= 781(1); Federal Courts C= 723.]

public-interest law. Legal practice that advances social justice or other causes for the public good, such as environmental protection. • Although public-interest law primarily encompasses private not-for-profit work, the term is sometimes used to include the work of government agencies such as public-defender offices. Cf. cause lawyering; social justice under justice.

public person. A sovereign government, or a body or person delegated authority under it.

public place. Any location that the local, state, or national government maintains for the use of the public, such as a highway, park, or public building. [Cases: Municipal Corporations (721); States (88); United States (57).]

public policy. (16c) 1. Broadly, principles and standards regarded by the legislature or by the courts as being of fundamental concern to the state and the whole of society. • Courts sometimes use the term to justify their decisions, as when declaring a contract void because it is "contrary to public policy." — Also termed policy of the law. [Cases: Contracts (108).]

The policy of the law, or public policy, is a phrase of common use in estimating the validity of contracts. Its history is obscure; it is most likely that agreements which tended to restrain trade or to promote litigation were the first to elicit the principle that the courts would look to the interests of the public in giving efficacy to contracts. Wagers, while they continued to be legal, were a frequent provocative of judicial ingenuity on this point, as is sufficiently shown by the case of Gilbert v. Sykes [16 East 150 (1812)]. ... but it does not seem probable that the doctrine of public policy began in the endeavor to elude their binding force. Whatever may have been its origin, it was applied very frequently, and not always with the happiest results, during the latter part of the eighteenth and the commencement of the nineteenth century. Modern decisions, however, while maintaining the duty of the courts to consider the public advantage, have tended more and more to limit the sphere within which this duty may be exercised. William R. Anson, Principles of the Law of Contract 286 (Arthur L. Corbin ed., 3d Am. ed. 1919).

2. More narrowly, the principle that a person should not be allowed to do anything that would tend to injure the public at large.

public-policy limitation. (1961) Tax. A judicially developed principle that a person should not be allowed to deduct expenses related to an activity that is contrary to the public welfare. • This principle is reflected in the Internal Revenue Code's specific disallowance provisions (such as for kickbacks and bribes). [Cases: Internal Revenue Code (3368).]

public safety. (16c) 1. The welfare and protection of the general public, usu. expressed as a governmental responsibility <Department of Public Safety>. [Cases: Municipal Corporations (595).]
public-safety exception. (1984) Evidence. An exception to the Miranda rule, allowing into evidence an otherwise suppressible statement by a defendant concerning information that the police needed at the time it was made in order to protect the public. If, for example, a victim tells the police that an assailant has a gun, and upon the suspect’s arrest the police find a holster but no gun, they would be entitled immediately to ask where the gun is. Under the public-safety exception, the suspect’s statement of the gun’s location would be admissible. [Cases: Criminal Law $412.2(3).]

public-use bar. Patents. A statutory bar that prevents the granting of a patent for an invention that was publicly used or sold in the United States more than one year before the application date. 35 USCA § 102(b). The doctrine can be invoked for any public use, any commercial use, any sale or offer of sale, or any private transfer made without a pledge of secrecy. Cf. private-use exception. — Also termed prior-use bar. [Cases: Patents $75.]

public-use proceeding. Patents. An investigation into whether a patent is barred because the invention was publicly used or sold more than a year before the application was filed. Rarely used, this procedure is instituted upon a petition by someone protesting the application. If the petition and supporting documents make out a prima facie case, the examiner will hold a hearing and issue a final decision, which is not reviewable. 37 CFR 1.292. — Abbr. PUP. Cf. protest. puerity (pyoo-ril-tee). Civil law. A child's status between infancy and puberty.

pueritia (pyoo-ri-ash-ee-a), n. [Latin] Roman law. Childhood, esp. up to the age of 17, the minimum age for pleading before a magistrate. Cf. AETAS INFANTIAE PROXIMA; AETAS PUBERTATI PROXIMA.

puffer. See by-bidder.

puffing. (18c) 1. The expression of an exaggerated opinion — as opposed to a factual misrepresentation — with the intent to sell a good or service. • Puffing involves expressing opinions, not asserting something as a fact. Although there is some leeway in puffing goods, a seller may not misrepresent them or say that they have attributes that they do not possess. — Also termed puffery; sales puffery; dealer's talk. [Cases: Contracts § 94(7); Sales § 38(3), 261(5).]

"Dealer's puffing," so long as it remains in the realm of opinion or belief, will not support a conviction of false pretenses however extravagant the statements." Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 369 (3d ed. 1982).

2. Secret bidding at an auction by or on behalf of a seller; by-bidding.

Pugh clause. Oil & gas. A provision in an oil-and-gas lease modifying the effect of most lease-pooling clauses by severing pooled portions of the lease from un pooled portions of the lease. • Drilling or production on a pooled portion will not maintain the lease for the un pooled portions. The clause is named for Lawrence G. Pugh, an attorney from Cowley, Louisiana, who drafted the first version in 1947. In Texas it is termed a Freestone rider. See pooling. [Cases: Mines and Minerals § 78.1(7).]

PUHCA. abbr. PUBLIC UTILITY HOLDING COMPANY ACT.

pumpjack. See PUMPING UNIT.

pun. See PENALITY.

pun. See PENALITY.

punies (pyoo-neez). Slang. Punitive damages. See punitive damages under DAMAGES.

punishment, n. (15c) 1. A sanction — such as a fine, penalty, confinement, or loss of property, right, or privilege — assessed against a person who has violated the law. See SENTENCE.

"Punishment in all its forms is a loss of rights or advantages consequent on a breach of law. When it loses this quality it degenerates into an arbitrary act of violence that can produce nothing but bad social effects." Glanville Williams, Criminal Law 375 (2d ed. 1961).

"In the treatment of offenders there is a clear and unmistakable line of division between the function of the judge and that of the penologist. I should modify that: the law is clear only if it is first made clear in what sense the word 'treatment' is being used. For in this context the word can be used in two senses, one wide and the other narrow. Let me take the wide meaning first. The object of a sentence is to impose punishment. For 'punishment', a word which to many connotes nothing but retribution, the softer word 'treatment' is now frequently substituted; this is the wider meaning. The substitution is made, I suppose, partly as a concession to the school which holds that crime is caused by mental sickness, but more justifiably as a reminder that there are other methods of dealing with criminal tendencies besides making the consequences of crime unpleasant." Patrick Devin, The Judge 32-33 (1979).

capital punishment. See CAPITAL PUNISHMENT.

collective punishment. See COLLECTIVE PUNISHMENT.

corporal punishment. (16c) Physical punishment; punishment that is inflicted upon the body (including imprisonment). [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment § 1524, 1525.]

"Past forms of corporal punishment included branding, blinding, mutilation, amputation, and the use of the pillory and the stocks. It was also an element in such violent modes of execution as drowning, Stoning, burning, hanging, and drawing and quartering . . . . In most parts of Europe and in the United States, such savage penalties were replaced by imprisonment during the late eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries, although capital punishment itself remained. Physical chastisement became less frequent until, in the twentieth century, corporal punish­ment was either eliminated as a legal penalty or restricted to beating with a birch rod, cane, whip, or other scourge. In ordinary usage the term now refers to such penal flagellation." Gordon Hawkins, "Corporal Punishment," in 1 Encyclopedia of Crime and Justice 251, 251 (Sanford H. Kadish ed., 1983).
cruel and unusual punishment. (17c) Punishment that is torturous, degrading, inhuman, grossly disproportionate to the crime in question, or otherwise shocking to the moral sense of the community. ● Cruel and unusual punishment is prohibited by the Eighth Amendment. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment ☞1430-1607.]

cumulative punishment. (1842) Punishment that increases in severity when a person is convicted of the same offense more than once.

deterrent punishment. (1896) 1. Criminal law. Punishment intended to deter the offender and others from committing crimes and to make an example of the offender so that like-minded people are warned of the consequences of crime. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment ☞41.] 2. Torts. Punishment intended to deter a tortfeasor from repeating a behavior or failing to remove a hazard that led to an injury. ● Punitive damages are usu. awarded as a deterrent punishment.

excessive punishment. (17c) Punishment that is not justified by the gravity of the offense or the defendant's criminal record. See excessive fine (1) under FINE (5). [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment ☞32.]

infamous punishment. (16c) Punishment by imprisonment, usu. in a penitentiary. See infamous crime under CRIME.

nonjudicial punishment. Military law. A procedure under which a commanding officer levies punishment against a minor officer who is subject to the Uniform Code of Military Justice. ● In the Navy and Coast Guard, nonjudicial punishment is termed captain's mast; in the Marine Corps, it is termed office hours; and in the Army and Air Force, it is referred to as Article 15. Nonjudicial punishment is not a court-martial. [Cases: Armed Services ☞39; Military Justice ☞525.]

preventive punishment. (1893) Punishment intended to prevent a repetition of wrongdoing by disabling the offender. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment ☞42.]

reformative punishment. (1919) Punishment intended to change the character of the offender. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment ☞45.]

retributive punishment. (1887) Punishment intended to satisfy the community's retaliatory sense of indignation that is provoked by injustice. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment ☞44.]

"The fact that it is natural to hate a criminal does not prove that retributive punishment is justified." Glanville Williams, The Sanctity of Life and the Criminal Law 60 (1957).

2. Family law. A negative disciplinary action administered to a minor child by a parent. [Cases: Parent and Child ☞2.5.]

pure speech. See speech.

pure theory. The philosophy of Hans Kelsen, in which he contends that a legal system must be "pure" — that is, self-supporting and not dependent on extralegal values. Kelsen's theory, set out in such works as General Theory of Law and the State (1945) and The Pure Theory of Law (1934), maintains that laws are norms handed down by the state. Laws are not defined in terms of history, ethics, sociology, or other external factors. Rather, a legal system is an interconnected system of norms, in which coercive techniques are used to secure compliance. The validity of each law, or legal norm, is traced to another legal norm. Ultimately, all laws must find their validity in the society's basic norm (grund-norm), which may be as simple as the concept that the constitution was validly enacted. See basic norm under norm.

pure trademark. See technical trademark under trademark.

pure villeinage. See villeinage.

purification (par-gay-shan). Hist. The act of cleansing or exonerating oneself of a crime or accusation by an oath or ordeal.

"The word 'purview' appears sometimes to be confined to so much of the body of the statute as would be left by omitting the exceptions, provisos, and savings clauses; and as the word is ambiguous, and not very useful at best, a wise course may be not to use it at all." William M. Lile et al., Brief Making and the Use of Law Books 358 (3d ed. 1914).

pusher. A person who sells illicit drugs. [Cases: Controlled Substances ⊂ 32.]

Pushman doctrine. Archaic. The rule that transfer of an unpublished work transfers the common-law copyright to the work along with the work itself. • The name derives from Pushman v. New York Graphic Soc'y, Inc., 39 N.E. 2d (N.Y. 1942). The doctrine was rejected by § 202 of the Copyright Act of 1976, but it remains in effect for transfers completed before the provision's effective date of January 1, 1978.

"[An outright sale of a material object, such as a book, canvas, or master tape of a musical work, does not transfer copyright. One possible exception to this rule is the Pushman doctrine under which an author or artist who has sold an unpublished work of art or a manuscript is presumed to have transferred his common law copyright, unless the copyright has been specifically reserved." Marshall A. Leaffer, Understanding Copyright Law 211 (3d ed. 1999).

[Law Latin] As long as they conduct themselves properly. • This term refers to the holding of an office, specific. the Act of Settlement, 1700, ch. 2. which provided that a judge's tenure was no longer at the king's pleasure, but could continue until death or improper conduct. This protected judges against arbitrary dismissal. The singular form is quamdiu se bene gesserit "as long as he behaves himself properly." — Also written quamdiu se bene gesserint. Cf. good behavior; durante bene placito.
   "But at present, by the long and uniform usage of many ages, our kings have delegated their whole judicial power to the judges of their several courts . . . And, in order to maintain both the dignity and independence of the judges, in the superior courts, it is enacted by the statute 13 W. Ill. c.2 that their commissions shall be made (not as formerly, durante bene placito, but) quamdiu bene gesserint, and their salaries ascertained and established; but that it may be lawful to remove them on the address of both houses of parliament." William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 267 (1765).
quamdiu se bene gesserint. [Latin "as long as they behave themselves properly"] • The singular form is quamdiu se bene gesserit "as long as he behaves himself properly." The plural form appears in the Act of Settlement (1701) to protect judges against arbitrary dismissal. Cf. dum se bene gesserit. quamvis non potuerit dare (kwam-vis non pah-ti-yoo-air-it [or pah-choo-] daair-ee). [Law Latin] Hist. Although he had not been able to give or administer it.
quando acciderent (kwahn-doh ak-si-dee-ant). [Latin] A judgment entered against a decedent's personal representative, to be satisfied by the estate out of assets that the representative receives after judgment.

quarantine. (17c) 1. The isolation of a person or animal afflicted with a communicable disease or the prevention of such a person or animal from coming into a particular area, the purpose being to prevent the spread of disease. • Federal, state, and local authorities are required to cooperate in the enforcement of quarantine laws. 42 USC A § 243(a).

"Power to make quarantine regulations is one of the most frequent powers conferred on boards of health. Such regulations constitute a proper exercise of the police power, provided they are not in conflict with federal regulations on the subject or that legislation by Congress is absent, and that they do not abridge rights protected by the Fourteenth Amendment." 39 Am. Jur. 2d Health § 59, at 529-30 (1999).

2. A place where a quarantine is in force. 3. Hist. A period of 40 days, esp. for the isolation and detention of ships containing persons or animals suspected of having or carrying a dangerous communicable disease, in order to prevent the spread of the disease.

"Quarantine ... The name is drawn from the fact that the period was formerly commonly 40 (ital. quarantina) days. In 1423 Venice established a lazaretto or quarantine station on an island to check the growth of disease brought in by ships. In the sixteenth century quarantine became widespread and there developed the system of bills of health, certificates that the last port was free from disease; a clean bill entitled a ship to use the port without subject to quarantine." David M. Walker, The Oxford Companion to Law 1022 (1980).

4. Hist. A widow's privilege to remain in her husband's house for 40 days after his death while her dower is being assigned. • This right was enforced by a writ of quarantina habenda. See de quarantina habenda. — Also spelled quarantine; quarentene. — quarantine, vb.

"It was provided by Magna Charta that the widow should give nothing for her dower, and that she should tarry in the chief house of her husband for forty days, (and which is called the widow's quarantine,) after the death of her husband, within which time her dower should be assigned her; and that, in the mean time, she should have reasonable estovers, or maintenance, out of the estate. The provision that the widow should pay nothing for the dower, was made with the generous intention of taking away the uncourtly and oppressive claim of the feudal lord, for a fine, upon allowing the widow to be endowed. This declaration of Magna Charta is, probably, the law in all the United States."

quare (kwair-e). [Latin] Why; for what reason; on what account. • This was used in various common-law writs, esp. writs in trespass.

quare clausum querentis fregit. See trespass quare clausum fregit under trespass.

quare ejecti infra terminum (kwair-ee i-jee-set in-fra tor-ma-nam), n. [Law Latin "why he ejected within the term"] Hist. A writ for a lessee who was prematurely ejected, when the ejector was not actually in possession but only claiming under the ejector was.

"For this injury the law has provided him with two remedies ... the writ of ejectioe firmae ... and the writ of quare ejecti infra terminum; which lies not against the wrongdoer or ejector himself, but his feoffee or other person claiming under him. These are mixed actions, somewhat between real and personal; for therein are two things recovered, as well restitution of the term of years, as damages for the ouster or wrong." 3 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 199 (1768).

quare impedit (kwair-e im-pa-dit). [Latin "why he hinders"] Hist. Eccles. law. A writ or action to enforce a patron's right to present a person to fill a vacant benefice. — Also termed writ of quare impedit. See presentation (2); advowson.

"The writ of quare impedit commands the disturbers, the bishop, the pseudo-patron, and his clerk, to permit the plaintiff to present a proper person (without specifying the particular clerk) to such a vacant church, which pertains to his patronage, and which the defendants, as he alleges, do obstruct: and unless they so do, then that they appear in court to shew the reason why they hinder him." 3 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 248 (1768).

quare incumbavit (kwair-ee in-kam-bray-vit), n. [Law Latin "why he incumbered"] Hist. A writ or action to compel a bishop to explain why he incumbered the church when, within six months after the vacation of a benefice and after a ne admissas was received, the bishop conferred the benefice on his clerk while other clerks were contending for the right of presentation in a quare impedit action. The writ was abolished by the Real Property Limitation Act of 1833, ch. 27.

quare intrusit (kwair-ee in-troo-sit), n. [Law Latin "why he thrust in"]. Hist. A writ allowing a lord to recover the value of a marriage, when the lord offered a suitable marriage to a ward but the ward rejected it and married someone else. It was abolished by the Tenures Abolition Act, 1660, ch. 24.

quare non permittit (kwair-ee non par-mit-it), n. [Law Latin "why he does not permit"] Hist. A writ for one who has a right to present to a church, against the proprietor.

quashal (kwahsh-al), n. The act of quashing something <quashal of the subpoena>. [Cases: Witnesses ¶ 16.]

quasi (kway-si or kway-zet also kwah-zee), n. [Latin "as if"] (15c) Seemingly but not actually; in some sense or degree; resembling; nearly.

"QUASI. A Latin word frequently used in the civil law, and often prefixed to English words. It is not a very definite word. It marks the resemblance, and supposes a little difference, between two objects, and in legal phraseology the term is used to indicate that one subject resembles another, with which it is compared, in certain characteristics, but that there are also intrinsic and material differences between them. It negatives the idea of identity, but implies a strong superficial analogy, and points out that the conceptions are sufficiently similar for one to be classed as the equal of the other." 74 C.J.S. Quasi, at 2 (1951).

quasi-affinity. See AFFINITY.

quasi-autonomous nongovernmental organization. A semipublic administrative body (esp. in the United Kingdom) having some members appointed and financed by, but not answerable to, the government, such as a tourist authority, a university-grants commission, a price-and-wage commission, a prison or parole board, or a medical-health advisory panel. question-and-answer. (17c) 1. The portion of a deposition or trial transcript in which evidence is developed through a series of questions asked by the lawyer and answered by the witness. — Abbr. Q.-and-A. 2. The method for developing evidence during a deposition or at trial, requiring the witness to answer the examining lawyer’s questions, without offering unsolicited information. [Cases: Witnesses C= 236, 247.] 3. The method of instruction used in many law-school classes, in which the professor asks questions of one or more students and then follows up each answer with another question. — Also termed Socratic method. See Socratic method; QUESTION-AND-ANSWER METHOD.

question of fact. (17c) 1. An issue that has not been predetermined and authoritatively answered by the law.

• An example is whether a particular criminal defendant is guilty of an offense or whether a contractor has been found guilty of negligence. • A question that does not involve what the law is on a given point. 3. A disputed issue to be resolved by the jury in a jury trial or by the judge in a bench trial. — Also termed FACT QUESTION. See FACT-FINDER.

question of law. (17c) 1. An issue to be decided by the judge, concerning the application or interpretation of the law . 2. A question that the court may not answer it as a matter of discretion <the enforceability of an arbitration clause is a question of law>. 3. An issue about what the law is on a particular point; an issue in which parties argue about, and the court must decide, what the true rule of law is <whether a contractual ambiguity exists is a question of law>. 4. An issue that, although it may turn on a fact, is reserved for the court and excluded from the jury; an issue that is exclusively within the province of the judge and not the jury <whether a contractual ambiguity exists is a question of law>. — Also termed LEGAL QUESTION; LAW QUESTION.

questman. Hist. 1. An instigator of a lawsuit or prosecution. 2. A person who was chosen to inquire into abuses, esp. those relating to weights and measures. 3. A churchwarden; SIDE SMAN. — Also termed QUEST-MONGER.

questus est nubis (kwes-tas est noh-bis), n. [Law Latin "hath complained to us"] Hist. By 1287, a writ against someone who continued a nuisance that existed before inheritance or purchase. • The former law provided recovery only against the party who had first caused the nuisance.

quia (kwia). [Latin] Hist. Because; whereas. • This term was used to point out the consideration in a conveyance.

quia alimenta liberis non debentur nisi in subsidium (kwia al-i-men-ta lib-ar-is non di-ben-tur nisi in sub-sid-ee-am). [Law Latin] Scots law. Because aliment (alimony) is not due to children except in aid of maintenance.

Quia Emptores (kwia or kwia emp-tor-ez). [Latin "since purchasers"] Hist. A statute giving fee simple tenants (other than those holding directly of the Crown) the power to alienate their land and bind the transferee to perform the same services for the lord as the statute had been obliged to perform. • The statute, enacted in 1290, tended to concentrate feudal lordships in the Crown by eliminating multiple layers of fealty. 18 Edw., ch. 1. — Also termed Quia Emptores Terrarium.

"Edward I and his lords wished, for political reasons, to prevent the growth of subinfeudation, and in 1290 the Statute Quia Emptores was enacted. It took its name from the beginning of its preamble — "Since purchasers..." L.B. Curzon, English Legal History 300 (2d ed. 1979).

Quia timet (kwid- o- joor-is). [Latin "because he fears"] (17c) A legal doctrine that allows a person to seek equitable relief from future probable harm to a specific right or interest. [Cases: Equity C≈ 17.]

"A second class of cases where equity courts act to prevent injury are known as 'quia timet' cases. The name comes from the two Latin words, often used when asking relief in this class of cases; the words mean, 'whereas he fears' that some injury will be inflicted in the future unless the court of equity assists him in advance, the plaintiff asks the assistance of the court to do this, that, or the other thing with respect to the defendant." Charles Herman Kinnane, A First Book on Anglo-American Law 648 (2d ed. 1952).

"Quia timet is the right to be protected against anticipated future injury that cannot be prevented by the present action. The doctrine of 'quia timet' permits equitable relief based on a concern over future probable injury to certain rights or interests, where anticipated future injury cannot be prevented by a present action at law, such as where there is a danger that a defense at law might be prejudiced or lost if not tried immediately." 27A Am. Jur. 2d Equity § 93, at 581 (1996).

Quia timet. See injunction.

Quibus deficientibus (kwid- o- di-fish-ee-en-ti-bas). [Latin] Hist. Scots law. Who failing. • In a disposition, this phrase appeared in reference to one or more who succeeded to an estate and then died. Cf. QUIBUS NON EXistentibus.

quoad potest (kwoh-ad poh-test). [Latin] Hist. Insofar as one is able.

"When a debtor, in an action brought against him by his creditor, pleads compensation to a certain extent of the debt sued for, quoad the sum due to him ... the creditor's right of action falls, but quoad reliquam, after making deduction of the sum pled in compensation, the creditor's right of action remains." John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 526 (4th ed. 1894).

quoad sacra (kwō-ad say-kra). [Latin] As to sacred things; for religious purposes. • This term often referred to property that was located so far from the parish to which it belonged that it was annexed quoad sacra to another parish, allowing the inhabitants to attend the closer parish's services. But the land continued to belong to the original parish for all civil purposes.

quoad ultra (kwō-ad ál-tra). [Law Latin] Hist. With regard to the rest. • This reference was commonly used in pleading when a defendant admitted part of the plaintiff's claim and quoad ultra denied it.

"In this action, if the plaintiff succeeds, there are two judgments: the first is, that the defendant do account (quod computat) before auditors appointed by the court; and, when such account is finished, then the second judgment is, that he do pay the plaintiff so much as he is found in arrear." 3 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 163 (1768).

quod cum (kwōd kam). [Law Latin] For that; whereas. • In common-law pleading, this phrase introduced explanations for the claims alleged, as in assumpsit actions.

quod ei deforceat (kwōd ee-t di-for-see-at). n. [Law Latin "that he deforses him"] Hist. A writ allowed by St. Westm. 2, 13 Edw., ch. 4 for the owners of a particular estate (such as a life estate or fee tail) who had lost land unwittingly by default in a possessory action. • Up to that time, only owners in fee simple could recover property after such a default.

quod erat demonstrandum (kwōd er-at dem-an-stran-dam). See Q.E.D.

quod erat faciendum (kwōd er-at fay-shee-en-dam). See Q.E.F.

quod fuit concessum (kwōd fyoo-it kan-ses-am). [Law Latin] Which was granted. • This phrase was used in old reports to indicate that an argument or point made by counsel was approved or allowed by the court.

quod fusi usu negatum (kwōd non fyoo-it ni-gay-tam). [Law Latin] Hist. Which was not denied. • This phrase usu. signifies that an argument or proposal is not denied or controverted by the court.

quo jure (kwod joo-ray). [Law Latin] "by what right". Hist. A writ for someone holding land to which another claimed a common, to compel the latter to prove title. See COMMON (1).

quominus (kwoh ma-nas or kwoh mi-nas). [Latin quo minus "by which the less"] Hist. A 14th-century Exchequer writ alleging that the plaintiff had lent the defendant a sum of money and that the plaintiff was unable to repay a debt of similar amount to the Crown because of the debt to the defendant. ● In effect, the plaintiff pleaded the fiction that he was a debtor of the king who could not repay that debt because of the defendant's failure to repay him. — Also termed writ of quominus.

"[W]hat in the beginning had been permitted as a means of collecting the royal revenue came in the end to be nothing more or less than permitting any citizen to sue in the court of the king in order to collect a private debt. The old pretense that the matter concerned the royal revenue had to be kept up, and accordingly A had to allege that he was 'less able' to pay the king when his debtors would not pay him. But everyone, even the court itself, recognized this as a mere fiction, and that since the suit was in fact between A and B, B was not permitted to bring in other matters, such as for example as a defense on the ground that A did not actually owe any taxes to the crown. This fiction came to be known as the 'quo minus' fiction, because these were the Latin words used in the litigation, which meant that A was 'less able' to pay the king." — Charles Herman Kinnane, A First Book on Anglo-American Law 265-66 (2d ed. 1952).

quomodo constat (kwoh-ma-doh kon-stat). [Latin] Hist. As it appears (from the record, the pleadings, etc.).

quomodo desiit possidere (kwoh-ma-doh des-ee-it pos-d-e-ree). [Law Latin] Scots law. In what way he ceased to possess. ● In an action to reclaim possession, the plaintiff was required to prove previous possession and quomodo desiit possidere (as by theft, etc.).

quovis modo (kwoh-vis moh-doh). [Latin] In whatever manner.

quo warranto (kwoh wə-ran-toh also kwoh wahr-an-toh). [Law Latin “by what authority”] (15c) 1. A common-law writ used to inquire into the authority by which a public office is held or a franchise is claimed. — Also termed writ of quo warranto. [Cases: Quo Warranto 9] 2. An action by which the state seeks to revoke a corporation’s charter. • The Federal Rules of Civil Procedure are applicable to proceedings for quo warranto “to the extent that the practice in such proceedings is not set forth in statutes of the United States and has therefore conformed to the practice in civil actions.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 81(a)(2). [Cases: Quo Warranto 15.]

‘There are two modes of proceeding judicially to ascertain and enforce the forfeiture of a charter for default or abuse of power. The one is by scire facias; and that process is proper where there is a legal existing body, capable of acting, but who have abused their power. The other mode is by information in the nature of a quo warranto; which is in form a criminal, and in its nature a civil remedy; and that proceeding applies where there is a body corporate de facto only, but who take upon themselves to act, though, from some defect in their constitution, they cannot legally exercise their powers. Both these modes of proceeding are at the instance of and on behalf of the government. The state must be a party to the prosecution, for the judgment is that the parties be ousted, and the franchises seized into the hands of the government.” 2 James Kent, Commentaries on American Law *313 (George Comstock ed., 11th ed. 1866).

‘Quo warranto means ‘by what warrant?’ — or authority? — and was a proceeding to inquire whether authority existed to justify or authorize certain acts of a public character or interest. Originally the proceeding of quo warranto was a criminal one instituted by the crown, the purpose of which was to find out, in the course of a formal inquiry, whether or not persons or corporations were exercising a privilege or franchise illegally, or if persons who had no right to so do were occupying some public office. If it were found that the person or corporation was in fact illegally interfering with the prerogative power of the crown, or was in fact doing some other illegal act, it was ousted from the illegal practice or office. Accordingly, it can be seen at once that the proceeding on quo warranto was not one to be used by private parties in the conduct of ordinary litigation.” Charles Herman Kinnane, A First Book on Anglo-American Law 662 (2d ed. 1952).

race statute. (1944) A recording law providing that the person who records first, regardless of notice, has priority. • Only Louisiana and North Carolina have race statutes. — Also termed pure race statute; race act. Cf. notice statute; race-notice statute. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser C=:'231(11).]

race to the courthouse. (1961) 1. Bankruptcy. The competition among creditors to make claims on assets, usu. motivated by the advantages to be gained by those who act first in preference to other creditors. • Chapter 11 of the Bankruptcy Code, as well as various other provisions, is intended to prevent a race to the courthouse and instead to promote equality among creditors. [Cases: Bankruptcy C=:'2022, 2391, 2601, 3501.]

2. Civil procedure. The competition between disputing parties, both of whom know that litigation is inevitable, to prepare and file a lawsuit in a favorable or convenient forum before the other side files in one that is less favorable or less convenient. • A race to the courthouse may result after one party informally accuses another of breach of contract or intellectual-property infringement. When informal negotiations break down, both want to resolve the matter quickly, usu. to avoid further business disruption. While the accuser races to sue for breach of contract or infringement, the accused seeks a declaratory judgment that no breach or infringement has occurred. See anticipatory filing.

Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act. A law designed to attack organized criminal activity and preserve marketplace integrity by investigating, controlling, and prosecuting persons who participate or conspire to participate in racketeering. 18 USCA §§ 1961–1968. • Enacted in 1970, the federal RICO statute applies only to activity involving interstate or foreign commerce. Since then, many states have adopted laws (sometimes called “little RICO” acts) based on the federal statute. The federal and most state RICO acts provide for enforcement not only by criminal prosecution but also by civil lawsuit, in which the plaintiff can sue for treble damages. — Abbr. RICO. [Cases: Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations C=:'2, 101.]

“Before criminal or civil liability can attach under RICO, it must be shown that the two or more acts of racketeering alleged in the criminal indictment or civil complaint constitute a pattern of racketeering activity on the part of the culpable person. The statutory definition of pattern ‘requires at least two’ predicate acts occurring within ten years of each other, with one of them occurring after October 15, 1970. More broadly put, the pattern of racketeering activity is a scheme of unlawful conduct with a nexus to both the culpable person and the enterprise.” — David R. McCormack, Racketeering Influenced and Corrupt Organizations § 1.04, at 1-20 (1998).

racketeering, n. (1897) 1. A system of organized crime traditionally involving the extortion of money from businesses by intimidation, violence, or other illegal methods. [Cases: Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations C=:'4, 103.] 2. A pattern of illegal activity (such as bribery, extortion, fraud, and murder) carried out as part of an enterprise (such as a crime syndicate) that is owned or controlled by those engaged in the illegal activity. • The modern sense (sense 2) derives from the federal RICO statute, which greatly broadened the term's original sense to include such activities as mail fraud, securities fraud, and the collection of illegal gambling debts. See 18 USCA §§ 1951–1960. [Cases: Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations ⊑ 3, 102.]

ransom factor. Slang. The costliness of litigation considered as a disincentive to vindicate one's rights in court.

• The term is used mostly in England.

rape, n. (15c) 1. At common law, unlawful sexual intercourse committed by a man with a woman not his wife through force and against her will. • The common-law crime of rape required at least a slight penetration of the penis into the vagina. Also at common law, a husband could not be convicted of raping his wife. — Formerly termed raptus; ravishment. [Cases: Rape C-:;;) 1.] 2. Unlawful sexual activity (esp. intercourse) with a person (usu. a female) without consent and usu. by force or threat of injury. • Most modern state statutes have broadened the definition along these lines. Rape includes unlawful sexual intercourse without consent after the perpetrator has substantially impaired the victim by administering, without the victim's knowledge or consent, drugs or intoxicants for the purpose of preventing resistance. It also includes unlawful sexual intercourse with a person who is unconscious. Marital status is now usu. irrelevant, and sometimes so is the victim's gender. — Also termed (in some statutes) unlawful sexual intercourse; sexual assault; sexual battery; sexual abuse; (in Latin) crimen raptus. Cf. sexual assault under assault; sexual battery under battery.

"[Another] offence, against the female part also of his majesty's subjects, but attended with greater aggravations than that of forcible marriage, is the crime of rape, raptus mulierum, or the carnal knowledge of a woman forcibly and against her will." A William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 210 (1769).

"If force is to be declared an element of the crime [of rape] it becomes necessary to resort to the fiction of 'constructive force' to take care of those cases in which no force is needed beyond what is involved in the very act of intercourse itself. A better analysis is to recognize that the requirement of force is simply a means of demonstrating that the unlawful violation of the woman was without her consent and against her will. Therefore, evidence of serious force need not be shown in many cases. Hence the better view is that 'force' is not truly speaking an element of the crime itself, but if great force was not needed to accomplish the act the necessary lack of consent has been disproved in other than exceptional situations. The courts today frequently state the position that a woman's resistance need not be 'more than her age, strength, the surrounding facts, and all attending circumstances' make reasonable." Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 211-12 (3d ed. 1982).

acquaintance rape. (1980) Rape committed by someone known to the victim, esp. by the victim's social companion. Cf. date rape; relationship rape.

command rape. Coerced or forced sexual contact between a superior member and subordinate member of the armed forces.

date rape. (1975) Rape committed by a person who is escorting the victim on a social occasion. • Loosely, date rape also sometimes refers to what is more accurately called acquaintance rape or relationship rape. [Cases: Rape C-:;;) 4.] marital rape. (1936) A husband's sexual intercourse with his wife by force or without her consent. • Marital rape was not a crime at common law, but under modern statutes the marital exemption no longer applies, and in most jurisdictions a husband can be prosecuted for raping his wife. — Also termed spousal rape. [Cases: Rape C-:;;) 4.] prior-relationship rape. See relationship rape.

rape by means of fraud. An instance of sexual intercourse that has been induced by fraud. • Authorities are divided on the question whether rape can occur when a woman is induced by fraudulent statements to have sexual intercourse. But the term rape by means of fraud is not uncommon in legal literature. [Cases: Justices of the Peace C-:;;) 10.]

rape under age. See statutory rape.

relationship rape. (1999) Rape committed by someone with whom the victim has had a significant association, often (though not always) of a romantic nature. • This term encompasses all types of relationships, including family, friends, dates, cohabitants, and spousal, in which the victim has had more than brief or perfunctory interaction with the other person. Thus it does not extend to those with whom the victim has had only brief encounters or a nodding acquaintance. — Also termed prior-relationship rape. Cf. date rape; acquaintance rape.

spousal rape. See marital rape.

statutory rape. (1873) Unlawful sexual intercourse with a person under the age of consent (as defined by statute), regardless of whether it is against that person's will. • Generally, only an adult may be convicted of this crime. A person under the age of consent cannot be convicted. — Also termed rape under age. See age of consent under age. [Cases: Rape C-:;;) 13.]

"Carnal knowledge of a child is frequently declared to be rape by statute and where this is true the offense is
3. Archaic. The act of seizing and carrying off a person (esp. a woman) by force; abduction. 4. The act of plundering or despoiling a place. 5. Hist. One of the six administrative districts into which Sussex, England was divided, being smaller than a shire and larger than a hundred.

rapina (r;:)-pI-n;:). (Latin “robbery, pillage”). 1. Forcible seizure and carrying off of another’s property; pillage or plunder. 2. Archaic. Rape.

rapprochement (ra-prosh mahn). [French] The establishment or restoration of cordial relations between two or more nations. — Also spelled rapprochement.

raptu haeredis, n. [Latin “return to succession”). Civil law. The restoration to an estate of property that an heir received in socage from the decedent, so that an even distribution of the property with the intent to appropriate it to one’s own use.

rate, n. (15c) 1. Proportional or relative value; the proportion by which quantity or value is adjusted or apportioned <because hundreds of angry fans ran onto the field at the same time, blame for the goalpost’s destruction is not ratable>. 2. Taxable <the government assessed the widow’s ratable estate>. See pro rata.

ratchet theory. (1977) Constitutional law. The principle that Congress, in exercising its enforcement power under the 14th Amendment, can increase but not dilute the scope of 14th Amendment guarantees as previously defined by the Supreme Court. • The thought underlying the term is that the enabling clause works in only one direction, like a ratchet. The theory was stated by Justice Brennan in Katzenbach v. Morgan, 384 U.S. 641, 86 S.Ct. 1717 (1966), but was repudiated by the Supreme Court in City of Boerne v. Flores, 521 U.S. 507, 117 S.Ct. 2157 (1997). — Also termed one-way ratchet theory.

ratable (ray-ta-bal), adj. (16c) 1. Proportional <ratable distribution>. 2. Capable of being estimated, appraised, or apportioned <ratable rate of return>. 3. Taxable <the government assessed the widow’s ratable estate>. See pro rata.
internal rate of return. Accounting. A discounted cash-flow method of evaluating a long-term project, used to determine the actual return on an investment. — Abbr. IRR.

ratepayer. English law. A person who pays local taxes; a person liable to pay rates. See rate (4).

ratification, n. (15c) 1. Adoption or enactment, esp. where the act is the last in a series of necessary steps or consents. The Ratification of the Conventions of nine States, shall be sufficient for the Establishment of this Constitution between the States soratifying the Same. 2. In this sense, ratification runs the gamut of a previous act, thereby making the act valid from the moment it was done (the board of directors' ratification of the president's resolution). This sense includes action taken by the legislature to make binding a treaty negotiated by the executive. [Cases: Estoppel C=90(1),] 3. Contracts. A person's binding adoption of an act already completed but either not done in a way that originally produced a legal obligation or done by a third party having at the time no authority to act as the person's agent (an adult's ratification of a contract signed during childhood is necessary to make the contract enforceable). [Cases: Contracts C=97(2); Infants C=57; Principal and Agent C=163–176.]

"Ratification may take place by express words indicating an intention to confirm the contract. These words may consist of a new express promise, or such words as 'I do ratify and confirm.' A mere acknowledgment that the contract was in fact made and that it has not been performed is not sufficient as a ratification. It is sometimes said that a ratification is ineffective unless made with knowledge of the possession of a legal power to disaffirm, but the cases holding the contrary seem to have the better reason." William R. Anson. Principles of the Law of Contract 179–80 (Arthur L. Corbin ed., 3d Am. ed. 1919).

4. Int'l law. The final establishment of consent by the parties to a treaty to be bound by it, usu. including the exchange or deposit of instruments of ratification (the ratification of the nuclear-weapons treaty). See instrument of ratification. Cf. confirmation. [Cases: Treaties C=3.] — ratify, vb. — ratifiable, adj.

ratihabitio (rat-ih-bish-ee-oh), n. [Latin fr. ratum habere "to hold ratified"]. Civil law. Ratification or approval, esp. by a principal of an agent's transaction. Pl. ratihabitiones.

rating. 1. Marine insurance. The determination of a vessel's state or condition as a factor of insurability. [Cases: Insurance C=1515, 1540.] 2. Insurance rating.

ratio. See ratio decidendi.

ratio decidendi (ray-shee-oh des-a-den-di), n. [Latin "the reason for deciding"] (18c) 1. The principle or rule of law on which a court's decision is founded (many poorly written judicial opinions do not contain a clearly ascertainable ratio decidendi). 2. The rule of law on which a later court thinks that a previous court founded its decision; a general rule without which a case must have been decided otherwise (this opinion recognizes the Supreme Court's ratio decidendi in the school desegregation cases). Often shortened to ratio. Pl. rationses decidendi (ray-shee-oh-neez des-a-den-di). Cf. obiter dictum; holding (1). "The phrase 'the ratio decidendi of a case' is slightly ambiguous. It may mean either (1) the rule that the judge who decided the case intended to lay down and apply to the facts, or (2) the rule that a later court conceives him to have had the power to lay down." Glanville Williams, Learning the Law 75 (11th ed. 1982).

"There are . . . two steps involved in the ascertainment of the ratio decidendi . . . . First, it is necessary to determine all the facts of the case as seen by the judge; secondly, it is necessary to discover which of those facts were treated as material by the judge." Rupert Cross & J.W. Harris, Precedent in English Law 65–66 (4th ed. 1991).

ratio legis (ray-shee-oh lee-jas), n. [Latin] The reason or purpose for making a law (the Senator argued that the rapid spread of violent crime was a compelling ratio legis for the gun-control statute). Also termed ratio juris.

rationabilibus divisio. See de rationabilibus divisio.

rationabili parte bonusum. See de rationabili parte bonorum.

rational-basis test. (1947) Constitutional law. The criterion for judicial analysis of a statute that does not implicate a fundamental right or a suspect or quasi-suspect classification under the Due Process or Equal Protection Clause, whereby the court will uphold a law if it bears a reasonable relationship to the attainment of a legitimate governmental objective. Rational basis is the most deferential of the standards of review that courts use in due-process and equal-protection analysis. — Also termed rational-purpose test; rational-relationship test; minimum scrutiny; minimal scrutiny. Cf. strict scrutiny; intermediate scrutiny. [Cases: Constitutional Law C=3052, 3877.]

rational-choice theory. (1979) The theory that behavioral choices, including the choice to engage in criminal activity, are based on purposeful decisions that the potential benefits outweigh the risks. Cf. control theory; routine-activities theory; strain theory.

rational doubt. See reasonable doubt.

rational interpretation. See logical interpretation under interpretation.

rational-purpose test. See rational-basis test.

rational-relationship test. See rational-basis test.
ratione (ray-shee-oh-nee or rash-ee-oh-nee). [Latin] By reason; on account.

ratione bonorum (ba-nor-om). By reason of property.

ratione cause (kaw-zee). By reason of the nature of the case.

ratione contractus (kan-trak-tas). By reason of the contract.

"By entering into a contract, the contracting parties may . . . render themselves amenable to the jurisdiction of a judge to whose jurisdiction they would not have been amenable had the contract not been entered into. Thus, a foreigner, for the time being domiciled in Scotland, entering into a contract there with a Scotchman . . . renders himself amenable to the jurisdiction of the Scotch courts in any question arising out of the contract, for the parties . . . are presumed to have had the law and the courts of Scotland in view as the forum . . . and a jurisdiction thus founded is said to arise ratione contractus." John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 540 (4th ed. 1894).

ratione delicti (di-lik-ti). On account of the delict.

ratione domicilii (dom-sil-ee-ti). By reason of domicile; on account of residence. • The phrase appeared in reference to the foundation of jurisdiction in many civil cases.

ratione habita (hab-i-ta). Regard being had of particular factors or circumstances.

ratione impotentiae (im-pa-ten-shee-e). By reason of inability. • This was the basis for a property right in young wild animals that were unable to run or fly. See feræ naturæ.

ratione incidentiae (in-si-den-shee-e). By reason of the incident.

ratione loci (lob-sti). By reason of place. • This was the basis for a property right in rabbits and hares.

ratione materiae (ma-teer-ee-e). By reason of the matter involved.

ratione origines (o-rij-an-is). By reason of one's origin.

ratione personae (per-soh-nee). By reason of the person concerned.

ratione privilegii (priv-a-lee-jee-ti). By reason of privilege. • This was the basis for a property right in animals of warren. See warren.

ratione rei sitae (ree-ee sit-tee). By reason of the situation of a thing.

ratione soli (soh-li). By reason of the soil. • This was the basis for a property right in bees.

ratione subjectae materiae (sub-jek-tee ma-teer-ee-ee). On account of the subject matter.

ratione specti judicis (so-spek-tee joo-dji-sis). On account of the judge being suspected. • This referred to a judge's recusal in a case.

ratione temporis (tem-por-eez), adv. By reason of time or the times. See ratione.

ratione tenurae (ten yar-ree). By reason of tenure.

rationes (ray-shee-oh-neez or rash-ee-oh-neez). n. [Latin "reasons"] Hist. The pleadings in a suit.

ratio pertinens. A pertinent reason (for a question).

rattening (rat-ning). Hist. The practice of taking away tools, destroying machinery, and the like in an attempt either to compel a worker to join a union or to enforce a company's compliance with union rules. • Rattening was formerly a common labor-union tactic in England, and it was a criminal offense.

ravishment, n. Archaic. 1. Forcible seizure and carrying off of another person (esp. a woman); abduction. 2. RAPE (1). • In this sense the term is widely considered inappropriate for modern usage, given its romantic connotations (in other contexts) of ecstasy and delight. In the Restatement (First) of Torts § 65a, the word was defined as including not just rape but any carnal intercourse of a criminal nature. See RAPE.—ravish, vb.

RBS, abbr. rural business-cooperative service.

RCE, abbr. request for continued examination.

rDNA, abbr. recombinant DNA technology.

re (ree or ray), prep. (18c) Regarding; in the matter of. • In the title of a case, it usu. signifies a legal proceeding regarding the disposition of real or personal property or a change in legal status. In American caselaw, the abbreviation commonly used is in re <In re Estate of Kirk>. In business correspondence, the term signals the subject matter <re: Meeting>. See in re.

REA, abbr. rural electrification administration.

rea (ree-ah), n. [Latin] In civil and canon law, a defendant. Pl. reae.

reacquired stock. See treasury stock under stock.

reading, Parliamentary law. The recitation aloud of a bill or other main motion, sometimes by title only, usu. in a series of three such recitations necessary before a legislative body can pass a bill. See reading clerk under clerk (7).

reading clerk. See clerk (7).

read into, vb. See read on.

readjustment, n. (18c) Voluntary reorganization of a financially troubled corporation by the shareholders themselves, without a trustee's or a receiver's intervention. — readjust, vb.

read law. 1. To prepare for a legal career by working in a lawyer's office as a clerk while studying legal texts on one's own time. • Most American lawyers in the 18th and 19th centuries obtained their legal educations solely by reading law. Today, few American states allow applicants to take the bar exam without attending law school. 2. To study law at a law school.
read on, vb. Patents. 1. (Of a patent claim) to contain all the same features of (a prior-art reference). 2. If the patent claim reads on the prior art, the claim has been anticipated and the patent will be denied. See ANTICIPATED. [Cases: Patents C--:72(1).] 2. (Of a patent claim) to describe an infringing product or process. 3. If all the patent claims read on the other product, that product infringes the patent. [Cases: Patents C--:226.6] ready, willing, and able. (1829) (Of a prospective buyer) legally and financially capable of consummating a purchase. [Cases: Brokers C--:54; Specific Performance C--:87.

"'READY, WILLING, AND ABLE' — A phrase referring to a prospective buyer of property who is legally capable and financially able to consummate the deal. Traditionally, the broker earns a commission upon procuring a 'ready, willing, and able' buyer on the listing terms, regardless of whether the seller actually goes through with the sale. To 'ready, willing, and able,' generally, that the broker must in fact produce a buyer who indicates that he or she is prepared to accept the terms of the seller and is willing to enter into a contract for sale. The buyer is not 'ready and willing' when he or she enters into an option with the seller, but the buyer is 'ready and willing' when the option is exercised. The buyer is not 'ready and willing' when the offer is subject to any new conditions, such as making the closing date an unreasonably long period, for example, one year from the offer . . . The 'able' requires that the buyer be financially able to comply with the terms of the sale in both initial cash payment and any necessary financing. The broker is not required to show that the purchaser has actual cash or assets to pay off the mortgage. But the broker is required to request the identity of the buyer if requested by the seller." John W. Reilly, The Language of Real Estate 326 (4th ed. 1999).

reaffirmation, n. (1857) 1. Approval of something previously decided or agreed to; renewal <the Supreme Court's reaffirmation of this principle is long overdue. 2. Bankruptcy. An agreement between the debtor and a creditor by which the debtor promises to repay a prepetition debt that would otherwise be discharged at the conclusion of the bankruptcy <the debtor negotiated a reaffirmation so that he could keep the collateral>. 3. There are two main requirements for a reaffirmation to be enforceable: (1) the agreement must contain a clear and conspicuous provision stating that the debtor may rescind the reaffirmation agreement anytime before discharge or within 60 days after the agreement is filed with the court; and (2) for a debtor who is not represented by counsel, the court must determine that the reaffirmation is in the debtor's best interest and does not impose an undue hardship. 11 USC § 524(c). — Also termed (in sense 2) reaffirmation agreement. [Cases: Bankruptcy C--:3415.] reaffirm, vb.

reaffirmation hearing. Bankruptcy. A hearing at which the debtor and a creditor present a reaffirmation of a dischargeable debt for the court's approval. • The reaffirmation hearing is usu. held simultaneously with the discharge hearing. See DISCHARGE HEARING. [Cases: Bankruptcy C--:3417.

real, adj. (15c) 1. Of or relating to things (such as lands and buildings) that are fixed or immovable <real property> . 2. Civil law. Of, relating to, or attached to a thing (whether movable or immovable) rather than a person . 3. Actual: genuine; true <real authority>. 4. (Of money, income, etc.) measured in terms of purchasing power rather than nominal value; adjusted for inflation <real wages>.

real-estate investment trust. A company that invests in and manages a portfolio of real estate, with the majority of the trust's income distributed to its shareholders. • Such a trust may qualify for special income-tax treatment if it distributes 95% of its income to its shareholders. — Abbr. REIT. See investment company under COMPANY. Cf. REAL-ESTATE MORTGAGE TRUST. [Cases: Internal Revenue C--:3997.

umbrella-partnership real-estate investment trust. A REIT that controls and holds most of its properties through an umbrella limited partnership, as a result of which the trust can acquire properties in exchange for the limited-partnership interests in the umbrella while triggering no immediate tax obligations for certain sellers. • This is a structure that many REITs now use. — Abbr. UPREIT. [Cases: Internal Revenue C--:3997.

real-estate-mortgage investment conduit. An entity that holds a fixed pool of mortgages or mortgage-backed securities (such as collateralized mortgage obligations), issues interests in itself to investors, and receives favorable tax treatment by passing its income through to those investors. • Real-estate-mortgage investment conduits were created by the Tax Reform Act of 1986. They can be organized as corporations, partnerships, or trusts. To qualify for tax-exempt status, the entity must meet two requirements: (1) almost all the entity's assets must be real-estate mortgages (though a few other cash-flow-maintaining assets are allowed); and (2) all interests in the entity must be classified as either regular interests (which entitle the holder to principal and interest income through debt or equity) or residual interests (which provide contingent income). — Abbr. REMIC. real-estate mortgage trust. A real-estate investment trust that buys and sells the mortgages on real property rather than the real property itself. — Abbr. REMT. Cf. REAL-ESTATE INVESTMENT TRUST.

reasonable care. See CARE.
reasonable cause. See PROBABLE CAUSE.
reasonable doubt. (18c) The doubt that prevents one from being firmly convinced of a defendant's guilt, or the belief that there is a real possibility that a defendant is not guilty. • "Beyond a reasonable doubt" is the standard used by a jury to determine whether a criminal defendant is guilty. See Model Penal Code § 1.12. In deciding whether guilt has been proved beyond a reasonable doubt, the jury must begin with the presumption that the defendant is innocent. — Also termed rational doubt. See BURDEN OF PERSUASION. Cf. clear and convincing evidence under EVIDENCE; PREponderANCE OF THE EVIDENCE. (Cases: Constitutional Law C-266(7); Criminal Law C-561.)

"Reasonable doubt ... is a term often used, probably pretty well understood, but not easily defined. It is not a mere possible doubt; because every thing relating to human affairs, and depending on moral evidence, is open to some possible or imaginary doubt. It is that state of the case, which, after the entire comparison and consideration of all the evidence, leaves the minds of jurors in that condition that they cannot say they feel an abiding conviction, to a moral certainty, of the truth of the charge." Commonwealth v. Webster, 59 Mass. (5 Cush.) 295, 320 (1850) (per Lemuel Shaw, J).

"The gravamen of Lord Goddard's objection to the formula of 'reasonable doubt' seems to have been the middling occasion created by an impromptu effort to explain to a jury the meaning of this phrase. A simple solution would be to refrain from explaining it, relying on the common sense of the jury. As Barton J. said in an Australian case, 'one embarks on a dangerous sea if he attempts to define with precision a term which is in ordinary use with reference to this subject-matter, and which is usually stated to a jury without embellishment as a well understood expression.' However, some modes of embellishment seem to be objectionable. There is probably no harm in telling the jury, as some judges do, that a reasonable doubt is one for which a sensible reason can be supplied." Cranville Williams, Criminal Law 873 (2d ed. 1961).

reasonable excuse. See PROBABLE CAUSE.
reasonable-expectations doctrine. The principle that an ambiguous or inconspicuous term in a contract should be interpreted to favor the weaker party's objectively reasonable expectations from the contract, even though the explicit language of the terms may not support those expectations. • This principle is most often applied when interpreting insurance policies, consumer contracts, and other types of adhesion contracts. — Also written reasonable-expectations doctrine. (Cases: Insurance C-1817.)

reasonable force. See FORCE.
reasonable grounds. See PROBABLE CAUSE.
reasonable inference rule. (1945) An evidentiary principle providing that a jury, in deciding a case, may properly consider any reasonable inference drawn from the evidence presented at trial. Cf. PYRAMIDING INFERENCES, RULE AGAINST. (Cases: Criminal Law C-559; Evidence C-595.)

reasonable man. See REASONABLE PERSON. reasonable medical probability. (1849) In proving the cause of an injury, a standard requiring a showing that the injury was more likely than not caused by a particular stimulus, based on the general consensus of recognized medical thought. — Also termed reasonable medical certainty. (Cases: Damages C-185(1); Evidence C-547.5.) reasonable notice. See NOTICE.

reasonable person. 1. A hypothetical person used as a legal standard, esp. to determine whether someone acted with negligence; specif., a person who exercises the degree of attention, knowledge, intelligence, and judgment that society requires of its members for the protection of their own and of others' interests. • The reasonable person acts sensibly, does things without serious delay, and takes proper but not excessive precautions. See Restatement (Second) of Torts § 283(b). — Also termed reasonable man; prudent person; ordinarily prudent person; reasonably prudent person; highly prudent person. See REASONABLE CARE UNDER CARE. (Cases: Negligence C-233.)

"The reasonable man connotes a person whose notions and standards of behaviour and responsibility correspond with those generally obtained among ordinary people in our society at the present time, who seldom allows his emotions to overbear his reason and whose habits are moderate and whose disposition is equable. He is not necessarily the same as the average man — a term which implies an amalgamation of counter-balancing extremes. R.F.V. Heuston, Salmond on the Law of Torts 56 (17th ed. 1977).

"In the antique phraseology which has been repeated since the time of Lord Coke the actus reus of murder (and therefore of any criminal homicide) was declared to be unlawfully killing a reasonable person who is in being and under the King's peace, the death following within a year and a day. In this sentence the word 'reasonable' does not mean 'sane', but 'human'. In criminal law, a lunatic is a persona for all purposes of protection, even when not so treated for the assessment of liability." J.W. Cecil Turner, Kenny's Outlines of Criminal Law 102 (16th ed. 1952).

reasonable time. (1951) 1. Contracts. The time needed to do what a contract requires to be done, based on subjective circumstances. ● If the contracting parties do not fix a time for performance, the law will usually presume a reasonable time. [Cases: Contracts C\(\geq\)212.] 2. Commercial law. The time during which the UCC permits a party to accept an offer, inspect goods, substitute conforming goods for rejected goods, and the like. [Cases: Sales C\(\geq\)22(5), 23(5), 166(1), 168(2), 179(6).]

reasonable-use theory. (1933) Property. The principle that owners of riparian land may make reasonable use of their water if this use does not affect the water available to lower riparian owners. [Cases: Waters and Water Courses C\(\geq\)41.]

reasonably believe. See believe.

reasonably-prudent-operator standard. Oil & gas. The test generally applied to determine a lessee's compliance with implied lease covenants by considering what a reasonable, competent operator in the oil and gas industry would do under the circumstances, acting in good faith and with economic motivation, and taking into account the lessor's interests as well as that of the operator. — Also termed reasonable-prudent-operator standard; prudent-operator standard. [Cases: Mines and Minerals C\(\geq\)78.1(2).]

reasonably prudent person. See reasonable person.

reasonably suspect. See suspect.

reasons for allowance. See rule 109 statement.

reason to know. Information from which a person of ordinary intelligence — or of the superior intelligence that the person may have — would infer that the fact in question exists or that there is a substantial enough chance of its existence that, if the person exercises reasonable care, the person can assume the fact exists.

reassurance. See reinsurance.

rebut, vb. (14c) To refute, oppose, or counteract (something) by evidence, argument, or contrary proof <rebut the opponent's expert testimony> <rebut a presumption of negligence>.

rebuttable presumption. See presumption.

rebuttal, n. (1830) 1. In-court contradiction of an adverse party's evidence. 2. The time given to a party to present contradictory evidence or arguments. Cf. CASE-IN-CHIEF. [Cases: Criminal Law C\(\geq\)683; Federal Civil Procedure C\(\geq\)2015; Trial C\(\geq\)62.]

"Rebuttal is the hardest argument to make in any court. In the Supreme Court and in most courts of appeals, petitioner has to work hard to save any time at all for rebuttal. In the Supreme Court, rebuttal time comes directly out of the 30 minutes allotted to petitioner's side and, if the justices keep asking questions that use up petitioner's time, the case is submitted without rebuttal. Many courts of appeals permit counsel to reserve time for rebuttal, either through the clerk in advance of the argument or at the beginning of the argument itself. It is the rare court of appeals panel that does not permit counsel at least one minute of rebuttal, even when counsel's time has expired." David C. Frederick, Supreme Court and Appellate Advocacy § 7.3, at 178 (2003) (dealing only with oral rebuttals on appeal).

3. The arguments contained in a reply brief. See reply brief under BRIEF. [Cases: Appeal and Error C\(\geq\)762; Criminal Law C\(\geq\)1130(6); Federal Courts C\(\geq\)714.]

rebuttal evidence. See evidence.

rebuttal witness. See witness.

rebutter. (16c) 1. Common-law pleading. The defendant's answer to a plaintiff's surrejoinder; the pleading that followed the rejoinder and surrejoinder, and that might in turn be answered by the surrebutter. [Cases: Pleading C\(\geq\)185.] 2. One who rebuts.

rebutting evidence. See rebuttal evidence under evidence.

recall, n. (1902) 1. Removal of a public official from office by popular vote. [Cases: Officers and Public Employees C\(\geq\)70.7.] 2. A manufacturer's request to consumers for the return of defective products for repair or replacement. [Cases: Insurance C\(\geq\)2278(24); Products Liability C\(\geq\)144.] 3. Revocation of a judgment for factual or legal reasons. — recall, vb.

recall election. See election (3). recall exclusion. See sistership exclusion under exclusion (3).

recall of mandate. The extraordinary action by an appellate court of withdrawing the order it issued to the trial court upon deciding an appeal, usu. after the deadline has passed for the losing party to seek a rehearing. • Because this action can interfere with trial-court proceedings on remand, and also because it clouds the waters that repose (the finality of a judgment) is meant to clear, courts are reluctant to use the power. But they will use it to correct clerical errors or to remedy a fraud on the court during the appeal. It has also been used when the original mandate would result in a grave injustice. See mandate (1). [Cases: Appeal and Error 1218; Criminal Law 1193; Federal Courts 956.1] recant (ri-kant), vb. (16c) 1. To withdraw or renounce (prior statements or testimony) formally or publicly <the prosecution hoped the eyewitness wouldn't recant her corroborating testimony on the stand>. 2. To withdraw or renounce prior statements or testimony formally or publicly <under grueling cross-examination, the witness recanted>. — recantation, n.

leveraged recapitalization. Recapitalization whereby the corporation substitutes debt for equity in the capital structure, usu. to make the corporation less attractive as a target for a hostile takeover. — Also termed leveraging up.

recaption. (17c) 1. At common law, lawful seizure of another's property for a second time to secure the performance of a duty; a second distress. See distress. 2. Peaceful retaking, without legal process, of one's own property that has been wrongfully taken.

recapture, n. 1. The act or an instance of retaking or reacquiring; recovery. 2. The lawful taking by the government of earnings or profits exceeding a specified amount; esp., the government's recovery of a tax benefit (such as a deduction or credit) by taxing income or property that no longer qualifies for the benefit. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3089, 3138, 3531.] 3. Int'l law. The retaking of a prize or booty so that the property is legally restored to its original owner. See postliminium (2). — recapture, vb.

"Upon recapture from pirates, the property is to be restored to the owner, on the allowance of a reasonable compensation to the retaker, in the nature of salvage; for it is a principle of the law of nations, that a capture by pirates does not, like a capture by an enemy in solemn war, change the title, or devest the original owner of his right to the property, and it does not require the doctrine of postliminy to restore it." I James Kent, Commentaries on American Law *107-08 (George Comstock ed., 11th ed. 1866).

recapture rule. Patents. The doctrine that a patentee cannot regain, in a reissue patent, a claim that the patentee previously abandoned in order to gain allowance of the patent application. • The rule provides a defense in an infringement action by allowing the defendant to attack the validity of a reissue patent. An attempt to recapture a strategically abandoned claim cannot meet the statutory requirement that the error be made without deceptive intent. 35 USCA § 251. [Cases: Patents 141(6).] recede, vb. (Of a house in a bicameral legislature) to withdraw from an amendment in which the other house has not concurred. See concur (3). [Cases: Statutes 16, 23.]

"A vote to recede from amendments constitutes a final passage of the bill without the amendments from which the house has receded, since both houses have then agreed to the bill in its form prior to amendment," National Conference of State Legislatures, Mason's Manual of Legislative Procedure § 767, at 555 (2000).

receding market. See bear market under market.

receipt, n. (14c) 1. The act of receiving something <my receipt of the document was delayed by two days>. 2. A written acknowledgment that something has been received <keep the receipt for the gift>. — accountable receipt. A receipt in which a person admits that goods or money were delivered to the person and that the person is obliged to deliver all or part of the goods or money to a third person.

interim receipt. The written acknowledgment of a premium paid on an insurance policy that is pending final approval. [Cases: Insurance 1746.]

warehouse receipt. See warehouse receipt.

3. (usu. pl.) Something received; income <post the daily receipts in the ledger>.

receipt, vb. (18c) 1. To acknowledge in writing the receipt of (something, esp. money) <the bill must be receipted>. 2. To give a receipt for (something, esp. money) <the bookkeeper receipted the payments>.

receipt clause. In a conveyancing document, a clause that acts as a receipt for the consideration given. • This clause typically appears to avoid the necessity of a separate receipt.

receiver (ri-se-tar). (1814) A person who receives from a sheriff another's property seized in garnishment and agrees to return the property upon demand or execution. [Cases: Execution 150.] receivable, adj. 1. Capable of being admitted or accepted as receivable evidence. 2. Awaiting receipt of payment <accounts receivable>. 3. Subject to a call for payment .

receivable, n. (14c) An amount owed, esp. by a business’s customer. See account receivable under ACCOUNT.

unrealized receivable. (1957) An amount earned but not yet received. • Unrealized receivables have no income-tax basis for cash-basis taxpayers. [Cases: Internal Revenue C—3931, 3935.]

receiver. (18c) 1. A disinterested person appointed by a court, or by a corporation or other person, for the protection or collection of property that is the subject of diverse claims (for example, because it belongs to a bankrupt or is otherwise being litigated). Cf. LIQUIDATION. [Cases: Corporations C—552, 621(5); Receivers C—1, 81.]

ancillary receiver. One who is appointed as a receiver in a particular area to help a foreign receiver collect the assets of an insolvent corporation or other entity. [Cases: Corporations C—868.]

judgment receiver. A receiver who collects or diverts funds from a judgment debtor to the creditor. • A judgment receiver is usu. appointed when it is difficult to enforce a judgment in any other manner. — Also termed receiver in aid of execution. [Cases: Execution C—404.]

local receiver. Conflict of laws. A receiver appointed in the state where property is located or where an act is done. [Cases: Receivers C—208.]

principal receiver. A receiver who is primarily responsible for the receivership estate. • A principal receiver may ordinarily (1) act outside the state of appointment, (2) sue in a foreign court, (3) exercise broad powers of assignment, and (4) handle all distributions. — Also termed primary receiver; general receiver; original receiver. [Cases: Receivers C—205–210.]

receiver in aid of execution. See judgment receiver.

statutory receiver. A receiver whose appointment is provided for in a statute.

2. Hist. An officer in the royal household who collected revenues and disbursed them in a lump sum to the treasurer, and who also acted as an attorney with the power to appear in any court in England. • The monarch and his or her consort each had a receiver, thus the full title was King’s Receiver or Queen’s Receiver.

receiver general. A public official in charge of a government’s receipts and treasury. Pl. receivers general.

receiver’s certificate. Bankruptcy. An instrument issued by a receiver as evidence that the holder is entitled to receive payment from funds controlled by the bankruptcy court. [Cases: Bankruptcy C—3025.1, 3035.1.]

receivership. (15c) 1. The state or condition of being in the control of a receiver. [Cases: Corporations C—552, 621(3); Receivers C—1.1] 2. The position or function of being a receiver appointed by a court or under a statute. 3. A proceeding in which a court appoints a receiver.

ancillary receivership. A receivership in which a further administrative proceeding is appointed in another state to help the principal receivership. [Cases: Corporations C—686; Receivers C—206.]

dry receivership. A receivership in which there is no equity available to pay general creditors. [Cases: Receivers C—151, 163.]

receivership estate. The totality of the interests that the receivers of an association in one or more states are appointed to protect.

receiving, n. See RECEIVING STOLEN PROPERTY.

receiving order. See ORDER (2).

receiving state. See STATE.

receiving stolen property. (1847) The criminal offense of acquiring or controlling property known to have been stolen by another person. • Some jurisdictions require the additional element of wrongful intent. In some jurisdictions it is a felony, but in others it is either a felony or a misdemeanor depending on the value of the property. See Model Penal Code §§ 223.1, 223.6. — Sometimes shortened to receiving. — Also termed receiving stolen goods. See FENCE (1). [Cases: Receiving Stolen Goods C—1.1] receptator (ree-sep-tay-tor or -tort). [Latin fr. receptare “to harbor (a criminal or the proceeds of crime)”] Scots law. 1. A harbore of a felon. 2. A receiver of stolen property.

reception. (1931) The adoption in whole or in part of the law of one jurisdiction by another jurisdiction. • In the legal idiom, it is most common to speak of the reception of Roman law.

"In many parts of Europe monarchs encouraged a 'reception' of Roman law at the expense of medieval customary systems. On the continent—in France, Holland, and Germany—the results of the reception of Roman law have tended to be permanent; the continental jurist in the twentieth century studies Roman law to grasp the jurisprudence underlying modern codes. And in the British Isles, the law of Scotland now contains so much borrowing from Roman law that there, too the road to legal practice leads through study of the corpus of Roman civil law compiled at Justinian's direction. But a reception of Roman law never occurred in England." Arthur R. Hogue, Origins of the Common Law 242 (1966)."
receptitious (ree-sep-tish-as), adj. Roman law. 1. (Of a dowry) returnable by agreement to the donor upon the dissolution of the marriage. 2. (Of property) retained by the wife and not included in the dowry.

receptus (ri-sep-tus). [Latin “(a person) having been received”) Civil law. An arbitrator. • The term takes its name from the idea that the arbitrator is “received” by the parties to settle their dispute.

recess (ree-ses), n. (17c) 1. A brief break in judicial proceedings <the court granted a fifteen-minute recess so the attorney and plaintiff could confer>. Cf. continuance (3). [Cases: Criminal Law 649; Federal Civil Procedure 1951; Trial 26.] 2. Parliamentary law. A motion that suspends but does not end a meeting, and that usu. provides for resumption of the meeting <the meeting had a 15-minute recess>. • The motion to recess, which merely suspends the meeting, differs from the motion to adjourn, which ends the meeting. Cf. adjourn. [Cases: United States 18.] 3. Parliamentary law. The interval between such a motion’s adoption and the meeting’s reconvening <Congress took a monthlong recess>. — recess (ri-ses), vb.

recess appointment. See appointment.

recession. (1929) A period characterized by a sharp slowdown in economic activity, declining employment, and a decrease in investment and consumer spending. Cf. depression.

recharacterization. A court’s determination that an insider’s loan to an entity in liquidation (such as a corporation or partnership) should be treated as a capital contribution, not as a loan, thereby entitling the insider to only part of the liquidation proceeds payable after all the business’s debts have been discharged. • Factors influencing this determination include the amount of capital initially available, the ability of the entity to obtain loans from outside sources, how long the entity has existed, the treatment of the loan in the entity’s business records, and past treatment of similar transactions made to that entity by an insider. [Cases: Corporations 60.]

Recht (rekt). [German “right”] 1. Law generally. 2. A body of law. 3. A right or claim.

Rechtshheitz (rektz-be-zitz). See possession of a right under possession.

Rechtsphilosophie (rektz-fa-lus-fee). See ethical jurisprudence under jurisprudence.

recidivate (ri-sid-avayt), vb. To return to a habit of criminal behavior; to relapse into crime. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment 1202.]

recidivation. Archaic. See recidivism.

recidivism (ri-sid-aviz-am), n. (1866) A tendency to relapse into a habit of criminal activity or behavior. • Also termed (archaically) recidivation. — recidivous, recidivist, adj.

recidivist (ri-sid-avist), n. (1880) One who has been convicted of multiple criminal offenses, usu. similar in nature; a repeat offender <proponents of prison reform argue that prisons can’t cure the recidivist>. • Also termed habitual offender; habitual criminal; repeater; career criminal; prior and persistent offender. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment 1200.]

reciprocal (ri-sip-ra-kal), adj. (16c) 1. Directed by each toward the other or others; mutual. <reciprocal trusts>. 2. BILATERAL. . 3. Corresponding; equivalent <reciprocal discovery>.

reciprocal contract. See bilateral contract under contract.

reciprocal dealing. A business arrangement in which a buyer having greater economic power than a seller agrees to buy something from the seller only if the seller buys something in return. • Reciprocal dealing usu. violates antitrust laws. — Also termed reciprocal-dealing arrangement. Cf. tying arrangement.

reciprocal discovery. See reverse Jencks material under Jencks material.

reciprocal exchange. An association whose members exchange contracts and pay premiums through an attorney-in-fact for the purpose of insuring themselves and each other. • A reciprocal exchange can consist of individuals, partnerships, trustees, or corporations, but the exchange itself is unincorporated. • Also termed interinsurance exchange; reciprocal insurance exchange; reciprocal insurance exchange. See reciprocal insurance under insurance; exchange (3). [Cases: Insurance 1204.]

reciprocal insurance. See insurance.

reciprocal insurance exchange. See reciprocal exchange.

reciprocal interinsurance exchange. See reciprocal exchange.

reciprocal negative easement. See easement.

reciprocal trade agreement. An agreement between two countries providing for the exchange of goods between them at lower tariffs and better terms than exist between one of the countries and other countries.

reciprocal trust. See trust.

reciprocal will. See mutual will under will.

reciprocify (res-a-pros-i-tee). (18c) 1. Mutual or bilateral action <the Arthurs stopped receiving social invitations from friends because of their lack of reciprocify>. 2. The mutual concession of advantages or privileges for purposes of commercial or diplomatic relations <Texas and Louisiana grant reciprocify to each other’s citizens in qualifying for in-state tuition rates>. • Also termed mutuality of benefits; quid pro quo; equivalence of advantages. [Cases: Colleges and Universities 9,202.]

reciprocity. See mutual will under will.
approach to international intellectual-property law rights. Cf. national treatment; universality.

"It has become common when introducing new categories of rights for them to be granted on the basis of reciprocity. The advantages of reciprocity are twofold. First, reciprocity benefits rights owners by providing incentives for non-conforming countries to change their laws. Secondly, it saves users in one country (A) from paying royalties for foreign authors from countries that do not pay royalties to the authors of country A." Lionel Bently & Brad Sherman, Intellectual Property Law 101 (2001).

recission. See rescission.

recision. See rescission.

recital. (16c) 1. An account or description of some fact or thing <the recital of the events leading up to the accident>. 2. A preliminary statement in a contract or deed explaining the reasons for entering into it or the background of the transaction, or showing the existence of particular facts <the recitals in the settlement agreement should describe the underlying dispute>.

- Traditionally, each recital begins with the word whereas. — Also termed (in sense 2) whereas clause. [Cases: Contracts C=160; Deeds C=34, 35, 96.]

recite, vb.

"The parties may wish to begin the agreement with a statement of their intentions. Often they do this through recitals, which were traditionally introduced by 'whereas,' but can simply state the background without this formality." Scott J. Burnham, Contract Drafting Guidebook § 8.4, at 158 (2d ed. 1992).

introductory recital. (usu. pl.) A recital explaining how and why the existing state of affairs is to be altered.

narrative recital. (usu. pl.) A recital dealing with matters such as how the buyer and the seller came together.

particular recital. A recital that states a fact definitively.

recite, vb. See read on.

reckless, adj. (bef. 12c) Characterized by the creation of a substantial and unjustifiable risk of harm to others and by a conscious (and sometimes deliberate) disregard for or indifference to that risk; heedless; rash.

- Reckless conduct is much more than mere negligence: it is a gross deviation from what a reasonable person would do. See recklessness. Cf. careless; wanton. [Cases: Automobiles C=330; Negligence C=274.]

recklessly, adv.

"Intention cannot exist without foresight, but foresight can exist without intention. For a man may foresee the possible or even probable consequences of his conduct and yet not desire them to occur; none the less if he persists on his course he knowingly runs the risk of bringing about the unwished result. To describe this state of mind the words 'reckless' is the most appropriate. The words 'rash' and 'rashness' have also been used to indicate this same attitude." J.W. Cecil Turner, Kenny's Outlines of Criminal Law 28 (16th ed. 1952).

reckless disregard. See disregard.

reckless driving. (1902) The criminal offense of operating a motor vehicle in a manner that shows conscious indifference to the safety of others. [Cases: Automobiles C=330.] reckless endangerment. (1968) The criminal offense of putting another person at substantial risk of death or serious injury. • This is a statutory, not a common-law, offense. [Cases: Assault and Battery C=48.]

reckless homicide. See homicide.

reckless indifference. See deliberate indifference under indifference.

reckless knowledge. See knowledge.

reckless negligence. See gross negligence under negligence.

recklessness, n. (bef. 12c) 1. Conduct whereby the actor does not desire harmful consequence but nonetheless foresees the possibility and consciously takes the risk.

- Recklessness involves a greater degree of fault than negligence but a lesser degree of fault than intentional wrongdoing. [Cases: Negligence C=274.] 2. The state of mind in which a person does not care about the consequences of his or her actions. — Also termed heedlessness. Cf. wantonness. [Cases: Negligence C=274.]

"The ordinary meaning of the word [recklessness] is a high degree of carelessness. It is the doing of something which in fact involves a grave risk to others, whether the doer realises it or not. The test is therefore objective and not subjective." R.F.V. Heuston, Salmond on the Law of Torts 194 (17th ed. 1977).

"An abiding difficulty in discussing the legal meaning of recklessness is that the term has been given several different shades of meaning by the courts over the years. In the law of manslaughter, 'reckless' was long regarded as the most appropriate adjective to express the degree of negligence needed for a conviction: in this sense, it meant a high degree of carelessness. In the late 1950s the courts adopted a different meaning of recklessness in the context of mens rea, referring to 'D's actual awareness of the risk of the prohibited consequence occurring: we shall call this 'common-law recklessness.' Controversy was introduced into this area in the early 1980s, when the House of Lords purported to broaden the meaning of recklessness so as to include those who failed to give thought to an obvious risk that the consequence would occur .... " Andrew Ashworth, Principles of Criminal Law 154 (1991).

reclamation (rek-l<om-shn), n. (1848) 1. The act or an instance of improving the value of economically useless land by physically changing the land, such as irrigating a desert. [Cases: Waters and Water Courses C=222.]

2. Commercial law. A seller's limited right to retrieve goods delivered to a buyer when the buyer is insolvent. UCC § 2-702(2). See stoppage in transitu. [Cases: Sales C=316.]

3. The act or an instance of obtaining valuable materials from waste materials. — reclaim, vb.

recognition, n. (16c) 1. Confirmation that an act done by another person was authorized. See ratification. [Cases: Principal and Agent C=170(2).] 2. The formal admission that a person, entity, or thing has a particular status; esp. a nation's act in formally acknowledging the existence of another nation or national government.
3. Parliamentary law. The chair's acknowledgment that a member is entitled to the floor <the chair recognizes the delegate from Minnesota>. See PRECEDENCE (4).

“When any member desires to speak or deliver any matter to the house, that person should rise and respectfully address the presiding officer. When the presiding officer recognizes the member by calling the member by name or by indicating recognition, that person is entitled to the floor and may address the body or present a matter of business, but may not yield the floor to any other member.” National Conference of State Legislatures, Mason’s Manual of Legislative Procedure § 91, at 76-77 (2000).

4. Tax. The act or an instance of accounting for a taxpayer's realized gain or loss for the purpose of income-tax reporting. Cf. NONRECOGNITION PROVISION; REALIZATION (2). [Cases: Internal Revenue §3115, §3466.] 5. An employer's acknowledgment that a union has the right to act as a bargaining agent for employees. [Cases: Labor and Employment §1160.] 6. Int’l law. Official action by a country acknowledging, expressly or by implication, the existence of another nation or national government.

VISION; REALIZATION (2). [Cases: Internal Revenue §3115, §3466.]

- recognition (ri-kog-’njunz). (14c) 1. A bond or obligation, made in court, by which a person promises to perform some act or observe some condition, such as to appear when called, to pay a debt, or to keep the peace; specif., an in-court acknowledgment of an obligation in a penal sum, conditioned on the performance or non-performance of a particular act. • Most commonly, a recognizance takes the form of a bail bond that guarantees an unjailed criminal defendant's return for a court date <the defendant was released on his own recognizance>. See RELEASE ON RECOGNIZANCE. [Cases: Bail §54, 63; Recognizances §1-1.]

“Recognizances are aptly described as 'contracts made with the Crown in its judicial capacity.' A recognizance is a writing acknowledged by the party to it before a judge or officer having authority for the purpose, and enrolled in a court of record. It usually takes the form of a promise, with penalties for the breach of it, to keep the peace, to be of good behavior, or to appear at the assizes.” William R. Anson, Principles of the Law of Contract 50-81 (Arthur L. Corbin ed., 3d Am. ed. 1919).

“A recognizance is an acknowledgment of an obligation in court by the recognizor binding him to make a certain payment subject to the condition that on the performance of a specified act the obligation shall be discharged.” 1 Samuel Williston, A Treatise on the Law of Contracts § 6, at 18 (Walter H. E. Jaeger ed., 3d ed. 1957).

personal recognizance. (18c) The release of a defendant in a criminal case in which the court takes the defendant's word that he or she will appear for a scheduled matter or when told to appear. • This type of release dispenses with the necessity of the person's posting money or having a surety sign a bond with the court. [Cases: Bail §40.]

2. See bail bond under BOND (2).

recognized gain. See GAIN (3).

recognized loss. See LOSS.

recognized market. See MARKET.

recognizee (ri-kog-na-zee). (16c) A person in whose favor a recognizance is made; one to whom someone is bound by a recognizance.

recognizor (ri-kog-na-’zor). (16c) A person who is obligated under a recognizance; one who is bound by a recognizance. — Also termed recognitor.

“A recognizance is an acknowledgment upon record of a former debt, and he who so acknowledges such debt to be due is termed the recognizor, and he to whom or for whose benefit he makes such acknowledgment is termed the recognizee.” John Incermaur, Principles of the Common Law 8 (Edmund H. Bennett ed., 1st Am. ed. 1878).

recollection, n. (17c) 1. The action of recalling something to the mind, esp. through conscious effort. 2. Something recalled to the mind. See PAST RECOLLECTION RECORDED; PRESENT RECOLLECTION REFRESHED. — recollect, vb.

recombinant (ri-kom-ba-’nant), adj. Patents. Of, relating to, or describing the introduction of DNA from one living organism into another.

recombinant DNA technology. Patents. The science of mutating organisms by splicing sections of one organism's DNA onto that of another. — Abr. rDNA.

recommit. Parliamentary law. To refer (a motion) back to a committee that has considered it. • The motion is called “recommit” rather than “re-refer” for the sake of euphony. See REFER. Cf. re-refer under REFER. — recommit, n.

recompensable. See COMPENSABLE.

recompensation. Scots law. In an action for debt, a plaintiff's allegation that money owed to a defendant has already been paid and should not be considered as a setoff against an award to the plaintiff.

recompense (rek-am-pents), n. (15c) Repayment, compensation, or retribution for something, esp. an injury or loss. — recompense, vb.

reconciliation (rek-an-sil-ee-ay-shan), n. (14c) 1. Restoration of harmony between persons or things that had been in conflict . 2. Family law. Voluntary resumption, after a separation, of full marital relations between spouses <the court dismissed the divorce petition reconciliation agreement. A contract between spouses who have had marital difficulties but who now wish to save the marital relationship, usu. by specifying certain economic actions that might ameliorate pressures on the marriage. • This type of agreement serves a limited purpose. In fact, many states other than economic behavior, it may be unenforceable. [Cases: Husband and Wife C=30.]

reconciliation statement. An accounting or financial statement in which discrepancies are adjusted. reconciliation agreement. Family law. A contract between spouses who have had marital difficulties but who now wish to save the marital relationship, usu. by specifying certain economic actions that might ameliorate pressures on the marriage. • This type of agreement serves a limited purpose. In fact, many states other than economic behavior, it may be unenforceable. [Cases: Husband and Wife C=30.]

reconsider. vb. To discuss or take up (a matter) again. • Under parliamentary law, a motion to reconsider sets aside a certain vote already taken and restores the motion on which the vote is being reconsidered to its status immediately before the vote occurred. Making a motion to reconsider suspends a vote already taken until the assembly decides whether to reconsider it. — reconsideration, n.

"The motion to reconsider is a distinctively American motion (it was first made the subject of a rule in the U. S. House of Representatives in 1802).

"This motion was unknown to the early British Parliament. When Parliament (the British Congress) passed an act, that act then stood as the judgment of the body until another law or supplementary act was afterward passed explaining or amending the previous act — a slow-moving and time-consuming process in the estimation of American lawmakers.

"Consequently, the American love for celerity invented the motion to reconsider, and cleverly made it a mere procedural or restoratory motion. As a result, the motion to reconsider now makes possible immediate reconsideration of a question, even on the same day." George Demeter, Demeter's Manual of Parliamentary Law and Procedure 154 (1969).

reconsider and enter on the minutes. Parliamentary law. To make a motion to reconsider for the purpose of suspending a vote already taken and bringing it back up at the next meeting. • Also termed reconsider and enter; reconsider and have it entered on the minutes.

reconsignment. (16c) A change in the terms of a consignment while the goods are in transit. See consignment. [Cases: Carriers C=73, 178.] reconstruction. 1. The act or process of rebuilding, recreating, or reorganizing something <an expert in accident reconstruction>. 2. Patents. A rebuilding of a broken, worn-out, or otherwise inoperative patent . Cf. repair doctrine. [Cases: Patents C=255.] 3. (cap.) The process by which the Southern states that had seceded during the Civil War were readmitted into the Union during the years following the war (i.e., from 1865 to 1877). • The 13th, 14th, and 15th Amendments to the U.S. Constitution are a lasting legacy of Reconstruction.

recontinuance. (16c) Hist. 1. Resumption or renewal. 2. The recovery of an incorporeal hereditament that had been wrongfully deprived.

reconversion. Civil law. The act or process of making a counterclaim. See counterclaim. [Cases: Set-off and Counterclaim C=6.]

reconversion. The notional or imaginary process by which an earlier constructive conversion (a change of personal into real property or vice versa) is annulled and the converted property restored to its original character. See equitable conversion under conversion (1). [Cases: Conversion C=22.]

reduction impropriation. See IMPROPRIATION.

reduction in force. See LAYOFF.

reduction to practice. Patents. The embodiment of the concept of an invention, either by physical construction and operation or by filing a patent application with a disclosure adequate to teach a person reasonably skilled in the art how to make and work the invention without undue experimentation. — The date of reduction to practice is critical in determining priority between inventors competing for a patent on the same invention. See INVENTION. [Cases: Patents Cl=90(5).]

actual reduction to practice. The empirical demonstration that an invention performs its intended purpose and is therefore complete for patent purposes; the use of an idea or invention — as by testing it — to establish that the idea or invention will perform its intended purpose. Brunswick Corp. v. U.S., 34 Fed. Cl. 532, 584 (1995).

constructive reduction to practice. The documented demonstration that an invention will perform its intended purpose, contained in a patent application that provides enough detail that a person skilled in the art could make and test the invention; the filing of a patent application for an invention or design. Brunswick Corp. v. U.S., 34 Fed. Cl. 532, 584 (1995). [Cases: Patents Cl=90(5).]

vicarious reduction to practice. A doctrine that treats one party's actual reduction to practice of an invention as the opposing (usu. complaining) party's actual reduction to practice. — In a two-party interference, proof of derivation is usu. sufficient; showing an actual reduction to practice is unnecessary. The doctrine is more important in a three-party interference. [Cases: Patents Cl=90(5).]

reenactment rule. (1941) In statutory construction, the principle that when reenacting a law, the legislature implicitly adopts well-settled judicial or administrative interpretations of the law. [Cases: Statutes Cl= 223.5.]

reentry, n. (15c) 1. The act or an instance of retaking possession of land by someone who formerly held the land and who reserved the right to retake it when the new holder let it go. 2. A landlord's resumption of possession of leased premises upon the tenant's default under the lease. See POWER OF TERMINATION — reenter, vb.

reeve (reev). Hist. 1. A ministerial officer of high rank having local jurisdiction; the chief magistrate of a hundred. — The reeve executed process, kept the peace, and enforced the law by holding court within the hundred. 2. A minor officer serving the Crown at the hundred level; a bailiff or deputy-sheriff. 3. An overseer of a manor, parish, or the like. — Also spelled reve. — Also termed greve.

"All the freeholders, unless relieved by special exemption, 'owed suit' at the hundred-moot, and the reeve of the hundred presided over it. In Anglo-Saxon times, the reeve was an independent official, and the hundred-moot was not a preliminary stage to the shire-moot at all. . . . But after the Conquest the hundred assembly, now called a court as all the others were, lost its importance very quickly. Pleas of land were taken from it, and its criminal jurisdiction limited to one of holding suspects in temporary detention. The reeve of the hundred became the deputy of the sheriff, and the chief purpose of holding the hundred court was to enable the sheriff to hold his tourn and to permit a 'view of frankpledge,' i.e., an inspection of the person who ought to belong to the frankpledge system." Max Radin, Handbook of Anglo-American Legal History 174-75 (1936).

borough reeve. Hist. In England, the head of an unincorporated municipality.

shire-reeve. The reeve of a shire. — The shire-reeve was a forerunner of the sheriff. — Also spelled shire-reve. — Also termed shire gerefa.

reexamination, n. (17c) 1. REDIRECT EXAMINATION <the attorney focused on the defendant's alibi during reexamination>. [Cases: Witnesses Cl= 285.] 2. Patents. A proceeding by the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office to determine whether prior art renders one or more claims of an already-issued patent invalid; specif., an administrative procedure by which a party can seek review of a patent on the basis of prior art by the PTO <the alleged infringer, hoping to avoid liability, sought reexamination of the patent to narrow its scope>. — A reexamination may be sought by anyone, even the patentee or an anonymous informant, at any time during the life of a patent. Only patents and publications may be considered as prior art. 35 USCA §§ 301–05. [Cases: Patents Cl=134, 140.] — reexamine, vb.
ex parte reexamination. A reexamination procedure, created in the early 1980s, that allows a challenger to initiate a review by producing prior art and responding to a patentee’s statements regarding the new prior art, but that excludes the challenger from further participation in the examination process. • Ex parte reexamination does not employ discovery mechanisms and witnesses are not examined. The challenger also has no right to participate in an appeal. See 35 USC § 302–07. Cf. inter partes reexamination. [Cases: Patents (g).] inter partes reexamination. A reexamination procedure, created in 1999, that allows a challenger to initiate a review by producing prior art, to respond to a patentee’s statements regarding the new prior art, to address the patentee’s responses to any office actions, and to request a hearing. • Both parties must serve each other with documents filed in the proceeding, but there is no discovery and witnesses are not examined. Either party may appeal the PTO’s final decision on patentability. Inter partes reexamination is available to patents that issue from original applications that were filed on or after November 29, 1999. See 35 USC §§ 311–318. Cf. ex parte reexamination. [Cases: Patents (g).]

reexamination certificate. Patents. A certificate issued by the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office at the conclusion of a reexamination proceeding, confirming that a patent has been reexamined and the claims have been found to be patentable, confirming that claims determined to be unpatentable have been canceled, or incorporating into the patent any amended or new claims determined to be patentable. 35 USC § 307. [Cases: Patents (g).]

reexchanger, reexamination certificate. A second or new exchange. 2. The act of exporting again something imported. 3. The process of recovering the expenses that resulted from the dishonor of a bill of exchange in a foreign country.

reexecution. (18c) The equitable remedy by which a lost or destroyed deed or other instrument is replaced. • Equity compels the party or parties to execute a new deed or instrument if a claimant properly proves a right under one that has been lost or destroyed. [Cases: Lost Instruments (g).]

reexport, n. 1. The act of exporting again something imported. 2. A good or commodity that is exported again.

reextent. Hist. A second extent made upon complaint that the earlier extent was improper. See extent.

reeffice in bankruptcy. A federal judicial officer who administers bankruptcy proceedings. • Abolished by the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1978, these referees were replaced by bankruptcy judges. — Also termed register in bankruptcy. See bankruptcy judge under judge. [Cases: Bankruptcy (g).]

reference, n. (16c) 1. The act of sending or directing to another for information, service, consideration, or decision; specif., the act of sending a case to a master or referee for information or decision. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure (g).] 2. See general reference (g). 3. Mention or citation to another document or source in another document or source. [Cases: Contracts (g).] 4. Patents. Information — such as that contained in a publication, another patent, or another patent application — that a patent examiner considers to be anticipatory prior art or proof of unpredictability in the art that forms a basis for one or more of an applicant’s claims to be rejected. See citation (g). [Cases: Patents (g).]

reference committee. See resolutions committee under committee.

reference statute. See statute.

referendarius (ref-a-ren-dair-ee-as), n. [Law Latin] Roman law. An officer who received petitions to the emperor and who delivered answers to the petitioners. See apocrisarius.

referendum. (1847) 1. The process of referring a state legislative act, a state constitutional amendment, or an important public issue to the people for final approval by popular vote. [Cases: Constitutional Law \(\lesssim\) 540–574; Statutes \(\lesssim\) 341–367]. 2. A vote taken by this method. 3. Int’l law. An ambassador’s request for instructions on subject matter that the ambassador does not have sufficient power to address. Pl. referen­dums, referenda. Cf. initiative; plebiscite.

referral. (1927) The act or an instance of sending or directing to another for information, service, consideration, or decision <referral of the client to an employment-law specialist> <referral of the question to the board of directors>.

referral sales contract. A dual agreement consisting of an agreement by the consumer to purchase goods or services (usu. at an inflated price) and an agreement by the seller to compensate the consumer for each customer (or potential customer) referred to the seller. — Also termed referral sales agreement. Cf. pyramid scheme. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation \(\lesssim\) 231.]

“...The problem inherent in a referral sales contract is the problem inherent in a chain letter — the success of the arrangement depends on an inexhaustible supply of customers. For example, if each buyer submits 25 names and each of these ‘referrals’ becomes a buyer under a similar agreement, the completion of the seventh round of referrals requires 6.1 trillion persons. ... Both courts and legislatures have acted against referral sales. ... The Uniform Consumer Credit Code prohibits the use of referral sales schemes in which the rebate is conditioned on ‘the occurrence of an event after the time the consumer agrees to buy or lease.’ In other words, a referral scheme keyed to the consumer merely furnishing names is not affected: a referral scheme keyed to the consumer furnishing names of people who actually become customers is prohibited.” David G. Epstein & Steve H. Nickles, Consumer Law in a Nutshell 39 (2d ed. 1981).

refinancing, n. An exchange of an old debt for a new debt, as by negotiating a different interest rate or term or by repaying the existing loan with money acquired from a new loan. — refinanced, vb.

reformation (ref-ar-may-shan), n. (1829) An equitable remedy by which a court will modify a written agreement to reflect the actual intent of the parties, usu. to correct fraud or mutual mistake in the writing, such as an incomplete property description in a deed. • In cases of mutual mistake, the actual intended agreement must usu. be established by clear and convincing evidence. • In cases of fraud, there must be clear evidence of what the agreement would have been but for the fraud. See rectification. [Cases: Reformation of Instruments \(\lesssim\) 1 • — reform, vb.

“The standard explanation of reformation is that the parties had an actual agreement, and that the writing does not reflect that agreement. ... If the parties made a mistake about the premises of their agreement, about some fact in the world outside their word-processing machines, reforma­tion is not a solution. The court cannot reform the contract because it cannot know what the parties would have agreed to but for the mistake.” Douglas Laycock, Modern American Remedies 39 (3d ed. 2002).

refinancing condition. See conditional bequest under bequest.

reformatory, n. (1834) A penal institution in which young offenders, esp. minors, are disciplined and trained or educated. — Also termed reform school. [Cases: Infants \(\lesssim\) 271.]

2. Securities. The complete process of preparing to sell a newly issued security to the public <the security is currently in registration>. [Cases: Securities Regulation C⇒11.10–11.50.] — register, vb.

shelf registration. Registration with the SEC of securities to be sold over time, the purpose being to avoid the delays and market uncertainties of individual registration.

"It is generally contemplated that the entire allotment of securities covered by a registered offering will be made available for purchase on the effective date. This is not always the case, however. For example, insiders, promoters, or underwriters might receive securities directly from the issuer with an intent to resell at a later date. ... [I]t may be desirable to get a debt offering all ready to go but wait for a propitious moment to release it. These and other delayed offerings have led to what is known as shelf registration. In a shelf registration the registration statement is filed but the securities are put on the shelf until the manner and date of the offering are determined." Thomas Lee Hazen, The Law of Securities Regulation § 3.8, at 119 (2d ed. 1994).

registration and community-notification law. See MEGAN’S LAW.

regulation, n. (17c) 1. The act or process of controlling by rule or restriction <the federal regulation of the airline industry>.

- self-regulation. The process by which an identifiable group of people, such as licensed lawyers, govern or direct their own activities by rules; specif., an organization's or industry's control, oversight, or direction of itself according to rules and standards that it establishes. • Self-regulation is often subject to the oversight of various governmental agencies, such as the Securities Exchange Commission and the Commodity Futures Trading Commission.

2. bylaw (1) <the CEO referred to the corporate regulation>. 3. A rule or order, having legal force, usu. issued by an administrative agency <Treasury regulations explain and interpret the Internal Revenue Code>. — Abbr. (usu. cap.) reg. — Also termed (in sense 3) agency regulation; subordinate legislation; delegated legislation. See merit regulation. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure ☞ 381–427.] — regulatory, regulable, adj. — regulate, vb.

proposed regulation. A draft administrative regulation that is circulated among interested parties for comment. — Abbr. prop. reg. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure ☞ 392.]

Regulation A. An SEC regulation that exempts stock offerings of up to $5 million from certain registration requirements. [Cases: Securities Regulation ☞ 18.18.]

Regulation D. An SEC regulation that exempts certain stock offerings (such as those offered by private sale) from registration under the Securities Act of 1933. [Cases: Securities Regulation ☞ 18.11.]

Regulation Fair Disclosure. An October 2000 SEC rule requiring companies to disclose material information to all investors at the same time. • The regulation is intended to prevent some investors from receiving advance information about earnings, mergers and acquisitions, product discoveries, changes in auditors, and any other information that a reasonable investor would consider in making an investment decision. — Often shortened to Regulation FD; Reg. FD.

Regulation FD. See regulation fair disclosure.

Regulation J. A Federal Reserve Board regulation that governs the collection of checks by and the transfer of funds through member banks. [Cases: Banks and Banking ☞ 188.5, 356.]

Regulation Q. A Federal Reserve Board regulation that sets interest-rate ceilings and regulates advertising of interest on savings accounts. • The Banking Act of 1933 is the basis of this regulation, which applies to all commercial banks. [Cases: Banks and Banking ☞ 132, 359.]

Regulation T. A Federal Reserve Board regulation that limits the amount of credit that a securities broker or dealer may extend to a customer, and that sets initial margin requirements and payment rules for securities transactions. • The credit limit and margin rules usu. require the customer to provide between 40 and 60% of the purchase price. [Cases: Securities Regulation ☞ 45.11.]

Regulation U. A Federal Reserve Board regulation that limits the amount of credit that a bank may extend to a customer who buys or carries securities on margin. [Cases: Securities Regulation ☞ 45.26.]

committing other crimes rehabilitation is a traditional theory of criminal punishment, along with deterrence and retribution. Cf. deterrence; retribution (1). [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment C 45.] 2. Evidence. The restoration of a witness's credibility after the witness has been impeached <the inconsistencies were explained away during the prosecution's rehabilitation of the witness>. [Cases: Witnesses C 410-416.] 3. Bankruptcy. The process of reorganizing a debtor's financial affairs — under Chapter 11, 12, or 13 of the Bankruptcy Code — so that the debtor may continue to exist as a financial entity, with creditors satisfying their claims from the debtor's future earnings <the corporation's rehabilitation was successful>. — Also termed debtor rehabilitation. Cf. Liquidation (4). [Cases: Bankruptcy C 3501, 3671, 3701.] — rehabilitative, adj. — rehabilitate, vb.

rehabilitative alimony. See alimony.

rehearing. (17c) A court's second or subsequent hearing of a case, a motion, or an appeal, usu. to consider an alleged error or omission in the court's judgment or opinion <the appellant, dissatisfied with the appellate court's ruling, filed a motion for rehearing>. — Abbr. reh'g. Cf. reargument. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure C 480; Appeal and Error C 829; Criminal Law C 1133; Federal Civil Procedure C 928; Federal Courts C 744; Motions C 39.] reh'g. abbr. rehearing.

reification (ree-a-fi-kay-shun), n. (1846) 1. Mental conversion of an abstract concept into a material thing. 2. Civil procedure. Identification of the disputed thing in a nonpersonal action and attribution of an in-state situs to it for jurisdictional purposes. 3. Commercial law. Embodiment of a right to payment in a writing (such as a negotiable instrument) so that a transfer of the writing also transfers the right. — reify (ree-a-fi or ray-), vb.

rei interventus (ree-i in-tor-ven-tas), n. [Latin "things intervening"] Actions or efforts by one party to a contract with the consent of the other party, so that the one party has made a partial performance and the other cannot repudiate without being in breach.

reimbursement, n. 1. Repayment. 2. Indemnification. — reimburse, vb.

reimbursement alimony. See alimony.

reinscription, n. Civil law. A second or renewed recording of a mortgage or other title document. [Cases: Mortgages C 96.] — reinscribe, vb.

reinstate, vb. To place again in a former state or position; to restore <the judge reinstated the judgment that had been vacated>. — reinstatement, n.

reinsurance. Insurance of all or part of one insurer's risk by a second insurer, who accepts the risk in exchange for a percentage of the original premium. — Also termed reassurance. [Cases: Insurance C 3593.]

"The term 'reinsurance' has been used by courts, attorneys, and textwriters with so little discrimination that much confusion has arisen as to what that term actually connotes. Thus, it has so often been used in connection with transferred risks, assumed risks, consolidations and mergers, excess insurance, and in other connections that it now lacks a clean-cut field of operation. Reinsurance, to an insurance lawyer, means one thing only — the ceding by one insurance company to another of all or a portion of its risks for a stipulated portion of the premium, in which the liability of the reinsurer is solely to the reinsured, which is the ceding company, and in which contract the ceding company retains all contact with the original insured, and handles all matters prior to and subsequent to loss." 13A John Alan Appleman & Jean Appleman, Insurance Law and Practice § 7661, at 479-80 (1976).

"The laying off of risk by means of reinsurance traditionally serves three basic purposes. First, reinsurance can increase the capacity of the insurer to accept risk. The insurer may be enabled to take on larger individual risks, or a large number of smaller risks, or a combination of both. . . . Secondly, reinsurance can promote financial stability by ameliorating the adverse consequences of an unexpected accumulation of losses or of single catastrophic losses, because these will, at least in part, be absorbed by reinsurers. Thirdly, reinsurance can strengthen the solvency of an insurer from the point of view of any regulations under which the insurer must operate which provide for a minimum 'solvency margin,' generally expressed as a ratio of net premium income over capital and free reserves." P.T. O'Neill & J.W. Woloniecki, The Law of Reinsurance in England and Bermuda 4 (1998).

excess reinsurance. Reinsurance in which a reinsurer assumes liability only for an amount of insurance that exceeds a specified sum. See excess insurance under insurance.

facultative reinsurance. Reinsurance of an individual risk at the option (the "faculty") of the reinsurer. [Cases: Insurance C 3593.]

flat reinsurance. Reinsurance (esp. of marine insurance) that cannot be canceled or modified.

treaty reinsurance. Reinsurance under a broad agreement of all risks in a given class as soon as they are insured by the direct insurer. [Cases: Insurance C 3593.]

reinsurance treaty. A contract of reinsurance (usu. long-term) covering different classes or lines of business of the reinsured (such as professional liability, property, etc.) and obligating the reinsurer in advance to accept the cession of covered risks. Rather than receive individual notice of each specific claim covered, the treaty reinsurer will generally receive periodic reports providing basic information on the losses paid. — Also termed treaty of reinsurance. See BORDEREAU. Cf. facultative certificate. [Cases: Insurance C 3593.]

reinsured, n. An insurer that transfers all or part of a risk it underwrites to a reinsurer, usu. along with a percentage of the original premium. — Also termed cedent; cedant. [Cases: Insurance C 3593.]
reinsurer. An insurer that assumes all or part of a risk underwritten by another insurer, usu. in exchange for a percentage of the original premium. [Cases: Insurance ¢-3593.] reinvested dividend. See dividend.

reinvestment. 1. The addition of interest earned on a monetary investment to the principal sum. 2. A second, additional, or repeated investment; esp., the application of dividends or other distributions toward the purchase of additional shares (as of a stock or a mutual fund).

reissuable note. See NOTE (1).

reissue. 1. An abstractor's certificate attesting to the correctness of an abstract. • A reissue is an important precaution when the abstract comprises an original abstract brought down to a certain date and then several later continuations or extensions. [Cases: Abstracts of Title ¢-3593.]

reissue patent. See reissue patent under patent (3).

reissue patent. See patent (3).

"Interdiction, whether voluntary or judicial, can only be recalled or removed by an interlocutor of Court, and it affords a good ground on which to apply for the removal of the restraint imposed by interdiction that the interdicted has become rei suae providus." John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 546-47 (4th ed. 1894).

REIT (reet). abbr. REAL-ESTATE INVESTMENT TRUST.

reject, assume or. See assume or reject.

rejecting, a. A parent's or caregiver's pattern of refusing to acknowledge a child's worth or legitimate needs. Cf. ISOLATING; IGNORING.

rejection. (16c) 1. A refusal to accept a contractual offer. [Cases: Contracts ¢-21.] 2. A refusal to accept tendered goods as contractual performance. • Under the UCC, a buyer's rejection of nonconforming goods must be made within a reasonable time after tender or delivery, and notice of the rejection must be given to the seller. [Cases: Sales ¢-168(4), 179(6).] Cf. REPUDIATION (2); RESCISSION; REVOCATION (1). 3. Parliamentary law. Failure of adoption or ratification. See LOST (3). 4. Patents. A patent examiner's finding in an office action that a claim in an application is unpatentable. Cf. OBJECTION (4); RESTRICTION (4). [Cases: Patents ¢-108.] — reject, vb.

aggregation rejection. Rejection of a patent claim on the ground that it is a list of unrelated elements that, taken together, do not assert a claim. [Cases: Patents ¢-25.]

alternativeness rejection. Rejection of a patent claim on the ground that it seeks a broad monopoly on the invention as disclosed and on other unspecified variations. • For example, a claim using a phrase such as "and similar materials" would probably be too broad to be allowed. [Cases: Patents ¢-124.]

duplicate-claiming rejection. The nonart rejection of a patent claim because it is not substantially different from another claim.

exhausted-combination rejection. See old-combination rejection.

failure-to-disclose-best-mode rejection. Rejection of a patent application on the ground that the inventor has not disclosed the best way to use the invention. • To warrant rejection, the examiner must find deliberate concealment or a description so poorly drafted as to amount to concealment. [Cases: Patents ¢-98.]

final rejection. A patent examiner's finding, in a second or subsequent office action, that a claim in an application is unpatentable on the merits. • A final rejection is madeting the final office action. Despite the misleading name, a final rejection need not end the prosecution. The rejection can be appealed, or the application can be reexamined or continued in another application. A rejection may also be appealed to the Board of Patent Appeals and Interferences. A decision of that Board may be reviewed by the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia or appealed to the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit. 35 USCA §§ 141-45. [Cases: Patents ¢-108.]

formal rejection. Rejection of a patent claim because of an error in format rather than substance. • A formal rejection is actually an objection rather than a rejection, since it requires no substantive change in the claim. — Also termed nonart rejection. [Cases: Patents ¢-104.]

functional rejection. Rejection of a patent claim on the grounds that it broadly claims a function but does not disclose enough structure to account for achieving that function. Cf. FUNCTIONAL LIMITATION. [Cases: Patents ¢-101(8)].

inaccuracy rejection. Rejection of a patent claim on the ground that it is not consistent with the description.

incompleteness rejection. Rejection of a patent application on the ground that an element of the device or a step in the process has been left out.

interference-estoppel rejection. Rejection of a patent claim on the ground that the applicant failed to bring the claim into a previous interference contest where its priority could have been determined. [Cases: Patents ¢-112.4.]

judicially-created-double-patenting rejection. Rejection of a patent application on the ground that the invention is an obvious variation of another patented invention by the same inventor. — Also termed obviousness-type double-patenting rejection. [Cases: Patents ¢-120.]

lack-of-antecedent-basis rejection. Rejection of a patent application on the ground that a reference either in the specification or in the claim is missing.

lack-of-enablement rejection. See nonenablement rejection. lack-of-utility rejection. Rejection of a patent claim on the ground that the invention is inoperative, frivolous, fraudulent, or against the public interest. • The classic examples are perpetual-motion machines (inoperative), cures for the common cold (frivolous because believed impossible, and also probably fraudulent), and gambling devices (formerly seen as against the public interest). [Cases: Patents ◄ 46.]

new-matter rejection. Rejection of a patent claim on the ground that an amendment contains new matter. [Cases: Patents ◄ 109.]

nonart rejection. See formal rejection.

nonenablement rejection. Rejection of a patent application claim on the ground that its specification does not teach enough to enable a person skilled in the art to make and use the invention. • Also termed lack-of-enablement rejection. [Cases: Patents ◄ 99.]

obviously-type double-patenting rejection. See judicially created double-patenting rejection.

old-combination rejection. Rejection of a patent claim on the ground that, despite the fact that one or more elements perform in a different way, all the elements perform the same function as a previously patented invention. • The improved element may be patentable, but the combination may not be. • Also termed exhausted-combination rejection. [Cases: Patents ◄ 26.1.]

proximity rejection. Rejection of a patent application on the ground that the language is so wordy and tedious that it tends more to hide than to disclose the invention.

rejection on issues of interference. Rejection of a patent claim on the ground that the applicant has lost a final judgment of priority regarding the claim in an interference contest. [Cases: Patents ◄ 112.4.]

same-invention double-patenting rejection. See statutory double-patenting rejection.

Section 101 rejection. Rejection of a patent application on the ground that it is based on nonstatutory subject matter. 35 USCA § 101.

Section 102 rejection. Rejection of a patent application for lack of novelty. 35 USCA § 102. [Cases: Patents ◄ 37.]

Section 103 rejection. Rejection of a patent application for obviousness. 35 USCA § 103. [Cases: Patents ◄ 16.1.]

Section 112 rejection. See vague-and-indefinite rejection.

shotgun rejection. Slang. Denial of all or almost all claims in a patent application by the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office, esp. in the first office action.

statutory double-patenting rejection. Rejection of a patent application on the ground that the invention is the same subject matter as an already-patented invention by the same inventor. • This rejection is based on 35 USCA § 101. • Also termed same-invention double-patenting rejection. [Cases: Patents ◄ 120.]

undue-breadth rejection. Rejection of a patent claim on the ground that it seeks a patent monopoly on more than the invention. • For instance, a functional claim is too broad if it purports to include every other possible way of accomplishing that function. A claim on a chemical is more likely to be rejected for undue breadth than a claim on a machine, because future discoveries are less predictable. [Cases: Patents ◄ 124.]

undue-multiplicity-of-claims rejection. Rejection of a patent application on the ground that it makes an unreasonable number of claims. See aggregation of claims. [Cases: Patents ◄ 124.]

vague-and-indefinite rejection. Rejection of a patent claim on the ground that a person of ordinary skill in the art could not clearly understand it. • For example, terms used in more than one sense could make the meaning unclear. • Also termed Section 112 rejection. [Cases: Patents ◄ 101.6.]

rejoinder, n. (15c) Common-law pleading. The defendant’s answer to the plaintiff’s reply (or replication). [Cases: Pleading ◄ 183.] • Also called rejoinder, vb.

related good. Trademarks. A good that infringes a trademark because it appears to come from the same source as the marked good, despite not competing with the marked good. • For example, a cutting tool named “McKnife” might infringe the “McDonald’s” trademark as a related good.

related proceeding. Bankruptcy. A proceeding that involves a claim that will affect the administration of the debtor’s estate (such as a tort action between the debtor and a third party), but that does not arise under bankruptcy law and could be adjudicated in a state court. • A related proceeding must be adjudicated in a federal district court unless the parties consent to bankruptcy-court jurisdiction or unless the district court refers the matter to the bankruptcy court or to state court. • Also termed noncore proceeding. Cf. core proceeding (1). [Cases: Bankruptcy ◄ 2043–2063.]

relation back, n. (18c) 1. The doctrine that an act done at a later time is, under certain circumstances, treated as though it occurred at an earlier time. • In federal civil procedure, an amended pleading may relate back, for purposes of the statute of limitations, to the time when the original pleading was filed. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(c). [Cases: Limitation of Actions ◄ 127.] 2. A judicial application of that doctrine. • Also called doctrine of relation back. Cf. nunc pro tunc. • Also called relate back, vb.

relationship. The nature of the association between two or more people; esp., a legally recognized association that makes a difference in the participants’ legal rights and duties of care.
attorney–client relationship. The formal legal representation of a person by a lawyer. • An attorney–client relationship may be found, for disciplinary purposes, without any formal agreement. [Cases: Attorney and Client \(\sim 64\).]

confidential relationship. 1. See fiduciary relation­ship. 2. Trade secrets. A relationship in which one person has a duty to the other not to disclose proprietary information. • A confidential relationship can be expressly established, as by the terms of an employment contract. It can also be implied when one person knows or should know that the information is confidential, and the other person reasonably believes that the first person has consented to keep the information confidential. A confidential relationship might be implied, for instance, between two people negotiating the sale of a business. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation \(\sim 418\); Labor and Employment \(\sim 304\).]

doctor–patient relationship. The association between a medical provider and one who is being diagnosed or treated. • The relationship imposes a duty on the doctor to ensure that the patient gives informed consent for treatment. [Cases: Health \(\sim 576, 615\).]

employer–employee relationship. The association between a person employed to perform services in the affairs of another, who in turn has the right to control the person's physical conduct in the course of that service. • At common law, the relationship was termed "master-servant." That term is still used often, but "employer–employee" dominates in modern legal usage. [Cases: Labor and Employment \(\sim 23\).]

fiducial relationship. See trust relationship.

fiduciary relationship. (1846) A relationship in which one person is under a duty to act for the benefit of another on matters within the scope of the relationship. • Fiduciary relationships -- such as trustee–beneficiary, guardian–ward, principal–agent, and attorney–client -- require an unusually high degree of care. Fiduciary relationships usu. arise in one of four situations: (1) when one person places trust in the faithful integrity of another, who as a result gains superiority or influence over the first, (2) when one person assumes control and responsibility over another, (3) when one person has a duty to act for or give advice to another on matters falling within the scope of the relationship, or (4) when there is a specific relationship that has traditionally been recognized as involving fiduciary duties, as with a lawyer and a client or a stockbroker and a customer. — Also termed fiduciary relation; confidential relationship. Cf. special relationship. [Cases: Fraud \(\sim 7\).]

master–servant relationship. The association between one in authority and a subordinate, esp. between an employer and an employee. • At common law, this term also designated the husband–wife relationship for purposes of analyzing loss of consortium, but that usage is now obsolete. — Also termed employee–employer relationship. See master and servant. [Cases: Labor and Employment \(\sim 23\).]

parent–child relationship. The association between an adult and a minor in the adult's care, esp. an offspring or an adoptee. • The relationship imposes a high duty of care on the adult, including the duties to support, to rescue, to supervise and control, and to educate. [Cases: Parent and Child \(\sim 1\).]

professional relationship. An association that involves one person's reliance on the other person's specialized training. • Examples include one's relationship with a lawyer, doctor, insurer, banker, and the like.

special relationship. A nonfiduciary relationship having an element of trust, arising esp. when one person trusts another to exercise a reasonable degree of care and the other knows or ought to know about the reliance. Cf. fiduciary relationship. [Cases: Negligence \(\sim 214, 220\).]

trust relationship. An association based on one person's reliance on the other person's specialized training. — Also termed fiduciary relationship. [Cases: Fraud \(\sim 7\).]

relationship rape. See RAPE.

relative, n. (14c) A person connected with another by blood or affinity; a person who is kin with another. — Also termed relation; kinsman. Cf. next of kin (1).

blood relative. (1863) One who shares an ancestor with another.

collateral relative. (18c) A relative who is not in the direct line of descent, such as a cousin. [Cases: Descent and Distribution \(\sim 32–41\).]

relative by affinity. (1821) A person who is related solely as the result of a marriage and not by blood or adoption. • A person is a relative by affinity (1) to any blood or adopted relative of his or her spouse, and (2) to any spouse of his or her blood and adopted relatives. Based on the theory that marriage makes two people one, the relatives of each spouse become the other spouse's relatives by affinity. See AFFINITY. [Cases: Descent and Distribution \(\sim 21\); Wills \(\sim 502\).]

relative of the half blood. A collateral relative who shares one common ancestor. • A half brother, for example, is a relative of the half blood. See half blood under BLOOD. [Cases: Descent and Distribution \(\sim 35\); Wills \(\sim 506(2)\).]

relative confession. See CONFESSION.

relative-convenience doctrine. The principle that an injunction or other equitable relief may be denied if granting it would cause one party great inconvenience but denying it would cause the other party little or no inconvenience. [Cases: Injunction \(\sim 12, 23, 138.15\).]

relative fact. See FACT.

relative nullity. See NULLITY.

relative power. See power (5). relative-responsibility statute. A law requiring adult children to support or provide basic necessities for their indigent elderly parents. [Cases: Parent and Child C= 4.]

relator. (17c) 1. The real party in interest whose name a state or an attorney general brings a lawsuit. See EX REL. [Cases: Attorney General C= 9.] 2. The applicant for a writ, esp. a writ of mandamus, prohibition, or quo warranto. [Cases: Mandamus C= 144; Prohibition C= 19; Quo Warranto C= 30.] 3. A person who furnishes information on which a civil or criminal case is based; an informer.

relaxatio (ree-lak-say-she-oh). [Law Latin] Hist. An instrument by which one relinquishes a right or claim to another; a release.

release, n. (14c) 1. Liberation from an obligation, duty, or demand; the act of giving up a right or claim to the person against whom it could have been enforced [the employee asked for a release from the noncompete agreement]. — Also termed discharge; surrender. 2. The relinquishment or concession of a right, title, or claim [Benson's effective release of the claim against Thompson's estate precluded his filing a lawsuit]. [Cases: Release C= 1.] 3. A written discharge, acquittance, or receipt; specif., a writing — either under seal or supported by sufficient consideration — stating that one or more of the worker's contractual or compensatory rights are discharged [Jones signed the release before accepting the cash from Hawkins]. • Beneficiaries of an estate are routinely required to sign a release discharging the estate from further liability before the executor or administrator distributes the property. 4. A written authorization or permission for publication [the newspaper obtained a release from the witness before printing his picture on the front page]. 5. The act of conveying an estate or right to another, or of legally disposing of it [the release of the easement on February 14]. 6. A deed or document effecting a conveyance [the legal description in the release was defective]. See deed of release under DEED. [Cases: Deeds C= 23.] 7. The action of freeing or the fact of being freed from restraint or confinement [he became a model citizen after his release from prison]. 8. A document giving formal discharge from custody [after the sheriff signed the release, the prisoner was free to go]. — release, vb.

conditional release. (18c) 1. A discharge from an obligation based on some condition, the failure of which defeats the release. 2. An early discharge of a prison inmate, who is then subject to the rules and regulations of parole. [Cases: Prisons C= 248.]

marginal release. Property. An entry made in the margin of a property record by the recorder of deeds to show that a claim against the property has been satisfied.

mutual release. A simultaneous exchange of releases of legal claims held by two or more parties against each other. [Cases: Prisons C= 14.]

partial release. (1837) A release of a portion of a creditor's claims against property; esp., a mortgagee's release of specified parcels covered by a blanket mortgage. [Cases: Mortgages C= 310.]

Pierringer release. A release that allows a defendant in a negligence suit to settle with the plaintiff for a share of the damages and insulates the settling defendant against contribution claims by nonsettling defendants. • This type of release was first described in Pierringer v. Hoger, 124 N.W.2d 106, 110–11 (Wis. 1963). It is used in some jurisdictions that do not have contribution statutes. — Also spelled (incorrectly) Perringer release. [Cases: Release C= 29(4).]

study release. (1970) A program that allows a prisoner to be released for a few hours at a time to attend classes at a nearby college or technical institute. — Also termed study furlough. [Cases: Convicts C= 2.]

unconditional release. (1871) The final discharge of a prison inmate from custody. [Cases: Release C= 14.]

9. Environmental law. The injection of contaminants or pollutants into the environment as a side effect of operations such as manufacturing, mining, or farming.

release clause. Real estate. 1. A blanket-mortgage provision that enables the mortgagee to obtain a release from the mortgage of a specific portion of the property upon paying a specific (usu. more than pro rata) portion of the loan. • Mortgagees commonly include a clause that disallows a partial release if the mortgagee is in default on any part of the mortgage. [Cases: Mortgages C= 310.] 2. A purchase-agreement provision that allows a seller who has accepted an offer containing a contingency to continue to market the property and accept other offers. • If the seller accepts another buyer's offer, the original buyer typically has a specified time (such as 72 hours) to waive the contingency (such as the sale of the buyer's present house) or to release the seller from the agreement. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser C= 79.] release deed. See DEED.

releasee. 1. One who is released, either physically or by contractual discharge. [Cases: Release C= 26.] 2. One to whom an estate is released.

release of mortgage. A written document that discharges a mortgage upon full payment by the borrower and that is publicly recorded to show that the borrower has full equity in the property. [Cases: Mortgages C= 309, 314.]

release on recognizance. (1913) The pretrial release of an arrested person who promises, usu. in writing but without supplying a surety or posting bond, to appear for trial at a later date. — Abbr. ROR. — Also termed release on own recognizance. See RECOGNIZANCE. [Cases: Bail C= 40.]
release to uses. (1830) Conveyance of property, by deed of release, by one party to another for the benefit of the grantor or a third party. See deed of release under DEED; STATUTE OF USES; USE (4). [Cases: Deeds ⇔ 23.]

releasor. (17c) One who releases property or a claim to another. — Also spelled releaser. [Cases: Release ⇔ 1.]

relegatio (rel-a-gay-shay-oh), n. [fr. Latin relegare “to send away”] Roman law. Temporary or permanent banishment of a condemned criminal from Rome and the criminal’s native province, without loss of citizenship or forfeiture of all the criminal’s property. Cf. DEPORTATIO.

relegation, n. (16c) 1. Banishment or exile, esp. a temporary one. 2. Assignment or delegation. — relegate, vb.

relevance. The fact, quality, or state of being relevant; relation or pertinence to the issue at hand. — Also termed relevancy. [Cases: Criminal Law ⇔ 338; Evidence ⇔ 99.]

relevancy. See relevance.

relevant, adj. (16c) Logically connected and tending to prove or disprove a matter in issue; having appreciable probative value — that is, rationally tending to persuade people of the probability or possibility of some alleged fact. Cf. MATERIAL (2), (3). [Cases: Criminal Law ⇔ 338; Evidence ⇔ 99.]

“The word ‘relevant’ means that any two facts to which it is applied are so related to each other that according to the common course of events one either taken by itself or in connection with other facts proves or renders probable the past, present, or future existence or non-existence of the other.” James Fitzjames Stephen, A Digest of the Law of Evidence 2 (4th ed. 1881).

relevant art. See ART.

relevant evidence. See EVIDENCE.

relevant market. See MARKET.

reliance, n. (17c) Dependence or trust by a person, esp. when combined with action based on that dependence or trust. — rely, vb.

detrimental reliance. (1941) Reliance by one party on the acts or representations of another, causing a worsening of the first party’s position. • Detrimental reliance may serve as a substitute for consideration and thus make a promise enforceable as a contract. See promissory estoppel under ESTOPPEL. [Cases: Estoppel ⇔ 55, 85, 87.]

reliance damages. See DAMAGES.

reliance interest. See INTEREST (2).

reliance-loss damages. See DAMAGES.

reliance materials. See EXPERT-RELIANCE MATERIALS.

relictia verificatione (ri-lik-ta ver-a-fi-kay-shay-oh-nee). [Latin “his pleading being abandoned”] Hist. A confession of judgment accompanied by a withdrawal of the plea. See COGNOVIT ACTIONEM.

reliation (ri-li-shun). (17c) 1. A process by which a river or stream shifts its location, causing the recession of water from its bank. [Cases: Navigable Waters ⇔ 44; Waters and Water Courses ⇔ 93. 2. The alteration of a boundary line because of the gradual removal of land by a river or stream. See ACCRETION; DERELICITION (2). [Cases: Navigable Waters ⇔ 44; Waters and Water Courses ⇔ 93.]

reliance. (14c) 1. A payment made by an heir of a feudal tenant to the feudal lord for the privilege of succeeding to the ancestor’s tenancy.

“A mesne lord could, upon the death of his tenant, accept the tenant’s heir as tenant; but he was not required to do so. When he did accept his deceased tenant’s heir as tenant, it was typically because the heir had paid the mesne lord a substantial sum (known as a relief) for the re-grant of the tenancy.” Thomas F. Bergin & Paul C. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 8 (2d ed. 1984).

2. Aid or assistance given to those in need, esp., financial aid provided by the state. [Cases: Social Security and Public Welfare ⇔ 4.] 3. The redress or benefit, esp. equitable in nature (such as an injunction or specific performance), that a party asks of a court. — Also termed remedy. Cf. REMEDY.

affirmative relief. (1842) The relief sought by a defendant by raising a counterclaim or cross-claim that could have been maintained independently of the plaintiff’s action.

alternative relief. (1851) Judicial relief that is mutually exclusive with another form of judicial relief. • In pleading, a party may request alternative relief, as by asking for both specific performance and damages that would be averted by specific performance. Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a). Cf. ELECTION OF REMEDIES. [Cases: Specific Performance ⇔ 127.]

coercive relief. (1886) Judicial relief, either legal or equitable, in the form of a personal command to the defendant that is enforceable by physical restraint.

declaratory relief. A unilateral request to a court to determine the legal status or ownership of a thing. [Cases: Declaratory Judgment ⇔ 385.]

extraordinary relief. Judicial relief that exceeds what is typically or customarily granted but is warranted by the unique or extreme circumstances of a situation. • The types of extraordinary relief most frequently sought are injunctions and extraordinary writs, esp. mandamus. See INJUNCTION; MANDAMUS. Cf. extraor­dinary writ under WRIT. [Cases: Courts ⇔ 207.]
interim relief. (1886) Relief that is granted on a preliminary basis before an order finally disposing of a request for relief.

therapeutic relief. (1889) The relief, esp. in a settlement, that requires the defendant to take remedial measures as opposed to paying damages. • An example is a defendant-corporation (in an employment-discrimination suit) that agrees to undergo sensitivity training. — Often shortened to therapeutics.

religion. A system of faith and worship usu. involving belief in a supreme being and usu. containing a moral or ethical code; esp., such a system recognized and practiced by a particular church, sect, or denomination. • In construing the protections under the Establishment Clause and the Free Exercise Clause, courts have interpreted the term religion quite broadly to include a wide variety of theistic and nontheistic beliefs. [Cases: Religious Societies <== 1.] state religion. A religion promoted, taught, or enforced by a government’s acts to the exclusion of other religions.

religion, freedom of. See freedom of religion.

Religion Clause. In the Bill of Rights, the provision stating that “Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof.” U.S. Const. amend. I. • Some writers use the plural form, “Religion Clauses,” to mean both the Establishment Clause and the Free Exercise Clause, thus emphasizing the asserted common purpose of the two provisions. [Cases: Constitutional Law <== 1290-1428.]

religious-affinity fraud. See fraud.

religious corporation. See corporation.

religious-exemption statute. See faith-healing exemption.

religious liberty. See liberty.

Religious Test Clause. The clause of the U.S. Constitution that prohibits the use of a religious test as a qualification to serve in any office or public trust. U.S. Const. art. VI, par. 3, cl. 2. — Also termed No Religious Test Clause.

relinquishment, n. (15c) The abandonment of a right or thing. — relinquish, vb.

reliqua (rel- a-kwa). [Latin] Civil law. The remainder of a debt after balancing or liquidating an account; money left unpaid.

relitigate, vb. (1826) To litigate (a case or matter) again or anew <relitigate the issue in federal court>. — relitigation, n.

relocation, n. Removal and establishment of someone or something in a new place. 2. Mining law. Appropriation of a new tract of land for a mining claim, as by an owner who wishes to change the boundaries of the original tract or by a stranger who wishes to claim an abandoned or forfeited tract. [Cases: Mines and Minerals <== 26.] 3. Civil law: recondicion (f).

rem. See in rem.

remainder. (15c) Property. 1. A future interest arising in a third person — that is, someone other than the estate's creator, its initial holder, or the heirs of either — who is intended to take after the natural termination of the preeding estate. • For example, if a grant is “to A for life, and then to B,” B’s future interest is a remainder. If there is only one preceding estate and the remainder vests on that estate’s expiration, the remainder is also termed an executed estate. — Also termed remainder estate; estate in remainder. Cf. executory interest; reversion; possibility of reverter. [Cases: Remainders <== 1.]

"Whether a remainder is vested or contingent depends upon the language employed. If the conditional element is incorporated into the description of, or the gift to the remainder-man, then the remainder is contingent; but if, after words giving a vested interest, a clause is added divesting it, the remainder is vested. Thus, on a devise to A for life, remainder to his children, but if any child dies in the lifetime of A his share to go to those who survive, the share of each child is vested, subject to be divested by his death. But on a devise to A for life, remainder to each of his children as survive him, the remainder is contingent." John Chipman Gray, The Rule Against Perpetuities 66 (1886).

"Under the names of ‘remainders’ and ‘executory limitations,’ various classes of interests in land could be created in expectancy, either at the Common Law or under the Statute of Uses. The differences between the two classes were highly technical, and the learning involved in acquiring a knowledge of the rules of determining them is quite out of proportion to the value obtained." Edward Jenks, The Book of English Law 263 (P.B. Fairest ed., 6th ed. 1967).

accelerated remainder. (1901) A remainder that has passed to the remainderman, as when the gift to the preceding beneficiary fails. [Cases: Remainders <== 3.]

alternative remainder. (1830) A remainder in which the disposition of property is to take effect only if another disposition does not take effect.

charitable remainder. (1932) A remainder, usu. from a life estate, that is given to a charity; for example, “to Jane for life, and then to the American Red Cross. [Cases: Internal Revenue <== 4172(3); Taxation <== 3328.]

contingent remainder. (18c) A remainder that is either given to an unascertained person or made subject to a condition precedent. • An example is “to A for life, and then, if B has married before A dies, to B.” — Also termed executory remainder; remainder subject to a condition precedent. [Cases: Remainders <== 1, 4.]

"Unlike a vested remainder, a contingent remainder is either subject to a condition precedent (in addition to the natural expiration of a prior estate), or owned by unascertained persons, or both. But the contingent remainder, like the vested remainder, 'waits patiently' for possession. It is so created that it can become a present estate (if ever it does) immediately upon, and no sooner than, the natural expiration of particular estates that stand in front of it and were created simultaneously with it." Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 73 (2d ed. 1984).
cross-remainder. (18c) A future interest that results when particular estates are given to two or more persons in different parcels of land, or in the same land in undivided shares, and the remainders of all the estates are made to vest in the survivor or survivors. • Two examples of devises giving rise to cross-remainders are (1) “to A and B for life, with the remainder to the survivor and her heirs,” and (2) “Blackacre to A and Whiteacre to B, with the remainder of A's estate to B on A's failure of issue, and the remainder of B's estate to A on B's failure of issue.” • If no tenants or issue survive, the remainder vests in a third party (sometimes known as the ulterior remainderman). Each tenant in common has a reciprocal, or cross, remainder in the share of the others. This type of remainder could not be created by deed unless expressly stated. It could, however, be implied in a will. [Cases: Remainers 1-1.]

“By a will also an estate may pass by mere implication, without any express words to direct its course. . . . So also, where a devise of black-acre to A and of white-acre to B in tail, and if they both die without issue, then to C in fee: here A and B have cross remainders by implication, and on the failure of either's issue, the other or his issue shall take the whole; and C's remainder over shall be postponed till the issue of both shall fail.” 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 381 (1766).

defeasible remainder. (18c) A vested remainder that will be destroyed if a condition subsequent occurs. • An example is “to A for life, and then to B, but if B ever sells liquor on the land, then to C.” — Also termed remainder subject to divestment. [Cases: Remainers 10-10.]

executed remainder. See vested remainder.

executory remainder. See contingent remainder.

indefeasible remainder. (1898) A vested remainder that is not subject to a condition subsequent; specif., a remainder in which the remainderman is certain to acquire a present interest sometime in the future and will be entitled to retain the interest permanently. — Also termed indefeasibly vested remainder; remainder indefeasibly vested.

remainder subject to a condition precedent. See contingent remainder.

remainder subject to divestment. See defeasible remainder.

remainder subject to open. (1838) A vested remainder that is given to a class of persons whose numbers may change over time and that is to be shared equally by each member of the class. • An example is “to A for life, and then equally to all of B's children.” The class must have at least one member, but more can be added over time. — Also termed remainder subject to partial divestment; remainder vested subject to open.

vested remainder. (18c) A remainder that is given to an ascertained person and that is not subject to a condition precedent. • An example is “to A for life, and then to B.” — Also termed executed remainder. [Cases: Remainers 1-1.]

2. The property in a decedent's estate that is not otherwise specifically devised or bequeathed in a will. See residuary estate under estate (3). [Cases: Wills 586.]

remainder bequest. See residuary bequest under bequest.

remainderer. See remainderman.

remainder estate. See remainder (1).

remainder indefeasibly vested. See indefeasible remainder under remainder.

remainder interest. (1815) The property that passes to a beneficiary after the expiration of an intervening income interest. • For example, if a grantor places real estate in trust with income to A for life and remainder to B upon A’s death, then B has a remainder interest.

remainderman. (18c) A person who holds or is entitled to receive a remainder. — Also termed remainderer; remainderperson; remainor. [Cases: Remainers 1-1.]

ulterior remainderman. A third party whose future interest in a property vests only if all the preceding reciprocal interests expire. See cross-remainder under remainder.

remainder subject to partial divestment. See remainder subject to open under remainder.

remainder vested subject to open. See remainder subject to open under remainder.

remainor, n. See remainderman.

remake rights. Copyright. The rights to produce one or more additional movies or screenplays based on what is substantially the same story as is contained in the original movie or screenplay for which the rights have been granted. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 38-38.]

remancipate, vb. To mancipate (a thing or person) again.

remand (ri-mand also ree-mand), n. (18c) 1. The act or an instance of sending something (such as a case, claim, or person) back for further action. 2. An order remanding a case, claim, or person.

fourth-sentence remand. In a claim for social-security benefits, a court's decision affirming, reversing, or modifying the decision of the Commissioner of Social Security. • This type of remand is called a fourth-sentence remand because it is based on the fourth sentence of 42 USCA § 405(g): “The court shall have power to enter, upon the pleadings and transcript of the record, a judgment affirming, modifying, or reversing the decision of the Commissioner of Social Security, with or without remanding the cause for a rehearing.” See Melkonyan v. Sullivan, 501 U.S. 89, 111 S.Ct. 2157 (1991). [Cases: Social Security and Public Welfare 149.] sixth-sentence remand. In a claim for social-security benefits, a court's decision that the claim should be reheard by the Commissioner of Social Security because new evidence is available, which was not available before, that might change the outcome of the proceeding. • This type of remand is called a sixth-sentence remand because it is based on the sixth sentence of 42 USCA § 405(g): "The court may, on motion of the Commissioner of Social Security made for good cause shown before the Commissioner files the Commissioner's answer, remand the case to the Commissioner of Social Security for further action by the Commissioner of Social Security, and it may at any time order additional evidence to be taken before the Commissioner of Social Security, but only upon a showing that there is new evidence which is material and that there is good cause for the failure to incorporate such evidence into the record in a prior proceeding . . . ." See Melkonyan v. Sullivan, 501 U.S. 89, 111 S.Ct. 2157 (1991). [Cases: Social Security and Public Welfare C<<149.] remand (ri-mand), vb. (15c) 1. To send (a case or claim) back to the court or tribunal from which it came for some further action <the appellate court reversed the trial court's opinion and remanded the case for new trial>. Cf. REMOVAL (2). [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure C>>817; Appeal and Error C<<1106, 1178, 1186; Criminal Law C<<1181.5; Federal Courts C<<937, 943; Removal of Cases C<<107(8)) 2. To recommit (an accused person) to custody after a preliminary examination <the magistrate, after denying bail, remanded the defendant to custody>.

remanent pro defectu emptorum (rem-a-nent proh di-fek-tyo emp-tor-am). [Latin] Hist. Remains unsold for want of buyers. • This language was used in a return of a writ of execution when the sheriff could not sell the seized property. [Cases: Execution C<<334.]

remanet (rem-a-net). (16c) 1. A case or proceeding whose hearing has been postponed. 2. A remainder or remnant.

remargining, n. Securities. The act or process of depositing additional cash or collateral with a broker when the equity in a margin account falls to an insufficient level. See margin account under ACCOUNT. — remargin, vb.

remarry, vb. To marry a second or later time, after a divorce or the death of one's spouse. [Cases: Divorce C<<319.]

remediable, adj. (15c) Capable of being remedied, esp. by law <remediable wrongs>. — remediability, n.

remedial, adj. (17c) 1. Affording or providing a remedy; providing the means of obtaining redress . 2. Intended to correct, remove, or lessen a wrong, fault, or defect . 3. Of or relating to a means of enforcing an existing substantive right .

remedial action. 1. Environmental law. An action intended to bring about or restore long-term environmental quality; esp., under CERCLA, a measure intended to permanently alleviate pollution when a hazardous substance has been released or might be released into the environment, so as to prevent or minimize any further release of hazardous substances and thereby minimize the risk to public health or to the environment. 42 USCA § 9601(24); 40 CFR § 300.6. — Also termed remedy. See CERCLA. Cf. REMOVAL ACTION. [Cases: Environmental Law C<=439.] 2. See personal action (1) under ACTION (4).

remedial enforcement. See secondary right under RIGHT.

remedial law. (17c) 1. A law providing a means to enforce rights or redress injuries. 2. A law that corrects or modifies an existing law; esp., a law providing a new or different remedy when the existing remedy, if any, is inadequate. [Cases: Statutes C<=236.]

remedial liability. See LIABILITY.

remedial promise. See promise.

remedial statute. See statute.

remedial trust. See trust.

remediation. Environmental law. The restoration of polluted land, water, or air to its former state, or as nearly so as is practical. [Cases: Environmental Law C<=366, 439.]

remedies, n. The field of law dealing with the means of enforcing rights and redressing wrongs.

remedium extraordinarium (ri-me-dee-am ek-stror-di-nair-ee-am or ek-stror-or-). [Latin] Hist. An extraordinary remedy.

remedy, n. (13c) 1. The means of enforcing a right or preventing or redressing a wrong; legal or equitable relief. — Also termed civil remedy. 2. REMEDIAL ACTION. Cf. RELIEF. — Also termed (in both senses) law of remedy. — remedy, vb.

"A remedy is anything a court can do for a litigant who has been wronged or is about to be wronged. The two most common remedies are judgments that plaintiffs are entitled to collect sums of money from defendants and orders to undo its consequences. The court decides whether the litigant has been wronged and under the substantive law; it conducts its inquiry in accordance with the procedural law. The law of remedies falls somewhere between substance and procedure, distinct from both but overlapping with both." Douglas Laycock, Modern American Remedies 1 (3d ed. 2002).

adequate remedy at law. (18c) A legal remedy (such as an award of damages) that provides sufficient relief to the petitioning party, thus preventing the party from obtaining equitable relief. See irreparable injury rule. [Cases: Equity C<=45; Specific Performance C<=5.]

administrative remedy. (1880) A nonjudicial remedy provided by an administrative agency. • Ordinarily, if an administrative remedy is available, it must be exhausted before a court will hear the case. See EXHAUSTION OF REMEDIES. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure C≈229.]

civil remedy. See REMEDY (1).

concurrent remedy. (18c) One of two or more legal or equitable actions available to redress a wrong.

cumulative remedy. (18c) A remedy available to a party in addition to another remedy that still remains in force.

equitable remedy. (18c) A remedy, usu. a nonmonetary one such as an injunction or specific performance, obtained when available legal remedies, usu. monetary damages, cannot adequately redress the injury. • Historically, an equitable remedy was available only from a court of equity. — Also termed equitable relief. See IRREPARABLE-INJURY RULE. [Cases: Injunction C≈15, 138.9; Specific Performance C≈132.]

extrajudicial remedy. A remedy not obtained from a court, such as repossession. — Also termed self-help remedy.

extraordinary remedy. (16c) A remedy — such as a writ of mandamus or habeas corpus — not available to a party unless necessary to preserve a right that cannot be protected by a standard legal or equitable remedy. • Because there is no agreed list of extraordinary remedies, some standard remedies — such as preliminary and permanent injunctions — are sometimes described as extraordinary. [Cases: Injunction C≈1, 132; Mandamus C≈3(1)–3(2.1).]

judicial remedy. (18c) A remedy granted by a court.

legal remedy. (17c) A remedy historically available in a court of law, as distinguished from a remedy historically available only in equity. • After the merger of law and equity, this distinction remained relevant in some ways, such as in determining the right to jury trial and the choice between alternate remedies. [Cases: Action C≈21.]

provisional remedy. (18c) A temporary remedy awarded before judgment and pending the action’s disposition, such as a temporary restraining order, a preliminary injunction, a prejudgment receivership, or an attachment. • Such a remedy is intended to maintain the status quo by protecting a person’s safety or preserving property. [Cases: Attachment C≈I; Injunction C≈132, 138.3, 150.]

remedy over. (18c) A remedy that arises from a right of indemnification or subrogation. • For example, if a city is liable for injuries caused by a defect in a street, the city has a “remedy over” against the person whose act or negligence caused the defect. [Cases: Indemnity C≈20, 91; Subrogation C≈1.]

self-help remedy. See extrajudicial remedy.

specific remedy. (18c) A remedy whereby the injured party is awarded the very performance that was contractually promised or whereby the injury threatened or caused by a tort is prevented or repaired. • A court awards a specific remedy by ordering a defaulting seller of goods to deliver the specified goods to the buyer (as opposed to paying damages). [Cases: Specific Performance C≈126.]

speedy remedy. (18c) A remedy that, under the circumstances, can be pursued expeditiously before the aggrieved party has incurred substantial detriment. • "Speedy remedy" is an informal expression with no fixed meaning — that is, what is considered speedy in one context may not be considered speedy in other contexts. For example, the Federal Tax Injunction Act requires a "plain, speedy, and efficient remedy" in state courts. But the Act does not require preliminary or injunctive relief — or even interest for delay.

"‘Speedy' is perforce a relative concept, and we must assess the 2-year delay against the usual time for similar litigation.” Rosewell v. LaSalle Nat’l Bank, 450 U.S. 503, 518 (1981).

substitutional remedy. (187) A remedy intended to give the promisee something as a replacement for the promised performance or to give the plaintiff something in lieu of preventing or repairing an injury. • A court awards a substitutional remedy by ordering a defaulting seller of goods to pay the buyer damages (as opposed to delivering the promised goods). — Also termed substitutionary remedy. [Cases: Contracts C≈324(1).]

"With substitutionary remedies, plaintiff suffers harm and receives a sum of money. Specific remedies seek to avoid this exchange. They seek to prevent harm, or undo it, rather than let it happen and compensate for it. . . . [Money damages] are substitutionary both in the sense that the sum of money is substituted for plaintiff’s original entitlement, and in the less obvious sense that the fact finder’s valuation of the loss is substituted for plaintiff’s valuation. Specific relief seeks to avoid both these substitutions, giving plaintiff the very thing he lost if that is what he wants.” Douglas Laycock, The Death of the Irreparable Injury Rule 13 (1991).

remedy, mutuality of. See MUTUALITY OF REMEDY.

réméré (ray-may-ray), n. [French] The right of repurchase.

REMIC (rem-ik or ree-milk), abbr. REAL-ESTATE-MORTGAGE INVESTMENT CONDUIT.

remote, adj. (15c) 1. Far removed or separated in time, space, or relation. 2. Slight. 3. Property. Beyond the 21 years after some life in being by which a devisee must vest. See rule against perpetuities. [Cases: Perpetuities C=4(3).]

remote cause. See cause (1).

remote damages. See speculative damages (1) under DAMAGES.

remoteness of consequence. Torts. The lack of proximate causation with respect to an alleged act by a defendant. • Even if the plaintiff proves every other element for tortious liability, the defendant will not be liable if the harm suffered by the plaintiff is too far removed from the defendant’s conduct. — Also termed remoteness of damage.

remote possibility. See possibility.

remotis testibus (ri-moh-tes-ti-bas), [Latin] Hist. The witnesses being absent.

removal, n. (16c) 1. The transfer or moving of a person or thing from one location, position, or residence to another. 2. The transfer of an action from state to federal court. • In removing a case to federal court, a litigant must timely file the removal papers and must show a valid basis for federal-court jurisdiction. 28 USCA § 1441. Cf. REMAND (1). [Cases: Removal of Cases C=70.]

civil-rights removal. (1964) Removal of a case from state to federal court because a person: (1) has been denied or cannot enforce a civil right in the state court, (2) is being sued for performing an act under color of authority derived from a law providing for equal rights, or (3) is being sued for refusing to perform an act that would be inconsistent with equal rights. [Cases: Removal of Cases C=70.]

removal action. Environmental law. An action, esp. under CERCLA, intended to bring about the short-term abatement and cleanup of pollution (as by removing and disposing of toxic materials). See CERCLA. Cf. REMEDIAL ACTION, [Cases: Environmental Law C=439, 441.]

render, vb. 1. To transmit or deliver <render payment>. 2. (Of a judge) to deliver formally <render a judgment>. 3. (Of a jury) to agree on and report formally <render a verdict>. 4. To pay as due <render an account>.

rendezvous, n. 1. A place designated for meeting or assembly, esp. of troops or ships. 2. The meeting or assembly itself.

rendition, n. (17c) 1. The action of making, delivering, or giving out, such as a legal decision. 2. The return of a fugitive from one state to the state where the fugitive is accused or was convicted of a crime. — Also termed (in sense 2) interstate rendition. Cf. extradition. [Cases: Extradition and Detainers 30.]

erroneous rendition. See EXTRAORDINARY RENDITION.

extraordinary rendition. The transfer, without formal charges, trial, or court approval, of a person suspected of being a terrorist or supporter of a terrorist group to a foreign nation for imprisonment and interrogation on behalf of the transferring nation. • When an innocent person is subjected to extraordinary rendition, it is also termed erroneous extradition. When a transfer is made to a nation notorious for human-right violations, it may be colloquially termed torture by proxy or torture flight.

rendition of judgment. (18c) The judge's oral or written ruling containing the judgment entered. Cf. entry of judgment. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure • 2621; Judgment • 215.]

renounce, vb. (14c) 1. To give up or abandon formally (a right or interest); to disclaim <render an inheritance>. [Cases: Descent and Distribution 72; Wills • 717.] 2. To refuse to follow or obey; to decline to recognize or observe <render one's allegiance>.

rent, n. (13c) 1. Consideration paid, usu. periodically, for the use or occupancy of property (esp. real property). [Cases: Landlord and Tenant • 181.]

celling rent. The maximum rent that can be charged under a rent-control regulation. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant • 200.46.]

crop rent. The portion of a harvest given by a sharecropper to a landlord as rent. • Specific crop names, such as grain rent and potato rent, are commonly used. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant • 215.]

double rent. Twice the amount of rent agreed to; specifically, a penalty of twice the amount of rent against a tenant who holds possession of the leased property after the date provided in the tenant's notice to quit. • The penalty was provided by the Distress for Rent Act, 1737, 11 Geo. 2., ch. 19, § 13. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant • 216.]

dry rent. 1. Rent reserved without a distress clause allowing the rent to be collected by distress; rent that can be collected only by an ordinary legal action. — Formerly also termed rent seck. 2. See rent seck under rent (2).

economic rent. See economic rent.

ground rent. 1. Rent paid by a tenant under a long-term lease for the use of undeveloped land, usu. for the construction of a commercial building. — Also termed redeemable ground rent. See ground lease under lease. 2. A heritable interest, in rental income from land, reserved by a grantor who conveys the land in fee simple. • This type of ground rent is found primarily in Maryland and Pennsylvania. — Also termed (in Scots law) irredeemable ground rent; ground annual. [Cases: Estates in Property • 13.]

guild rent. Hist. Rent payable to the Crown by a guild. — Also spelled guild-rent.

net rent. The rental price for property after payment of expenses, such as repairs, utilities, and taxes. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant • 201, 210.]

rack-rent. See rack-rent.

redeemable ground rent. See ground rent (1).
2. Hist. A compensation or return made periodically by a tenant or occupant for the possession and use of lands or corporeal hereditaments; money, chattels, or services issuing usu. annually out of lands and tenements as payment for use.

peppercorn rent. A nominal rent that is far below the market rate. • The rent may be a mere token payment. Historically in English law, some lease agreements called for a token annual rent payment of a single dried berry of black pepper. See PEPPERCORN.

quit rent. See quit rent.

rent charge. The right to receive an annual sum from the income of land, usu. in perpetuity, and to retake possession if the payments are in arrears. • Also spelled rent-charge; rentcharge. • Also termed fee-farm rent.

“Rent-charge is a rent with liberty to distrain. As when a man seised of land grantheth by a deed poll, or by indenture, a yearly rent going out of the same land to another in fee or fee-tail, or for a term of life, etc. with clause of distress, or maketh a feoffment in fee by indenture, reserving to himself a certain yearly rent, with clause of distress.” Sir Henry Finch, Law, or a Discourse Thereof 155 (1759).

“A rentcharge is an annual or periodic payment charged upon, and payable by the owner of, land. Unlike a rent service, in the case of a rentcharge there is no tenure or privy of estate between the parties. The owner of a rentcharge has no tenurial relationship with the land upon which it is charged. A rentcharge is a species of incorporeal property, but, unlike an easement, is incorporeal property in gross, being enjoyed by the owner personally and not in the capacity of proprietor of land.” Peter Butt, Land Law 330 (2d ed. 1998).

rent seck. Hist. A rent reserved by deed but without any clause of distress. • Also spelled rent-seck; rent-sec. • Also termed dry rent. Pl. rents seck.

“But rents-seck have long ceased to exist, because the inability of their owners to distrain was abolished by the Landlord and Tenant Act, 1730 (4 George II), which enacted that the owners of rents-seck, rents of assize and chief rents should have the same remedy by distress as existed in the case of rent reserved upon lease.” G.C. Cheshire, Modern Law of Real Property 199 (3d ed. 1993).

“At common law, the relationship of lord and tenant carried with it an automatic right of distress for any rent. If no such relationship existed, there was no common law right of distress, and consequently an express clause of distress was frequently inserted when reserving the rent. A rent supported by no right of distress was known as a rent seck (from the Latin siccus, dry, barren). . . . Rent seck ceased to exist many years ago, for by the landlord and Tenant Act 1730, the owners of rents seck were given the same rights of distress as a landlord has against his tenant under a lease, namely, a right to distrain as soon as the rent is in arrear.” Robert E. Megarry & P.V. Baker, A Manual of the Law of Real Property 409 (4th ed. 1969).

rent service. A rent with some corporeal service incident to it (as by fealty) and with a right of distress. • Also written rent-service.

“Rent-service exists only where the relation of landlord and tenant is found, and in such a case rent derives its name from the fact that it was given as a substitute for the services to which the land was originally liable.” G.C. Cheshire, Modern Law of Real Property 198 (3d ed. 1933).

3. Civil law. A contract by which one party conveys to another party a tract of land or other immovable property, to be held by the other party as owner and in perpetuity, in exchange for payment of an annual sum of money or quantity of fruits. • Under Louisiana law, the rent is essentially redeemable even though stipulated to be perpetual. The seller may set the terms of the redemption, which must take place after a stipulated time (not to exceed 30 years) La. Civ. Code art. 2788. See FRUIT (2). • Also termed rent of lands. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant C=181.] 4. The difference between the actual return from a commodity or service and the cost of supplying it; the difference between revenue and opportunity cost. • rent, vb.

rentage. (17c) Rent or rental.

Rental Directive. See DIRECTIVE ON RENTAL, LENDING AND CERTAIN NEIGHBORING RIGHTS.

rental division order. Oil & gas. A stipulation signed by those entitled to delay rentals, stating what interest each owns and how much rental each is to receive. [Cases: Mines and Minerals C=79.1(3).]

rental right. Copyright. The power of a copyright owner to control the use of copies of the work beyond the first sale, when that use involves offering the copy to the public for temporary use for a fee (as at a store renting DVDs and videotapes) or some other commercial advantage (as at a hotel offering the loan of DVDs or videotapes). • Rental rights are recognized among members of the European Commission and under TRIPS. The right also applies to the rental of computer software. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property C=38.5.]

rentcharge. The right to receive an annual sum from the income of land, usu. in perpetuity, and to retake possession if the payments are in arrears. • Also spelled rent-charge; rent charge. • Also termed fee-farm rent.

a yearly rent going out of the same land to another in fee or fee-tail, or for a term of life, etc. with clause of distress, or maketh a feoffment in fee by indenture, reserving to himself a certain yearly rent, with clause of distress." Sir Henry Finch, Law, or a Discourse Thereof 155 (1759).

"A rentcharge is an annual or periodic payment charged upon, and payable by the owner of, land. Unlike a rent service, in the case of a rentcharge there is no tenure or gruity of estate between the parties. The owner of a rentcharge has no tenurial relationship with the land upon which it is charged. A rentcharge is a species of incorporeal property, but, unlike an easement, is incorporeal property in gross, being enjoyed by the owner personally and not in the capacity of proprietor of land." Peter Butt, Land Law 330 (2d ed. 1988).

ecclesiastical-tithe rentcharge. Hist. English law. A rentcharge attached to a benefice or ecclesiastical corporation. • Under the Tithe Act 1925, a landowner liable for an ecclesiastical-tithe rentcharge could redeem the land and discharge the tithe obligation by making an annual sinking-fund payment to Queen Anne's Bounty. The tithe was due for 81.5 years if the rentcharge was attached to a corporation or 85 years if the rentcharge was attached to a benefice. The law was repealed in 1998. See Queen Anne's Bounty; Benefice.

rent control. (1931) A restriction imposed, usu. by municipal legislation, on the maximum rent that a landlord may charge for rental property, and often on a landlord's power of eviction. • At one time, one renounced an inheritance by intestacy and disclaimed a gift by will. Today disclaimer is common in both situations. — Also termed (in sense 2) disclaimer. See Right of Election. Cf. Disclaim. [Cases: Descent and Distribution C–72, Wills C–717. 2. Criminal law. Complete and voluntary abandonment of criminal purpose — sometimes coupled with an attempt to thwart the activity's success — before a crime is committed. • Renunciation can be an affirmative defense to attempt, conspiracy, and the like. Model Penal Code § 5.01(4). — Also termed withdrawal; abandonment. [Cases: Conspiracy C–40.4.] 4. See anticipatory repudiation under repudiation. — renunciative, renunciation, adj. — renounce, vb.

renvoi (ren-voi), n. [French "sending back"] 1. The doctrine under which a court in resorting to foreign law adopts as well the foreign law's conflict-of-laws principles, which may in turn refer the court back to the law of the forum. [Cases: Action C–17.2. The problem arising when one state's rule on conflict of laws refers a case to the law of another state, and that second state's conflict-of-law rule refers the case either back to the law of the first state or to a third state. See Conflict of Laws. 3. Reconversion (2).]

reo absent (ree-oh ab-sten-tee). [Latin] The defendant being absent; the absence of the defendant.

reopen. (Of a court) to review (an otherwise final and nonappealable judgment) for the purpose of possibly granting or modifying relief. • A court will reopen a judgment or case only in highly unusual circumstances. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 60. [Cases: Concurring Opinion] 2. The problem arising when one state's rule on conflict of laws refers a case to the law of another state, and that second state's conflict-of-law rule refers the case either back to the law of the first state or to a third state. See Conflict of Laws. 3. Reconversion (2).

reorganization, n. 1. Bankruptcy. A financial restructuring of a corporation, esp. in the repayment of debts, under a plan created by a trustee and approved by a court. See Chapter 11. [Cases: Bankruptcy C–3501.]

haircut reorganization. A restructuring that reduces the principal amount of indebtedness owed to creditors. • The more common usage is simply haircut <we took a haircut on that deal>.

2. Tax. A restructuring of a corporation, as by a merger or recapitalization, in order to improve its tax treatment under the Internal Revenue Code. • The Code classifies the various types of reorganizations with different letters. IRC (26 USCA) § 358(a)(1). Cf. Recapitalization.
A reorganization. A reorganization involving a merger or consolidation under a specific state statute. [Cases: Internal Revenue C= 3668.]

repleivable (ri-plev-ee-a-bal), adj. (16c) Capable of being replevied; recoverable by replevin <repleivable property>. — Also spelled replevisable (ri-plev-a-sa-bal). Cf. irrepleivable. [Cases: Replevin C= 3.]

replevin (ri-plev-in), n. (17c) 1. An action for the repossession of personal property wrongfully taken or detained by the defendant, whereby the plaintiff gives security for and holds the property until the court decides who owns it. — Also termed claim and delivery. [Cases: Replevin C= 1.] 2. A writ obtained from a court authorizing the retaking of personal property wrongfully taken or detained. — Also termed (in sense 2) writ of replevin. Cf. detinue; trover. [Cases: Replevin <=> 34.]

"The action of replevin lies, where specific personal property has been wrongfully taken and is wrongfully detained, to recover possession of the property, together with damages for its detention. To support the action it is necessary: (a) That the property shall be personal. (b) That the plaintiff, at the time of suit, shall be entitled to the immediate possession. (c) That (at common law) the defendant shall have wrongfully taken the property (replevin in the cepit). But, by statute in most states, the action will also lie where the property is wrongfully detained, though it was lawfully obtained in the first instance (replevin in the detinet). (d) That the property shall be wrongfully detained by the defendant at the time of suit." Benjamin J. Shipman, Handbook of Common-Law Pleading § 49, at 120 (Henry

"In rare cases, the plaintiff might seek equitable relief to secure return of a chattel. More commonly, the claim for recovery of the chattel was pursued at common law under forms of action such as Detinue or Replevin. American statutes or court rules tracked the common law generally, referring to the recovery variously as replevin, detinue, claim-and-delivery, or sequestration. The statutes usually allowed the plaintiff to recover the disputed chattel before trial, though this is now subject to constitutional limits which have led to procedural revisions in many of the statutes." 1 Dan B. Dobbs, Law of Remedies § 5.17(1), at 917 (2d ed. 1993).

personal replevin. (1844) At common law, an action to replevy a person out of prison or out of another's custody. • Personal replevin has been largely superseded by the writ of habeas corpus as a means of investigating the legality of an imprisonment. See HABEAS CORPUS.

traverse occurring only in the replication whereby the plaintiff is permitted to traverse the whole substance of a plea consisting merely of legal excuse, when the matter does not involve a title or interest in land, authority of law, authority of fact derived from the opposing party, or any matter of record. — Also termed replication de injuria sua propria, absque tali causa. [Cases: Pleading <=> 179.]

replication per fraudem. Common-law pleading. A replication asserting that the discharge pleaded by the defendant was obtained by fraud.

special replication. Equity pleading. A replication that puts in issue a new fact to counter a new matter raised in the defendant's plea or answer. [Cases: Equity <=> 209.]

reply, n. (18c) 1. Civil procedure. In federal practice, the plaintiff's response to the defendant's counterclaim (or, by court order, to the defendant's or a third party's dure <=> 801–815. ] 2. Common-law pleading. The plain-tiff's response to the defendant's plea or answer. • The reply is the plaintiff's second pleading, and it is followed by the defendant's rejoinder. — Also termed (in sense 2) replication. [Cases: Pleading <=> 182, 164.] — reply, repo (ree-poh). 1. Repossession. 2. Repurchase agreement.

report, n. (14c) 1. A formal oral or written presentation of facts or a recommendation for action (according to the treasurer's report, there is $300 in the bank).

committee report. Parliamentary law. A report from a committee to a deliberative assembly on business referred to the committee or on a matter otherwise under its charge.

informational report. Parliamentary law. A report without a recommendation for action.

insider report. Securities. A monthly report that must be filed with the SEC when more than 10% of a company's stock is traded.

majority report. Parliamentary law. A committee report, as distinguished from a minority report. See committee report. Cf. minority report.
minority report. Parliamentary law. A report by a member or members who dissent from a committee report, setting forth their views, and sometimes proposing an alternative recommendation. • Some organizations require that a minority must reach a certain size (or obtain permission) before it can file a report. A typical minimum is one-fourth of the committee's members, which guarantees that not more than one minority report will result.

officer's report. Parliamentary law. A report from an officer to an organization or deliberative assembly on business relating to the officer's duties or on a matter otherwise under the officer's charge.

2. A written account of a court proceeding and judicial decision <the clerk sent the court's report to counsel for both sides>. [Cases: Courts C≈103.] 3. (usu. pl.) A published volume of judicial decisions by a particular court or group of courts <U.S. Reports>. • Generally, these decisions are first printed in temporary paperback volumes, and then printed in hardbound reporter volumes. Law reports may be either official (published by a government entity) or unofficial (published by a private publisher). Court citations frequently include the names of both the official and unofficial reports. — Also termed reporter; law report; law reporter. Cf. advance sheets. [Cases: Courts C≈103; Reports C≈3.]

official report. (usu. pl.) The governmental approved set of reported cases within a given jurisdiction. [Cases: Courts C≈103; Reports C≈1.] "[It may justly be said that all reports are in a sense 'official,' or that to use the term 'official reports' as referring to any particular series of reports is a misnomer, for it is certainly misleading. The mere fact that each state authorizes or requires publication of reports of its Supreme Court decisions, and, to insure such publication, agrees to purchase a stated number of each volume of the reports, cannot be said to give such a series pre-eminence as an 'official' publication." William M. Lile et al., Brief Making and the Use of Law Books 33 (3d ed. 1914).

reporter. (14c) 1. A person responsible for making and publishing a report; esp., a lawyer-consultant who prepares drafts of official or semi-official writings such as court rules or Restatements <the reporter to the Advisory Committee on Bankruptcy Rules explained the various amendments>. [Cases: Reports C≈3.] 2. REPORTER OF DECISIONS. 3. REPORT (3) <Supreme Court Reporter>. — Abbr. rep.; rpt.

"It may not come amiss to remark that the National Reporter System is usually spoken of as the 'Reporters,' and one of the component parts of that system is in like manner spoken of as a 'Reporter.' Wherever, in this or the succeeding chapters of this work, the word is used with a capital, it refers to one or more of the parts of the National Reporter System. When the word 'reporter' is used without capitalization, it refers to the person who reports or edits the cases in any series of reports to which reference is being made." William M. Lile et al., Brief Making and the Use of Law Books 37 (3d ed. 1914).

reporter of decisions. (1839) The person responsible for publishing a court's opinions. • The position began historically — in the years before systematic reporting of decisions was introduced — when lawyers attended the sessions of particular courts, were accredited to them by the judges, and reported the decisions of that court. Today, the reporter of decisions holds an administrative post as a court employee. The reporter often has duties that include verifying citations, correcting spelling and punctuation, and suggesting minor editorial improvements before judicial opinions are released or published. — Often shortened to reporter. — Also termed court reporter. See court reporter. [Cases: Courts C≈103; Reports C≈3.] report with recommendation. See report (1).

repossession, n. (15c) The act of an instance of retaking property; esp., a seller's retaking of goods sold on credit when the buyer has failed to pay for them. Often shortened to repo. Cf. foreclosures; rescue (3). [Cases: Secured Transactions C≈228.]

repository (ri-poz-ri-ee). (15c) A place where something is deposited or stored; a warehouse or storehouse.

repossession, n. (15c) The act or an instance of retaking property; esp., a seller's retaking of goods sold on credit when the buyer has failed to pay for them. — Often shortened to repo. Cf. foreclosures; rescue (3). [Cases: Secured Transactions C≈228.]

representation, n. (16c) 1. A presentation of fact — either by words or by conduct — made to induce someone to act, esp. to enter into a contract; esp., the manifestation to another that a fact, including a state of mind, exists <the buyer relied on the seller's representation that the roof did not leak>. Cf. misrepresentation. [Cases: Fraud C≈9.]

"Representation . . . may introduce terms into a contract and affect performance; or it may induce a contract and so affect the intention of one of the parties, and the formation of the contract. . . . At common law . . . if a representation did not afterwards become a substantive part of the representation, estoppel by material representation. (18c) A representation to which a reasonable person would attach importance in deciding his or her course of action in a transaction. • Material representation is a necessary element of an action for fraud. [Cases: Contracts C=—205.5; Fraud C=—9.]

promissory representation. (1842) A representation about what one will do in the future; esp., a representation made by an insured about what will happen during the time of coverage, stated as a matter of expectation and amounting to an enforceable promise. [Cases: Fraud C=—12; Insurance C=—3035.]

2. The act or an instance of standing for or acting on behalf of another, esp. by a lawyer on behalf of a client <Clarence Darrow's representation of John Scopes>. [Cases: Attorney and Client C=—77—101.]

concurrent representation. The simultaneous representation of more than one person in the same matter. See conflict of interest (2). 3. The fact of a litigant's having such a close alignment of interests with another person that the other is considered as having been present in the litigation <the named plaintiff provided adequate representation for the absent class members>.

adequate representation. (1939) A close alignment of interests between actual parties and potential parties in a lawsuit, so that the interests of potential parties are sufficiently protected by the actual parties. • The concept of adequate representation is often used in procedural contexts. For example, if a case is to be certified as a class action, there must be adequate representation by the named plaintiffs of all the potential class members. Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(a)(4). And if a nonparty is to intervene in a lawsuit, there must not already be adequate representation of the nonparty by an existing party. Fed. R. Civ. P. 24(a)(2). [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure C=—164, 316; Parties C=—35.13, 41.]

virtual representation. (1934) A party's maintenance of an action on behalf of others with a similar interest, as a class representative does in a class action. See virtual-representation doctrine. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure C=—103.2, 163; Judgment C=—677; Parties C=—35.3.]

4. The assumption by an heir of the rights of his or her predecessor <each child takes a share by representation>. See per stirpes. [Cases: Wills C=—550. 5. (usu. pl.) Int'l law. A friendly but firm statement of a perceived wrong. • This is the mildest form of complaint that one nation can make to another. — Also termed diplomatic representation. — represent, vb.

“Representations are in the nature of vigorous arguments employed in the hope of securing a modification of the action complained of without implying necessarily or expressly an intention ultimately to seek redress by more vigorous means.” Ellery C. Stowell, International Law: A Restatement of Principles in Conformity with Actual Practice 427 (1931).

representation, estoppel by. See estoppel by representation under estoppel.

representation election. See election (3).

representative, n. (17c) 1. One who stands for or acts on behalf of another <the owner was the football team's representative at the labor negotiations>. See agent (2). [Cases: Principal and Agent C=—1.]

accredited representative. (1846) A person with designated authority to act on behalf of another person, group, or organization, usu. by being granted that authority by law or by the rules of the group or organization <as an officer of the union, she was the accredited representative of the employees in the wage dispute>.

class representative. (1942) A person who sues on behalf of a group of plaintiffs in a class action. — Also termed named plaintiff. See class action. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure C=—164; Parties C=—35.13.]

independent personal representative. See personal representative.

lawful representative. (17c) 1. A legal heir. 2. An executor, administrator, or other legal representative. — Also termed legal representative. See personal representative. [Cases: Executors and Administrators C=—14—18.]

legal—personal representative. (18c) 1. When used by a testator referring to personal property, an executor or administrator. [Cases: Executors and Administrators C=—14—18.] 2. When used by a testator referring to real property, one to whom the real estate passes immediately upon the testator's death. 3. When used concerning the death of a mariner at sea, the public administrator, executor, or appointed administrator in the seaman's state of residence.

legal representative. 1. See lawful representative. 2. See personal representative.

personal representative. (18c) A person who manages the legal affairs of another because of incapacity or death, such as the executor of an estate. • Technically, an executor is a personal representative named in a will, while an administrator is a personal representative not named in a will. — Also termed independent personal representative; legal representative. [Cases: Executors and Administrators \(\Rightarrow\) 14–18.]

registered representative. (1945) A person approved by the SEC and stock exchanges to sell securities to the public. — Formerly also termed customer’s man; customer’s person. [Cases: Securities Regulation \(\Rightarrow\) 40.12–40.14.]

2. A member of a legislature, esp. of the lower house <one senator and one representative attended the rally>. [Cases: States \(\Rightarrow\) 28.] — Abbrev. rep.

representative action. (1911) 1. CLASS ACTION. 2. DERIVATIVE ACTION (1).

representative capacity. See capacity (1).

representee. One to whom a representation is made.

"First, where the representor can show that he was not negligent, he will not be liable under the 1967 Act; and secondly, where the representee wants to claim damages at the contractual rate, for loss of his bargain, it may be that the Misrepresentation Act will not suffice." P.S. Atiyah, An Introduction to the Law of Contract 165 (3d ed. 1981).

repressed-memory syndrome. A memory disorder characterized by an intermittent and extensive inability to recall important personal information, usu. following or concerning a traumatic or highly stressful occurrence, when the memory lapses cannot be dismissed as normal forgetfulness. • The theoretical basis for this syndrome was proposed by Sigmund Freud in 1895. The American Psychiatric Association has recognized the syndrome officially by the medical term dissociative amnesia. Although the APA has affirmed that some people suffering partial or total dissociative amnesia may later recover some or all of the memory of the traumatic or stressful event, the existence of the syndrome is controversial. Some studies indicate that "repressed" memories, at least in some patients, may be a product of suggestions made by mental-health therapists rather than of any actual experience. — Abbrev. RMS. — Also termed recovered-memory syndrome; dissociative amnesia. Cf. FALSE-MEMORY SYNDROME.

repressive tax. See sin tax under TAX.

reprise (ri-priz), n. (16c) Temporary postponement of the carrying out of a criminal sentence, esp. a death sentence. Cf. COMMUTATION (2); PARDON. [Cases: Pardon and Parole \(\Rightarrow\) 27.] — reprise, vb.

"The term reprise is derived from reprendre, to keep back, and signifies the withdrawing of the sentence for an interval of time, and operates in delay of execution." 1 Joseph Chitty, A Practical Treatise on the Criminal Law 757 (2d ed. 1826).

reprimand, n. (17c) In professional responsibility, a form of disciplinary action — imposed after trial or formal charges — that declares the lawyer's conduct improper but does not limit his or her right to practice law; a mild form of lawyer discipline that does not restrict the lawyer's ability to practice law. [Cases: Attorney and Client \(\Rightarrow\) 59.7, 59.8.] — reprimand, vb.

private reprimand. An unpublished communication between a disciplinary agency and a wrongdoing attorney, admonishing the attorney about the improper conduct. • Sometimes a published reprimand that does not identify the lawyer by name is considered a private reprimand. [Cases: Attorney and Client \(\Rightarrow\) 59.7.]

public reprimand. A published notice, appearing usu. in a legal newspaper or bar journal, admonishing the attorney about improper conduct and describing the impropriety for the benefit of other members of the legal profession. [Cases: Attorney and Client \(\Rightarrow\) 59.8.]

reprisal (ri-priz-əl). 1. (often pl.) Int'l law. The use of force, short of war, against another country to redress an injury caused by that country. [Cases: War and National Emergency \(\Rightarrow\) 12.]

"'Reprisals' is a word with a long history, and modern writers are not agreed on the meaning which should be given to it today. Literally and historically it denotes the seizing of property or persons by way of retaliation .... Reprisals when they are taken today are taken by a state, but some writers would still limit the word to acts of taking or withholding the property of a foreign state or its nationals, for example by an embargo, whilst others would abandon the historical associations and use it to denote any kind of coercive action not amounting to war whereby a state attempts to secure satisfaction from another for some wrong which the latter has committed against it." J.L. Brierly, The Law of Nations 321–22 (5th ed. 1955).

general reprisal. A reprisal by which a nation directs all its military officers and citizens to redress an injury caused by another nation. • An example is a command to seize the property of the offending nation wherever it is found.

negative reprisal. A reprisal by which a nation refuses to perform an obligation to another nation, such as the fulfillment of a treaty.

positive reprisal. A reprisal by which a nation forcibly seizes another nation's property or persons.

special reprisal. A reprisal by which a nation authorizes an aggrieved private citizen to redress an injury caused by another nation. • An example is an authorization for a private citizen to seize a particular vessel of the offending nation. See LETTERS OF MARQUE.

2. (often pl.) Int'l law. An act of forceful retaliation for injury or attack by another country; formerly, in war, the killing of prisoners in response to an enemy's war crimes (now unlawful). Cf. RETORSION. 3. Any act or instance of retaliation, as by an employer against a complaining employee. [Cases: Labor and Employment \(\Rightarrow\) 771.]

reprise (ri-priz), n. An annual deduction, duty, or payment out of a manor or estate, such as an annuity.
reprobation (rep-ra-bay-shan). The act of raising an objection or exception, as to the competency of a witness or the sufficiency of evidence. — reprobatory (rep-ra-bay-sha-ner-ee), reprobative (rep-ra-bay-tiv), adj. — reprobate (rep-ra-bayt), vb.

reprobator (rep-ra-bay-tar). Scots law. Hist. A challenge to disqualify a witness or to invalidate the testimony of an objectionable witness. — Also termed action of reprobator.

reproduction right. Copyright. A copyright holder's exclusive right to make copies or phonorecords of the protected work. • Unauthorized copying constitutes infringement. — Also termed right of reproduction. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 35–36.]

reproductive rights. A person's constitutionally protected rights relating to the control of his or her procreative activities; specif., the cluster of civil liberties relating to pregnancy, abortion, and sterilization, esp. the personal bodily rights of a woman in her decision whether to become pregnant or bear a child. • The phrase includes the idea of being able to make reproductive decisions free from discrimination, coercion, or violence. Human-rights scholars increasingly consider many reproductive rights to be protected by international human-rights law. [Cases: Civil Rights 1029.]

republic, n. A system of government in which the people hold sovereign power and elect representatives who exercise that power. • It contrasts on the one hand with a pure democracy, in which the people or community as an organized whole wield the sovereign power of government, and on the other with the rule of one person (such as a king or dictator) or of an elite group (such as an oligarchy, aristocracy, or junta). — Abbr. rep. Cf. democracy. — republican, adj.

"A republic is a government which (a) derives all of its powers directly or indirectly from the great body of the people and (b) is administered by persons holding their office during pleasure, for a limited period, or during good behavior." Robert A. Dahl, A Preface to Democratic Theory 10 (1956).

republican government. See government.

republication, n. (18c) 1. The act or an instance of publishing again or anew. 2. Wills & estates. Reestablishment of the validity of a previously revoked will by repeating the formalities of execution or by using a codicil. • The result is to make the old will effective from the date of republication. — Also termed revalidiation. Cf. revival (2). [Cases: Wills 196–202.] 3. Defamation. The act or an instance of repeating or spreading more widely a defamatory statement. — republish, vb.

repudiate, vb. (16c) 1. To reject or renounce (a duty or obligation); esp., to indicate an intention not to perform (a contract). [Cases: Contracts 313.] 2. Hist. To divorce or disown (one's wife).

repudiatee (ri-pyoo-dee-a-tee). A party to a contract that has been repudiated by the other party. [Cases: Contracts 313.]

repudiation (ri-pyoo-dee-ay-shan), n. (16c) 1. Eccles. law. Rare. A person's refusal to accept a benefice. 2. A contracting party's words or actions that indicate an intention not to perform the contract in the future; a threatened breach of contract. Cf. rejection (1), (2); rescission; revocation (1). [Cases: Contracts 313(2)]. — repudiatory (ri-pyoo-dee-a-tor-ee), repudiative (ri-pyoo-dee-a-bal), adj.

"A repudiation is (a) a statement by the obligor to the obligee indicating that the obligor will commit a breach that would of itself give the obligee a claim for damages for total breach . . . or (b) a voluntary affirmative act which renders the obligor unable or apparently unable to perform without such a breach." Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 250 (1979).

"In order to constitute a repudiation, a party's language must be sufficiently positive to be reasonably interpreted to mean that the party will not or cannot perform. Mere expression of doubt as to his willingness or ability to perform is not enough to constitute a repudiation, although such an expression may give an obligee reasonable grounds to believe that the obligor will commit a serious breach and may ultimately result in a repudiation. . . . However, language that under a fair reading 'amounts to a statement of intention not to perform except on conditions which go beyond the contract' constitutes a repudiation." Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 250, cmt. b (1979) anticipatory repudiation. (1913) Repudiation of a contractual duty before the time for performance, giving the injured party an immediate right to damages for total breach, as well as discharging the injured party's remaining duties of performance. • This type of repudiation occurs when the promisor unequivocally disavows any intention to perform when the time for performance comes. Once the repudiation occurs, the nonrepudiating party has three options: (1) treat the repudiation as an immediate breach and sue for damages; (2) ignore the repudiation, urge the repudiator to perform, wait for the specified time of performance, and sue if the repudiating party does not perform; or (3) cancel the contract. — Also termed renunciation. See anticipatory breach under breach of contract. [Cases: Contracts 313.]

The Restatement lists three actions that constitute anticipatory repudiation: (a) a positive statement to the promisee or another person having a right under the contract, indicating that the promisor will not or cannot substantially perform his contractual duties; (b) transferring or contracting to transfer to a third person an interest in specific land, goods, or in any other thing essential for the substantial performance of his contractual duties; (c) any voluntary affirmative act which renders substantial performance of his contractual duties impossible, or apparently impossible." Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 318 (1979).

total repudiation. (1859) An unconditional refusal by a party to perform the acts required by a contract.

• This type of repudiation justifies the other party in refraining from performance. [Cases: Contracts 313.]

repudiator (ri-pyoo-dee-a-tar). One who repudiates; esp., a party who repudiates a contract. [Cases: Contracts 313.]
repudium (ri-pyoo-dee-um), n. [Latin] Roman law. The revocation of betrothal or marriage by either the man or the woman. After Augustus, it was necessary to send the other spouse a letter of repudiation in order to terminate the marriage. Cf. divortium.

repugnancy (ri-pag-nan-see), (1865) An inconsistency or contradiction between two or more parts of a legal instrument (such as a contract or statute). [Cases: Contracts ☻= 162; Statutes ☻= 207.]

repugnant (ri-pag-nant), adj. (14c) Inconsistent or irreconcilable with; contrary or contradictory to <the court's interpretation was repugnant to the express wording of the statute.>

repugnant verdict. See verdict.

repurchase, n. The act or an instance of buying something back or again; esp., a corporation's buying back of some or all of its stock at market price. See redemption. [Cases: Corporations ☻= 82, 120.] — repurchase, vb.

repurchase agreement. A short-term loan agreement by which one party sells a security to another party but promises to buy back the security on a specified date at a specified price. Often shortened to repo. [Cases: Corporations ☻= 82, 120.]

repurchase price. See redemption price under price.

reputation, n. (14c) The esteem in which a person is held by others. Evidence of reputation may be introduced as proof of character whenever character evidence is admissible. Fed. R. Evid. 405. Also termed personal reputation. See character evidence under character. [Cases: Criminal Law ☻= 375; Evidence ☻= 106; Witnesses ☻= 338.] — reputational, adj.

reputational evidence. See reputation evidence under evidence.

reputation evidence. See evidence.

reputed manor. See manor.

request, n. Parliamentary law. A motion by which a member invokes a right, seeks permission for the exercise of a privilege, or asks a question. Cf. motion (2); demand (2); inquiry (2); point (2).

request for leave to modify a motion. See request for permission to modify a motion.

request for leave to withdraw a motion. See request for permission to withdraw a motion.

request for permission to modify a motion. A motion by which the mover seeks an amendment to his or her own motion after the chair has stated the motion. The mover controls a motion only until the chair states the question. After that, the motion belongs to the assembly and the mover cannot modify it without the assembly's permission. See friendly amendment under amendment (3). Also termed request for leave to modify a motion.

request for permission to withdraw a motion. A motion by the mover to end consideration of the motion without reaching a decision on its merits. See request for permission to modify a motion. Also termed request for leave to withdraw a motion.

request to be excused from a duty. A motion seeking relief from a duty that an officer or other member has been charged with.

request to read papers. 1. A motion asking permission to read aloud from printed matter. Reading aloud is generally not allowed without permission. 2. A motion asking that the chair or secretary read aloud a document for the mover's or the assembly's information.

request for admission. (1939) Civil procedure. In pretrial discovery, a party's written factual statement served on another party who must admit, deny, or object to the substance of the statement. Ordinarily, many requests for admission appear in one document. The admitted statements, along with any statements not denied or objected to, will be treated by the court as established and therefore do not have to be proved at trial. Fed. R. Civ. P. 36. — Abbr. RFA. Also termed request for admissions; request to admit; notice to admit. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ☻= 1671; Pretrial Procedure ☻= 471.]

request for continued examination. Patents. A means of negating the final action on a patent so that the applicant can file amendments, new claims, etc. to show that the invention is patentable as of the original application date. Unlike a continuation application, a request for continued examination keeps a patent alive as if no final decision had been made. It allows prosecution of claims that have been rejected in a final office action to continue. — Abbr. RCE. Cf. continuation. [Cases: Patents ☻= 104.]

request for instructions. (1942) Procedure. During trial, a party's written request that the court instruct the jury on the law as set forth in the request. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 51. — Abbr. RFI. Also termed request for charge. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ☻= 2176; Trial ☻= 259.]

request for leave to withdraw a motion. See request.

request for leave to modify a motion. See request.

request for permission to withdraw a motion. See request.

request for permission to modify a motion. See request.

request for production. (1944) Procedure. In pretrial discovery, a party's written request that another party provide specified documents or other tangible things for inspection and copying. Fed. R. Civ. P. 34. — Abbr. RFP. Also termed document request; request for production of documents; notice to produce; demand for document inspection. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ☻= 1551; Pretrial Procedure ☻= 331.]

request for proposal. An invitation to prospective suppliers or contractors to submit proposals or bids to provide goods or services. Unlike most invitations for bids, an RFP requires bidders to give more information than the proposed price. For instance, bidders may have to provide evidence of good financial condition, acceptable technical capability, stock availability, and customer satisfaction. — Abbr. RFP. [Cases: Municipal Corporations C=238; Public Contracts C=7; States C=98; United States C=64.25] request for reconsideration. Patents. An applicant’s submission of further arguments after a patent claim’s rejection. [Cases: Patents C=104.]

request for reexamination. Patents. A formal process of asking the Patent and Trademark Office to review an in-force patent’s validity in light of prior art references. • Anyone, including the patent owner or an infringer, may request a patent’s reexamination. [Cases: Patents C=140.]

request for relief. See PRAYER FOR RELIEF.

request to admit. See REQUEST FOR ADMISSION.

request to charge. See REQUEST FOR INSTRUCTIONS.

request to read papers. See REQUEST.

required-records doctrine. (1945) The principle that the privilege against self-incrimination does not apply when one is being compelled to produce business records that are kept in accordance with government regulations and that involve public aspects. • Some courts have held that certain medical records and tax forms fall within this doctrine and are thus not protected by the privilege against self-incrimination. [Cases: Witnesses C=298.]

required-request law. A law mandating that hospital personnel discuss with a deceased patient’s relatives the possibility of an anatomical gift. • The Uniform Anatomical Gift Act (not in effect in some states) mandates a required-request law. [Cases: Dead Bodies C=1.]

required reserve. See RESERVE.

requirement for division. See RESTRICTION (4).

requirement for restriction. See RESTRICTION (4).

requirements contract. See CONTRACT.

requirements testing. See ACCEPTANCE TESTING.

requisition (rek-wa-zish-an), n. 1. An authoritative, formal demand for a state governor’s requisition for another state’s surrender of a fugitive. [Cases: Extradition and Detainers C=34.] 2. A governmental seizure of property <the state’s requisition of the shopping center during the weather emergency>. See TAKING (2). — requisition, vb.

requisitionist. One who makes a formal demand (as for the performance of an obligation or the return of a fugitive). See REQUISITION (1).

requisition letter. See LETTER OF REQUEST.

re-county (reer-kown-tee). Hist. A subsidiary English county court held by the sheriff on the day after the regular county court. — Also spelled ree county; rier county.

re-refer. See REFER.

res (rays or reez or rez), n. [Latin “thing”] (17c) 1. An object, interest, or status, as opposed to a person <jurisdiction of the res — the real property in Colorado>. [Cases: Courts C=16.] 2. The subject matter of a trust; corpus (1) <the stock certificate is the res of the trust>. [Cases: Trusts C=1.] Pl. res.

res accessoria (rays ak-ses-or-ee-a). [Latin] Civil law. An accessory thing; a thing that is related to a principal thing. Pl. res accessoriae.

res adjudicata (rays a-joo-di-kay-ta or -kah-ta). See RES JUDICATA.

resale, n. (17c) 1. The act of selling goods or property — previously sold to a buyer who breached the sales contract — to someone else. UCC § 2-706. [Cases: Sales C=332-339.] 2. A retailer’s selling of goods, previously purchased from a manufacturer or wholesaler, usu. to consumers or to someone else further down the chain of distribution. — resell, vb.

resale-price maintenance. A form of price-fixing in which a manufacturer forces or persuades several different retailers to sell the manufacturer’s product at the same price, thus preventing competition. • Resale-price maintenance is not per se illegal under antitrust law, but it is illegal if it produces anticompetitive effects under the rule of reason. A manufacturer may suggest a retail price as long as it does not compel retailers to sell at that price. See RULE OF REASON; vertical price-fixing under PRICE-FIXING. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation C=821.]

res aliena scienter legata (rays ay-lee-ee-na or al-ee-a sen-en-tar lo-gay-ta). [Latin] Hist. The property of another knowingly bequeathed — that is, property that a testator did not own but purported to bequeath by will.

resceit (ri-seet). Hist. The admittance of an interested third party to plead in a case between two others; intervention.

rescind (ri-sind), vb. (17c) 1. To abrogate or cancel (a contract) unilaterally or by agreement. [Cases: Contracts C=249.] 2. To make void; to repeal or annul <rescind the legislation>. 3. Parliamentary law. To void, repeal, or nullify a main motion adopted earlier. — Also termed annul; repeal. — rescindable, adj.

rescind and expunge. See EXPUNGE (2).

rescissio (ri-sis-[h]-ee-oh). [Latin] Civil law. Annulment or voidance of a judicial act; rescission. Pl. rescissiones.

rescission (ri-sizh-an), n. (17c) 1. A party’s unilateral unmaking of a contract for a legally sufficient reason, such as the other party’s material breach, or a judgment rescinding the contract; voidance. • Rescission is generally available as a remedy or defense for a non-defaulting party and is accompanied by restitution of any partial performance, thus restoring the parties to their precontractual positions. — Also termed avoidance. [Cases: Contracts C=249.] 2. An agreement by contracting parties to discharge all remaining duties of performance and terminate the contract. — Also spelled revision; rescission. — Also termed (in sense 2) agreement of rescission; mutual rescission; abandonment. Cf. rejection (2); repudiation (2); revocation (1). [Cases: Contracts C=252.] — rescissory (ri-sis-a-ree or ri-siz-), adj.

"The [UCC] takes cognizance of the fact that the term 'rescission' is often used by lawyers, courts and businessmen in many different senses; for example, termination of a contract by virtue of an option to terminate in the agreement, cancellation for breach and avoidance on the grounds of infancy or fraud. In the interests of clarity of thought — as the consequences of each of these forms of discharge may vary — the Commercial Code carefully distinguishes three circumstances. 'Rescission' is utilized as a term of art to refer to a mutual agreement to discharge contractual duties. 'Termination' refers to the discharge of duties by the exercise of a power granted by the agreement. 'Cancellation' refers to the putting an end to the contract by reason of a breach by the other party. Section 2-720, however, takes into account that the parties do not necessarily use these terms in this way." John D. Calamari & Joseph M. Perillo, The Law of Contracts § 21-2, at 864-65 (3d ed. 1987).

equitable rescission. (1889) Rescission that is decreed by a court of equity. [Cases: Cancellation of Instruments C = 1.]

legal rescission. (1849) 1. Rescission that is effected by the agreement of the parties. [Cases: Contracts C = 251.] 2. Rescission that is decreed by a court of law, as opposed to a court of equity.

"The modern tendency is to treat rescission as equitable, but rescission was often available at law. If plaintiff had paid money, or had delivered goods, he could rescind by tendering whatever he had received from defendant and suing at law to recover his money or replevy his goods. But if he had delivered a promissory note or securities, or conveyed real estate, rescission required the court to cancel the instruments or compel defendant to reconvey. This relief was available only in equity. Many modern courts ignore the distinction . . . . But versions of the distinction are codified in some states." Douglas Laycock, Modern American Remedies 627-28 (3d ed. 2002).

rescissionary action. See action (4).

rescissory damages. See damages.

rescous (res-kaes). 1. rescue (2). 2. rescue (3).

rescript (ree-skript), n. (17c) 1. A judge's written order to a court clerk explaining how to dispose of a case. 2. An appellate court's written decision, usu. unsigned, that is sent down to the trial court. [Cases: Appeal and Error C = 1192; Criminal Law C = 1192; Federal Courts C = 949.] 3. A Roman emperor’s or a Pope's written answer to a legal inquiry or petition. Cf. preces. — Also termed (when the reply is to a private citizen) annotation; subnotation; subscription; (when the reply is to an official body) epistle. 4. A duplicate or counterpart; a rewriting.

rescue, n. (14c) 1. The act or an instance of saving or freeing someone from danger or captivity. 2. The forcible and unlawful freeing of a person from arrest or imprisonment. [Cases: Rescue C = 1.] "A rescue signifies a forcible setting at liberty, against law, of a person duly arrested. It is necessary, that the rescuer should have knowledge that the person whom he sets at liberty has been apprehended for a criminal offence, if he be in the custody of a private person; but if he be under the care of an officer, then he is to take notice of it at his peril." 1 Joseph Chitty, A Practical Treatise on the Criminal Law 62. (2d ed. 1826).

3. The forcible retaking by the owner of goods that have been lawfully distrained. — Also termed (in senses 2 & 3) rescous. Cf. repossession. 4. Int'l law. The retaking of a prize by persons captured with it, so that the property is legally restored to its original owner. See postliminium (3). — rescue, vb.

rescue clause. See sue-and-labor clause.

rescue doctrine. (1926) Torts. The principle that a tortfeasor who negligently endangered a person is liable for injuries to someone who reasonably attempted to rescue the person in danger. • The rationale for this doctrine is that an attempted rescue of someone in danger is always foreseeable. Thus, if the tortfeasor is negligent toward the rescue, the tortfeasor is also negligent toward the rescuer. — Also termed danger-invites-rescue doctrine. Cf. emergency doctrine; good samaritan doctrine. [Cases: Negligence C = 510(3)].

"Danger invites rescue. The cry for distress is the summons to relief. The law does not ignore these reactions of the mind in tracing conduct to its consequences. It recognizes them as normal. It places their effects within the range of the natural and probable. The wrong that imperils life is a wrong to the imperiled victim; it is a wrong also to his rescuer. . . . The railroad company whose train approaches without signal is a wrongdoer toward the traveler surprised between the rails, but a wrongdoer also to the bystander who drags him from the path . . . . The emergency begets the man. The wrongdoer may not have foresaw; the coming of a deliverer, he is accountable as if he had." Wagner v. International Ry. Co., 133 N.E. 437, 437-38 (N.Y. 1921).

rescue syndrome. Family law. A situation in which a child in a custody battle expresses a preference for the parent perceived by the child to be the "weaker" of the two, in the belief that the parent needs the child. • This is a form of parent-alienation syndrome. One parent may overtly or subtly act increasingly dependent on the child, leading the child to believe that he or she is responsible for the parent’s comfort, happiness, and protection. The child may also believe that one parent is actively harming the other and attempt to protect the “weaker” parent by choosing to stay with that parent, even if the child would actually prefer to live with the “stronger” parent. Cf. lolli-pop syndrome; parent-alienation syndrome.

rescussu. See de rescussu.

res derelicta (rays der-a-lik-ta). [Latin] A thing thrown away or forsaken by its owner; abandoned property.

Research and development. An effort (as by a company or business enterprise) to create or improve products or services, esp. by discovering new technology or advancing existing technology. — Abbr. R & D; R & D.

reseiser (ri-see-zar). Hist. The taking of lands by the monarch in a case in which a general livery or ouster le main was previously misused.

resentencing. n. (1878) The act or an instance of imposing a new or revised criminal sentence. — resentence, vb.

reservation. (l5c) 1. The creation of a new right or interest (such as an easement), by and for the grantor, in real property being granted to another. Cf. exception (3). [Cases: Deeds 2-14]; Easements 2-14.]

implied reservation. (1867) An implied easement that reserves in a landowner an easement across a portion of sold land, such as a right-of-way over land lying between the seller’s home and the only exit. • An implied reservation arises only if the seller could have expressly reserved an easement, but for some reason failed to do so. See implied easement under easement. [Cases: Easements 2-17.]“If the implied easement is in favor of the conveyee and is appurtenant to the tract conveyed, it is called an implied grant; if the implied easement is in favor of the conveyor and is appurtenant to the tract retained, it is called an implied reservation.” Ralph E. Boyer et al., The Law of Property 311 (4th ed. 1991).

2. The establishment of a limiting condition or qualification; esp., a nation’s formal declaration, upon signing or ratifying a treaty, that its willingness to become a party to the treaty is conditioned on the modification or amendment of one or more provisions of the treaty as applied in its relations with other parties to the treaty. [Cases: Treaties 3-3. 3. A tract of public land that is not open to settlers but is set aside for a special purpose; esp., a tract of land set aside for use by indigenous peoples. — Also termed (in sense 3) reserve; reserved land; withdrawn land. [Cases: Indians 1-12.]

reservation-of-rights letter. Insurance. A notice of an insurer’s intention not to waive its contractual rights to contest coverage or to apply an exclusion that negates an insured’s claim. — Also termed reservation of rights. [Cases: Insurance 2-311(2), 3120.]

reserve, n. 1. Something retained or stored for future use; esp., a fund of money set aside by a bank or an insurance company to cover future liabilities.

amortization reserve. An account created for bookkeeping purposes to extinguish an obligation gradually over time.

bad-debt reserve. A reserve to cover losses on uncollectible accounts receivable.

excess reserve. The portion of a bank’s reserve against deposits in excess of the amount of reserve required by law.

legal reserve. The minimum amount of liquid assets that a bank or an insurance company must maintain by law to meet depositors’ or claimants’ demands. [Cases: Banks and Banking 2-14, 503; Insurance 2-1139.]

loss reserve. 1. An insurance company’s reserve that represents the estimated value of future payments, as for losses incurred but not yet reported. [Cases: Insurance 2-1139.] 2. A bank’s reserve set aside to cover possible losses, as from defaulting loans.

mean reserve. In insurance, the average of the beginning reserve (after the premium has been paid for the policy year) and the ending reserve of the policy year.

policy reserve. An insurance company’s reserve that represents the difference between net premiums and expected claims for a given year. • This type of reserve is kept esp. by life-insurance companies. [Cases: Insurance 2-1139.]

required reserve. The minimum amount of money, as required by the Federal Reserve Board, that a bank must hold in the form of vault cash and deposits with regional Federal Reserve Banks. [Cases: Banks and Banking 2-14, 351-359.]

sinking-fund reserve. A reserve used to pay long-term debt. See sinking fund under fund (1).

unearned-premium reserve. An insurance company’s reserve that represents premiums that have been received in advance but not yet applied to policy coverage. • If a policyholder cancels coverage before the policy expires but has already paid a premium for the full policy period, the insurance company refunds the policyholder out of this reserve. [Cases: Insurance C-1139.] reserve account. See impound account under account. reserve bank. See member bank under bank.
Reserve Board. See Federal Reserve Board of Governors. reserve clause. A clause in a professional athlete’s contract restricting the athlete’s right to change teams, even after the contract expires. • Reserve clauses are uncommon in modern professional sports. Cf. free agency.
reserved easement. See easement.
reserved land. See reservation (3).

Reserved Power Clause. See Federal Reserve Board of Governors. reserved surplus. See appropriated surplus (1) under surplus. reserve militia. See militia. reserve price. See price. reserve ratio. The Federal Reserve Board’s measurement of a member bank’s required reserves. See required reserve under reserve. primary reserve ratio. The ratio between a bank’s required reserves (cash in vault plus deposits with Federal Reserve Banks) and its demand and time deposits. secondary reserve ratio. The ratio between a bank’s government securities and its demand and time deposits.
reset, n. Scots law. 1. The act or an instance of knowingly receiving stolen goods. 2. Archaic. The harboring or sheltering of a criminal or outlaw. — resetter, n. — reset, vb.
resettlement, n. (17c) 1. The settlement of one or more persons in a new or former place. See settlement (6). 2. The reopening of an order or decree for the purpose of correcting a mistake or adding something omitted. [Cases: Motions C-49.] — resettile, vb.
res fit inequita (rays fit in-emp-to). [Latin] Hist. The object is regarded as un bought. • This is the ancient way of saying, “The sale is off.”
res fungibiles (rays fan-jib-a-leez), n. pl. [Latin] Civil law. Fungible things; things that are commercially inter changeable.
res gestae (rays jes-tee also jes-ti), n. pl. [Latin “things done”] (17c) The events at issue, or other events contemporaneous with them. • In evidence law, words and statements about the res gestae are usu. admissible under a hearsay exception (such as present sense impression or excited utterance). Where the Federal Rules of Evidence or state rules fashioned after them are in effect, the use of res gestae is now out of place. See Fed. R. Evid. 803(1), (2). — Also termed res gesta. [Cases: Criminal Law C-363-368; Evidence C-118-128.]
res gestae witness. See witness.
res habiles (rays hab-a-leez), n. pl. [Latin] Civil law. Things that may be acquired by prescription. resistant (rez ee-ant), adj. Archaic. Continually dwelling or abiding in a place; resident. resistant, n. Archaic. A resident. residence. (14c) 1. The act or fact of living in a given place for some time (). — Also termed residency. 2. The place where one actually lives, as distinguished from a domicile (<she made her residence in Oregon>). • Residence usu. just means bodily presence as an inhabitant in a given place; domicile usu. requires bodily presence plus an intention to make the place one’s home. A person thus may have more than one residence at a time but only one domicile. Sometimes, though, the two terms are used synonymously. Cf. domicile (2). [Cases: Domicile C-52.] 3. A house or other fixed abode; a dwelling (). 4. The place where a corporation or other enterprise does business or is registered to do business (<Pantheon Inc.’s principal residence is in Delaware>). [Cases: Corporations C-52, 503(1), 666.] habitual residence. 1. Family law. A person’s customary place of residence; esp., a child’s customary place of residence before being removed to some other place. • The term, which appears as an undefined term in the Hague Convention, is used in determining the country having a presumed paramount interest in the child. [Cases: Child Custody C-804.] 2. Copyright. An established place, esp. a country, in which one lives for the long term, usu. without being a citizen of the place. • The Berne Convention makes habitual residence an alternative to legal domicile in a member country to qualify for copyright protection but leaves the exact definition of the term to member countries.
residency. (14c) 1. A place of residence, esp. an official one (the diplomat’s residency). 2. RESIDENCE (1) <one year’s residency to be eligible for in-state tuition>.

resident, adj. 1. Affiliated with or working for a particular person or company <resident agent>. 2. Dwelling in a place other than one’s home on a long-term basis <the hospital’s resident patient>.

resident, n. (15c) 1. A person who lives in a particular place. 2. A person who has a home in a particular place. • In sense 2, a resident is not necessarily either a citizen or a domiciliary. Cf. citizen (1); domiciliary.

residuary clause. (18c) A residuary clause is a testamentary clause that disposes of any estate property remaining after the satisfaction of all other gifts. — Also termed omnibus clause. [Cases: Wills C—586.]

residuary devise. See DEVISE.

residuary devisee. See DEVISEE.

residuary estate. See ESTATE (3).

residuary legacy. See LEGACY.

residuary legatee. See LEGATEE.

residue. (14c) 1. Something that is left over after a part is removed or disposed of; a remainder. 2. See residuary estate under ESTATE (3).

residuum (ri-zij-o-um). (17c) 1. That which remains; a residue. 2. See residuary estate under ESTATE (3). Pl. residua (ri-zij-o-a).

residuum rule. Administrative law: The principle that an agency decision based partly on hearsay evidence will be upheld on judicial review only if the decision is founded on at least some competent evidence. • The residuum rule has generally been rejected by federal and state courts. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure C—784.]

resignation, n. (14c) 1. The act or an instance of surrendering or relinquishing an office, right, or claim. [Cases: Officers and Public Employees C—62.] 2. A formal notification of relinquishing an office or position. 3. Hist. The surrender to the lord of the vassal’s interest in land. — resign, vb.

resile (ri-zil), vb. 1. To retract (a statement, allegation, etc.). 2. To draw back (from an agreement, contract, etc.). 3. To return to one’s original position.

res immobiles (rays i-moh-ba-leez), n. pl. [Latin] Civil law. Immovable things; chattels real. See immobilia.

res incorporales (rays in-kor-po-ray-leez), n. pl. [Latin] Civil law. Incorporeal things, intangible things that are not perceptible to the senses. See incorporeal thing under thing.

res in privatorum patrimonio. See res private.

res inter alios acta (rays in-tor ay-lee-ons ak-ta). [Latin “a thing done between others”] 1. Contracts. The common-law doctrine holding that a contract cannot unfavorably affect the rights of a person who is not a party to the contract. [Cases: Contracts C—186(1); 2. Evidence. The rule prohibiting the admission of collateral facts into evidence. [Cases: Criminal Law C—338(1), 369.1; Evidence C—99, 130.]

res ipsa loquitur (rays ip-so loh-kwa-tar). [Latin “the thing speaks for itself”] (17c) Torts. The doctrine providing that, in some circumstances, the mere fact of an accident’s occurrence raises an inference of negligence that establishes a prima facie case. — Often shortened to res ipsa. [Cases: Negligence C—1610.]

The phrase ‘res ipsa loquitur’ is a symbol for the rule that the fact of the occurrence of an injury, taken with the surrounding circumstances, may permit an inference or raise a presumption of negligence, or make out a plaintiff’s prima facie case, and present a question of fact for defendant to meet with an explanation. It is merely a short way of saying that the circumstances attendant on the accident are of such a nature as to justify a jury, in light of common sense and past experience, in inferring that the accident was probably the result of the defendant's negligence, in the absence of explanation or other evidence which the jury believes." Stuart M. Speiser, The Negligence Case: Res Ipsa Loquitur § 1.2, at 5–6 (1972).

"It is said that res ipsa loquitur does not apply if the cause of the harm is known. This is a dark saying. The application of the principle nearly always presupposes that some part of the causal process is known, but what is lacking is evidence of its connection with the defendant's act or omission. When the fact of control is used to justify the inference that defendant's negligence was responsible it must of course be shown that the thing in his control in fact caused the harm. In a sense, therefore, the cause of the harm must be known before the maxim can apply." H.L.A. Hart & Tony Honore, Causation in the Law 419–20 (2d ed. 1985).

"Res ipso loquitur is an appropriate form of circumstantial evidence enabling the plaintiff in particular cases to establish the defendant's likely negligence. Hence the res ipso loquitur doctrine, properly applied, does not entail any covert form of strict liability. . . . The doctrine implies that the court does not know, and cannot find out, what actually happened in the individual case. Instead, the finding of likely negligence is derived from knowledge of the causes of the type or category of accidents involved." Restatement (Third) of Torts § 15 cmt. a (Discussion Draft 1999).

res ipso loquitur test (res ip-sa loh-kwa-tor). (1962) A method for determining whether a defendant has gone beyond preparation and has actually committed an attempt, based on whether the defendant's act itself would have indicated to an observer what the defendant intended to do. — Also termed resisting lawful arrest. [Cases: Obstructing Justice ◄—3.]

resisting arrest. (1851) The crime of obstructing or opposing a police officer who is making an arrest. — Also termed resisting unlawful arrest. [Cases: Obstructing Justice ◄—3.]

resisting unlawful process. See obstruction of process.

resisting unlawful arrest. (1905) The act of opposing a police officer who is making an unlawful arrest. • Most jurisdictions have accepted the Model Penal Code provision prohibiting the use of force to resist an unlawful arrest when the person arrested knows that a police officer is making the arrest. But some jurisdictions allow an arrestee to use nonforceful means to prevent the arrest. See Model Penal Code § 3. [Cases: Obstructing Justice ◄—3.]

res judicata (rays joo-di-kay-to or -kah-ta). [Latin "a thing adjudicated"] (17c) 1. An issue that has been definitively settled by judicial decision. [Cases: Judgment ◄—540, 584, 585.] 2. An affirmative defense barring the same parties from litigating a second lawsuit on the same claim, or any other claim arising from the same transaction or series of transactions and that could have been — but was not — raised in the first suit. • The three essential elements are (1) an earlier decision on the issue, (2) a final judgment on the merits, and (3) the involvement of the same parties, or parties in privity with the original parties. Restatement (Second) of Judgments §§ 17, 24 (1982). — Also termed res adjudicata; claim preclusion; doctrine of res judicata. Cf. collateral estoppel. [Cases: Judgment ◄—540, 584, 948(1)].

"Res judicata has been used in this section as a general term referring to all of the ways in which one judgment will have a binding effect on another. That usage is and doubtless will continue to be common, but it lumps under a single name two quite different effects of judgments. The first is the effect of foreclosing any litigation of matters that never have been litigated, because of the determination that they should have been advanced in an earlier suit. The second is the effect of foreclosing relitigation of matters that have once been litigated and decided. The first of these, preclusion of matters that were never litigated, has gone under the name, 'true res judicata,' or the names, 'merger' and 'bar.' The second doctrine, preclusion of matters that have once been decided, has usually been called 'collateral estoppel.' Professor Allan Vestal has long argued for the use of the names 'claim preclusion' and 'issue preclusion' for these two doctrines [Vestal, Rationale of Preclusion, 9 St. Louis U. L.J. 29 (1964)], and this usage is increasingly employed by the courts as it is by Restatement Second of Judgment. Charles Alan Wright, The Law of Federal Courts § 100a, at 722–23 (5th ed. 1994).

res litigiosa (rays li-tee-ee-oh-see), n. pl. [Latin] Civil law. Things that are in litigation; property or rights that are the subject of a pending action.

res mancipi (rays man-sa-pl), [Latin] "things of mancipium" Roman law. Property, specifically Italic land with its rustic servitudes and beasts of draft or burden, that can be transferred only by a formal ceremony of mancipation. — Also termed mancipio res; things mancipi. See mancipation.

res manerar facultatis (rays meer-ee-fak-al-tay-tis), [Law] Scots law. A matter of mere power.

"Res manerar facultatis . . . Such, for example, is the right which a proprietor has of building upon his own property, or which any one has of walking upon the seashore, or sailing upon the sea, or on any navigable river. It is a right which may or may not be exercised at the pleasure of him who holds it; and such rights are never lost by their non-exercise for any length of time, because it is of their essential character that they may be used or exercised at any time." John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 554 (4th ed. 1894).

res mobiles (rays moh-bo-leez), n. pl. [Latin] Civil law. Movable things; chattels personal.

res nec mancipi (rays nek man-sa-pl), [Latin] "things not of mancipium" Roman law. Property that can be transferred without a formal ceremony of mancipation. — Also termed things nec mancipi.

res non est integra (rays non est in-to-gra), [Latin] Hist. The original position has changed; performance has taken place (in whole or in part).

res nullius (rays na-nil-us), [Latin] "thing of no one" A thing that can belong to no one; an ownerless chattel.

resolution. (17c) 1. Parliamentary law. A main motion that formally expresses the sense, will, or action of a deliberative assembly (esp. a legislative body). A resolution is a highly formal kind of main motion, often containing a preamble, and one or more resolving clauses in the form, "Resolved, That . . . ."

concurrent resolution. (17c) A resolution passed by one house and agreed to by the other. It expresses the legislature's opinion on a subject but does not have the force of law joint resolution. (17c) A legislative resolution passed by both houses. It has the force of law and is subject to executive veto. [Cases: Statutes C=22, 229.]

simple resolution. (18c) A resolution passed by one house only. It expresses the opinion or affects the internal affairs of the passing house, but it does not have the force of law.

2. Formal action by a corporate board of directors or other corporate body authorizing a particular act, transaction, or appointment. — Also termed corporate resolution.

shareholder resolution. A resolution by shareholders, usu. to ratify the actions of the board of directors.

3. A document containing such an expression or authorization.

resolutions committee. See committee.

Resolution Trust Corporation. A federal agency established to act as a receiver for insolvent federal savings-and-loan associations and to transfer or liquidate those associations' assets. The agency was created when the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation was abolished in 1989. — Abbr. RTC. See federal savings and loan insurance corporation. [Cases: Building and Loan Associations C=42(6).]

resolutive condition. See resolutory condition under condition (2).

resolutory (ri zahl-yo tor ee), adj. (1818) Operating or serving to annul, dissolve, or terminate .

resolutory condition. See condition (2).

resolving clause. See clause.

resort, n. Something that one turns to for aid or refuge <the court of last resort>. — resort, vb.

respite (res-pit), n. (14c) 1. A period of temporary delay; an extension of time. 2. A temporary suspension of a death sentence; a reprieve. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment C=1798.] 3. A delay granted to a jury or court for further consideration of a verdict or appeal. 4. Civil law. An agreement between a debtor and several creditors for an extension of time to repay the various debts. L. Civ. Code art. 3084. — respite, vb.

forced respite. A respite in which some of the creditors are compelled by a court to give the same extension of time that the other creditors have agreed to.

voluntary respite. A respite in which all the creditors agree to the debtor's proposal for an extension of time.

respondeat ouster (ri spo-dee-at ow-star). [Law Latin "let him make further answer"] An interlocutory judgment or order that a party who made a dilatory plea that has been denied must now plead on the merits. — Also termed judgment respondeat ouster. [Cases: Pleading C=111, 47.]

"In case of felony, if the plea be held bad, the judgment is respondeat ouster; or rather, as the defendant generally pleads over to the felony, the jury are charged again, and that at the same time with the issue on the plea of autrefois acquit, to inquire of the second issue, and the trial proceeds as if no plea in bar had been pleaded." 1 Joseph Chitty, A Practical Treatise on the Criminal Law 461 (2d ed. 1826).

respondeat superior (ri spo-dee-at soo-peer ee-ar or so peer ee or). [Law Latin "let the superior make answer"] (17c) Torts. The doctrine holding an employer or principal liable for the employee's or agent's wrongful acts committed within the scope of the employment or agency. — Also termed master-servant rule. See scope of employment. [Cases: Labor and Employment C=3026; Principal and Agent C=159(2).]

"Most courts have made little or no effort to explain the result, and have taken refuge in rather empty phrases, such as 'he who does a thing through another does it himself,' or the endlessly repeated formula of 'respondeat superior,' which in itself means nothing more than 'look to the man higher up.'" W. Page Keeton et al., The Law of Torts § 69, at 500 (5th ed. 1984).

respondent. (16c) 1. The party against whom an appeal is taken; appellee. In some appellate courts, the parties are designated as petitioner and respondent. In most appellate courts in the United States, the parties are designated as appellant and appellee. Often the designations depend on whether the appeal is taken by writ of certiorari (or writ of error) or by direct appeal. [Cases: Appeal and Error C=326; Federal Courts C=545.1.] 2. The party against whom a motion or petition is filed. Cf. petitioner. 3. At common law, the defendant in an equity proceeding. 4. Civil law. One who answers for another or acts as another's security.

respondent bank. See bank.

respondentia (ree spo den shee-a or res pon). [Law Latin fr. Latin respondere "to answer"] A loan secured by the cargo on one's ship rather than the ship itself. Cf. bottomry. [Cases: Shipping C=88.]

respondentia bond. See bond (4).

respondere non debet (ri spo da ree non deb eet). [Latin] Common-law pleading. The prayer of a plea in which the defendant insists that he or she does not have to answer — because of privilege, for example.

responsa prudentium (ri-spon-sa proo-den-shee-om). [Latin "the answers of the learned"] roman law. The opinions and judgments of eminent lawyers or jurists on questions of law addressed to them.

The responsa prudentium originally constituted part of the early Roman civil law. Roman citizens seeking legal advice, as well as magistrates and judges, often referred legal questions to leading jurists so as to obtain their opinions (responsa). The responsa of some leading jurists were collected, much in the manner of caselaw digests, and many of them passed into Justinian's Digest. The phrase responsa prudentium gradually migrated to the Roman law, but today it is of primarily historical use. — Also spelled responsa prudentum.

"[The] judex, or as we would now call him, the referee, might have no technical knowledge of law whatever. Under such conditions the unlearned judicial magistrate naturally looked for light and leading to the jurisconsults who instructed them through their responsa prudentum, the technical name given to their opinions as experts, which were promptly recorded on tablets by their students or disciples." Hannis Taylor, The Science of Jurisprudence 90–91 (1908).

response. Patents. A patent applicant's answer to an office action, usu. countering the examiner's rejections and objections and often amending the claims. [Cases: Patents 15c–109.]

responsibility, n. (15c) 1. liability (1). 2. Criminal law. A person's mental fitness to answer in court for his or her actions. See competency. [Cases: Mental Health 1427. 3. Criminal law. Guilt. — Also termed (in senses 2 & 3) criminal responsibility. — responsible, adj.

"[As for] the ambiguities of the word 'responsibility,' . . . it is, I think, still important to distinguish two of the very different things this difficult word may mean. To say that someone is legally responsible for something often means only that under legal rules he is liable to be made either to suffer or to pay compensation in certain eventualities. The expression 'he'll pay for it' covers both these things. In this the primary sense of the word, though a man is normally only responsible for his own actions or the harm he has done, he may also be responsible for the actions of other persons if legal rules so provide. Indeed in this sense a baby in arms or a totally insane person might be legally responsible — again, if the rules so provide; for the word simply means liable to be made to account or pay and we might call this sense of the word 'legal accountability.' But the new idea — the programme of eliminating responsibility — is not, as some have feared, meant to eliminate legal accountability: persons who break the law are not just to be left free. What is to be eliminated are enquiries as to whether a person who has done what the law forbids was responsible at the time he did it and responsible in this sense does not refer to the legal status of accountability. It means the capacity, so far as this is a matter of a man's mind or will, which normal people have to control their actions and conform to law. In this sense of responsibility a man's responsibility can be said to be 'impaired.'" H.L.A. Hart, "Changing Conceptions of Responsibility," in Punishment and Responsibility 186, 196–97 (1968).

"Responsibility means answerability or accountability. It is used in the criminal law in the sense of 'criminal responsibility' and hence means answerability to the criminal law." Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law and Procedure: Cases and Materials 399 (5th ed. 1977).

responsible broker-dealer. See broker.

responsive, adj. (15c) Giving or constituting a response; answering <the witness's testimony is not responsive to the question.> [Cases: Witnesses C= 248.]

responsive action. Patents. A patent applicant's answer to an examiner rejections in an office action. — To be responsive, the answer must address all of the examiner's issues in detail, rather than merely submitting substitute claims. [Cases: Patents C= 108.]

responsive pleading. See pleading (1).

responsive verdict. See verdict.

res privateae (rays pri-vay-tee), n. pl. [Latin "private things"] roman & civil law. Things that can be owned by individuals or by the state and its political subdivisions in their capacity as private citizens. La. Civ. Code art. 450. — Also termed res in privatorum patrimonio.

res publicae (rays pob-li-see), n. pl. [Latin "public things"] roman & civil law. Things that cannot be individually owned because they belong to the public, such as the sea, navigable waters, and highways. — Public things are owned by the state and its political subdivisions in their capacity as public persons. La. Civ. Code art. 449.

res quotidianaee (rays kwoh-tid-ee-ee-ay-nee), n. pl. [Latin] civil law. Everyday matters; familiar points or questions.

res religiosae (rays ri-lie-ee-oh-see), n. pl. [Latin] civil law. Religious things; esp., burial places.

res repetundae (rays rep-o-ton-dee), [Latin] "things due to be repaid" roman law. 1. Money or things that can be reclaimed by a person who was forced to give them to a public official. 2. The illegal act of forcing someone to give money or things; extortion. — Sometimes (erroneously) shortened to repetundae. See crimen repetundum.

res sanctae (rays sak-tee), n. pl. [Latin] "sacred things"] roman law. The walls of a city. — The Romans considered maintenance of city walls so important that damage to a city's walls was a capital offense.

rest, vb. (1905) 1. (Of a litigant) to voluntarily conclude presenting evidence in a trial <after the police officer's testimony, the prosecution rested>. 2. (Of a litigant) to voluntarily conclude presenting evidence in (a trial) <the defense rested its case after presenting just two witnesses>. — In sense 1, the verb is intransitive; in sense 2, it is transitive.
Restatement. One of several influential treatises published by the American Law Institute describing the law in a given area and guiding its development. • The Restatements use a distinctive format of black-letter rules, official comments, illustrations, and reporter’s notes. Although the Restatements are frequently cited in cases and commentary, a Restatement provision is not binding on a court unless it has been officially adopted as the law by that jurisdiction’s highest court. Restatements have been published in the following areas of law: Agency, Conflict of Laws, Contracts, Employment Law, Foreign Relations Law of the United States, Judgments, Law Governing Lawyers, Property, Restitution, Security, Suretyship and Guaranty, Torts, Trusts, and Unfair Competition. — Also termed Restatement of the Law.

"We speak of the work which the organization should undertake as a restatement; its object should not only be to help make certain much that is now uncertain and to simplify unnecessary complexities, but also to promote those changes which will tend better to adapt the laws to the needs of life. The character of the restatement which we have in mind can be best described by saying that it should be at once analytical, critical and constructive." Committee on the Establishment of a Permanent Organization for the Improvement of the Law (Elihu Root, chairman), Report Proposing the Establishment of an American Law Institute, 1 All Proc. 14 (1923).

restater. (1955) An author or reporter of a Restatement.

restaur (res-tor). 1. The recourse that insurers (esp. marine insurers) have against a ship’s master if a loss occurs through the master’s fault or negligence. 3. The recourse that one has against a guarantor or other person under a duty to indemnify. — Also spelled restor.

restitutio in integrum (res-ta-t[yo]oo-shee-oh in in-ta-grom). [Latin] Roman & civil law. Restoration to the previous condition or the status quo. • In Roman law, a praetor could accomplish this by annulling a contract or transaction that was strictly legally valid but inequitable and by restoring the parties to their previous legal relationship. The phrase is still sometimes used in American law (esp. in Louisiana) when a court annuls a contract and orders restitution on equitable grounds.

restitution, n. (13c) 1. A body of substantive law in which liability is based not on tort or contract but on the defendant’s unjust enrichment. See UNJUST ENRICHMENT. 2. The set of remedies associated with that body of law, in which the measure of recovery is usu. based not on the plaintiff’s loss, but on the defendant’s gain. Cf. COMPENSATION; DAMAGES. 3. Return or restoration of some specific thing to its rightful owner or status. 4. Compensation for loss; esp., full or partial compensation paid by a criminal to a victim, not awarded in a civil trial for tort, but ordered as part of a criminal sentence or as a condition of probation. [Cases: Damages C= 1; Implied and Constructive Contracts C= 4; Infants C= 224; Sentencing and Punishment C= 1973, 2100–2217.] — restitutionary, adj.

"The term ‘restitution’ appears in early decisions, but general recognition probably began with the publication of the Restatement of Restitution [in 1937]. The term is not wholly apt since it suggests restoration to the successful party of some benefit obtained from him. Usually this will be the case where relief is given, but by no means always. There are cases in which the successful party obtains restitution of something he did not have before, for example a benefit received by the defendant from a third person which justly should go to the plaintiff." George E. Palmer, The Law of Restitution § 1.1, at 4 (1978).

"Restitution" is an ambiguous term, sometimes referring to the disgorging of something which has been taken and at times referring to compensation for injury done. Often, the result under either meaning of the term would be the same. If the plaintiff has been defrauded into paying $1,000 to the defendant, his loss and the defendant’s gain coincide. Where they do not coincide, as where the plaintiff is out of pocket more than the defendant has gained and the defendant’s conduct is tortious, the plaintiff will recover his loss in a quasi-contractual or equitable action for restitution. Unjust enrichment as well as unjust enrichment is a ground for restitution. If the defendant is guilty of a non-tortious misrepresentation, the measure of recovery is not rigid but, as in other cases of restitution, such factors as relative fault, the agreed upon risks, and the fairness of alternative risk allocations not agreed upon and not attributable to the fault of either party need to be weighed." John D. Calamari & Joseph M. Perillo, The Law of Contracts § 9-23, at 376 (3d ed. 1987).

restitutionary redress. See REDRESS.

restitution damages. See DAMAGES.

restitutio ad integrum (res-ta-t[yo]oo-shee-oh in in-ta-grom). [Latin] Eccles. law. Restoration to the previous condition or the status quo. A writ restoring someone who had been suspected or accused of a felony to the church.

restitution interest. See INTEREST (2).

restitutory interdict. See INTERDICT (1).

restor. See REStAUR.

restorative justice. An alternative delinquency sanction focused on repairing the harm done, meeting the victim’s needs, and holding the offender responsible for his or her actions. • Restorative-justice sanctions use a balanced approach, producing the least restrictive disposition while stressing the offender’s accountability and providing relief to the victim. The offender may be ordered to make restitution, to perform community service, or to make amends in some other way that the court orders.

restorative motion. See MOTION (2).

restoratory motion. See restorative motion under MOTION (2).

restraining order. (1876) 1. A court order prohibiting family violence; esp., an order restricting a person from harassing, threatening, and sometimes merely contacting or approaching another specified person. • This type of order is issued most commonly in cases of domestic violence. A court may grant an ex parte restraining order in a family-violence case if it is necessary to (1) achieve the government’s interest in protecting victims of family violence from further abuse, (2) ensure prompt action where there is an immediate threat of danger, and (3) provide governmental control by ensuring that judges grant such orders only where there is an immediate danger of such abuse. Fuentes v. Shevin, 407 U.S. 67, 92 S.Ct. 1983 (1972). — Also termed protection order; protective order; stay-away order. See ex parte motion under motion. [Cases: Protection of Endangered Persons ☞70–82.] 2. TEMPORARY RESTRAINING ORDER. 3. A court order entered to prevent the dissipation or loss of property.

restraining power. See power (3).

restraining statute. See disabling statute under statute.

restraint, n. (15c) 1. Confinement, abridgment, or limitation . See prior restraint. 2. Prohibition of action; holding back <the victim’s family exercised no restraint — they told the suspect exactly what they thought of him>. 3. RESTRAINT OF TRADE. 4. FORFEITURE RESTRAINT.

restraint of marriage. (16c) A condition (esp. in a gift or bequest) that nullifies the grant to which it applies if the grantee marries or remarries. • Restraints of marriage are usu. void if they are general or unlimited in scope. [Cases: Contracts ☞111.]

restraint of princes. Archaic. An embargo. • The phrase still occasionally appears in marine-insurance contexts. — Also termed restraint of princes and rulers; restraint of princes, rulers, and people. See EMBARGO.

restraint of trade. 1. A limitation on business dealings or professional or gainful occupations. 2. Antitrust. An agreement between two or more businesses or a combination of businesses intended to eliminate competition, create a monopoly, artificially raise prices, or otherwise adversely affect the free market. • Restraints of trade are usu. illegal, but may be declared reasonable if they are in the best interests of both the parties and the public. — Often shortened to restraint. — Also termed conspiracy in restraint of trade. See PER SE RULE; RULE OF REASON. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation ☞537.]

horizontal restraint. A restraint of trade imposed by agreement between competitors at the same level of distribution. • The restraint is horizontal not because it has horizontal effects, but because it is the product of a horizontal agreement. — Also termed horizontal agreement.

unreasonable restraint of trade. A restraint of trade that produces a significant anticompetitive effect and thus violates antitrust law.

vertical restraint. A restraint of trade imposed by agreement between firms at different levels of distribution (as between manufacturer and retailer).

restraint on alienation. (18c) 1. A restriction, usu. in a deed of conveyance, on a grantee’s ability to sell or transfer real property; a provision that conveys an interest and that, even after the interest has become vested, prevents or discourages the owner from disposing of it at all or from disposing of it in particular ways or to particular persons. • Restraints on alienation are generally unenforceable as against public policy favoring the free alienability of land. — Also termed unreasonable restraint on alienation. 2. A trust provision that prohibits or penalizes alienation of the trust corpus. [Cases: Perpetuities ☞6–9.]

restriction. (15c) 1. A limitation or qualification. 2. A limitation (esp. in a deed) placed on the use or enjoyment of property. See restrictive covenant under COVENANT (4). [Cases: Covenants ☞49–52, 69.]

conservation restriction. See conservation easement under EASEMENT.

3. Military law. A deprivation of liberty involving moral and legal, rather than physical, restraint. • A military restriction is imposed as punishment either by a commanding officer’s nonjudicial punishment or by a summary, special, or general court-martial. Restriction is a lesser restraint because it permits the restricted person to perform full military duties. See nonjudicial punishment under PUNISHMENT. [Cases: Military Justice ☞526, 1322.1.]

restriction in lieu of arrest. A restriction in which a person is ordered to stay within specific geographical limits, such as a base or a ship, and is permitted to perform full military duties. [Cases: Military Justice ☞935.1.]

4. Patents. A patent examiner’s ruling that a patent application comprises two or more patentably distinct or independent inventions; the requirement that the applicant elect one invention to continue prosecuting under the original application by abandoning some of the original claims. • The applicant may defend the claims by traversing the requirement, abandon any nonelected invention, or continue prosecuting any nonelected invention under a separate divisional application. — Also termed requirement for restriction; restriction requirement; division. Cf. OBJECTION (2); REJECTION (4). [Cases: Patents ☞120.]

restriction application. See divisional application under PATENT APPLICATION.

restriction requirement. See restriction (4). restrictive condition. See negative condition under condition (2).

restrictive principle of sovereign immunity. The doctrine by which a foreign nation's immunity does not apply to claims arising from the nation's private or commercial acts, but protects the nation only from claims arising from its public functions. See commercial-activity exception; JURE GESTIONIS; JURE IMPERII. [Cases: International Law ☞ 10.33.]

"[T]he [Foreign Sovereign] Immunities Act codified the so-called 'restrictive' principle of sovereign immunity, as recognized in international law. Under this doctrine, the immunity of a foreign state in the courts of the United States is 'restricted' to claims involving the foreign state's public acts and does not extend to suits based on its commercial or private conduct."

retainage (ri-tayn-ij). (1901) A percentage of what a landowner pays a contractor, withheld until the construction has been satisfactorily completed and all mechanic's liens are released or have expired. — Also termed retained fund. [Cases: Contracts ☞ 214, 221(3).] retained earnings. See earnings.

retained fund. See retainage.

retained income trust. See grantor-retained income trust under trust.

retainer, n. (18c) 1. A client's authorization for a lawyer to act in a case <the attorney needed an express retainer before making a settlement offer>. [Cases: Attorney and Client ☞ 64.] 2. A fee that a client pays to a lawyer simply to be available when the client needs legal help during a specified period or on a specified matter. [Cases: Attorney and Client ☞ 137.] 3. A lump-sum fee paid by the client to engage a lawyer at the outset of a matter. — Also termed engagement fee. 4. An advance payment of fees for work that the lawyer will perform in the future. — Also termed retaining fee. Cf. attorney's fees. [Cases: Attorney and Client ☞ 137.] — retain, vb.

"Over the years, attorneys have used the term 'retainer' in so many conflicting senses that it should be banished from the legal vocabulary. . . . If some primordial urge drives you to use the term 'retainer,' at least explain what you mean in terms that both you and the client will understand." Mortimer D. Schwartz & Richard C. Wydick. Problems in Legal Ethics 100, 101 (2d ed. 1988).

general retainer. (18c) A retainer for a specific length of time rather than for a specific project. [Cases: Attorney and Client ☞ 137.]

retenta possessione (ri-ten-to pa-zes[h]-ee-oh-nee), [Latin] Hist. Possession being retained.

retenement. Scots law. A possessor's right to keep a movable until the possessor's claim against the movable or its owner is satisfied; a lien.

general retention. Scots law. A possessor's right to keep all property owned by a debtor as security for the debt.
special retention. Scots law. A possessor's right to keep property owned by another until reimbursed for expenditures on the property for its repair or for its care and maintenance.

retrine. A group of persons who are retained to follow and attend to a sovereign, noble, or other distinguished person.

retired stock. See treasury stock under stock.

retirement, n. (16c) 1. Termination of one's own employment or career, esp. upon reaching a certain age or for health reasons; retirement may be voluntary or involuntary. 2. Withdrawal from action or for privacy <Carol's retirement to her house by the lake>. 3. Withdrawal from circulation; payment of a debt <retirement of a series of bonds>. See redemption. — retire, vb.

compulsory retirement. Mandatory retirement based on a person's age, esp. as specified in a union contract, by corporate policy, or by statute.

retirement annuity. See annuity.

Retirement Equity Act of 1984. A federal law that requires private pension plans to comply with the court-ordered division of a pension between spouses and permits the plan administrator to pay all or part of a worker's pensions and survivor benefits directly to a former spouse if the plan has been served with a court order that meets the federal requirements for a qualified domestic-relations order. 29 USCA § 1056(d)(3). See qualified domestic-relations order. [Cases: Labor and Employment C—594.] retirement-income insurance. See insurance.

retirement plan. See employee benefit plan.

retorna brevium (ri-tor-na bree-am). [Law Latin] Hist. The return of a writ. • This was the indorsement on a writ by a sheriff or other officer, reporting on the writ's execution.

retorno habendo. See de retorno habendo.

retorsion (ri-tor-shan). Int'l law. An act of lawful retaliation in kind for another nation's unfriendly or unfair act. • Examples of retorsion include suspending diplomatic relations, expelling foreign nationals, and restricting travel rights. — Also spelled retortion. Cf. reprisal. (2).

retraction, n. (14c) 1. The act of taking or drawing back <retraction of anticipatory repudiation before breach of contract>. 2. The act of recanting; a statement in recantation <retraction of a defamatory remark>. [Cases: Libel and Slander C—666.] 3. Wills & estates. A withdrawal of a renunciation <because of her retraction, she took property under her uncle's will>. See renunciation (3). 4. Copyright. The right of authors and artists to renounce their creative works and to forbid their sale or display. • Retraction is one of the moral rights of artists recognized in civil-law countries and much of Europe, but largely unavailable in the United States. — Also termed (in sense 4) withdrawal. — retract, vb.

retractus feudalis (ri-trak-tas fyoo-day-lis). [Law Latin “a recall of the fee”] Scots law. A superior's right to pay a debt of a vassal's lands in exchange for the return of the conveyance.

retractit (ri-trak-sit). [Latin “he has withdrawn”] A plaintiff's voluntary withdrawal of a lawsuit in court so that the plaintiff forever forfeits the right of action. • In modern practice, retrait is called voluntary dismissal with prejudice. A dismissal without prejudice does not operate as a retrait. See judgment of retrait under judgment.

retreat rule. (1935) Criminal law. The doctrine holding that the victim of an assault has a duty to retreat instead of resorting to deadly force in self-defense, unless (1) the victim is at home or in his or her place of business (the so-called castle doctrine), or (2) the assailant is a person whom the victim is trying to arrest. • A minority of American jurisdictions have adopted this rule. Cf. no-retreat rule. [Cases: Homicide C—798.]

"The rationale for the retreat rule is not difficult to ascertain, at least in part. It rests upon the view that human life, even the life of an aggressor, is sufficiently important that it should be preserved when to do so requires only the sacrifice of the much less important interest in standing one's ground." George E. Dix, “Justification: Self-defense,” in 3 Encyclopedia of Crime and Justice 946, 948-49 (Sanford H. Kudil ed., 1983).

retrial, n. (18c) A new trial of an action that has already been tried. See trial de novo under trial. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure C—2311; New Trial C—0.5. — retry, vb.

retributive danger. See danger.

retributive punishment. See punishment.

retributivism (ri-trib-yo-ta-viz-am). (1966) The legal theory by which criminal punishment is justified, as long as the offender is morally accountable, regardless of whether deterrence or other good consequences would result. • According to retributivism, a criminal is thought to have a debt to pay to society, which is paid by punishment. The punishment is also sometimes said to be society's act of paying back the criminal for the wrong done. Opponents of retributivism sometimes refer to it as “vindictive theory.” Cf. hedonistic utilitarianism under utilitarianism; utilitarian deterrence theory. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment C—44.]

maximalist retributivism. The classical form of retributivism, espoused by scholars such as Immanuel Kant, under which it is argued that society has a duty, not just a right, to punish a criminal who is guilty and culpable, that is, someone who has no justification or excuse for the illegal act.

minimalist retributivism. The more contemporary form of retributivism, which maintains that no one should be punished in the absence of guilt and... retroactive, adj. (17c) (Of a statute, ruling, etc.) extending in scope or effect to matters that have occurred in the past. — Also termed retrospective. Cf. PROSPECTIVE (1). [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure \( \Rightarrow \) 419; Courts \( \Rightarrow \) 100(1); Statutes \( \Rightarrow \) 278.2.] — retroactivity, n.

"Retroactivity" is a term often used by lawyers but rarely defined. On analysis it soon becomes apparent, moreover, that it is used to cover at least two distinct concepts. The first, which may be called 'true retroactivity,' consists in the application of a new rule of law to an act or transaction which was completed before the rule was promulgated. The second concept, which will be referred to as 'quasi-retroactivity,' occurs when a new rule of law is applied to an act or transaction in the process of completion. . . . [T]he foundation of these concepts is the distinction between completed and pending transactions. . . ." T.C. Hartley, The Foundations of European Community Law 129 (1981).

retroactive law. (18c) A legislative act that looks backward or contemplates the past, affecting acts or facts that existed before the act came into effect. • A retroactive law is not unconstitutional unless (1) it is in the nature of an ex post facto law or a bill of attainder, (2) impairs the obligation of contracts, (3) divests vested rights, or (4) is constitutionally forbidden. — Also termed RETROACTIVE STATUTE; RETROACTIVE STATUTE. [Cases: Statutes \( \Rightarrow \) 278.3, 278.9.] retrocession. (17c) 1. The act of ceding something back (such as a territory or jurisdiction). [Cases: United States \( \Rightarrow \) 3.] 2. The return of a title or other interest in property to its former or rightful owner. 3. The process of transferring all or part of a reinsured risk to another reinsurer company; reinsurance. • Subsequent retrocessions are referred to as first retrocession, second retrocession, and so on. 4. The amount of risk that is so transferred.

retrocessionaire. Reinsurance. A reinsurer of a reinsurer. See RETROCESSION.

retrocessional agreement. An agreement providing for reinsurance of reinsurance.

return of process. See PROOF OF SERVICE.

return of service. See PROOF OF SERVICE.

return of writ. (18c) The sheriff's bringing back a writ to the court that issued it, with a short written account (usu. on the back) of the manner in which the writ was executed. — Often shortened to return. See RETURN (1). [Cases: Execution \( \Rightarrow \) 334; Sheriffs and Constables \( \Rightarrow \) 87.]

reunification. The return of a child who has been removed from his or her parents because of abuse or neglect by one or both of them. • When a child has been removed from the home because of abuse or neglect, the state's primary goal is family reunification as long as this is in the best interests of the child. The state is required, in most instances, to provide the parent or parents with services that will enable them to provide adequately for their child upon his or her return. After the enactment of the Adoption and Safe Families Act in 1997, states became more concerned with limiting the time that children are in foster care and less concerned with lengthy reunification plans. — Also termed family reunification. See ADOPTION AND SAFE FAMILIES ACT; PERMANENCY PLAN; ADOPTION ASSISTANCE AND CHILD WELFARE ACT. [Cases: Infants \( \Rightarrow \) 155, 231.] — reunify, vb.

re-up, vb. 1. To reenlist in one of the armed forces <the soldier re-upped the day after being discharged>. [Cases: Armed Services \( \Rightarrow \) 18.5.] 2. To sign an extension to a contract, esp. an employment agreement <the star athlete re-upped in a three-year deal worth $12 million>.

reus promittendi (reekus proh-mi-ten-dii). [Latin "party promising"] Roman law. The answerer in a Roman-law stipulation. — Also termed promissor. See stipulation (3).

revenue bond. See bond (3).

Revenue Procedure. An official statement by the IRS regarding the administration and procedures of the tax laws. — Abbr. Rev. Proc. [Cases: Internal Revenue $\Rightarrow$ 3048.]

Revenue Ruling. An official interpretation by the IRS of the proper application of the tax law to a specific transaction. • Revenue Rulings carry some authoritative weight and may be relied on by the taxpayer who requested the ruling. — Abbr. Rev. Rul. [Cases: Internal Revenue $\Rightarrow$ 3043, 3049.]

revenue stamp. (1862) A stamp used as evidence that a tax has been paid. [Cases: Internal Revenue $\Rightarrow$ 4406; Taxation $\Rightarrow$ 3679.]

revenue tariff. See tariff (2).

re, verbis, literis, consensu (ree, var-bis, lit-er-is, kan-sen-syoo). [Latin] Roman law. By the performance (namely, handing over), by words, by writing, by consent. • The phrase appeared in reference to the four classes of Roman contract.

reversal. n. (15c) 1. An appellate court’s overturning of a lower court’s decision. [Cases: Appeal and Error $\Rightarrow$ 1156–1180; Criminal Law $\Rightarrow$ 1185–1190; Federal Courts $\Rightarrow$ 932.] 2. Securities. A change in a security’s near-term market-price trend.

reverse, vb. To overturn (a judgment) on appeal. • Sometimes, the verb is used without a direct object <We reverse>. The equivalent expression in British English is to allow the appeal. [Cases: Appeal and Error $\Rightarrow$ 1156–1180; Criminal Law $\Rightarrow$ 1187; Federal Courts $\Rightarrow$ 932.]

reverse annuity mortgage. See mortgage.

reverse bear hug. See bear hug.

reverse bonus. See reverse contingent fee under contingent fee.

reverse condemnation. See inverse condemnation under condemnation.

reverse confusion. See confusion.

reverse-confusion doctrine. Intellectual property. The rule that it is unfair competition if the defendant’s use of a title that is confusingly similar to the one used by the plaintiff leads the public to believe that the plaintiff’s work is the same as the defendant’s, or that it is derived from or associated in some manner with the defendant. • Under the conventional passing-off form of unfair competition, similarity of titles leads the public to believe that the defendant’s work is the same as the plaintiff’s work, or is in some manner derived from the plaintiff. But in reverse confusion, the unfair competition results from the confusion created about the origin of the plaintiff’s work. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation $\Rightarrow$ 38; Trademarks $\Rightarrow$ 1089.]

reverse consensus. Intellectual property. In a dispute-settlement procedure under TRIPs, an agreement between the parties that a dispute should not be submitted to a World Trade Organization panel for adjudication. • Before TRIPs, any party could delay formation of a WTO panel or adoption of its report by withholding consensus. Under TRIPs, each process is automatic unless all parties agree not to go forward.

reverse discrimination. See discrimination.

reverse doctrine of equivalents. See doctrine of equivalents.

reverse doctrine of equivalents.
reverse-engineering, Intellectual property. The process of discovering how an invention works by inspecting and studying it, esp. by taking it apart in order to learn how it works and how to copy it and improve it. • Reverse engineering is a proper means of discovering trade secrets, according to the Uniform Trade Secrets Act, and is a defense against a suit for misappropriation of trade secrets. But it is not a defense in a suit for patent infringement. — reverse-engineer, vb.

reverse Erie doctrine. 1. The rule that a state court must apply federal law when state law is preempted by federal law or federal law prevails by an Erie-like balancing of the facts in situations not already regulated by Congress or the Constitution. 2. Maritime law. The principle that a state court hearing an admiralty or maritime case must apply federal admiralty law even if that law conflicts with the law of the state. — Often shortened to reverse Erie. — Also termed converse-Erie doctrine; inverse-Erie doctrine. Cf. Erie doctrine. [Cases: Admiralty C-120.]

reverse FOIA suit (foY-ə). A lawsuit by the owner of a trade secret or other information exempt from disclosure under a freedom-of-information act to prevent a governmental entity from making that information available to the public. See freedom of information act. [Cases: Records C-31, 63.]

reverse triangular merger. See merger.

reversion, n. (15c) 1. The interest that is left after subtracting what the transferor has parted with from what the transferor originally had; specif., a future interest in land arising by operation of law whenever an estate owner grants to another a particular estate, such as a life estate or a term of years, but does not dispose of the entire interest. • A reversion occurs automatically upon termination of the prior estate, as when a life tenant dies. — Also termed reversionary estate; estate in reversion; equitable reversion. [Cases: Reversions C-1.] 2. Loosely, remainder. Cf. possibility of reverter; remainder. — reversionary, adj. — revert, vb.

reversionary estate. See reversion.

reversionary interest. See interest (2).

reversionary lease. See lease.

reversioner. (17c) 1. One who possesses the reversion to an estate; the grantor or heir in reversion. [Cases: Reversions C-1.] 2. Broadly, one who has a lawful interest in land but not the present possession of it.

reversor. Scots law. A debtor who secures a debt by pledging property to a creditor and retaining a right of reversion.

reverter. See possibility of reverter.

reverter guarantee. Real estate. A mortgage clause protecting the mortgagor against a loss occasioned by the occurrence of a terminating event under a possibility of reverter. See possibility of reverter. [Cases: Mortgages C-211.]

revest, vb. (16c) To vest again or anew <revesting of title in the former owner>.

rev'g. abbr. Reversing.

review, n. (15c) 1. Consideration, inspection, or reexamination of a subject or thing. 2. Plenary power to direct and instruct an agent or subordinate, including the right to remand, modify, or vacate any action by the agent or subordinate, or to act directly in place of the agent or subordinate <Subject to the Assembly's review, the Council enjoys the same powers of review and delegation as the Assembly>. — review, vb.

appellate review. (1837) Examination of a lower court's decision by a higher court, which can affirm, reverse, modify, or vacate the decision. [Cases: Appeal and Error C-836; Federal Courts C-751.]

discretionary review. (1914) The form of appellate review that is not a matter of right but that occurs only with the appellate court's permission. See certiorari. [Cases: Appeal and Error C-358; Federal Courts C-660.1.] judicial review. See judicial review.

reviewable issue. See appealable decision under decision.

review hearing. See hearing.

revised statutes. See statute.

revision, n. (17c) 1. A reexamination or careful review for correction or improvement. 2. Parliamentary law. A general and thorough rewriting of a governing document, in which the entire document is open to amendment <bylaws revision>. 3. Military law. The reconvening of a general or special court-martial to revise its action or to correct the record because of an improper or inconsistent action concerning the findings or the sentence. • A revision can occur only if it will not materially prejudice the accused. [Cases: Military Justice C-1397.] 4. An altered version of a work.

revival, n. (17c) 1. Restoration to current use or operation; esp., the act of restoring the validity or legal force of an revocatory action (rev-a-kər-ee or ri-vōk-a-tor-ee). Civil law. An action brought by a creditor to annul a contract that has been entered into by the debtor and that will increase the debtor’s insolvency. La. Civ. Code art. 2036. [Cases: Fraudulent Conveyances C=205–328.]

revocatur (ree-vō-kə-tor-ee). [Latin] Hist. It is recalled. • In former English practice, this was used as a notation on a judgment that was set aside because of a factual error (as opposed to being reversed because of legal error).

revocation, n. An overthrow of a government, usu. resulting in fundamental political change; a successful rebellion. — revolutionary, adj. & n. — revolt, vb.

rezone, vb. (1951) To change the zoning boundaries or restrictions of (an area) <rezone the neighborhood>. See zoning. [Cases: Zoning and Planning C=151–199.]

RFA. abbr. request for admission.

RFI. abbr. request for instructions.

RFP. abbr. request for production. 2. See request for proposal.

r.g. abbr. REGULA GENERALIS.

rhadamantine (rad-ə-man-thin), adj. (often cap.) (1840) (Of a judge) rigorous and inflexible <the judge’s rhadamantine interpretation of procedural requirements makes it essential to study the local rules before appearing in court>.

Rhodian law (roh-dee-ən). As legend would have it, the earliest known system or code of maritime law, supposedly dating from 900 B.C. and adopted intact by the Romans. • Rhodian law was purportedly developed by the people of the island Rhodes, located in the Aegean Sea and now belonging to Greece. The ancient inhabitants of Rhodes are said to have controlled the seas because of their commercial prosperity and naval superiority. Despite the uncertainties about its history, Rhodian law has often been cited as a source of admiralty and maritime law.

"A strong tradition says that a maritime code was promulgated by the island of Rhodes, in the Eastern Mediterranean, at the height of its power; the ridiculously early date of 900 B.C. has even been assigned to this supposi-Richard Roe. A fictitious name for a male party to a legal proceeding.

RICO. The Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act, any individual or entity capable of holding a legal or beneficial interest in property and posing a continuous threat of engaging in the acts of racketeering. [Cases: Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act, § 1962.

RHS. abbr. RURAL HOUSING SERVICE.

ribbon-matching rule. See MIRROR-IMAGE RULE.

Richard Roe. A fictitious name for a male party to a legal proceeding, used because the party's true identity is unknown or because his real name is being withheld; esp., the second of two such parties. Cf. JOHN DOE. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 101; Parties 67, 73.]

RICO (ree-koh). abbr. (1972) RACKETEER INFLUENCED AND CORRUPT ORGANIZATIONS ACT.

RICO person. Under the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act, any individual or entity capable of holding a legal or beneficial interest in property and posing a continuous threat of engaging in the acts of racketeering. [Cases: Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations 1845.

rider. An attachment to some document, such as a legislative bill or an insurance policy, that amends or supplements the document. • A rider to a legislative bill often addresses subject matter unrelated to the main purpose of the bill. [Cases: Insurance 1845.

riens per descent (ryan pair day-sawn). [Law French “nothing by descent”] Hist. The plea of an heir who is sued for the ancestor's debt and who received no land or assets from the ancestor.

rier county. See RERE-COUNTY.

RIF. abbr. Reduction in force. See LAYOFF.

rif, vb. Slang. To lay off (a worker). • The word derives from the acronym for reduction in force.

rigging the market. The practice of artificially inflating stock prices, by a series of bids, so that the demand for those stocks appears to be high and investors will therefore be enticed into buying the stocks. See MANIPULATION. [Cases: Securities Regulation 60.25.

right, n. (bef. 12c) 1. That which is proper under law, morality, or ethics <know right from wrong>. 2. Something that is due to a person by just claim, legal guarantee, or moral principle <the right of liberty>. 3. A power, privilege, or immunity secured to a person by law <the right to dispose of one's estate>. 4. A legally enforceable claim that another will do or will not do a given act; a recognized and protected interest the violation of which is a wrong . 5. (often pl.) The interest, claim, or ownership that one has in tangible or intangible property  <publishing rights>. 6. The privilege of corporate shareholders to purchase newly issued securities in amounts proportionate to their holdings. 7. The negotiable certificate granting such a privilege to a corporate shareholder.

"Right is a correlative to duty; where there is no duty there can be no right. But the converse is not necessarily true. There may be duties without rights. In order for a duty to be a right, it must be a duty to act or forbear. Thus, among those duties which have rights corresponding to them do not come the duties, if such there be, which call for an inward state of mind, as distinguished from external acts or forbearances. It is only to acts and forbearances that others have a right. It may be our duty to love our neighbor, but he has no right to our love." John Chipman Gray, The Nature and Sources of the Law 8-9 (2d ed. 1921).

"[T]he word 'right' is one of the most deceptive of pitfalls; it is so easy to slip from a qualified meaning in the premise to an unqualified one in the conclusion. Most rights are qualified." American Bank & Trust Co. v. Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta, 256 U.S. 350, 358, 41 S.Ct. 499, 500 (1921) (Holmes, J.).

"[In Hohfeldian terminology] A is said to have a right that B shall do an act when, if B does not do the act, A can initiate legal proceedings that will result in coercing B. In such a situation B is said to have a duty to do the act. Right and duty are therefore correlative, since in this sense there can never be a duty without a right." E. Allen Farnsworth, Contracts § 3.4, at 114. n.3 (3d ed. 1999).

absolute right. 1. A right that belongs to every human being, such as the right of personal liberty; a natural right. 2. An unqualified right; specif., a right that cannot be denied or curtailed except under specific conditions <freedom of thought is an absolute right>. • For example, a plaintiff has an absolute right to voluntarily nonsuit a case before it is finally submitted; after final submission, the court has discretion to grant or deny a voluntary nonsuit. Cf. relative right.

accessory right. A supplementary right that has been added to the main right that is vested in the same owner. • For example, the right in a security is accessory to the right that is secured; a servitude is accessory to the ownership of the land for whose benefit the servitude exists. Cf. principal right.

accrued right. A matured right; a right that is ripe for enforcement (as through litigation).

acquired right. A right that a person does not naturally enjoy, but that is instead procured, such as the right to own property.

civil right. See CIVIL RIGHT.
conditional right. A right that depends on an uncertain event; a right that may or may not exist. • For example, parents have the conditional right to punish their child, the condition being that the punishment must be reasonable.

conjugal rights. See conjugal rights.

equitable right. A right cognizable within a court of equity. • If a legal right and an equitable right conflict, the legal right ordinarily prevails over and destroys the equitable right even if the legal right arose after the equitable right. Breaches of equitable rights are remedied by means other than monetary damages, such as an injunction or specific performance. With the merger of law and equity in federal and most state courts, the procedural differences between legal and equitable rights have been largely abolished. Cf. legal right (1), (2). [Cases: Equity C--3.] expectant right. A right that is contingent on the occurrence of some future event; a contingent right.

fundamental right. See fundamental right.

imperfect right. A right that is recognized by the law but is not enforceable. • Examples include time-barred claims and claims exceeding the local limits of a court's jurisdiction.

"[T]here are certain rights, sometimes called imperfect rights, which the law recognizes but will not enforce directly. Thus a statute-barred debt cannot be recovered in a court of law, but for certain purposes the existence of the debt has legal significance. If the debtor pays the money, he cannot later sue to recover it as money paid without consideration; and the imperfect right has the faculty of becoming perfect if the debtor makes an acknowledgment of the debt from which there can be inferred a promise to pay." George Whitecross Paton, A Textbook of Jurisprudence 286 (G.W. Paton & David P. Derham eds., 4th ed. 1972).

impresscriptible right. A right that cannot be lost to prescription.

inalienable right. A right that cannot be transferred or surrendered; esp., a natural right such as the right to own property. • Also termed inherent right.

incorporeal right. A right to intangible, rather than tangible, property. • A right to a legal action (a chose in action) is an incorporeal right. See chose in action under chose.

legal right. 1. A right created or recognized by law. • The breach of a legal right is usu. remediable by monetary damages. 2. A right historically recognized by common-law courts. Cf. equitable right. 3. The capacity of asserting a legally recognized claim against one with a correlative duty to act.

natural right. A right that is conceived as part of natural law and that is therefore thought to exist independently of rights created by government or society, such as the right to life, liberty, and property. See natural law.

negative right. A right entitling a person to have another refrain from doing an act that might harm the person entitled. Cf. positive right.

perfect right. A right that is recognized by the law and is fully enforceable.

peripheral right. A right that surrounds or springs from another right.

personal right. 1. A right that forms part of a person's legal status or personal condition, as opposed to the person's estate. 2. See right in personam.

political right. The right to participate in the establishment or administration of government, such as the right to vote or the right to hold public office. • Also termed political liberty. [Cases: Constitutional Law C--1460-1482; Elections C--1; Officers and Public Employees C--18.]

positive right. A right entitling a person to have another do some act for the benefit of the person entitled. Cf. negative right.

precarious right. A right enjoyed at the pleasure of another; a right that can be revoked at any time.

primary right. A right prescribed by the substantive law, such as a right not to be defamed or assaulted. • The enforcement of a primary right is termed specific enforcement.

principal right. A right to which has been added a supplementary right in the same owner. Cf. accessory right.

private right. A personal right, as opposed to a right of the public or the state. Cf. public right.

procedural right. (1911) A right that derives from legal or administrative procedure; a right that helps in the protection or enforcement of a substantive right. Cf. substantive right.

property right. (1853) A right to specific property, whether tangible or intangible. [Cases: Constitutional Law C--3874.]

proprietary right. A right that is part of a person's estate, assets, or property, as opposed to a right arising from the person's legal status.

public right. A right belonging to all citizens and usu. vested in and exercised by a public office or political entity. Cf. private right.

real right. 1. Civil law. A right that is connected with a thing rather than a person. • Real rights include ownership, use, habitation, usufruct, predial servitude, pledge, and real mortgage.

"The term 'real rights' (jura in re) is an abstraction unknown to classical Roman law. The classical jurists were preoccupied with the availability of remedies rather than the existence of substantive rights, and did not have a generic term to include all 'rights' which civilian scholars of following generations classified as 'real.' The expression ('real rights') was first coined by medieval writers elaborating on the Digest in an effort to explain ancient procedural forms of action in terms of substantive rights." A.N. Yiannopoulos, Real Rights in Louisiana and Comparative Law, 23 La. L. Rev. 161, 163 (1963).

2. JUS IN RE. 3. See right in rem.

relative right. A right that arises from and depends on someone else’s right, as distinguished from an absolute right. Cf. absolute right.

remedial right. The secondary right to have a remedy that arises when a primary right is broken. See secondary right.

right in personam (in par-soh-nam). An interest protected solely against specific individuals. — Also termed personal right; jus in personam. See in PERSONAM.

right in rem (in rem). A right, often negative, exercisable against the world at large. — Also termed real right; jus in rem. See in REM.

“[A] right in rem need not relate to a tangible res. Thus a right that one’s reputation should not be unjustifiably attacked is today described as a right in rem, since it is a right that avails against persons generally. This shows how far the conception has developed from the Roman notion of actio in rem, for one who sues to protect his reputation is not asking for judgment for a specific res. It should also be noticed that on breach of a right in rem, a right in personam arises against the aggressor.” George Whitecross Paton, A Textbook of Jurisprudence 300 (C.W. Paton & David P. Derham eds., 4th ed. 1972).

secondary right. A right prescribed by procedural law to enforce a substantive right, such as the right to damages for a breach of contract. • The enforcement of a secondary right is variously termed secondary enforcement, remedial enforcement, or sanctional enforcement. — Also termed remedial right; sanctioning right.

substantial right. (18c) An essential right that potentially affects the outcome of a lawsuit and is capable of legal enforcement and protection, as distinguished from a mere technical or procedural right.

substantive right (soh-stan-tiv). (18c) A right that can be protected or enforced by law; a right of substance rather than form. Cf. procedural right.

vested right. A right that so completely and definitely belongs to a person that it cannot be impaired or taken away without the person’s consent. [Cases: Constitutional Law $=2630–2655.]

right against self-incrimination. (1911) A criminal defendant’s or a witness’s constitutional right — under the Fifth Amendment, but waivable under certain conditions — guaranteeing that a person cannot be compelled by the government to testify if the testimony might result in the person’s being criminally prosecuted. • Although this right is most often asserted during a criminal prosecution, a person can also “plead the Fifth” in a civil, legislative, administrative, or grand-jury proceeding. — Also termed privilege against self-incrimination; right to remain silent. See self-INCrimINATION. [Cases: Criminal Law $=393; Witnesses $=297.]”

“[The right against self-incrimination, protected by the Fifth Amendment, is central to the accusatorial system of criminal justice: together with the presumption of innocence, the right against self-incrimination ensures that the state must bear the burden of prosecution. . . . The right against self-incrimination is personal. It may be claimed only by the person who himself might be at risk for testifying. It may not be claimed on behalf of another . . . .” Jethro K. Lieberman, The Evolving Constitution 481–82 (1992).

right-and-wrong test. See McNAGHTEN RULES.

rightful. adj. 1. (Of an action) equitable; fair <a rightful dispossession. 2. (Of a person) legitimately entitled to a position <a rightful heir. 3. (Of an office or piece of property) that one is entitled to <her rightful inheritance.

right heir. See heir.

right not to be questioned. See privilege against self-incrimination under PRIVILEGE (3).

right of action. 1. The right to bring a specific case to court. [Cases: Action $=1, 2, 2] 2. A right that can be enforced by legal action; a chose in action. Cf. CAUSE OF ACTION. [Cases: Action $=1, 2; Property $=5.5.]

right of angry. See angry.

right of approach. Int’l law. The right of a warship on the high seas to draw near another vessel to determine its nationality. [Cases: War and National Emergency $=20.]

right of assembly. The constitutional right — guaranteed by the First Amendment — of the people to gather peacefully for public expression of religion, politics, or grievances. — Also termed freedom of assembly; right to assemble. Cf. FREEDOM OF ASOCIATION; unlawful assembly under assembly. [Cases: Constitutional Law $=1430, 1431.]

right of audience. A right to appear and be heard in a given court. • The term is chiefly used in England to denote the right of a certain type of lawyer to appear in a certain type of court.

right of common. See profet A prendre.

right-of-conscience law. A statute allowing healthcare professionals to refuse to provide services that they find morally objectionable.

right of contribution. See CONTRIBUTION (1).

right of discussion. Scots law. See benefit of DISCUSSION.

right of dissent and appraisal. See APPRAISAL REMEDY.

right of division. Scots law. See benefit of DIVISION.

right of election. Wills & estates. A surviving spouse’s statutory right to choose either the gifts given by the deceased spouse in the will or a forced share or a share of the estate as defined in the probate statute. — Also termed widow’s election. See ELECTION (2); augmented estate under ESTATE (3). [Cases: Descent and Distribution $=64; Wills $=778–818.]
right of entry. 1. The right of taking or resuming possession of land or other real property in a peaceable manner. 2. Power of termination. 3. The right to go into another’s real property for a special purpose without committing trespass. • An example is a landlord’s right to enter a tenant’s property to make repairs. [Cases: Trespass C2 24.1. The right of an alien to go into a jurisdiction for a special purpose. • An example is an exchange student’s right to enter another country to attend college. [Cases: Aliens, Immigration, and Citizenship C 162, 163.] right of entry for breach of condition. See power of termination.
right of entry for condition broken. See power of termination.
right of exonerated. See equity of exonerated.
right of family integrity. A fundamental and substantive due-process right for a family unit to be free of unjustified state interference. • While not specifically mentioned in the U.S. Constitution, this right is said to emanate from it. The contours of the right are nebulous and incompletely defined, but it at least includes the right to bear children, to rear them, and to guide them according to the parents’ beliefs, as well as the right of children to be raised by their parents free of unwarranted interference by state officials. The right restricts state action under the Fourteenth Amendment. Interference is not permitted in the absence of a compelling state interest and is reviewed under a strict-scrutiny standard. Most courts require a state to establish by clear and convincing evidence that interference in a familial relationship is justified. — Also termed right to family integrity. See parental-autonomy doctrine; parental-privilege doctrine. Cf. freedom of intimate association under freedom of association. [Cases: Constitutional Law C2 4382.] right of first publication. See common-law copyright under copyright. right of first refusal. 1. A potential buyer’s contractual right to have the first opportunity to buy, at a specified price, if the seller chooses to sell within the contracted period. • For example, if Beth has a right of preemption on Sam’s house for five years at $100,000, Sam can either keep the house for five years (in which case Beth’s right expires) or, if he wishes to sell during those five years, offer the house to Beth, who can either buy it for $100,000 or refuse to buy. If Beth refuses, Sam can sell to someone else. — Also termed first option to buy. Cf. right of first refusal. [Cases: Contracts C2 16.5; Sales C2 24; Vendor and Purchaser C2 18.5.]
right of privacy. 1. The right to personal autonomy. • The U.S. Constitution does not explicitly provide for a right of privacy or for a general right of personal autonomy, but the Supreme Court has repeatedly ruled that a right of personal autonomy is implied in the “zones of privacy” created by specific constitutional guarantees. [Cases: Constitutional Law C2 1210-1275.] 2. The right of a person and the person’s property to be free from unwarranted public scrutiny or exposure. — Also termed right to privacy. See invasion of privacy.
right of publicity. The right to control the use of one’s own name, picture, or likeness and to prevent another from using it for commercial benefit without one’s consent. [Cases: Torts C2 384.]
right of possession. The right to hold, use, occupy, or otherwise enjoy a given property; esp., the right to enter real property and eject or evict a wrongful possessor. [Cases: Forcible Entry and Detainer C2 9(2).]
right of preemption. A potential buyer’s contractual right to have the first opportunity to buy, at a specified price, if the seller chooses to sell within the contracted period. • For example, if Beth has a right of preemption on Sam’s house for five years at $100,000, Sam can either keep the house for five years (in which case Beth’s right expires) or, if he wishes to sell during those five years, offer the house to Beth, who can either buy it for $100,000 or refuse to buy. If Beth refuses, Sam can sell to someone else. — Also termed first option to buy. Cf. right of first refusal. [Cases: Contracts C2 16.5; Sales C2 24; Vendor and Purchaser C2 18.5.] right of redemption. 1. See equity of redemption. 2. See statutory right of redemption.
right of reentry. See power of termination.
right of relief. Scots law. See equity of subrogation. right of reproduction. See reproduction right. right of rescission. See right to rescind. right of retainer. A trustee’s power to withhold trust funds or property from distribution, exercisable when the beneficiary owes money to the trust. [Cases: Trusts C2 282.] right of retention. See retention. right of revolution. The inherent right of a people to cast out its rulers, change its polity, or effect radical reforms in its system of government or institutions, by force or general uprising, when the legal and constitutional methods of making such changes have proved inadequate or are so obstructed as to be unavailable.
right of search. Int’l law. The right to stop, visit, and examine vessels on the high seas to discover whether they or the goods they carry are liable to capture; esp., a belligerent state’s right to stop any merchant vessel of a neutral state on the high seas and to search as reasonably necessary to determine whether the ship has become liable to capture under the international law of naval warfare. • This right carries with it no right to destroy without full examination, unless those on a given vessel actively resist. — Also termed right of visit; right of visit and search; right of visitation; right of visitation and search. See visit.
	right of subrogation. 1. See subrogation. 2. See equity of subrogation. right of suit. A person's right to seek redress in a court. [Cases: Action C=1-1.]
	right of support. Property. 1. A landowner's right to have the land supported by adjacent land and by the underlying earth. [Cases: Adjoining Landowners C=2-2.] 2. A servitude giving the owner of a house the right to rest timber on the walls of a neighboring house. right of survivorship. A joint tenant's right to succeed to the whole estate upon the death of the other joint tenant. — Also termed jus accrescendi. See survivorship; joint tenancy under tenancy. [Cases: Joint Tenancy C=6-6.]
	right of termination. A remedy involving the ending of contractual relations, accorded to a party to a contract when the other party breaches a duty that arises under the contract. • The right of termination is contrasted with a right to rescind, which arises when the other party breaches a duty that arises independently of the contract. — Also termed right to terminate. [Cases: Contracts C=217; Sales C=84.]
	right of transit passage. See transit passage. right of visit. See right of search.
	right of visit and search. See right of search.
	right of visitation and search. See right of search.
	right-of-way. 1. The right to pass through property owned by another. • A right-of-way may be established by contract, by longstanding usage, or by public authority (as with a highway). Cf. easement. [Cases: Easements C=1-1.] 2. The right to build and operate a railway line or a highway on land belonging to another, or the land so used. [Cases: Railroads C=69.] 3. The right to take precedence in traffic. [Cases: Automobiles C=154, 171(4); Highways C=99.] 3. The strip of land subject to a nonowner's right to pass through. — Also written right of way. Pl. rights-of-way.

private right-of-way. See easement.

public right-of-way. The right of passage held by the public in general to travel on roads, freeways, and other thoroughfares.

right of wharfage out. A right to the exclusive use of submerged lands, as by establishing a permanent structure or wharf on the land to dock oceangoing vessels. [Cases: Navigable Waters C=43(2).]

rights arbitration. See grievance arbitration under arbitration. about the substances both to the community where they are produced or stored and to employees who handle them. — Also termed right-to-know statute. [Cases: Environmental Law $\Rightarrow$ 415.]

right to petition. (17c) The constitutional right — guaranteed by the First Amendment — of the people to make formal requests to the government, as by lobbying or writing letters to public officials. — Also termed right of petition; freedom of petition. [Cases: Constitutional Law $\Rightarrow$ 1435–1438.]

right to pursue happiness. See happiness, right to pursue.

right to rescind. The remedy accorded to a party to a contract when the other party breaches a duty that arises independently of the contract. • The right to rescind is contrasted with a right of termination, which arises when the other party breaches a duty that arises under the contract. — Also termed right of rescission. [Cases: Contracts $\Rightarrow$ 258.]

right to terminate. See right of termination.

right-to-work law. (1958) A state law that prevents labor-management agreements requiring a person to join a union as a condition of employment. See open shop under shop. [Cases: Labor and Employment $\Rightarrow$ 1264.]

right-writing test. See McNaghten rules.

rigid constitution. See constitution.

rigor mortis (rig-ar mor-tis). The temporary stiffening of a body's joints and muscles after death. • The onset of rigor mortis can vary from 15 minutes to several hours after death, depending on the body's condition and on atmospheric factors.

ringing out. See ringing up.

ringing the changes. Fraud consisting in the offender's using a large bill to pay for a small purchase, waiting for the shopkeeper to put change on the counter, and then, by a series of maneuvers involving changes of mind — such as asking for some other article of little value or for smaller change for some of the money on the counter — creating a confused situation in which the offender picks up more money than due. [Cases: Larceny $\Rightarrow$ 14(1).]

ringing up. A method by which commodities dealers cooperate to discharge contracts for future delivery in advance by using offsets, cancellations, and price adjustments, thus saving the cost of actual delivery and change of possession. — Also termed ringing out.

riot. n. (14c) 1. An assemblage of three or more persons in a public place taking concerted action in a turbulent and disorderly manner for a common purpose (regardless of the lawfulness of that purpose). 2. An unlawful disturbance of the peace by an assemblage of usu. three or more persons acting with a common purpose in a violent or tumultuous manner that threatens or terrorizes the public or an institution. Cf. unlawful assembly under assembly; civil commotion; rout; affray. [Cases: Riot $\Rightarrow$ 1.] — riotous, adj. — riot, vb.

“A riot is defined as an unlawful assembly (i.e. an assembly come together in pursuance of an unlawful purpose), consisting of at least three persons, which has begun to create a breach of the peace. At Common Law it is an indictable misdemeanor, punishable by a fine and imprisonment. But the statutory form of it, introduced by the Riot Act of 1774, is better known. By that statute, passed to deal with Jacobite disturbances, it was provided that the members of a riotous assembly of twelve or more persons which does not disperse within an hour after the reading by a magistrate of the proclamation contained in the Act, become guilty of felony, which, at the time of the passing of the Act, was a capital offence, and is, even now, punishable with imprisonment for life.” Edward Jenks, The Book of English Law 136 (P.B. Fairest ed., 6th ed. 1967).

“A riot is a tumultuous disturbance of the peace by three or more persons acting together (a) in the commission of a crime by open force, or (b) in the execution of some enterprise, lawful or unlawful, in such a violent, turbulent and unauthorized manner as to create likelihood of public terror and alarm. . . When they come together for this purpose they are guilty of unlawful assembly. When they start on their way to carry out their common design they are guilty of rout. In the actual execution of their design they are guilty of riot.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 483 (3d ed. 1982).

Riot Act. A 1714 English statute that made it a capital offense for 12 or more rioters to remain together for an hour after a magistrate has officially proclaimed that rioters must disperse. • This statute was not generally accepted in the United States and did not become a part of American common law. It did, however, become a permanent part of the English language in the slang phrase reading the riot act (meaning "to reprimand vigorously"), which originally referred to the official command for rioters to disperse.

riotous assembly. See assembly.

riparian (ri-pair ee-an or ri-), adj. (1841) Of, relating to, or located on the bank of a river or stream (or occasionally another body of water, such as a lake) < riparian land> . Cf. littoral. [Cases: Navigable Waters $\Rightarrow$ 39–46; Waters and Water Courses $\Rightarrow$ 34–49, 109.]

riparian land. See land.

riparian proprietor. (1808) A person who is in possession of riparian land or who owns an estate in it; a landowner whose property borders on a stream or river. See riparian right. (often pl.) (1860) The right of a landowner whose property borders on a body of water or watercourse. • Such a landowner traditionally has the right to make reasonable use of the water. — Also termed water right. [Cases: Navigable Waters ☻ 39–46; Waters and Water Courses ☻ 34–47.]

riparian-rights doctrine. (1921) The rule that owners of land bordering on a waterway have equal rights to use the water passing through or by their property. Cf. prior-appropriation doctrine. [Cases: Navigable Waters ☻ 39; Waters and Water Courses ☻ 40.]

ripeness, n. 1. The state of a dispute that has reached, but has not passed, the point when the facts have developed sufficiently to permit an intelligent and useful decision to be made. 2. The requirement that this state must exist before a court will decide a controversy. See justiciability. Cf. mootness doctrine; prematurity (1). [Cases: Action ☻ 6; Federal Courts ☻ 12.1.] — ripe, adj. — ripen, vb.

ripper act. Slang. A statute that gives a government’s chief executive broad powers to appoint and remove department heads or other subordinate officials.

rise, vb. 1. (Of a court) to adjourn finally at the end of a term. 2. (Of spectators and participants in a courtroom) to stand when the judge enters or exits. 3. (Of a court) to take a recess or temporary break, as at the end of a day. 4. Parliamentary law. (Of a special committee that has exhausted its business) to dissolve and send a report to the referring body. • A committee’s rising is equivalent to a deliberative assembly’s adjourning sine die. — Also termed rise and report. Cf. adjourn sine die under adjourn (2).

rising vote. See vote (4).

g vote of thanks. See rising vote under vote (4).

risk, n. (17c) 1. The uncertainty of a result, happening, or loss; the chance of injury, damage, or loss; esp., the existence and extent of the possibility of harm <many fear that skydiving is not worth the risk>. See assumption of the risk. 2. Liability for injury, damage, or loss if it occurs <the consumer-protection statute placed the risk on the manufacturer instead of the buyer>. 3. Insurance. The chance or degree of probability of loss to the subject matter of an insurance policy <the insurer undertook the risk in exchange for a premium>. Cf. peril (2). [Cases: Insurance ☻ 1542.] 4. Insurance. The amount that an insurer stands to lose <the underwriter took steps to reduce its total risk>. 5. Insurance. A person or thing that an insurer considers a hazard; someone or something that might be covered by an insurance policy <she’s a poor risk for health insurance>. [Cases: Insurance ☻ 1542(2)]. 6. Insurance. The type of loss covered by a policy; a hazard from a specified source <this homeowner’s policy covers fire risks and flood risks>. [Cases: Insurance ☻ 2097.] — risk, vb.

absorbable risk. A potential loss that a corporation believes that it can cover either with available capital or with self-insurance.

assigned risk. One who is a poor risk for insurance but whom an insurance company is forced to insure because of state law. • For example, an accident-prone driver is an assigned risk in a state with a compulsory motor-vehicle-insurance statute. [Cases: Insurance ☻ 1528.]

classified risk. In life- and health-insurance policies, the risk created by a policyholder’s substandard health or other peril.

noninsurable risk. A risk for which insurance will not be written because the risk is too uncertain to be the subject of actuarial analysis.

pure risk. A risk that can only result in a loss. • Insurance protects only against pure risks. Cf. speculative risk.

shifting risk. The changing risk covered under an insurance policy insuring a stock of goods or similar property that varies in amount and composition in the course of trade. [Cases: Insurance ☻ 2138(1).]

speculative risk. A risk that can result in either a loss or a gain. Cf. pure risk.

risk arbitrage. See arbitrage.

risk assessment. Family law. A process for ascertaining the likelihood that a person, usu. a parent, will harm a child. • Before a child can be removed from his or her family by a governmental entity, a risk assessment should be performed to determine the likelihood of the child’s being harmed in the future. [Cases: Infants ☻ 192.]

risk-averse, adj. (Of a person) uncomfortable with volatility or uncertainty; not willing to take risks; very cautious .

risk-benefit test. See risk-utility test.

risk capital. See capital.

risk-capital test. Securities. A test of whether a transaction constitutes the sale of a security (and is thus subject to securities laws) based on whether the seller is soliciting risk capital with which to develop a business venture. Cf. capital-risk test. [Cases: Securities Regulation ☻ 5, 248, 249.]

risk distribution. The method by which a legal system allocates the risk of harm between the person who suffers it and the loss.

risk factor. Insurance. In life-insurance ratemaking, the estimated cost of present and future claims, based on a mortality table. • The risk factor is one element that a life insurer uses to calculate premium rates. See premium rate. Cf. interest factor; mortality factor. [Cases: Insurance ☻ 1542.]

risk management. The procedures or systems used to minimize accidental losses, esp. to a business.

Risk Management Agency. An agency in the U.S. Department of Agriculture responsible for administering the programs of the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation and for overseeing other programs relating to the risk management of crops and commodities. — Abbr. RMA.

risk of jury doubt. See burden of persuasion.

risk of loss. (18c) 1. The danger or possibility of damage to, destruction of, or misplacement of goods or other property <commercial transportation always carries some risk of loss>. 2. Responsibility for bearing the costs and expenses of such damage, destruction, or misplacement <the contract specifies who assumes the risk of loss>.

risk of nonpersuasion. See burden of persuasion.

risk-stops-here rule. See doctrine of superior equities.

risk-utility test. (1982) A method of imposing product liability on a manufacturer if the evidence shows that a reasonable person would conclude that the benefits of a product's particular design versus the feasibility of an alternative safer design did not outweigh the dangers inherent in the original design. — Also termed danger-utility test; risk-benefit test. Cf. consumer-continuation test. [Cases: Products Liability ᵃ 129.]

RIT. abbr. Rochester Institute of Technology. See National Technical Institute for the Deaf.

robbery, n. (12c) The illegal taking of property from the person of another, or in the person's presence, by violence or intimidation; aggravated larceny. • Robbery is usu. a felony, but some jurisdictions classify some robberies as high misdemeanors. — Also termed (in Latin) crimen obieriae. See larceny; theft. Cf. burglary. [Cases: Robbery ᵃ 1.] — rob, vb.

"Robbery is larceny from the person by violence or intimidation. It is a felony both at common law and under modern statutes. Under some of the new penal codes robbery does not require an actual taking of property, if force or intimidation is used in the attempt to commit theft this is sufficient." Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 343 (3d ed. 1982).

aggravated robbery. (1878) Robbery committed by a person who either carries a dangerous weapon — often called armed robbery — or inflicts bodily harm on someone during the robbery. • Some statutes also specify that a robbery is aggravated when the victim is a member of a protected class, such as children or the elderly. [Cases: Robbery ᵃ 11.]

armed robbery. (1926) Robbery committed by a person carrying a dangerous weapon, regardless of whether the weapon is revealed or used. • Most states punish armed robbery as an aggravated form of robbery rather than as a separate crime. [Cases: Robbery ᵃ 11.]

conjoint robbery (kon·joyn). A robbery committed by two or more persons. [Cases: Robbery ᵃ 15.]

highway robbery. 1. Robbery committed against a traveler on or near a public highway. [Cases: Robbery ᵃ 1.] 2. Figuratively, a price or fee that is unreasonably high; excessive profit or advantage.

simple robbery. (18c) Robbery that does not involve an aggravating factor or circumstance. [Cases: Robbery ᵃ 1.] robe. (18c) 1. The gown worn by a judge while presiding over court. • In the U.S., judges generally wear plain black gowns. In the U.K., judicial robes vary in color and adornment, depending on the judge's rank, the season, and the court, and are traditionally worn with white horsehair wigs. — Also termed judicial robe. 2. (often cap.) The legal or judicial profession <eminent members of the robe>.

Robert's Rules. 1. A parliamentary manual titled Robert's Rules of Order, originally written in 1875–76 by Henry M. Robert (1837–1923). • The manual went through three editions under its original title and three more (beginning in 1915) under the title Robert's Rules of Order Revised. Since 1970 it has been titled Robert's Rules of Order Newly Revised. It is the best selling and most commonly adopted parliamentary manual in the United States. 2. Any parliamentary manual that includes "Robert's Rules" in its title. • The copyright on the first several editions has expired, and many imitators have adapted those editions in varying degrees of faithfulness to the original. 3. (sing.) rule (3). See parliamentary manual.

Robinson–Patman Act. A federal statute (specif., an amendment to the Clayton Act) prohibiting price discrimination that hinders competition or tends to create a monopoly. 15 USCA § 13. See antitrust law; Clayton Act. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation ᵃ 452.]

root. n. (15c) 'The offense that occurs when an unlawful assembly makes some move toward the accomplishment of its participants' common purpose. Cf. RIOT. [Cases: Riot C≈1.] "The word 'riot' comes from the same source as the word 'route.' It signifies that three or more who have gathered together in unlawful assembly are 'on their way.' It is not necessary for guilt of this offense that the design be actually carried out, nor that the journey be made in a tumultuous manner." Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 483 (3d ed. 1982).

routine-activities theory. (1985) The theory that criminal acts occur when (1) a person is motivated to commit the offense, (2) a vulnerable victim is available, and (3) there is insufficient protection to prevent the crime. Cf. CONTROL THEORY; RATIONAL-CHOICE THEORY; STRAIN THEORY.

Royal Marriages Act. A 1772 statute (12 Geo. 3, ch. 1) forbidding members of the royal family from marrying without the sovereign's permission, except on certain conditions.

"Royal Marriages Act . . . An Act occasioned by George III's fear of the effect on the dignity and honour of the royal family of members thereof contracting unsuitable marriages, two of his brothers having done so . . . It provided that marriages of descendants of George II, other than the issue of princesses who marry into foreign families, should not be valid unless they had the consent of the King in Council, or, if the parties were aged over 25, they had given 12 months' notice to the Privy Council, unless during that time both Houses of Parliament expressly declare disap-royalty. (1839) 1. Intellectual property. A payment — in addition to or in place of an up-front payment — made to an author or inventor for each copy of a work or article sold under a copyright or patent. • Royalties are often paid per item made, used, or sold, or per time elapsed. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property C≈48; Patents C≈217.1] established royalty. A royalty set at an agreed-on price.

• In the absence of an established royalty, a court will determine a remedy for infringement based on what a reasonable royalty would have been.

reasonable royalty. A royalty that a licensee would be willing to pay the holder of the thing's intellectual-property rights while still making a reasonable profit from its use. • The reasonable-royalty standard often serves as the measure of damages in a claim of patent, copyright, or trademark infringement, or for misappropriation of trade secrets. In deciding what royalty is reasonable in a trade-secrets suit, courts consider the unique circumstances of the case, as well as (1) how the use affected the parties' ability to compete; (2) the cost of past licenses; (3) the cost to develop the secret and its present value; (4) how the defendant intends to use the information; and (5) the availability of alternatives. [Cases: Patents C≈319(1).]

2. Oil & gas. A share of the product or profit from real property, reserved by the grantor of a mineral lease, in exchange for the lessee's right to mine or drill on the land. — Also termed (in sense 2) override. [Cases: Mines and Minerals C≈70, 79.]

haulage royalty. A royalty paid to a landowner for moving coal via a subterranean passageway under the landowner's land from a mine located on an adjacent property. • The payment is calculated at a certain amount per ton of coal.

landowner's royalty. A share of production or revenues provided for the lessor in the royalty clause of the oil-and-gas lease and paid at the well free of any costs of production. • Traditionally, except in California, the landowner's royalty has been 1/8 of gross production for oil and 1/8 of the proceeds received from the sale of gas. But today the size is often negotiated. — Also termed leaseholder royalty. [Cases: Mines and Minerals C≈79.1(1).]

mineral royalty. A right to a share of income from mineral production. [Cases: Mines and Minerals C≈70, 79.]

nonparticipating royalty. A share of production — or of the revenue from production free its costs — carved out of the mineral interest. • A nonparticipating-royalty holder is entitled to the stated share of production or cash without regard to the terms of any lease. Nonparticipating royalties are often retained by mineral-interest owners who sell their rights. [Cases: Mines and Minerals C≈79.1(1).]
overriding royalty. A share of either production or revenue from production (free of the costs of production) carved out of a lessee’s interest under an oil-and-gas lease. • Overriding-royalty interests are often used to compensate those who have helped structure a drilling venture. An overriding-royalty interest ends when the underlying lease terminates. [Cases: Mines and Minerals C=74.]

shut-in royalty. A payment made by an oil-and-gas lessee to the lessor to keep the lease in force when a well capable of producing is not utilized because there is no market for the oil or gas. • Generally, without such a payment, the lease will terminate at the end of the primary term unless actual production has begun. [Cases: Mines and Minerals C=78.1(3).]

royalty interest. Oil & gas. A share of production — or the value or proceeds of production, free of the costs of production — when and if there is production. • A royalty interest is usu. expressed as a fraction (such as 1/6). A royalty-interest owner has no right to operate the property and therefore no right to lease the property or to share in bonuses or delay rentals. In some states a royalty owner has the right of ingress and egress to take the royalty production. Authorities are split over what costs are costs of production. Several different but related kinds of royalty interests are commonly encountered. Seeroyalty (2).

rubric (roo-brik). 1. The title of a statute or code <the rubric of the relevant statute is the Civil Rights Act of 1964>. 2. A category or designation <assignment of rights falls under the rubric of contract law>. 3. An authoritative rule, esp. for conducting a public worship service <the rubric dictates whether the congregation should stand or kneel>. 4. An introductory or explanatory note; a preface . 5. An established rule, custom, or law <what is the rubric in the Northern District of Texas regarding appearance at docket call?>.

rule, n. (13c) 1. Generally, an established and authoritative standard or principle; a general norm mandating or guiding conduct or action in a given type of situation.

default rule. A legal principle that fills a gap in a contract in the absence of an applicable express provision but remains subject to a contrary agreement. Cf. GAP-FILLER. [Cases: Contracts C=>168.]

general rule. A rule applicable to a class of cases or circumstances.

mandatory rule. A legal rule that is not subject to a contrary agreement. • For example, the UCC obligation of good faith and fair dealing cannot be disclaimed.

peremptory rule. A court order that must be obeyed without an opportunity to respond. • No objections may be lodged or arguments made.

special rule. See special rule (1).

2. A regulation governing a court’s or an agency’s internal procedures. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure C=381; Courts C=85; Federal Civil Procedure C=21.]

Parliamentary law. A procedural rule (sense 1) for the orderly conduct of business in a deliberative assembly. — Also termed rule of order (often pl.).

Cordon rule. See cordon rule.

joint rule. A rule adopted by both houses of a bicameral legislature for the conduct of business or relations between them, such as when they meet in joint session, or for other matters in which they share an interest. See joint session under session (1). [Cases: States C=35.]

ordinary standing rule. See standing rule (1).

Ramseyer rule. See ramseyer rule.

standing rule. 1. A rule that relates to an organization’s administration or operation rather than to its procedure in meetings. • For example, a rule about the time and place of regular meetings, or about a committee’s jurisdiction, is a standing rule. — Also termed ordinary standing rule. 2. A special rule of continuing force. • Many conventions and other deliberative assemblies collect both their administrative and procedural rules into a set titled “standing rules.” See special rule (1).

rule, vb. (13c) 1. To command or require; to exert control <the dictator ruled the country>. 2. To decide a legal point <the court ruled on the issue of admissibility>.

rule, the. An evidentiary and procedural rule by which all witnesses are excluded from the courtroom while another witness is testifying <invoking “the rule”>. • The phrase “the rule” is used chiefly in the American South and Southwest, but it is a common practice to exclude witnesses before they testify. [Cases: Criminal Law C=665; Federal Civil Procedure C=2012; Trial C=41.]

rule against vitiation of a claim element. See all-elements rule.

Rule in Queen Caroline’s Case. The common-law principle that a witness who is impeached with a prior inconsistent statement on cross-examination must be given the opportunity to admit, explain, repudiate, or deny it before the statement is admissible into evidence. • In American law, Federal Rule of Evidence 613 embodies this principle, with some variations. The original rule Rule 109 statement. Patents. A statement by a patent examiner of the reasons for allowing a patent claim. An examiner may file a Rule 109 statement at any time if it appears that the record does not adequately reflect the reasons for allowance. It should state how the claim differs from prior art and why that difference is nonobvious. PTO Reg. § 1.109; 37 CFR § 1.104(e). Also termed Reasons for Allowance. [Cases: Patents C= 104.]

Rule 116 amendment. See amendment after final action under patent-application amendment.

Rule 312 amendment. See amendment after allowance under patent-application amendment.

rule absolute. See decree absolute under decree.

rule against accumulations. See accumulations, rule against.

rule against inalienability. The principle that property must not be made nontransferable. Also termed rule against trusts of perpetual duration. Cf. rule against perpetuities. [Cases: Property C= 11.]

rule against perpetuities. (sometimes cap.) (18c) Property. The common-law rule prohibiting a grant of an estate unless the interest must vest, if at all, no later than 21 years (plus a period of gestation to cover a posthumous birth) after the death of some person alive when the interest was created. The purpose of the rule was to limit the time that title to property could be suspended out of commerce because there was no owner who had title to the property and who could sell it or exercise other aspects of ownership. If the terms of the contract or gift exceeded the time limits of the rule, the gift or transaction was void. See measuring life. Cf. accumulations, rule against. [Cases: Perpetuities C= 4.]

'The true form of the Rule against Perpetuities is believed to be this: — NO INTEREST SUBJECT TO A CONDITION PRECEDENT IS GOOD, UNLESS THE CONDITION MUST BE FULFILLED, IF AT ALL, WITHIN TWENTY-ONE YEARS AFTER SOME LIFE IN BEING AT THE CREATION OF THE INTEREST.' John Chipman Gray, The Rule Against Perpetuities 144 (1886).

Another scholar who spent a substantial part of an academic lifetime attempting to bring order and add sense to the rule [against perpetuities], W. Barton Leach, described the rule as a 'technicality-ridden legal nightmare' and a 'dangerous instrumentality in the hands of most members of the bar.' Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 178 (2d ed. 1984) (quoting Leach, Perpetuities Legislation, Massachusetts Style, 67 Harv. L. Rev. 1349 (1954)).

'The Rule Against Perpetuities is a rule against remoteness of vesting. A contingent future interest is invalid under the orthodox rule if, at the time of the creation of the interest, the circumstances are such that the contingency may go unresolved for too long a time. The rule is not concerned with the duration of interests, that is, the length of time that they endure. It is not a rule against suspension of the power of alienation, nor a rule against restraints on alienation. It is not a rule that directly limits the duration of trusts . . . . The orthodox rule is satisfied if all contingent future interests are so created that they must vest, if they vest at all, within the perpetuities period.' Robert J. Lynn, The Modern Rule Against Perpetuities 9 (1966).

'The common law Rule Against Perpetuities (modified by statute in some states) provides that no interest is valid unless it must vest within 21 years after lives in being when the interest was created. The rule is something of a misnomer. It does not limit the duration of a condition in a bequest, but rather limits the testator's power to earmark gifts for remote descendants.' Richard A. Posner, Economic Analysis of Law § 18.7, at 394 (2d ed. 1977).

rule against trusts of perpetual duration. See rule against inalienability.

rule day. See return day (3) under day.

rule in Heydon's case. See mischief rule.

Rule in Shelley's Case. (18c) Property. The rule that if — in a single grant — a freehold estate is given to a person and a remainder is given to the person's heirs, the remainder belongs to the named person and not the heirs, so that the person is held to have a fee simple absolute. The rule, which dates from the 14th century but draws its name from the famous 16th-century case, has been abolished in most states. Wolfe v. Shelley, 76 Eng. Rep. 206 (K.B. 1581). [Cases: Estates in Property C= 8.]

'The rule in Shelley's Case, the Don Quixote of the law, which, like the last knight errant of chivalry, has long survived every cause that gave it birth and now wanders aimlessly through the reports, still vigorous, but equally useless and dangerous.' Stamper v. Stamper, 28 S.E. 20, 22 (N.C. 1897).

Rule in Wild's Case. (1842) Property. The rule construing a grant to "A and A's children" as a fee tail if A's children do not exist at the effective date of the instrument, and as a joint tenancy if A's children do exist at the effective date. The rule has been abolished along with the fee tail in most states.
rulemaking, n. (1926) The process used by an administrative agency to formulate, amend, or repeal a rule or regulation. — Also termed administrative rulemaking. Cf. Administrative adjudication; informal agency action. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure C=>381-427.] — rulemaking, adj.

formal rulemaking. (1960) Agency rulemaking that, when required by statute or the agency’s discretion, must be on the record after an opportunity for an agency hearing, and must comply with certain procedures, such as allowing the submission of evidence and the cross-examination of witnesses. Cf. informal rulemaking. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure C=>381-427.]

informal rulemaking. (1968) Agency rulemaking in which the agency publishes a proposed regulation and receives public comments on the regulation, after which the regulation can take effect without the necessity of a formal hearing on the record. • Informal rulemaking is the most common procedure followed by an agency in issuing its substantive rules. — Also termed notice-and-comment rulemaking. See notice-and-comment period. Cf. formal rulemaking. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure C=>381-427.]

rule nisi. See decree nisi under DECREES.

rule of capture. 1. The doctrine that if the donee of a general power of appointment manifests an intent to assume control of the property for all purposes and not just for the purpose of appointing it to someone, the donee captures the property and the property goes to the donee’s estate. • One common way for the donee to show an intent to retain control for all purposes is to include provisions in his or her will blending the appointing property with the donee’s own property. 2. Property. The principle that wild animals belong to the person who captures them, regardless of whether they were originally on another person’s land. [Cases: Animals C=>1.5(3).] 3. Water law. The principle that a surface landowner can extract and appropriate all the groundwaters beneath the land by drilling or pumping, even if doing so drains away groundwaters to the point of drying up springs and wells from which other landowners benefit. • This doctrine has been widely abolished or limited by legislation. [Cases: Waters and Water Courses C=>101.] 4. Oil & gas. A fundamental principle of oil-and-gas law holding that there is no liability for drainage of oil and gas from under the lands of another so long as there has been no trespass and all relevant statutes and regulations have been observed. • Also termed doctrine of capture; law of capture. Cf. AD COELUM DOCTRINE. [Cases: Mines and Minerals C=>47.] rule of completeness. See rule of optional completeness.

rule of construction. See canon of construction under CANON (1).

rule of court. (17c) A rule governing the practice or procedure in a given court <federal rules of court>. See LOCAL RULE. [Cases: Courts C=>85; Federal Civil Procedure C=>21.]

rule of decision. (18c) A rule, statute, body of law, or prior decision that provides the basis for deciding or adjudicating a case. [Cases: Courts C=>88.]

rule of doubt. 1. Copyright. The doctrine that unreadable or incomprehensible identifying material deposited with the U.S. Copyright Office may not be protected under copyright law because it cannot easily be examined to determine whether it qualifies. • This rule usu. applies to computer object code. • Unlike a Certificate of Registration, a filing under the rule of doubt is not prima facie evidence of a valid copyright. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property C=>4.] 2. Patents. An abandoned judicial doctrine holding that when there is doubt whether an invention is patentable, the patent should be issued so that the inventor can test its validity in court.

rule of evidence. See EVIDENCE (4).

rule of four. (1949) The convention that for certiorari to be granted by the U.S. Supreme Court, four justices must vote in favor of the grant. See CERTIORARI. [Cases: Federal Courts C=>452, 509.]

rule of inconvenience. (1934) The principle of statutory interpretation holding that a court should not construe a statute in a way that will jeopardize an important public interest or produce a serious hardship for anyone, unless that interpretation is unavoidable. — Often shortened to inconvenience. [Cases: Statutes C=>181(2).]

rule of justice. A jurisprudential principle that determines the sphere of individual liberty in the pursuit of individual welfare, so as to confine that liberty within limits that are consistent with the general welfare of humankind.

rule of law. (18c) 1. A substantive legal principle <under the rule of law known as respondeat superior, the employer is answerable for all wrongs committed by an employee in the course of the employment>. 2. The supremacy of regular as opposed to arbitrary power <citizens must respect the rule of law>. — Also termed supremacy of law. 3. The doctrine that every person is subject to the ordinary law within the jurisdiction <all persons within the United States are within the American rule of law>. 4. The doctrine that general constitutional principles are the result of judicial decisions determining the rights of private individuals in the courts <under the rule of law, Supreme Court caselaw makes up the bulk of what we call "constitutional law">. 5. Loosely, a legal ruling; a ruling on a point of law <the ratio decidendi of a case is any rule of law reached by the judge as a necessary step in the decision>. [Cases: Courts C=>87.] rule of lenity (len-ə-tee). The judicial doctrine holding that a court, in construing an ambiguous criminal statute that sets out multiple or inconsistent punishments, should resolve the ambiguity in favor of the more lenient punishment. — Also termed lenity rule. [Cases: Statutes ⊂=241(1).]

rule of marshaling assets. An equitable doctrine that requires a senior creditor, having two or more funds to satisfy its debt, to first dispose of the fund not available to a junior creditor. • It prevents the inequity that would result if the senior creditor could choose to satisfy its debt out of the only fund available to the junior creditor and thereby exclude the junior creditor from any satisfaction. — Also termed marshaling doctrine; rule of marshaling securities; rule of marshaling remedies. [Cases: Debtor and Creditor ⊂=13.]

rule of marshaling liens. See INVERSE-ORDER-OF-ALIENATION DOCTRINE.

rule of marshaling remedies. See RULE OF MARSHALING ASSETS.

rule of marshaling securities. See RULE OF MARSHALING ASSETS.

rule of necessity. A rule requiring a judge or other official to hear a case, despite bias or conflict of interest, when disqualification would result in the lack of any competent court or tribunal. — Often shortened to necessity. [Cases: Judges ⊂=39.]

rule of operation. Patients. A method of using a machine to produce its intended useful result. • A rule of operation and moving parts generally distinguish a machine from an article of manufacture.

rule of optional completeness. (1983) The evidentiary rule providing that when a party introduces part of a writing or an utterance at trial, the opposing party may require that the remainder of the passage be read to establish the full context. • The rule has limitations: first, no utterance can be received if it is irrelevant, and second, the remainder of the utterance must explain the first part. In many jurisdictions, the rule applies to conversations, to an opponent’s admissions, to confessions, and to all other types of writings — even account books. But the Federal Rules of Evidence limit the rule to writings and recorded statements. Fed. R. Evid. 106. In most jurisdictions, including federal, the remainder is admissible unless its admission would be unfair or misleading. — Also termed rule of completeness; doctrine of completeness; doctrine of optional completeness; completeness doctrine; optional-completeness rule; optional-completeness doctrine. [Cases: Criminal Law ⊂=396(2); Evidence ⊂=155, 383(12).] rule of order. See RULE (3).

rule of rank. A doctrine of statutory construction holding that a statute dealing with things or persons of an inferior rank cannot by any general words be extended to things or persons of a superior rank. • Blackstone gives the example of a statute dealing with deans, prebendaries, parsons, vicars, and others having spiritual promotion. According to Blackstone, this statute is held not to extend to bishops, even though they have spiritual promotion, because deans are the highest persons named, and bishops are of a higher order. Cf. EJUSDENUM GENERIS; EXPRESSIO UNIUS EST EXCLUSIO ALTERIUS; NOSCITUR A SOCIIS.

rule of reason. Antitrust. The judicial doctrine holding that a trade practice violates the Sherman Act only if the practice is an unreasonable restraint of trade, based on the totality of economic circumstances. See SHERMAN ANTITRUST ACT; RESTRAINT OF TRADE. Cf. per se rule. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation ⊂=353.]

rule of recognition. In the legal theory of H.L.A. Hart, a legal system’s fundamental rule, by which all other rules are identified and understood. • In The Concept of Law (1961), Hart contends that a society’s legal system is centered on rules. There are primary rules of obligation, which prescribe how a person should act in society, and secondary rules, by which the primary rules are created, identified, changed, and understood. A “rule of recognition” is a secondary rule, and serves to instruct citizens on when a pronouncement or societal principle constitutes a rule of obligation. — Sometimes shortened to recognition. Cf. RULES OF CHANGE; basic norm under NORM.

“This rule [the rule of recognition] may amount to no more than specifying a list of primary rules carved on a public monument. Or it may actually be a complete set of rules . . . .” Martin P. Golding, Philosophy of Law 44 (1975).

rule of right. (18c) The source of a right; the rule that gives rise to a right.

rule of 72. A method for determining how many years it takes to double money invested at a compound interest rate. • For example, at a compound rate of 6%, it takes 12 years (72 divided by 6) for principal to double.

rule of 78. A method for computing the amount of interest that a borrower saves by paying off a loan early, when the interest payments are higher at the beginning of the loan period. • For example, to determine how much interest is saved by prepaying a 12-month loan after 6 months, divide the sum of the digits for the remaining six payments (21) by the sum of the digits for all twelve payments (78) and multiply that percentage by the total interest. — Also termed rule of the sum of the digits.

rule of the floating subtrahend. The common-law doctrine that a plaintiff whose damage was not caused entirely by the defendant must prove the amount of damage that is not attributable to the defendant (the subtrahend) or else recover nothing. • The reasoning behind the rule is that damage is an essential element of a tort claim, and the plaintiff has the burden of proof. If proved, the subtrahend is subtracted from the total damage to determine the plaintiff’s recovery.

rule of the last antecedent. (1919) An interpretative principle by which a court determines that qualifying words or phrases modify the words or phrases immediately preceding them and not words or phrases more remote, unless the extension is necessary from the context or the spirit of the entire writing. • For example, an application of this rule might mean that, in the phrase Texas courts, New Mexico courts, and New York courts in the federal system, the words in the federal system might be held to modify only New York courts and not Texas courts or New Mexico courts. — Also termed doctrine of the last antecedent; doctrine of the last preceding antecedent. (Cases: Statutes 196.)

rule of the shorter term. Copyright. A provision of the Universal Copyright Convention stating that no member country is required to extend a longer term of protection than the work receives in the country where it is first published. — Also termed shorter-term rule.

rule of the sum of the digits. See rule of 78.

rule of universal inheritance. See universal-inheritance rule.

rules committee. See committee.

rules of change. In the legal theory of H.L.A. Hart, the fundamental rules by which a legal system's other rules are altered. • In Hart's theory, a legal system's primary rules are subject to identification and change by secondary rules. Among those rules are "rules of change," which prescribe how laws are altered or repealed. Cf. rule of recognition.

rules of court. See court rules.

Rules of Decision Act. A federal statute (28 USCA § 1652) providing that a federal court, when exercising diversity jurisdiction, must apply the substantive law of the state in which the court sits. See diversity jurisdiction under jurisdiction. (Cases: Federal Courts 373.)

rules of evidence. See evidence; federal rules of evidence.

rules of navigation. Maritime law. The principles and regulations that govern the steering and sailing of vessels to avoid collisions. • Examples include the International Rules governing conduct on the high seas and the Inland Rules governing navigation on the inland waters of the United States and U.S. vessels on the Canadian waters of the Great Lakes. 33 USCA §§ 1602–1608, 2001–2073. (Cases: Collision 3–16.)

rules of order. See rule (3).

rules of procedure. See procedure (2).

rule to show cause. 1. See show-cause proceeding. 2. See show-cause order under order (2).

ruling, n. (16c) 1. The outcome of a court's decision either on some point of law or on the case as a whole. — Also termed legal ruling. Cf. judgment (1); opinion (1). (Cases: Courts 88.)

2. Parliamentary law. The chair's decision on a point of order. — rule, vb.

ruling case. See leading case (3).

ruling letter. See determination letter.

RULPA. abbr. Revised Uniform Limited Partnership Act. See uniform limited partnership act.

run, vb. (bef. 12c) 1. To expire after a prescribed period <the statute of limitations had run, so the plaintiff's lawsuit was barred>. 2. To accompany a conveyance or assignment of (land) <the covenant runs with the land>. (Cases: Covenants 53–84.) 3. To apply <the injunction runs against only one of the parties in the dispute>.

runaway. (16c) 1. A person who is fleeing or has escaped from custody, captivity, restraint, or control; esp., a minor who has voluntarily left home without permission and with no intent to return. Cg. throwaway. (Cases: Infants 151.) 2. An animal or thing that is out of control or has escaped from confinement. (Cases: Animals 47.) — runaway, vb.

runaway grand jury. See grand jury.

runner. (18c) 1. A law-office employee who delivers papers between offices and files papers in court. 2. One who solicits personal-injury cases for a lawyer. — Also termed capper. 3. A smuggler. 4. BrE. Slang. An escape; flight (from something); a voluntary disappearance.

running account. See account.

running description. See metes and bounds.

running-down clause. Marine insurance. A provision for the hull insurer's paying a proportion of the damages sustained by the other vessel in a collision. (Cases: Insurance 2367.)

running objection. See continuing objection under objection.

running policy. See floating policy under insurance policy.

running with the land. Property law. See covenant running with the land under covenant (4).

runoff election. See election (3).

Rural Business-Cooperative Service. An agency in the U.S. Department of Agriculture responsible for making loans and grants to public agencies and private parties to develop rural businesses. — Abbrev. RBS. (Cases: United States 53(7).)

Rural Electrification Administration. A former agency in the U.S. Department of Agriculture responsible for making or guaranteeing loans to rural electric and telephone utilities. • Its duties were transferred to the Rural Utilities Service in 1994. — Abbrev. REA.
RURAL UTILITIES SERVICE. [Cases: United States C=>53(7).]

Rural Housing Service. An agency in the U.S. Department of Agriculture responsible for making or guaranteeing loans for rural housing. — Abbr. RHS. [Cases: United States C=>53(7).]

rural servitude. See servitude (2).

Rural Utilities Service. An agency in the U.S. Department of Agriculture responsible for making or guaranteeing loans to rural electric and telecommunication utilities. • The agency is the successor to the Rural Electrification Administration. — Abbr. RUS. [Cases: United States C=>53(7).]

RUS. abbr. RURAL UTILITIES SERVICE.

rusticum forum (rōs-ti-kam for-am). Any nonjudicial body (such as an arbitral panel or workers’-compensation review board) that has authority to make a binding decision. — Also termed poor man’s court.

rusticum judicium (rōs-ti-kam joo-dish-e-am). 1. The division of liability so that one party (usu. a defendant) must pay only part (usu. half) of another party’s (usu. the plaintiff’s) loss. • Rusticum judicium originated in 17th century maritime law as a means of efficiently resolving collision cases in which both ships were at fault. In maritime law, damages were equally divided. — Also termed rusticum jus. Cf. comparative negligence under NEGLIGENCE. 2. Rare. Rough justice; a rustic tribunal. • This is a literal translation of the term, used colloquially rather than accurately. — Sometimes misspelled rusticum judicum.

rusticum jus (rōs-ti-kam jas). Maritime law. See RUSTICUM JUDICIUM (1).
S

s. abbr. 1. statute. 2. section (1). 3. (usu. cap.) Senate.

S-1. An SEC form that a company usu. must file before listing and trading its securities on a national exchange. Used primarily by first-time issuers of securities, this form is the basic, full-length registration statement that requires a great deal of information about the issuer and the securities being sold. The SEC has also adopted modified forms for smaller enterprises, such as Forms SB-1 and SB-2. — Also termed Form S-1.

Sabbath-breaking. The violation of laws or rules on observing the Sabbath; esp., the violation of a blue law.

Sabbath law. See Blue Law.

sabotage (sab-a-tahzh), n. (1910) 1. The destruction, damage, or knowingly defective production of materials, premises, or utilities used for national defense or for war. 18 USCA §§ 2151 et seq. [Cases: War and National Emergency 2:53.] 2. The willful and malicious destruction of an employer's property or interference with an employer's normal operations, esp. during a labor dispute. — sabotage, vb.

saboteur (sab-oh-tar), n. (1921) A person who commits sabotage.

sac, n. See soc.

sacer (sa-sar), adj. [Latin “sacred; forfeited to a god”] Roman law. (Of an outlaw or a wrongdoer) punished by being placed outside the law's protection. See Con Secratio Capitis; Outlawry.

sachbaro. See sagibaro.

Sache (zahk-oh). [German] A thing; an article or matter. See thing.

sacramentum decisionis (sak-ra-men-tam di-sizh-ee-oh-nis). [Latin “the oath of decision”] Civil law. The offer by one party to accept the opposing party's oath as decisive of the issues involved in a lawsuit. Pl. sacramenta decisionis.

"The defendant or person accused was ... to make oath of his own innocence, and to produce a certain number of compurgators, who swore they believed his oath. Somewhat similar also to this is the sacramentum decisionis, or the voluntary and decisive oath of the civil law: where one of the parties to the suit, not being able to prove his charge, offers to refer the decision of the cause to the oath of his adversary: which the adversary was bound to accept, or tender the same proposal back again: otherwise the whole was taken as confessed by him." 3 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 342 (1768).

sacrilege (sak-re-lij). 1. The act or an instance of desecrating or profaning a sacred thing. 2. Hist. Larceny of sacred objects, as from a church.

sacrilégium (sak-ra-lee-ee-um), n. [Latin fr. sacer “sacred” + legere “to steal”] Roman law. 1. The theft of a sacred thing, usu. a capital offense. See Capitalis. 2. Violation of an imperial law.

"In the later Empire the conception of sacrilégium was somewhat distorted and those who through ignorance or negligence confound, violate and offend the sanctity of a divine law ... were considered guilty of sacrilégium. 'Divine' is here used in the sense of imperial, issued by the emperor ... Thus sacrilégium and sacrilegus became rather general terms applied to the neglect or violation of imperial orders or enactments." Adolf Berger, Encyclopedic Dictionary of Roman Law 689 (1953).

sacrilegus (sak-kri-lay-gus), adj. & n. [Latin “sacriligious”] Roman law. (A person) guilty of sacrilégium. See sacrilegium.

sacristy (sak-ri-stee). See vestry (1).

sadaq. See mahr.

SAET. abbr. Substance Abuse Evaluation and Treatment.

saevitia (see-vite-ee-ah). [Latin fr. saevus “cruel”] Hist. Cruelty in a marriage, as a result of which cohabitation is dangerous enough to justify a decree of separation.

safe, adj. 1. Not exposed to danger; not causing danger <driving at a safe limit of speed>. 2. Unlike to be overturned or proved wrong.

safe-berth clause. Maritime law. A provision in a voyage or time charterparty obligating the charterer to choose a berth for loading and unloading the chartered ship where the ship will be safe from damage. — The ship's master can refuse to enter the berth without breaching the charter. But if the master reasonably enters the berth and the ship is damaged, the charterer is liable. Cf. safe-port clause. [Cases: Shipping C-54.]

safe blower. One who uses explosives to open a safe, esp. for the purpose of stealing the contents. Cf. safe cracker.

safe breaker. See safe cracker.

safe conduct. Int'l law. 1. A privilege granted by a belligerent allowing an enemy, a neutral, or some other person to travel within or through a designated area for a specified purpose. 2. A document conveying this privilege. — Sometimes written safe-conduct. — Also termed safeguard; passport.

"Passports and safeguards, or safe conducts, are letters of protection, with or without an escort, by which the person of an enemy is rendered inviolable. These may be given in order to carry on the peculiar commerce of war, or for reasons which have no relation to it, which terminate in the person himself." Theodore D. Woolsey, Introduction to the Study of International Law § 155, at 265 (5th ed. 1878).

"Safe conduct . . . . The grantee is inviolable so long as he complies with the conditions imposed on him or necessitated by the circumstances of the case. Unless stated, a safe conduct does not cover goods or luggage. They may be given also for ships and for goods. To be effective under international law the grant must have been arranged between belligerents." David M. Walker, The Oxford Companion to Law 1098 (1980).

safe cracker. One who breaks into a safe, esp. for the purpose of stealing the contents. — Also termed safe breaker. Cf. safe blower.

safe-deposit box. (1874) A lockbox stored in a bank's vault to secure a customer's valuables. It usu. takes two keys (one held by the bank and one held by the customer) to open the box. — Often shortened to deposit box. — Also termed safety-deposit box. [Cases: Warehousemen C-38.]

safe-deposit company. See Depository (1).

safe harbor. (1960) 1. An area or means of protection. 2. A provision (as in a statute or regulation) that affords protection from liability or penalty. — SEC regulations, for example, provide a safe harbor for an issuer's business forecasts that are made in good faith. — Also termed safe-harbor clause; safe-harbor provision. [Cases: Securities Regulation C-60.27(5).]

safe-haven law. Family law. A statute that protects a parent who abandons a baby at a designated place such as a hospital, a physician's office, or a fire station, where it can receive emergency medical assistance as needed. • The law typically stipulates that a parent who leaves a baby at such a place will not be publicly identified or prosecuted. Such laws have been enacted in many states in response to a perceived increase in incidents of child abandonment. — Also termed Baby Moses law.

safe house. A residence where people live under protection, usu. in anonymity. • Safe houses are operated for a range of purposes, both legal and illegal. Shelters for abused spouses and runaway children are safe houses. Law-enforcement agencies keep safe houses for undercover operations and to protect witnesses who have been threatened. Lawbreakers use them to shield criminal activity such as drug manufacturing.

safekeeping. 1. The act of protecting something in one's custody. 2. Under the Securities Investors Protection Act, the holding of a security on behalf of the investor or broker that has paid for it. 15 USCA § 78lll(2). [Cases: Securities Regulation C-185.13-185.16.]

safe-pledge. See pledge (5).

safe-port clause. Maritime law. A provision in a voyage or time charterparty obligating the charterer to choose a port where the ship will be safe from damage. • The ship's master can refuse to enter the port without breaching the charter. But if the master reasonably enters the port and the ship is damaged, the charterer is liable. Cf. safe-berth clause. [Cases: Shipping C-39.55.]

safe-storage statute. A law that prohibits persons from leaving firearms unattended in places where children may gain access to them. — Also termed child-access prevention statute. [Cases: Weapons C-4.]

Safety Appliance Act. A federal law regulating the safety of equipment used by railroads in interstate commerce. 49 USCA §§ 20301 et seq. [Cases: Labor and Employment C-2862-2864; Railroads C-229.]

safety deposit box. See safe-deposit box.

safety engineering. The inspection and study of potentially dangerous conditions, usu. in an industrial environment, so that precautionary measures can be taken.

safety officer. See officer (1).

safe workplace. A place of employment in which all dangers that should reasonably be removed have been removed; a place of employment that is reasonably safe given the nature of the work performed. See occupational safety and health administration. [Cases: Labor and Employment C-2832; Negligence C-1204(4).]

said, adj. (13c) Aforesaid; above-mentioned. • The adjective said is obsolete in legal drafting, its last bastion being patent claims. But even in that context the word is giving way to the ordinary word the, which if properly used is equally precise. See aforesaid.

"The word 'said' is used by many practitioners rather than 'the' to refer back to previously recited elements, sometimes to a previously cited anything. This practice is unobjectionable, although perhaps overly legalistic. If 'said' or 'thes' are used, one should be consistent in the usage and not alternate between those words in repetitions of the same element or among different elements." Robert C. Faber, Landis on Mechanics of Patent Claim Drafting § 23, at 50 (3d ed. 1990).

The agreement by which such a transfer takes place. • The four elements are (1) parties competent to contract, (2) mutual assent, (3) a thing capable of being transferred, and (4) a price in money paid or promised.

absolute sale. A sale in which possession and title to the property pass to the buyer immediately upon the completion of the bargain. Cf. conditional sale. [Cases: Sales ☻= 454; Vendor and Purchaser ☻= 79.]

approval sale. See sale on approval.

auction sale. See sale by auction.

average gross sales. The amount of total sales divided by the number of sales transactions in a specific period.

bona fide sale. A sale made by a seller in good faith, for valuable consideration, and without notice of a defect in title or any other reason not to hold the sale. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser ☻= 220.]

bootstrap sale. 1. A sale in which the purchase price is financed by earnings and profits of the thing sold; esp., a leveraged buyout. See buyout. 2. A seller’s tax-saving conversion of a business’s ordinary income into a capital gain from the sale of corporate stock.

bulk sale. See bulk sale.

cash-against-documents sale. See documentary sale.

cash sale. 1. A sale in which cash payment is concurrent with the receipt of the property sold. [Cases: Sales ☻= 82(1).] 2. A securities transaction on the stock-exchange floor requiring cash payment and same-day delivery.

compulsory sale. The forced sale of real property in accordance with either an eminent-domain order or an order for a judicial sale arising from nonpayment of taxes. [Cases: Taxation ☻= 2963.]

conditional sale. A sale in which the buyer gains immediate possession but the seller retains title until the buyer performs a condition, esp. payment of the full purchase price. See retail installment contract under contract. [Cases: Sales ☻= 450.] 2. A sale accompanied by an agreement to resell upon specified terms. Cf. absolute sale.

consignment sale. A sale of an owner’s property (such as clothing or furniture) by a third party entrusted to make the sale. UCC § 9-102(a)(20). See consignment. [Cases: Factors ☻= 5, 20; Sales ☻= 8.]

customer-credit sale. A sale in which the seller extends credit to the consumer. • A consumer-credit sale includes a lease in which the lessee’s rental payments equal or exceed the retail value of the item rented. [Cases: Consumer Credit ☻= 3.]

credit sale. A sale of goods to a buyer who is allowed to pay for the goods at a later time. [Cases: Sales ☻= 82(1).]

distress sale. 1. A form of liquidation in which the seller receives less for the goods than what would be received under normal sales conditions; esp., a going-out-of-business sale. 2. A foreclosure or tax sale. [Cases: Internal Revenue ☻= 4860; Taxation ☻= 2846, 2963.]

dock sale. A sale in which a purchaser takes possession of the product at the seller’s shipping dock, esp. for transportation outside the state.

documentary sale. A sale in which the buyer pays upon the seller’s tender of documents of title covering the goods, plus a sight draft requiring the buyer to pay at sight.” • This type of sale typically occurs before delivery of the goods, which might be en route when the buyer pays. — Also termed cash-against-documents sale.

exclusive sale. A sale made by a broker under an exclusive-agency listing. See exclusive-agency listing under listing. [Cases: Brokers ☻= 40.]

execution sale. A forced sale of a debtor’s property by a government official carrying out a writ of execution. — Also termed forced sale; judgment sale; sheriff’s sale. See execution. [Cases: Execution ☻= 213.]

executory sale. A sale agreed upon in principle but with a few minor details remaining.

fair sale. A foreclosure sale or other judicial sale conducted with fairness toward the rights and interests of the affected parties. [Cases: Judicial Sales C=⇒15; Mortgages C=⇒514, 515.]

fire sale. 1. A sale of merchandise at reduced prices because of fire or water damage. 2. Any sale at greatly reduced prices, esp. due to an emergency. • Fire sales are often regulated to protect the public from deceptive sales practices.

forced sale. 1. See execution sale. 2. A hurried sale by a debtor because of financial hardship or a creditor’s action. Cf. voluntary sale.

foreclosure sale. The sale of mortgaged property, authorized by a court decree or a power-of-sale clause, to satisfy the debt. See foreclosure. [Cases: Mortgages C=⇒360, 514.]

fraudulent sale. A sale made to defraud the seller’s creditors by converting into cash property that should be used to satisfy the creditors’ claims. [Cases: Fraudulent Conveyances C=⇒1.]

gross sales. Total sales (esp. in retail) before deductions for returns and allowances. — Also termed sales in gross.

installation sale. See installment sale.

isolated sale. An infrequent or one-time sale that does not carry an implied warranty of merchantability because the seller is not a merchant with respect to goods of that kind. UCC § 2-314(1). [Cases: Sales C=⇒272.]

judgment sale. See execution sale.

judicial sale. A sale conducted under the authority of a judgment or court order, such as an execution sale. — Also termed sheriff’s sale. [Cases: Cases: Execution C=⇒213; Judicial Sales C=⇒1.]

lumping sale. A court-ordered sale in which several distinct pieces of property are sold together for a single sum.

memorandum sale. A conditional sale in which the buyer takes possession but does not accept title until approving the property. [Cases: Sales C=⇒459.]

net sale. The amount of money remaining from a sale, after deducting returns, allowances, rebates, discounts, and other expenses.

present sale. Under the UCC, a sale accomplished by the making of a contract. UCC § 2-106(1). [Cases: Sales C=⇒1(1).]

private sale. An unadvertised sale negotiated and concluded directly between the buyer and seller, not through an agent.

public sale. 1. A sale made after public notice, such as an auction or sheriff’s sale; specif., a sale to which the public has been invited by advertisement to appear and bid at auction for the items to be sold. 2. Patents. An actual exchange for value or an offer through some medium (e.g., a sales brochure) of an article, product, or process to a member of the general public. [Cases: Patents C=⇒76.]

retail installment sale. See installment sale.

sale against the box. See short sale against the box.

sale and leaseback. See leaseback.

sale and return. See sale or return.

sale as is. A sale in which the buyer accepts the property in its existing condition unless the seller has misrepresented its quality. — Also termed sale with all faults. [Cases: Sales C=⇒260, 267.]

sale by sample. A sale in which the parties understand that the goods exhibited constitute the standard with which the goods not exhibited correspond and to which all deliveries should conform. • Any sample that is made part of the basis of the bargain creates an express warranty that the whole of the goods will conform to the sample or model. UCC § 9-102(a) (20). — Also termed sample sale. [Cases: Sales C=⇒73.]

sale in gross. 1. A sale of a tract of land made with no guarantee about the exact amount or size of the land being sold. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser C=⇒65(2).] 2. (pl.) See gross sales.

sale-leaseback. See leaseback.

sale on approval. A sale in which the goods are delivered to the buyer with the understanding that if the goods are not approved by the buyer within a specified period, the goods become the property of the seller. Cf. approval sale. [Cases: Sales C=⇒168.5(5).]

sale on credit. A sale accompanied by delivery of possession, but with payment deferred to a later date. [Cases: Sales C=⇒82(1).]

sale or return. A sale in which the buyer may return the goods to the seller, regardless of whether they conform to the contract, if the goods were delivered primarily for resale. • This transaction is a type of consignment in which the seller (usu. a distributor) sells goods to the buyer (often a retailer), who then tries to resell the goods, but a buyer who cannot resell is allowed to return them to the seller. Title and risk of loss are with the buyer until the goods are returned. UCC § 2-326(1)(b). — Also termed sale and return. Cf. sales guaranteed. [Cases: Sales C=⇒168.5(5).]

sale per averisonem (par a-ver-zhee-oh-nem). Civil law. A conveyance of all immovable property that falls within the boundaries stated in a purchase agreement, as opposed to a specified amount of acreage. • The sales price will not be modified because of a surplus or shortage in the amount of property that is exchanged, because the boundary description is the binding definition of the property conveyed. L.A. Civ. Code art. 2495. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser C=⇒65(2).] sale positive. A sale with no reserve price.

sales in gross. See gross sales.

sale short. See short sale.

sale with all faults. See sale as is.
sale with right of redemption. A sale in which the seller reserves the right to retake the goods by refunding the purchase price.

sample sale. See sale by sample.

sheriff's sale. 1. See execution sale. 2. See judicial sale.

short sale. Securities. A sale of a security that the seller does not own or has not contracted for at the time of sale, and that the seller must borrow to make delivery. • Such a sale is usu. made when the seller expects the security's price to drop. If the price does drop, the seller can make a profit on the difference between the price of the shares sold and the lower price of the shares bought to pay back the borrowed shares. — Also termed sale short. [Cases: Securities Regulation 45.17.]

short sale against the box. Securities. A short sale of a security by a seller who owns enough shares of the security to cover the sale but borrows shares anyway because the seller wants to keep ownership secret or because the owned shares are not easily accessible. • Delivery may be made with either the owned or the borrowed shares, so it is less risky than an ordinary short sale. The phrase against the box refers to the owned shares that are in safekeeping; formerly, the “box” was a container used to store stock certificates. — Often shortened to sale against the box.

similar sales. Eminent domain. Sales of like property in the same locality and time frame, admissible in a condemnation action to determine the market value of the particular property at issue. [Cases: Evidence 142.]

simulated sale. A sale in which no price or other consideration is paid or intended to be paid, and in which there is no intent to actually transfer ownership. • Simulated sales are usu. done in an attempt to put property beyond the reach of creditors. — Also termed simulated transaction. [Cases: Fraudulent Conveyances 1.]

tax sale. A sale of property because of nonpayment of taxes. See tax deed under DEED. [Cases: Taxation 2900.]

voluntary sale. A sale made freely with the seller's consent. Cf. forced sale.

wash sale. Securities. A sale of securities made at about the same time as a purchase of the same securities (such as within 30 days), resulting in no change in beneficial ownership. • A loss from a wash sale is usu. not tax-deductible. And securities laws prohibit a wash sale made to create the false appearance of market activity. — Also termed wash transaction. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3216; Securities Regulation 60.25.]

sale and exchange. See sale or exchange.

sale and leaseback. See LEASEBACK.

sale and return. See sale or return under SALE.

sale-leaseback. See LEASEBACK.

sale note. See note (1).

sale-of-business doctrine. The outmoded rule holding that the transfer of stock incident to the sale of a business does not constitute a transfer of securities. • This doctrine was rejected by the U.S. Supreme Court in Landreth Timber Co. v. Landreth, 471 U.S. 681, 105 S.Ct. 2297 (1985), and its companion case, Gould v. Ruefenacht, 471 U.S. 701, 105 S.Ct. 2308 (1985). [Cases: Securities Regulation 5.25.2(1).]

sale of land. A transfer of title to real estate from one person to another by a contract of sale. • A transfer of real estate is often referred to as a conveyance rather than a sale. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser 1, 3.]

sale on approval. See sale.

sale on credit. See sale.

sale or exchange. (1905) 1. Tax. A voluntary transfer of property for value (as distinguished from a gift) resulting in a gain or loss recognized for federal tax purposes. 2. A transfer of property; esp., a situation in which proceeds of a sale are to be vested in another estate of the same character and use. — Also termed (in both senses) sale and exchange. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3232; Taxation 3469.]

sale or return. See sale.

sale per aversionem. See sale.

sale positive. See sale.

sales agreement. (1920) A contract in which ownership of property is presently transferred, or will be transferred in the future, from a seller to a buyer for a fixed sum. UCC § 2-106(1). [Cases: Sales 1(1), 3.1.]

sales-assessment-ratio study. A method for calculating the assessment level for taxable property in a jurisdiction, by comparing the assessed value and the actual sales price of a statistically reliable sample of the property in the jurisdiction, to determine the percentage by which the assessed values are above or below the sales prices. [Cases: Taxation 2515.]

sales finance company. See FINANCE COMPANY.

sales guaranteed. Hist. As used in a sale-of-goods contract, the seller's promise to accept the purchaser's return of unsold or unsalable goods and to grant the purchaser a proportional credit or refund. • Under the UCC, the modern equivalent is sale or return. Cf. sale or return under SALE.

Salic law (sal-ik or say-lik). An influential early medieval Frankish code of law that originated with the Salian Franks and that deals with a variety of civil property and family issues but is primarily a penal code listing the punishments for various crimes. • Salic law is the principal compilation of the early Germanic laws known collectively as leges barbarorum ("laws of the barbarians"). Salic law also designated a rule barring females from the line of succession to the throne, as a result of which references to Salic law have sometimes referred only to the code provision excluding women from inheriting certain lands (which probably existed only because military duties were connected with the inheritance). In the late 19th century, Oliver Wendell Holmes revived scholarly interest in Salic law by referring to it throughout The Common Law (1881). — Also termed Salique law; law Salique (sa-lee-k or sal-ik); lex Salica (leks sal-a-ka). salic marriage. See morganatic marriage under marriage (1). salting, n. Labor law. A union tactic that involves a paid union employee going to work for a targeted nonunion employer with the intention of organizing the workforce. • The union agent (known as a salter) is considered an employee of the nonunion company and is protected by the National Labor Relations Act.
salus (sal-as), n. [Latin] Health; prosperity; safety.
salva gardia. See DE SALVA GARDIA.
salvage (sal-vij), n. 1. The rescue of imperiled property. 2. The property saved or remaining after a fire or other loss, sometimes retained by an insurance company that has compensated the owner for the loss. [Cases: Insurance C-2194, 2711.] 3. Compensation allowed to a person who, having no duty to do so, helps save a ship or its cargo. — Also termed (in sense 3) salvage award; reward. [Cases: Salvage C-1.] — salvage, vb.

"Salvage is a reward payable either by the shipowner or by the owners of goods carried in the ship to persons who save the ship or cargo from shipwreck, capture or other loss. The right to salvage is an ancient rule of maritime law and is not based on contractual rights. The actual amount payable is, as a rule, assessed by the Court. Sometimes an express agreement, fixing an amount, is made before the assistance is rendered, but this is not a question of salvage in the strict sense, which always implies service by persons who are under no obligation to render it." 2 E.W. Chance, Principles of Mercantile Law 98 (P.W. French ed., 10th ed. 1951).

"With reference to aid rendered to distressed property on navigable waters the word 'salvage' is often used differently to describe the salvage operation and the salvage award — the latter being the compensation granted for the services rendered." Martin J. Norris, The Law of Salvage § 2, at 2 (1958).

"A salvage award, or reward, is the compensation allowed to the volunteer whose services on navigable waters have aided distressed property in whole or in part. The award is not regarded merely as pay on the principle of quantum meruit or as remuneration pro opera et labore, but as a reward to persons participating and the owners of salvaging property, voluntarily rendering their services and thus encouraging others to similarly undertake the saving of life and property. That part of the award consisting more than quantum meruit has, on occasions, been referred to as a "bounty," "gratuity," and "bonus."" Martin J. Norris, The Law of Salvage § 3, at 3-4 (1958).
salvage award. See SALVAGE (3). salvage charges. Insurance. Costs necessarily incurred in salvage. salvage loss. See LOSS.
salvager. See SALVOR.
salvage service. The aid or rescue given, either voluntarily or by contract, to a vessel in need of assistance because of present or apprehended danger. • Although salvage may involve towing, it is distinguished from towing service, which is rendered merely to expedite a voyage, not to respond to dangerous circumstances. [Cases: Salvage C-6.] salvage value. See VALUE (2). salvam facit totius pignoris causam (sal-vam fee-sit toh-shee-as pig-na-ris kaw-zam). [Law Latin] Scots law. He furnished the means of saving the whole pledge. • A bottomry creditor posting the last bond obtained preference over the remaining bottomry creditors because the later loan preserved the property for the earlier creditors. See bottomry bond under bond (2).
salva substantia (sal-va sab-stan-shee-a). [Latin] Roman & civil law. The substance (of the property) being preserved; the substance remaining intact. — Also termed salver est substantia.

"A right of liferent, therefore, cannot be constituted in a subject which necessarily perishes in the use; it must be a subject which can be used salva substantia." John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 563 (4th ed. 1894).
salvo (sal-voh). [Latin fr. salvus "safe"] Hist. 1. Saving; excepting. • This term was used in deeds. 2. Safely.
salvo beneficio competentiae (sal-vo ben-efish-ee-o ko-m-p<1-ten-shee-ee). [Latin] Hist. Saving the benefit of being held liable only to the extent that one's means permit. See beneficium competentiae.
salvo conductu. See DE SALVO CONDUCTU. salvo jure (sal-vo joor-ee). [Latin "the rule being safe"] Without prejudice to.
salvor (sal-voor), n. [Law Latin] A person who saves a vessel and its cargo from danger or loss; a person entitled to salvage. — Also termed salvager. [Cases: Salvage C-18, 19.]

"A 'salvor' is a person who, without any particular relation to a ship in distress, proffers useful service, and gives it as a free gift or bounty, without any pre-existing covenant that connected him with the duty of employing himself for the preservation of the ship. To be a salvor, one must have the intention and capacity to save the distressed property involved, but need not have an intent to acquire it." 68 Am. Jur. 2d Salvage § 2, at 270 (1993).

same-inference. Employment law. The doctrine that when an employee is hired and fired by the same person, and the termination occurs a reasonably short time after the hiring, the termination will be presumed not to be based on a discriminatory reason. [Cases: Civil Rights C= 1534.]

same-conduct test. Criminal law. A test for determining whether a later charge arising out of a single incident is barred by the Double Jeopardy Clause; specific, an analysis of whether the later charge requires the state to prove the same conduct that it was required to prove in a previous trial against the same defendant. • The Supreme Court abandoned the Blockburger test and adopted the same-conduct test in 1990 (Grady v. Corbin, 495 U.S. 508, 110 S.Ct. 2084), but overruled that decision and revived Blockburger three years later (U.S. v. Dixon, 509 U.S. 688, 113 S.Ct. 2849 (1993)). Cf. sanctio (sangk-shoo-oh), n. [Latin fr. sanctio “to ordain, confirm, or forbid under penalty”] Roman law. A particular clause in a statute imposing a penalty on any violation of that statute. Pl. sanctiones (sangk-shoo-neeze).

"Sanctio (legis). A clause in a statute which strengthens its efficacy by fixing a penalty for its violation, by forbidding its derogation through a later enactment, or by releasing from responsibility one who by acting in accordance with the statute violated another law. The purpose of the sanction clause was to settle the relation between the new statute and former and future legislation. Thus the sanctio could also state that a previous statute remained fully or partially in force without being changed by the new one.” Adolph Berger, Encyclopedic Dictionary of Roman Law 689 (1953).

sanctio (sangk-shan), n. (15c) 1. Official approval or authorization <the committee gave sanction to the proposal>. Cf. ratification (1). 2. A penalty or coercive measure that results from failure to comply with a law, rule, or order . Cf. DISCIPLINE. [Cases: Costs C= 2; Criminal Law C= 627.8(6); Federal Civil Procedure C= 1278, 2750; Pretrial Procedure C= 44.]

"Without adequate sanctions the procedure for discovery would often be ineffectual. Under Rule 37 [of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure], . . . any party or person who seeks to evade or thwart full and candid discovery incurs the risk of serious consequences, which may involve imprisonment for contempt of court, an order that designated facts be taken to be established, an order refusing the delinquent party the right to support or oppose designated claims or defenses, striking out pleadings or parts of pleadings, rendering judgment by default, dismissal of the action or a claim therein, or assessment of expenses and attorney’s fees. Sanctions are intended to prompt a party to respond.” 8A Charles Alan Wright et al., Federal Practice and Procedure § 2281, at 595–95 (2d ed. 1994).

criminal sanction. (1872) A sanction attached to a criminal conviction, such as a fine or restitution. — Also termed penal sanction.

A criminal sanction . . . is a legally authorized post-conviction deprivation suffered by a human being through governmental action. By using the words post-conviction in that definition, criminal sanctions are thus limited to those imposed upon defendants in criminal proceedings who, by reason or in consequence of a judgment entered upon a verdict of guilty found by a jury, or judge sitting without a jury (the latter having been legally waived), or upon a plea of guilty, or a plea of nolo contendere, stand convicted.” A Treatise on the Law of Crimes § 2.00, at 66 (Mariam Quinn Barnes ed., 7th ed. 1967).
death-penalty sanction. (1991) Civil procedure. A court's order dismissing the suit or entering a default judgment in favor of the plaintiff because of extreme discovery abuses by a party or because of a party's action or inaction that shows an unwillingness to participate in the case. Such a sanction is rarely ordered, and is usu. preceded by orders of lesser sanctions that have not been complied with or that have not remedied the problem. Often shortened to death penalty. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure C=1278; Pretrial Procedure C=46.]

shame sanction. (1991) A criminal sanction designed to stigmatize or disgrace a convicted offender, and often to alert the public about the offender's conviction. A shame sanction usu. publicly associates the offender with the crime that he or she committed. An example is being required to post a sign in one's yard stating, "Convicted Child Molester Lives Here." — Also termed shame sentence; shaming sanction; shaming sentence; scarlet-letter punishment; scarlet-letter sentence.

sanctionable, adj. (18c) (Of conduct or action) meriting sanctions; likely to be sanctioned. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure C=1278, 2750-2848.]

sanctional enforcement. See secondary right under right.

sanctions tort. A means of recovery for another party's discovery abuse, whereby the judge orders the abusive party to pay a fine to the injured party for the discovery violation. This is not a tort in the traditional sense, but rather a form of punishment that results in monetary gain for the injured party.

sanctity of contract. (1831) The principle that the parties to a contract, having duly entered into it, must honor their obligations under it. [Cases: Contracts C=1.] "Sanctity of contract is merely another facet of freedom of contract, but the two concepts cover, to some extent, different grounds. The sanctity of contractual obligations is merely an expression of the principle that once a contract is freely and voluntarily entered into, it should be held sacred, and should be enforced by the Courts if it is broken. No doubt this very sanctity was an outcome of freedom of contract, for the reason why contracts were held sacred was the fact that the parties entered into them of their own choice and volition, and settled the terms by mutual agreement." P.S. Atiyah, An Introduction to the Law of Contract 12 (3d ed. 1981).

Corporations. An antitakeover tactic wherein the target company delays a hostile bidder's final offer by agreeing to negotiate then prolonging bad-faith negotiations as long as possible. — sandbag, vb.

sandbagging, n. 1. A trial lawyer's remaining cagily silent when a possible error occurs at trial, with the hope of preserving an issue for appeal if the court does not correct the problem. Such a tactic does not usu. preserve the issue for appeal because objections must be promptly made to alert the trial judge of the possible error. [Cases: Criminal Law C=623.] 2. Corporations. An antitakeover tactic wherein the director company delays a hostile bidder's final offer by agreeing to negotiate then prolonging bad-faith negotiations as long as possible. — sandbagging, n. sandpapering, n. A lawyer's general preparation of a witness before a deposition or trial. Cf. horsesheding.

satisdare (sat-is-dair ee), vb. [Latin fr. satis "sufficient" + dare "to give"]. Roman law. To give security in the form of satisdation. See SATISDATIO. satisdation (sat-is-day-shee-on). n. [Latin fr. satisdare] Roman law. Security given by a person, such as a debtor, through a surety. Pl. satisdations (sat-is-day-shee-onnees). satisfaction, n. (14c) 1. The giving of something with the intention, express or implied, that it is to extinguish some existing legal or moral obligation. • Satisfaction differs from performance because it is always something given as a substitute for or equivalent of something else, while performance is the identical thing promised to be done. — Also termed satisfaction of debt. [Cases: Accord and Satisfaction C C 1.] 2. The fulfillment of an obligation; esp., the payment in full of a debt.

3. satisfaction piece. 4. Wills & estates. The payment by a testator, during the testator's lifetime, of a legacy provided for in a will; ADVANCEMENT. Cf. ADEMPTION. [Cases: Wills C C 772.] 5. Wills & estates. A testamentary gift intended to satisfy a debt owed by the testator to a creditor. See ACCORD and SATISFACTION. — satisfy, vb.

satisfaction contract. See CONTRACT.
satisfaction of debt. See satisfaction (1). satisfaction of judgment. (17c) 1. The complete discharge of obligations under a judgment. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure C C 2398; Judgment C C 874-899.] 2. The document filed and entered on the record indicating that a judgment has been paid. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure C C 2398; Judgment C C 897.]

satisfaction piece. (1831) A written statement that one party (esp. a debtor) has discharged its obligation to another party, who accepts the discharge. — Also termed certificate of discharge; satisfaction. [Cases: Mortgages C C 309-315.] satisfaction of lien. (1833) 1. The fulfillment of all obligations made the subject of a lien. 2. The document signed by the lienholder releasing the property subject to a lien.
satisfaction of mortgage. (18c) 1. The complete payment of a mortgage. 2. A discharge signed by the mortgagee or mortgage holder indicating that the property subject to the mortgage is released or that the mortgage debt has been paid and the mortgage conditions have been fully satisfied. [Cases: Mortgages C C 309-315.] satisfactory evidence. See evidence. satisfactory proof. See satisfactory evidence under evidence. satisfied term. See TERM (4).

Saturday-night special. (1959) 1. A handgun that is easily obtained and concealed. [Cases: Weapons C C 4, 8.] 2. Corporations. A surprise tender offer typically held open for a limited offering period (such as one week) to maximize pressure on a shareholder to accept. • These tender offers are now effectively prohibited by section 14(e) of the Williams Act. 15 USCA § 78n(e).

save, vb. 1. To preserve from danger or loss <save a ship in distress>. 2. To lay up; to hoard <save money>. 3. To toll or suspend (the operation, running, etc.) of something <save a statute of limitations>. 4. To except, reserve, or exempt (a right, etc.) <to save vested rights>. 5. To lessen or avoid (a cost, resource, etc.) <save labor>.

save harmless. See HOLD HARMLESS.

saver default (say-var di-fawlt). [Law French] Hist. To excuse a default. — Also spelled [saver de fault; saver default].

“Saver default is the same as to excuse a default. And this is properly when a man having made default in court, comes afterwards, and alleges a good cause why he did it, as imprisonment at the same time, or the like.” Termes de la Ley 352 (1st Am. ed. 1812).

saving, n. An exception; a reservation.

saving clause. (17c) 1. A statutory provision exempting from coverage something that would otherwise be included. • A saving clause is generally used in a repealing act to preserve rights and claims that would otherwise be lost. [Cases: Statutes §§228, 278.23.] 2. SAVING-TO-SUITORS CLAUSE. 3. SEVERABILITY CLAUSE. — Also termed savings clause.

savings account. A savings bank depositor’s account usu. bearing interest or containing conditions (such as advance notice) to the right of withdrawal.

savings-account trust. See Totten trust under TRUST.

savings-and-loan association. (1884) A financial institution — often organized and chartered like a bank — that primarily makes home-mortgage loans but also usu. maintains checking accounts and provides other banking services. — Often shortened to S & L. — Also termed savings-and-loan bank; loan association; thrift institution; thrift. Cf. BUILDING-AND-LOAN ASSOCIATION. [Cases: Building and Loan Associations §§1, 24–40.]

“The thrift institutions, mutual savings banks, savings and loan associations, and credit unions, originally were created to meet needs for saving, credit and loans of people whose resources and income were modest. Commercial banks, merchants, money lenders, and pawn shops often did not serve this demand for loans or savings as well, or with interest rates as favorable to poor individuals, and families. During the last two centuries, thrift institutions were gradually developed, therefore, by social reformers, philanthropic benefactors, religious and fraternal organizations, trade unions, employers, and thrift entrepreneurs (in most countries of the world) as a collateral type of banking or financial intermediation.” William A. Lovett, Banking and Financial Institutions Law in a Nutshell 236 (1997).

savings bank. See BANK.

savings-bank trust. See Totten trust under TRUST.

savings bond. See BOND (3).

SBA. abbr. SMALL BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION.

SBIC. abbr. SMALL BUSINESS INVESTMENT COMPANY.

sc. abbr. SCHILCET.

S.C. abbr. 1. SUPREME COURT. 2. Same case. • In former practice, when put between two citations, the abbreviation indicated that the same case was reported in both places. 3. SENATUS CONSULTUM.

scab. (18c) A person who works under conditions contrary to a union contract; esp., a worker who crosses a union picket line to replace a union worker during a strike. — Also termed strikebreaker; (in BrE) blackleg labor.

scabini (ska-bi-ni). [Law Latin] Hist. Judges or the judge’s assessors in the court held by the count; magistrates. • The term was found in a charter from the wardens of Lynn in Norfolk, during the reign of Henry VIII. But even earlier than that, the title was used in Charlemagne’s empire (the French equivalent being édevins) and later Germanized as Schöffen.

scalam (skay-lam), n. [Latin] Hist. Scale. • Ad scalam was the method of paying money to the Exchequer, in which sixpence was added to each twenty shillings to compensate for a deficiency in weight, although no scales were actually used.

scale, n. 1. A progression of degrees; esp., a range of wage rates. 2. A wage according to a range of rates. 3. An instrument for weighing. 4. Hist. In the practice of the English Supreme Court of Judicature, the fee charged by a solicitor for a particular type of case. • Unless the court ordered otherwise, the lower scale applied to all causes and matters assigned by the Judicature Acts to the King's Bench, or the Probate, Divorce, and Admiralty divisions; to all actions for debt, contract, or tort; and to almost all causes and matters assigned by the acts to the Chancery division and in which the amount in controversy was less than £1,000. The higher scale applied in all other cases, and in actions falling under one of the lower-scale classes if the principal relief sought was injunctive.

scale order. See order (8).

scale tolerance. The nominal variation of the mass or weight of the same goods on different scales.

scaling law. (1882) Hist. A statute establishing a process for adjusting value differences between depreciated paper money and specie. • Statutes of this type were necessary when paper depreciated after both the American Revolution and the Civil War.

scalper. 1. A seller who buys something (esp. a ticket) at face value (or less) and then tries to resell it for a higher price. — Also termed ticket speculator. [Cases: Public Amusement and Entertainment ≈ 70.] 2. An investment adviser who buys a security before recommending it to clients. 3. A market-maker who puts an excessive markup or markdown on a transaction.

scalping, n. 1. The practice of selling something (esp. a ticket) at a price above face value once it becomes scarce (usu. just before a high-demand event begins). [Cases: Public Amusement and Entertainment ≈ 70.] 2. The purchase of a security by an investment adviser before the adviser recommends that a customer buy the same security. • This practice is usu. considered unethical because the customer’s purchase will increase the security’s price, thus enabling the investment adviser to sell at a profit. 3. The excessive markup or markdown on a transaction by a market-maker. • This action violates National Association of Securities Dealers guidelines. — scalp, vb.

scandal, n. 1. Disgraceful, shameful, or degrading acts or conduct. 2. Defamatory reports or rumors; esp., slander. See scandalous matter.

Scandal consists in the allegation of anything which is unbefitting the dignity of the court to hear, or is contrary to decency or good manners, or which charges some person with a crime not necessary to be shown in the cause to which may be added that any unnecessary allegation, bearing cruelly upon the moral character of an individual, is also scandalous. The matter alleged, however, must be not only offensive, but also irrelevant to the cause, for however offensive it be, if it be pertinent and material to the cause the party has a right to plead it. It may often be necessary to charge false representations, fraud and immorality, and the pleading will not be open to the objection of scandal, if the facts justify the charge.” Eugene A. Jones, Manual of Equity Pleading and Practice 50–51 (1916).

scandalous matter. (17c) Civil procedure. A matter that is both grossly disgraceful (or defamatory) and irrelevant to the action or defense. • A federal court — upon a party’s motion or on its own — can order a scandalous matter struck from a pleading. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(f). Cf. impertinent matter. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ≈ 1127; Pleading ≈ 364(4).] scandalous subject matter. Trademarks. A word, phrase, symbol, or graphic depiction that the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office may refuse to register because it is shockingly offensive to social mores. • Although the Lanham Act uses the phrase “immoral, deceptive, or scandalous subject matter,” courts have not distinguished “scandalous” from “immoral.” [Cases: Trademarks ≈ 1072.]

scandalum magnatum (skan-dal-um mag-nay-tam). [Law Latin 1 Hist. Actionable slander of powerful people; specif., defamatory comments regarding persons of high rank, such as peers, judges, or state officials.

“Words spoken in derogation of a peer, a judge, or other great officer of the realm, which are called scandalum magnatum, are held to be still more heinous; and, though they be such as would not be actionable in the case of a common person, when spoken in disgrace of such high and respectable characters, they amount to an atrocious injury: which is redressed by an action on the case founded on many ancient statutes; as well on behalf of the crown, to inflict the punishment of imprisonment on the slanderer, as on behalf of the party, to recover damages for the injury sustained.” — William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 123–24 (1768).

scarlet-letter punishment. See shame sanction under sanction.

scarlet-letter sentence. See shame sanction under sanction.

scatter-point analysis. (1993) A method for studying the effect that minority-population changes have on voting patterns, involving a plotting of the percentage of votes that candidates receive to determine whether voting percentages increase or decrease as the percentages of voters of a particular race increase or decrease.

scènes à faire (sen ah fair). [French “scènes for action”] Copyright. Standard or general themes that are common to a wide variety of works and are therefore not copyrightable. • Examples of scènes à faire are obvious plot elements and character types. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property ≈ 12(2).]

schedule, n. (15c) A written list or inventory; esp., a statement that is attached to a document and that gives a detailed showing of the matters referred to in the document <Schedule B to the title policy lists the encumbrances on the property>. — schedule, vb. — scheduled, adj.

scheme. (16c) 1. A systemic plan; a connected or orderly arrangement, esp. of related concepts <legislative scheme>. 2. An artful plot or plan, usu. to deceive others .

scheme of arrangement. English law. A court-approved reorganization of a company’s capital structure or debts. • The company seeking to reorganize is usu. in financial trouble but may not yet be insolvent.

creditors’ scheme of arrangement. A reorganization plan in which creditors agree to defer demands for payment, in hopes of eventually receiving more than they would if the company were immediately liquidated.

members’ scheme of arrangement. A reorganization plan voted on and approved by the company’s shareholders. • This type of scheme may be used to prepare for a merger. — Also termed shareholders' scheme of arrangement.

shareholders' scheme of arrangement. See members' scheme of arrangement.

schism (siz-am or skiz-am). (14c) 1. A breach or rupture; a division, esp. among members of a group, as of a union. 2. A separation of beliefs and doctrines by persons of the same organized religion, religious denomination, or sect. [Cases: Religious Societies ☞ 23, 35.]

"It has been held that the civil courts are not concerned with mere schisms stemming from disputation over matters of religious doctrine, not only because such questions are essentially ecclesiastical rather than judicial, but also because of the separation between the church and the state . . . . However, it has also been held that the situation is different in the case of self-governing congressional churches, for here the courts do not hesitate to assume jurisdiction when a schism affects property rights, for in this form . . . each local congregation is independent and autonomous and there is no recourse within the denomination." 66 Am. Jur. 2d Religious Societies § 51, at 804 (1973).

school, n. 1. An institution of learning and education, esp. for children. [Cases: Schools ☞ 11.]

"Although the word 'school' in its broad sense includes all schools or institutions, whether of high or low degree, the word 'school' frequently has been defined in constitutions and statutes as referring only to the public common schools generally established throughout the United States . . . . When used in a statute or other contract, 'school' usually does not include universities, business colleges, or other institutions of higher education unless the intent to include such institutions is clearly indicated." 68 Am. Jur. 2d Schools § 1, at 355 (1993).

common school. See public school.

district school. A public school contained in and maintained by a school district. See SCHOOL DISTRICT.

public school. An elementary, middle, or high school established under state law, regulated by the local state authorities in the various political subdivisions, funded and maintained by public taxation, and open and free to all children of the particular district where the school is located. — Also termed common school. [Cases: Schools ☞ 11.]

2. The collective body of students under instruction in an institution of learning. 3. A group of people adhering to the same philosophy or system of beliefs.

school board. An administrative body, made up of a number of directors or trustees, responsible for overseeing public schools within a city, county, or district. Cf. BOARD OF EDUCATION. [Cases: Schools ☞ 51.]

school bond. See BOND (3).

school district. A political subdivision of a state, created by the legislature and invested with local powers of self-government, to build, maintain, fund, and support the public schools within its territory and to otherwise assist the state in administering its educational responsibilities. [Cases: Schools ☞ 21.]

consolidated school district. A public-school district in which two or more existing schools have consolidated into a single district. [Cases: Schools ☞ 33.]

school land. See LAND.

Schumer box. In a credit-card agreement, a table that summarizes all the costs for which the cardholder is liable, so that the cardholder can more easily compare credit-card agreements. • The term derives from the name of Senator Charles Schumer, who proposed the disclosure requirements. The box must contain the information listed in 15 USCA § 1637(c)(1)(A)-(B). — Also termed Schumer's box. [Cases: Consumer Credit ☞ 52.]

Science and Technology Directorate. The division of the Department of Homeland Security responsible for coordinating research and development, including preparing for and responding to terrorist threats involving weapons of mass destruction. • The Directorate also works with the Chemical, Biological, Radiological, and Nuclear Countermeasures Program and the Environmental Measurements Lab in the Department of Energy, the National BW (biological warfare) Defense Analysis Center in the Department of Defense, and the Plum Island Animal Disease Center — Abbrev. S&T.

science of legislation. See LAW REFORM.

sciendum est (si-en-dam est). [Latin] Roman law. It is to be known or understood. • This phrase often introduced a particular topic or explanation.

scienter (si-en-tor or see-tor). n. [Latin "knowingly"] (1824) 1. A degree of knowledge that makes a person legally responsible for the consequences of his or her act or omission; the fact of an act's having been done knowingly, esp. as a ground for civil damages or criminal punishment. See KNOWLEDGE; MENS REA. [Cases: Criminal Law ☞ 20; Negligence ☞ 212, 302.] 2. A mental state consisting in an intent to deceive, manipulate, or defraud. • In this sense, the term is used most often in the context of securities fraud. The Supreme Court has held that to establish a claim for damages under Rule 10b-5, a plaintiff must prove that the defendant acted with scienter. Ernst v. Ernst v. Hochfelder, 425 U.S. 185, 96 S.Ct. 1375 (1976). [Cases: Securities Regulation ☞ 60.45, 60.51(2).]

scienter action. A lawsuit in which the plaintiff must prove that the defendant acted knowingly or knew of the danger — e.g., at common law an action for damage caused by a domestic animal. See SCIENTER.

scofflaw (skof-law). (1924) 1. A person who treats the law with contempt; esp., one who avoids various laws that are not easily enforced <some scofflaws carry mannequins in their cars in order to drive in the carpool lane>. 2. Hist. A person who consumes illegally made or obtained alcoholic beverages. • This was the original meaning.

scold, n. Hist. A person who regularly breaks the peace by scolding people, increasing discord, and generally being a public nuisance to the neighborhood. • This behavior was formerly punishable in various ways, including having an iron bridle fitted to the person’s mouth. — Also termed common scold; objurgatrix. See Branks. [Cases: Criminal Law 45.25.]

scolding bridle. See Branks.

scope note. (1903) In a digest, a précis appearing after a title and showing concisely what subject matter is included and what is excluded.

“In the Century and Decennial Digests, though not in the various digests of the Key-Number Series, there is printed immediately following each topic title a couple of paragraphs which are called the Scope-Note. The first paragraph of this scope-note shows very briefly the character of the subject-matter included under the title. The second paragraph shows the "Exclusions"—i.e., what related matter has been excluded in order to conform to the plan of the Digest—and directs the reader to the proper title under which such related matter may be found. Consequently a little study of the scope-note will oftentimes repay the searcher for a few moments' time consumed in so doing.” William M. Lile et al., Brief Making and the Use of Law Books 116 (3d ed. 1914).

scribe. See secretary (3).

scribere est agere (skri-ba-ree est aj-o-ree). [Latin] Hist. To write is to act.

"But now it seems clearly to be agreed, that, by the common law and the statute of Edward III, words spoken amount only to a high misdemeanor, and no treason. For they may be spoken in heat, without any intention . . . . If the words be set down in writing, it argues more deliberate intention; and it has been held that writing is an overt act of treason, for scribere est agere. But even in this case the bare words are not the treason, but the deliberate act of writing them." 4 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 80 (1769).

seagoing vessel. See vessel.

seal, n. (13c) 1. A fastening that must be broken before access can be obtained; esp., a device or substance that joins two things, usu. making the seal impervious. — Also termed common-law seal. 2. A piece of wax, a wafer, or some other substance affixed to the paper or other material on which a promise, release, or conveyance is written, together with a recital or expression of intention by which the promisor, releasor, or grantor manifests that a piece of wax, wafer, or other substance is a seal. • The purpose of a seal is to secure or prove authenticity. 3. A design embossed or stamped on paper to authenticate, confirm, or attest; an impression or sign that has legal consequence when applied to an instrument. [Cases: Seals C==1.]

“The use of the seal in England seems to have begun after the Norman Conquest, spreading from royalty and a few of the nobility to those of lesser rank. Originally a seal often consisted of wax bearing the imprint of an individualized signet ring, and in the seventeenth century Lord Coke said that wax without impression was not a seal. But in the United States the courts have not required either wax or impression. Impressions directly on the paper were recognized early and are still common for notarial and corporate seals, and gummed wafers have been widely used. In the absence of statute decisions have divided on the effectiveness of the written or printed word ‘seal,’ the printed initials ‘L.S.’ (locus sigilli, meaning place of the seal), a scrall made with a pen (often called a ‘scroll’) and a recital of sealing. Most states in which the seal is still recognized now have statutes giving effect to one or more such devices.” Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 96 cmt. a (1979).

“The time-honoured form of seal was a blob of wax at the foot of the document, bearing an imprint of some kind, often a crest or motto. The use of wax was not, however, necessary for a seal, and any mark or impression on the paper was sufficient as long as it was made with the intention of affixing a seal. Recent English cases have been willing to find the necessary intention in circumstances where courts in the past would almost certainly have declined; so much so that it may now be the common law that a document purporting to be executed as a deed but lacking actual sealing will be regarded as sealed as long as it contains a printed or written indication of where the mark or impression constituting the seal should be placed if it were to be affixed.” Peter Butt, Land Law 481-82 (2d ed. 1988).

corporate seal. (18c) A seal adopted by a corporation for executing and authenticating its corporate and legal instruments. [Cases: Corporations C-51.]

great seal. 1. The official seal of the United States, of which the Secretary of State is the custodian. — Also termed seal of the United States. [Cases: United States C-5.5.] 2. The official seal of a particular state. — Also termed seal of the state; state seal. [Cases: States C-23.3] 3. The official seal of Great Britain, of which the Lord Chancellor is the custodian.

notary seal. See notary seal.

private seal. (16c) A corporate or individual seal, as distinguished from a public seal. [Cases: Seals C-1.]

public seal. (16c) A seal used to certify documents belonging to a public authority or government bureau.

quarter seal. A seal (originally a quarter section of the great seal) maintained in the Scotch chancery to be used on particular grants from the Crown. See great seal (3).

seal of the state. See great seal (2).

seal of the United States. See great seal (1).

state seal. See great seal (2).

wafer seal. A plastic or paper disk, usu. red or gold, affixed to a legal document as a substitute for a wax seal. • Wafers are more common in the U.K. than in the U.S. — Sometimes shortened to wafer.

seal, vb. (14c) 1. To authenticate or execute (a document) by use of a seal. 2. To close (an envelope, etc.) tightly; to prevent access to (a document, record, etc.).

sealed and delivered. See signed, sealed, and delivered.

sea lane. Int’l & maritime law. A designated course or regularly used route for ships, esp. in restricted waters such as harbors and straits. • Although sea lanes have obvious safety advantages, they were long resisted by sea captains, who saw them as a threat to their freedom to navigate.

sea law. See maritime law.

sealed-container rule. (1961) Products liability. The principle that a seller is not liable for a defective product if the seller receives the product from the manufacturer and sells it without knowing of the defect or having a reasonable opportunity to inspect the product. [Cases: Products Liability C-168, 175; Sales C-430.]

sealed contract. See contract under seal under contract.

sealed instrument. (17c) At common law and under some statutes, an instrument to which the bound party has affixed a personal seal, usu. recognized as providing indisputable evidence of the validity of the underlying obligations. • The common-law distinction between sealed and unsealed instruments has been abolished by many states, and the UCC provides that the laws applicable to sealed instruments do not apply to contracts for the sale of goods or negotiable instruments. UCC § 2-203. See contract under seal under contract. [Cases: Contracts C-36; Seals C-1.]

“...At common law, the seal served to render documents indisputable as to the terms of the underlying obligation, thereby dispensing with the necessity of witnesses; the sealed instrument was considered such reliable evidence that it actually became the contract itself — called a ‘specialty’ — the loss of which meant loss of all rights of the obligee against the obligor. The seal also had many other consequences at common law, some of which have been retained in jurisdictions which still recognize the seal... In states where the seal is still recognized, its primary legal significance is often the application of a longer statute of limitations to actions on sealed instruments.” 69 Am. Jur. 2d Seals § 2, at 617-18 (1993).

“In medieval England a wax seal may have performed the functions of a formality tolerably well. But in the United States few people owned or used a seal and the ritual deteriorated to the point that wax was dispensed with and printing houses decorated the signature lines of their standard forms with the printed letters ‘L.S.’ for locus sigilli (place of the seal). Perfunctory invocation of the rules for sealed documents called into question the seal’s utility in making promises enforceable.” E. Allan Farnsworth, Changing Your Mind: The Law of Regretted Decisions 46 (1998).

sealed-record statute. See confidentiality statute.

sealed testament. See mystic will under will.

sealed verdict. See verdict.

sealed will. See mystic will under will.

sea letter. Hist. A manifest issued during a war by authorities of a port where a neutral vessel is fitted, certifying the vessel’s nationality, specifying the nature of and destination of the vessel’s cargo, and allowing the vessel to sail under the neutral flag of its owner. • The last sea letter was issued at the Port of New York in 1806, and the use of sea letters was discontinued by proclamation of President James Madison. — Also spelled sea-letter. — Also termed sea brief; sea pass; passport.

“Our laws require masters of vessels, on entering a port for traffic, to lodge with the consul their registers, sealetters, and passports...” Theodore D. Woolsey, Introduction to the Study of International Law 161-62 (5th ed. 1878).

sealing of records. (1953) The act or practice of officially preventing access to particular (esp. juvenile-criminal) records, in the absence of a court order. Cf. expungement of record. [Cases: Records C-32.]

seal of cause. Scots law. The seal of a burgh court, by which a royal burgh could, consistently with its charter powers, create a subordinate corporation by charter.
The seal of cause was most commonly used to create charitable corporations and craft guilds.

seal of the state. See great seal (2) under seal.

seal of the United States. See great seal (1) under seal.

seaman. Maritime law. Under the Jones Act and the Longshore and Harbor Workers’ Compensation Act, a person who is attached to a navigating vessel as an employee below the rank of officer and contributes to the function of the vessel or the accomplishment of its mission. • Seamen’s injuries are covered under the Jones Act and the general maritime law. — Also termed crew member; mariner; member of a crew. See JONES ACT. Cf. STEVEDORE. [Cases: Seamen ⊕ 2.]

“'The Jones Act plaintiff must be a 'seaman' who is injured (or killed) 'in the course of his employment.' The 'course of employment' requirement at least excluded passengers, guests, trespassers, pirates (unless of course the pirate was suing his own employer) and so on. Who else might be excluded (or included) was, as a matter of initial construction, impossible to say. After a half-century of litigation the answer to the riddle is not apparent. The Supreme Court has alternated between giving the term 'seaman' an exceedingly broad construction and giving it a much narrower one. Consequently defendants have been encouraged to argue, in all but the most obvious cases, that plaintiff is not a Jones Act seaman and that the action must be dismissed. Thus there has always been, there continues to be, and presumably there will go on being a burden to show that the consent was given freely — not under duress. [Cases: Searches and Seizures ⊕ 13.]” administrative search. (1963) A search of public or commercial premises carried out by a regulatory authority to enforce compliance with health, safety, or security regulations. • The probable cause required for an administrative search is less stringent than that required for a search incident to a criminal investigation. — Also termed regulatory search; inspection search. [Cases: Searches and Seizures ⊕ 79.]

border search. (1922) 1. A search conducted at the border of a country, esp. at a checkpoint, to exclude illegal aliens and contraband. [Cases: Aliens, Immigration, and Citizenship ⊕ 440–446; Customs Duties ⊕ 126(1).]

“'Warrantless searches and seizures conducted at national boundaries are permitted under the general authority of the United States to ensure the integrity of its borders. As the Supreme Court stated in Carroll v. United States, such activity ensures 'national self-protection reasonably requiring one entering the country to identify himself as entitled to come in, and his belongings as effects which may be lawfully brought in.' [267 U.S. 132, 154, 45 S.Ct. 280, 285 (1925).] Thus, the right to remain silent and protect one’s personal belongings from government intrusion, normally afforded constitutional protection, are surrendered at the border.” (Charles H. Whitebread, Criminal Procedure § 12.02, at 227 (1980)).

2. Loosely, a search conducted near the border of a country. • Generally, searches near the U.S. border are treated no differently from those conducted elsewhere in the country.

checkpoint search. (1973) 1. A search anywhere on a military installation. 2. A search in which police officers set up roadblocks and stop motorists to ascertain whether the drivers are intoxicated. [Cases: Automobiles ⊕ 349(9).]

Chimel search. See protective search.

consent search. (1965) A search conducted after a person with the authority to do so voluntarily waives Fourth Amendment rights. • The government has the burden to show that the consent was given freely — not under duress. Bumper v. North Carolina, 391 U.S. 543, 548–49, 88 S.Ct. 1788, 1792 (1968). — Also termed consensual search. [Cases: Searches and Seizures ⊕ 171–186.]

“The voluntariness of a consent to search is 'to be determined from the totality of all the circumstances.' [Schneckloth v. Bustamonte, 412 U.S. 218, 93 S.Ct. 2041 (1973).] Among the factors to be considered in determining the effectiveness of an alleged consent to search are whether the defendant (1) has minimal schooling or was of low intelligence: (2) was mentally ill or intoxicated; (3) was under arrest at the time the consent was given; (4) was overpowered by officers, handcuffed, or similarly subject to physical restriction; (5) has seized from him by the police the keys to the premises thereafter searched; (6) employed evasive conduct or attempted to mislead the police; (7) denied guilt or the presence of any incriminatory objects in his premises; (8) earlier gave a valid confession or otherwise cooperated, as by interrogating the search, or at least the investigation leading to the search; (9) was hesitant in agreeing to the search; or (10) was refused his request to consult with counsel. The presence of some of these factors is not controlling, however, as each case must stand or fall on its own special facts: Jerold H. Israel & Wayne R. LaFave, Criminal Procedure in a Nutshell 141–42 (5th ed. 1993).

constructive search. A subpoena of a corporation’s records.

[It is settled that the so-called ‘constructive search’ involved in an administrative subpoena of corporate books or records constitutes a ‘search’ or ‘seizure’ within the meaning of the Fourth Amendment, 68 Am. Jur. 2d Searches and Seizures § 44, at 674 (1993).

emergency search. (1971) A warrantless search conducted by a police officer who has probable cause and the area within the suspect’s immediate control, carried out under exigent circumstances, such as when a prior announcement would probably lead to the destruction of the objects searched for, or would endanger the safety of the police or another person. [Cases: Searches and Seizures ☑ 135–36; Controlled Substances ☑ 137–38; Searches and Seizures ☑ 141–42.]

exigent search (eks-‡j-ant). (1974) A warrantless search carried out under exigent circumstances, such as an imminent danger to human life or a risk of the destruction of evidence. See exigent circumstances under CIRCUMSTANCE. [Cases: Controlled Substances ☑ 105, 114, 123, 130; Searches and Seizures ☑ 42–43.]

illegal search. See unreasonable search.

inventory search. (1966) A complete search of an arrestee’s person before that person is booked into jail. • All possessions found are typically held in police custody. [Cases: Automobiles ☑ 349.5(12); Controlled Substances ☑ 117; Searches and Seizures ☑ 58.]

no-knock search. (1970) A search of property by the police without knocking and announcing their presence and purpose before entry. • A no-knock search warrant may be issued under limited circumstances, as when a prior announcement would probably lead to the destruction of the objects searched for, or would endanger the safety of the police or another person. [Cases: Searches and Seizures ☑ 143; Controlled Substances ☑ 153.]

private search. A search conducted by a private person rather than by a law-enforcement officer. • Items found during a private search are generally admissible in evidence if the person conducting the search was not acting at the direction of a law-enforcement officer. [Cases: Searches and Seizures ☑ 33.]

protective search. (1967) A search of a detained suspect and the area within the suspect’s immediate control, conducted to protect the arresting officer’s safety (as from a concealed weapon) and often to preserve evidence. • A protective search can be conducted without a warrant. Chimel v. California, 395 U.S. 752, 89 S.Ct. 2034 (1969). — Also termed search incident to arrest; Chimel search (sh;:l-mel). [Cases: Arrest ☑ 63, 63.5(8); Searches and Seizures ☑ 70.]

regulatory search. See administrative search.

search incident to arrest. See protective search.

sector search. See zone search.

shakedown search. (1952) A usu. unannounced and warrantless search for illicit or contraband material (such as weapons or drugs) in a prisoner’s cell. — Often shortened to shakedown. [Cases: Prisons ☑ 134.]

strip search. (1955) A search of a person conducted after that person’s clothes have been removed, the purpose usu. being to find any contraband the person might be hiding. [Cases: Controlled Substances ☑ 126.]

unreasonable search. (18c) A search conducted without probable cause or other considerations that would make it legally permissible. — Also termed illegal search.

voluntary search. (1936) A search in which no duress or coercion was applied to obtain the defendant’s consent. See consent search.

warranted search. (1968) A search conducted under authority of a search warrant. [Cases: Searches and Seizures ☑ 141.]

warrantless search. (1950) A search conducted without obtaining a proper warrant. • Warrantless searches are permissible under exigent circumstances or when conducted incident to an arrest. See exigent circumstances under CIRCUMSTANCE; protective search. Arrest ☑ 71.1(1); Searches and Seizures ☑ 24, 42.1.]

zone search. A search of a crime scene (such as the scene of a fire or explosion) by dividing it up into specific sectors. — Also termed sector search.

2. An examination of public documents or records for information; esp., title search. 3. Int’l law. The wartime process of boarding and examining the contents of a merchant vessel for contraband. • A number of treaties regulate the manner in which the search must be conducted. See RIGHT OF SEARCH. [Cases: War and National Emergency ☑ 20.]

search-and-seizure warrant. See search warrant.

search book. (1912) A lawbook that contains no statements of the law but instead consists of lists or tables of cases, statutes, and the like, used simply to help a researcher find the law. • Most indexes, other than index-digests, are search books.

search committee. See committee.

search incident to arrest. See protective search under search.

search of patentability. See patentability search. search report. Patents. A list of prior-art documents cited by the patent examiner during the patent application's preliminary examination.

search warrant. (18c) Criminal law. A judge's written order authorizing a law-enforcement officer to conduct a search of a specified place and to seize evidence. See Fed. R. Crim. P. 41. — Also termed search-and-seizure warrant. See warrant (1). [Cases: Searches and Seizures (143.1).]

anticipatory search warrant. (1912) A search warrant based on an affidavit showing probable cause that evidence of a certain crime (such as illegal drugs) will be located at a specific place in the future. [Cases: Searches and Seizures (122).]

blanket search warrant. (1921) 1. A single search warrant that authorizes the search of more than one area. 2. An unconstitutional warrant that authorizes the seizure of everything found at a given location, without specifying which items may be seized.

covert-entry search warrant. A warrant authorizing law-enforcement officers to clandestinely enter private premises in the absence of the owner or occupant without prior notice, and to search the premises and collect intangible evidence, esp. photographs and eyewitness information. • Although previously used in federal criminal investigations, these types of warrants were first given express statutory authority by the USA Patriot Act. 18 USCA § 3103a. Information gathered while executing a sneak-and-peek warrant can later be used to support a search warrant under which physical evidence can be seized. — Also termed sneak-and-peek search warrant; surreptitious-entry search warrant. [Cases: Searches and Seizures (143.1).]

no-knock search warrant. (1972) A search warrant that authorizes the police to enter premises without knocking and announcing their presence and purpose before entry because a prior announcement would lead to the destruction of the objects searched for or would endanger the safety of the police or another person. Cf. knock-and-announce rule. [Cases: Searches and Seizures (143.1).]

sea reeve (see reev). Hist. An officer appointed to watch the shore and enforce a lord's maritime rights, including the right to wreackage.

sea rover. 1. A person who roves the sea for plunder; a pirate. 2. A pirate vessel.

Sears-Compco doctrine. The principle that Congress, by passing copyright, trademark, and patent laws, has preempted some state-law protection of information that is not protected by those statutes. Sears, Roebuck & Co. v. Stiffel Co., 376 U.S. 225, 84 S.Ct. 784 (1964); Compo Corp. v. Day-Brite Lighting, Inc., 376 U.S. 234, 84 S.Ct. 779 (1964). • The doctrine reflects a congressional policy decision that public access to information outweighs private economic incentives to collect and disseminate it. It limits how far states may protect against misappropriation. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property (1470).]

seasonable, adj. (15c) Within the time agreed on; within a reasonable time <seasonable performance of the contract>.

seasonal employment. See EMPLOYMENT.

seat, n. 1. Membership and privileges in an organization; esp., membership on a securities or commodities exchange <her seat at the exchange dates back to 1998>. [Cases: Exchanges (7).] 2. The center of some activity <the seat of government>.

secondary-effects test. A court’s analysis of a regulation affecting free-speech interests to determine whether it is actually intended to diminish or eliminate an indirect harm flowing from the regulated expression. • The test is used to distinguish content-specific regulation from content-neutral regulation. A regulation that is facially content-specific may be treated as content-neutral if its purpose is to diminish or eliminate a secondary effect of the speech, such as a zoning regulation for adult theaters when it is intended to limit crime. The test was first enunciated in City of Renton v. Playtime Theatres, Inc., 475 U.S. 41, 106 S.Ct. 925 (1986). [Cases: Constitutional Law C-2213.] secondary liability. See LIABILITY.

secondary-line competition. See vertical competition under COMPETITION.

secondary-line injury. Antitrust. Under the price-discrimination provisions of the Robinson-Patman Act, the act of hindering or seeking to hinder competition among a seller’s customers by selling substantially the same products at favorable prices to one customer, or a select group of customers, to the detriment of others. 15 USC § 13(a). • A secondary-line injury, which refers to competition among the seller's customers, is distinguishable from a primary-line injury, which refers to the anticompetitive effects that predatory pricing has on the direct competitors of the seller. Cf. primary-line injury.

secondary market. See MARKET.

secondary meaning. Intellectual property. A special sense that a trademark or tradename for a business, goods, or services has acquired even though the trademark or tradename was originally merely descriptive and therefore not protectable. • The term does not refer to a subordinate or rare meaning, but rather to a later meaning that has been added to the original one borne by the mark or name and that has now become in the market its usual and primary meaning. — Also termed special meaning; trade meaning. [Cases: Trademarks C-1032.]

"Secondary meaning is association, nothing more. It exists only in the minds of those of the public who have seen or known or have heard of a brand of goods by some name or sign and have associated the two in their minds." Harry D. Nims, The Law of Unfair Competition and Trade-Marks 105 (1929).

Section 8 declaration. See declaration of use.

Section 8(f) agreement. Labor law. A labor contract that is negotiated between an employer in the construction business and a union that cannot demonstrate that it represents a majority of the employees at the time the contract is executed. 29 USCA § 158(f). This is an exception to the general rule that an employer need only negotiate with a union that can demonstrate majority status. It was enacted in part because of the nature of the construction industry, in which the employers may have several different jobs in different parts of the country, the jobs are typically completed in a relatively short time, and the workforce is often transient. Since the workforce often does not have sufficient ties to a particular employer to petition for a certification election, section 8(f) agreements provide a certain level of protection in recognition of that fact. But section 8(f) agreements are not equivalent to collective-bargaining agreements. For example, the employer can legally repudiate the agreement at any time, and the employees may not legally picket to enforce the agreement. The main protection such an agreement provides is a monetary obligation, which can be enforced, if necessary, in federal court. And if the union achieves majority status, the section 8(f) agreement will essentially become a fully enforceable collective-bargaining agreement.

security, n. (15c) 1. Collateral given or pledged to guarantee the fulfillment of an obligation; esp., the assurance that a creditor will be repaid (usu. with interest) any... money or credit extended to a debtor. [Cases: Secured Transactions C=11, 115.] 2. A person who is bound by some type of guaranty; SURETY. 3. The state of being secure, esp. from danger or attack. 4. An instrument that evidences the holder's ownership rights in a firm (e.g., a stock), the holder's creditor relationship with a firm or government (e.g., a bond), or the holder's other rights (e.g., an option). 5. A security indicates an interest based on an investment in a common enterprise rather than direct participation in the enterprise. Under an important statutory definition, a security is any interest or instrument relating to finances, including a note, stock, treasury stock, bond, debenture, evidence of indebtedness, certificate of interest or participation in a profit-sharing agreement, collateral trust certificate, preorganization certificate or subscription, transferable share, investment contract, voting trust certificate, certificate of deposit for a security, fractional undivided interest in oil, gas, or other mineral rights, or certificate of interest or participation in, temporary or interim certificate for, receipt for, guarantee of, or warrant or right to subscribe to or purchase any of these things. A security also includes any put, call, straddle, option, or privilege on any security, certificate of deposit, group or index of securities, or any such device entered into on a national securities exchange, relating to foreign currency. 15 USCA § 77b(1). — Also termed (in sense 4) evidence of indebtedness, evidence of debt. Cf. SHARE (2); STOCK (4). [Cases: Corporations C=63.1, 470; Securities Regulation C=5, 249.]

"Securities differ from most other commodities in which people deal. They have no intrinsic value in themselves — they represent rights in something else. The value of a bond, note or other promise to pay depends on the financial condition of the promisor. The value of a share of stock depends on the profitability or future prospects of the corporation or other entity which issued it. Its market price depends on how much other people are willing to pay for it, based on their evaluation of those prospects." David L. Ratner, Securities Regulation in a Nutshell 1 (4th ed. 1992).

"What do the following have in common: scotch whisky, self-improvement courses, cosmetics, earthworms, beavers, muskrats, rabbits, chinchillas, fishing boats, vacuum cleaners, cemetery lots, cattle embryos, master recording contracts, animal feeding programs, pooled litigation funds, and fruit trees? The answer is that they have all been held to be securities within the meaning of federal or state securities statutes. The vast range of such unconventional investments that have fallen within the ambit of the securities laws' coverage is due to the broad statutory definition of a 'security' . . . ." 1 Thomas Lee Hazen, Treatise on the Law of Securities Regulation § 1.5, at 28-29 (3d ed. 1995).

adjustment security. A stock or bond that is issued during a corporate reorganization. • The security holders' relative interests are readjusted during this process.

assessable security. A security on which a charge or assessment covering the obligations of the issuing company is made. • Bank and insurance-company stock may be assessable.

asset-backed security. A debt security (such as a bond) that is secured by assets that have been pooled and secured by the assets from the pool.

bearer security. An unregistered security payable to the holder. Cf. bearer bond under BOND (3).

callable security. See redeemable security.

certificated security. A security that is a recognized investment vehicle, belongs to or is divisible into a class or series of shares, and is represented on an instrument payable to the bearer or a named person. UCC § 8-102(4). [Cases: Corporations C=94.]

collateral security. 1. A security, subordinate to and given in addition to a primary security, that is intended to guarantee the validity or convertibility of the primary security. 2. Collateral (2).

consolidated security. (usu. pl.) A security issued in large enough numbers to provide the funds to retire two or more outstanding issues of debt securities.

conversion security. The security into which a convertible security may be converted, usu. common stock.

convertible security. A security (usu. a bond or preferred stock) that may be exchanged by the owner for another security, esp. common stock from the same company, and usu. at a fixed price on a specified date. — Also termed (specif.) convertible debt; convertible stock. [Cases: Securities Regulation C=53.16(10).]

coupon security. A security with detachable interest coupons that the holder must present for payment as they mature. • Coupon securities are usu. in denominations of $1,000, and they are negotiable. [Cases: Corporations C=472.]

debt security. A security representing funds borrowed by the corporation from the holder of the debt obligation; esp., a bond, note, or debenture. • Generally, a debt security is any security that is not an equity security. See BOND (3). [Cases: Securities Regulation C=5.12, 5.13, 250.]

dematerialized security. See uncertificated security.

derivative security. See DERIVATIVE.

divisional security. A special type of security issued to finance a particular project.

equity security. A security representing an ownership interest in a corporation (such as a share of stock) rather than a debt interest (such as a bond); any stock or similar security, or any security that is convertible into stock or similar security or carrying a warrant or right to subscribe to or purchase stock or a similar security, and any such warrant or right. [Cases: Corporations C=63.1; Securities Regulation C=5.25.]

exempt security. A security that need not be registered under the provisions of the Securities Act of 1933 and is exempt from the margin requirements of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934. [Cases: Securities Regulation C=14.10-14.40.]

adjustment security. A stock or bond that is issued during a corporate reorganization. • The security holders' relative interests are readjusted during this process.

assessable security. A security on which a charge or assessment covering the obligations of the issuing company is made. • Bank and insurance-company stock may be assessable.
fixed-income security. A security that pays a fixed rate of return, such as a bond with a fixed interest rate or a preferred stock with a fixed dividend.

government security. A security issued by a government, a government agency, or a government corporation; esp., a security (such as a Treasury bill) issued by a U.S. government agency, with the implied backing of Congress. — Also termed government-agency security; agency security; government bond. [Cases: Securities Regulation § 5.29; United States § 91.]

heritable security. Scots law. A debt instrument secured by a charge on heritable property. — Also termed inheritable security. See heritable bond under bond (2).

high-grade security. A security issued by a company of sound financial condition and having the ability to maintain good earnings (e.g., a utility company security).

hybrid security. A security with features of both a debt instrument (such as a bond) and an equity interest (such as a share of stock). • An example of a hybrid security is a convertible bond, which can be exchanged for shares in the issuing corporation and is subject to stock-price fluctuations.

investment security. An instrument issued in bearer or registered form as a type commonly recognized as a medium for investment and evidencing a share or other interest in the property or enterprise of the issuer. [Cases: Securities Regulation § 5.10, 252.]

junior security. A security that is subordinate to a senior security. • Junior securities have a lower priority in claims on assets and income.

landed security. A mortgage or other encumbrance affecting land. [Cases: Mortgages § 1.]

letter security. See restricted security.

listed security. A security accepted for trading on a securities exchange. • The issuing company must have met the SEC's registration requirements and complied with the rules of the particular exchange. — Also termed listed stock. See delisting. [Cases: Exchanges § 13.10.]

long-term security. 1. A new securities issue with an initial maturity of ten years or more. 2. On a balance sheet, a security with a remaining maturity of one year or more.

low-grade security. A security with low investment quality. • Low-grade securities usu. offer higher yields to attract capital. See high-yield bond under bond (3).

marginable security. A security that can be bought on margin. — Also termed margin stock. See margin.

margined security. A security that is bought on margin and that serves as collateral in a margin account. See margin.

marketable security. A security that the holder can readily sell on a stock exchange or an over-the-counter market.

mortgage-backed security. A security (esp. a pass-through security) backed by mortgages. • The cash flow from these securities depends on principal and interest payments from the pool of mortgages. See stripped mortgage-backed security. [Cases: Securities Regulation § 5.13.]

municipal security. See municipal bond under bond (3).

noncallable security. A security that cannot be redeemed, or bought back, at the issuer's option. — Also termed (specif.) noncallable bond.

nonmarketable security. 1. A security that cannot be sold on the market and can be redeemed only by the holder. 2. A security that is not of investment quality.

outstanding security. A security that is held by an investor and has not been redeemed by the issuing corporation.

pass-through security. A security that passes through payments from debtors to investors. • Pass-through securities are usu. assembled and sold in packages to investors by private lenders who deduct a service fee before passing the principal and interest payments through to the investors.

personal security. 1. An obligation for the repayment of a debt, evidenced by a pledge or note binding a natural person, as distinguished from property. 2. A person's legal right to enjoy life, health, and reputation.

public security. A negotiable or transferable security that is evidence of government debt.

real security. The security of mortgages or other liens or encumbrances upon land. See collateral (2). [Cases: Mortgages § 1.]

redeemable security. Any security, other than a short-term note, that, when presented to the issuer, entitles the holder to receive a share of the issuer's assets or the cash equivalent. — Also termed callable security.

registered security. 1. A security whose owner is recorded in the issuer's books. • The issuer keeps a record of the current owners for purposes of sending dividends, interest payments, proxies, and the like. 2. A security that is to be offered for sale and for which a registration statement has been submitted. — Also termed (specif.) registered stock. [Cases: Securities Regulation § 11.10–11.50.]

restricted security. A security that is not registered with the SEC and therefore may not be sold publicly unless specified conditions are met. • A restricted security is usu. acquired in a nonpublic transaction in which the buyer gives the seller a letter stating the buyer's intent to hold the stock as an investment rather than resell it. — Also termed restricted stock; letter security; letter stock; unregistered security.
senior security. A security of a class having priority over another class as to the distribution of assets or the payment of dividends. [15 USCA § 77r(d)(4)].

shelf security. A security that is set aside for shelf registration.

short-term security. A bond or note that matures and is payable within a brief period (often one year).

speculative security. A security that, as an investment, involves a risk of loss greater than would usu. be involved; esp., a security whose value depends on proposed or promised future promotion or development, rather than on present tangible assets or conditions.

stripped mortgage-backed security. A derivative security providing distributions to classes that receive different proportions of either the principal or interest payments from a pool of mortgage-backed securities. — Abbr. SMBS. See mortgage-backed security.

structured security. (usu. pl.) 1. A security whose cashflow characteristics depend on one or more indexes, or that has an embedded forward or option. 2. A security for which an investor’s investment return and the issuer’s payment obligations are contingent on, or highly sensitive to, changes in the value of the underlying assets, indexes, interest rates, or cash flows. SEC Rule 434(h) (17 CFR § 230.434(h)).

treasury security. See treasury stock under stock.

uncertificated security. A share or other interest in property or an enterprise, or an obligation of the issuer that is not represented by an instrument but is registered on the issuer’s books. UCC § 8-102(a)(18).

• This term was called uncertificated security in earlier versions of the UCC. — Also termed (in BrE) dematerialized security.

unlisted security. An over-the-counter security that is not registered with a stock exchange. — Also termed unlisted stock.

unregistered security. See restricted security.

voting security. See voting stock under stock.

when-issued security. A security that can be traded even though it has not yet been issued. • Any transaction that takes place does not become final until the security is issued.

worthless security. A security that has lost its value, for which a loss (usu. capital) is allowed for tax purposes. IRC (26 USCA) § 165. [Cases: Internal Revenue § 3429.]

zero-coupon security. A security (esp. a bond) that is issued at a large discount but pays no interest. • The face value of the bond is payable at maturity.

security agreement. An agreement that creates or provides for an interest in specified real or personal property to guarantee the performance of an obligation.

• It must provide for a security interest, describe the collateral, and be signed by the debtor. The agreement may include other important covenants and warranties. [Cases: Secured Transactions § 41–51.]

Security Council. A principal organ of the United Nations, consisting of five permanent members (China, France, Russia, the United Kingdom, and the United States) and ten additional members elected at stated intervals, charged with the responsibility of maintaining international peace and security, and esp. of preventing or halting wars by diplomatic, economic, or military action. • The nonpermanent members are elected from each of the world’s major regions, based on a distribution formula. [Cases: International Law § 10.45.]

security for costs. (17c) Money, property, or a bond given to a court by a plaintiff or an appellant to secure the payment of court costs if that party loses. [Cases: Costs § 105, 302; Federal Civil Procedure § 2732.]

security grade. See security rating.

security grading. See security rating.

security interest. (1951) A property interest created by agreement or by operation of law to secure performance of an obligation (esp. repayment of a debt). • Although the UCC limits the creation of a security interest to personal property, the Bankruptcy Code defines the term to mean “a lien created by an agreement.” 11 USCA § 101(51). [Cases: Secured Transactions § 2, 11.]

perfected security interest. (1955) A security interest that complies with the statutory requirements for achieving priority over a trustee in bankruptcy and unperfected interests. • A perfected interest may also have priority over another interest that was perfected later in time. See PEFECT. [Cases: Bankruptcy § 2952; Secured Transactions § 81–96, 138–145.]

purchase-money security interest. (1957) A security interest that is created when a buyer uses the lender’s money to make the purchase and immediately gives the lender security by using the purchased property as collateral (UCC § 9–107); a security interest that is either (1) taken or retained by the seller of the collateral to secure all or part of its price or (2) taken by a person who by making advances or incurring an obligation gives value to enable the debtor to acquire rights in or the use of collateral if that value is in fact so used. • If a buyer’s purchase of a boat, for example, is financed by a bank that loans the amount of the purchase price, the bank’s security interest in the boat that secures the loan is a purchase-money security interest. — Abbr. PMSI. — Also termed purchase-money interest. [Cases: Secured Transactions § 83, 146.]

unperfected security interest. (1957) A security interest held by a creditor who has not established priority over any other creditor. • The only priority is over the debtor. [Cases: Secured Transactions § 139.] security rating. 1. The system for grading or classifying a security by financial strength, stability, or risk. • Firms such as Standard and Poor's and Moody's grade securities. • Also termed security grade; security grading; security rate. 2. The classification that a given security is assigned to under this system.

sedge flat. A tract of land below the high-water mark.

sedition, n. (14c) 1. An agreement, communication, or other preliminary activity aimed at inciting treason or some lesser commotion against public authority. 2. Advocacy aimed at inciting or producing — imminent lawless action. • At common law, sedition included defaming a member of the royal family or the government. The difference between sedition and treason is that the former is committed by preliminary steps, while the latter entails some overt act for carrying out the plan. But if the plan is merely for some small commotion, even accomplishing the plan does not amount to treason. Cf. treason. [Cases: Insurrection and Sedition C-1] — seditious, adj.

"Sedition — This, perhaps the very vaguest of all offences known to the Criminal Law, is defined as the speaking or writing of words calculated to excite disaffection against the Constitution as by law established, to procure the alteration of it by other than lawful means, or to incite any person to commit a crime to the disturbance of the peace, or to raise discontent or disaffection, or to promote ill-feeling between different classes of the community. A charge of sedition is, historically, one of the chief means by which Government, especially at the end of the eighteenth and the beginning of the nineteenth century, strove to put down hostile critics. It is evident that the vagueness of the charge is a danger to the liberty of the subject, especially if the Courts of Justice can be induced to take a view favourable to the Government." Edward Jenks, The Book of English Law 136 (P.B. Fairest ed., 6th ed. 1967).

Sedition Act. Hist. A 1798 federal statute that prohibited the malicious publication of defamatory material about the government, Congress, or the President. • The act expired in 1801.

sed per curiam (sed par kyoor-ee-am). [Latin] But the court. • This phrase is used to introduce: (1) a statement made by the court disagreeing with counsel's arguments; or (2) the opinion of the whole court when different from the opinion of the single judge immediately before quoted.

sed quaere (sed kweer-ee). [Latin] But inquire; examine this further. • This remark indicates that the correctness of a particular statement is challenged.

seduction. (16c) The offense that occurs when a man entices a woman of previously chaste character to have unlawful intercourse with him by means of persuasion, solicitation, promises, or bribes, or other means not involving force. • Many states have abolished this offense for persons over the age of legal consent. Traditionally, the parent of a young woman had an action to recover damages for the loss of her services. But in measuring damages, the jury could consider not just the loss of services but also the distress and anxiety that the parent had suffered in being deprived of her comfort and companionship. Though seduction was not a crime at common law, many American states made it a statutory crime until the late 20th century. [Cases: Seduction C-29–54.]

sed vide (sed vi-dee). [Latin] But see. • This remark, followed by a citation, directs the reader's attention to an authority or a statement that conflicts with or contradicts the statement or principle just given. — Also termed but see.

seise (sez), vb. To invest with seisin or establish as a holder in fee simple; to put in possession <he became seised of half a section of farmland near Amarillo>.

seised to uses. See STANDING SEISED TO USES.

seisin (see-zin), n. (14c) 1. Hist. Completion of the ceremony of feudal investiture, by which the tenant was admitted into freehold. 2. Possession of a freehold estate in land; ownership. 3. Louisiana law. The right that the law accords universal successors to own and possess a person’s estate directly and immediately upon that person’s death. La. Civ. Code arts. 935 et seq. — Also spelled seizin. — Also termed vesture; seisin; in Scots law] sasine. [Cases: Property \(\Rightarrow\) 10.]

“Originally, seisin meant simply possession and the word was applicable to both land and chattels. Prior to the fourteenth century it was proper to speak of a man as being seised of land or seised of a horse. Gradually, seisin and possession became distinct concepts. A man could be said to be in possession of chattels, or of lands wherein he had an estate for years, but he could not be said to be seised of them. Seisin came finally to mean, in relation to land, possession under claim of a freehold estate therein. The tenant for years had possession but not seisin; seisin was in the reversioner who had the fee. And although the word ‘seisin’ appears in modern statutes with a fair degree of frequency, it is usually treated as synonymous with ownership.” Cornelius J. Moynihan, Introduction to the Law of Real Property 98–99 (2d ed. 1988).

“It is difficult to define seisin satisfactorily. It has nothing to do with ‘seizing,’ with its implication of violence. To medieval lawyers it suggested the very opposite: peace and quiet. A man who was put in seisin of land was ‘set’ there and continued to ‘sit’ there. Seisin thus denotes quiet possession of land, but quiet possession of a particular kind. . . . Although it seems impossible to frame a satisfactory definition . . . , to call it ‘that feudal possession of land which only the owner of a freehold estate in freehold land could have’ is to express the most important elements.” Robert E. Megarry & M.P. Thompson, A Manual of the Law of Real Property 27–28 (6th ed. 1993).

actual seisin. See seisin in deed.

constructive seisin. See seisin in law.

primer seisin (prim- or or pretor see-zin). Hist. A right of the Crown to receive, from the heir of a tenant who died in possession of a knight’s fee, one year’s profits of the inherited estate (or half a year’s profits if the estate was in reversion); FIRST FRUITS (1). quasi-seisin. A copyholder’s possession of lands, the freehold possession being in the lord. — Also termed customary seisin.

seisin in deed. (17c) Actual possession of a freehold estate in land, by oneself or by one’s tenant or agent, as distinguished from legal possession. — Also termed seisin in fact; actual seisin. [Cases: Property \(\Rightarrow\) 10.]

seisin in fact. See seisin in deed.

seisin in law. (17c) The right to immediate possession of a freehold estate in land, as when an heir inherits land but has not yet entered it. — Also termed legal seisin; constructive seisin; equitable seisin; fictitious seisin. [Cases: Property \(\Rightarrow\) 10.]

“Seisin in law is, when something is done, which the law accounteth a seisin; as an inrollment.” 2 E. Chambers, Cyclopaedia: Or, an Universal Dictionary of Arts and Sciences (1743), s.v. SEISIN IN FACT.

seisina habenda (see-zin-a ha-ben-da). See DE SEISINA HABENDA.

seisior (see-zar), n. One who takes possession of a freehold.

seize, vb. (13c) 1. To forcibly take possession (of a person or property). 2. To place (someone) in possession. 3. To be in possession (of property). 4. To be informed of or aware of (something). See SEISIN; SEIZURE.

seizin. See SEISIN.

seizure, n. (15c) The act or an instance of taking possession of a person or property by legal right or process; esp., in constitutional law, a confiscation or arrest that may interfere with a person’s reasonable expectation of privacy. [Cases: Arrest ∋ 68(4); Searches and Seizures ∋ 13.1.]

constructive seizure. A manifest intent to seize and take possession of another person's property, usu. because the person is a member of a protected group or because the person has exercised or is planning to exercise a constitutionally protected right. - Also termed selective prosecution. Cf. vindictive prosecution selective prospectivity. (1991) A court's decision to apply a new rule of law in the particular case in which the new rule is announced, but to apply the old rule in all other cases pending at the time the new rule is announced or in which the facts predate the new rule's announcement. [Cases: Courts ∋ 100(1).]

Selective Service System. The federal agency that registers all persons 18-26 who are eligible for military service military service and provides personnel to the Armed Forces during emergencies. It was established in 1940 as a part of the War Manpower Commission and became independent in 1943. — Abbr. SSS. [Cases: Armed Services ∋ 20.8.]

self-deal. Participation in a transaction that benefits oneself instead of another who is owed a fiduciary duty. For example, a corporate director might engage in self-dealing by participating in a competing business to the corporation's detriment. Cf. fair dealing (1), (2). [Cases: Corporations ∋ 315, 316. — self-deal, vb.

self-defense. (n. (1651) 1. The use of force to protect oneself, one's family, or one's property from a real or threatened attack. Generally, a person is justified in using a reasonable amount of force in self-defense if he or she reasonably believes that the danger of bodily harm is imminent and that force is necessary to avoid this danger. — Also termed defense of self. Cf. adequate provocation under provocation. [Cases: Assault and Battery ∋ 13, 67; Homicide ∋ 766.]

imperfect self-defense. (1882) The use of force by one who makes an honest but unreasonable mistake that force is necessary to repel an attack. In some jurisdictions, such a self defender will be charged with a lesser offense than the one committed. [Cases: Homicide ∋ 866.]

perfect self-defense. (1883) The use of force by one who accurately appraises the necessity and the amount of force to repel an attack.

2. Int'l law. The right of a state to defend itself against a real or threatened attack. See United Nations Charter, self-executing. adj. (1857) (Of an instrument) effective immediately without the need of any type of implementing action <the wills had self-executing affidavits attached>. • Legal instruments may be self-executing according to various standards. For example, treaties are self-executing under the Supremacy Clause of the U.S. Constitution (art. VI, § 2) if textually capable of judicial enforcement and intended to be enforced in that manner.

self-help, n. (1831) An attempt to redress a perceived wrong by one's own action rather than through the normal legal process. • The UCC and other statutes provide for particular self-help remedies (such as repossession) if the remedy can be executed without breaching the peace. UCC § 9-609. — Also termed self-redress; extrajudicial enforcement. [Cases: Secured Transactions 2-228.]

Notice to the debtor is generally not required prior to self-help repossession of collateral by the creditor upon default, although the provision for self-help repossession has been held to violate due process requirements in some instances, and states under the Uniform Consumer Credit Code require particular notice requirements. Furthermore, while the UCC generally does not require notice to the debtor upon self-help repossession of the collateral upon the debtor's default, the agreement between the parties may require such notice prior to repossession.” 68A Am. Jur. 2d Secured Transactions § 608, at 466 (1993).

self-help remedy. See extrajudicial remedy under remedy. self-incrimination. (1853) The act of indicating one's own involvement in a crime or exposing oneself to prosecution, esp. by making a statement. — Also termed self-crimination; self-inculpation. See right against self-incrimination. [Cases: Criminal Law 2-393; Witnesses 2-299.]

Self- Incrimination Clause. (1925) The clause of the Fifth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution barring the government from compelling criminal defendants to testify against themselves. [Cases: Witnesses 2-299.]

semble (sem-bal). [Law French] (1817) It seems; it would appear <semble that the parties' intention was to create a binding agreement. • This term is used chiefly to indicate an obiter dictum in a court opinion or to introduce an uncertain thought or interpretation. — Abbr. sem.; semb.

semestria (si-mes-tree-a), n. [Latin “half-yearly matters”] Roman law. The collected decisions of Roman emperors, issued every six months.

Semiconductor Chip Protection Act. Intellectual property. A 1984 statute protecting manufacturers against the unauthorized copying or use of semiconductor chips and the mask works used to manufacture them. • Semiconductor chips do not qualify for patent protection since technological advancements are small and usu. obvious. Mask works are multi-layered, three-dimensional templates used to produce semiconductor chips. Mask-work design is more functional than expressive and so traditional copyright protection was inapplicable until 1984. The Act provides copyright protection to the mask works for a period of ten years. 17 USCA §§ 901–914. — Abbr. SCPA. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property (610A.).]

semi-free software. Software that does not include source code but comes with permission for individuals to use, copy, modify, and distribute the software for nonprofit purposes. Cf. FREEWARE; PROPRIETARY SOFTWARE; SHAREWARE.

seminaufragium (sehm-i-naw-fray-jee-uhm), n. [Latin] Hist. A half-shipwreck, as when goods are cast overboard in a storm or when a damaged ship's repair costs are more than the ship's worth.

"In actions of filiation, a pursuer was formerly entitled, on adducing a semiplaena probatio, to her oath in supplement to prove that the defender was the father of her child. A semiplaena probatio was such a proof as induced, not merely a suspicion, but a reasonable belief that the pursuer's case was well-founded, and consisted generally of 2 proof of opportunity for connection, acts of familiarity on the part of the defender towards the pursuer, &c. . . . " John Traver, Traver's Latin Maxims 569 (4th ed. 1894).

semi-secret trust. See trust.

semi-skilled work. See work (1).

semper (sem-par). [Latin] Always. • This term introduces several Latin maxims, such as semper in dubiis benigniora praeferen suis ("in doubtful cases, the more favorable constructions are always to be preferred").

semper paratus. A defendant's pleading that he or she has always been ready to perform as the plaintiff demanded.

senage (see-naje). [French] Money paid for synodals; tribute-money. See SYNODAL.

senate. (13c) 1. The upper chamber of a bicameral legislature. [Cases: States (–> 26.)] 2. (cap) The upper house of the U.S. Congress, composed of 100 members — two from each state — who are elected to six-year terms. — Abbr. S. [Cases: United States Congress (–> 71.)] senate bill. See BILL (3).

senator. (13c) A person who is a member of a senate.

senatorial courtesy. (1884) 1. The tradition that the President should take care in filling a high-level federal post (such as a judgeship) with a person agreeable to the senators from the nominee's home state, lest the senators defeat confirmation. [Cases: Judges (–> 3.)

"The risk of a deadlock is minimized by [the President's] consulting informally with the Senators from the State in which the office lies, if they are members of his own political party. Actually this amounts in most instances to his taking the advice of these two Senators as to a selection. A nomination approved by them is practically certain of final confirmation by the Senate as a whole. The arrangement is a 'log-rolling' one, which has been dignified by the name of 'Senatorial courtesy.' 'If you will help me to get the appointments I want in my State, I will help you get the appointments you want in your State.'" Herbert W. Horwill, The Usages of the American Constitution 129 (1925).

2. Loosely, civility among senators .

Senator of the College of Justice. Scots law. See LORD OF SESSION.

senatus (si-nay-tas), n. [Latin] Roman law. 1. The Roman senate. 2. The meeting place for the Roman senate.

senatus consultum. In the Republic, a resolution of the Roman Senate, which did not have the force of law (though usu. followed). • In the first century A.D., these resolutions replaced the legislation of the comitia, but by the end of the second century, they were merely the Senate's official expression of the imperial will. The senate often adopted the text of a speech (oratio) by the emperor. — Sometimes written senatusconsultum. — Also termed senatus consultum. — Abbr. S.C. Pl. senatus consultum.

"Senatus consultum. — In the regal and republican periods the Senate enjoyed no legislative power. It was an advisory body, nominated by the King, and at first purely patrician. Later it included patricians and plebeians . . . its chief duty still being to tender advice to the magistrates . . . . The theory still was, till the time of Hadrian, that senatus consultum were directions to the magistrates, who were now in fact, if not in name, bound to give effect to them, till by a process of gradual usurpation senatus consultum came to be direct legislation." R.W. Leage, Roman Private Law 12–13 (C.H. Ziegler ed., 2d ed. 1930).
senatus consultum Macedonianum (si-nay-tas kan-sal-tom mas-a-dohnee-nee-ay-nam). [Latin "Macedo's Resolution"] Roman law. A senate decree under Vespasian to protect fathers from children in their power who had borrowed excessive sums in expectation of their father's death, by making actions to recover such loans unlawful. — Also termed Macedonian Decree.

"In the principate of Vespasian, 69-79 A.D., a senatus consultum was passed which forbade loans to a filius-familias. It was called the senatus consultum — Macedonianum, after one Macedo, a usurer who had made such a loan and thereby instigated a hard-pressed debtor to kill his father in order to enter into his inheritance. To prevent tragic possibilities like these, the senatus consultum declared that no action would lie to recover money lent to a filius-familias." Max Radin, Handbook of Roman Law 188-89 (1927).

"The senatus consultum Macedonianum reads as follows: 'Whereas Macedo's borrowings gave him an added incentive to commit a crime to which he was naturally predisposed and whereas those who lend money on terms which are dubious, to say the least, often provide evil men with the means of wrongdoing, it has been decided, in order to teach pernicious moneylenders that a son's debt cannot be made good by waiting for his father's death, that a person who has lent money to a son-in-power is to have no claim or action even after the death of the person in whose power he was."' Digest of Justinian 14.6.1 (Ulpian, Ad Sabinum 49).

denatus consultum ultimum necessitatis (si-nay-tas k-an-sal-tom al-to-mee na-see-i-tay-tis). [Latin] Roman law. A decree of the senate of the last necessity. This decree usu. preceded the nomination of a leader with absolute power in a time of emergency. Also termed senatus consultum ultimae necessitatis.

denatus consultum Velleianum (si-nay-tas kan-sal-tom vel-ee-ay-tom). [Latin "Velleian Decree"] Roman law. A senate decree, probably of A.D. 46, to protect women from making unconscionable guarantees, suretyship undertakings, or debt assumptions for their husbands and for others generally, by making actions to enforce such undertakings unlawful.

sending state. See state.

senechal (sen-a-shal), n. [Law French] Hist. 1. A French title of office, equivalent to a steward in England. 2. A senechal was originally a duke's lieutenant or a lieuten­ant to other dignities of the kingdom. 2. The steward of a manor. 3. Hist. An administrative or judicial officer, such as the governor of a city or province. — Also termed senechal.

senility. (18c) Mental feebleness or impairment caused by old age. • A senile person (in the legal, as opposed to the popular, sense) is incompetent to enter into a binding contract or to execute a will. — Also termed senile dementia (see-nil di-men-she-0). [Cases: Mental Health —]. — senile, adj.

senior, adj. (14c) 1. (Of a debt, etc.) first; preferred, as over junior obligations. 2. (Of a person) older than someone else. 3. (Of a person) higher in rank or service. 4. (Of a man) elder, as distinguished from the man's son who has the same name.

senior debt. See debt.

senior interest. See interest (2).

seniority. (15c) 1. The preferential status, privileges, or rights given to an employee based on the employee's length of service with an employer. • Employees with seniority may receive additional or enhanced benefit packages and obtain competitive advantages over fellow employees in layoff and promotional decisions. 2. The status of being older or senior.

seniority system. Employment law. Any arrangement that recognizes length of service in making decisions about job layoffs and promotions or other advancements.

senior judge. See judge.

senior lien. See lien.

senior mortgage. See mortgage.

senior partner. See partner.

senior party. Intellectual property. In an interference proceeding, the first person to file an application for a property's legal protection, e.g., an invention patent or a trademark registration. • In the United States, merely being the first to file does not entitle the party to the protection. The proceeding's administrator also takes other factors into account. For instance, in a patent-interference proceeding the invention’s conception date and the inventor's diligence in reducing the invention to practice are relevant factors. Priority in the filing date is prima facie evidence that the senior party is the first inventor, so the challenger has the burden of proof. Cf. junior party. [Cases: Patents C to 106(1).] senior security. See security.

senior status. (1970) The employment condition of a semiretired judge who continues to perform certain judicial duties that the judge is willing and able to undertake. [Cases: Judges C to 7.]

sensus (sen-sas). [Latin] Hist. Sense; meaning; signification. • The word appears in its inflected form in phrases such as mala sensus ("an evil sense"), mittori sensu ("in a milder sense"), and sensu honesto ("in an honest sense").
sentence, n. (14c) The judgment that a court formally pronounces after finding a criminal defendant guilty; the punishment imposed on a wrongdoer (a sentence of 20 years in prison). See Fed. R. Crim. P. 32. — Also termed judgment of conviction. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment ☞ 1001.] — sentence, vb.

accumulative sentences. See consecutive sentences.

aggregate sentence. (1917) A sentence that arises from a conviction on multiple counts in an indictment. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment ☞ 642-643.]

alternative sentence. (1841) A sentence other than incarceration. • Examples include community service and victim restitution. — Also termed creative sentence. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment ☞ 2049, 2100-2217.]

blended sentence. In a juvenile-delinquency disposition, a sanction that combines delinquency sanctions and correction.

concurrent sentences. (1905) Two or more sentences of jail time to be served simultaneously. • For example, if a convicted criminal receives concurrent sentences of 5 years and 15 years, the total amount of jail time is 15 years. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment ☞ 547.]

conditional sentence. (1843) A sentence of confinement if the convicted criminal fails to perform the conditions of probation. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment ☞ 1960-1988.]

consecutive sentences. (1844) Two or more sentences of jail time to be served in sequence. • For example, if a convicted criminal receives consecutive sentences of 20 years and 5 years, the total amount of jail time is 25 years. — Also termed cumulative sentences; accumulative sentences. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment ☞ 545.]

consolidated sentence. See general sentence.

creative sentence. See alternative sentence.

dead sentence. (1811) A sentence that imposes the death penalty. See Model Penal Code § 210.6. — Also termed judgment of blood. See DEATH PENALTY. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment ☞ 1610, 1787.]

deferd sentence. (1915) A sentence that will not be carried out if the convicted criminal meets certain requirements, such as complying with conditions of probation. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment ☞ 2051-2054.]

delayed sentence. (1906) A sentence that is not imposed immediately after conviction, thereby allowing the convicted criminal to satisfy the court (usu. by complying with certain restrictions or conditions during the delay period) that probation is preferable to a prison sentence. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment ☞ 2051-2054.]

determinate sentence. (1885) A sentence for a fixed length of time rather than for an unspecified duration. — Also termed definite sentence; definitive sentence; fixed sentence; flat sentence; straight sentence. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment ☞ 1053, 1054.]

deviative sentence. (1879) A sentence that gives more punishment than is allowed by law. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment ☞ 34, 1480, 1483.]

fixed sentence. 1. See determinate sentence. 2. See mandatory sentence.

flat sentence. See determinate sentence.

general sentence. (1891) An undivided, aggregate sentence in a multicount case; a sentence that does not specify the punishment imposed for each count. • General sentences are prohibited. — Also termed consolidated sentence. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment ☞ 1060.]

indeterminate sentence. (1885) 1. A sentence of an unspecified duration, such as one for a term of 10 to 20 years. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment ☞ 1057-1059, 1125-1127. 2. A maximum prison term that the parole board can reduce, through statutory authorization, after the inmate has served the minimum time required by law. — Also termed indefinite sentence. See indeterminate sentencing.

intermittent sentence. (1964) A sentence consisting of periods of confinement interrupted by periods of freedom. — Also termed (when served on weekends) weekend sentence.

life sentence. (1878) A sentence that imprisons the convicted criminal for life — though in some jurisdictions the prisoner may become eligible for release on good behavior, rehabilitation, or the like. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment ☞ 1055, 1120.]

mandatory sentence. (1926) A sentence set by law with no discretion for the judge to individualize punishment. — Also termed mandatory penalty; mandatory punishment; fixed sentence. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment ☞ 1053, 1054.]

maximum sentence. (1898) The highest level of punishment provided by law for a particular crime. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment ☞ 1059, 1127.]

minimum sentence. (1891) The least amount of time that a convicted criminal must serve in prison before becoming eligible for parole. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment ☞ 1057, 1126.]

multiple sentences. (1938) Concurrent or consecutive sentences, if a convicted criminal is found guilty of more than one offense. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment ☞ 500.]

nominal sentence. (1852) A criminal sentence in name only; an exceedingly light sentence.

noncustodial sentence. (1971) A criminal sentence (such as probation) not requiring prison time.

presumptive sentence. (1978) An average sentence for a particular crime (esp. provided under sentencing guidelines) that can be raised or lowered based on the presence of mitigating or aggravating circumstances. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment ☞ 34, 654.]
prior sentence. (1863) A sentence previously imposed on a criminal defendant for a different offense, whether by a guilty verdict, a guilty plea, or a nolo contendere. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment 630–637.]

split sentence. (1927) A sentence in which part of the time is served in confinement — to expose the offender to the unpleasantness of prison — and the rest on probation. See shock probation under probation. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment 1934, 1936.]

straight sentence. See determinate sentence.

suspended sentence. (1919) A sentence postponed so that the convicted criminal is not required to serve time unless he or she commits another crime or violates some other court-imposed condition. • A suspended sentence, in effect, is a form of probation. — Also termed withheld sentence. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment 1804–1810.]

weekend sentence. See intermittent sentence.

sentence bargain. See plea bargain.

sentence cap. Military law. A pretrial plea agreement in a court-martial proceeding by which a ceiling is placed on the maximum penalty that can be imposed. [Cases: Military Justice 990–1326.

suspended to time served. (1959) A sentencing disposition whereby a criminal defendant is sentenced to the same jail time that the defendant is credited with serving while in custody awaiting trial. • The sentence results in the defendant’s release from custody. Cf. balance of sentence suspended. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment 1156.]

sentence-factor manipulation. See sentencing entrapment under entrapment.

sentence-package rule. (1996) Criminal procedure. The principle that a defendant can be resented on an aggregate sentence — that is, one arising from a conviction on multiple counts in an indictment — when the defendant successfully challenges part of the conviction, as by successfully challenging some but not all of the counts.

sentencing. The judicial determination of the penalty for a crime.

determinate sentencing. See mandatory sentencing.

discretionary sentencing. See indeterminate sentencing.

fixed sentencing. See mandatory sentencing.

indeterminate sentencing. Sentencing that is left up to the court, with few or very flexible guidelines. — Also termed discretionary sentencing. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment 1057–1059, 1125–1127.

mandatory sentencing. A statutorily specified penalty that automatically follows a conviction for the offense, often with a minimum mandatory term. — Also termed determinate sentencing; fixed sentencing. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment 1053, 1054.

presumptive sentencing. A statutory scheme that prescribes a sentence or range of sentences for an offense but allows the court some flexibility in atypical cases. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment 34, 654.]

sentencing council. (1973) A panel of three or more judges who confer to determine a criminal sentence. • Sentencing by a council occurs less frequently than sentencing by a single trial judge.

sentencing entrapment. See entrapment.

sentencing guidelines. (1970) A set of standards for determining the punishment that a convicted criminal should receive, based on the nature of the crime and the offender’s criminal history. • The federal government and several states have adopted sentencing guidelines in an effort to make judicial sentencing more consistent. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment 650–998.]

sentencing hearing. See presentence hearing.

sentencing phase. See penalty phase.

Sentencing Reform Act of 1984. A federal statute enacted to bring greater uniformity to punishments assessed for federal crimes by creating a committee of federal judges and other officials (the United States Sentencing Commission) responsible for producing sentencing guidelines to be used by the federal courts. 28 USCA § 994(a)(1).

Sentencing Table. A reference guide used by federal courts to calculate the appropriate punishment under the sentencing guidelines by taking into account the gravity of the offense and the convicted person’s criminal history. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment 666–871.]

sententia (sen-ten-shee-a), n. [Latin] Roman & civil law. 1. Sense; meaning. 2. An opinion, esp. a legal opinion. 3. A judicial decision.

SEP. abbr. See simplified employee pension plan under employee benefit plan.

separability. Copyright. An element of various judicial tests used to determine whether a design in a functional article is a copyrightable work of applied art, or an uncopyrightable industrial design, the test being based on whether the beholder separates the work’s artistic appearance from its useful function. • Some courts use a strict physical separability test, but most look at whether the work’s two roles are conceptually separate. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property 4.] separability clause. See severability clause.

separable, adj. (14c) Capable of being separated or divided .

separable controversy. See controversy.

separater (sep-a-ray-la-tar). [Latin] Hist. Separately. • This term was formerly used in an indictment to emphasize that multiple defendants were being charged with separate offenses, when it appeared from the general language of the indictment that the defendants were jointly charged.

separate, adj. (15c) (Of liability, cause of action, etc.) individual; distinct; particular; disconnected.

separate action. See action (4).

separate and apart. See living separate and apart.

separate-but-equal doctrine. (1950) The now-defunct doctrine that African-Americans could be segregated if they were provided with equal opportunities and facilities in education, public transportation, and jobs. • This rule was established in Plessy v. Ferguson, 163 U.S. 537, 16 S.Ct. 1138 (1896), and overturned in Brown v. Board of Education, 347 U.S. 483, 74 S.Ct. 686 (1954). [Cases: Hist. Family law 13(2)].

separate caucus. See caucus.

separate property. (18c) 1. Property that a spouse owned before marriage or acquired during marriage by inheritance or by gift from a third party, and in some states property acquired during marriage but after the spouses have entered into a separation agreement and have begun living apart or after one spouse has commenced a divorce action. — Also termed individual property. Cf. COMMUNITY PROPERTY; Marital property under property. [Cases: Divorce ⊗252,3(3).] 2. In some common-law states, property titled to one spouse or acquired by one spouse individually during marriage. 3. Property acquired during the marriage in exchange for separate property (in sense 1 or sense 2).

separate-property state. See COMMON-LAW STATE (2).

separate-sovereigns rule. (1995) Criminal procedure. The principle that a person may be tried twice for the same offense — despite the Double Jeopardy Clause — if the prosecutions are conducted by separate sovereigns, as by the federal government and a state government or by two different states. See DOUBLE JEOPARDY. [Cases: Double Jeopardy ⊗183.]

separate-spheres doctrine. Hist. Family law. The common-law doctrine that wives were limited to control of the home — the personal or domestic sphere — and that husbands had control of the public sphere. • Under this-early-19th century doctrine, the wife was to tend to the home and family and the husband was to be the breadwinner. — Also termed doctrine of separate spheres.

separate support. See separate maintenance under maintenance.

separate trading of registered interest and principal of securities. A treasury security by which the owner receives either principal or interest, but usu. not both. — Abbr. STRIP.

separate trial. See trial.

separatim (sep-a-ray-tim). [Latin] Hist. Severally. • This term referred to the formation of several covenants in a deed.

separatio (sep-a-ray-shee-oh), n. See FRUCTUS (1).

separation. (17c) 1. An arrangement whereby a husband and wife live apart from each other while remaining married, either by mutual consent (often in a written agreement) or by judicial decree; the act of carrying out such an arrangement. — Also termed separation from bed and board. See divorce a mensa et thoro under DIVORCE. [Cases: Divorce ⊗155; Husband and Wife ⊗277.] 2. The status of a husband and wife having begun such an arrangement, or the judgment or contract that brought about the arrangement. — Also termed (in both senses) legal separation; judicial separation. 3. Cessation of a contractual relationship, esp. in an employment situation. — separate, vb.

separation agreement. (1886) 1. An agreement between spouses in the process of a divorce or legal separation concerning alimony, maintenance, property division, child custody and support, and the like. — Also termed separation order (if approved or sanctioned judicially). See temporary order under ORDER. 2. DIVORCE AGREEMENT. [Cases: Husband and Wife ⊗277.]

separation a mensa et thoro. See divorce a mensa et thoro under DIVORCE.

separation from bed and board. 1. SEPARATION (1). 2. See divorce a mensa et thoro under DIVORCE.

separation of patrimony. Civil law. The act of providing creditors of a succession the right to collect against the class of estate property from which the creditors should be paid, by separating certain succession property from property rights belonging to the heirs. [Cases: Descent and Distribution ⊗137.]

separation of powers. (1896) The division of governmental authority into three branches of government — legislative, executive, and judicial — each with specified duties on which neither of the other branches can encroach; a constitutional doctrine of checks and balances designed to protect the people against tyranny. Cf. DIVISION OF POWERS. [Cases: Constitutional Law ⊗2330–2626.]
[T]he doctrine of the separation of powers was adopted by the convention of 1787 not to promote efficiency but to preclude the exercise of arbitrary power. The purpose was not to avoid friction, but, by means of the inevitable friction incident to the distribution of the governmental powers among three departments, to save the people from autocracy.” Justice Louis Brandeis (as quoted in Roscoe Pound, The Development of Constitutional Guarantees of Liberty 94 (1957)).

"Although in political theory much has been made of the vital importance of the separation of powers, it is extraordinarily difficult to define precisely each particular power. In an ideal state we might imagine a legislature which had supreme and exclusive power to lay down general rules for the future without reference to particular cases; courts whose sole function was to make binding orders to settle disputes between individuals which were brought before them by applying these rules to the facts which were found to exist; an administrative body which carried on the business of government by issuing particular orders or making decisions of policy within the narrow confines of rules of law that it could not change. The legislature makes, the executive executes, and the judiciary construes the law.” George Whitecross Paton, A Textbook of Jurisprudence 330 (G.W. Paton & David P. Derham eds., 4th ed. 1972).

"Separation of powers means something quite different in the United States. . . . Separation of powers to an American evokes the familiar system of checks and balances among the three coordinate branches of government—legislative, executive, and judiciary—each with its independent constitutional basis. To a European, it is a more rigid doctrine and inseparable from the notion of legislative supremacy." Mary Ann Glendon et al., Comparative Legal Traditions 67 (1994).

separation of witnesses. (1819) The exclusion of witnesses (other than the plaintiff and defendant) from the courtroom to prevent them from hearing the testimony of others. [Cases: Criminal Law ≈ 665; Federal Civil Procedure ≈ 2012; Trial ≈ 41.] separation order. 1. See separation agreement. 2. See order (2).

separation pay. See severance pay.

separator, n. Oil & gas. Equipment used at a well site to separate oil, water, and gas produced in solution with oil. • Basic separators simply heat oil to speed the natural separation process. More complex separators may use chemicals.

sequester a church's rents, tithes, or other profits until the debt was paid.

sequestrate, vb. See sequester.

sequestrofacias (see-kwes-tro-fay-shee-oh), n. [Law Latin "you are to cause to be sequestered"] Hist. Eccles. law. A process to enforce a judgment against a clergyman in a benefice, by which the bishop was ordered to sequester a church's rents, tithes, or other profits until the debt was paid.

sequestered account. See ACCOUNT.

sequestrer. See sequestor.

sequestratio facias (see-kwes-troy-fay-shee-oh), n. [Law Latin "you are to cause to be sequestered"] Hist. Eccles. law. A process to enforce a judgment against a clergyman in a benefice, by which the bishop was ordered to sequester a church's rents, tithes, or other profits until the debt was paid.

sequestration (see-kwes-troy-shun), n. (16c) 1. The process by which property is removed from the possessor pending the outcome of a dispute in which two or more parties contend for it. Cf. ATTACHMENT (1); GARNISHMENT. [Cases: Sequestration ⊂ 1.]

conventional sequestration. The parties' voluntary deposit of the property at issue in a lawsuit.

judicial sequestration. The court-ordered deposit of the property at issue in a lawsuit. [Cases: Sequestration ⊂ 1.]

2. The setting apart of a decedent's personal property when no one has been willing to act as a personal representative for the estate. 3. The process by which a renounced interest is subjected to judicial management and is distributed as the testator would have wished if he or she had known about the renunciation. 4. A judicial writ commanding the sheriff or other officer to seize the goods of a person named in the writ. • This writ is sometimes issued against a civil defendant who has defaulted or has acted in contempt of court. [Cases: Sequestration ⊂ 13.] 5. The court-ordered seizure of a bankrupt's estate for the benefit of creditors. 6. Int'l law. The seizure by a belligerent power of enemy assets. [Cases: War and National Emergency C=: 12.] 7. The freezing of a government agency's funds; sequester (1). [Cases: States C=: 121.] 8. Custodial isolation of a trial jury to prevent tampering and exposure to publicity, or of witnesses to prevent them from hearing the testimony of others. — Also termed (in sense 8) jury sequestration. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure C=: 2012; Trial C=: 41, 303.]

sequestration for rent. Scots law. A landlord's remedy to recover up to one year's unpaid rent by seizing and selling, under court order, the tenant's personal property. Cf. distress (2).

sequester (see-kwes-tray-tar). (15c) 1. An officer appointed to execute a writ of sequestration.

"[A] sequester was an officer of the Court of Chancery acting under the order of that court in seizing property. The law courts appear, however, to have held that the holder of the property could resist seizure by the officer of the Court of Chancery, and indeed kill that officer if necessary to prevent the seizure. And if he killed the officer, he would not be held guilty of murder because the Court of Chancery was an illegal tribunal or its decrees were illegal, and could not justify an officer in seizing the property mentioned in the order." Charles Herman Kinnane, A First Book on Anglo-American Law 306 (2d ed. 1952).

2. A person who holds property in sequestration. — Also termed sequesterer. [Cases: Sequestration C=: 14.]

sequestro habendo (si-kwes-troh ha-ben-doh), n. [Law Latin] Hist. Eccles. law. A writ from the sovereign to the bishop ordering the discharge of the sequestration of a benefice's profits.

serendipity doctrine. (1989) Criminal procedure. The principle that all evidence discovered during a lawful search is eligible to be admitted into evidence at trial. [Cases: Criminal Law C=: 394.1(1).]

serf. Hist. A person in a condition of feudal servitude, bound to labor at the will of a lord; a villein. • Serfs differed from slaves in that they were bound to the native soil rather than being the absolute property of a master. "As the categories became indistinct, the more abject varieties of slavery disappeared and in the twelfth century the word 'villein' became the general term for unfree peasants. 'Serf' did not become a legal term of art, and in so far as it remained in use it did not connote a status lower than that of villein. The merger was to the detriment of the serf who was not an active participant in an alleged scheme or conspiracy, and that he or she knew nothing, saw nothing, and heard nothing. • This defense is named after a character from the television series Hogan's Heroes, in which Sergeant Schultz, a German guard in charge of prisoners of war during World War II, would avoid responsibility for the prisoners' schemes by proclaiming that he saw nothing and knew nothing. [Cases: Criminal Law C=: 31.5.]

sergeant. 1. Hist. A person who is not a knight but holds lands by tenure of military service. 2. Hist. A municipal officer performing duties for the Crown. 3. Hist. A bailiff. 4. SERGEANT-AT-ARMS. 5. A noncommissioned officer in the armed forces ranking a grade above a corporal. 6. An officer in the police force ranking below a captain or lieutenant. — Also spelled serjeant. [Cases: Municipal Corporations C=: 180(2).]

sergeant-at-arms. 1. Hist. An armed officer attending a sovereign. 2. An officer the Crown assigns to attend a session of Parliament. 3. A legislative officer charged with maintaining order and serving notices and process on behalf of the legislative body and its committees. [Cases: States C=: 32.] 4. Parliamentary law. An officer charged with helping keep order in a meeting under the chair's direction. — Also spelled (in senses 1, 2, & 4) serjeant-at-arms. — Also termed (in sense 4) warden; warrant officer.

serjeantry. See SERJEANTY.

Sergeant Schultz defense. Slang. An assertion by a criminal or civil defendant who claims that he or she was not an active participant in an alleged scheme or conspiracy, and that he or she knew nothing, saw nothing, and heard nothing. • This defense is named after a character from the television series Hogan's Heroes, in which Sergeant Schultz, a German guard in charge of prisoners of war during World War II, would avoid responsibility for the prisoners' schemes by proclaiming that he saw nothing and knew nothing. [Cases: Criminal Law C=: 31.5.]

serjeantry. See SERJEANTY.

serial bond. See BOND (3).

serial consideration. See consideration seriatim under CONSIDERATION (2).

serial murder. See MURDER.

serial note. See installment note under NOTE (1).

serial number. 1. A number assigned to a specific thing, esp. a product, to identify it from other things of the same kind. • While serial numbers are usually assigned in numerical order, they may also be random. 2. Patents & Trademarks. An identifying number assigned to a completed patent or trademark application. • The serial number is assigned when the application is received or completed. See APPLICATION NUMBER.

serial polygamy. See POLYGAMY (2).

serial right. The right of publication; esp., a right reserved in a publishing contract giving the author or publisher the right to publish the manuscript in installments (as in a magazine) before or after the publication of the book. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property C=: 38.]

serial violation. (1989) Civil-rights law. The practice by an employer of committing a series of discriminatory acts against an employee, all of which arise out of the same discriminatory intent or animus. • Such a series of discriminatory acts will usu. be considered a continuing violation. For a claim on the violation to be timely, at least one of the discriminatory acts must have taken place within the time permitted to assert the claim (e.g., 300 days for a Title VII claim). Cf. system­atic violation. [Cases: Civil Rights C=: 1505(7).]

seriatim (seer-ee-ay-tim), adj. Occurring in a series.

seriatim, adv. [Latin] One after another; in a series; successively <the court disposed of the issues seriatim>. See seriatim opinions consideration seriatim under consideration. — Also termed seriatim (See ce-at-lee).

seriatim opinions. See opinion (1).

series bonds. See bond (3).

series code. Patents & Trademarks. A numerical designation assigned to any of a group of applications for patent or trademark registration filed in the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office. • The series code is part of an application number and is followed by a slash. For example, if the application number is 09/445,323, then 09 is the series code, and the application is the 445,323rd application in that batch. For ordinary patent applications, series codes are assigned for a group of applications filed during a particular period. Nonprovisional patent applications are assigned series codes from 01 to 10, depending on the period during which the application was filed. The series code for design applications is 29, depending on the period during which the application was filed. For patent applications, the series code usu. begins with numbers between 70 and 75. — Also termed batch number.

series rerum judicatarum (See a-ez or seer-ez rec-eem jou-di-ka-tor-am). [Law Latin] Scots law. A succession of decisions deciding a particular principle, as a result of which a precedent has been established.

serious offense. See offense (1).

serjeant. 1. See sergeant. 2. See serjeant-at-law.

serjeant-at-arms. See sergeant-at-arms.

serjeant-at-law. Hist. English law. A barrister of superior grade; one who had achieved the highest degree of the legal profession, having (until 1846) the exclusive privilege of practicing in the Court of Common Pleas. • Every judge of the common-law courts was required to be a serjeant-at-law until the Judicature Act of 1873. The rank was gradually superseded by that of Queen's Counsel. — Often shortened to serjeant. — Also termed serjeant at the law; serjeant of the law; serjeant of the coif; serviens narrator.

premier serjeant. The serjeant given the primary right of preaudience by royal letters patent. — Also termed prime serjeant. See preaudience.

Serjeants' Inn. Hist. A building on Chancery Lane, London, that housed the Order of Serjeants-at-Law. • The building was sold and demolished in 1877. Until 1416, the Inn was called Faryndon's Inn or Faryndon Inn, after Robert Faryndon, who held the lease. Two other inns in the 15th and 16th centuries were also called Serjeants' Inn, one in Holborn (sometimes called Scoops's Inn) and one in Fleet Street.

serjeanty (sahr-jan-tee). Hist. A feudal lay tenure requiring some form of personal service to the king. • The required service was not necessarily military. Many household officers of the Crown, even those as humble as bakers and cooks, held lands in serjeanty. — Also spelled serjeantry. — Also termed serjeantry.

grand serjeanty. Hist. Serjeanty requiring the tenant to perform a service relating to the country's defense. • The required service could be as great as fielding an army or as small as providing a fully equipped knight. Sometimes the service was ceremonial or honorary, such as carrying the king's banner or serving as an officer at the coronation.

petit serjeanty (pet-ee). Hist. Serjeanty requiring only a minor service of small value, usu. with military symbolism. • Examples include presenting an arrow or an unstrung bow to the king.

serological test (seer-o-loj-oh-kol). (1931) A blood examination to detect the presence of antibodies and antigens, as well as other characteristics, esp. as indicators of disease. • Many states require serological tests to determine the presence of venereal disease in a couple applying for a marriage license. See blood test.

serpentine vote. See vote (4).

serva aliena. See servus.

servage (sar-vij). Hist. A feudal service that a serf was required to perform for the lord or else pay the equivalent value in kind or money.

servant. (13c) A person who is employed by another to do work under the control and direction of the employer. • A servant, such as a full-time employee, provides personal services that are integral to an employer's business, so a servant must submit to the employer's control of the servant's time and behavior. See employee. Cf. master (1). [Cases: Labor and Employment §= 23.]

"A servant, strictly speaking, is a person who, by contract or operation of law, is for a limited period subject to the authority or control of another person in a particular trade, business or occupation. . . . The word servant, in our legal nomenclature, has a broad significance, and embraces all persons of whatever rank or position who are in the employ, and subject to the direction or control of another in any department of labor or business. Indeed it may, in most cases, be said to be synonymous with employee." H.C. Wood, A Treatise on the Law of Master and Servant § 1, at 2 (2d ed. 1866).

fellow servant. See fellow servant.

indentured servant. Hist. A servant who contracted to work without wages for a fixed period in exchange for some benefit, such as learning a trade or cancellation of a debt or paid passage to another country, and the promise of freedom when the contract period expired.

• Indentured servitude could be voluntary or involuntary. A contract usu. lasted from four to ten years, but the servant could terminate the contract sooner by paying for the unexpired time. Convicts transported to the colonies were often required to serve as indentured servants as part of their sentences.

serve, vb. (15c) 1. To make legal delivery of (a notice or process) . 2. To present (a person) with a notice or other legal notice, such as a pleading <be sure that a certificate of service is attached to the motion>. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure §= 414; Process §= 48.]

actual service. See personal service (1).

constructive service. (1808) 1. See substituted service.

2. Service accomplished by a method or circumstance that does not give actual notice.

personal service. See personal service (1).

service by publication. (1826) The service of a writ, summons, or other legal process <after three attempts, service still had not been accomplished>. — Also termed service of process. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure §= 414; Process §= 48–150.]

2. The formal delivery of some other legal notice, such as a pleading <be sure that a certificate of service is attached to the motion>. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure §= 665.]

servient estate. See estate (4).

servient property. See servient estate under estate (4).

3. The act of doing something useful for a person or company, usu. for a fee <your services were no longer required>.

personal service. See personal service (2).

4. A person or company whose business is to do useful things for others .

civil service. See civil service.

salvage service. See salvage service.

5. An intangible commodity in the form of human effort, such as labor, skill, or advice <contract for services>. [Cases: Contracts §= 190.]

service by publication. See service (2).

service charge. 1. A charge assessed for performing a service, such as the charge assessed by a bank against the expenses of maintaining or servicing a customer's checking account. 2. The sum of (1) all charges payable by the buyer and imposed by the seller as an incident to the extension of credit and (2) charges incurred for investigating the collateral or creditworthiness of the buyer or for commissions for obtaining the credit. UCCC § 2.109. — Also termed (in sense 2) credit service charge. [Cases: Consumer Credit §= 13.] service contract. See contract.

service establishment. Under the Fair Labor Standards Act, an establishment that, although having the characteristics of a retail store, primarily furnishes services to the public, such as a barber shop, laundry, or automobile-repair shop.

service life. The period of an asset's expected usefulness.

• It may or may not coincide with the asset's depreciable life for income-tax purposes.

servicemark. (1945) Trademarks. A name, phrase, or other device used to identify and distinguish the services of a certain provider. • Servicemarks identify and afford protection to intangible things such as goods and products. — Often shortened to mark. Also spelled service mark; service-mark. Cf. trademark (1); registered trademark under trademark. [Cases: Trademarks §= 1024.]

servitium solita et consuetua (sar-vish-ee-a sol-a-ta kan-swee-ta). [Law Latin "services used and wont"] Scots law. A common return required by certain charters, usu. implying military service, from a vassal to a lord.

servitiis acquietandis (sar vish ee-is a-kwii-a-tan dis). n. [Law Latin "for being quit of service"] Hist. A writ exempting a person from performing certain services, either because they are not due or because they are due someone other than the distrainor.

servitium (sar-vish-ee-am), n. [Latin "service"] Hist. The duty of service; esp., a tenant's duty of performance and obedience to the lord.

servitium feodale et praediale (sar-vish-ee-am fee-ad-lee [or fyoo-ad-lee] et pree-dee-ey-lee), n. [Law Latin] Hist. A personal service due only by reason of lands held in fee.

servitium intrinsecum (sar-vish-ee-am in-trin-si-kam), n. [Law Latin] Hist. The ordinary service due from a tenant to the chief lord.

servitium liberum (sar-vish-ee-am lib-or-am), n. [Law Latin] Hist. The service by a free tenant (not a vassal) to the lord, as by attending the lord's court or accompanying the lord into military service. — Also termed liberum servitium; servitium liberum armorum.

servitium regale (sar-vish-ee-am ri-gay-lee). [Latin "royal service"] Hist. The right of a lord of a royal manor to settle disputes, make assessments, mint money, and the like.

servitium socae (sar-vish-ee-am soh-see). [Latin "service of the plow"] Hist. Socage.

servitor of bills (sar-vi-tar). Hist. A messenger of the marshal of the King's Bench, sent out to summon people to court. — Also termed tis-towe.

servitude. (16c) 1. An encumbrance consisting in a right to the limited use of a piece of land or other immovable property without the possession of it; a charge or burden on an estate for another's benefit <the easement by necessity is an equitable servitude>. • Servitudes include easements, irrevocable licenses, profits, and real covenants. See EASEMENT; LICENSE; PROFIT (2); COVENANT RUNNING WITH THE LAND UNDER EASEMENT (4). [Cases: Covenants $49, 53; Easements $1.] 2. Roman & civil law. The right exercised by a dominant tenement over a servient tenement, either adjoining or neighboring. • This right was perpetual except for personal servitudes; the land, rather than its owner, enjoyed the right. Although a servitude could not be possessed because it was incorporeal, it could be protected by interdict. Generally, a servitude had to be exercised civiliter, with as little inconvenience as possible. There was never a closed list of what constituted a servitude; for example, Justinian classed personal rights in re aliena as personal servitude. See SERVITUS (2). acquired servitude. (1971) A servitude requiring a special mode of acquisition before it comes into existence.

additional servitude. (18c) A servitude imposed on land taken under an eminent-domain proceeding for a different type of servitude, as when a highway is constructed on land condemned for a public sidewalk.

• A landowner whose land is burdened by an additional servitude is entitled to further compensation.

affirmative servitude. Civil law. See positive servitude.

apparent servitude. (1834) Civil law. A servitude appurtenant that is manifested by exterior signs or constructions, such as a roadway. Cf. nonapparent servitude.

conservation servitude. See conservation easement under EASEMENT.

continuous servitude. Louisiana law. See continuous easement under EASEMENT. La. Civ. Code art. 646.

conventional servitude. Civil law. A servitude established by agreement or through prescriptive prescription. [Cases: Easements $5, 14.]

discontinuous servitude. See discontinuous easement under EASEMENT.

equitable servitude. See restrictive covenant under COVENANT (4).

landed servitude. See servitude appurtenant.

legal servitude. (18c) Civil law. A limitation that the law imposes on the use of an estate for the benefit of the general public or of a particular person or persons.

• Examples of legal servitudes are restrictions on certain uses of the shores of navigable rivers, and the obligation of a landowner to provide a passage to an enclosed estate.

mineral servitude. (1931) Louisiana law. A servitude granting the right to enter another's property to explore for and extract minerals; specif., under the Louisiana Mineral Code, a charge on land in favor of a person or another tract of land, creating a limited right to use the land to explore for and produce minerals. • The servitude is generally equivalent to the severed mineral interest in a common-law state. Mines and Minerals $55(6), 62.1, 73.1(6).

natural servitude. (18c) 1. A servitude naturally appurtenant to land, requiring no special mode of acquisition. • An example is the right of land, unencumbered by buildings, to the support of the adjoining land. 2. Civil law. A servitude imposed by law because of the natural situation of the estates. • An example of a natural servitude is a lower estate that is bound to receive waters flowing naturally from a higher estate.

navigation servitude. 1. An easement allowing the federal government to regulate commerce on navigable water without having to pay compensation for interfering with private ownership rights. See navigable water. [Cases: Navigable Waters \(\leq 2\).]

"The navigation servitude, because of its link to navigable waters and the protection of navigation, is often confused with the public trust doctrine. The navigation servitude, however, is a paramount federal servitude on navigable waters based on the commerce power rather than on ownership or trust responsibilities." Donna R. Christie, Coastal and Ocean Management Law in a Nutshell 34 (1994).

2. An easement, based on the state police power or public-trust doctrine, that allows a state to regulate commerce on navigable water and provide limited compensation for interference with private ownership rights. • A state servitude is inferior to the federal servitude. [Cases: Navigable Waters \(\leq 2\).]

negative servitude. Civil law. A servitude appurtenant allowing a dominant landowner to prohibit the servient landowner from exercising a right. • For example, a negative servitude, such as jus ne luminibus officiatur, prevents a landowner from building in a way that blocks light from reaching another person's house.

nonapparent servitude. Civil law. A servitude appurtenant that is not obvious because there are no exterior signs of its existence. • An example is a prohibition against building above a certain height. Cf. apparent servitude.

personal servitude. (17c) 1. A servitude granting a specific person certain rights in property. 2. Roman law. A specific person's right over the property of another, regardless of who the owner might be. • A personal servitude lasted for the person's lifetime. 3. Louisiana law. A servitude that benefits a person or an immovable. La. Civ. Code art. 534. [Cases: Easements \(\leq 1, 3\).]

positive servitude. Civil law. A real servitude allowing a person to lawfully do something on the servient landowner's property, such as entering the property. — Also termed affirmative servitude.

predial servitude. See servitude appurtenant.

private servitude. (1922) A servitude vested in a particular person. • Examples include a landowner's personal right-of-way over an adjoining piece of land or a right granted to one person to fish in another's lake.

public servitude. (1805) A servitude vested in the public at large or in some class of indeterminate individuals. • Examples include the right of the public to use a highway over privately owned land and the right to navigate a river the bed of which is privately owned.

real servitude. See servitude appurtenant.

rural servitude. Roman law. A servitude chiefly affecting agricultural land or land in the country. • The four oldest types, iter, actus, via, and aqueductus were all res mancipi despite being incorporeal. Most rural servitudes were easements, but some were profits. — Also termed rustic servitude; praedium rusticum; jus rusticorum praediorum.

servitude appurtenant. (1893) A servitude that is not merely an encumbrance of one piece of land but is necessary to another piece; the right of using one piece of land for the benefit of another, such as the right of support for a building. — Also termed real servitude; predial (or praedial) servitude; landed servitude. La. Civ. Code art. 646. [Cases: Easements \(\leq 3\).]

servitude in gross. (1884) A servitude that is not accessory to any dominant estate for whose benefit it exists but is merely an encumbrance on a given piece of land. [Cases: Easements \(\leq 3\).]

servitude of drip. Louisiana law. A servitude appurtenant that binds the servient estate's owner to maintain a roof so that rainwater does not drip or drain onto the dominant estate. La. Civ. Code art. 664. — Also termed servitude of drip and drain. [Cases: Waters and Water Courses \(\leq 121\).]

servitude of view. Louisiana law. The dominant estate owner's right to enjoy a view through the servient estate and to prevent its obstruction. La. Civ. Code art. 701. [Cases: Adjoining Landowners \(\leq 10\); Easements \(\leq 11, 19\).]

urban servitude. (1831) 1. A servitude appurtenant to the building and construction of houses in a city, such as the right to light and air. [Cases: Adjoining Landowners \(\leq 10\); Easements \(\leq 11, 19\).] 2. Roman law. A servitude that primarily affects buildings or urban land. • With the exception of oneris ferendi, urban servitudes were passive. They could be affected by planning legislation. — Also termed (in sense 2) praedium urbanum; jus urbanorum praediorum.

3. The condition of being a servant or slave under the 15th Amendment, an American citizen's right to vote cannot be denied on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude. 4. The condition of a prisoner who has been sentenced to forced labor <penal servitude>.

involuntary servitude. (18c) The condition of one forced to labor — for pay or not — for another by coercion or imprisonment. [Cases: Constitutional Law \(\leq 1101\).]

servitude of drip and drain. See servitude of drip under servitude (2).

servitus (sor-vi-tas), n. [Latin fr. servire “to serve”] Roman law. 1. Slavery; bondage. 2. A servitude, usu. a servitude appurtenant as opposed to a personal servitude such as usufruct; an easement. See rural servitude and urban servitude under servitude (2). Pl. servitutes.

servitus actus (sor-vi-to-sak-tas). [Latin “the servitude of driving cattle”] Roman law. A type of right-of-way; a rural servitude entitling one to walk, ride, or drive animals over another's property.
servitus altius non tollendi (sors-vi-tas al-shē-əs non ta-lēn-dī). [Latin “the servitude of not building higher”] Roman law. An urban servitude allowing a person to prevent a neighbor from building a taller house.

servitus aquae ducendae (sors-vi-tas ak-wee d[ē]lōo-sen-dee). [Latin “the servitude of leading water”] Roman law. A rural servitude allowing one to bring water to property through another’s land, as by a canal. — Also termed aquaeductus.

servitus aquae educendae (sors-vi-tas ak-wee ee-d[ē]lōo-sen-dee). [Latin “the servitude of leading off water”] Roman law. An urban servitude entitling a person to discharge water onto another’s land.

servitus hauriendae (sors-vi-tas haw-re-ee-dee). [Latin “the servitude of drawing water”] Roman law. See aquaehaustus.

servitus luminum (sors-vi-tas lyoo-m̩n̩). [Latin “the servitude of lights”] Roman law. An urban servitude entitling someone to an unobstructed view.

servitus itineris (sors-vi-tas i-tin-ar-is). [Latin “the servitude of way”] See iter.

servitus luminum (sors-vi-tas loo-m̩n̩). [Latin “the servitude of lights”] Roman law. An urban servitude entitling one to receive light from a neighbor’s land, as by building windows in a common wall to light a room.

servitus ne luminibus officiatur (sors-vi-tas nee loo-min-ə-bōs a-fish-ee-ay-tar). [Latin “the servitude not to hinder light”] Roman law. An urban servitude preventing someone’s light from being obstructed by a neighbor’s building.

servitus ne prospectui officiatur (sors-vi-tas nee pra-spek-toō-ə-fish-ee-ay-tar). [Latin “the servitude not to intercept one’s prospect”] Roman law. An urban servitude entitling someone to an unobstructed view.

servitus oneris ferendi (sors-vi-tas on-ə-ris fə-ren-dī). [Latin “the servitude of bearing weight”] Roman law. The urban servitude allowing a person’s building to rest on a neighbor’s building, wall, or pillar. See oneris ferendi, jus oneris ferendi.

servitus pascendi (sors-vi-tas pa-sen-dī). [Latin “the servitude of pasturing”] Roman law. A rural servitude allowing one to pasture cattle on another’s land. — Also termed jus pascendi.

servitus pecoris ad aquam adpulsus (sors-vi-tas pek-ə-ris ad ak wam ad-pal-sam). [Latin “the servitude to drive cattle to water”] Roman law. A rural servitude allowing one to drive cattle to water across another’s land.

servitus praediorum (sors-vi-tas prē-dee-or-am). [Latin “praedial servitude”] Roman law. A burden on one estate for the benefit of another. See servitute appurtenant under servitute (2).

servitus proiciendi (sors-vi-tas pro-ə-jish-ee-en-dī). [Latin “the servitude of projecting”] Roman law. An urban servitude allowing a projection from one’s building into the open space over a neighbor’s property.

servitus stillicidii (sors-vi-tas stil-ə-sid-ee-i). [Latin “the servitude of dripping”] Roman law. An urban servitude allowing water to drip from one’s house onto a neighbor’s house or ground. See aquae immittendae; drip rights.

servitus tigni immittendi (sors-vi-tas tig-ni im-ə-tendī). [Latin “the servitude of letting in a beam”] Roman law. An urban servitude allowing one to insert beams into a neighbor’s wall.

servitus viae (sors-vi-tas vi-e). [Latin “the servitude of road way”] Roman law. A rural servitude allowing a right-of-way over another’s land. See via (2).

servus (sors-vas), n. [Latin] 1. Roman law. A slave; a human being who was property, and could be bought, sold, pledged, and testated. • A Roman slave who was formally freed became a Roman citizen. Cf. ingenius; Latinī juniani; libertini. 2. Hist. A bondman; a servant.

sess, n. See cess.

sessio (sesh-ee-oh), n. [Latin “a sitting”] Hist. A session; a sitting, as in sessio parliamenti (“the sitting of Parliament”).

session. (15c) 1. Parliamentary law. A meeting or series of related meetings throughout which a court, legislature, or other deliberative assembly conducts business in a continuing sequence <the court’s spring session>. — Also termed (for a court) sitting. See term (5).

“Parliament have three modes of separation, to wit, by adjournment, by prorogation, or dissolution by the king, or by the efflux of the term for which they were elected. Prorogation or dissolution constitutes there what is called a session, provided some act has passed. In this case all matters depending before them are discontinued, and at their next meeting are to be taken up de novo, if taken up at all. Adjournment, which is by themselves, is no more than a continuance of the session from one day to another, or for a fortnight, a month, &c., ad libitum. All matters depending remain in statu quo, and when they meet again, be the term ever so distant, are resumed without any fresh commencement, at the point at which they were left. Their whole session is considered in law but as one day, and has relation to the first day thereof. Thomas Jefferson, A Manual of Parliamentary Practice 127-28 (1801) (citations omitted).

biennial session. (1854) A legislative session held every two years. • Most state legislatures have biennial sessions, usu. held in odd-numbered years. [Cases: States C 32.]

closed session. (1956) 1. See executive session. 2. A session to which parties not directly involved are not admitted. 3. Military law. A period during a court-martial when the members (or the judge, if trial is before a military judge) deliberate alone. • Also termed closed court. [Cases: Military Justice C 1222, 1270.]

executive session. A meeting, usu. held in secret, that only the members and invited nonmembers may attend. • The term originated in the United States Senate, which until 1929 sat behind closed doors when it advised the President about executive business such as appointments and treaties. • Also termed closed session; secret session. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure C 124; Municipal Corporations C 92.]

"Virtually all open meeting statutes expressly authorize the use of executive sessions, typically specifying the particular circumstances in which executive sessions are permitted. When the specific circumstances are specified, generally no other exceptions are permitted. • Use of the executive session to discuss matters not properly hidden from the public is a clear violation of the open meeting law. Many states expressly or implicitly forbid use of the executive session as a subterfuge to defeat the purposes of the open meeting law." Ann Taylor Schwing, Open Meeting Laws § 7.1, at 357, 359 (2d ed. 2000).

extraordinary session. See special session.

extra session. See special session.

joint session. (1853) The combined meeting of two legislative bodies (such as the House of Representatives and the Senate) to pursue a common agenda. [Cases: United States C 18.]

"When the two houses meet in a joint session, they, in effect, merge into one house where the quorum is a majority of the members of both houses, where the votes of members of each house have equal weight, and where special rules can be adopted to govern joint sessions or they can be governed by the parliamentary common law." National Conference of State Legislatures, Mason's Manual of Legislative Procedure § 762, at 573 (2000).

lame-duck session. (1924) A post-election legislative session in which some of the participants are voting during their last days as elected officials. See LAME DUCK. [Cases: States C 32.]

open session. (1810) 1. A session to which parties not directly involved are admitted. • Also termed public session. 2. Military law. The period during a court-martial in which all participants are in the courtroom. • Generally, the public may attend a court-martial's open session. [Cases: Military Justice C 1210.1, 1222.]

plenary session. (1936) A meeting of all the members of a deliberative assembly, not just a committee.

pro forma session. A legislative session held not to conduct business but only to satisfy a constitutional provision that neither house may adjourn for longer than a certain time (usu. three days) without the other house's consent.

public session. See open session (1).

quarter session. 1. English law. The meetings held four times a year by a county's justices of the peace to transact business, including trying certain criminal and civil matters as specified by statute. • The quarter sessions were abolished in 1971 and replaced by the Crown Court system. 2. Scots law. A meeting formerly held four times a year by the justices to review criminal sentences. • Abbr. Q.S.

regular session. (18c) A session that takes place at fixed intervals or specified times.

secret session. See executive session.

special session. (17c) A legislative session, usu. called by the executive, that meets outside its regular term to consider a specific issue or to reduce backlog. • Also termed extra session; extraordinary session. [Cases: States C 32.]

2. The period within any given day during which such a body is assembled and performing its duties <court is in session>. • The terms "meeting" and "session" have opposite but sometimes interchangeable meanings. An organization's annual convention may consist of several consecutive meetings that it calls "sessions," such as a morning session and an afternoon session, or a Friday session and a Saturday session, which are technically meetings rather than sessions. Likewise, the organization may call its convention an "annual meeting," which technically comprises several meetings that constitute a single session. Cf. MEETING. 3. A trading day in a stock market.

triple witching session. A stock-market session on the third Friday in March, June, September, and December during which stock options, index options and futures contracts all expire. • Stock-market volatility and share volume are often high on these days.

session laws. (18c) 1. A body of statutes enacted by a legislature during a particular annual or biennial session. 2. The softbound booklets containing these statutes. • Also termed acts of assembly; blue books; sheet acts.

sessions. See COURT OF GENERAL QUARTER SESSIONS OF THE PEACE.

set-aside, n. (1943) Something (such as a percentage of funds) that is reserved or put aside for a specific purpose.

set aside, vb. (18c) (Of a court) to annul or vacate (a judgment, order, etc.) <the judge refused to set aside the default judgment>. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure C 2441, 2641; judgment C 135, 336.]
setback, n. (1916) Real estate. The minimum amount of space required between a lot line and a building line (a 12-foot setback). • Typically contained in zoning ordinances or deed restrictions, setbacks are designed to ensure that enough light and ventilation reach the property and to keep buildings from being erected too close to property lines. See BUSINESS LINE. [Cases: Zoning and Planning 64, 252.]

setback requirement. See BUILDING LINE.

set down, vb. (18c) To schedule (a case) for trial or hearing, usu. by making a docket entry.

se te fecerit securum (see see see-sor-it si-kyoor-am). [Latin] See SI FECERIT TE SECURUM.

set forth. See SET OUT.

set of exchange. Commercial law. A single bill of lading drawn in a set of parts, each of which is valid only if the goods have not been delivered against any other part. • Bills may be drawn in duplicate or triplicate, the first part being “first of exchange,” the second part being “second of exchange,” and so on. When one part has been paid, the other parts become void.

setoff, n. (18c) 1. A defendant’s counterdemand against the plaintiff, arising out of a transaction independent of the plaintiff’s claim. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 772; Set-off and Counterclaim 8.] 2. A debtor’s right to reduce the amount of a debt by any sum the creditor owes the debtor; the counterbalancing sum owed by the creditor. — Also written set-off. — Also termed (in civil law) compensation; stoppage. See COUNTERCLAIM; OFFSET. Cf. RECOURSEMENT (3). [Cases: Banks and Banking 134; Set-off and Counterclaim 8.] 3. The balancing of mutual liabilities with respect to a pledge relationship. — set off, vb.

“Set-off signifies the subtraction or taking away of one demand from another opposite or cross demand, so as to distinguish the smaller demand and reduce the greater by the amount of the less; or, if the opposite demands are equal, to extinguish both. It was also, formerly, sometimes called stoppage, because the amount to be set-off was stopped or deducted from the cross demand.” Thomas W. Waterman, A Treatise on the Law of Set-Off, Recourse, and Counterclaim § 1, at 1 (2d ed. 1872).

“Before considering the counter-claim, a brief reference to the ‘set-off’ as known in former practice is necessary. By the common law, the setting off of one demand against another in the same action was unknown. If A had a cause of action in debt against B, and B had another cause of action in debt in equal amount against A, each must bring his action. One could not be set off against the other. This was changed by statute in England in 1729, by a proviso which, somewhat enlarged and modified, has been generally adopted in this country.” Edwin E. Bryant, The Law of Pleading Under the Codes of Civil Procedure 250-51 (2d ed. 1899).

“Set-off is defined to be a counter-demand, generally of a liquidated debt growing out of an independent transaction for which an action might be maintained by the defendant against the plaintiff.” Eugene A. Jones, Manual of Equity Pleading and Practice 65 n.42 (1916).

set out, vb. (16c) To recite, explain, narrate, or incorporate (facts or circumstances) <set out the terms of the contract>. — Also termed set forth.

set over, vb. (16c) To transfer or convey (property) <to set over the land to the purchaser>.

setting, n. The date and time established by a court for a trial or hearing <the plaintiff sought a continuance of the imminent setting>. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 1991; Trial 6, 9.]

special setting. (1916) A preferential setting on a court’s calendar, usu. reserved for older cases or cases given priority by law, made either on a party’s motion or on the court’s own motion. • For example, some jurisdictions authorize a special setting for cases involving a party over the age of 70. — Also termed special trial setting; trial-setting preference. [Cases: Trial 13.]

settled estate. See ESTATE (1).

settled insanity. See DELIRIUM TREMENS.

settled land. See LAND.

settlement, n. (17c) 1. The conveyance of property — or of interests in property — to provide for one or more beneficiaries, usu. members of the settler’s family, in a way that differs from what the beneficiaries would receive as heirs under the statutes of descent and distribution <in marriage settlements, historically, the wife waived her right to claim dower or to succeed to her husband’s property>. [Cases: Executors and Administrators 515.]

strict settlement. Hist. A property settlement that aimed to keep the estate within the family by creating successive interests in tail and shielding remainders from destruction by the interposition of a trust. Cf. trader’s settlement.

trader’s settlement. Hist. A property settlement in which the land is put into a trust for sale, the proceeds to be either paid out to beneficiaries over time or divided among the settlor’s heirs. Cf. strict settlement.

voluntary settlement. A property settlement made without valuable consideration — other than psychological or emotional consideration such as love and affection — from the beneficiary.

2. An agreement ending a dispute or lawsuit <the parties reached a settlement the day before trial>. — Also termed settlement agreement. [Cases: Compromise and Settlement 1.

derivative settlement. 1. The negotiated outcome of a derivative action. See DERIVATIVE ACTION. 2. A person’s legal-residence status that is acquired through another person, as with a child through one or both parents.

final settlement. A court order discharging an executor’s duties after an estate’s execution. [Cases: Executors and Administrators 512.]
full settlement. A settlement and release of all pending claims between the parties. [Cases: Compromise and Settlement <=1.]

judicial settlement. The settlement of a civil case with the help of a judge who is not assigned to adjudicate the dispute. • Parties sometimes find this procedure advantageous because it capitalizes on judicial experience in evaluating the settlement value of a claim.

mediated settlement agreement. A settlement agreement arrived at through mediation. — Abbr. MSA. [Cases: Alternative Dispute Resolution <=484; Compromise and Settlement <=2, 5.]

nuisance settlement. A settlement in which the defendant pays the plaintiff purely for economic reasons — as opposed to any notion of responsibility — because without the settlement the defendant would spend more money in legal fees and expenses caused by protracted litigation than in paying the settlement amount. • The money paid in such a settlement is often termed nuisance money.

out-of-court settlement. The settlement and termination of a pending suit, arrived at without the court's participation. [Cases: Compromise and Settlement <=1.]

structured settlement. A settlement in which the defendant agrees to pay periodic sums to the plaintiff for a specified time. [Cases: Assignments <=62; Compromise and Settlement <=2.]

"Especially in personal injury and product liability cases, structured settlements — i.e., those which provide for an initial cash payment followed by deferred payments in future years, normally on some annuity basis — are becoming more frequent. . . . Such a structured settlement may have advantages over a lump-sum cash payment. Deferred payments or arranged settlements may serve particular purposes that a cash settlement could not reach, and there will be instances when a structured settlement will be in lieu of an all-cash settlement that would not be acceptable to one party or the other." Alba Conte, Attorney Fee Awards § 2.31, at 101 (1993).

3. Payment, satisfaction, or final adjustment <the seller shipped the goods after confirming the buyer's settlement of the account>.

viatical settlement (vi-at-a-kol). [fr. Latin viaticus "relating to a road or journey"] A transaction in which a terminally or chronically ill person sells the benefits of a life-insurance policy to a third party in return for a lump-sum cash payment equal to a percentage of the policy's face value. • Viatical settlements are common with AIDS patients, many of whom sell their policies at a 20% to 40% discount, depending on life expectancy. When the insured (called the "viator") dies, the investor receives the insurance benefit. • Also termed life settlement. [Cases: Insurance <=9, 1994.]

4. CLOSING <the settlement on their first home is next Friday>. 5. Wills & estates. The complete execution of an estate by the executor <the settlement of the estate was long and complex>. [Cases: Executors and Administrators <=502-516.] 6. The establishment of a legal residence. • This sense was frequently used in poor-relief contexts. Cf. (in sense 6) STATUS OF IRREMORAVIBILITY. — settle, vb.

settlement agent. 1. See agent (2). 2. See settlement attorney under attorney.

settlement agreement. See settlement (2).

settlement attorney. See attorney.

settlement class. See class (4).

settlement counsel. See circuit mediator.

settlement credit. (1979) Civil procedure. A court's reduction of the amount of a jury verdict — or the effect of the verdict on nonsettling defendants — to account for settlement funds the plaintiff has received from former defendants or from other responsible parties. [Cases: Compromise and Settlement <=15(1); Damages <=563.]

settlement date. See date.

settlement-first method. (1996) A means by which to apply a settlement credit to a jury verdict, by first reducing the amount of the verdict by subtracting the amount of all settlements the plaintiff has received on the claim, then reducing the remainder by the percentage of the plaintiff's comparative fault. See settlement credit. Cf. fault-first method. [Cases: Damages <=563.]

settlement option. See option.

settlement sheet. See closing statement (2).

settlement statement. See closing statement (2).

settlement value. See value (2).

settler. (17c) 1. A person who occupies property with the intent to establish a residence. • The term is usually applied to an early resident of a country or region. 2. settlor.

settle up, vb. (1884) To collect, pay, and turn over debts and property (e.g., of a decedent, bankrupt, or insolvent business).

settlor (set-lar). (18c) 1. A person who makes a settlement of property; esp., one who sets up a trust. • Also termed creator; donor; trustor; grantor; founder. [Cases: Trusts <=8.] 2. A party to an instrument. • Also spelled (in both senses) settler.

set up, vb. To raise (a defense) <the defendant set up the insanity defense on the murder charge>.

Seventeenth Amendment. The constitutional amendment, ratified in 1913, transferring the power to elect U.S. senators from the state legislatures to the states' voters. [Cases: United States <=11.]

Seventh Amendment. The constitutional amendment, ratified with the Bill of Rights in 1791, guaranteeing the right to a jury trial in federal civil cases that are traditionally considered to be suits at common law and that have an amount in controversy exceeding $20. [Cases: Jury <=9-14.]
seven-years'-absence rule. (1920) The principle that a person who has been missing without explanation for at least seven years is legally presumed dead. Cf. ENOCH ARDEN LAW.

"[In the United States, it is quite generally held or provided by statute that a presumption of death arises from the continued and unexplained absence of a person from his home or place of residence without any intelligence from or concerning him for the period of 7 years. The presumption has been regarded as a procedural expedient and a rule of evidence." 22A Am. Jur. 2d Death § 551, at 527 (1988).

severability. See BLUE-PENCIL TEST.

severability clause. (1935) A provision that keeps the remaining provisions of a contract or statute in force if any portion of that contract or statute is judicially declared void, unenforceable, or unconstitutional. Also termed saving clause; separability clause. See severable contract under CONTRACT; severable statute under STATUTE. [Cases: Contracts ☞ 137; Statutes ☞ 64.]

severable contract. See CONTRACT.

severable statute. See STATUTE.

several, adj. (15c) 1. (Of a person, place, or thing) more than one or two but not a lot <several witnesses>. (Cases: Negligence ☞ 484; Torts ☞ 135.) 2. several obligation. See OBLIGATION.

several-remedies rule. (1975) A procedural rule that tolls a statute of limitations for a plaintiff who has several available forums (such as a workers' compensation proceeding and the court system) and who timely files in one forum and later proceeds in another forum, as long as the defendant's right and claims are not affected. [Cases: Limitation of Actions ☞ 105.]

severance. See TAIL.

several tenancy. See TENANCY.

severalty (sev-[-]-ral-tee). (15c) The state or condition of being separate or distinct <the individual landowners held the land in severalty, not as joint tenants>.

severance, n. (15c) 1. The act of cutting off; the state of being cut off. 2. Civil procedure. The separation, by the court, of the claims of multiple parties either to permit separate actions on each claim or to allow certain interlocutory orders to become final. — Also termed severance of actions; severance of claims. See bifurcated trial under TRIAL. Cf. CONSOLIDATION (3). [Cases: Action ☞ 60; Federal Civil Procedure ☞ 81.]

3. The termination of a joint tenancy, usu. by converting it into a tenancy in common. [Cases: Joint Tenancy ☞ 4.] 4. The removal of anything (such as crops or minerals) attached or affixed to real property, making it personal property rather than a part of the land. • Mineral rights are frequently severed from surface rights on property that may contain oil and gas or other minerals. 5. See SEVERANCE PAY. — sev·er, vb. — severable, adj.

severance damages. See DAMAGES.

severance of actions. See SEVERANCE (2).

severance of claims. See SEVERANCE (2).

severance pay. Money (apart from back wages or salary) paid by an employer to a dismissed employee. • The payment may be made in exchange for a release of any claims that the employee might have against the employer. — Sometimes shortened to severance. — Also termed separation pay; dismissal compensation. shell game. A sleight-of-hand game that uses three cups or thimble-like objects, one of which has a pea, ball, or other small object underneath. • This is a game of chance in which one player bets that he or she can remember under which cup the object is. The cups are moved around so quickly that the player finds it difficult to remember where the object is. When played casually on public streets the shell game is usu. a swindle because the operator palms the object rather than leaving it under a cup, so the player has no chance of winning. — Also termed thimble-gig; thimbles and balls. See game of chance. [Cases: Gaming ∃=62, 68(0.5).] shelter, n. 1. A place of refuge providing safety from danger, attack, or observation.

homeless shelter. A privately or publicly operated residential facility providing overnight accommodation free of charge to homeless people. • Most homeless shelters accept occupants on a first-come-first-served basis and are open only from early evening to early morning. Those that serve homeless families may remain open throughout the day to women and children. Some shelters offer occupants help such as advice on finding and applying for public assistance, employment, and medical care. • Also termed family shelter.

development shelter. A privately or publicly operated residential facility offering young runaway or throwaway children a safe place to stay, usu. for a short time. • The residents enter the shelter voluntarily and can leave anytime they wish. Some shelters offer long-term transitional training so that young people can leave street life and eventually lead independent, productive lives. 2. An alternative type of juvenile-detention center that is less physically restrictive than a jail or boot camp. • Delinquent juveniles are usu. brought to these shelters by police or ordered to reside there by a court. Residents attend school or work in the daytime and may be permitted weekend visits at their family homes.

2. See tax shelter <the shelter saved the taxpayer over $2,000 in taxes>. • shelter, vb.

shelter-care hearing. See shelter hearing under hearing.

shelter doctrine. (1955) Commercial law. The principle that a person to whom a holder in due course has transferred commercial paper, as well as any later transferee, will succeed to the rights of the holder in due course. • As a result, transferees of holders in due course are generally not subject to defenses against the payment of an instrument. This doctrine ensures the free transferability of commercial paper. Its name derives from the idea that the transferees "take shelter" in the rights of the holder in due course. [Cases: Bills and Notes C=362.]

shelter hearing. See HEARING.

shelving. Patents. The failure to begin or the stopping of commercial use of a patent during a specified period, usu. the term of the license. • A licensor may place an anti-shelving provision in a license to ensure the licensed product's manufacture and sale. The term usu. applies to patented inventions, but licenses for trademarked products may also address shelving.

shepardize, vb. (1928) 1. (often cap.) To determine the subsequent history and treatment of (a case) by using a printed or computerized version of Shepard's Citators. 2. Loosely, to check the precedential value of (a case) by the same or similar means. — shepardization, shepardizing, n.

sheriff. [Middle English shire reeve from Anglo-Saxon scirgerefa] 1. A county's chief peace officer, usu. elected, who in most jurisdictions acts as custodian of the county jail, executes civil and criminal process, and carries out judicial mandates within the county. — Also termed high sheriff; vice-comes. [Cases: Sheriffs and Constables C=11.]

deputy sheriff. An officer who, acting under the direction of a sheriff, may perform most of the duties of the sheriff's office. • Although undersheriff is broadly synonymous with deputy sheriff, writers have sometimes distinguished between the two, suggesting that a deputy is appointed for a special occasion or purpose, while an undersheriff is permanent. — Also termed undersheriff; general deputy; vice-sheriff. [Cases: Sheriffs and Constables C=16.]

2. Scots law. The chief judge at the county level, with limited criminal and unlimited civil jurisdiction. • A sheriff may not hear cases of murder or some minor offenses. In medieval times, the sheriff was the king's representative in the shires, having military, administrative, and judicial functions. The office was hereditary until the Heritable Jurisdictions Act of 1746.

sheriff clerk. Scots law. The clerk of a sheriff's court.

sheriff-depute. Hist. Scots law. The qualified judge of a district or county, acting for the titular, unqualified sheriff.

sheriff principal. Scots law. The chief judge of a sheriffdom comprising one or more counties.

sheriff's court. See COURT.

sheriff's deed. See DEED.

sheriff's jury. See JURY.

sheriff's sale. See SALE.

Sherman Antitrust Act. A federal statute, passed in 1890, that prohibits direct or indirect interference with the freely competitive interstate production and distribution of goods. • This Act was amended by the Clayton Act in 1914. 15 USCA §§ 1–7. — Often shortened to Sherman Act. — Also termed the Antitrust Law. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation C=523.]

Sherman–Sorrells doctrine. (1998) The principle that a defendant may claim as an affirmative defense that he or she was not disposed to commit the offense until a public official (often an undercover police officer) encouraged the defendant to do so. • This entrapment defense, which is recognized in the federal system and a majority of states, was developed in Sherman v. United States, 356 U.S. 369, 78 S.Ct. 819 (1958), and Sorrells v. United States, 287 U.S. 435, 53 S.Ct. 210 (1932). — Also termed subjective method. See entrapment. Cf. HYPOTHETICAL-PERSON DEFENSE. [Cases: Criminal Law C=37.]

shield law. (1971) 1. A statute that affords journalists the privilege not to reveal confidential sources. See Journalist's privilege under PRIVILEGE (3). [Cases: Privileged Communications and Confidentiality C=404.]

"More than half of the states have 'shield laws' creating 'reporters' privileges' that are sometimes broader than the First Amendment version of that privilege." David A. Anderson, Freedom of the Press, 80 Texas L. Rev. 429, 432 (2002).

2. A statute that restricts or prohibits the use, in rape or sexual-assault cases, of evidence about the victim's past sexual conduct. — Also termed (in sense 2) rape shield law; rape shield statute. [Cases: Rape C=40(1)–40(5).]

"The 'rape shield law.' At common law the character of the woman as to chastity or unchastity was held to be admissible in evidence on the theory that it had probative value in determining whether she did or did not consent. Defense counsel, in unrestrained zeal for an acquittal, took advantage of this to the point that it often seemed as if it was the victim of the rape, rather than the perpetrator, who was on trial. . . . A typical 'rape shield statute' does not prevent the introduction of any relevant and otherwise admissible evidence, but requires that the relevancy of any evidence of the previous sexual conduct of the complaining witness must be determined in a pretrial hearing before the judge in camera." Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 206 (3d ed. 1982).

shifting, adj. (1874) (Of a position, place, etc.) changing or passing from one to another .

shifting clause. (1813) At common law, a clause under the Statute of Uses prescribing a substituted mode of devolution in the settlement of an estate. See STATUTE OF USES.

shifting executory interest. See EXECUTORY INTEREST.

shifting ground. Patents. The broadening of a patent application in an amendment by claiming a feature of the invention that was disclosed but not claimed in the original application. [Cases: Patents C=109.]

shifting inheritance. See INHERITANCE.

shifting risk. See RISK.

shifting stock of merchandise. Merchandise inventory subject to change by purchases and sales in the course of trade.

shifting the burden of proof. (1805) In litigation, the transference of the duty to prove a fact from one party to the other; the passing of the duty to produce evidence in a case from one side to another as the case progresses, when one side has made a prima facie showing on a point of evidence, requiring the other side to rebut it by contradictory evidence. See BURDEN OF PROOF. [Cases: Criminal Law $\Rightarrow 327$; Evidence $\Rightarrow 94$.]

shifting trust. See TRUST.

shifting use. See USE (4).

shill. 1. A person who poses as an innocent bystander at a confidence game but actually serves as a decoy for the perpetrators of the scheme. 2. BY-BIDDER. — shill, vb.

shilling, n. 1. The practice of fraudulently bidding on items at an auction solely to drive up the price. • The seller might collude with another person to bid or might act alone and anonymously. Cf. BIDDING UP; BY-BIDDING. [Cases: Auctions and Auctioneers $\Rightarrow 7$.] 2. Hist. An English coin equal to 12 pence or $\frac{1}{20}$th of a pound. • Shillings were revalued as five pence and phased out when decimalization was adopted in the early 1970s. The modern five-pence coin, like its predecessor equal to $\frac{1}{20}$th of a pound, is sometimes nostalgically referred to as a shilling.

shingle. A small, usu. dignified sign that marks the office door of a lawyer or other professional.

shingle theory. Securities. The notion that a broker-dealer must be held to a high standard of conduct because by engaging in the securities business ("hanging out a shingle"), the broker-dealer implicitly represents to the world that the conduct of all its employees will be fair and meet professional norms. [Cases: Securities Regulation $\Rightarrow 27.21, 60.32(1)$.]

"[In judging the appropriate standard of care that attaches to a broker-dealer in recommending securities to his or her customers and in dealing with the customers' accounts, the Commission has relied upon the 'shingle theory.' The shingle theory is but an extension of the common law doctrine of 'holding out.' When brokers hold themselves out as experts either in investments in general or in the securities of a particular issuer, they will be held to a higher standard of care in making recommendations." Thomas Lee Hazen, The Law of Securities Regulation § 10.6, at 423 (2d ed. 1994).

shin plaster. Hist. Slang. 1. A bank note that has greatly depreciated in value; esp., the paper money of the Republic of Texas in relation to the U.S. dollar. 2. Paper money in denominations less than one dollar.

ship, n. A type of vessel used or intended to be used in navigation. See VESSEL. [Cases: Shipping $\Rightarrow 1$.]

chartered ship. 1. A ship specially hired to transport the goods of only one person or company. [Cases: Shipping $\Rightarrow 34-58$.] 2. A ship on which a shipper has chartered space for a cargo.

general ship. A ship that is set for a particular voyage to carry the goods of any persons willing to ship goods on it for that voyage.

ship, vb. To send (goods, documents, etc.) from one place to another, esp. by delivery to a carrier for transportation.

ship broker. Maritime law. 1. The business agent of a shipowner or charterer; an intermediary between an owner or charterer and a shipper. 2. One who negotiates the purchase and sale of a ship.

ship channel. Maritime law. The part of a navigable body of water where the water is deep enough for large vessels to travel safely. [Cases: Collision $\Rightarrow 89$; Navigable Waters $\Rightarrow 1(5)$.]

shipmaster. See master of a ship.

shipment. 1. The transportation of goods; esp., the delivery of goods to a carrier and subsequent issuance of a bill of lading. 2. The goods so shipped; an order of goods.

shipment contract. See CONTRACT.

Ship Mortgage Act. A federal law regulating mortgages on ships registered as U.S. vessels by, among other things, providing for enforcement of maritime liens in favor of those who furnish supplies or maintenance to the vessels. 46 USCA §§ 30101, 31301-43. [Cases: Shipping $\Rightarrow 32$.]

shipowner-negligence doctrine. The principle that a shipowner is liable for an assault on a crew member if the crew member was assaulted by a superior, during an activity undertaken for the benefit of the ship's business, and if the ship's officers could reasonably have foreseen the assault. [Cases: Seamen $\Rightarrow 29(3)$.]

shipper. 1. One who ships goods to another. 2. One who contracts with a carrier for the transportation of cargo. • As a legal term of art, the shipper may not be the person who owns the cargo, but an agent or an independent contractor. Cf. CARRIER (1). [Cases: Carriers $\Rightarrow 3$.]

shipping articles. Maritime law. A document (provided by a master of a vessel to the mariners) detailing voyage information, such as the voyage term, the number of crew, and the wage rates. 46 USCA § 10302. [Cases: Seamen $\Rightarrow 7$.]

shipping commissioner. An officer, appointed by the secretary of the treasury, who is posted at a port of entry, and vested with general supervisory authority over seamen’s contracts and welfare. • In 1993, the term was changed to “master or individual in charge.” See Pub. L. 103-206 § 403. [Cases: Seamen $\Rightarrow 5$.]

shipping document. Any paper that covers a shipment in trade, such as a bill of lading or letter of credit. [Cases: Carriers $\Rightarrow 46-68$; Shipping $\Rightarrow 106$.]

shipping law. See LAW OF SHIPMENT.

shipping order. A copy of the shipper’s instructions to a carrier regarding the disposition of goods to be transported. [Cases: Carriers $\Rightarrow 61$.]

ship’s husband. Maritime law. A person appointed to act as general agent of all the coowners of a ship, as by contracting for all necessary services, equipment, and supplies. Cf. EXERCITOR. [Cases: Maritime Liens $\Rightarrow 28$; Seamen $\Rightarrow 22$; Shipping $\Rightarrow 74$.]

ship’s papers. Maritime law. The papers that a vessel is required to carry to provide the primary evidence of the ship’s national character, ownership, nature and destination of cargo, and compliance with navigation laws. ● These papers includes certificates of health, charter-party, muster-roils, licenses, and bills of lading. [Cases: Shipping ⊕ 5.]

shipwreck. _Maritime law._ 1. A ship’s wreckage. [Cases: Shipping ⊕ 212.] 2. The injury or destruction of a vessel because of circumstances beyond the owner’s control, rendering the vessel incapable of carrying out its mission.

“There are two kinds of shipwreck: (1.) When the vessel sinks or is dashed to pieces. (2.) When she is stranded, which is, when she grounds and fills with water. The latter may terminate in shipwreck, or may not, and it depends on circumstances whether it will or will not justify an abandonment.” *James Kent, Commentaries on American Law *323 n lb (George Comstock ed., 11th ed. 1866).

shire. A county in Great Britain (esp. England), originally made up of many hundreds but later consisting of larger divisions set off by metes and bounds.

shire-reeve. See shire-reeve under reeve.

Shively presumption (shiv-lee). The doctrine that any prestatheod grant of public property does not include tidelands unless the grant specifically indicates otherwise. Shively v. Bowlby, 152 U.S. 1, 14 S.Ct. 548 (1894); United States v. Holt State Bank, 270 U.S. 49, 46 S.Ct. 197 (1925). See equal-footing doctrine. [Cases: Navigable Waters ⊕ 36(1).]

shock, n. A profound and sudden disturbance of the physical or mental senses; a sudden and violent physical or mental impression depressing the body’s vital forces, as by a sudden injury or medical procedure.

mental shock. Shock caused by agitation of the mental senses and resulting in extreme grief or joy, as by witnessing the horrific death of a family member or winning the lottery. Cf. emotional distress.

physical shock. Shock caused by agitation of the physical senses, as from a sudden violent blow, impact, collision, or concussion.

shock incarceration. See incarceration. shock probation. See probation.

shock the conscience. To cause intense ethical or humanitarian discomfort. ● This phrase is used as an equitable standard for gauging whether (1) state action amounts to a violation of a person’s substantive due-process rights. (2) a jury’s award is excessive, (3) a fine, jail term, or other penalty is disproportionate to the crime, or (4) a contract is unconscionable. See conscience of the court 2. [Cases: Appeal and Error ⊕ 1004(5); Constitutional Law ⊕ 3896; Contracts ⊕ 1; Damages ⊕ 127.1-127.3; New Trial ⊕ 76.]

shop, n. (17c) A business establishment or place of employment; a factory, office, or other place of business.

agency shop. A shop in which a union acts as an agent for the employees, regardless of their union membership. ● Nonunion members must pay union dues because it is presumed that any collective bargaining will benefit nonunion as well as union members.

closed nonunion shop. A shop in which the employer restricts employment to workers who are unaffiliated with any labor union.

closed shop. A shop in which the employer, by agreement with a union, employs only union members in good standing. ● Closed shops were made illegal under the federal Labor-Management Relations Act. — Also termed closed union shop. See prehire agreement. Cf. closed union under union. [Cases: Labor and Employment ⊕ 1264.]

open closed shop. A shop in which the employer hires nonunion workers on the understanding that they will become union members within a specified period. — Also termed open shop. [Cases: Labor and Employment ⊕ 1264.]

open shop. 1. A shop in which the employer hires workers without regard to union affiliation. See right-to-work law. Cf. open union under union. 2. See open closed shop.

preferential nonunion shop. A shop in which nonunion members are given preference over main members in employment matters.

preferential union shop. A shop in which union members are given preference over nonunion members in employment matters. — Also termed preferential shop.

union shop. A shop in which the employer may hire nonunion employees on the condition that they join a union within a specified time (usu. at least 30 days).

shop-book rule. (1898) _Evidence._ An exception to the hearsay rule permitting the admission into evidence of original bookkeeping records if the books’ entries were made in the ordinary course of business and the books are authenticated by somebody who maintains them. [Cases: Criminal Law ⊕ 436(2); Evidence ⊕ 354.]

shop books. (17c) Records of original entry maintained in the usual course of business by a shopkeeper, trader, or other businessperson. — Also termed books of account; account books.

shop committee. A union committee that resolves employee complaints within a union shop. See union shop under shop.

shoplifting. n. (17c) Theft of merchandise from a store or business; specif., larceny of goods from a store or other commercial establishment by willfully taking and concealing the merchandise with the intention of converting the goods to one’s personal use without paying the purchase price. See larceny. [Cases: Larceny ⊕ 1.] — shoplift, vb.

“Shoplifting is a form of larceny . . . As a practical matter, however, the difficulty of proving the wrongful taking and the felonious intent requisites for a conviction under the general larceny statutes, together with the risk of retributory civil action against the shopkeeper consequent to acquittal of an accused shoplifter, have caused shoplifting to be established as a specific statutory crime in many jurisdictions." 50 Am. Jur. 2d Larceny § 71, at 79–80 (1995).

shop right. (1879) Patents. An employer's right to an irrevocable, nonassignable, nonexclusive, royalty-free license in an employee's invention, if the employee conceived and developed the invention during the course of employment and used company funds and materials. • The term derives from the idea that the right belongs to the shop, not to the employee. Employment contracts frequently contain patent-assignment clauses, but the employer is entitled to the license even if the employee retains the patent. If the employee or consultant was hired to invent, then the employer owns the resulting inventions. If an employee develops an invention independently, the employee is its sole owner. But if an employees uses the employer's resources to make the invention, courts use the shop-right doctrine to order the employee to compensate the employer. [Cases: Labor and Employment C−308.]

shore. (14c) 1. Land lying between the lines of high- and low-water mark; lands bordering on the shores of navigable waters below the line of ordinary high water. [Cases: Navigable Waters C−36(3); Waters and Water Courses C−90.] 2. Land adjacent to a body of water regardless of whether it is below or above the ordinary high- or low-water mark. — Also termed shore land. [Cases: Navigable Waters C−18, 33, 41; Waters and Water Courses C−90-96.]

short, adj. 1. Not holding at the time of sale the security or commodity that is being sold in anticipation of a fall in price <the trader was short at the market's close>. 2. Of or relating to a sale of securities or commodities not in the seller's possession at the time of sale . See short sale under SALE. Cf. LONG. [Cases: Securities Regulation C−45.17.]

short, adv. By a short sale <sold the stock short>. See short sale under SALE.

short, vb. To sell (a security or commodity) by a short sale <shorted 1,000 shares of Pantheon stock>. See short sale under SALE. [Cases: Securities Regulation C−45.17.]

si constet de persona (st kon-set dee deh soh na). [Latin] If it is certain who is the person meant.

si contingat (st kontin-gat). [Law Latin] If it happens.

• This term was formerly used to describe conditions in a conveyance.

sicut alias (st-kat ay-lee-as), *n. [Latin “as at another time”] Hist. A second writ issued when the first one was not executed.

But where a defendant absconds, and the plaintiff would proceed to an outlawry against him, an original writ must then be sued out regularly, and after that a capias. And if the sheriff cannot find the defendant upon the first writ . . . there issues out an alias writ, and after that a pluries, to the same effect as the former: only after these words ‘we command you,’ this clause is inserted, ‘as we have formerly.’ or, ‘as we have often commanded you; ’ sicut alias’ . . . ” 3 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 723 (1768).

side, *n. (13c) 1. The position of a person or group opposing another <the law is on our side>. 2. Either of two parties in a transaction or dispute <each side put on a strong case>. 3. Archaic. The field of a court’s jurisdiction <honor side> <law side>. 4. Property. In a description of more or less rectangularly shaped land, either of the two long boundary lines.

side agreement. See AGREEMENT.

sidebar. (1856) 1. A position at the side of a judge’s bench where counsel can confer with the judge beyond the jury’s earshot <the judge called the attorneys to sidebar>. 2. SIDEBAR CONFERENCE <during the sidebar, the prosecutor accused the defense attorney of misconduct>. 3. A short, secondary article within or accompanying a main story in a publication <the sidebar contained information on related topics>. 4. SIDEBAR COMMENT.
sidebar comment. (1922) An unnecessary, often argumentative remark made by an attorney or witness, esp. during a trial or deposition <the witness paused after testifying, then added a sidebar>. — Often shortened to sidebar. — Also termed sidebar remark. [Cases: Trial C-113.]

sidebar conference. (1925) 1. A discussion among the judge and counsel, usu. over an evidentiary objection, outside the jury’s hearing. — Also termed bench conference. [Cases: Trial C-18, 50.] 2. A discussion, esp. during voir dire, between the judge and a juror or prospective juror. — Often shortened to sidebar.

sidebar remark. See sidebar comment.

If he has made you secure. • These were the initial words of a writ ordering the sheriff, upon receipt of security from the plaintiff, to compel the defendant’s appearance in court. — Also spelled (erroneously) se te fecerit securum.

sight. (1810) A drawee’s acceptance of a draft <payable after sight>. • The term after sight means “after acceptance.”

sight draft. See DRAFT.

sight strike. See STRIKE (2).

sigil (si-j-al), n. A seal or an abbreviated signature used as a seal; esp., a seal formerly used by civil-law notaries.

sigillum (si-jil-am), n. [Latin] A seal, esp. one impressed on wax.

sigla (sig-la), n. pl. [Latin] Abbreviations and signs used in writing, esp. by the Glossators.

sign, vb. (15c) 1. To identify (a record) by means of a signature, mark, or other symbol with the intent to authenticate it as an act or agreement of the person identifying it <both parties signed the contract>. 2. To agree with or join <the commissioner signed on for a four-year term>.

signal. (1949) 1. A means of communication, esp. between vessels at sea or between a vessel and the shore. • The international code of signals assigns arbitrary meanings to different arrangements of flags or light displays. [Cases: Collision C-75–79, 81, 98, 100] 2. In the citation of legal authority, an abbreviation or notation supplied to indicate some basic fact about the authority. • For example, according to the Bluebook, the signal See means that the cited authority plainly supports the proposition, while Cf means that the cited authority supports a proposition analogous to (but in some way different from) the main proposition. For these and other signals, see The Bluebook: A Uniform System of Citation § 1.2, at 22–24 (17th ed. 2000). — Also termed (in sense 2) citation signal.

signatory (sig-na-to-ee), n. (1866) A person or entity that signs a document, personally or through an agent, and thereby becomes a party to an agreement <eight countries are signatories to the treaty>. — signatory, adj.

signatory authority. 1. License to make a decision, esp. to withdraw money from an account or to transfer a negotiable instrument. 2. Patents. In the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office, the power of an examiner to approve an office action. [Cases: Patents C-104.]

signature. (16c) 1. A person’s name or mark written by that person or at the person’s direction. — Also termed sign manual. [Cases: Signatures C-1–5.] 2. Commercial law. Any name, mark, or writing used with the intention of authenticating a document. UCC §§ 1-201(37), 3-401(b). — Also termed legal signature. [Cases: Bills and Notes C-54; Contracts C-35; Sales C-29.]

"The signature to a memorandum may be any symbol made or adopted with an intention, actual or apparent, to authenticate the writing as that of the signer." Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 134 (1979).

digital signature. (1978) A secure, digital code attached to an electronically transmitted message that uniquely identifies and authenticates the sender. • A digital signature consists of a "hashed" number combined with a number assigned to a document (a private-encryption key). Generating a signature requires the use of private- and public-key-encryption software, and is often activated by a simple command or act, such as clicking on a “place order” icon on a retailer’s website. Digital signatures are esp. important for electronic commerce and are a key component of many electronic message-authentication schemes. Several states have passed legislation recognizing the legality of digital signatures. See E-COMMERCE; KEY ENCRYPTION. [Cases: Signatures ⇔ 1, 2.]

electronic signature. An electronic symbol, sound, or process that is either attached to or logically associated with a document (such as a contract or other record) and executed or adopted by a person with the intent to sign the document. • Types of electronic signatures include a typed name at the end of an email, a digital image of a handwritten signature, and the click of an “I accept” button on an e-commerce site. The term electronic signature does not suggest or require the use of encryption, authentication, or identification measures. A document’s integrity (unaltered content), authenticity (sender’s identity), and confidentiality (of the signer’s identity or document’s contents) are not ensured merely because an electronic signature is provided for. [Cases: Signatures ⇔ 1–3.]

facsimile signature. (1892) 1. A signature that has been prepared and reproduced by mechanical or photographic means. 2. A signature on a document that has been transmitted by a facsimile machine. See FAX.

private signature. Civil law. A signature made on a document (such as a will) that has not been witnessed or notarized. [Cases: Wills ⇔ 149.]

unauthorized signature. (1859) A signature made without actual, implied, or apparent authority. • It includes a forgery. UCC § 1-201(43). [Cases: Banks and Banking ⇔ 147; Bills and Notes ⇔ 54, 279.]

signature card. (1902) A financial-institution record consisting of a customer’s signature and other information that assists the institution in monitoring financial transactions, as by comparing the signature on the record with signatures on checks, withdrawal slips, and other documents. [Cases: Banks and Banking ⇔ 133, 151.]

signature crime. See CRIME.

signature evidence. See EVIDENCE.

signature loan. See LOAN.

signed, sealed, and delivered. (17c) In a certificate of acknowledgment, a statement that the instrument was executed by the person acknowledging it. — Often shortened to sealed and delivered. [Cases: Acknowledgment ⇔ 29.]

signed writing. See WRITING.

signet. Civil law. An elaborate hand-drawn symbol (usu. incorporating a cross and the notary’s initials) formerly placed at the base of notarial instruments, later replaced by a seal. 2. Scots law. A seal used to authenticate summonses in civil matters before the Court of Session. • Originally, this was the monarch’s personal seal. Cf. WRITER TO THE SIGNET.

significant-connection jurisdiction. See JURISDICTION.

significant-connection/substantial-evidence jurisdiction. See significant-connection jurisdiction under JURISDICTION.

significant-relationship theory. See CENTER-OF-GRAVITY DOCTRINE.

significavit (sig-ni-fi-kay-vit), n. [Latin “he has signified”] Eccles. law. 1. A bishop’s certificate that a person has been in a state of excommunication for more than 40 days. 2. A notice to the Crown in chancery, based on the bishop’s certificate, whereby a writ de contumace capiendo (or, earlier, a writ de excommunicato capiendo) would issue for the disobedient person’s arrest and imprisonment. See DE CONTUMACE CAPIENDO.

sign manual. 1. See SIGNATURE (1). 2. A symbol or emblem, such as a trademark, representing words or an idea.

signum (sig-nam), n. [Latin] Roman law. 1. A sign; a seal.

“Signum. (On written documents.) A seal (a stamp) put on to close a document in order to make its contents inaccessible to unauthorized persons and protect against forgery, or at the end of it after the written text. In the latter case the seal (without or with a signature) indicated that the sealer recognized the written declaration as his . . . Signum is also the seal of a witness who was present at the making of a document.” Adolf Berger, Encyclopedic Dictionary of Roman Law 707 (1953).

2. An indication of something seen or otherwise perceived by the senses, such as a bloodstain on a murder suspect. Pl. signa.

si institutus sine libris decesserit (si in-sti-tus si-nee lib-<lr-is di-ses-<lr-it). [Latin] Hist. If the instituted heir should die without issue. See SUBSTITUTION.

si ita est (si i-ta est). [Latin] If it be so. • This phrase was formerly used in a mandamus writ to order a judge to affix a seal to a bill of exceptions, if the facts were accurately stated.

silence, n. (13c) 1. A restraint from speaking. • In criminal law, silence includes an arrestee’s statements expressing the desire not to speak and requesting an attorney. 2. A failure to reveal something required by law to be revealed. See estoppel by silence under ESTOPEL. — silent, adj.

silent confirmation. See CONFIRMATION.

silentiary (si-len-shee-air-ee), n. 1. Roman law. An official who maintains order in the imperial palace and on the imperial council; a chamberlain. 2. Hist. An officer who is sworn to silence about state secrets; esp., a privy councilor so sworn. 3. Hist. A court usher who maintains order and esp. silence in the court. — Also termed silentarius.

silent partner. See PARTNER.

silent record. See RECORD.

silent-witness theory. (1973) Evidence. A method of authenticating and admitting evidence (such as a photograph), without the need for a witness to verify its authenticity, upon a sufficient showing of the reliability of the process of producing the evidence, including proof that the evidence has not been altered. [Cases: Criminal Law 17388, 444; Evidence 17359, 380.]

simulated contract. See CONTRACT. simulated transaction. See simulated sale under SALE. simulatio latens (sim-ya-lay-shee-oh lay-tenz). [Latin “hidden pretence”] Hist. Feigned enhancement of illness, as when symptoms are present but not nearly as severe as is pretended. simulation. 1. An assumption of an appearance that is feigned, false, or deceptive. 2. Civil law. A feigned, pretended act, usu. to mislead or deceive. 3. See simulated contract under CONTRACT.
simul cum (st-mal kem). [Latin] Together with. • This phrase was formerly used in an indictment or other instrument to indicate that a defendant had committed an injury jointly with others unknown.
simultaneous death. See DEATH. simultaneous-death act. See UNIFORM SIMULTANEOUS DEATH ACT.
simultaneous-death clause. (1953) A testamentary provision mandating that if the testator and beneficiary die in a common disaster, or the order of their deaths is otherwise unascertainable, the testator is presumed to have survived the beneficiary. • If the beneficiary is the testator’s spouse, an express exception is often made so that the spouse with the smaller estate is presumed to have survived. See simultaneous death under DEATH. Cf. SURVIVAL CLAUSE.
simultaneous polygamy. See POLYGAMY (1). sine (st-ne or sin-a’y), prep. [Latin] Without.
sine assensu capituli (st-ne an-sen-si-yo keh-pich-eh-yo li-e). n. [Law Latin “without the consent of the chapter”] Hist. A writ for a successor to recover land that the former bishop, abbot, or prior had alienated without the chapter’s permission.
sine cura et cultura (st-ne kyoor-alt-kal-t(y)ooh-ar-oh). [Latin] Hist. Without care and culture. • Natural fruits fitting this description automatically passed to the purchaser of property. But industrial fruits that had to be cultivated required a special conveyance.
sine die (si-nee di-e or di- or sin-ay dee-ay). [Latin "without day"] (17c) With no day being assigned (as for resumption of a meeting or hearing). See adjourn sine die under ADJOURN (2); GO HENCE WITHOUT DAY. [Cases: Courts ≈ 76; States ≈ 32.]

sine hoc quod (si-nee hok kwod). [Law Latin] Without this, that. See ABSQUE HOC.

sine numero (si-nee ny-yoo-mar-oh). [Law Latin "without number"] Countless; without limit.

sine prole (si-nee prob-lee). [Latin] Without issue. • This phrase was used primarily in genealogical tables. — Abbr. s.p.

sine qua non (si-nee kway non or sin-ay kwah nohn). n. [Latin "without which not"] (17c) An indispensable condition or thing; something on which something else necessarily depends. — Also termed condition sine qua non. [Cases: Negligence ≈ 379.]

sine quibus funus honeste dud non potest (si-nee kwib-as fyooy-nas [h]a-nes-tee di[y]oo-st non poh-tis test). [Latin] Scots law. Without which the funeral cannot be decently conducted. • The phrase appeared in reference to funeral expenses that could be deducted against the decedent's estate.

single-country fund. See MUTUAL FUND.

single creditor. See CREDITOR.

single-criminal-intent doctrine. See SINGLE-LARCENY DOCTRINE.

single-date-of-removal doctrine. Civil procedure. The principle that the deadline for removing a case from state court to federal court is 30 days from the day that any defendant receives a copy of the state-court pleading on which the removal is based. • If a later-served defendant seeks to remove a case to federal court more than 30 days after the day any other defendant received the pleading, the removal is untimely even if effectuated within 30 days after the removing defendant received the pleading. One theory underlying this doctrine is that all defendants must consent to remove a case to federal court, and a defendant who has waited longer than 30 days to remove does not have the capacity to consent to removal. 28 USCA § 1446(b). See NOTICE OF REMOVAL. [Cases: Removal of Cases ≈ 79(1).] single demise. See DEMISE.

single-element means claim. See single-means claim under PATENT CLAIM.

single-entry bookkeeping. See BOOKKEEPING.

single-filing rule. Civil-rights law. The principle that an administrative charge filed by one plaintiff in a civil-rights suit (esp. a Title VII suit) will satisfy the administrative-filing requirements for all coplaintiffs who are making claims for the same act of discrimination. • But this rule will not usu. protect a coplaintiff’s claims if the coplaintiff also filed an administrative charge, against the same employer, in which different discriminatory acts were complained of, because the administrative agency (usu. the EEOC) and the employer are entitled to rely on the allegations someone makes in an administrative charge. [Cases: Civil Rights ≈ 1517.] single-impulse plan. See SINGLE-LARCENY DOCTRINE.

single-juror instruction. See JURY INSTRUCTION.

single-larceny doctrine. (1969) Criminal law. The principle that the taking of different items of property belonging to either the same or different owners at the same time and place constitutes one act of larceny if the theft is part of one larcenous plan, as when it involves essentially one continuous act or if control over the property is exercised simultaneously. • The thief’s intent determines the number of occurrences. — Also termed single-impulse plan; single-larceny rule; single-criminal-intent doctrine. [Cases: Larceny ≈ 1517.] single-means claim. See PATENT CLAIM.

single-name paper. A negotiable instrument signed by only one maker and not backed by a surety.

single obligation. See OBLIGATION.

single-premium deferred annuity. See ANNUITY. single-premium insurance. See single-premium life insurance.

single-premium life insurance. See LIFE INSURANCE.

single-publication rule. The doctrine that a plaintiff in a libel suit against a publisher has only one claim for each mass publication, not a claim for every book or issue in that run. [Cases: Libel and Slander ⊂= 26.]

single-purpose project. A facility that is designed, built, and used for one reason only, such as to generate electricity. • This term most often refers to large, complex, expensive projects such as power plants, chemical-processing plants, mines, and toll roads. Projects of this type are often funded through project financing, in which a special-purpose entity is established to perform no function other than to develop, own, and operate the facility, the idea being to limit the number of the entity’s creditors and thus provide protection for the project’s lenders. See project financing under financing; special-purpose entity; bankruptcy-remote entity.

single-recovery rule. See ONE-SATISFACTION RULE.

single-registration rule. Copyright. The U.S. Copyright Office doctrine that permits only one registration for each original work. • Exceptions to the rule are routinely made for unpublished works that are later published. Generally, revised works cannot be registered a second time if the revisions are not substantial, but the creator may be allowed to file a supplemental registration. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property ⊂= 50, 16.]

single-source requirement. Under the common-law tort of false advertising, the necessity to show that the plaintiff is the only supplier of the genuine goods in question and that buyers would have bought the plaintiff’s goods if the true nature of the defendant’s goods had been known. Ely-Norris Safe Co. v. Mosler Safe Co., 7 F.2d 603 (2d Cir. 1925). • This is a narrow exception to the common-law rule that the tort of false advertising applies only in instances of passing off, trade disparagement, or trade disparagement. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation ⊂= 19.]

singles’ penalty. See MARRIAGE BONUS.

single-transferable vote. See VOTE (1).

singles’ penalty. See MARRIAGE BONUS.

si parere ei sine suo periculo non potest (st pahr-sar-ee ee-i-say si-you-oh po-rik-ya-loh non poh-test). [Latin] Roman law. If he could not spare him except at his own peril. • This phrase defined the circumstances in which a defendant could plead self-defense.

si paret (st par-ee). [Latin] If it appears. • In Roman law, this phrase was part of the praetor’s formula by which judges were appointed and told how they were to decide.

“in blench holdings, where the return for the lands is generally elusory, that return is for the most part due and payable si petatur tantum; and this clause, by universal practice, has been interpreted to mean, if asked only within the year (si petatur intra annum). If the duty is not demanded within the year, the vassal is not liable for it.” John Trayner, Trayner’s Latin Maxims 575 (4th ed. 1894).

si prius (st pri-as). [Law Latin] If before. • This phrase is used in a writ summoning a jury.

si quis (st kwis). [Latin] Roman law. If any one. • This term was used in praetorian edicts. In England, it was also mentioned in notices posted in parish churches requesting anyone who knows of just cause why a candidate for holy orders should not be ordained to inform the bishop.

SIR. abbr. 1. SELF-INSURED RETENTION. 2. STATUTORY INVENTION REGISTRATION.

si recognoscat (st rek-ag-nos-kat). [Latin “if he acknowledges”] Hist. A writ allowing a creditor to obtain money counted — that is, a specific sum that the debtor had acknowledged in county court to be owed.

si sine liberis descesserit (st si-ne lib-or-is di-ses-ar-it). [Latin] Hist. If he shall have died without children.

si sit incompos mentis, fatuus, et naturaliter idiota (st sit in-kom-pas men-tis, fach-oo-as et nach-a-ray-li-tar id-ee-o-ta). [Law Latin] Scots law. If he is of unsound mind, fatuous, and naturally an idiot. • The phrase appeared in reference to an inquiry that was posed to a jury required to make an idiocy determination.

si sit legitimae aetatis (si sit la-jit-ah-ee-tay-tis). [Latin] Hist. If he (or she) is of lawful age.

dsit (sit),. n. Scots law. An order staying or suspending legal proceedings. — Also termed supersedere.

sit, vb. Scots law. 1. To bring into court; to summon. 2. To stay (a judicial proceeding, etc.), esp. by court order. 3. To intervene in legal proceedings as an interested third party, e.g., a trustee.

sisterhood. See GIFTING CLUB.

sister-in-law. (15c) The sister of one's spouse or the wife of one's brother. • The wife of one's spouse's brother is also sometimes considered a sister-in-law. Pl. sisters-in-law.

sistership exclusion. See EXCLUSION (3).

sistren, n. Sisters, esp. those considered spiritual kin (such as female colleagues on a court). Cf. BRETHREN.

sit, vb. (14c) 1. (Of a judge) to occupy a judicial seat <Judge Wilson sits on the trial court for the Eastern District of Arkansas>. 2. (Of a judge) to hold court or perform official functions <is the judge sitting this week?>. 3. (Of a court or legislative body) to hold proceedings <the U.S. Supreme Court sits from October to June>.

sit-and-squirm test. A judicial doctrine, used esp. by administrative-law judges in disability-claim cases, whereby a court subjectively determines a set of traits that it expects the claimant to exhibit and denies relief if the claimant fails to exhibit those traits. • The doctrine is adhered to only in some federal circuits and has been expressly rejected in others. Generally, an administrative-law judge may observe a claimant's demeanor in evaluating the credibility of the complaint. Yet it is error for the judge to base a judgment solely on personal observation and not on the record as a whole.

sit-down strike. See STRIKE.

site, 1. A place or location; esp., a piece of property set aside for a specific use. 2. SCITE.

site plan. (1937) An illustrated proposal for the development or use of a particular piece of real property. • The illustration is usu. a map or sketch of how the property will appear if the proposal is accepted. Some zoning ordinances require a developer to present a site plan to the city council and to receive council approval before certain projects may be completed. [Cases: Zoning and Planning C—245, 372.1.]

sit-in, n. An organized, passive demonstration in which participants usu. sit (or lie) down and refuse to leave a place as a means of protesting against policies or activities. • Sit-ins originated as a communal act of protesting racial segregation. People who were discriminated against would sit in places that were prohibited to them and refuse to leave. Later the term came to refer to any group protest, as with anti-Vietnam War protests and some labor strikes. Cf. sit-down strike under STRIKE.

sito ganado mayor (sit-yoh gah-nah-doh mi-yor). Spanish & Mexican law. skipperson. (1988) Tax. A beneficiary who is more than one generation removed from the transferor and to whom assets are conveyed in a generation-skipping transfer. IRC (26 USCA) § 2613(a). See GENERATION-SKIPPING TRANSFER. [Cases: Internal Revenue C=4224.]

"Since a skip person is necessary to trigger a generation-skipping tax, it is important to have a precise definition of 'skip person.' In most cases, it suffices to say that a skip person is a person who is two or more generations younger than the transferor." John K. McNulty, Federal Estate and Gift Taxation in a Nutshell 63 (5th ed. 1994).

skipperson. See ESKIPPESON.

[Cases: Telecommunications C=863.]

slender, n. (13c) 1. A defamatory assertion expressed in a transitory form, esp. speech. • Damages for slander — unlike those for libel — are not presumed and thus must be proved by the plaintiff (unless the defamation is slander per se). [Cases: Libel and Slander C=-1, 24, 33.] 2. The act of making such a statement. See DEFAmATION. Cf. Libel (1). — slanderer, vb. — slanderous, adj.

"Although libel and slander are for the most part governed by the same principles, there are two important differences: (1) Libel is not merely an actionable tort; but also a criminal offence, whereas slander is a civil injury only. (2) Libel is in all cases actionable per se; but slander is, save in special cases, actionable only on proof of actual damage. This distinction has been severely criticised as productive of great injustice." R.F.V. Heuston, Salmond on the Law of Torts 139 (17th ed. 1977).

slander per quod. (18c) Slander that does not qualify as slander per se, thus forcing the plaintiff to prove special damages. [Cases: Libel and Slander C=-11, 33.]

slander per se. (1841) Slander for which special damages need not be proved because it imputes to the plaintiff any one of the following: (1) a crime involving moral turpitude, (2) a loathsome disease (such as a sexually transmitted disease), (3) conduct that would adversely affect one's business or profession, or (4) unchastity (esp. of a woman). [Cases: Libel and Slander C=-7(2), 7(16), 8, 9(1), 33.]

SLAPP (slap). abbr. A strategic lawsuit against public participation — that is, a suit brought by a developer, corporate executive, or elected official to stifle those who protest against some type of high-dollar initiative or who take an adverse position on a public-interest issue (often involving the environment). — Also termed SLAPP suit. [Cases: Pleading C-358, 360] slate. A list of candidates, esp. for political office or a corporation's board of directors, that usu. includes as many candidates for election as there are representatives being elected. [Cases: Corporations C-283(2)].

slave. Roman law. See servus (1).

slavery. 1. A situation in which one person has absolute power over the life, fortune, and liberty of another. 2. The practice of keeping individuals in such a state of bondage or servitude. • Slavery was outlawed by the 13th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution. [Cases: Constitutional Law C-1101; Slaves C-1.]

"Slavery was a big problem for the Constitution makers. Those who profited by it insisted on protecting it; those who loathed the Constitution would die aborning. So the Framers reached a compromise, of sorts. The words 'slave' and 'slavery' would never be mentioned, but the Constitution would safeguard the peculiar institution from the abolitionists." Jethro K. Lieberman, The Evolving Constitution 493 (1992).

slavery, badge of. See badge of slavery.

slay, vb. To kill (a person), esp. in battle.

slayer rule. (1986) The doctrine that neither a person who kills another nor the killer's heirs can share in the decedent's estate. — Also termed slayer's rule.

slight-evidence rule. (1936) 1. The doctrine that if evidence establishes the existence of a conspiracy between at least two other people, the prosecution need only offer slight evidence of a defendant's knowing participation or intentional involvement in the conspiracy to secure a conviction. • This rule was first announced in Tomplain v. United States, 42 F.2d 202, 203 (5th Cir. 1930). In the decades after Tomplain, other circuits adopted the rule, but not until the 1970s did the rule become widespread. Since then, the rule has been widely criticized and, in most circuits, abolished. See, e.g., United States v. Durrive, 902 F.2d 1379, 1380 n.* (7th Cir. 1990). But its vitality remains undiminished in some jurisdictions. [Cases: Conspiracy C-47.]

2. The doctrine that only slight evidence of a defendant's participation in a conspiracy need be offered in order to admit a coconspirator's out-of-court statement under the coconspirator exception to the hearsay rule. See Fed. R. Evid. 801(d)(2)(E). [Cases: Criminal Law C-427.]

Smith Act. A 1948 federal antisedition law that criminalizes advocating the forcible or violent overthrow of the government. 18 USCA § 2385. [Cases: Insurrection and Sedition C 1.]

“The Smith Act is aimed at the advocacy and reaching of concrete action for the forcible overthrow of the government, and not at advocacy of principles divorced from action. The essential distinction is that those to whom the advocacy is addressed must be urged to do something, now or in the future, rather than merely to believe in some-Smithsonian Institution. An independent trust of the United States responsible for conducting scientific and scholarly research; publishing its results; maintaining over 140 million artifacts, works of art, and scientific specimens for study, display, and circulation throughout the nation; and engaging in educational program-statute that raised tariff rates on most articles imported into the U.S., and provoked U.S. trading partners to institute comparable tariff increases. • This act is often cited as a factor in precipitating and spreading the Great Depression. The Act was named for the legislators who sponsored it, Senator Reed Smoot of Utah and Representative Willis C. Hawley of Oregon. It is sometimes called the Grundy Tariff for Joseph Grundy, who was president of the Pennsylvania Manufacturers Association and the chief lobbyist supporting the Act. — Also termed Tariff Act of 1930.

societas (soh-she-a-tas), n. [Latin] Roman law. A partnership between two or more people agreeing to share profits and losses; a partnership contract.

"Societas in its widest acceptation denotes two or more persons who unite or combine for the prosecution of a common object; in its more restricted sense it denotes a mercantile partnership . . . , the individual members being termed Soci." William Ramsay, A Manual of Roman Antiquities 316 (Rodolfi Lanciani ed., 15th ed. 1894).

societas leonina (soh-she-a-tas lee-ah-ni-nah), [Latin "partnership with a lion"] Roman law. An illegal partnership in which a partner shares in only the losses, not the profits; a partnership in which one person takes the lion’s share. — Also termed leonina societas.

"But an arrangement by which one party should have all the gain was not recognized as binding, it was considered as contrary to the nature and purposes of the societas, the aim of which was gain for all the parties concerned. Such an arrangement the lawyers called societas leonina, a partnership like that which the lion in the fable imposed upon the cow, the sheep, and the she-goat, his associates in the chase." James Hadley, Introduction to Roman Law 231–32 (1881).

socra (soh-nah). Hist. A privilege; a liberty; a franchise.

Socratic method. (18c) A technique of philosophical discussion — and of law-school instruction — by which the questioner (a law professor) questions one or more followers (the law students), building on each answer with another question, esp. an analogy incorporating the answer. • This method takes its name from the Greek philosopher Socrates, who lived in Athens from about 469–399 B.C. His method is a traditional one in law schools, primarily because it forces law students to think through issues rationally and deductively — a skill required in the practice of law. Most law professors who employ this method call on students randomly, an approach designed to teach students to think quickly, without stage fright. — Also termed question-and-answer method. See QUESTION AND ANSWER METHOD (3). Cf. CASEBOOK METHOD; HORNBOOK METHOD.

"[Socrates] himself did not profess to be capable of teaching anything, except consciousness of ignorance . . . . He called his method of discussion (the Socratic method) obstetrics . . . because it was an art of inducing his interlocutors to develop their own ideas under a catechetical system." S The Century Dictionary and Cyclopedia 5746 (rev. ed. 1914).

 sodomy (sod-ah-mee), n. (13c) 1. Oral or anal copulation between humans, esp. those of the same sex. [Cases: Sodomy C=1.] 2. Oral or anal copulation between a human and an animal; bestiality. — Also termed buggery; crime against nature; abominable and detestable crime against nature; unnatural offense; unspeakable crime; (archaically) sodomy; (in Latin) crimen innominatum. Cf. PEDERASTY. — sodimize, vb. — sodomitic, adj. — sodomist, sodomite, n.
“Sodomy is a criminal copulation against nature; to wit, of man or woman in the same sex, or of either of them with beasts.” Sir Henry Finch, Law, or a Discourse Thereof 219 (1759).

“Sodomy was not a crime under the common law of England but was an ecclesiastical offense only. It was made a felony by an English statute so early that it is a common-law felony in this country, and statutes expressly making it a felony were widely adopted. ‘Sodomy’ is a generic term including both ‘bestiality’ and ‘buggery.’” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 495 (3d ed. 1982).

aggravated sodomy. (1965) Criminal sodomy that involves force or results in serious bodily injury to the victim in addition to mental injury and emotional distress. • Some laws provide that sodomy involving a minor is automatically aggravated sodomy. [Cases: Sodomy C=1.]

solicitation. n. (16c) 1. The act or an instance of requesting or seeking to obtain something; a request or petition . 2. The criminal offense of urging, advising, commanding, or otherwise inciting another to commit a crime <convicted of solicitation of murder>. • Solicitation is an inchoate offense distinct from the solicited crime. Under the Model Penal Code, a defendant is guilty of solicitation even if the command or urging was not actually communicated to the solicited person, as long as it was designed to be communicated. Model Penal Code § 5.02(2). — Also termed criminal solicitation; incitement. Cf. attempt (2). [Cases: Criminal Law C 45; Homicide C $562.] 3. An offer to pay or accept money in exchange for sex <the prostitute was charged with solicitation>. — Also termed soliciting. Cf. patronizing a prostitute. [Cases: Prostitution C 16.] 4. An attempt or effort to gain business <the attorney's solicitations took the form of radio and television ads>. • The Model Rules of Professional Conduct place certain prohibitions on lawyers' direct solicitation of potential clients. [Cases: Attorney and Client C 32(9).] 5. Securities. A request for a proxy; a request to execute, not execute, or revoke a proxy; the furnishing of a form of proxy; or any other communication to security holders under circumstances reasonably calculated to result in the procurement, withholding, or revocation of a proxy. [Cases: Securities Regulation C 49.10–49.16.] • solicitation, vb.

solicitor. (15c) 1. A person who seeks business or contributions from others; an advertiser or promoter. 2. A person who conducts matters on another's behalf; an agent or representative. 3. The chief law officer of a governmental body or a municipality. [Cases: Municipal Corporations C 169.] 4. In the United Kingdom, a lawyer who consults with clients and prepares legal documents but is not generally heard in High Court or (in Scotland) Court of Session unless specially licensed. Cf. barrister. 5. See special agent under insurance agent. 6. A prosecutor (in some jurisdictions, such as solicitor general. (usu. cap.) (17c) The second-highest-ranking legal officer in a government (after the attorney general); esp., the chief courtroom lawyer for the executive branch. — Abbr. SG. Pl. solicitors general.

"By [federal] law, only the Solicitor General or his designee can conduct and argue before the Supreme Court cases 'in which the United States is interested.' Thus, if a trial court appoints a special, independent prosecutor in order to prosecute a criminal contempt of court, that court-appointed special prosecutor cannot represent the United States in seeking Supreme Court review of any lower court decision unless the Solicitor General authorizes the filing of such a petition. . . . Although the Solicitor General serves at the pleasure of the President, by tradition the Solicitor General also acts with independence. Thus, if the Solicitor General does not believe in the legal validity of the arguments that the government wants presented, he will refuse to sign the brief. In close cases the Solicitor General will sign the brief but tag on a disclaimer that has become known as 'tying a tin can.' The disclaimer would state, for example, 'The foregoing is presented as the position of the Internal Revenue Service.' The justices would then know that the Solicitor General, although not withholding a legal argument, was not personally sponsoring or adopting the particular legal position." Ronald D. Rotunda & John E. Nowak, Treatise on Constitutional Law § 2.2, at 86-88 (3d ed. 1999).

solicitor’s hypothec. See hypothec.

solidarity. (1875) The state of being jointly and severally liable (as for a debt). See SOLIDARY LIABILITY under OBLIGATION. [Cases: Action C—14.] — solidarily, adv.

solidary (sol-a-der-e), adj. (Of a liability or obligation) joint and several. See joint and several. [Cases: Action C—14.]

'It is a single debt of £100 owing by each of them, in such fashion that each of them may be compelled to pay the whole of it, but that when it is once paid by either of them, both are discharged from it. Obligations of this description may be called solidary, since in the language of Roman law, each of the debtors is bound in solidum instead of pro parte; that is to say, for the whole, and not for a proportionate part. A solidary obligation, therefore, may be defined as one in which two or more debtors owe the same thing to the same creditor." John Salmond, Jurisprudence 462-63 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

solidary liability. See LIABILITY.

solidary obligation. See OBLIGATION.

solidum (sol-a-dam), n. [Latin] Roman law. A whole; an undivided thing. See SOLIDARY.

solo, n. See SOLE PRACTITIONER.

Solomon Amendment. A federal law authorizing the Secretary of Defense to withhold federal funding from schools that do not allow military recruiters on their campuses or deny access equal to that enjoyed by other types of recruiters. • The amendment is named for Representative Gerald B.H. Solomon of New York. 10 USCA § 983. [Cases: Colleges and Universities C—65(2),] solo practitioner. See SOLE PRACTITIONER.

solum italicum (soh-lam i-tal-ah-kam). [Latin "Italian land"] Roman law. Land in Italy (an extension of the old ager Romanus) needing, for full ownership to pass, to be transferred by formal methods, such as mancipatio or cession in jure. Cf. SOLUM PROVINCIALE.

solum provinciale (soh-lam prov-in-shee-ay-lee). [Latin "provincial land"] Roman law. Provincial land ultimately held by the Emperor or state, with private holders having only, in theory, a possessory title without the right to transfer the property by formal methods, as distinguished from SOLUM ITALICUM. • Justian abolished all distinctions between the two, allowing all land to be conveyed by traditio. Cf. SOLUM ITALICUM.

"Ownership of provincial land. The dominium of this was in Caesar or the populus according as it was an imperial or a senatorial province . . . . The holders were practically owners, but as they were not dominii formal methods of transfer were not applicable. The holdings were however transferable informally . . . . The case disappeared when Justian abolished the distinction between italic and provincial land. Not all land in the provinces was solum provinciale; many provincial communities were given ius italicum, the chief result being that the land was in the dominium of the holder and not of the State, so that it could be transferred and claimed at law by civil law methods." W.W. Buckland, A Text-Book of Roman Law from Augustus to Justinian 190 (Peter Stein ed., 3d ed. 1963).

solutio indebiti (soh-loo-shee-oh in-deb-a-ti). [Latin "payment of what is not owing"] Roman law. Payment of a nonexistent debt. • If the payment was made in error, the recipient had a duty to give back the money.

solvency, n. (18c) The ability to pay debts as they come due. Cf. Insolvency. — solvent, adj.

solvit ad diem (sol-vit ad di-am). [Law Latin "he paid on the day"] Hist. In a debt action, a plea that the defendant paid the debt on the due date.
solvit ante diem (sol-vit an-tee di-am). [Law Latin "he paid before the day"] Hist. In a debt action, a plea that the defendant paid the money before the due date.
solvit post diem (sol-vit pohst di-am). [Law Latin "he paid after the day"] Hist. In a debt action on a bond, a plea that the defendant paid the debt after the due date but before commencement of the lawsuit.
sommambulism (sohm-mah-bul-ism). (18c) Sleep-walking. • Generally, a person will not be held criminally responsible for an act performed while in this state. See automatism.
sommolentia (sahm-oh-lent-ee-a). (1879) 1. The state of drowsiness. 2. A condition of incomplete sleep resembling drunkenness, during which part of the faculties are abnormally excited while the others are dormant; the combined condition of sleeping and wakefulness producing a temporary state of involuntary intoxication. • To the extent that it destroys moral agency, sommolentia may be a defense to a criminal charge.
son. 1. A person's male child, whether natural or adopted; a male of whom one is the parent. 2. An immediate male descendant. 3. Slang. Any young male person.
son assault demesne (sohn a-sawlt di-mayn). [French "his own assault"] The plea of self-defense in a tort action, by which the defendant alleges that the plaintiff originally engaged in an assault and that the defendant used only the force necessary to repel the plaintiff's assault and to protect person and property. See self-defense.
son-in-law. The husband of one's daughter.
Sonny Bono Copyright Term Extension Act. Copyright. A federal law extending the copyright term by 20 years for all works published in the U.S. after January 1, 1978, and settling the copyright term for works created before 1978 as 95 years from the original copyright date. • Before the extension, the copyright term was the life of the author plus 50 years. Pub. L. 103-298, 112 Stat. 2827. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property C=>33.]
Son-of-Sam law. (1981) A state statute that prohibits a convicted criminal from profiting by selling his or her story rights to a publisher or filmmaker. • State law usu. authorizes prosecutors to seize royalties from a convicted criminal and to place the money in an escrow account for the crime victim's benefit. This type of law was first enacted in New York in 1977, in response to the lucrative book deals that publishers offered David Berkowitz, the serial killer who called himself "Son of Sam." In 1992, the U.S. Supreme Court declared New York's Son-of-Sam law unconstitutional as a content-based speech regulation, prompting many states to amend their laws in an attempt to avoid constitutionality problems. Simon & Schuster, Inc. v. New York State Crime Victims Bd., 502 U.S. 105, 112 S.Ct. 501 (1992). [Cases: Criminal Law C=>1221.] sonticus (sohn-ti-kos), n. [Latin] Roman law. Serious; more than trivial. • The term was used in the Twelve Tables to refer to a serious illness (morbus sonticus) that gave a defendant a valid reason not to appear in court.

source, n. The originator or primary agent of an act, circumstance, or result <she was the source of the information> <the side business was the source of income.

source code. Copyright. The nonmachine language used by a computer programmer to create a program. If it is not included with the software sold to the public, source code is protected by trade secret laws as well as copyright and patent laws. Source code may be deposited with the U.S. Copyright Office but, because of the need to protect a trade secret, and because a skilled programmer could figure out how to duplicate the source code’s functions without necessarily copying it, strategic parts may be blacked out. Cf. object code. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property C-10.4.]

source of law. (1892) Something (such as a constitution, treaty, statute, or custom) that provides authority for legislation and for judicial decisions; a point of origin for law or legal analysis. — Also termed fons juris.

"The term 'sources of law' is ordinarily used in a much narrower sense than will be attributed to it here. In the literature of jurisprudence the problem of 'sources' relates to the question: Where does the judge obtain the rules by which to decide cases? In this sense, among the sources of law will be commonly listed: statutes, judicial precedents, custom, the opinion of experts, morality, and equity. In the usual discussions these various sources of law are analyzed and some attempt is made to state the conditions under which each can appropriately be drawn upon in the decision of legal controversies. Curiously, when a legislature is enacting law we do not talk about the 'sources' from which it derives its decision as to what the law shall be, though an analysis in these terms might more enlightening than one directed toward the more restricted function performed by judges. Our concern here will be with 'sources' in a much broader sense than is usual in the literature of jurisprudence. Our interest is not so much in sources of laws, as in sources of law. From whence does the law generally draw not only its content through governmental institutions that formulate legal rules, . . . Three, sources of law can refer to the published legal information are all sources of law.” J. Myron Jacobstein & Roy M. Mersky, Fundamentals of Legal Research 1-2 (5th ed. 1990).

"In the context of legal research, the term 'sources of law' can refer to three different concepts which should be distinguished. One, sources of law can refer to the origins of legal concepts and ideas. . . . Two, sources of law can refer to governmental institutions that formulate legal rules. . . . Three, sources of law can refer to the published manifestations of the law. The books, computer databases, microforms, optical disks, and other media that contain legal information are all sources of law.”)

sovereign, n. (13c) 1. A person, body, or state vested with independent and supreme authority. 2. The ruler of an independent state. — Also spelled sovrän. See sovereignty.

sovereign equality. Int’l law. The principle that nations have the right to enjoy territorial integrity and political independence, free from intervention by other nations. • The United Nations “is based on the principle of the sovereign equality of all its Members.” UN Charter art. 2, ¶ 1. [Cases: International Law C-10.45(1).]

sovereign immunity. See immunity (4).

sovereign people. (17c) The political body consisting of the collective number of citizens and qualified electors who possess the powers of sovereignty and exercise them through their chosen representatives.

sovereign political power. See political power.

sovereign power. (15c) 1. The power to make and enforce laws. 2. See sovereign political power under political power.

sovereign right. (16c) A unique right possessed by a state or its agencies that enables it to carry out its official functions for the public benefit, as distinguished from certain proprietary rights that it may possess like any other private person. [Cases: States C-21.]

sovereign state. (17c) 1. A state that possesses an independent existence, being complete in itself, without being merely part of a larger whole to whose government it is subject. 2. A political community whose members are bound together by the tie of common subjection to some central authority, whose commands those members must obey. — Also termed independent state. Cf. client state, nonsovereign state under state. [Cases: International Law C-3.]

"The essence of statehood is sovereignty, the principle that each nation answers only to its own domestic order and is not accountable to a larger community, save to the extent it has consented to do so. Sovereign states are thus conceived as hermetically sealed units, atoms that spin around an international orbit, sometimes colliding, sometimes cooperating, but always separate and apart.” David J. Bederman, International Law Frameworks 50 (2001).

part-sovereign state. A political community in which part of the powers of external sovereignty are exercised by the home government, and part are vested in or controlled by some other political body or bodies. • Such a state is not fully independent because by the conditions of its existence it is not allowed full freedom of action in external affairs.

sovereignty (sahv-[ə-]-rin-tee). (18c) 1. Supreme dominion, authority, or rule. [Cases: International Law C=8.]

popular sovereignty. A system of government in which policy choices reflect the preferences of the majority of citizens.

state sovereignty. See state sovereignty.

1. The supreme political authority of an independent state. 2. The state itself.

"it is well to [distinguish] the senses in which the word Sovereignty is used. In the ordinary popular sense it means Supremacy, the right to demand obedience. Although the idea of actual power is not absent, the prominent idea is that of some sort of title to exercise control. An ordinary layman would call that person (or body of persons) Sovereign in a State who is obeyed because he is acknowledged to stand at the top, whose will must be expected to prevail, who can get his own way, and make others go his, because such is the practice of the country. Etymologically the word of course means merely superiority, and familiar usage applies it in monarchies to the monarch, because he stands first in the State, be his real power great or small." James Bryce, Studies in History and Jurisprudence 504-05 (1901).

external sovereignty. The power of dealing on a nation's behalf with other national governments.

internal sovereignty. The power enjoyed by a governmental entity of a sovereign state, including affairs within its own territory and powers related to the exercise of external sovereignty.

spam. Unsolicited commercial e-mail. [Cases: Telecommunications C=1343.

sparsim (spahr-sim). [Latin] Hist. Scattered; here and there. • This term was used in several situations — for example, when an action to recover for waste not only when the injury was complete, but also when the injury was partial or scattered.

"And if waste be done sparsim, or here and there, all over a wood, the whole wood shall be recovered; or if in several rooms of a house, the whole house shall be forfeited; because it is impracticable for the reversioner to enjoy only the identical places wasted, when lying interspersed with the other. But if waste be done only in one end of a wood (or perhaps in one room of a house) if that can be conveniently separated from the rest, that part only is the locus vastatus, or thing wasted, and that only shall be forfeited to the reversioner." 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 283-84 (1766).

spatae placitum (spay-tee plas-a-tam), n. [Latin "the plea of the sword] Hist. During the reign of Henry II, a court providing swift justice in military matters.

special prosecutor. See prosecutor.
special-purpose entity. A business established to perform no function other than to develop, own, and operate a large, complex project (usu. called a single-purpose project), esp. so as to limit the number of creditors claiming against the project. • A special-purpose entity provides additional protection for project lenders, which are usu. paid only out of the money generated by the entity's business, because there will be fewer competing claims for that money and because the entity will be less likely to be forced into bankruptcy. A special-purpose entity will sometimes issue securities instead of just receiving a direct loan. — Abbr. SPE. — Also termed special-purpose vehicle (SPV). See bankruptcy-remote entity; single-purpose project; project financing under financing. special-purpose property. See property.
special-purpose vehicle. See special-purpose entity. special reference. See reference. special registration. See registration (1). special relationship. See relationship.
special-relationship doctrine. (1981) The theory that if a state has assumed control over an individual sufficient to trigger an affirmative duty to protect that individual (as in an involuntary hospitalization or custody), then the state may be liable for the harm inflicted on the individual by a third party. • This is an exception to the general principle prohibiting members of the public from suing state employees for failing to protect them from third parties. • Also termed special-relationship exception. Cf. danger-creation doctrine. [Cases: States C-112.2(2)].
special relief. Copyright. A variance from a formal requirement for copyright registration or deposit granted by the U.S. Copyright Office when an applicant shows a good reason for the variance. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property C-50.20].

specie (spee-shee). See in specie. species (spee-shee). 1. A taxonomic class of organisms uniquely distinguished from other classes by shared characteristics and usu. by an inability to interbreed with members of other classes.
candidate species. Environmental law. Plants and animals identified by the Fish and Wildlife Service or National Marine Fisheries Service as potentially endangered or threatened but not of high enough priority to develop a proposed listing regulation under the Endangered Species Act. • Candidate species are not protected by federal law. • Abbrev. SUP. • Also termed listed species.
endangered species. A species in danger of becoming extinct; esp., under federal law, a species that is in danger of extinction throughout all or a significant part of its range. • Federal law excludes from the definition a species of the class Insecta if the Environmental Protection Agency determines that it constitutes a pest whose protection would present a significant risk to the human population. 50 CFR § 81. [Cases: Environmental Law C-528].
listed species. See candidate species. threatened species. A species that, within the foreseeable future, is likely to become an endangered species throughout all or a significant part of its range. 16 species facti. See SPECIFICATION. (I7c) 1. The act of making a detailed statement of how an invention is made and used, the best mode of operation of the claimed invention, and the inventor's claims. • The specification must be clear and complete enough to enable a person of ordinary skill in the art to make and use the invention. It must also disclose the best mode of working the invention. The term may also refer to the description as separate from the claims. — Abbr. spec. Cf. PATENT CLAIM. [Cases: Patents C\Rightarrow 99.]

species claim. See PATENT CLAIM. See PATENT CLAIM. [Cases: Patents 199(1).] 2. The statement so made. 3. Other items to be provided under a contract. [Cases: Contracts 199(1).] A defendant's claim that he or she did not have the capacity (often supposedly because of intoxication or mental illness) to form the intent necessary for committing the crime alleged. [Cases: Criminal Law C\Rightarrow 48–51, 55.]

specific. adj. 1. Of, relating to, or designating a particular or defined thing; explicit <specific duties>. 2. Of or relating to a particular named thing <specific item>.

specific, adj. The phrase appeared in reference to the specific criminal act or civil wrong alleged.

specific, adv.

specificatio (spee-shee-oh), n. [Latin from species "form" + facere "to make"] Roman & civil law. 1. A giving of form to materials; the process of making something new from existing property. 2. A mode of acquisition by which a person makes something new from existing material (for example, wine from grapes or a ship from timber). See ACCESION (4). Pl. specifications.

"Specificatio. This may be described as acquisition of a new thing by making it, out of materials wholly or partly belonging to another person. We shall deal only with the case in which the materials are wholly another's. There was in classical law a conflict of opinion on this topic. . . . Justinian tells us that there had been a media sententia according to which it belonged to the maker if (I) it was irreducible to its former state, and (ii) it really was a nova species, where species means thing. And this view he adopts as law." W.W. Buckland, A Manual of Roman Private Law 143 (2d ed. 1953).

specification. (17c) 1. The act of making a detailed statement, esp. of the measurements, quality, materials, or other items to be provided under a contract. [Cases: Contracts C\Rightarrow 199(1).] 2. The statement so made. 3. Patents. The part of a patent application describing how an invention is made and used, the best mode of operation of the claimed invention, and the inventor's claims. • The specification must be clear and complete enough to enable a person of ordinary skill in the art to make and use the invention. It must also disclose the best mode of working the invention. The term may also refer to the description as separate from the claims. — Abbr. spec. Cf. PATENT CLAIM. [Cases: Patents C\Rightarrow 99.]

substitute specification. A patent specification that is rewritten (1) to include amendments made to the specification after filing; (2) to replace an illegible or unreadable original; or (3) to prepare the papers for printing. • A substitute specification must be accompanied by a statement that it contains no new matter, and by a copy showing what has been added and deleted since the original specification. Substitute specifications are allowed under 37 CFR 1.125. — Also termed rewritten specification. [Cases: Patents C\Rightarrow 109.] specific performance. (18c) The rendering, as nearly as practicable, of a promised performance through a judgment or decree; specifically, a court-ordered remedy that requires precise fulfillment of a legal or contractual obligation when monetary damages are inappropriate or inadequate, when the sale of real estate or a rare article is involved. • Specific performance is an equitable remedy that lies within the court's discretion to award whenever the common-law remedy is insufficient, either because damages would be inadequate or because the damages could not possibly be established. — Also termed specific relief. [Cases: Specific Performance ⇓ 1.]

"In essence, the remedy of specific performance enforces the execution of a contract according to its terms, and it may therefore be contrasted with the remedy of damages, which is compensation for non-execution. In specific performance, execution of the contract is enforced by the power of the Court to treat disobedience of its decree as contempt, for which the offender may be imprisoned until he is prepared to comply with the decree. Actually, it is not strictly accurate to say that the Court enforces execution of the contract according to its terms, for the Court will not usually intervene until default upon the contract has occurred, so that enforcement by the Court is later in time than performance carried out by the person bound, without the intervention of the Court." C.W. Keeton, An Introduction to Equity 304 (5th ed. 1961).

specific personal jurisdiction. See jurisdiction.

specific policy. See basic-form policy under insurance policy.

specific-purpose rule. Insurance. The principle that a nonowner driver of a vehicle is treated as an omnibus insured under the vehicle owner's liability coverage only if the driver's actual use of the vehicle at the time of the accident is the exact use that the owner contemplated when granting permission or consent to the nonowner driver. • The time at which the bailment of the vehicle was to expire must not have passed, the place where the vehicle was being used must be as specified or contemplated by the insured, and the use of the vehicle must comport with the type of use that the insured had in mind when the bailment was created. Otherwise, the permittee's use of the vehicle will be regarded as a conversion. — Also termed conversion rule; strict rule. [Cases: Insurance ⇓ 2667.]

specific relief. See specific performance.

specific remedy. See remedy.

specific tax. See tax.

specific traverse. See common traverse under traverse.

specimen. An actual sample of something; esp., an example of a trademark as it is used in commerce. • In the field of trademarks, a specimen typically consists of a label, a container, a display, or a photograph of the mark used for selling or advertising the goods or services. Speech or Debate Clause. (1965) The clause of the U.S. Constitution giving members of Congress immunity for statements made during debate in either the House or the Senate. • This immunity is extended to other areas where it is necessary to prevent impairment of deliberations and other legitimate legislative activities, such as subpoenaing bank records for an investigation. U.S. Const. art. I, § 6., cl. 1. — Also termed Speech and Debate Clause. See congressional immunity under immunity (1). [Cases: United States C=;12.] speech-plus. See symbolic speech under speech.

speedy execution. See execution.

speedy remedy. See remedy.

speedy trial. (18c) Criminal procedure. A trial that the prosecution, with reasonable diligence, begins promptly and conducts expeditiously. • The Sixth Amendment secures the right to a speedy trial. In deciding whether an accused has been deprived of that right, courts generally consider the length of and reason for the delay, and the prejudice to the accused. [Cases: Criminal Law C=;577.1–577.16.]

Speedy Trial Act of 1974. A federal statute establishing time limits for carrying out the major events (such as information, indictment, arraignment, and trial commencement) in the prosecution of federal criminal cases. 18 USCA §§ 3161–3174. [Cases: Criminal Law C=;577.2, 577.5.]

spes successionis (speez sak-sesh-ee-ohn-is). [Latin “hope of succession”] Hope of succeeding to a right.

“A mere spes successionis must be distinguished from a contingent right. If Matilda has nursed her invalid friend for thirty years, she may have every hope of succeeding to the property, but she has no right.” George Whitecross Paton, A Textbook of Jurisprudence 306 (C.W. Paton & David P. Derham eds., 4th ed. 1972).

spes successionis in destinatione (speez sak-ses[h]-ee-ohn-is in des-ty-nay-shoo-ohn-ni), [Law Latin] Hist. A hope of succession under a destination (that is, an appointment by will).

Spiegelberg doctrine. Labor law. The policy of the National Labor Relations Board to defer to an arbitrator’s decision regarding a contract dispute if (1) the decision is not repugnant to the NLRB, (2) the arbitration proceedings provided a hearing as fair as would have been provided before the NLRB, and (3) the contract requires binding arbitration, Spielberg Mfg. Co., 112 NLRB Dec. (CCH) 86 (1955). Cf. Collyer doctrine.

“In Spielberg Mfg. Co. (1955), the Board announced its policy of dismissing an unfair labor practice complaint in deference to an arbitration award already rendered, provided the arbitral procedures were fair and the award was not repugnant to the policies of the Labor Act. . . . The Supreme Court in several cases cited the Board’s deferral policy with approval, noting that the Board has discretion to respect an arbitration award and that arbitration of disputes contributes to industrial peace and stability.” Robert A. Gorman, Basic Text on Labor Law: Unionization and Collective Bargaining 751 (1976).

spigurnel (spig-ur-nel), n. Hist. An early officer of the Chancery, equivalent to the Sealer of the king’s writs in later times.

spillover. See externality.

spillover theory. (1985) The principle that a severance must be granted only when a defendant can show that a trial with a codefendant would substantially prejudice the defendant’s case, as when the jury might wrongly use evidence against the defendant. See Bruton error. [Cases: Criminal Law C=;622.7(8).]

“... The spillover theory involves the question of whether a jury’s unfavorable impression of a defendant against whom the evidence is properly admitted will influence the way the jurors view a codefendant . . . . The test . . . is whether the jury can keep separate the evidence that is relevant to spoliation (spoh-lee-ay-shan), n. (18c) 1. The intentional destruction, mutilation, alteration, or concealment of evidence, usu. a document. • If proved, spoliation may be used to establish that the evidence was unfavorable to the party responsible. [Cases: Evidence C=78; Federal Civil Procedure C=1636; Pretrial Procedure C=434.] 2. The seizure of personal or real property by violent means; the act of pillaging. 3. The taking of a benefit properly belonging to another. 4. Eccles. law. The wrongful deprivation of a cleric of his benefice. — spoliate (spoh-lee-ayt), vb. — spoliator (spoh-lee-aytor), n.

spolium (spoh-lee-um), n. [Latin "booty"] Roman law. Something taken from an enemy in war or plundered from a fellow-citizen. • The plural spolia was more common than the singular.

Spondesne? Spondoe (spon-deez spon-dee-oh). [Latin] Roman law. Do you agree to undertake? I undertake. • This was the special phrase, available only to citizens, that created a sponsio. See SPONSIO; STIPULATIO.

spondet peritiam artis (spon-det-pur-ee-aymahr-teez). [Latin "he guarantees his professional skill"] Hist. He promised to use the skill of his art. • This phrase is used in construction contracts to indicate an implied agreement to perform in a workmanlike manner.

sponge tax. See pickup tax under TAX.
sponsalia (spon-say-lie-a), n. [Latin] Hist. 1. A betrothal; an engagement to marry. 2. An engagement gift. — Also termed stipulatio sponsalitiae.

sponsalia per verba de futuro (spon-say-lie-a per var-ba de f(y)oo-t(y)oo-oh). [Latin "espousals by words about the future"] Hist. A promise to marry in the future.

"[A promise to marry in the future (sponsalia per verba de futuro) gave rise only to an executory contract of marriage. The regular way of executing the contract was to solemnise the marriage, using present words. But the Canon law acknowledged that it could also be turned into the indissoluble bond of present maternity by physical consumption. ...] Thus, in the absence of carnal copulation, the validity of a marriage had come to depend on whether the contract was by words de praesenti or de futuro ... It is hardly surprising that it gave rise to so much wrangling and fraud, and that the commonest species of matrimonial suit in the medieval consistory courts was to interpret and enforce 'espousals.'" J.H. Baker, An Introduction to English Legal History 546 (3rd ed. 1990).

sponsalia per verba de praesenti (spon-say-lie-a par var-ba de pri-zen-ti or pre-e). Eccles. law. A type of informal marriage that occurred when the parties made an informal agreement to have each other as husband and wife. • This type of informal marriage was based on nothing more than the present consent to be married but was entirely valid and would take precedence over a later formal ceremonial marriage that either of the parties attempted to contract with someone else.

sponsio (spon-shi-oh), n. [Latin] Roman law. An undertaking, available only to citizens, in the form of an answer to a question using a solemn form of words with religious overtones. • This was the original form of stipulation. See stipulatio.

sponsio judicialis (spon-shi-oh joo-dish-ee-ay-lis). [Latin] Roman law. A formal promise that the judge is entitled to acquire by virtue of his office. Pl. sponsores judiciales.

sponsio ludicra (spon-shi-oh loo-di-kray). [Latin "a laughable promise"] 1. Civil law. An informal or illicit understanding that is not enforceable. 2. Scots law. An obligation that a court will not enforce because it does not concern a worthy subject; e.g., a gambling agreement. Pl. sponsores ludicrae.

sponsio (spon-shi-oh), n. [fr. Latin spondere "to engage"] 1. The formal pledge by which a person becomes a surety. 2. Int'l law. An ultra vires promise of an official agent (such as a general in wartime), requiring later ratification by the principal. 3. Roman law. A form of guarantee accessory to an oral contract. • Only Roman citizens could make this type of guarantee. See adpromission (1). — sponsional (spon-sha-lay), adj.

SPV. abbr. Special-purpose vehicle. See special-purpose entity.

spy. One who secretly observes and collects secret information or intelligence about what another government or company is doing or plans to do; one who commits espionage. See espionage.

"This term means merely the strictness of imprisonment which a creditor is entitled to enforce, with the view of compelling the debtor to pay the debt, or disclose any funds which he may have concealed. It does not imply (as it did with the ancient churchmen, from whom the term is derived) anything loathsome or unhealthy in the imprisonment in Scotland, which is indeed less close than in England. Squaller carceris is not necessary in imprisonment on meditatio fugae warrant, security being all that is required in such cases." William Bell, Bell's Dictionary and Digest of the Law of Scotland 1032 (George Watson ed., 7th ed. 1890).

square, n. (17c) 1. A certain portion of land within a city limit. — Also termed block. [Cases: Municipal Corporations C=721(1)]. 2. A space set apart for public use. 3. In a government survey, an area measuring 24 by 24 miles.

squatter. (18c) 1. A person who settles on property without any legal claim or title. 2. A person who settles on public land under a government regulation allowing the person to acquire title upon fulfilling specified conditions. [Cases: Public Lands C=35,] squeeze-out, n. An action taken in an attempt to eliminate or reduce a minority interest in a corporation. Cf. FREEZE-OUT. [Cases: Corporations C=182.3, 584.]

Squires claim. See PATENT CLAIM.

Squires doctrine. Patents. A rule of the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office that a utility-patent claim may incorporate drawings or tables by reference, but only when there is no practical way to express the information in words, and when referring to the artwork is a concise way to communicate the information. • The namesake case involved a numerical font designed to be readable in the dim red light inside a submarine. It is allowed only when necessary, and is not available just for the convenience of an applicant. Ex parte Squires, 133 USPQ (BNA) 598 (Bd. App. 1961). [Cases: Patents C=100.]

SRO. abbr. See SELF-REGULATORY ORGANIZATION.

ss. abbr. 1. Sections. 2. Subscripti (i.e., signed below). 3. Sans (i.e., without). 4. (Erroneously) scilicet.

"Many possible etymologies have been suggested for this mysterious abbreviation. One is that it signifies scilicet (= namely, to wit), which is usually abbreviated sc. or scil. Another is that ss. represents "the two gold letters at the ends of the chain of office or "collar" worn by the Lord Chief Justice of the King's Bench . . . ." Max Radin, Law Dictionary 327 (1955). Mallinoff suggests that the precise etymology is unknown. "Lawyers have been using ss for nine hundred years and still are not sure what it means." David Mallinoff, The Language of the Law 296 (1963). In fact, though, it is a flourish deriving from the Year Books — an equivalent of the paragraph mark. • Hence Lord Hardwicke's statement that ss. is nothing more than a division mark. See Jodderrell v. Cowell, 95 Eng. Rep. 222, 222 (K.B. 1737) . . . . An early formbook writer incorporated it into his forms, and ever since it has been mindlessly perpetuated by one generation after another." Bryan A. Garner, A Dictionary of Modern Usage 825 (2d ed. 1995).

SSA. abbr. SOCIAL SECURITY ADMINISTRATION.

SSDI. abbr. SOCIAL SECURITY DISABILITY INSURANCE.

SSI. abbr. SUPPLEMENTAL SECURITY INSURANCE.

SSS. abbr. SELECTIVE SERVICE SYSTEM.

stabilize, vb. 1. To make firm or steadfast <to stabilize the ship>. 2. To maintain a particular level or amount <stabilize prices>.

stable stand. Hist. In forest law, a person found standing in a forest either with a bow bent, ready to shoot a deer, or close to a tree with greyhounds on a leash and ready to slip, being presumptive evidence of an intent to steal the Crown's deer.

stacking. (1982) 1. Insurance. The process of obtaining benefits from a second policy on the same claim when recovery from the first policy alone would be inadequate. [Cases: Insurance C=2108, 2799.] judicial stacking. The principle that a court can construe insurance policies to permit stacking, under certain circumstances, when the policies do not specifi­cally allow stacking but public policy is best served by permitting it. [Cases: Insurance C=2108.]

policy stacking. Stacking that is permitted by the express terms of an insurance policy. [Cases: Insurance C=2108.]

2. A gerrymandering technique in which a large political or racial group is combined in the same district with a larger opposition group. Cf. CRACKING; PACKING. [Cases: Elections C=1260.]

staff attorney. 1. See ATTORNEY. 2. See clerk (5).

staff director. See EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR.

staff judge advocate. See JUDGE ADVOCATE.

stagflation (stag- flay-shn), n. A period of slow economic growth or recession characterized by high inflation, stagnant consumer demand, and high unemployment. — stagflationary, adj.

staggered board of directors. See BOARD OF DIRECTORS.

stagiaiurs (staj-i-a-er-e-es), n. [Latin] Hist. 1. Ecclesi. law. A resident canon; an ecclesiastical bound to keep terms of residence. 2. A stagiary; a law student keeping terms before admission to the bar.

stake, n. (bef. 12c) 1. Something (such as property) deposited by two or more parties with a third party pending the resolution of a dispute; the subject matter of an interpleader. [Cases: Interpleader C=21.] 2. An interest or share in a business venture. 3. Something (esp. money) bet in a wager, game, or contest. [Cases: Gaming C=1, 67.] 4. A boundary marker used in land surveys. [Cases: Boundaries C=5.]

stakeholder. (18c) 1. A disinterested third party who holds money or property, the right to which is disputed between two or more other parties. See INTERPLEADER. [Cases: Interpleader C=13.] 2. A person who has an interest or concern in a business or enterprise, though not necessarily as an owner. 3. One who holds the money or valuables bet by others in a wager. [Cases: Gaming C=27, 72.5.]

stale check. See CHECK.

stale claim. See CLAIM (3).

Stalingrad defense. See DEFENSE (2).

stalking. (bef. 12c) 1. The act or an instance of following another by stealth. 2. The offense of following or loitering near another, often surreptitiously, to annoy or harass that person or to commit a further crime such as assault or battery. • Some statutory definitions include an element that the person being stalked must reasonably feel harassed, alarmed, or distressed about personal safety or the safety of one or more persons for whom that person is responsible. And some definitions include acts such as telephoning another and remaining silent during the call. Cf. CYBERSTALKING. [Cases: Extortion and Threats C=251.]

stallage (stawl-ij), n. Hist. 1. The right to erect stalls in public markets. 2. The cost for that right.
stamp, n. (15c) An official mark or seal placed on a document, esp. to indicate that a required tax (such as duty or excise tax) has been paid. [Cases: Bills and Notes 2218, Internal Revenue 4390–4409; Taxation 2218, 3679.]

stamp acts. English statutes requiring and regulating stamps on deeds, contracts, legal papers, bills, or other documents.

stamp duty. Hist. A tax raised by requiring stamps sold by the government to be affixed to designated documents, thus forming part of the perpetual revenue. See stamp tax under TAX. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4390–4409; Taxation 2218.]

“A fifth branch of the perpetual revenue consists in the stamp duties, which are a tax imposed upon all parchment and paper wherein any legal proceedings, or private instruments of almost any nature whatsoever, are written; and also upon licenses . . . and pamphlets containing less than six sheets of paper. These imposts are very various, according to the nature of the thing stamped, rising gradually from a penny to ten pounds.” 1 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 312–13 (1765).

stamp tax. See TAX.

stand. See witness stand.

stand adjourned. (Of a meeting or proceeding) to be in a stand. See WITNESS STAND.

stand. n. (15c) 1. A model accepted as correct by custom, consent, or authority <what is the standard in the ant-farm industry?>. 2. A criterion for measuring acceptability, quality, or accuracy <the attorney was making a nice living — even by New York standards>. — standard, adj.

objective standard. (1915) A legal standard that is based on conduct and perceptions external to a particular person. • In tort law, for example, the reasonable-person standard is considered an objective standard because it does not require a determination of what the defendant was thinking.

subjective standard. (1915) A legal standard that is peculiar to a particular person and based on the person’s individual views and experiences. • In criminal law, for example, a subjective standard applies to determine premediation because it depends on the defendant’s mental state.

Standard & Poor’s. An investment-analysis and advisory service. • Standard & Poor’s rates the financial strength of businesses from AAA (strongest) to AA, A, BBB, and so on to CCC. Most grades may also be modified with a plus- or minus-sign according to the business’s relative strength among similar companies. A rating of R means that the company is the subject of some regulatory action.

standard characteristics. See standard descriptive characteristics.

standard deduction. See DEDUCTION.

standard descriptive characteristics. Parliamentary law. The basic rules that apply to and define a motion. • The characteristics include when the motion is in order; its rank — that is, what it takes precedence over, and what yields to it; whether making it may interrupt a speaker; whether it needs a second; whether it is debatable; whether it is amendable; what vote its adoption takes; and whether it can be reconsidered. — Also termed standard characteristics.

standard-form contract. See CONTRACT.

standard instruction. See JURY INSTRUCTION.

standardized contract. See standard-form contract under CONTRACT.

standard mortgage clause. See MORTGAGE CLAUSE.

standard of care. (1890) Torts. In the law of negligence, the degree of care that a reasonable person should exercise. See CARE (2). [Cases: Negligence 230–233.]

standard of need. In public-assistance law, the total subsistence resources required by an individual or family unit as determined by a state and, when unsatisfied by available resources, entitles the individual or family unit to public assistance. [Cases: Social Security and Public Welfare 4.10, 194.7.]

standard of proof. (1922) The degree or level of proof demanded in a specific case, such as “beyond a reasonable doubt” or “by a preponderance of the evidence.” See BURDEN OF PERSUASION. [Cases: Criminal Law 560; Evidence 596.]

standard of review. The criterion by which an appellate court exercising appellate jurisdiction measures the constitutionality of a statute or the propriety of an order, finding, or judgment entered by a lower court. [Cases: Appeal and Error 836–1099; Criminal Law 1134.1–1180; Federal Courts 751–917.]

standard policy. See INSURANCE POLICY.

standard-setting organization. A body that sets, describes, or documents uniform operating, technological, or other norms for participants in a particular field or industry. — Also termed standards body.

Standards for Imposing Lawyer Sanctions. The ABA’s 1986 supplement to the Standards for Lawyer Discipline, prescribing a range of sanctions and guidelines for applying them. • Sanctions range from reprimands to disbarment. [Cases: Attorney and Client 59.5(2).]

Standards for Lawyer Discipline. A set of model rules, created by the ABA in 1979, establishing procedures for disciplining lawyers who violate ethics rules or commit crimes. • The rules stress that the process is an inquiry to determine an attorney’s fitness to practice, not to determine a punishment.

stand at ease. Parliamentary law. To take an informal pause during a meeting without taking a recess, at the instance of the chair.
standby charge. A property levy, often based on acreage, imposed on the mere availability of a service, whether or not the service is actually used.

standby commitment. An arrangement between an underwriter and an issuer of securities whereby the underwriter agrees, for a fee, to buy any unsold shares remaining after the public offering. — Also termed standby underwriting agreement.

standby counsel. See counsel.

standby guardian. See guardian.

standby guardianship. See guardianship.

standby letter of credit. See letter of credit.

standby trust. See trust.

standby underwriting. See underwriting.

standby underwriting agreement. See standby commitment.

standing, n. (1924) A party’s right to make a legal claim or seek judicial enforcement of a duty or right. • To have standing in federal court, a plaintiff must show (1) that the challenged conduct has caused the plaintiff actual injury, and (2) that the interest sought to be protected is within the zone of interests meant to be regulated by the statutory or constitutional guarantee in question. — Also termed standing to sue. Cf. justiciability. [Cases: Action ⊂ 13; Federal Civil Procedure ⊂ 103.1.]

“Have the appellants alleged such a personal stake in the outcome of the controversy as to assure that concrete adverseness which sharpens the presentation of issues upon which the court so largely depends for illumination of difficult constitutional questions? This is the gist of the question of standing.” Baker v. Carr, 369 U.S. 186, 204, 82 S.Ct. 691, 703 (1962) (Brennan, J.).

“The word standing is rather recent in the basic judicial vocabulary and does not appear to have been commonly used until the middle of our own century. No authority that I have found introduces the term with proper explanations and apologies and announces that henceforth standing should be used to describe who may be heard by a judge. Nor was there any sudden adoption by tacit consent. The word appears here and there, spreading very gradually with no discernible pattern. Judges and lawyers found themselves using the term and did not ask why they did so or where it came from.” Joseph Vining, Legal Identity 55 (1978).

third-party standing. (1968) Standing held by someone claiming to protect the rights of others. • For example, in most jurisdictions, only a parent has standing to bring a suit for custody or visitation; in some, however, a third party — for instance, a grandparent or a person with whom the child has substantial contacts — may have standing to bring an action for custody or visitation. See grandparent rights. [Cases: Action ⊂ 13; Child Custody ⊂ 409; Federal Civil Procedure ⊂ 103.4.]

standing aside a juror. The prosecution practice of provisionally placing a juror aside until the panel is exhausted, without providing a reason, instead of challenging the juror or showing cause. • The practice originally developed as a method of avoiding the Challenge of Jurors Act (1305), which prohibited the Crown from challenging a juror without showing cause. A similar practice was formerly used in Pennsylvania. [Cases: Jury ⊂ 122.]

standing by. (14c) 1. The awaiting of an opportunity to respond, as with assistance. 2. Silence or inaction when there is a duty to speak or act; esp., the tacit possession of knowledge under circumstances requiring the possessor to reveal the knowledge. See estoppel by silence under estoppel.

standing committee. See committee.

Standing Committee on Rules of Practice and Procedure. A group of judges, lawyers, and legal scholars appointed by the Chief Justice of the United States to advise the Judicial Conference of the United States on possible amendments to the procedural rules in the various federal courts and on other issues relating to the operation of the federal courts. 28 USCA § 331.

“[Under 28 USCA § 331], the Judicial Conference of the United States has created a Standing Committee on Rules of Practice and Procedure and has authorized the appointment from time to time of various advisory committees. These committees make recommendations regarding amendments of the rules to the Judicial Conference, which in turn transmits those recommendations it approves to the Supreme Court. Under this new plan, as under the machinery in effect from 1934 to 1956, the Court retains the ultimate responsibility for the adoption of amendments to the rules.” 4 Charles Alan Wright & Arthur R. Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure § 1007, at 35 (2d ed. 1987).

standing crops. See crops.

standing division. See standing vote under vote (4).

standing master. See master.

standing mortgage. See interest-only mortgage under mortgage.

standing mute. See mute (2).

standing offer. See offer.

standing order. See order (2).

standing rule. See rule (3).

standing seised to uses. The holding of title for the benefit or use of another, such as a relative in consideration of blood or marriage. • A covenant to stand seised to uses is a type of conveyance that depends on the Statute of Uses for its effect. — Often shortened to seised to uses. See statute of uses.

standing to sue. See standing.

standing vote. See vote (4).

stand mute. (16c) 1. (Of a defendant) to refuse to enter a plea to a criminal charge. • Standing mute is treated as a plea of not guilty. [Cases: Criminal Law ⊂ 300.] 2. (Of any party) to raise no objections.

standstill agreement. (1934) Any agreement to refrain from taking further action; esp., an agreement by which a party agrees to refrain from further attempts to take over a corporation (as by making no tender offer) for a specified period, or by which financial institutions agree not to call bonds or loans when due.
stare trial. (17c) To submit to a legal proceeding, esp. a criminal prosecution.

staple (stay-pal). 1. A key commodity such as wool, leather, tin, lead, butter, or cheese (collectively termed the staple). 2. Hist. A town appointed by the Crown as an exclusive market for staple products. See statute staple. 3. Patents. An unpatented thing or material that is a component of a patented product or is used in a patented process, but also has other practical uses. Patentees may not gain control of the market for staples through tying agreements. Cf. nonstaple.

Star Chamber. 1. Hist. An English court having broad civil and criminal jurisdiction at the king’s discretion and noted for its secretive, arbitrary, and oppressive procedures, including compulsory self-incrimination, inquisitorial investigation, and the absence of juries. The Star Chamber was abolished in 1641 because of its abuses of power. — Also termed Court of Star Chamber; Camera Stellata. 2. (usu. Ic.) Any secretive, arbitrary, or oppressive tribunal or proceeding.

stare decisis (stahr-ee di-SI-sis or stare-ee), n. [Latin “to stand by things decided”] (18c) The doctrine of precedent, under which a court must follow earlier judicial decisions when the same points arise again in litigation. See precedent; non quieta movere. Cf. res judicata; law of the case; (in civil law) jurisprudence constantia under jurisprudence. [Cases: Courts C=95(1).]

“The rule of adherence to judicial precedents finds its expression in the doctrine of stare decisis. This doctrine is simply that, when a point or principle of law has been once officially decided or settled by the ruling of a competent court in a case in which it is directly and necessarily involved, it will no longer be considered as open to examination or to a new ruling by the same tribunal, or by those which are bound to follow its adjudications, unless it be for urgent reasons and in exceptional cases.” William M. Lile et al., Brief Making and the Use of Law Books 321 (3rd ed. 1914).

“The general orthodox interpretation of stare decisis . . . is stare rationibus decidenti (keep to the rationes decidendi of past cases), but a narrower and more literal interpretation is sometimes employed. To appreciate this narrower interpretation it is necessary to refer . . . to Lord Halsbury’s assertion that a case is only authority for what it actually decides. We saw that situations can arise in which all that is binding is the decision. According to Lord Reid, such a situation arises when the ratio decidendi of a previous case is obscure, out of accord with authority or established principle, or too broadly expressed.” Rupert Cross & J.W. Harris, Precedent in English Law 100–01 (4th ed. 1991).

horizontal stare decisis. The doctrine that a court, esp. an appellate court, must adhere to its own prior decisions, unless it finds compelling reasons to overrule itself. [Cases: Courts C=95(1).]

super stare decisis. The theory that courts must follow earlier court decisions without considering whether those decisions were correct. Critics argue that strict adherence to old decisions can result in grave injustices and cite as an example the repudiation of Plessy v. Ferguson, 163 U.S. 537, 16 S.Ct. 1138 (1896) by Brown v. Board of Education, 347 U.S. 483, 74 S.Ct. 686 (1954).

vertical stare decisis. The doctrine that a court must strictly follow the decisions handed down by higher courts within the same jurisdiction. [Cases: Courts C=—95(1).]

stare decisis et non quieta movere (stair-ee di-SI-sis et non kwit-ee-to moo-ver-ee), [Latin] To stand by things decided, and not to disturb settled points. See stare decisis.

stare enim religioni debet (stair-ee ee-nim ri-lrij-ee-oh-nee dee-bet or deb-ee), [Latin] Hist. For one ought to abide by one’s solemn obligation.

stare in judicio (stair-ee ee-in-joo-dish-ee-oh), [Latin] Hist. To appear before a tribunal as either a plaintiff or a defendant.

star paging, n. (1873) 1. A method of referring to a page in an earlier edition of a book, esp. a legal source. This method correlates the pagination of the later edition with that of the earlier (usu. the first) edition. 2. By extension, the method of displaying on a computer screen the page breaks that occur in printed documents such as law reports and law reviews. — Also termed star pagination. — star page, n.

starr (stahr), n. [fr. Latin starrum fr. Hebrew sh’tar “a writing”] Hist. A Jewish contract (esp. for release of an obligation) that Richard I declared to be invalid unless it was placed in a lawful repository, the largest being in the king’s Exchequer at Westminster. — Also termed stara.

“It is well known that, before the banishment of the Jews under Edward I, their contracts and obligations were denounced in our ancient records stara or starrs, from a corruption of the Hebrew word, sheṭar, a covenant. . . . These starrs, by an ordinance of Richard the first . . . were commanded to be enrolled and deposited in chests under three keys in certain places; one, and the most considerable, of which was in the king’s exchequer at Westminster. . . . The room at the exchequer, where the chests containing these starrs were kept, was probably called the starr chamber, and, when the Jews were expelled from the kingdom, was applied to the use of the king’s council, when sitting in their judicial capacity.” 4 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 263 n.a (1769).

stash, vb. To hide or conceal (money or property).

stat. abbr. statute.

state, n. (16c) 1. The political system of a body of people who are politically organized; the system of rules by which jurisdiction and authority are exercised over such a body of people <separation of church and state>. — Also termed political society. Cf. nation. [Cases: International Law C=3].

“A state is a community of persons living within certain limits of territory, under a permanent organization which aims to secure the prevalence of justice by self-imposed law. The organ of the state by which its relations with other states are managed is the government.” Theodore D. Woolsey, Introduction to the Study of International Law § 36, at 34 (5th ed. 1878).
A state or political society is an association of human beings established for the attainment of certain ends by certain means. It is the most important of all the various kinds of society in which men unite, being indeed the necessary basis and condition of peace, order, and civilization. What then is the difference between this and other forms of association? In what does the state differ from such other societies as a church, a university, a joint-stock company, or a trade union? The difference is clearly one of function. The state must be defined by reference to such of its activities and purposes as are essential and characteristic.

"A state is an institution, that is to say, it is a system of relations which men establish among themselves as a means of securing certain objects, of which the most fundamental is a system of order within which their activities can be carried on. Modern states are territorial; their governments exercise control over persons and things within their frontiers, and today the whole of the habitable world is divided between about seventy of these territorial states. A state should not be confused with the whole community of persons living on its territory; it is only one among a multitude of other institutions, such as churches and corporations, which a community establishes for securing different objects, though obviously it is one of tremendous importance, none the less it is not, except in the ideology of totalitarianism, an all-embracing institution, not something from which, or within which, all other institutions and associations have their being, many institutions, e.g. the Roman Catholic Church, and many associations, e.g. federations of employers and of workers, transcend the boundaries of any single state." J.L. Bribery, The Law of Nations 118 (5th ed. 1955).

client state. A country that is obliged in some degree to cede some of the control of its external relations to some foreign power or powers. — Also termed satellite state. Cf. SOVEREIGN STATE.

composite state. A state that comprises an aggregate or group of constituent states.

dependent state. See NONSOVEREIGN STATE.

federal state. A composite state in which the sovereignty of the entire state is divided between the central or federal government and the local governments of the several constituent states; a union of states in which the control of the external relations of all the member states has been surrendered to a central government so that the only state that exists for international purposes is the one formed by the union. Cf. confederation of states under CONFEDERATION.

imperial state. Archaic. A composite state in which a common or central government possesses in itself the entire sovereignty, so that the constituent states possess no portion of this sovereignty.

nonsovereign state. A state that is a constituent part of a greater state that includes both it and one or more others, and to whose government it is subject; a state that is not complete and self-existent. • Among other things, a nonsovereign state has no power to engage in foreign relations. — Also termed dependent state. Cf. SOVEREIGN STATE.

part-sovereign state. See SOVEREIGN STATE.

police state. A state in which the political, economic, and social life of its citizens is subject to repressive governmental control and arbitrary uses of power by the ruling elite, which uses the police as the instrument of control; a totalitarian state.

receiving state. The country to which a diplomatic agent or consul is sent by the country represented by that agent. Cf. sending state. [Cases: ambassadors and consuls <3>3.] satellitestate. See client state.

sending state. The country from which a diplomatic agent or consul is sent abroad. Cf. receiving state. [Cases: ambassadors and consuls <3>3.] simple state. See unitary state.

social-service state. A state that uses its power to create laws and regulations to provide for the welfare of its citizens.

sovereign state. See SOVEREIGN STATE.

unitary state. A state that is not made up of territorial divisions that are states themselves. — Also termed (archaically) simple state.

2. An institution of self-government within a larger political entity; esp., one of the constituent parts of a nation having a federal government <the 50 states>. [Cases: States <3>1.] 3. (often cap.) The people of a state, collectively considered as the party wronged by a criminal deed; esp., the prosecution as the representative of the people <the State rests its case>.

state action. (1893) Anything done by a government; esp., in constitutional law, an intrusion on a person's rights (esp. civil rights) either by a governmental entity or by a private requirement that can be enforced only by governmental action (such as a racially restrictive covenant, which requires judicial action for enforcement). [Cases: Civil Rights <1>1325; Constitutional Law <1>1061.]

state-action doctrine. Antitrust. The principle that the antitrust laws do not prohibit a state's anticompetitive acts, or official acts directed by a state. Parker v. Brown, 317 U.S. 341, 63 S.Ct. 307 (1943). — Also termed Parker doctrine. See MIDDLE TEST. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation <1>901.]

state agency. See AGENCY (3).

state-all-facts interrogatory. See identification interrogatory under INTERROGATORY.

state appeal. See APPEAL.

state auditor. See AUDITOR.

state bank. See BANK.

state bar association. See BAR ASSOCIATION.

state body. See state agency under AGENCY (3).

state bond. See BOND (3).

state-compulsion test. (1978) Civil-rights law. The rule that a state is responsible for discrimination that a private party commits while acting under the requirements of state law, as when a restaurant owner is required by state law to refuse service to minorities. Adickes v. S.H. Kress & Co., 398 U.S. 144, 90 S.Ct. 1598 financial statement. See financial statement.

incriminating statement. (1896) A statement that tends to establish the guilt of someone, esp. the person making it.

prior consistent statement. (1883) A witness’s earlier statement that is consistent with the witness’s testimony at trial. • A prior consistent statement is not hearsay if it is offered to rebut a charge that the testimony was improperly influenced or fabricated. Fed. R. Evid. 801(d)(1)(B). Cf. consonant statement.

prior inconsistent statement. (1885) A witness’s earlier statement that conflicts with the witness’s testimony at trial. • In federal practice, extrinsic evidence of an unsworn prior inconsistent statement is admissible — if the witness is given an opportunity to explain or deny the statement — for impeachment purposes only. Fed. R. Evid. 613(b). Sworn statements may be admitted for all purposes. Fed. R. Evid. 801(d)(1)(A). voluntary statement. (1817) A statement made without the influence of duress, coercion, or inducement.

statement of account. 1. A report issued periodically (usu. monthly) by a bank to a customer, providing certain information on the customer’s account, including the checks drawn and cleared, deposits made, charges debited, and the account balance. — Also termed bank statement. See account (4). [Cases: Banks and Banking C=151.] 2. A report issued periodically (usu. monthly) by a creditor to a customer, providing certain information on the customer’s account, including the amounts billed, credits given, and the balance due. — Also termed account statement.

statement of affairs. 1. STATEMENT OF FINANCIAL AFFAIRS. 2. A balance sheet showing immediate liquidation values (rather than historical costs), usu. prepared when insolvency or bankruptcy is imminent.

statement of cause of action. See statement (2).

statement of claim. 1. complaint (1). 2. English law. A plaintiff’s initial pleading in a civil case; declaration (7).

statement of condition. See balance sheet.

statement of confession. See confession of judgment.

statement of defense. The assertions by a defendant; esp., in England, the defendant’s answer to the plaintiff’s statement of claim. statement of fact. A form of conduct that asserts or implies the existence or nonexistence of a fact. • The term includes not just a particular statement that a particular fact exists or has existed, but also an assertion that, although perhaps expressed as an opinion, implies the existence of some fact or facts that have led the assertor to hold the opinion in question. See affirmative testimony under TESTIMONY. [Cases: Criminal Law C=448; Evidence C=471, 505.]

statement of facts. (18c) A party's written presentation of the facts leading up to or surrounding a legal dispute, usu. recited toward the beginning of a brief. Cf. STATEMENT OF THE CASE.

"The statement of facts is another of those critical parts of the brief... Two principles are at war in drafting the statement of facts. First, judges want and some circuit rules require a nonargumentative, 'fair summary without argument or comment.' Conversely, you want a statement of facts that persuades the judges to rule for you as soon as they finish reading it. Satisfying both ends requires some balancing." David G. Knibb, Federal Court of Appeals Manual § 31.7, at 549 (4th ed. 2000).

agreed statement of facts. A narrative statement of facts that is stipulated to be correct by the parties and is submitted to a tribunal for a ruling. • When the narrative statement is filed on appeal instead of a report of the trial proceedings, it is called an agreed statement on appeal. [Cases: Appeal and Error C=845(2); Stipulations C=14(10), 18(7).]

statement of financial affairs. Bankruptcy. A document that an individual or corporate debtor must file to answer questions about the debtor's past and present financial status. — Also termed statement of affairs. [Cases: Bankruptcy C=2321.]

statement of financial condition. See balance sheet.

statement of financial position. See balance sheet.

statement of income. See income statement.

statement of intention. Bankruptcy. A preliminary statement filed by an individual debtor in a chapter 7 case, in which the debtor details, among other things, whether property of the bankruptcy estate securing any debt will be retained or surrendered and whether the property is claimed as exempt. • The statement must be filed on or before the date of the first creditors' meeting or within 30 days after the bankruptcy petition is filed, whichever is earlier. 11 USCA § 521 (a)(2). [Cases: Bankruptcy C=2851, 3022, 3034, 3415.1.] statement of particulars. See bill of particulars.

statement of principle. In legislative drafting, a sentence or paragraph that explains the legislature's purpose in passing a statute. • Although a statement of principle often resembles a preamble (usu. both do not appear in a single statute), it differs in that it typically appears in a numbered section of the statute. [Cases: Statutes C=210.]

statement of prior-art references. See INFORMATION-DISCLOSURE STATEMENT.

statement of the case. In an appellate brief, a short review of what has happened procedurally in the lawsuit and how it reached the present court. • The statement introduces the reviewing court to the case by reciting the facts, procedures, decisions of the court or courts below as they are relevant to the appeal, and the reasons for those decisions. — Also termed proceedings below. Cf. STATEMENT OF FACTS. [Cases: Appeal and Error C=757; Federal Courts C=713.]

statement of use. See amendment to allege use under TRADEMARK-APPLICATION AMENDMENT.

statement of utility. Patents. The portion of a patent-application disclosure statement that explains how the invention is useful. [Cases: Patents C=99.]

statement of work. A contractual provision or exhibit that defines what one party (e.g., the seller) is going to do for the other (e.g., the buyer). • The statement of work often covers such terms as (1) inspection and acceptance, (2) quality-assurance requirements, (3) packing and marking, (4) data requirements, and (5) training. There are generally two types of specifications in a statement of work: a performance specification establishing the minimum requirements for items to be supplied, and a design specification establishing the methods to be used in meeting those minimum requirements. — Also termed statement-of-work clause. — Abbr. SOW.

state of art. See STATE OF THE ART.

state officer. See officer (1).

state of mind. (17c) 1. The condition or capacity of a person's mind; MENS REA. 2. Loosely, a person's reasons or motives for committing an act, esp. a criminal act.

state-of-mind exception. (1949) Evidence. The principle that an out-of-court declaration of an existing motive is admissible, even when the declarant cannot testify in person. • This principle is an exception to the general rule that hearsay is inadmissible. [Cases: Criminal Law C=419(2.20); Evidence C=268.]

state of nature. (16c) The lack of a politically organized society. • The term is a hypothetical construct for the period in human history predating any type of political society.

"We may make use of the contrast, familiar to the philosophy of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, between the civil state and the state of nature. This state of nature is now commonly rejected as one of the fictions which flourished in the era of the social contract, but such treatment is needlessly severe. The term certainly became associated with much false or exaggerated doctrine touching the golden age, on the one hand, and the bellum omnium contra omnes of Hobbes, on the other, but in itself it nevertheless affords a convenient mode for the expression of an undoubted truth. As long as there have been men, there has probably been some form of human society. The state of nature, therefore, is not the absence of society, but the absence of a society so organised on the basis of physical force as to constitute a state. Though human society is coeval with mankind, the rise of political society, properly so called, is an event in human history." John Salmont, Jurisprudence 103-04 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

state of the art. (1910) Products liability. The level of pertinent scientific and technical knowledge existing at the time of a product's manufacture, and the best technology reasonably available at the time the product was sold. — Also termed state of art. [Cases: Products Liability  C=178, 378.] — state-of-the-art, adj.

"While the statutes in effect in some jurisdictions speak in terms of a state of the art defense, statutes in other jurisdictions provide that state of the art evidence is admissible or may be considered by the trier of fact by statute, and that in determining whether a product was in a defective condition or unreasonably dangerous at the time it left the control of the manufacturer or seller, consideration is given to the state of scientific and technical knowledge available to the manufacturer or seller at the time the product was placed on the market, and to the customary designs, methods, standards, and techniques of manufacturing, inspecting, and testing used by other manufacturers or sellers of similar products." 63 Am. Jur. 2d Products Liability § 1319, at 472 (2008).

state of the case. The posture of litigation as it develops, as in discovery, at trial, or on appeal.

State of the Union. See Presidential message under MESSAGE.

state of war. A situation in which war has been declared or armed conflict is in progress. See war. [Cases: War and National Emergency C=7.]

state paper. 1. A document prepared by or relating to a state or national government and affecting the administration of that government in its political or international relations. 2. A newspaper officially designated for the publication of public statutes, resolutions, notices, and advertisements. [Cases: Newspapers C=1-7.]

state paper office. Hist. An office established in London in 1578, headed by the Clerk of the Papers, to maintain custody of state documents.

state police. (1843) The department or agency of a state government empowered to maintain order, as by investigating and preventing crimes, and making arrests.

state police power. (1849) The power of a state to enforce laws for the health, welfare, morals, and safety of its citizens, if enacted so that the means are reasonably calculated to protect those legitimate state interests..

state religion. See RELIGION.

state's attorney. 1. See DISTRICT ATTORNEY. 2. See PROSECUTOR (1).

state seal. See GREAT SEAL (2) under SEAL.

state secret. (1822) A governmental matter that would be a threat to the national defense or diplomatic interests of the United States if revealed; information possessed by the government and of a military or diplomatic nature, the disclosure of which would be contrary to the public interest. • State secrets are privileged from disclosure by a witness in an ordinary judicial proceeding. — Also termed governmental secret; government secret. See EXECUTIVE PRIVILEGE & STATE-SECRETS PRIVILEGE under PRIVILEGE (3). [Cases: Privileged Communications and Confidentiality C=360.]

state-secrets privilege. See PRIVILEGE (3).

state's evidence. See EVIDENCE.

state's evidence, turn. See TURN STATE'S EVIDENCE.

state sovereignty. (1848) The right of a state to self-government; the supreme authority exercised by each state. [Cases: States C=1.]

state-sponsored terrorism. See TERRORISM.

states' rights. (1839) Under the Tenth Amendment, rights neither conferred on the federal government nor forbidden to the states. [Cases: States C=4.16.]

State Street Bank. Patents. A landmark 1998 decision in the Federal Circuit that made it easier to get patents on computer software, and also rejected the long-accepted notion that business methods are per se unpatentable. • The court struck down per se rules against patenting mathematical algorithms (the soul of software), focusing instead on whether the ultimate result was useful, concrete, and tangible in practice. State Street Bank & Trust Co. v. Signature Fin. Group, Inc., 149 F.3d 1368 (Fed. Cir. 1998). [Cases: Patents C=6.] state's ward. See ward of the state under WARD.

state tax. See TAX.

state terrorism. See TERRORISM.

state the question. Parliamentary procedure. (Of the chair) to formally state a motion as in order and ready for consideration. Cf. PUT THE QUESTION.

state trial. See TRIAL.

stateway, n. A governmental policy or law. • This term is formed on the analogy offolkway.

statim (stay-tim). [Latin] Hist. Immediately; at the earliest possible time when an act might lawfully be completed.

station. 1. Social position or status. See STATUS. 2. A place where both freight and passengers are stored. 3. A headquarters, as of a police department. 4. A place where both freight and passengers are received for transport or delivered after transport. [Cases: Railroads C=225.]

stationary, adj. A place where ships may safely travel. [Cases: Shipping C=11.]

Stationers' Company. Hist. An association of stationers and their successors, formed in London in 1403 and granted a royal charter in 1557, entrusted, by order of the Privy Council, with censorship of the press. • This company was the holder of the first rights we associate today with copyright.

Stationers' Hall. Hist. The hall of the Stationers' Company, established in London in 1553, at which every person claiming a copyright was required to register as a condition precedent to filing an infringement action.

"Accordingly 'Entered at Stationers' Hall' on the title page of books was a form of warning to pirates that the owner of the copyright could and might sue. This requirement disappeared with the Copyright Act, 1911." David M. Walker, The Oxford Companion to Law 1182 (1980).

Stationery Office. Hist. English law. A government office established in 1786 as a department of the treasury, to supply government offices (including Parliament) with stationery and books, and to print and publish governstationhouse. 1. A police station or precinct. 2. The lockup at a police precinct.

stationhouse bail. See cash bail under bail (1).

station-in-life test. Family law. An analysis performed by a court to determine the amount of money reasonably needed to maintain a particular person's accustomed lifestyle. ♦ The elements were first set forth in Canfield vs. Security-First Nat'l Bank, 87 P.2d 830, 840 (Cal. 1939). The court takes into account the person's station in society and the costs of the person's support in that station, including housing and related expenses, medical care, further education, and other reasonably necessary expenses, but not including luxuries or extravagant expenditures. See necessaries (1), (2). [Cases: Divorce C=240(2); Husband and Wife C=19.]

statistical-decision theory. (1966) A method for determining whether a panel of potential jurors was selected from a fair cross section of the community, by calculating the probabilities of selecting a certain number of jurors from a particular group to analyze whether it is statistically probable that the jury pool was selected by mere chance. ♦ This method has been criticized because a pool of potential jurors is not ordinarily selected by mere chance; potential jurors are disqualified for many legitimate reasons. See fair-cross-section requirement; absolute disparity; comparative disparity; duren test. [Cases: Jury C=33(1.1, 1.2).]

statuliber (stach-a-l-bar), n. [Latin] Roman law. A person whose freedom under a will is made conditional or postponed; a person who will be free at a particular time or when certain conditions are met. — Also written status liber (stay-t[j]oo L-bar).

“The statuliber is one who has freedom arranged to take effect on completion of a period or fulfillment of a condition. Men become statuliberi as a result of an express condition, or by the very nature of the case. The meaning of ‘express condition’ presents no problem. The status arises from the very nature of the case when men are manumitted for the purpose of defrauding a creditor; for so long as it is uncertain whether the creditor will use his right, the men remain statuliberi, since fraud is taken in the lex Aelia Sentia to involve actual damage.” Digest of Justinian 40.7.1 (Paul, ad Sabinum 5).

status. (17c) 1. A person's legal condition, whether personal or proprietary; the sum total of a person's legal rights, duties, liabilities, and other legal relations, or any particular group of them separately considered (the status of a landowner). 2. A person's legal condition regarding personal rights but excluding proprietary relations (the status of a father) (the status of a wife). 3. A person's capacities and incapacities, as opposed to other elements of personal status (the status of minors). 4. A person's legal condition as imposed by the law without the person's consent, as opposed to a condition that the person has acquired by agreement (the status of a slave).

“By the status (or standing) of a person is meant the position that he holds with reference to the rights which are recognized and maintained by the law—in other words, his capacity for the exercise and enjoyment of legal rights.” James Hadley, Introduction to Roman Law 106 (1881).

“The word ‘status’ itself originally signified nothing more than the position of a person before the law. Therefore, every person (except slaves, who were not regarded as persons, for legal purposes) had a status. But, as a result of the modern tendency towards legal equality formerly noticed, differences of status became less and less frequent, and the importance of the subject has greatly diminished, with the result that the term status is now used, at any rate in English law, in connection only with those comparatively few classes of persons in the community who, by reason of their conspicuous differences from normal persons, and the fact that by no decision of their own can they get rid of these differences, require separate consideration in an account of the law. But professional or even political differences do not amount to status; thus peers, physicians, clergymen of the established Church, and many other classes of persons, are not regarded as the subjects of status, because the legal differences which distinguish them from other persons, though substantial, are not enough to make them legally abnormal. And landlords, merchants, manufacturers, and wage-earners are not subjects of the Law of Status, though the last-named are, as the result of recent legislation, tending to approach that position.” Edward Jenks, The Book of English Law 109 (P.B. Fairest ed., 6th ed. 1967).

status, law of. See law of status.

STAT-USA. A unit in the U.S. Department of Commerce responsible for disseminating economics and trade information compiled by other federal agencies to businesses and individuals through subscription services and federal depository libraries. ♦ STAT-USA is an agency within the Department's Economics and Statistics Administration.

status crime. See crime.

status de manerio (stay-tas dee ma-neer-ee-oh). [Law Latin “the status of a manor”] Hist. The assembly of tenants to attend the lord's court.

status offender. See offender.

status offense. See offense (1).

status-offense jurisdiction. See jurisdiction.

status of irremovability. Hist. A pauper's right not to be removed from a parish after residing there for one year. Cf. settlement (6).

status quo (stay-tas or stat-as kwoh), adj. (17c) 1. Prescribed or authorized by statute. 2. Conforming to the legislative requirements for quality, size, amount, or the like. 3. (Of an offense) punishable by law. See statutorily.

statute. (14c) A law passed by a legislative body; specifically, legislation enacted by any lawmaking body, including legislatures, administrative boards, and municipal courts. The term act is interchangeable as a synonym. For each of the subentries listed below, act is sometimes substituted for statute. — Abbr. s.; stat. [Cases: Statutes C=(2).]

"We are not justified in limiting the statutory law to those rules only which are promulgated by what we commonly call 'legislatures.' Any positive enactment to which the state gives the force of a law is a 'statute,' whether it has gone through the usual stages of legislative proceedings, or has been adopted in other modes of expressing the will of the people or other sovereign power of the state. In an absolute monarchy, an edict of the ruling sovereign is statutory law. Constitutions, being direct legislation by the people, must be included in the statutory law, and indeed they are examples of the highest form that the statute law can assume. Generally speaking, treaties also are statutory law, because in this country, under the provisions of the United States Constitution, treaties have not the force of law until so declared by the representatives of the people." William M. Lile et al., Brief Making and the Use of Law Books 8 (3d ed. 1914).

affirmative statute. (16c) A law requiring that something be done; one that directs the doing of an act. Cf. negative statute.

always-speaking statute. See speaking statute.

antideficiency statute. See antideficiency legislation under legislation.

codifying statute. (1908) A law that purports to be exhaustive in restating the whole of the law on a particular topic, including prior caselaw as well as legislative provisions. Courts generally presume that a codifying statute supersedes prior caselaw. Cf. consolidating statute.

compiled statutes. Laws that have been arranged by subject but have not been substantively changed; compilation (2). Cf. revised statutes.

"The term 'compiled statutes' is properly applied to a methodical arrangement, without revision or reenactment, of the existing statutes of a State, all the statutes on a given subject being collected in one place. The work is usually performed by private persons; and the former statutes, as they were before the compilation, remain the authority." Frank Hall Childs, Where and How to Find the Law 12 (1922).

consolidating statute. (1886) A law that collects the legislative provisions on a particular subject and embodies them in a single statute, often with minor amendments and drafting improvements. Courts generally presume that a consolidating statute leaves prior caselaw intact. Cf. codifying statute.

A distinction of greater importance in this field is that between consolidating and codifying statutes. A consolidating statute is one which collects the statutory provisions relating to a particular topic, and embodies them in a single Act of Parliament, making only minor amendments and improvements. A codifying statute is one which purports to state exhaustively the whole of the law on a particular subject (the common law as well as previous statutory provisions). The importance of the distinction lies in the courts' treatment of the previous case law, the existence of special procedural provisions with regard to consolidating statutes and the existence of a presumption that they do not change the law." Rupert Cross, Statutory Interpretation 5 (1976).

construction statute. A legislative directive included in a statute, intended to guide or direct a court's interpretation of the statute. A construction act can, for example, be a simple statement such as "The word 'week' means seven consecutive days" or a broader directive such as "Words and phrases are to be read in context and construed according to the rules of grammar and common usage. Words and phrases that have acquired a technical or particular meaning, whether by legislative definition or otherwise, are to be construed accordingly." [Cases: Statutes C=(179).] criminal statute. (18c) A law that defines, classifies, and sets forth punishment for one or more specific crimes. See Penal Code. [Cases: Statutes C=(241).]

curative statute. 1. An act that corrects an error in a statute's original enactment, usu. an error that interferes with interpreting or applying the statute. Cf. validating statute. [Cases: Statutes C=(236, 278.11).] 2. See remedial statute.

declaratory statute. (17c) A law enacted to clarify prior law by reconciling conflicting judicial decisions or by explaining the meaning of a prior statute. Also termed expository statute. [Cases: Statutes C=(236, 278.11).]

directory statute. (1834) A law that indicates only what should be done, with no provision for enforcement. Cf. mandatory statute; permissive statute. [Cases: Statutes C=(227).]

disabling statute. (18c) A law that limits or curbs certain rights.

enabling statute. (18c) A law that permits what was previously prohibited or that creates new powers; esp., a congressional statute conferring powers on an executive agency to carry out various delegated tasks. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure C=(305; Statutes C=(219).]

expository statute. See declaratory statute.

general statute. (16c) A law pertaining to an entire community or all persons generally. Also termed public statute. See public law (2). [Cases: Statutes C=(68).]

imperfect statute. (1847) A law that prohibits, but does not render void, an objectionable transaction. Such a statute provides a penalty for disobedience without depriving the violative transaction of its legal effect.

local statute. 1. See local law (1). 2. See local law (2).

mandatory statute. (18c) A law that requires a course of action as opposed to merely permitting it. Cf. directory statute; permissive statute. [Cases: Statutes C=(227).]

model statute. See uniform statute.

negative statute. (16c) A law prohibiting something; a law expressed in negative terms. Cf. affirmative statute.
nonclaim statute. (18c) 1. statute of limitations. 2. A law that sets a time limit for creditors to bring claims against a decedent's estate. Unlike a statute of limitations, a nonclaim statute is usu. not subject to tolling and is not waivable. [Cases: Executors and Administrators ☞ 223, 225.]

organic statute. (1856) A law that establishes an administrative agency or local government. Also termed organic act. Cf. ORGANIC LAW.

penal statute. (16c) A law that defines an offense and prescribes its corresponding fine, penalty, or punishment. Also termed penal law; punitive statute. [Cases: Statutes ☞ 241.]

"It is a familiar and well-settled rule that penal statutes are to be construed strictly, and not extended by implications, intendments, analogies, or equitable considerations. Thus, an offense cannot be created or inferred by vague implications. And a court cannot create a penalty by construction, but must avoid it by construction unless it is brought within the letter and the necessary meaning of the act creating it." Henry Campbell Black, Handbook on the Construction and Interpretation of the Laws 287 (1896).

permanent statute. See perpetual statute.

permissive statute. A statute that allows certain acts but does not command them. A permissive statute creates a license or privilege, or allows discretion in performing an act. Cf. directory statute; mandatory statute. [Cases: Statutes ☞ 227.]

perpetual statute. (16c) A law containing no provision for repeal, abrogation, or expiration. Also termed permanent statute. Cf. temporary statute (1).

personal statute. Civil law. A law that primarily affects a person's condition or status (such as a statute relating to capacity or majority) and affects property only incidentally.

preceptive statute. A statute that is prescriptive, general, definite, and complete. In form, a preceptive statute is similar to a rule.

private statute. See special statute.

prohibitive statute. A statute that forbids all acts that disturb society's peace or forbids certain acts on other grounds. An example of a noncriminal prohibitive statute is one forbidding the execution of a mentally retarded criminal because a person who lacks mental capacity cannot understand the reason for the punishment.

prospective statute. (1831) A law that applies to future events.

public statute. See PUBLIC LAW (2).

punitive statute. See penal statute.

quasi-statute. An executive or administrative order, or a regulation promulgated by a governmental agency, that has the binding effect of legislation. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure ☞ 417.]

"Quasi-Statutes. Executive and administrative orders by the government as well as military regulations, while not called statutes, not originating as statutes usually do, are, nevertheless, in force and effect, laws. Copies of general orders and proclamations are issued to the public press for publication, but military regulations may for public reasons be kept private." Jesse Franklin Brumbaugh, Legal Reasoning and Briefing 223 (1917).

real statute. Civil law. A law primarily affecting the operation, status, and condition of property, and addressing persons only incidentally.

recording statute. See RECORDING ACT.

reference statute. A law that incorporates and adopts by reference provisions of other laws. [Cases: Statutes ☞ 51.]

remedial statute. (18c) A law that affords a remedy. Also termed curative statute. [Cases: Statutes ☞ 236, 278.11.]

repealing statute. A statute that revokes, and sometimes replaces, an earlier statute. A repealing statute may work expressly or by implication. [Cases: Statutes ☞ 151, 158.]

restraining statute. See disabling statute.

retroactive statute. See RETROACTIVE LAW.

retrospective statute. See RETROACTIVE LAW.

revised statutes. (18c) Laws that have been collected, arranged, and reenacted as a whole by a legislative body. Also termed revised statutes. Abbrev. Rev. Stat.; R.S. See CODE (1). Cf. compiled statutes. [Cases: Statutes ☞ 144–148, 231.]

severable statute. (1930) A law that remains operative in its remaining provisions even if a portion of the law is declared unconstitutional. [Cases: Statutes ☞ 64.]

single-act statute. See LONG-ARM STATUTE.

speaking statute. (2000) A statute to be interpreted in light of the understanding of its terms prevailing at the time of interpretation. Also termed always-speaking statute.

special statute. (17c) A law that applies only to specific individuals, as opposed to everyone. Also termed private statute. [Cases: Statutes ☞ 77–104.]

"It is ancient wisdom, tracing back at least as far as the Roman taboo against the privilegium, that laws ought to be general; they ought to be addressed, not to particular persons, but to persons generally or to classes of persons (say, 'all householders'). Accordingly, a number of American states have inserted in their constitutions prohibitions against 'private or special' statutes. These have given rise to endless difficulties." Lon L. Fuller, Anatomy of the Law 102–03 (1968).

split-level statute. (1980) A law that includes officially promulgated explanatory materials in addition to its substantive provisions, so that courts are left with two levels of documents to construe.

statute of descent and distribution. See statute of distribution. statute of distribution. See statute of distribution.

statute of frauds. See statute of frauds.

temporary statute. (17c) 1. A law that specifically provides that it is to remain in effect for a fixed, limited period. Cf. perpetual statute. [Cases: Statutes C=172.] 2. A law (such as an appropriation statute) that, by its nature, has only a single and temporary operation.

uniform statute. A law drafted with the intention that it will be adopted by all or most of the states; esp., uniform law. — Also termed model statute; uniform act. Cf. model act. [Cases: Statutes C=226.]

validating statute. (1882) A law that is amended either to remove errors or to add provisions to conform to constitutional requirements. — Also termed validation statute. Cf. curative statute. [Cases: Statutes C=52, 236.]

statute book. (16c) A bound collection of statutes, usu. as part of a larger set of books containing a complete body of statutory law, such as the United States Code Annotated.

statute fair. Hist. A fair during which the fixed labor rates were announced and laborers of both sexes offered themselves for hire. — Also termed mop fair.

statute-making. See statutory law.

statute merchant. Hist. 1. (cap.) One of two 13th-century statutes establishing procedures to better secure and recover debts by, among other things, providing for a commercial bond that, if not timely paid, resulted in swift execution on the debtor’s lands, goods, and body. 13 Edw. I, ch. 6 (1283); 15 Edw. I, ch. 6 (1285). These statutes were repealed in 1863. — Also termed pocket judgment. 2. The commercial bond so established. Cf. statute staple.

statute staple. — It is not a little remarkable that our common law knew no process whereby a man could pledge his body or liberty for payment of a debt . . . . Under Edward I, the tide turned. In the interest of commerce a new form of security, the so-called ‘statute merchant,’ was invented, which gave the creditor power to demand the seizure and imprisonment of his debtor’s body.” 2 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 595–97 (2d ed. 1899).

statute of frauds. (18c) A law that contained provisions against conveyances made to defraud creditors. 13 Eliz., ch. 5. — The funda­mental provisions of this statute formed the basis for modern laws against fraudulent conveyances.

statute of distribution. (18c) A state law regulating the distribution of an estate among an intestate’s heirs and relatives. • Historically, the statute specified separate, and often different, patterns for distributing an intestate’s real property and personal property. Generally, land descended to the heirs and personally descended to the next of kin. — Also termed statute of descent and distribution. [Cases: Descent and Distribution C=1–43.]

Statute of Elizabeth. Hist. English law. A 1571 penal statute that contained provisions against conveyances made to defraud creditors. 13 Eliz., ch. 5. • The fundamental provisions of this statute formed the basis for modern laws against fraudulent conveyances.

statute of frauds. (18c) 1. Hist. (cap.) A 1677 English statute that declared certain contracts judicially unenforceable (but not void) if they were not committed to writing and signed by the party to be charged. • The statute was entitled “An Act for the Prevention of Frauds and Perjuries” (29 Car. 2, ch. 3). — Also termed Statute of Frauds and Perjuries.

The “best known, and until recently, most important, Act prescribing written formalities for certain contracts only required that those contracts should be evidenced in writing, or to put it another way, that the contract would be unenforceable in a Court (but not void) in the absence of writing. This was the Statute of Frauds 1677, sections 4 and 17 of which required written evidence of a somewhat curious list of contracts. Today, all that is left of these provisions is that part of section 4, which requires contracts of guarantee to be evidenced in writing, and section 40 of the Law of Property Act 1925 (replacing another part of section 4), which deals with contracts of sale of an interest in land.” P.S. Atiyah, An Introduction to the Law of Contract 141 (3d ed. 1981).

2. A statute (based on the English Statute of Frauds) designed to prevent fraud and perjury by requiring certain contracts to be in writing and signed by the party to be charged. • Statutes of frauds traditionally apply to the following types of contracts: (1) a contract for the sale or transfer of an interest in land. Under Edward I, the tide turned. In the interest of commerce a new form of security, the so-called ‘statute merchant,’ was invented, which gave the creditor power to demand the seizure and imprisonment of his debtor’s body.” 2 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 595–97 (2d ed. 1899).

Statute of Frauds and Perjuries

statute of jeofails (jef-aylz). A law permitting a litigant to acknowledge an error in a pleading and correct or amend the pleading without risking dismissal of the claim. See JEHOFAIL.

statute of limitations. (l8c) 1. A law that bars claims after a specified period; specific, a statute establishing a time limit for suing in a civil case, based on the date when the claim accrued (as when the injury occurred or was discovered). • The purpose of such a statute is to require diligent prosecution of known claims, thereby providing finality and predictability in legal affairs and ensuring that claims will be resolved while evidence is reasonably available and fresh. — Also termed nonclaim statute; limitations period. [Cases: Limitation of Actions < 1.]

Statutory interpretation: “Statutes of limitations, like the equitable doctrine of laches, in their conclusive effects are designed to promote justice by preventing surprises through the revival of claims that have been allowed to slumber until evidence has been lost, memories have faded, and witnesses have disappeared.” Order of R.R. Telephers v. Railroad Express Agency, 321 U.S. 342, 348–49, 64 S.Ct. 582, 586 (1944).

2. A statute establishing a time limit for prosecuting a crime, based on the date when the offense occurred. — Abbbr. S/L; SOL. Cf. STATUTE OF REPOSE. [Cases: Criminal Law 145.5–160.]

Statutory interpretation: “The purpose of a statute of limitations is to limit exposure to criminal prosecution to a certain fixed period of time following the occurrence of those acts the legislature had decided to punish by criminal sanctions. Such a limitation is designed to protect individuals from having to defend themselves against charges when the basic facts have become obscured by the passage of time and to minimize the danger of official punishment because of acts in the far-distant past. Such a time limit may also have the salutary effect of encouraging law enforcement officials promptly to investigate suspected criminal activity.” Tousie v. United States, 397 U.S. 112, 90 S.Ct. 858 (1970).

Statute of Monopolies. Hist. A 1624 act of the English Parliament banning the Crown’s practice of granting monopolies with the single exception of letters patent, which gave an inventor the exclusive right to make and use the invention for 14 years. 21 Jac. 1, ch. 3.

Statute of Westminster the First. See WESTMINSTER THE FIRST, STATUTE OF.

Statute of Wills. (17c) 1. (cap.) An English statute (enacted in 1540) that established the right of a person to devise real property by will. — Also termed Wills Act. 2. A state statute, usu. derived from the English statute, providing for testamentary disposition and if certain requirements for valid execution in that jurisdiction are met. [Cases: Wills C=1-20.]

Statute of Winchester. See WINCHESTER, STATUTE OF.

Statute of York. See YORK, STATUTE OF.

Statute Roll. Hist. A roll upon which a statute was formally entered after receiving the royal assent.

Statutes at Large. An official compilation of the acts and resolutions that become law from each session of Congress, printed in chronological order.

Statute Staple. Hist. 1. A 1353 statute establishing procedures for settling disputes among merchants who traded in staple towns. • The statute helped merchants receive swift judgments for debt. Cf. STATUTE MERCHANT. 2. A bond for commercial debt. • A statute staple gave the lender a possessory right in the land of a debtor who failed to repay a loan. See STAPLE.

Statutory interpretation: “A popular form of security after 1285... was the... statute staple” — whereby the borrower could by means of a registered contract charge his land and goods without giving up possession, if he failed to pay, the lender became a tenant of the land until satisfied... The borrower much less have been discovered. Unlike an ordinary statute of limitations which begins running upon accrual of the claim, the period contained in a statute of repose begins when a specific event occurs, regardless of whether a cause of action has accrued or whether any injury has resulted.” 54 C.J.S. Limitations of Actions § 4, at 20–21 (1987).
under a statute or recognition remained in possession of his land, and it later became a common practice under the common-law forms of mortgage likewise to allow the mortgagor to remain in possession as a tenant at will or at sufferance of the mortgagee. J.H. Baker, An Introduction to English Legal History 354 (3d ed. 1990).

statuti (sta-t(y)o-ti). n. pl. [Latin] Roman law. Licensed officials, esp. advocates, whose names are inscribed in registers of matriculation, forming part of the college of advocates. Cf. supernumerarii.

stay, n. (l6c) 1. The postponement or halting of a proceeding, judgment, or the like. 2. An order to suspend all or part of a judicial proceeding or a judgment resulting from that proceeding. — Also termed stay of execution; suspension of judgment. [Cases: Action $67; Execution $158; Federal Civil Procedure $2700.] — stay, vb. — stayable, adj.

automatic stay. Bankruptcy. A bar to all judicial and extrajudicial collection efforts against the debtor or the debtor’s property, subject to specific statutory exceptions. 11 USCA §§ 362 (a)–(b). • The policy behind the automatic stay, which is effective upon the filing of the bankruptcy petition, is that all actions against the debtor should be halted pending the determination of creditors’ rights and the orderly administration of the debtor’s assets free from creditor interference. — Also termed automatic suspension. [Cases: Bankruptcy $2391–2404.]

stay-away order. 1. In a domestic-violence case, an order forbidding the defendant to contact the victim. • A stay-away order usu. prohibits the defendant from coming within a certain number of feet of the victim’s home, school, work, or other specific place. Stay-away orders are most often issued in criminal cases. [Cases: Breach of the Peace $16.] 2. Restraining order (1). 3. In a juvenile-delinquency case, an order prohibiting a youthful offender from frequenting the scene of the offense or from being in the company of certain persons. — Also termed no-contact order; stay-away order of protection.

stay of execution. See stay.

steal, vb. (bef. 12c) 1. To take (personal property) illegally with the intent to keep it unlawfully. — Also termed larceny. — Also termed (in Scots law) stellionate. • Theft; an act or instance of stealing. • Etymologically, this term is the noun corresponding to the verb steal.

stealth. 1. Hist. Theft; an act or instance of stealing. • Etymologically, this term is the noun corresponding to the verb steal.

stealth is the wrongful taking of goods without pretence of title, and therefore altereth not the property, as a trespass doth, so as upon an appeal the party shall re-have them.” Sir Henry Finch, Law, or a Discourse Thereof 210 (1759).

2. Surrreptitiousness; surreptitious action.

stealth juror. See juror.

steganography (steg-ə-nog-rə-fee), n. A cryptographic method that digitally embeds or encodes one item of information within another. • Because digitized audio or visual files usu. have unused data areas, indelible (and nearly undetectable) information can be added without altering the file’s quality. Copyright or trademark tags can be hidden in every fragment of a digital work, making disassociation almost impossible. — Also termed digital fingerprinting; digital watermarking.

stellionatus (stel-ee-ə-nay-təs or stel-ya-əs). [Latin “underhand dealing”] Roman & Scots law. Conduct that is fraudulent but does not fall within a specific class of offenses. • This term applies primarily to fraudulent practices in the sale or hypothecation of land. — Also termed (in Scots law) stellionate. Cf. cozening.

“Though pignus and hypothec are almost different names for the same thing, there were differences. Hypothec was used mainly for land, which cannot be removed. A thing could be pledged only to one, but successive hypothecs might be created over a thing. There was no fraud in this but it was the offence of stellionatus to give a hypothec without declaring existing hypothecs.” W.W. Buckland, A Manual of Roman Private Law 355 (2d ed. 1953).

“STELLIONATU . . . is a term applied, in the law of Scotland, either to any crime which, though indictable, goes under no general denomination, and is punishable arbitrarily, or to any civil delinquency of which fraud is an ingredient. Those, e.g., who grant double conveyances of the same subject, are guilty of this crime . . . and are punishable arbitrarily in their persons and goods, besides becoming infamous.” William Bell, Bell’s Dictionary and Digest of the Law of Scotland 940 (George Watson ed., 1882).

stipulatio (stip-ə-lay-shee-ə), n. [Latin] Roman law. An oral contract requiring a formal question and reply, binding the replier to do what was asked. ● It is essential that both parties speak, and that the reply directly conforms to the question asked and is made with the intent to enter into a contractual obligation. No consideration is required. See actio ex stipulato under actio. Pl. stipulationes (stip-ə-lay-shee-ə-nəs).

“It must be remembered that the law-forms used by the Romans had their origin in times when writing was neither easy nor common. It is not surprising, therefore, that among them a form of spoken words, a verbal contract, should hold the place which among us is occupied by written notes. This form . . . stipulatio — was of a very simple character, consisting only of a question asked by one party, and an answer returned by the other . . . . Such forms as Spondesme mihi decem aureos dare (do you engage to give me ten aurei, or gold-pieces) answer. Spondeo (i engage) . . . .” James Hadley, Introduction to Roman Law 210 (1881).

“This oldest Roman form of contract was the stipulatio, an oral promise made by an answer to an immediately preceding question, with the promisor using the same verb. The contract was unilateral. Only one party, the promisor, was legally liable, and he was bound strictly by the words used.” Alan Watson, Ancient Law and Modern Understanding 96 (1998).

stipulatio aquiliana (stip-ə-lay-lay-shə-a-kwil-ee-nə). [Latin] Roman law. A type of stipulatio used to collect and discharge all the liabilities owed on various grounds by a single contract.

“[S]tipulatio Aquiliana, a device credited to Aquilius Gallus, of Cicero’s time. Where two persons with complex relations between them desired to square or simplify their accounts they could work out the items and arrive at the balance . . . . This balance being paid or otherwise arranged, each party would then make with the other this stipulatio, which was a comprehensive formula . . . . This would novate all the claims and turn them into a single promise, for an incertum. These mutual stipulations might then be released by acceptatio.” W.W. Buckland, A Manual of Roman Private Law 348 (2d ed. 1953).

stipulatio juris (stip-ə-lay-lay-shə-joo-ri-is). [Latin “stipulatio as to the law”] The parties’ agreement on a question of law or its applicability. ● The court is not bound to accept the stipulation if it is erroneous. But the parties are allowed to stipulate the law to be applied to a dispute.

stipulation (stip-ə-lay-shən), n. (18c) 1. A material condition or requirement in an agreement; esp., a factual representation that is incorporated into a contract as a term <breach of the stipulation regarding payment of taxes>. ● Such a contractual term often appears in a section of the contract called “Representations and Warranties.” [Cases: Contracts – 173, 207, 218, 221.] 2. A voluntary agreement between opposing parties concerning some relevant point; esp., an agreement relating to a proceeding, made by attorneys representing adverse parties to the proceeding <the plaintiff and defendant entered into a stipulation on the issue of liability>. ● A stipulation relating to a pending judicial proceeding, made by a party to the proceeding or the party’s attorney, is binding without consideration. [Cases: Stipulations – 1.]

“Breach of a stipulation should not be confused with misrepresentation, which is a false statement made before or at the time the contract is made, and which induces the contract; only if it is incorporated into the contract does it become a stipulation or term, the breach of which will entitle the injured party to pursue the usual remedies which are available where there has been a breach of a warranty or of a condition.” 1 E.W. Chance, Principles of Mercantile Law 239 (P.W. French ed., 13th ed. 1950).

“Stipulations with respect to matters of form and procedure serve the convenience of the parties to litigation and often serve to simplify and expedite the proceeding. In some cases they are supported by the policy of favoring compromise in order to reduce the volume of litigation. Hence they are favored by the courts and enforced without regard to consideration.” Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 94 cmt. a (1979).
3. Roman law. A formal contract by which a promisor (and only the promisor) became bound by oral question and answer. • By the third century A.D., stipulations were always evidenced in writing. See REUS PROMITTENDI; REUS STIPULANDI. — stipulate (stip-ya-layt), vb. — stipulative (stip-yah-tiv), adj.

"A stipulation consisted in a question and answer, the question being put by the person who was to acquire a right, the answer being given orally by the person who undertook the obligation. The matter of the agreement being stated, the binding words were usually simple; those used by (and peculiar to) Romans being Spondeo? or spondeo? Spondeo. A stipulation made with a foreigner in these terms was invalid. The questioner was called stipulator, sometimes reus stipulandi (stipulating party), the answerer usually promissor (or reus promittendi the promising party). . ." 2 Henry John Roby, Roman Private Law 12 (1902).

stipulation pour autrui (poor oh-troo-ee). [French "for stipulatio sponsalitia stipulator. 1. One who makes a stipulation. 2. Civil stock, n. (14c) 1. The original progenitor of a family; a person from whom a family is descended; branch (1) <George Harper, Sr. was the stock of the Harper line.>

2. A merchant’s goods that are kept for sale or trade <the car dealer put last year’s models on sale to reduce its stock>. 3. The capital or principal fund raised by a corporation through subscribers’ contributions or the sale of shares <Acme’s stock is worth far more today than it was 20 years ago>. 4. A proportional part of a corporation’s capital represented by the number of equal units (or shares) owned, and granting the holder the right to participate in the company’s general management and to share in its net profits or earnings <Julia sold her stock in Pantheon Corporation>. See share (2). Cf. security (4). [Cases: Corporations C=63.1] adjustable-rate preferred stock. Preferred stock whose dividend is periodically changed according to changes in a benchmark interest rate, such as that of Treasury bills.

assented stock. Stock that an owner deposits with a third person according to an agreement by which the owner voluntarily accepts a change in the corporation’s securities.

assessable stock. Stock that is subject to resale by the issuer if the holder fails to pay any assessment levied on it. [Cases: Corporations C=175.]

authorized stock. See capital stock (1).

bailout stock. Nontaxable preferred stock issued to stockholders as a dividend. • Bailout stock is issued to gain favorable tax rates by distributing corporate earnings at capital gains rates rather than by distributing dividends at ordinary income rates. This practice is now prohibited by the Internal Revenue Code. IRC (26 USCA) § 306.

barometer stock. A stock whose price fluctuates according to market conditions; an individual stock considered to be indicative of the strength of the market in general. • Also termed bellwether stock.

blank stock. Securities. Stock with voting powers and rights set by the issuer’s board of directors after the stock has been sold. [Cases: Corporations C=99, 243(6).]

blue-chip stock. See blue chip.

bonus stock. A stock share that is issued for no consideration, as an enticement to buy some other type or class of security. • It is considered a type of watered stock. • Also termed bonus share. [Cases: Corporations C=99, 243(6).]

book-value stock. Stock offered to executives at a book-value price, rather than at its market value. • The stock is offered with the understanding that when its book value has risen, the company will buy back the stock at the increased price or will make payments in stock equal to the increased price.

callable preferred stock. Preferred stock that may be repurchased by the issuing corporation at a prestated price, usu. at or slightly above par value. [Cases: Corporations C=68.]

capital stock. 1. The total number of shares of stock that a corporation may issue under its charter or articles of incorporation, including both common stock and preferred stock. • A corporation may increase the amount of capital stock if the owners of a majority of the outstanding shares consent. • Also termed authorized stock; authorized capital stock; authorized stock issue; authorized shares. [Cases: Corporations C=60.]

cheap stock. Stock or stock options issued to the issuer’s directors, employees, consultants, promoters, and the like at a price lower than the public-offering price up to 12 months before the offering.

share with the common shareholders in any additional distributions of earnings.

participation stock. Stock permitting the holder to participate in profits and surplus.

par-value stock. Stock originally issued for a fixed value derived by dividing the total value of capital stock by the number of shares to be issued. • The par value does not bear a necessary relation to the actual stock value because surplus plays a role in the valuation. [Cases: Corporations ≈ 62, 99(3).]

penny stock. An equity security that is not traded in established markets, represents no tangible assets, or has average revenues less than required for trading on an exchange. • Typically, a penny stock is highly speculative and can be purchased for less than $5 a share.

performance stock. See glamour stock.

phantom stock. Imaginary stock that is credited to a corporate executive account as part of the executive's compensation package. See PHANTOM STOCK PLAN. [Cases: Corporations ≈ 308(3).]

preferred stock. A class of stock giving its holder a preferential claim to dividends and to tangible assets upon liquidation but that usu. carries no voting rights. • Also termed preference shares. Cf. common stock. [Cases: Corporations ≈ 156.]

premium stock. Stock that carries a premium for trading, as in the case of short-selling.

prior preferred stock. Preferred stock that has preference over another class of preferred stock from the same issuer. • The preference usu. relates to dividend payments or claims on assets. [Cases: Corporations ≈ 308(1).]

reacquired stock. See treasury stock.

redeemable stock. Preferred stock that can be called by the issuing corporation and retired. [Cases: Corporations ≈ 68.]

registered stock. See registered security under SECURITY.

restricted stock. See restricted security under SECURITY.

retired stock. See treasury stock.

special stock. Hist. Corporate stock that guarantees investors an annual dividend and gives them creditor status to the extent that dividends have become payable. • In contrast, preferred-stock holders' claims for dividends payable are secondary to creditors' claims. Special stock was statutorily authorized only in Massachusetts. [Cases: Corporations ≈ 71.]

subscribed stock. A stockholder’s equity account showing the capital that will be contributed when the subscription price is collected. See SUBSCRIPTION (2). [Cases: Corporations ≈ 88.]

tainted stock. Stock owned or transferred by a person disqualified from serving as a plaintiff in a derivative action. • A good-faith transferee is also disqualified from filing a derivative action.

treasury stock. Stock issued by a company but then reacquired and either canceled or held. • Some states have eliminated this classification and treat such stock as if it is authorized but unissued. — Also termed treasury security; treasury share; reacquired stock; retired stock. [Cases: Corporations ≈ 72.]

unissued stock. Stock that is authorized by the corporate charter but not yet distributed.

unlisted stock. See unlisted security under SECURITY.

volatile stock. Stock subject to wide and rapid fluctuations in price. — Also termed yo-yo stock.

voting stock. Stock that entitles the holder to vote in the corporation's election of directors and on other matters that are put to a vote. — Also termed voting security. [Cases: Corporations ≈ 197.]

watered stock. Stock issued for less than par value. [Cases: Corporations ≈ 99.] ‘The term “watered stock” is a colorful common law phrase describing the situation where shareholders receive shares without paying as much for them as the law requires. . . . Much of the early common law relating to watered shares concerned the liability of shareholders receiving watered shares to pay the additional consideration needed to “squeeze out the water.” . . . [It now] seems clear that a shareholder is liable to the corporation if he or she pays less for the shares than what the consideration fixed by the directors, and this liability is measured by the difference between the fixed consideration and the amount actually paid.” Robert W. Hamilton, The Law of Corporations in a Nutshell 120–21 (3d ed. 1991).

whisper stock. The stock of a company that is rumored to be the target of a takeover attempt.

yo-yo stock. See volatile stock.

stock acquisition. See SHARE ACQUISITION.

strand, n. (bef. 12c) A shore or bank of an ocean, lake, river, or stream.

stranding, n. Maritime law. A ship's drifting, driving, or running aground on a strand. • The type of stranding that occurs determines the method of apportioning the liability for any resulting losses. [Cases: Salvage § 9–30.]

accidental stranding. Stranding caused by natural forces, such as wind and waves. — Also termed involuntary stranding. See general average and particular average under average.

"Damage to a vessel from involuntary stranding or wreck, and the cost of repairs, are particular average only. Where, however, the ship and cargo are exposed to a common peril by the accidental stranding, the expenses of unloading and taking care of the cargo, rescuing the vessel, reloading the cargo, and other expenses other than repairs requisite to enable the vessel to proceed on the voyage, are brought into general average, provided the vessel and cargo were saved by the same series of measures during the continuance of the common peril which created the joint necessity for the expenses." 70 Am. Jur. 2d Shipping § 961, at 1069 (1987).

voluntary stranding. Stranding to avoid a more dangerous fate or for fraudulent purposes.

"The loss occurring when a ship is voluntarily run ashore to avoid capture, foundering, or shipwreck is to be made good by general average contribution, if the ship is afterwards recovered so as to be able to perform its voyage, as such a claim is clearly within the rule that whatever is sacrificed for the common benefit of the associated interests shall be made good by all the interests exposed to the common peril which were saved from the common danger by the sacrifice . . . . A vessel cannot, however, claim contribution founded on even a voluntary stranding made necessary by . . . unseaworthiness or the negligence of those in charge, except in pursuance of a valid agreement to that effect." 70 Am. Jur. 2d Shipping § 961, at 1069 (1987).

stranger. (14c) 1. One who is not party to a given transaction; esp., someone other than a party or the party's employee, agent, tenant, or immediate family member. [Cases: Contracts § 185.] 2. One not standing toward another in some relation implied in the context; esp., one who is not in privity. 3. A person who voluntarily pays another person's debt even though the payor cannot be held liable for the debt and the payor's property is not affected by the creditor's rights. • Subrogation does not apply to a stranger if the debtor did not agree to or assign subrogation rights. stranger in blood. (17c) 1. One not related by blood, such as a relative by affinity. 2. Any person not within the consideration of natural love and affection arising from a relationship.

A third party used in some transactions as a temporary transferee to allow the principal parties to accomplish something that is otherwise impermissible. 4. A person hired to post a worthless bail bond for the release of an accused. — Also termed stramineus homo. Cf. DUMMY.

straw-man scam. Criminal law. A scheme in which an innocent third person is hired to receive fraudulently obtained money and wire it to a location outside the country.

straw poll. A nonbinding vote, taken as a way of informally gauging support or opposition but usu. without a formal motion or debate.

stray remarks. Employment law. Statements to or about an employee by a coworker or supervisor, concerning the employee’s race, sex, age, national origin, or other status, that are either objectively or subjectively offensive, but that do not represent harassment or discrimination by the employer because of (1) their sporadic, unsystematic, and unofficial nature, (2) the circumstances in which they were made, or (3) their not showing any intention to hamper the employee’s continued employment. — Also termed stray comments. [Cases: Civil Rights (1947, 1543.)

stream. Anything liquid that flows in a line or course; esp., a current of water consisting of a bed, bank, and watercourse, usu. emptying into other bodies of water but not losing its character even if it breaks up or disappears. [Cases: Waters and Water Courses (1–38.)

private stream. A watercourse, the bed, channel, or waters of which are exclusively owned by private parties.

stream-of-commerce theory. (1942) 1. The principle that a state may exercise personal jurisdiction over a defendant if the defendant places a product in the general marketplace and the product causes injury or damage in the forum state, as long as the defendant also takes other acts to establish some connection with the forum state, as by advertising there or by hiring someone to serve as a sales agent there. Asahi Metal Indus. Co., Ltd. v. Superior Court of Cal., 480 U.S. 102, 107 S.Ct. 1026 (1987). [Cases: Corporations (1979); Courts (1925); Federal Courts (76, 81.)] The principle that a person who participates in placing a defective product in the general marketplace is strictly liable for harm caused by the product. Restatement (Second) of Torts § 402A (1979). [Cases: Products Liability (164.) street. A road or public thoroughfare used for travel in an urban area, including the pavement, shoulders, gutters, curbs, and other areas within the street lines. [Cases: Municipal Corporations (658.)

"Strictly speaking, a 'street' is a public thoroughfare in an urban community such as a city, town, or village, and the term is not ordinarily applicable to roads and highways outside of municipalities. Although a street, in common parlance, is equivalent to a highway, it is usually specifically denominated by its own proper appellation. . . . Whether a particular highway is to be regarded as a 'street' within the meaning of that term as used in a statute must, of course, be resolved by construction." 39 Am. Jur. 2d Highways, Streets, and Bridges § 8, at 588–89 (1999).

paperstreet. A thoroughfare that appears on plats, subdivision maps, and other publicly filed documents, but that has not been completed or opened for public use. [Cases: Municipal Corporations (646.)

street crime. See CRIME.

street gang. See GANG.

street name. A brokerage firm’s name in which securities owned by another are registered. • A security is held by a broker in street name (at the customer’s request) to simplify trading because no signature on the stock certificate is required. A street name may also be used for securities purchased on margin. The word “street” in this term is a reference to Wall Street.

street-name security. See nominee account under ACCOUNT.

subtraction. 1. The process of deducting one number from another number to determine the difference. 2. Hist. The act of neglecting a duty or service that one party owes to another, esp. one that arises out of land tenure.

Subtraction, which is the fifth species of injuries affecting a man’s real property, happens, when any person who owes any suit, duty, custom, or service to another, withdraws or neglects to perform it. It differs from a disseisin, in that this is committed without any denial of the right, consisting merely in non-performance; that strikes at the very title of the party injured, and amounts to an ouster or actual dispossession. Subtraction however, being clearly an injury, is remediable by due course of law: but the remedy differs according to the nature of the services; whether they be due by virtue of any tenure, or by custom only." — William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 230 (1768).

subtraction of conjugal rights. Hist. The act of a husband and wife unlawfully living apart.

subvention (sub-ven-shan). A grant of financial aid or assistance; a subsidy. [Cases: United States 82–82.]

subversion, (14c) The process of overthrowing, destroying, or corrupting <subversion of legal principles> <subversion of the government>.

"Subversion can succeed where diplomacy has failed. Subversion exceeds the bounds of diplomacy in that it employs methods which diplomacy abhors; it does not win by assassination, riot, pillage, and arson, if it believes these to be useful in the attainment of its ends. Subversion is a form of war. It may include the use of propaganda ... to sway the thinking and action of influential social groups, especially attempting to discredit the leadership of the target area, labeling it as the 'tool' of ... any convenient target for emotional hatred. By inflaming passion, the purveyors of violent propaganda can stir up peaceful citizens so that in minutes they are transformed into a terrifying mob. The art of subversion has developed the technique of the manipulation of mobs to a high degree." — T. Wyckoff, War by Subversion, 59 South Atlantic Q. 36 (1960).

"Prior to World War II, subversive activities were thought to cover cases where states attempted to achieve certain political ends of fomenting civil strife in another state or by supporting rebellion against the legally established government of another state by giving to the rebels supplies of personnel, training facilities, war materials, or munitions and by engaging in hostile propaganda against the victim state and its government. . . . By the beginning of World War II, the concept of subversion had been expanded to include the attempt of one state to weaken or overthrow the government of another by means of infiltration of its governmental apparatus with conspirators who strongly opposed the domestic policy of their own government and willingly served as clandestine instruments in the conduct of an alien state’s foreign policy. But with increased militancy of modern ideologies, . . . subversive activities are no longer seen in many quarters as advancing the foreign policy of a nation or nations, but rather are thought to advance universal human values, i.e., the specific ideological theory adhered to." — Ann Van Wyken Thomas & A.J. Thomas Jr., The Concept of Aggression in International Law 72–73 (1972).

"Today, the term subversion designates all illegal activities, whether direct or indirect, overt or covert, conducted under the auspices of a state and designed to overthrow the established government or vitally disrupt the public order of another state. Subversion combines psychological, political, social, and economic actions, as well as active military or paramilitary operations, and it is generally a sustained, long-run, intermeshed, and coordinated process. Consequently, it is usually impossible to place acts of subversion into neat little categorical definitions. Subversion, being a technique of opportunity, is successful mainly in areas where social and political revolution is at least incipient." — Ann Van Wyken Thomas & A.J. Thomas Jr., The Concept of Aggression in International Law 80–81 (1972).

sue-and-labor clause. Marine insurance. A provision in property- and marine-insurance policies requiring the insured to protect damaged property against further loss. • The clause generally requires the insured to "sue and labor" to protect the insured party's interests. — Also termed rescue clause. [Cases: Insurance \(\geq 2195, 2245(2)\).] "Some insurance today is written against 'all risks' . . . . Besides the perils clause . . . recovery under the policy can be had on the entirely separate 'sue and labor' clause . . . . Under this clause, the underwriter may become liable for certain charges incurred by the assured in caring for the insured property, whether or not there is any actual loss or damage. Where sue-and-labor charges are incurred and loss also occurs, the underwriter may become liable for more than the policy amount, which limits only a claim for loss of or damage to the goods or vessel." Grant Gilmore & Charles L. Black Jr., The Law of Admiralty § 2-10, at 75 (2d ed. 1975).

sue facts. (1980) Facts that determine whether a party should bring a lawsuit; esp., facts determining whether a shareholder-derivative action should be instituted under state law.

sufficient evidence. See consideration (1).

sufficient consideration. See consideration (1).

suffragan (sa-fra-gan or -jan). A titular bishop ordained to assist a bishop of the diocese in the church business; a deputy or assistant bishop. • Suffragans were originally appointed only to replace absent bishops and were called chorepiscopi ("bishops of the county"), as distinguished from the regular bishops of the city or see.

suffrage (sof-rij). (1c) 1. The right or privilege of casting a vote at a public election. — Also termed right to vote. [Cases: Elections \( \Leftrightarrow 1 \).]

> "In the United States suffrage is a privilege, franchise or trust conferred by the people upon such persons as it deems fittest to represent it in the choice of magistrates or in the performance of political duties which it would be inexpedient or inconvenient for the people to perform in a body. The person upon whom the franchise is conferred is called an elector or voter. No community extends suffrage to all persons, but places such restrictions upon it as may best subserve the ends of government." George W. McCrary, A Treatise on the American Law of Elections § 1, at 2 (Henry L. McCune ed., 4th ed. 1897).

2. A vote; the act of voting.

physician-assisted suicide. See assisted suicide.

police-assisted suicide. See suicide-by-cop.

suicide-by-cop. Slang. A form of suicide in which the suicidal person intentionally engages in life-threatening behavior to induce a police officer to shoot the person. • Frequently, the decedent attacks the officer or otherwise threatens the officer's life, but occasionally a third person's life is at risk. A suicide-by-cop is distinguished from other police shootings by three elements. The person must: (1) evince an intent to die; (2) consciously understand the finality of the act; and (3) confront a law enforcement official with behavior so extreme that it compels that officer to act with deadly force. — Also termed police-assisted suicide; victim-precipitated homicide.

2. A person who has taken his or her own life. — Also termed felo-de-se; felon-de-se; felon of oneself.

suicide clause. Insurance. A life-insurance-policy provision either excluding suicide as a covered risk or sui generis (s[y]oo-1 or soo-ee jen-a ris). [Latin “of its own kind”] (18c) Of its own kind or class; unique or peculiar. ● The term is used in intellectual-property law to describe a regime designed to protect rights that fall outside the traditional patent, trademark, copyright, and trade-secret doctrines. For example, a database may not be protected by copyright law if its content is not original, but it could be protected by a sui generis statute designed for that purpose.

sui heredes (s[y]oo-1 ha-ree-deez). [Latin “one’s own heirs”] Roman law. A person’s direct descendants who were unemancipated, and who would be heirs on intestacy. — Also spelled sui haeredes. — Often shortened to sui. See Suis HERES.

“[If a man died without a will, his property went to his sui heredes (own heirs, direct heirs), that is, to the persons who were previously under his potestas, but were released from it by his death. If he had adopted as son a person not connected with him by birth, that person was included among the sui heredes, on the other hand, a son by birth whom he had emancipated was . . . excluded from the sui heredes . . . .” James Hadley, Introduction to Roman Law 134 (1881).

sui juris (s[y]oo-d-tas), n. [Law Latin] The status of a proper heir.

surety (shuur-[a]-tee). (14c) 1. A person who is primarily liable for paying another's debt or performing another's obligation. • Although a surety is similar to an insurer, one important difference is that a surety often receives no compensation for assuming liability. A surety differs from a guarantor, who is liable to the creditor only if the debtor does not meet the duties owed to the creditor; the surety is directly liable. Cf. Guarantor. [Cases: Principal and Surety C=1, 65, 66.]

”The words surety and guarantor are often used indiscriminately as synonymous terms; but while a surety and a guarantor have this in common, that they are both bound for another person, yet there are points of difference between them which should be carefully noted. A surety is usually bound with his principal by the same instrument, executed at the same time and on the same consideration. He is an original promisor and debtor from the beginning, and is held ordinarily to know every default of this principal. Usually the surety will not be discharged, either by the mere indulgence of the creditor to the principal, or by want of notice of the default of the principal, no matter how much he may be injured thereby. On the other hand, the contract of the guarantor is his own separate undertaking, in which the principal does not join. It is usually entered into before or after that of the principal, and is often founded on a separate consideration from that supporting the contract of the principal." 1 George W. Brandt, The Law of Suretyship and Guaranty § 2, at 9 (3d ed. 1905).

"A surety, in the broad sense, is one who is liable for the debt or obligation of another, whether primarily or secondarily, conditionally or unconditionally. In other words, the term surety includes anyone who is bound on an obligation which, as between himself and another person who is bound to the obligee for the same performance, the latter obligor should discharge. In this sense, suretyship includes all accessorial obligations. By such terminology, guarantors and indorsers are kinds of sureties. • A surety, in the narrow sense, is one who is liable in form primarily on the debt or obligation of another. His obligation is accessorial to that of the principal debtor, but it is direct and not conditioned on the principal debtor's default. In this sense, suretyship differs from guaranty and indorsement, which are conditional, secondary obligations. • The word surety is in the majority of American decisions used in the narrower sense to indicate a primary obligation to pay another's debt, to distinguish it from the secondary obligation of a guarantor. This terminology has the advantage of indicating by the use of the one word 'surety' an obligation which is at once one to pay another's debt, but which at the same time is not conditioned upon another's default." Laurence P. Simpson, Handbook on the Law of Suretyship 6, 8-9 (1950).

accommodation surety. See voluntary surety.
Suretyship. A legal relation that arises when one party assumes liability for a debt, default, or other failing of a second party. It is required of one against whom there are probable grounds to suspect future misbehavior. See supplieavit.

Surety insurance. See guaranty insurance under INSURANCE.

Suretyship. 1. The legal relation that arises when one party assumes liability for a debt, default, or other failing of a second party. The liability of both parties begins simultaneously. In other words, under a contract of suretyship, a surety becomes a party to the principal obligation. [Cases: Principal and Surety C=1, 65, 66.]

2. The lending of credit to aid a principal who does not have sufficient credit. The purpose is to guard against loss if the principal debtor were to default. The position or status of a surety.

Involuntary suretyship. A suretyship that arises incidentally, when the chief object of the contract is to accomplish some other purpose. [Cases: Principal and Surety C=11.]

Personal suretyship. A suretyship in which the surety is answerable in damages. [Cases: Principal and Surety C=65.]

Real suretyship. A suretyship in which specified property can be taken, but the surety is not answerable in damages. [Cases: Principal and Surety C=65.]

Suretyship by operation of law. A suretyship that the law creates when a third party promises a debtor to assume and pay the debt that the debtor owes to a creditor. [Cases: Principal and Surety C=14.]

Voluntary suretyship. A suretyship in which the chief object of the contract is to make one party a surety.

surplusage (sor-plas-iij). (15c) 1. Redundant words in a statute or legal instrument; language that does not add meaning <the court must give effect to every word, reading nothing as mere surplusage>. [Cases: Statutes § 202, 206] 2. Excessive matter in a pleading <allegations that are irrelevant to the case will be treated as surplusage>. [Cases: Indictment and Information § 118.]

"Surplusage is to be avoided. The perfection of pleading is to combine the requisite certainty and precision with the greatest possible brevity of statement. "Surplusage" ... includes matter of any description which is unnecessary to the maintenance of the action or defense. The rule requires the omission of such matter in two instances: (1) Where the matter is wholly foreign and irrelevant to the merits of the case. (2) When, though not wholly foreign, such matter need not be stated." Benjamin J. Shipman, Handbook of Common-Law Pleading § 316, at 514 (Henry Winthrop Ballantine ed., 3d ed. 1923).

surprise. (15c) An occurrence for which there is no adequate warning or that affects someone in an unexpected way. • In a trial, the procedural rules are designed to limit surprise — or trial by ambush — as much as possible. For example, the parties in a civil case are permitted to conduct discovery, to determine the essential facts of the case and the identities of possible witnesses, and to inspect relevant documents. At trial, if a party calls a witness who has not been previously identified, the witness's testimony may be excluded if it would unfairly surprise and prejudice the other party. And if a party has diligently prepared the case and is nevertheless taken by surprise on a material point at trial, that fact can sometimes be grounds for a new trial or for relief from the judgment under Rules 59 and 60 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.

surrebuttal (sor-ri-bat-al). (1853) The response to the opposing party's rebuttal in a trial or other proceeding; a rebuttal to a rebuttal <called two extra witnesses in surrebuttal>. [Cases: Criminal Law § 683; Federal Civil Procedure § 615; Trial § 64.]

surrebutter (sor-ri-bat-ar). Common-law pleading. (17c) The plaintiff's answer of fact to the defendant's rebuttal. [Cases: Pleading § 185.]

surrejoinder (sor-ri-joyn-dar). Common-law pleading. (16c) The plaintiff's answer to the defendant's rejoinder. See REPLICATION. [Cases: Pleading § 184.]

"Where the common-law system of pleading is in force, the pleadings do not terminate with the plaintiff's replication. The defendant may interpose a rejoinder to the replication, and the plaintiff a surrejoinder to the defendant's rejoinder. Then follows the rebutter, which in turn may be met by a surrebutter." 61A Am. Jur. 2d Pleading § 193, at 192 (1981).

surrender, n. (15c) 1. The act of yielding to another's power or control. 2. The giving up of a right or claim; release (1). [Cases: Release § 1.] 3. The return of an estate to the person who has a reversion or remainder, so as to merge the estate into a larger estate. Cf. MERGER (4).

"Merger bears a very near resemblance, in circumstances and effect to a surrender; but the analogy does not hold in all cases, though there is not any case in which merger will take place, unless the right of making and surrender surrender by bail

resided in the parties between whom the merger takes place. To a surrender, it is requisite that the tenant of the particular estate should relinquish his estate in favor of the tenant of the next vested estate, in remainder or reversion. But merger is confined to the cases in which the tenant of the estate in reversion or remainder grants that estate to the tenant of the particular estate, or in which the particular tenant grants his estate to him in reversion or remainder. Surrender is the act of the party, and merger is the act of the law." 4 James Kent, Commentaries on American Law *100 (George Comstock ed., 11th ed. 1866).

4. Commercial law. The delivery of an instrument so that the delivery releases the deliverer from all liability. [Cases: Bills and Notes C=>438.] 5. A tenant's relinquishment of possession before the lease has expired, allowing the landlord to take possession and treat the lease as terminated. — Also termed (in sense 5) surrender of term. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant C=>109.] — surrender, vb.

surrender by bail. (18c) A surety's delivery of a prisoner, who had been released on bail, into custody. [Cases: Bail C=>80.]

surrender by operation of law. (1836) An act that is an surrender of a criminal. An officer's delivery of a surrenderer. See SURRENDEROR.

surrender of a criminal. An officer's delivery of a prisoner to the authorities in the appropriate jurisdiction. See EXTRADITION; RENDITION. [Cases: Extradition and Detainers C=>16, 36.]

surrender of a preference. Bankruptcy. The yielding of a voidable conveyance, transfer, assignment, or encumbrance by a creditor to the trustee as a condition of allowing the creditor's claim. [Cases: Bankruptcy C=>2824.]

surrender of charter. Corporations. The dissolution of a corporation by a formal yielding of its charter to the state under which it was created and the subsequent acceptance of that charter by the state. [Cases: Corporations C=>610(B).]

"The surrender of a charter can be made only by some formal, solemn act of the corporation, and will be of no avail until accepted by the government. There must be the same agreement of the parties to dissolve that there was to form the compact. It is the acceptance which gives efficacy to the surrender. Consent of the state is sometimes given by general statute." 19 Am. Jur. 2d Corporations § 2738, at 546 (1986).

surrender of copyhold. Hist. The transfer by a tenant of a copyhold estate by yielding it to the lord in trust for the transferee according to the terms in the surrender.

- In normal practice, the tenant went to the steward of the manor and delivered a rod, a glove, or other customary symbol, thereby conveying to the lord (through the steward) all interest and title to the estate, in trust, to be then granted by the lord to the transeree. See COPYHOLD.

surrender of term. See SURRENDER (5).

surrenderor. One who surrenders; esp., one who yields up a copyhold estate for conveyance. — Also spelled surrenderer. See COPYHOLD.

surrender to uses of will. Hist. A required yielding of a copyhold interest passed by will to the will's uses. — The requirement was abolished by St. 55 Geo. 3, ch. 192.

surrogate mother. See mother. surrogate parent. 1. See parent. 2. See surrogate mother under mother. surrogate-parenting agreement. (1985) A contract between a woman and typically an infertile couple under which the woman provides her uterus to carry an embryo throughout pregnancy; esp., an agreement between a person (the intentional parent) and a woman (the surrogate mother) providing that the surrogate mother will (1) bear a child for the intentional parent, and (2) relinquish any and all rights to the child. • If the surrogate mother is married, her husband must also consent to the terms of the surrogacy contract. The agreement usu. provides that the woman will relinquish to the couple any parental rights she may have upon the birth of the child. Complex issues arise concerning who is the parent of the resulting child: the genetic donor of egg or sperm, a spouse of either donor, the surrogate, or the person intending to care for the resulting child? American jurisdictions are split on the interpretation and enforceability of these contracts. — Also termed surrogacy contract. See surrogate mother under mother; intended child under child; intentional parent under parent. [Cases: Child Custody C≈274.5; Child Support C≈63; Children Out-of-Wedlock C≈15; Parent and Child C≈20.]

survival action. (1938) A lawsuit brought on behalf of a decedent's estate for injuries or damages incurred by the decedent immediately before dying. • A survival action derives from the claim that a decedent would have had — such as for pain and suffering — if he or she had survived. In contrast is a claim that the beneficiaries may have in a wrongful-death action, such as for loss of consortium or loss of support from the decedent. Cf. wrongful-death action. [Cases: Death C≈10.] survival clause. Wills & estates. A testamentary provision conditioning a bequest on a beneficiary's living for a specified period, often 60 days, after the testator's death. • If the beneficiary dies within the stated period, the testamentary gift usu. accrues to the residuary estate. — Also termed survivorship clause. Cf. simultaneous-death clause.
survival statute. (1892) A law that modifies the common law by allowing certain actions to continue in favor of a personal representative after the death of the party who could have originally brought the action; esp., a law that provides for the estate's recovery of damages incurred by the decedent immediately before death. Cf. death statute. [Cases: Death C≈10.]

Cf. HEADNOTE. Pl. syllabuses, syllabi (sil-a-bi).

symbiotic-relationship test. (1973) The standard by which a private person may be considered a state actor — and may be liable for violating someone's constitutional rights — if the relationship between the private person and the government is so close that they can fairly be said to be acting jointly. • Private acts by a private person do not generally create liability for violating someone's constitutional rights. But if a private person violates someone's constitutional rights while engaging in state action, the private person, and possibly the government, can be held liable. State action may be shown by proving that the private person and the state have a mutually dependent (symbiotic) relationship. For example, a restaurant in a public parking garage was held to have engaged in discriminatory state action by refusing to serve African-Americans. Burton v. Wilmington Parking Authority, 365 U.S. 715, 81 S.Ct. 856 (1961). There, the Court found a symbiotic relationship because the restaurant relied on the garage for its existence and significantly contributed to the municipal parking authority's ability to maintain the garage. But the symbiotic-relationship test is strictly construed. For example, the fact that an entity receives financial support from — or is heavily regulated by — the government is probably insufficient to show a symbiotic relationship. Thus, although a state had granted a partial monopoly to a public utility, the Court refused to find a symbiotic relationship between them. Jackson v. Metropolitan Edison Co., 419 U.S. 345, 95 S.Ct. 449 (1974). See joint-participation test. Cf. STATE-COMPLICATION TEST; NEXUS TEST. [Cases: Civil Rights ⊃ 1326(5,7); Constitutional Law ⊃ 1061.]

synergism (sin-ar-jiz-əm), n. Patents. 1. A combination of known elements or functions that create a result greater than the sum of the individual elements or functions. • Demonstrating that synergism exists is sometimes useful in proving nonobviousness. The U.S. Supreme Court held that synergism was a requirement for a combination patent in Great Atl. & Pac. Tea Co. v.
Supermarket Equip. Corp., 340 U.S. 147 (1950). But that holding was overturned by the Patent Act of 1952. 35 USCA § 103. [Cases: Patents C=26(1.5).] 2. A patentable device that produces a new or different function or an unusual or surprising consequence. — Also termed synergy; synergistic result. — synergistic (sin-ər-jis-tik), synergetic (sin-ər-jet-ik), adj.

systematic violation. (1980) Civil-rights law. An employer’s policy or procedure that discriminates against an employee. Such a policy or procedure will usually be considered a continuing violation. So an employee’s claim of unlawful discrimination will not be barred as untimely as long as some discriminatory effect of the policy or procedure occurs within the limitations period (e.g., 300 days for a Title VII claim). Cf. serial violation. [Cases: Civil Rights C=1505(7).]
T. Hist. 1. A letter branded on the base of the thumb of a person who claimed the benefit of clergy to prevent the person from claiming it again. • This practice was formally abolished by the Criminal Statutes (England) Repeal Act of 1827. 2. In Pennsylvania, a letter sewn onto the left sleeve of a convicted thief. • This letter — required by a 1698 statute — had to be at least four inches high and of a different color from the rest of the garment.

TAB. abbr. tax-anticipation bill.

table, n. 1. A synopsized representation, esp. in columnar form, of the particulars of a subject, usu. to present diverse items in a way that can be more easily understood. • Examples include actuarial tables, genealogical tables (which show the names and relationships of all the persons constituting a family), and interest tables.

2. A formulation of laws inscribed on tablets, such as the Twelve Tables of Roman law. See twelve tables.

table, vb. (1849) Parliamentary law. (Of a deliberative assembly) to set aside the pending business until the assembly votes to resume its consideration. • A matter that has been tabled may be brought up again by a vote of the assembly. — Also termed lay on the table; postpone temporarily.

"The early name of the motion to postpone temporarily was 'lay on the table.' (In American usage the phrase has been shortened, and the motion is now generally referred to as the motion 'to table.') The term grew out of the legislative custom of literally laying a bill awaiting further consideration on the clerk's table.

"The reference to 'laying the motion on the table' or 'tabling' is still widely used, but the more precise term, 'postpone temporarily,' is preferred when that is its purpose, because the tabling term is self-explanatory.

"Sometimes, however, the purpose of the motion is not merely to postpone temporarily, but to set the motion aside indefinitely — in effect, to 'kill' it . . . . "Alice Sturgis, The Standard Code of Parliamentary Procedure 70 (4th ed. 2001).

2. English law. To put forward (a bill, proposal, resolution, etc.) for consideration and discussion by a legislative or deliberative assembly.

tack, n. Scots law. A deed creating a lease of land or other immovable property for an annual rent payable in money, services, or fruits produced on the land. • The lessee may be referred to as a tacksman or tacks-woman. • tacksman, vb.

1. To add (one's own period of land possession) to a prior possessor's period to establish continuous adverse possession for the statutory period. [Cases: Adverse Possession ⊇ 43.] 2. To annex (a junior lien) to a first lien to acquire priority over an intermediate lien.

"It is the established doctrine in the English law, that if there be three mortgages in succession, and all duly registered, or a mortgage, and then a judgment, and then a second mortgage upon the estate, the junior mortgagee may purchase in the first mortgage, and tack it to his mortgage, and by that contrivance 'squeeze out' the middle mortgage and gain preference over it. The same rule would apply if the first as well as the second incumbrance was a judgment; but the incumbrancer who tacks must always be a mortgagee, for he stands in the light of a bona fide purchaser, parting with his money upon the security of the mortgage." 4 James Kent, Commentaries on American Law *176 (George Comstock ed., 11th ed. 1866).

3. Scots law. To lease land or another immovable for an annual rent payable in money, services, or fruits produced on the land.

tacking. (18c) 1. tail special. (15c) A tail limited to specified heirs of the donee's body. — Also termed special tail. [Cases: Estates in Property ⊇ 12; Wills ⊇ 604.]

"Estates-tail are either general, or special. . . . Tenant in tail-special is where the gift is restrained to certain heirs . . . and does not go to all of them in general. And this may happen in several ways. I shall instance in only one: as where lands and tenements are given to a man and the heirs of his body, on Mary his now wife to be begotten, here no issue can inherit, but such special issue as is engendered, between them two, not such as the husband may have by another wife: and therefore it is called special tail." 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 113–14 (1766).

tail coverage. Insurance. An extension of a claims-made professional-liability policy to protect against claims and lawsuits filed after the end of the policy period but based on negligent acts that occurred during the policy period. — Also termed extended-reporting-period endorsement. Hist. A levy demanded by a feudal lord from tenants in lieu of the tenants' provision of goods and services. • The timing and amount of the levy varied according to local custom, type of tenure, and caprice. 3. TOLLAGE.

tally. 1. Hist. A stick cut into two parts and marked with notches to show what was due between a debtor and creditor.

"The tally, used as a receipt for money or chattels, was a narrow wooden stick with notches of varying dimensions to represent the amount received. After the notches had been cut, the stick was split lengthwise into two unequal pieces. The longer, which contained a stump or handle and was called the 'stock,' was given to the person making the payment, and the shorter, a flat strip called the 'foil,' to the other party. If the sum involved was disputed, the two pieces could be fitted one to the other to see if they would 'tally,'" C.H.S. Fifoot, History and Sources of the Common Law: Tort and Contract 223 (1949).

"A thousand pounds was marked by cutting out the thickness of the palm of the hand, a hundred by the breadth of the thumb, a score by the breadth of the little finger, one pound by that of a swelling barley-corn. . . . The terminology has left a permanent imprint on our language. If you lent money to the Bank of England, tallies were cut for the amount: the bank kept the foil and you received the stock, you thus held 'Bank Stock' of the amount recorded upon it. When the form of cheque was adopted, it was not indeed called a foil, but the part retained by the payer is still the counterfoil; and the word 'cheque' itself goes back ultimately to the same root as 'exchequer.'" Reginald L. Poole, The Exchequer in the Twelfth Century 86–93 (1912).

"From early times tallies were used in the Exchequer and this lasted until 1826. The burning of a large quantity of old tallies led to the burning down of the old Houses of Parliament." David M. Walker, The Oxford Companion to Law 1207 (1980).

tax, n. (14c) A charge, usu. monetary, imposed by the government on persons, entities, transactions, or property to yield public revenue. • Most broadly, the term embraces all governmental impositions on the person, property, privileges, occupations, and enjoyment of the people, and includes duties, imposts, and excises. Although a tax is often thought of as being pecuniary in nature, it is not necessarily payable in money. [Cases: Internal Revenue C=3001; Taxation C=2001.] — tax, vb.

"Taxes are the enforced proportional contributions from persons and property, levied by the state by virtue of its sovereignty for the support of government and for all public needs. This definition of taxes, often referred to as 'Cooley's definition,' has been quoted and indorsed, by many different courts. While this definition of taxes characterizes them as 'contributions,' other definitions refer to them as 'imposts,' 'duty or impost,' 'charges,' 'burdens,' or 'exactions; but these variations in phraseology are of no practical importance."' 1 Thomas M. Cooley, The Law of Taxation §1, at 61–63 (Clark A. Nichols ed., 4th ed. 1924).

accumulated-earnings tax. (1957) A penalty tax imposed on a corporation that has retained its earnings in an effort to avoid the income-tax liability arising once the earnings are distributed to shareholders as dividends. — Also termed undistributed-earnings tax. [Cases: Internal Revenue C=3843–3845.]

general tax. (16c) 1. A tax that returns no special benefit to the taxpayer other than the support of government programs that benefit all. [Cases: Taxation $2001, 2010.] 2. A property tax or an ad valorem tax that is imposed for no special purpose except to produce public revenue. Cf. special assessment under assessment.
generation-skipping taxes. (1977) A tax on a property transfer that skips a generation. • The tax limits the use of generation-skipping techniques as a means of avoiding estate taxes. [Cases: Internal Revenue $4220.]
generation-skipping transfer tax. (1984) A gift or estate tax imposed on a generation-skipping transfer or a generation-skipping trust. IRC (26 USCA) §§ 2601–2663. — Sometimes shortened to generation-skipping tax; transfer tax. See direct skip; generation-skipping transfer; generation-skipping trust under trust; taxable distribution. [Cases: Internal Revenue $4220–4228.]
gift tax. (1925) A tax imposed when property is voluntarily and gratuitously transferred. • Under federal law, the gift tax is imposed on the donor, but some states tax the donee. [Cases: Internal Revenue $4200; Taxation $3381.]
graduated tax. 1. A tax employing a rate schedule with higher marginal rates for larger taxable bases (income, property, transfer, etc.) 2. See progressive tax.
gross-income tax. (1916) A tax on gross income, possibly after the deduction for costs of goods sold, rather than on net profits; an income tax without allowance for expenses or deductions. See gross income under income. [Cases: Internal Revenue $310; Taxation $3447.]
gross-receipts tax. A tax on a business's gross receipts, without a deduction for costs of goods sold, or allowance for expenses or deductions. See gross receipts. [Cases: Taxation $3604.] head tax. 1. See poll tax. 2. Head money (3). hidden tax. (1935) A tax that is paid, often unknowingly, by someone other than the person or entity on whom it is levied; esp., a tax imposed on a manufacturer or seller (such as a gasoline producer) who passes it on to consumers in the form of higher sales prices.
highway tax. A tax raised to pay for the construction, repair, and maintenance of highways. [Cases: Highways $123.]
holding-company tax. A federal tax imposed on undistributed personal-holding-company income after allowing deductions for such things as dividends paid. IRC (26 USCA) § 545. — Also termed personal-holding-company tax. [Cases: Internal Revenue $3850.1–3858.] illegal tax. 1. A tax that violates the law, esp. the constitution. • For an example, see poll tax. 2. See erroneous tax.

income tax. (18c) A tax on an individual's or entity's net income. • The federal income tax — set forth in the Internal Revenue Code — is the federal government's primary source of revenue, and most states also have income taxes. Cf. property tax; excise. [Cases: Internal Revenue Code 3065-4142; Taxation Code 3401.]

indirect tax. (18c) A tax on a right or privilege, such as an occupation tax or franchise tax. • An indirect tax is often presumed to be partly or wholly passed on from the nominal taxpayer to another person. [Cases: Licenses Code 1-1.]

inheritance tax. (18c) 1. A tax imposed on a person who inherits property from another (unlike an estate tax, which is imposed on the decedent's estate). • There is no federal inheritance tax, but some states have an inheritance tax (though it is creditable or deductible under the federal estate tax). — Also termed succession tax; death tax. Cf. estate tax. [Cases: Taxation Code 3301. 2. Loosely, an estate tax.

in lieu tax. A tax imposed as a substitute for another. [Cases: Taxation Code 2295.]

intangible tax. A state tax imposed on the privilege of owning, transferring, devising, or otherwise dealing with intangible property. [Cases: Taxation Code 2061.]

interest-equalization tax. A tax imposed on a U.S. citizen's acquisition of stock issued by a foreign issuer or a debt obligation of a foreign obligor, but only if the obligation did not mature within a year. • This tax was repealed in the mid-1970s. IRC (26 USCA) § 4911.

kiddie tax. (18c) Slang. A federal tax imposed on a child's unearned income (above an exempt amount) at the parents' tax rate if the parents' rate is higher and if the child is under 18 years old. — Also termed child's income tax.

land tax. See property tax.

legacy tax. A tax on a legacy, often with the provision that the rate increases as the relationship of the legatee becomes more remote from the testator. • In English law, this tax was known as a legacy duty; it was abolished in 1949. Cf. collateral inheritance tax. [Cases: Taxation Code 3301.]

luxury tax. (1925) An excise tax imposed on high-priced items that are not deemed necessities (such as cars costing more than a specified amount). Cf. sin tax. [Cases: Taxation Code 3602.]

minimum tax. See alternative minimum tax.

nanny tax. (1993) Slang. A federal social-security tax imposed on the employer of a domestic employee if the employer pays that employee more than a specified amount in total wages in a year. • The term, which is not a technical legal phrase, was popularized in the mid-1990s, when several of President Clinton's nominees were found not to have paid the social-security tax for their nannies.

occupation tax. (1879) An excise tax imposed for the privilege of carrying on a business, trade, or profession. • For example, many states require lawyers to pay an occupation tax. — Also termed occupational tax. [Cases: Licenses Code 1.]

payroll tax. (1936) 1. A tax payable by an employer based on its payroll (such as a social-security tax or an unemployment tax). [Cases: Internal Revenue Code 4849; Taxation Code 3560.] 2. A tax collected by an employer from its employees' gross pay (such as an income tax or a social-security tax). See withholding tax.

per capita tax. See poll tax.

personal-holding-company tax. See holding company tax.

personal-property tax. (1863) A tax on personal property (such as jewelry or household furniture) levied by a state or local government. [Cases: Taxation Code 2176.]

pick-up tax. Slang. A state death tax levied in an amount equal to the federal death-tax credit. — Also termed sponge tax; slack tax. [Cases: Taxation Code 3301.]

poll tax. (17c) A fixed tax levied on each person within a jurisdiction. • The 24th Amendment prohibits the federal and state governments from imposing poll taxes as a condition for voting. — Also termed per capita tax; capitulation tax; capitulation; head tax. [Cases: Elections Code 83; Taxation Code 2050.]

premium tax. A state tax paid by an insurer on premiums paid by the insured. [Cases: Taxation Code 2243.]

privilege tax. A tax on the privilege of carrying on a business or occupation for which a license or franchise is required. [Cases: Licenses Code 1.]

progressive tax. (1886) 1. A tax structured so that the effective tax rate increases more than proportionately as the tax base increases, or so that an exemption remains flat or diminishes. • With this type of tax, the percentage of income paid in taxes increases as the taxpayer's income increases. Most income taxes are progressive, so that higher incomes are taxed at a higher rate. But a tax can be progressive without using graduated rates. — Also termed graduated tax. Cf. regressive tax; flat tax. [Cases: Internal Revenue Code 3545-3552; Taxation Code 3526.] 2. See graduated tax.

property tax. (1808) A tax levied on the owner of property (esp. real property), usu. based on the property's value. • Local governments often impose property taxes to finance school districts, municipal projects, and the like. — Also termed (specif.) land tax. Cf. income tax; excise. [Cases: Taxation Code 2170-2216.]

proportional tax. See flat tax. regressive tax. (1893) A tax structured so that the effective tax rate decreases as the tax base increases. • With this type of tax, the percentage of income paid in taxes decreases as the taxpayer’s income increases. A flat tax (such as the typical sales tax) is usu. considered regressive — despite its constant rate — because it is more burdensome for low-income taxpayers than high-income taxpayers. A growing exemption also produces a regressive tax effect. Cf. progressive tax; flat tax. [Cases: Internal Revenue C—3545—3552; Taxation C—3526.] repressive tax. See sin tax.

sales tax. (1921) A tax imposed on the sale of goods and services, usu. measured as a percentage of their price. • Also termed retail sales tax. See flat tax. [Cases: Taxation C—3602.]

’sales tax' encompasses a large variety of levies, the term often refers to the 'retail sales tax,' where the tax is separately stated and collected on a transaction-by-transaction basis from the consumer; although the economic burden of the sales tax falls upon the consumer, the seller has the statutory duty to collect the tax for the taxing jurisdiction.” 68 Am. Jur. 2d Sales and Use Tax § 1, at 11 (1993).

self-employment tax. The Social-Security and Medicare tax imposed on the net earnings of a self-employed person. [Cases: Internal Revenue C—4381.]

service-occupation tax. A tax imposed on persons who sell services, usu. computed as a percentage of net cost of the tangible personal property (e.g., materials and goods) transferred as an incident to the sale. [Cases: Licenses C—1; Taxation C—3658.]

severance tax. A tax imposed on the value of oil, gas, timber, or other natural resources extracted from the earth. [Cases: Logs and Logging C—4; Mines and Minerals C—87.]

sinking-fund tax. A tax to be applied to the repayment of a public loan.

sin tax. (1971) An excise tax imposed on goods or activities that are considered harmful or immoral (such as cigarettes, liquor, or gambling). • Also termed repressive tax. Cf. luxury tax.

slack tax. See pickup tax.

special tax. (18c) 1. A tax levied for a unique purpose.
2. A tax (such as an inheritance tax) that is levied in addition to a general tax. [Cases: Taxation C—24.]

specific tax. (18c) A tax imposed as a fixed sum on each article or item of property of a given class or kind without regard to its value.

sponge tax. See pickup tax.

stamp tax. (18c) A tax imposed by requiring the purchase of a revenue stamp that must be affixed to a legal document (such as a deed or note) before the document can be recorded. • Also termed documentary-stamp transfer tax. [Cases: Internal Revenue C—4390—4409.]

state tax. (18c) 1. A tax — usu. in the form of a sales or income tax — earmarked for state, rather than federal or municipal, purposes. [Cases: Taxation C—2001.]
2. A tax levied under a state law.

stock-transfer tax. A tax levied by the federal government and by some states on the transfer or sale of shares of stock. • Often shortened to transfer tax. [Cases: Internal Revenue C—4404; Taxation C—2218.]

’some state statutes impose special taxes, usually in the form of a stamp tax, upon sales and agreements for sale and other transfers of stock in corporations. Such a tax is in the nature of an excise tax on the transfer. Taxes on the issuance and transfer of corporate stock, commonly known as 'stock transfer taxes' and payable by means of stamps, are constitutional, as within the power of state governments.’ 71 Am. Jur. 2d State and Local Taxation § 643, at 896 (1973).

stopgap tax. A tax, usu. temporary, levied during the term of a budget to cover an unexpected deficit. • Also termed additional tax.

succession tax. See inheritance tax (1).

surtax. (1881) An additional tax imposed on something being taxed or on the primary tax itself. [Cases: Taxation C—3527.]

tonnage tax. See tonnage duty under duty (4). transfer tax. (1890) 1. A tax imposed on the transfer of property, esp. by will, inheritance, or gift. [Cases: Internal Revenue C—4220—4228; Taxation C—2218, 3301, 3381.]

2. See stock-transfer tax. 3. See generation-skipping transfer tax.

undistributed-earnings tax. See accumulated-earnings tax.

unemployment tax. (1937) A tax imposed on an employer by state or federal law to cover the cost of unemployment insurance. • The Federal Unemployment Tax Act (FUTA) provides for a tax based on a percentage of employee earnings but allows a credit for amounts paid in state unemployment taxes. [Cases: Internal Revenue C—4305.]

unified transfer tax. The federal transfer tax imposed equally on property transferred during life or at death.
• Until 1977, gift-tax rates were lower than estate taxes. • Also termed unified estate-and-gift tax.

unitary tax. A tax of income earned locally by a business that transacts business through an affiliated company outside the state or country. See unitary business. [Cases: Taxation C—3477.]

unrelated-business-income tax. (1962) A tax levied on a not-for-profit organization’s taxable income, such as advertising revenue from a publication. [Cases: Internal Revenue C—4068; Taxation C—3488.]

use tax. A tax imposed on the use of certain goods that are bought outside the taxing authority’s jurisdiction. • Use taxes are designed to discourage the purchase of products that are not subject to the sales tax. [Cases: Taxation C—3603.]

value-added tax. (1935) A tax assessed at each step in the production of a commodity, based on the value added at each step by the difference between the commodity’s production cost and its selling price.

- A value-added tax — which is levied in several European countries — effectively acts as a sales tax on the ultimate consumer. — Abbr. VAT. [Cases: Taxation C=3602.]

windfall-profits tax. (1973) A tax imposed on a business or industry as a result of a sudden increase in profits.

- An example is the tax imposed on oil companies in 1980 for profits resulting from the Arab oil embargo of the 1970s. [Cases: Internal Revenue C=4338.]

window tax. Hist. English law. A tax imposed on a house containing a certain number of windows (usu. more than six). - It was established under the Taxation Act of 1695 and replaced with a tax on inhabited houses established under the House Tax of 1851. See HOUSE-DUTY.

 withholding tax. (1927) A portion of income tax that is subtracted from salary, wages, dividends, or other income before the earner receives payment.

- The most common example is the income tax and social-security tax withheld by an employer from an employee's pay. [Cases: Internal Revenue C=4849; Taxation C=3560.]

taxable, adj. (16c) 1. Subject to taxation <interest earned on a checking account is taxable income>. [Cases: Internal Revenue C=3110; Taxation C=3446–3477.]

- 2. (Of legal costs or fees) assessable <expert-witness fees are not taxable court costs>. [Cases: Costs C=146–194; Federal Civil Procedure C=2742.]

taxable cost. See COST (3).

taxable distribution. (1927) A generation-skipping transfer from a trust to the beneficiary (i.e., the skip person) that is neither a direct skip nor a taxable termination. See GENERATION-SKIPPING TRANSFER; generation-skipping transfer tax under TAX; generation-skipping trust under TRUST; SKIP PERSON. [Cases: Internal Revenue C=4224.]

taxable estate. See ESTATE (3).

taxable gift. See GIFT.

taxable income. See INCOME.

taxable termination. (1988) A taxable event that occurs when (1) an interest in a generation-skipping trust property terminates (as on the death of a skip person’s parent who possessed the interest), (2) no interest in the trust is held by a nonskip person, and (3) a distribution may be made to a skip person. - Before the creation of taxable terminations in 1976, a taxpayer could create a trust that paid income to a child for life, then to that child’s child for life, and so on without incurring an estate or gift tax liability at the death of each generation’s beneficiary. See GENERATION-SKIPPING TRANSFER; generation-skipping transfer tax under TAX; generation-skipping trust under TRUST; SKIP PERSON. [Cases: Internal Revenue C=4224.]

taxable year. See tax year under YEAR.

tax accounting. The accounting rules and methods used in determining a taxpayer’s liability.

tax-anticipation bill. A short-term obligation issued by the U.S. Treasury to meet the cash-flow needs of the government. - Corporations can tender these bills at par value to make quarterly tax payments. — Abbr. TAB.

tax-anticipation note. See NOTE (1).

tax-anticipation warrant. See WARRANT (2).

tax-apportionment clause. A testamentary provision directing how inheritance and estate taxes should be paid. [Cases: Internal Revenue C=4824; Taxation C=3346.]

tax assessment. See ASSESSMENT (3).

tax assessor. See ASSESSOR (1).

taxation. (14c) 1. The imposition or assessment of a tax; the means by which the state obtains the revenue required for its activities. [Cases: Internal Revenue C=3001–3007; Taxation C=2001.]

- double taxation. (18c) 1. The imposition of two taxes on the same property during the same period and for the same taxing purpose. [Cases: Taxation C=2150–2156, 3435.]

- 2. The imposition of two taxes on one corporate profit; esp., the structure of taxation employed by Subchapter C of the Internal Revenue Code, under which corporate profits are taxed twice, once to the corporation when earned and once to the shareholders when the earnings are distributed as dividends. 3. Int’l law. The imposition of comparable taxes in two or more states on the same taxpayer for the same subject matter or identical goods. — Also termed duplicate taxation.

duplicate taxation. See double taxation.

equal and uniform taxation. A tax system in which no person or class of persons in the taxing district — whether it be a state, city, or county — is taxed at a different rate from others in the same district on the same value or thing. [Cases: Taxation C=2134, 3428, 3627.]

pass-through taxation. (1998) The taxation of an entity’s owners for the entity’s income without taxing the entity itself. - Partnerships and S corporations are taxed under this method. So are limited liability companies and limited liability partnerships unless they elect to be taxed as corporations by “checking the box” on their income tax returns. The election is made on Form 8832 (Entity Classification Election). See Treas. Reg. § 301.7701-(3)(b)(1). — Also termed conduit taxation. [Cases: Internal Revenue C=3896, 3920–3924.]

- 2. TAXATION OF COSTS.

taxation of costs. The process of fixing the amount of litigation-related expenses that a prevailing party is entitled to be awarded. — Sometimes shortened to taxation. [Cases: Costs C=195; Federal Civil Procedure C=2742.1.]

tax audit. See AUDIT. tax avoidance. (1927) The act of taking advantage of legally available tax-planning opportunities in order to minimize one’s tax liability. Cf. TAX EVASION. [Cases: Internal Revenue \(\cong 3056-3058\); Taxation \(\cong 2229\).]

tax base. The total property, income, or wealth subject to taxation in a given jurisdiction; the aggregate value of the property being taxed by a particular tax. Cf. BASIS (2).

tax basis. See BASIS (2).

tax-benefit doctrine. See TAX-BENEFIT RULE.

tax-benefit rule. (1942) The principle that if a taxpayer recovers a loss or expense that was deducted in a previous year, the recovery must be included in the current year’s gross income to the extent that it was previously deducted. — Also termed tax-benefit doctrine. [Cases: Internal Revenue \(\cong 3089, 3138\).]

tax bracket. (1923) A categorized level of income subject to a particular tax rate under federal or state law. [<28% tax bracket>. [Cases: Internal Revenue \(\cong 3545-3552\); Taxation \(\cong 3525-3529\).]

tax certificate. An instrument issued to the buyer of tax credit. (1946) An amount subtracted directly from tax court. (1841) [Cases: Internal Revenue \(\cong 4645-4655\).]

tax court. (1841) 1. TAX COURT, U.S. 2. In some states, a court that hears appeals in nonfederal tax cases and can modify or change any valuation, assessment, classification, tax, or final order that is appealed. [Cases: Taxation \(\cong 2986, 3064\).]

Tax Court, U.S. A federal court that hears appeals by taxpayers from adverse IRS decisions about tax deficiencies. • The Tax Court was created in 1942, replacing the Board of Tax Appeals. — Abbr. T.C. [Cases: Internal Revenue \(\cong 4645-4655\).]

tax credit. (1946) An amount subtracted directly from one’s total tax liability, dollar for dollar, as opposed to a deduction from gross income. — Often shortened to credit. Cf. DEDUCTION (2). [Cases: Internal Revenue \(\cong 3520-3537\); Taxation \(\cong 3517\).]

choice-and-dependent-care tax credit. (2001) A tax credit available to a person who is employed full-time and who maintains a household for a dependent child or a disabled spouse or dependent. [Cases: Internal Revenue \(\cong 3520, 3534\); Taxation \(\cong 3517\).]

earned-income credit. (1927) A refundable federal tax credit on the earned income of a low-income worker with dependent children. • The credit is paid to the taxpayer even if it exceeds the total tax liability. See IRC (26 USCA) § 32. — Abbr. EIC. [Cases: Internal Revenue \(\cong 3532\).]

foreign tax credit. (1928) A tax credit against U.S. income taxes for a taxpayer who earns income overseas and has paid foreign taxes on that income. See FOREIGN-earned-income exclusion. [Cases: Internal Revenue \(\cong 4098\).]

“Since direct foreign investments and business operations of United States persons often attract foreign income taxes along with the baseline U.S. tax, the specter of double taxation is bound to haunt the pursuit of foreign income. The principal accommodation of the U.S. tax system to the possibility of source-based taxation by other countries is the foreign tax credit. From a simple idea—a dollar-for-dollar reduction of U.S. tax for income taxes paid to foreign countries—the foreign tax credit has evolved into an elaborate statutory structure capable of engulfing an entire professional career.” Joseph Isenbergh, International Taxation 14 (2000).

investment tax credit. (1965) A tax credit intended to stimulate business investment in capital goods by allowing a percentage of the purchase price as a credit against the taxpayer's income taxes. • The Tax Reform Act of 1986 generally repealed this credit retroactively for most property placed in service after January 1, 1986. — Abbr. IT. [Cases: Internal Revenue \(\cong 3523\); Taxation \(\cong 3517\).] unified credit. See unified estate-and-gift tax credit.

unified estate-and-gift tax credit. (1988) A tax credit applied against the federal unified transfer tax. IRC (26 USCA) § 2001(c)(2). — Often shortened to unified credit. — Also termed applicable exclusion credit. [Cases: Internal Revenue \(\cong 4182.30\).]

tax deduction. See DEDUCTION (2).

unified estate-and-gift tax credit. (1988) A tax credit applied against the federal unified transfer tax. IRC (26 USCA) § 2001(c)(2). — Often shortened to unified credit. — Also termed applicable exclusion credit. [Cases: Internal Revenue \(\cong 4182.30\).]

tax deed. See DEED.

tax-deferred, adj. (1948) Not taxable until a future date or event. . [Cases: Internal Revenue \(\cong 3575-3615\).]

tax-deferred account. See ACCOUNT.

tax-deferred annuity. See 403(b) plan under EMPLOYEE BENEFIT PLAN.

tax deferral. See DEFERRAL.

tax deficiency. See DEFICIENCY (2).

tax-deficiency notice. See NINETY-DAY LETTER.

tax denier. See TAX PROTESTER.

tax evasion. (1922) The willful attempt to defeat or circumvent the tax law in order to illegally reduce one’s tax liability. • Tax evasion is punishable by both civil and criminal penalties. — Also termed tax fraud. Cf. TAX AVOIDANCE. [Cases: Internal Revenue \(\cong 5263\); Taxation \(\cong 3232, 3563, 3712\).]

tax-exempt, adj. (1923) 1. By law not subject to taxation . [Cases: Internal Revenue \(\cong 4045-4071\); Taxation \(\cong 2339-2356, 3518, 3664\).] 2. Bearing interest that is free from income tax <tax-exempt municipal bonds>. — Also termed tax-free.

tax-exempt bond. See BOND (3).

tax ferret. A private person engaged in the business of searching for taxable property that has somehow not been taxed. [Cases: Internal Revenue \(\cong 4442\).]

tax foreclosure. See FORECLOSURE.

tax fraud. See TAX EVASION.

tax-free, adj. See TAX-EXEMPT.
tax-free exchange. (1927) A transfer of property for which the tax law specifically defers (or possibly exempts) income-tax consequences. • For example, a transfer of property to a controlled corporation under IRC (26 USCA) § 351(a) and a like-kind exchange under IRC (26 USCA) § 1031(a). — Also termed 1031 exchange. Cf. 1031 exchange. [Cases: Internal Revenue C=3184; Taxation C=3466.]

tax haven. (18c) A jurisdiction, esp. a country, that imposes little or no tax on the profits from transactions carried on there or on persons resident there.

"Among the reasons for this complexity [in international taxation] is the elusive nature of tax havens. A tax haven is not always immediately obvious. What makes a particular environment a tax haven is not invariably a low rate of tax, but relations with other tax regimes that permit the ultimate deflection of income to a low-tax environment with which the income may have little indigenous connection." Joseph Isenbergh. International Taxation 16 (2000).

tax home. (18c) A taxpayer's principal business location, post, or station. • Travel expenses are tax-deductible only if the taxpayer is traveling away from home. [Cases: Internal Revenue C=3343.]

tax-identification number. A nine-digit tracking number assigned by the Internal Revenue Service to the tax accounts of businesses and also to entities or individuals who are required to file business tax returns. — Abbr. TIN. — Often shortened to tax i.d. — Also termed employer-identification number (EIN); federal-employer-identification number (FEIN).

tax incentive. (18c) A governmental enticement, through a tax benefit, to engage in a particular activity, such as the contribution of money or property to a qualified charity.

tax-increment financing. A technique used by a municipality to finance commercial developments usu. involving issuing bonds to finance land acquisition and other up-front costs, and then using the additional property taxes generated from the new development to service the debt. — Abbr. TIF. [Cases: Municipal Corporations C=953.]

taxing district. See DISTRICT.

taxing power. See POWER (3).

tax-injunction act. A federal law prohibiting a federal court from interfering with the assessment or collection of any state tax where the state affords a plain, speedy, and efficient remedy in its own courts. 28 USCA § 1341. [Cases: Federal Courts C=27.]

tax law. (18c) 1. INTERNAL REVENUE CODE. 2. The statutory, regulatory, constitutional, and common-law rules that constitute the law applicable to taxation. 3. The area of legal study dealing with taxation.

tax lease. See LEASE.

tax levy. See LEVY (1).

tax liability. (1932) The amount that a taxpayer legally owes after calculating the applicable tax; the amount of unpaid taxes.

tax lien. See liEN.

tax list. An official schedule listing the taxable items within a jurisdiction; ROLL (2).

tax loophole. See LOOPHOLE.

tax-loss carryback. See CARRYBACK.

tax-loss carryforward. See CARRYOVER.

tax-loss carryover. See CARRYOVER.

tax negligence. See NEGLIGENCE.

tax-option corporation. See S corporation under CORPORATION.

taxpayer. One who pays or is subject to a tax. Cf. TAX PROTESTER. [Cases: Internal Revenue C=3560; Taxation C=2168, 3480-3495.]

taxpayer's bill of rights. (1988) Federal legislation granting taxpayers specific rights when dealing with the Internal Revenue Service, such as the right to have representation and the right to receive written notice of a levy 30 days before enforcement.

taxpayer's lists. Written exhibits required of taxpayers in some taxing districts, listing all property owned by them and subject to taxation, used as a basis for assessment and valuation. Cf. ROLL (2). [Cases: Taxation C=2462, 2493.]

taxpayer-standing doctrine. (1977) Constitutional law. The principle that a taxpayer has no standing to sue the government for allegedly mispending the public's tax money unless the taxpayer can demonstrate a personal stake and show some direct injury. [Cases: Constitutional Law C=683; Municipal Corporations C=987.]

tax-preference items. (1971) Certain items that, even though lawfully deducted in arriving at taxable income for regular tax purposes, must be considered in calculating a taxpayer's alternative minimum tax. See alternative minimum tax under TAX. [Cases: Internal Revenue C=3550.]

tax protest. A taxpayer's formal, usu. written, statement that he or she does not acknowledge a legal or just basis for the tax or a duty to pay it. • The purpose of the protest is to make clear that any payment is made "under protest" and to avoid waiving the right to recover the money paid if the tax is later invalidated.

tax protestor. 1. One who files a tax protest. 2. A person who opposes tax laws and seeks or employs ways, often illegal, to avoid the laws' effects; esp., a person who refuses to pay a tax on grounds that the government has no authority to levy the tax. — Sometimes spelled tax protestor. — Also termed tax denier. Cf. TAXPAYER.

illegal tax protestor. Hlst. The name once used by the IRS to designate a person believed to have used illegal means to avoid or reduce tax liability. • In the Internal Revenue Service Restructuring and Reform Act of 1998, Congress forbade the IRS to continue using the label. Today the term nonfiler is typically used instead.

tax-protest scheme. A plan designed to avoid or express dissatisfaction with tax laws, usu. by unlawful means. • The most common schemes involve illegally evading or reducing tax liabilities, or interfering with the administration of the tax laws.

tax rate. (1876) A mathematical figure for calculating a tax, usu. expressed as a percentage. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3545–3552; Taxation 3525–3529, 3672, 3673.]

average tax rate. (1895) A taxpayer’s tax liability divided by the amount of taxable income. — Also called effective tax rate.

marginal tax rate. (1939) In a tax scheme, the rate applicable to the last dollar of income earned by the taxpayer. • This concept is useful in calculating the tax effect of receiving additional income or claiming additional deductions. See tax bracket.

tax-rate schedule. (1951) A schedule used to determine the tax on a given level of taxable income and based on a taxpayer’s status (for example, married filing a joint income-tax return). — Also termed tax table. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3545–3552; Taxation 3525–3529.]

tax rebate. See tax refund.

tempus utile (tem-pas yoo-to-lee), n. [Latin “useful time”] Hist. Time that one can use to exercise his or her legal rights; the period within which an action or proceeding must be brought. • This is the period before prescription or limitation cuts off a right.

tenancy. (16c) 1. The possession or occupancy of land under a lease; a leasehold interest in real estate. 2. The period of such possession or occupancy. See ESTATE (1). [Cases: Landlord and Tenant § 20.] 3. The possession of real or personal property by right or title, esp. under a conveying instrument such as a deed or will.

at-will tenancy. See tenancy at will.

common tenancy. See tenancy in common.

cotenancy. (1875) A tenancy with two or more coowners who have unity of possession. • Examples are a joint tenancy and tenancy in common. [Cases: Joint Tenancy § 1; Tenancy in Common § 1.]

entire tenancy. (17c) A tenancy possessed by one person, as opposed to a joint or common tenancy. See estate by entirety under ESTATE (1).

general tenancy. (18c) A tenancy that is not of fixed duration under the parties’ agreement. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant § 114.]

holdover tenancy. See tenancy at sufferance.

joint tenancy. (17c) A tenancy with two or more coowners who take identical interests simultaneously by the same instrument and with the same right of possession. • A joint tenancy differs from a tenancy in common because each joint tenant has a right of survivorship to the other’s share (in some states, this right must be clearly expressed in the conveyance — otherwise, the tenancy will be presumed to be a tenancy in common). See RIGHT OF SURVIVORSHIP. Cf. tenancy in common. [Cases: Joint Tenancy § 1, 6.]

“The rules for creation of a joint tenancy are these: The joint tenants must get their interests at the same time. They must become entitled to possession at the same time. The interests must be physically undivided interests, and each undivided interest must be an equal fraction of the whole — e.g., a one-third undivided interest to each of three joint tenants. The joint tenants must get their interests by the same instrument — e.g., the same deed or will. The joint tenants must get the same kinds of estates — e.g., in fee simple, for life, and so on.” Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 55 (2d ed. 1984).

life tenancy. See life estate under estate (i).

periodic tenancy. (1891) A tenancy that automatically continues for successive periods — usu. month to month or year to year — unless terminated at the end of a period by notice. • A typical example is a month-to-month apartment lease. This type of tenancy originated through court rulings that, when the lessee received a periodic rent, the lease could not be terminated without reasonable notice. — Also termed tenancy from period to period; periodic estate; estate from period to period; (more specifically) month-to-month tenancy (or estate); year-to-year tenancy (or estate). [Cases: Landlord and Tenant ◄—114, 115.]

several tenancy. (17c) A tenancy that is separate and not held jointly with another person.

tenancy at sufferance. (18c) A tenancy arising when a person who has been in lawful possession of property wrongfully remains as a holdover after his or her interest has expired. • A tenancy at sufferance takes the form of either a tenancy at will or a periodic tenancy. — Also termed holdover tenancy; estate at sufferance. See holding over (i). [Cases: Landlord and Tenant ◄—117, 119.]

“A tenancy at sufferance arises where a tenant, having entered upon land under a valid tenancy, holds over without the landlord's assent or dissent. Such a tenant differs from a trespasser in that his original entry was lawful, and from a tenant at will in that his tenancy exists without the landlord's assent. No rent, as such, is payable, but the tenant is liable to pay compensation for his use and occupation of the land. The tenancy may be determined [i.e., terminated] at any time, and may be converted into a yearly or other periodic tenancy in the usual way, e.g., if rent is paid and accepted with reference to a year in circumstances where the parties intended there to be a tenancy.” Robert E. Megarry & M.P. Thompson, A Manual of the Law of Real Property 319 (6th ed. 1993).

tenancy attendant on the inheritance. A tenancy for a term that is vested in a trustee in trust for the owner of the inheritance. • The tenancy is a form of personal property to the trustee. — Also termed tenancy attendant on an inheritance; term attendant on the inheritance.

tenancy at will. (17c) A tenancy in which the tenant holds possession with the landlord's consent but without fixed terms (as for duration or rent); specif., a tenancy that is terminable at the will of either the transferor or the transferee and that has no designated period of duration. • Such a tenancy may be terminated by either party upon fair notice. — Also termed at-will tenancy; estate at will. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant ◄—117, 118, 120.]

tenancy by the entirety (en-ti-or tee). See estate by entirety under estate (i). [Cases: Husband and Wife ◄—14.2—14.11.]

“Tenancy by the entireties is a form of joint tenancy. It resembles joint tenancy in that upon the death of either husband or wife the survivor automatically acquires title to the share of the deceased spouse. Like a joint tenancy, also, it is necessary for the creation of a tenancy by the entireties that the husband and wife acquire title by the same deed or will.” Robert Kratovil, Real Estate Law 198 (6th ed. 1974).

“Where [tenancy by the entirety] is recognized, it may exist only between a husband and a wife. It resembles, in most respects, the joint tenancy. The only major difference is that a tenant by the entirety may not destroy the other spouse's right of survivorship by transferring his or her interest to another. Whether a tenant by the entirety may transfer any interest to a third party — for example, the right of present possession or the contingent right of survivorship — is a matter on which the states differ. Most take the view that no interest may be transferred. The husband and wife may, of course, together convey their estate to a third person. If they both wish to convert their tenancy into a tenancy in common or a joint tenancy, they may do so. Upon the death of a tenant by the entirety, no interest passes, in theory, to the surviving spouse. As was true of the joint tenancy, the survivor's ownership is thought simply to expand to absorb the relinquished ownership of the decedent.” Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 52 (2d ed. 1984).

“A tenancy by the entireties could exist in any estate, whether in fee, for life, for years or otherwise. The nature of the tenancy was virtually that of an unseverable joint tenancy: neither husband nor wife could dispose of any interest in the land without the concurrence of the other, nor could one of them cause a forfeiture of the land. The unity of husband and wife was regarded as so complete that they were said to be seised ‘per tout et non per mie,’ the survivor being entitled to the whole of the land by force of the original limitation, discharged of the other's right to participate, and not, as in the case of joint tenancy, by virtue of survivorship on the death of the other tenant. Unlike joint tenants, neither tenant was regarded as having any potential share in the land: ‘between husband and wife there are no moieties.’” Robert E. Megarry & P.W. Baker, A Manual of the Law of Real Property 232—33 (4th ed. 1969) (quoting Marquis of Winchester's Case, 3 Co. Rep. 1a, 5a (1583)).

tenancy by the rod. See copyhold.

tenancy by the verge. See copyhold.

tenancy for a term. (17c) A tenancy whose duration is known in years, weeks, or days from the moment of its creation. — Also termed tenancy for a period; tenancy for years; term for years; term of years; estate for a term; estate for years; lease for years. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant ◄—70, 72, 113—115.]

tenancy from period to period. See periodic tenancy.

tenancy in common. (17c) A tenancy by two or more persons, in equal or unequal undivided shares, each person having an equal right to possess the whole property but no right of survivorship. — Also termed common tenancy; estate in common. Cf. joint tenancy. [Cases: Tenancy in Common ◄—1.]

“The central characteristic of a tenancy in common is simply that each tenant is deemed to own by himself, with most of the attributes of independent ownership, a physically undivided part of the entire parcel.” Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 54 (2d ed. 1984).

tenancy in coparcenary. See coparcenary.

tenancy in fee. See fee simple.

tenancy in gross. (1860) A tenancy for a term that is outstanding — that is, one that is unattached to or disconnected from the estate or inheritance, such as one that is in the hands of some third party having no interest in the inheritance.

tenant in tail. See fee tail.

tenancy par la verge. See copyhold.

year-to-year tenancy. See periodic tenancy.

tenant, n. (14c) 1. One who holds or possesses lands or tenements by any kind of right or title. See tenancy. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant = 1.] copyhold tenant. See customary tenant. customary tenant. A tenant holding by the custom of the manor. • Over time, customary tenants became known as copyhold tenants. See copyhold. “The lord has a court; in that court the tenant in villeinage, even though he be personally free, appears as no mere tenant at will, but as holding permanently, often heritably, on fairly definite terms. He is a customary tenant, customaryarius, consuetudinarius; he holds according to the custom of the manor. . . . Then gradually . . . dealings with villein tenements are set forth upon the rolls of the lord’s court: the villein tenement is conceived to be held by ‘roll of court,’ or even ‘by copy of court roll,’ and the mode of conveyance serves to mark off the most beneficial of villeinholds from the most onerous of freeholds . . . . In Henry III’s time this process which secured for the tenant in villeinage a written, a registered title, and gave him the name of ‘copyholder,’ was but beginning . . . .” 2 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 361, 375 (2d ed. 1899).

dominant tenant. The person who holds a dominant estate and therefore benefits from an easement. Cf. servient tenant. [Cases: Easements = 2.]

holdover tenant. A person who remains in possession of real property after a previous tenancy (esp. one under a lease) expires, thus giving rise to a tenancy at sufferance. • Sometimes shortened to holdover. See tenancy at sufferance under tenancy. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant = 119(2).] hypothetical tenant. See hypothetical tenant.

illusory tenant. 1. A fictitious person who, as the landlord’s alter ego, subleases an apartment to permit the landlord to circumvent rent-law regulations. 2. A tenant whose business is to sublease rent-controlled apartments. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant = 200.16.]

joint tenant. See joint tenancy under tenancy.

life tenant. See life tenant.

particular tenant. A tenant of a limited estate taken out of a fee. See particular estate under estate (1).

prime tenant. A commercial or professional tenant with an established reputation that leases substantial, and usu. the most preferred, space in a commercial development. • A prime tenant is important in securing construction financing and in attracting other desirable tenants.

servient tenant. The person who holds a servient estate and is therefore burdened by an easement. Cf. dominant tenant. [Cases: Easements = 2.]

statutory tenant. A person who is legally entitled to remain on property after the tenancy expires. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant = 200.20, 278.4(5).]

tenant at sufferance. A tenant who has been in lawful possession of property and wrongfully remains as a holdover after the tenant’s interest has expired. • The tenant may become either a tenant at will or a periodic tenant. — Also termed permissive tenant. See tenancy at will; periodic tenancy. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant = 117, 119.]

tenant by elegit. See elegit.

tenant by the curtesy. A life tenant who receives the estate from his deceased wife by whom he has had legitimate children. • The children hold the remainder interest. See curtesy. [Cases: Descent and Distribution = 52–67; Dower and Curtesy = 5, 11, 113, 114; Wills = 496, 778–803.]

tenant by the verge. See copyholder.

tenant for a term. A tenant whose tenancy is for a defined number of years, months, weeks, or days, set when the tenancy is created.

tenant for life. See life tenant.

tenant in chief. Hist. A person who held land directly of the king. — Also termed tenant in capite. See in capite.

tenant in common. One of two or more tenants who hold the same land by unity of possession but by separate and distinct titles, with each person having an equal right to possess the whole property but no right of survivorship. See tenancy in common under tenancy. [Cases: Tenancy in Common = 1.]

tenant in demesne (di-mayn or di-meen). A feudal tenant who holds land of, and owes services to, a tenant in service. Cf. tenant in service.

tenant in dower. A life tenant who is entitled to hold and use one-third of all the real property owned by her deceased husband. See dower. [Cases: Dower and Curtesy = 113, 114.]

tenant in fee. The owner of land held in fee. — Also termed tenant in fee simple. [Cases: Estates in Property = 5.]

“...A tenant in fee simple is [one who owns] lands, tenements, or hereditaments, to hold to him and his heirs forever; generally, absolutely, and simply, without mentioning what heirs, but referring that to his own pleasure, or to the disposition of the law. An estate in fee simple is an estate of inheritance without condition, belonging to the owner, and alienable by him or transmissible to his heirs absolutely and simply; it is an estate or interest in land of one holding absolute and exclusive control and dominion over it, no matter how acquired.” 31 C.J.S. Estates § 11, at 27 (1996).

tenant in service. A feudal tenant who grants an estate to another (a tenant in demesne) and is therefore entitled to services from the latter. Cf. tenant in demesne.

undertenant. See sublessee.

2. One who pays rent for the temporary use and occupation of another's land under a lease or similar arrangement. See lessee. 3. Archaic. The defendant in a real action (the plaintiff being called a demandant). See real action under action (4).

tenancy by the curtesy. See CURTESY.

tenantable repair. (17c) A repair that will render premises fit for present habitation. See HABITABILITY. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant C=150(1), 152(3), 160(2).]

tenantlike, adj. In accordance with the rights and obligations of a tenant, as in matters of repairs, waste, etc.

tenant paravail. Archaic. A tenant's tenant; a sublessor.

tenant par la verge. See COPYHOLDER.

tenant-right. English law. A tenant's right, upon termination of the tenancy, to payment for unexhausted improvements made on the holding. • This right is governed by the Agricultural Holdings Act of 1986.

tenantry. A body or group of tenants.

tenant's fixture. See FIXTURE.

tenancy's fixture. See fixture.

tend, vb. 1. To be disposed toward (something). 2. To serve, contribute, or conduce in some degree or way; to have a more or less direct bearing or effect. 3. To be directed or have a tendency to (an end, object, or purpose).

ten-day rule. The doctrine that one who sells goods on credit and then learns that the buyer is insolvent has ten days after the buyer receives the goods to demand their return. • The seller has even longer to demand return if the buyer has made a written representation of solvency to the seller within three months before delivery. [Cases: Sales C=316(1).]

tender, n. (16c) 1. A valid and sufficient offer of performance; specif., an unconditional offer of money or performance to satisfy a debt or obligation . • The tender may save the tendering party from a penalty for nonpayment or nonperformance or may, if the other party unjustifiably refuses the tender, place the other party in default. Cf. offer of performance; consignation. [Cases: Contracts C=279; Sales C=153, 185; Vendor and Purchaser C=148, 170.]

tender of delivery. (1821) A seller's putting and holding confronting goods at the buyer's disposition and giving the buyer any notification reasonably necessary to take delivery. • The manner, time, and place for tender are determined by the agreement and by Article 2 of the Uniform Commercial Code. [Cases: Sales C=153.]

tender of performance. (18c) An obligor's demonstration of readiness, willingness, and ability to perform the obligation; esp., a buyer's demonstration of readiness, willingness, and ability to pay the purchase money, or a seller's offer to deliver merchantable title. • An offer to perform is usu. necessary to hold the defaulting party to a contract liable for breach. [Cases: Contracts C=279.]

2. Something unconditionally offered to satisfy a debt or obligation. [Cases: Tender C=1, 10.] 3. Contracts. Attempted performance that is frustrated by the act of the party for whose benefit it is to take place. • The performance may take the form of either a tender of goods or services, or a tender of payment. Although this sense is quite similar to sense 1, it differs in making the other party's refusal a part of the definition itself.

perfect tender. (18c) A seller's tender that meets the contractual terms entered into with the buyer concerning the quality and specifications of the goods sold. See perfect-tender rule. [Cases: Sales C=153, 177.]

4. An offer or bid put forward for acceptance . [Cases: Public Contracts C=8.] 5. Something that serves as a means of payment, such as coin, banknotes, or other circulating medium; money <legal tender>. [Cases: Payment C=10; United States C=34.] — tender, vb.

tender, plea of. See PLEA OF TENDER.

tender offer. A public offer to buy a minimum number of shares directly from a corporation's shareholders at a fixed price, usu. at a substantial premium over the market price, in an effort to take control of the corporation. — Also termed takeover offer; takeover bid. Cf. public-exchange offer under offer. [Cases: Securities Regulation C=52.30–52.50.]

"Broadly speaking, a direct solicitation of a corporation's stockholders to sell their shares to an acquirer is known as a tender offer (because the acquirer is asking the existing stockholders to tender their shares for sale)." Franklin A. Gevurtz, Corporation Law § 7.3, at 673 (2000).

cash tender offer. A tender offer in which the bidder offers to pay cash for the target's shares, as opposed to offering other corporate shares in exchange. • Most tender offers involve cash. [Cases: Securities Regulation C=52.30–52.50.]

creeping tender offer. See creeping acquisition under acquisition.

tender of issue. (1811) Common-law pleading. A form attached to a traverse, by which the traversing party refers the issue to the proper mode of trial. [Cases: Pleading C=100, 112.]

"It is the object of all pleadings to bring the parties, in the course of their mutual altercations, to an issue that is a single entire point, affirmed on the one side and denied on the other; and it is to effect this object that the above rule was established. There can be no arrival at this point until one or the other of the parties, by the conclusion of his pleading, offers an issue for the acceptance of his opponent, and this offer is called the 'tender of issue.'" Benjamin J. Shipman, Handbook of Common Law Pleading § 254, at 446 (Henry Winthrop Ballantine ed., 3d ed. 1923).

tender-years doctrine. (1954) Family law. The doctrine holding that custody of very young children (usu. five years of age and younger) should generally be awarded to the mother in a divorce unless she is found to be... unfit. This doctrine has been rejected in most states and replaced by a presumption of joint custody. See MATER­ AL-PREFERENCE DOCTRINE; PRIMARY-CARE-GIVER DOCTRINE. [Cases: Child Custody 17. 457.]
tenenda (ten-en-das). [Latin "to be held"] Hist. The charte­ rum clause stating the nature of the tenure, so called be­ dcause of the first word of the clause.
tenendas. [Latin "to be held"] Hist. A clause in a deed designating the kind of tenure by which the things granted are to be held. — Also termed tenendum clause; (in Scots law) tenendas. See HABENDUM ET TENENDUM. Cf. HABENDUM CLAUSE.

Tennessee Valley Authority. A government-owned corporation, created in 1933, that conducts a unified program of resource development to advance economic growth in the Tennessee Valley region. The Authority's activities include flood control, navigation development, electric-power production, fertilizer development, recreation improvement, and forestry-and-wildlife development. Though its power program is financially self-supporting, the Authority's other programs are financed primarily by congressional appropriations. — Abbr. TVA. [Cases: United States 53(6.1).]
tenor, n. 1. An exact copy of an instrument. 2. The exact words of a legal document, esp. as cited in a pleading. 3. The meaning of a legal document.
ten-percent bond. See bond (2).

Tenth Amendment. The constitutional amendment, ratified as part of the Bill of Rights in 1791, providing that any powers not constitutionally delegated to the federal government, nor prohibited to the states, are reserved for the states or the people. — Also termed Reserved Power Clause. [Cases: States 4. 16.]

1031 exchange (ten-thirteen-ex-chen). (1972) 1. An exchange of like-kind property that is exempt from income-tax consequences under IRC (26 USCA) § 1031. [Cases: Internal Revenue Code § 3184.] Cf. TAX-FREE EXCHANGE. 2. See TAX-FREE EXCHANGE. tenure (ten-yar), n. (15c) 1. A right, term, or mode of holding lands or tenements in subordination to a superior. In feudal times, real property was held predominantly as part of a tenure system. 2. A particular feudal mode of holding lands, such as socage, gavel­ kind, villeinage, and frankalmoign. This was the meanest of the servile tenures — the bondman was at the disposal of the lord for life and all manner of services to be retained in any part of the United States. The lord paramount of all socage land was none other than the people of the state, and to them, and them only, the duty of fealty was to be rendered. . . . 3 James Kent, Commentaries on American Law *509-10 (George Comstock ed., 11th ed.

1866).base tenure. Hist. The holding of property in villeinage rather than by military service or free service. See VILLEINAGE.

copyhold tenure. See COPYHOLD.

lay tenure. Hist. Any tenure not held through religious service, such as a base tenure or a freehold tenure. The three historical types of lay tenures are knight-service, socage, and serjeanty. See KNIGHT-SERVICE; SOCAGE; SERJEANTY. Cf. tenure by divine service.
military tenure. A tenure that bears some relation to military service, such as knight-service, grand serjeanty, and cornage. — Also termed tenure in chivalry.

spiritual tenure. A tenure that bears some relation to religious exercises, such as frankalmoign and tenure by divine service.
tenure ad furcam et flagellum (ad for-kam et fla-jel-om). [Latin] Hist. Tenure by gallows and whip. This was the meanest of the servile tenures — the bondman was at the disposal of the lord for life and limb. tenure by divine service. Hist. A tenure obligating the tenant to perform an expressly defined divine service, such as singing a certain number of masses or distributing a fixed sum of alms. Cf. lay tenure.
tenure in chivalry. See military tenure. villein tenure. See VILLEINAGE.
3. A status afforded to a teacher or professor as a protection against summary dismissal without sufficient cause. • This status has long been considered a cornerstone of academic freedom. [Cases: Colleges and Universities C=81(2); Schools C=133.6.] 4. More generally, the legal protection of a long-term relationship, such as employment. [Cases: Officers and Public Employees C=60.] — tenurial (ten-yur-ee-al), adj.

tenured faculty. The members of a school's teaching staff who hold their positions for life or until retirement, and who may not be discharged except for cause. [Cases: Colleges and Universities C=81.2.]

teratogen (tar-ah-tog-uh-n), n. An agent, usu. a chemical, that causes injury to a fetus or causes any of various birth defects <alcohol is a teratogen to the developing brain of a fetus>. — teratogenic (tar-ah-tog-uh-jeck), adj.
terce. Hist. Scots law. A widow's interest in one-third of her husband's real property, if she has not accepted some other special provision. • The couple must have been married at least a year and a day or else have produced a living child together. See mower.
terce land. Hist. Scots law. Income-producing real property in which a widow has a pecuniary interest because it was owned by her husband.
tercer. Hist. Scots law. A widow who has an interest in one-third of her husband's real property. — Also spelled tiercear.
tergiversato (tar-jiv-uh-say-tuh-oh), n. [Latin “being reluctant, hanging back”] Roman law. A delay tactic, esp. an accuser's failure to pursue a criminal charge, perhaps by not appearing at the trial. • To withdraw an accusation, it was necessary to obtain the court's permission for an annulment (abolition). In A.D. 61, a law was passed by which anyone convicted of tergiversation was subject to a fine. See calumnia. Cf. praevatio. Pl. tergiversationes (tar-jiv-uh-say-shee-oh-neez). term, n. (14c) 1. A word or phrase; esp., an expression that has a fixed meaning in some field <term of art>. 2. A contractual stipulation <the delivery term provided for shipment within 30 days>. See condition (3).

essential term. See fundamental term.

fundamental term. (1873) 1. A contractual provision that must be included for a contract to exist; a contractual provision that specifies an essential purpose of the contract, so that a breach of the provision through inadequate performance makes the performance not only defective but essentially different from what had been promised. [Cases: Contracts C=91(1), 15.] 2. A contractual provision that must be included in the contract to satisfy the statute of frauds. • Also termed essential term; vital term. [Cases: Frauds, Statute of C=113.]

implied term. (18c) A provision not expressly agreed to by the parties but instead read into the contract by a court as being implicit. • An implied term should not, in theory, contradict the contract's express terms. [Cases: Contracts C=168.]

material term. (1839) A contractual provision dealing with a significant issue such as subject matter, price, payment, quantity, quality, duration, or the work to be done. [Cases: Contracts C=9.]

nonessential term. See nonfundamental term.

nonfundamental term. (1969) Any contractual provision that is not regarded as a fundamental term. • Also termed nonessential term; nonvital term. [Cases: Contracts C=91(1), 15.]

vital term. See fundamental term.

3. (pl.) Provisions that define an agreement's scope; conditions or stipulations <terms of sale>. 4. A fixed period of time; esp., the period for which an estate is granted <term of years>.

attendant term. (1983) A long period (such as 1,000 years) specified as the duration of a mortgage, created to protect the mortgagor's heirs' interest in the land by not taking back title to the land once it is paid for, but rather by assigning title to a trustee who holds the title in trust for the mortgagor and the mortgagor's heirs.

This arrangement gives the heirs another title to the property in case the interest they inherited proves somehow defective. These types of terms have been largely abolished. See tenancy attendant on the inheritance under tenancy. [Cases: Mortgages C=54.]

The advantage derived from attendant terms is the security which they afford to purchasers and mortgagees. If the bona fide purchaser or mortgagee should happen to take a defective conveyance or mortgage, by which he acquires a mere equitable title, he may, by taking an assignment of an outstanding term to a trustee for himself, cure the defect, so far as to entitle himself to the legal estate during the term, in preference to any creditor, of whose incumbrance he had no notice, at or before the time of completing his contract for the purchase or mortgage. He may use this term to protect his possessions, or to recover it when lost. This protection extends generally as against all estates and incumbrances created intermediately between the raising of the term and the time of the purchase or mortgage, and the outstanding term, so assigned to a trustee for the purchaser or mortgagee, will prevail over the intermediate legal title to the inheritance." 4 James Kent, Commentaries on American Law *87 (George Comstock ed., 11th ed. 1866).

satisfied term. (18c) A term of years in land that has satisfied the purpose for which it was created before the term's expiration.

term for deliberating. (1843) The time given a beneficiary to decide whether to accept or reject an inheritance or other succession.

term in gross. (1852) A term that is unattached to an estate or inheritance. See tenancy in gross under tenancy.

term of years. 1. A fixed period covering a precise number of years. • Also termed tenancy for a term. 2. English law. A fixed period covering less than a year, or a specified number of years and a fraction of a year. • This sense applies under a seminal English statute — the Law of Property Act of 1925. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 24-70.]

In effect, 'term of years' seems to mean a term for any period having a fixed and certain duration as a minimum. Thus, in addition to a tenancy for a specified number of years (e.g., 'to X for ninety-nine years'), such tenancies as a yearly tenancy or a weekly tenancy are 'terms of years' within the definition, for there is a minimum duration of a year or a week respectively. But a lease 'for the life of X' cannot exist as a legal estate, and the same, perhaps, applies to tenancies at will or at sufferance if they are estates at all for their duration is wholly uncertain. Robert E. Megarry & M.P. Thompson, A Manual of the Law of Real Property 74 (6th ed. 1993).

unexpired term. The remainder of a period prescribed by law or by agreement.

5. The period or session during which a court conducts judicial business <the most recent term was busy indeed>. — Also termed (in sense 5) term of court. See session. [Cases: Courts 2-63.]

additional term. A distinct, added term to a previous term. [Cases: Courts 2-64.]

adjourned term. (18c) A continuance of a previous or regular term but not a separate term; the same term prolonged. [Cases: Courts 2-66.]

appearance term. The regular judicial term in which a party is required to appear, usu. the first one after legal service has been made. [Cases: Courts 2-63.]

civil term. The period during which a civil court hears cases.

criminal term. A term of court during which indictments are found and returned, and criminal trials are held. [Cases: Courts 2-63.]

equity term. (1836) The period during which a court tries only equity cases.

general term. A regular term of court — that is, the period during which a court ordinarily sits. — Also termed stated term. [Cases: Courts 2-63.]

regular term. (1820) A term of court begun at the time appointed by law and continued, in the court's discretion, until the court lawfully adjourns. [Cases: Courts 2-63.]

special term. (1803) A term of court scheduled outside the general term, usu. for conducting extraordinary business. [Cases: Courts 2-64.]

stated term. See general term.

term probatory. Eccles. law. 1. The period given to the promoter of an ecclesiastical suit to produce witnesses and prove the case. 2. Hist. The time assigned for taking testimony. — Sometimes termed (in sense 2) probatory term.

term to conclude. Eccles. law. A deadline imposed by the judge for all parties to renounce any further exhibits and allegations.

term to propound all things. Eccles. law. A deadline imposed by the judge for the parties to exhibit all evidence supporting their positions.

6. Hist. English law. One of the four periods in a year during which the courts are in session to conduct judicial business. • Terms came into use in the 13th century, and their dates varied. The four terms — Hilary, Easter, Trinity, and Michaelmas — were abolished by the Judicature Acts of 1873–1875, and the legal year was divided into sitting and vacations. Terms are still maintained by the Inns of Court to determine various time periods and dates, such as a call to the bar or observance of a Grand Day.

termination clause. See cancellation clause.

termination fee. A fee paid if a party voluntarily backs out of a deal to sell or purchase a business or a business's assets. • Termination fees are usu. negotiated and agreed on as part of corporate merger or acquisition negotiations. The fee is designed to protect the prospective buyer and to deter the target corporation from entertaining bids from other parties. — Also termed break-up fee. [Cases: Corporations 310(1), 582.]

termination-for-convenience clause. A contractual provision allowing the government to terminate all or a portion of a contract when it chooses. • Among the governmental contracts that often include a termination-for-convenience clause are service contracts, research-and-development contracts, and fixed-price contracts. See 48 CFR § 52.249-1-.2. [Cases: United States C=70(35).] termination hearing. See termination-of-parental-rights hearing under HEARING.

termination of parental rights. (1939) Family law. The legal severing of a parent's rights, privileges, and responsibilities regarding his or her child. • Termination of a parent's rights frees the child to be adopted by someone else. — Abbr. TPR. See termination-of-parental-rights hearing under HEARING; PARENTAL RIGHTS. [Cases: Infants C=155.]

termination-of-parental-rights hearing. See HEARING.

termination proceeding. (1939) An administrative action to end a person's or entity's status or relationship. • For example, the International Banking Act authorizes the International Banking Board to institute a termination proceeding when a foreign bank or its U.S. agency or branch is convicted of money-laundering. 12 USCA § 3105(e).

[Cases: Judgment C=793, 794.]
territorial, adj. Having to do with a particular geographical area.

territorial court. See COURT.

territorialism. (1977) The traditional approach to choice of law, whereby the place of injury or of contract formation determines which state's law will be applied in a case. See CHOICE OF LAW.

territoriality. Int'l law. The principle that a nation has the right of sovereignty within its borders. [Cases: International Law C=7.]

"Three maxims formulated by the seventeenth-century Dutch scholar Ulrich Huber undergird the modern concept of territoriality: (1) a state's laws have force only within the state's boundaries; (2) anyone found within the state's boundaries is subject to the state's authority; and (3) comity will discipline sovereign exercises of authority so that the territorial effect of each state's laws is respected." Paul Goldstein, International Copyright: Principles, Law, and Practice 64 (2001).
territorial jurisdiction. See jurisdiction.

territorial law. The law that applies to all persons within a given territory regardless of their citizenship or nationality. Cf. personal law.

"[T]he expression 'territorial law' ... is not confined to the positive rules that regulate acts and events occurring within the jurisdiction, but includes also rules for the choice of law. English rules for the choice of law are part of the law of England and when a court, for instance, tests the substantial validity of a contract made by two foreigners in Paris by reference to French law, it applies a rule imposed by the English sovereign and it may accurately be described as putting into force part of the territorial law of England." G.C. Cheshire, Private International Law 32 (6th ed. 1961).

territorial property. Land and water over which a state has jurisdiction and control, whether the legal title is held by the state or by a private individual or entity. Lakes and waters wholly within a state are generally its property, as is the marginal sea within the three-mile limit, but bays and gulfs are not always recognized as state property. [Cases: States C--11.]

territorial sea. See territorial waters under water.

territorial waters. See water.

territory, n. (14c) 1. A geographical area included within a particular government's jurisdiction; the portion of the earth's surface that is in a state's exclusive possession and control. Cf. insular area. [Cases: International Law C--5.]

non-self-governing territory. Int'l law. A territory that is governed by another country. These types of territories are rarely allowed representation in the governing country's legislature.

trust territory. Int'l law. A territory to which the United Nations' international trusteeship system formerly applied; a territory once administered by the United Nations or a member state for the political, economic, educational, and social advancement of its inhabitants. All territories that were subject to this system either became independent nations or opted to become part of another nation.

1. A part of the United States not included within any state but organized with a separate legislature (such as Guam and the U.S. Virgin Islands). Cf. commonwealth (2); dependency (1). [Cases: Territories C--7.]

2. A part of the United States not included within any state but organized with a separate legislature (such as Guam and the U.S. Virgin Islands). Cf. commonwealth (2); dependency (1). [Cases: Territories C--7.]

- territorial, adj.

"The United States has had territories from its inception. The Northwest Territory, along with the thirteen original states, was a part of the nation when the constitution was ratified. The original U.S. constitution expressly granted Congress the power to govern territories. Before the Civil War all of the territories were on the North American continent and contiguous with the states or the other territories. After the Civil War with the purchase of Alaska in 1867 (called 'Seward's Folly' or 'Seward's Icebox' by detractors) came the United States' first acquisition of non-contiguous territory. Alaska did, however, have certain basics in common with earlier U.S. territories. Alaska was on the North American continent and sparsely populated. . . . In the latter part of the 19th century, the U.S. became interested in various islands around the world." Stanley K. Laughlin Jr., The Law of United States Territories and Affiliated Jurisdictions § 3.1, at 25-26 (1995).

territory of a judge. (18c) The territorial jurisdiction of a particular court. See jurisdiction (3). [Cases: Courts C--29, 171; Judges C--30.]

terrorism clause. See no-contest clause.

terrorism, n. (18c) The use or threat of violence to intimidate or cause panic, esp. as a means of affecting political conduct. See 18 USCA § 2331. See also terrorist threat under threat; terrorism insurance under insurance. [Cases: Extortion and Threats C--25.]

testamentii factio (tes-to-men-ti fak-shee-oh). [Latin “right to make a testament”] Roman law. 1. Broadly, the capacity to take part in a will, as testator, heir, or witness. 2. The capacity to make a will, open to any citizen, male or female, sui juris, and over puberty. • This term is sometimes known as “active” testamenti factio or testamenti factio activa, though the latter phrase was not known to the Roman law. 3. The capacity to receive property by will. • Junian Latini and peregrini did not have this capacity. It is also known as “passive” testamenti factio or testamenti factio passiva, though the latter phrase was (like testamenti factio activa) unknown to the Roman law. 4. The capacity to witness a will. • Women did not have this capacity. — Also termed factio testamenti.

"Under the civil law, this was a power . . . vested only in the Roman citizen . . . The testamenti factio was necessary to any participation whatever in a testament. Without it, no one could make a will, or take a legacy, or even be a witness to the execution of a will . . . In Scotch law, this phrase can only signify the power of making a will, as any one may be a beneficiary under another’s settlement." John Trayner. Trayner’s Latin Maxims 216–17 (4th ed. 1894).

testamentum (tes-to-men-tam), n. [Latin] Roman law. A will. • In early and classical law, the mancipatory will was standard. It was still used in the Later Empire but the in A.D. 446, the holographic will was accepted in the Western Empire. A will could also be made by registration on the court acta. See holographic will, mancipatory will under WILL.

testamentum calatis comitis (ka-lay-tis ka-mish-ee-is). [Latin “will made before the comitia curiata”] Roman law. In early Rome, a will made before the comitia curiata, having an effect comparable to adrogation. • The comitia curiata was known as the comitia calata when it met twice a year for the purpose of making wills. See comitia curiata under COMITIA.

testamentum holografum (tes-to-men-tam hol-a-graf-am). [Latin] See holographic will under WILL.

testamentum in procinctu (in pra-singk-tlyoo). [Latin “will made before the army”] Roman law. A will made by a soldier before a fellow soldiers while preparing for battle.

testamentum tripertitum (tri-par-ti-tam). [Latin "tripartite will"] Roman law. A will made without interruption, with seven witnesses to seal it, and signed by the testator. • This form of will was valid in Justinian's law. It was called "tripartite" because the authority for various parts of it derived from three sources: the civil law (requiring that the will be made at one and the same time before witnesses); the praetor's edict (requiring that there be seven witnesses and that they must seal it); and imperial constitutions (requiring that the testator must sign at the end).

testate (tes-tayt), adj. (15c) Having left a will at death <she died testate>. Cf. intestate. [Cases: Wills ⊆ 1.]

testate, n. See testator.

testate succession. See succession (2).

testatus (tes-tay-tas), n. [Latin] Civil law. See testator.

test case. See case.

teste (tes-te). [Latin teste meipso "I myself being a witness"] 1. In drafting, the clause that states the name of a witness and evidences the act of witnessing. — Also termed teste of process; teste of writ. 2. The final clause in a royal writ naming the person who authorizes the affixing of the king's seal. • The clause generally contains the place and date of the sealing. When the monarch authorizes the sealing, the clause begins with the phrase teste meipso ("by my own witness"). Otherwise, the authenticator states his or her name and office.

teste meipso. See teste (2).

testifier. One who testifies; witness. — Also termed (archaically) testificator (tes-to-fi-kay-tar).

testify, vb. (14c) 1. To give evidence as a witness <she testified that the Ford Bronco was at the defendant's home at the critical time>. [Cases: Witnesses ⊆ 224. 2. (Of a person or thing) to bear witness <the incomplete log entries testified to his sloppiness>.

Cf. attestation clause. [Cases: Wills ⊆ 111(2).]

testimony, n. (14c) Evidence that a competent witness under oath or affirmation gives at trial or in an affidavit or deposition. — Also termed testimonial evidence; personal evidence. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ⊆ 2011; Trial ⊆ 33; Witnesses ⊆ 224. ] — testimonial, adj.

affirmative testimony. (1806) Testimony about whether something occurred or did not occur, based on what the witness saw or heard at the time and place in question. — Also termed positive testimony; (formerly) statement of fact. See direct evidence under evidence. [Cases: Evidence ⊆ 586.]

cumulative testimony. (1818) Identical or similar testimony by more than one witness, and usu. by several, offered by a party usu. to impress the jury with the apparent weight of proof on that party's side. • The trial court typically limits cumulative testimony. [Cases: Criminal Law ⊆ 675; Federal Civil Procedure ⊆ 2011; Trial ⊆ 56.]

dropsy testimony. (1970) Slang. A police officer's false testimony that a fleeing suspect dropped an illegal substance that was then confiscated by the police and used as probable cause for arresting the suspect.
testing clause

Dropsey testimony is sometimes given when an arrest has been made without probable cause, as when illegal substances have been found through an improper search.

"Before [Mapp v. Ohio, 367 U.S. 643 (1961)], the policeman typically testified that he had stopped the defendant for little or no reason, searched him, and found narcotics on his person. This had the ring of truth. It was an illegal search (not based upon 'probable cause'), but the evidence was admissible because Mapp had not yet been decided. Since it made no difference, the policeman testified truthfully. After, the decision in Mapp it made a great deal of difference. [1] For the first few months, New York policemen continued to tell the truth about the circumstances of their searches, with the result that evidence was suppressed. Then the police made the great discovery that if the defendant drops the narcotics on the ground, after which the policeman arrests him, then the search is reasonable and the evidence is admissible. Spend a few hours in the New York City Criminal Court nowadays and you will hear case after case in which a policeman testifies that the defendant dropped the narcotics on the ground whereupon the policeman arrested him. [11] Usually the very language of the testimony is identical from one case to another. This is now known among defense lawyers and prosecutors as 'dropsy' testimony. The judge has no reason to disbelieve it in any particular case, and of course the judge must decide each case on its own evidence, without regard to the testimony in other cases. Surely, though, not in every case was the defendant unlucky enough to drop his narcotics." Irving Younger, "The Perjury Routine," The Nation, May 3, 1967, at 590-97.

expert testimony. See expert evidence under EVIDENCE.

false testimony. (16c) Testimony that is untrue. • This term is broader than perjury, which has a state-of-mind element. Unlike perjury, false testimony does not denote a crime. — Also termed false evidence.

interpreted testimony. Testimony translated because the witness cannot communicate in the language of the tribunal. [Cases: Witnesses 230.]

lay opinion testimony. (1942) Evidence given by a witness who is not qualified as an expert but who testifies to opinions or inferences. • In federal court, the admissibility of this testimony is limited to opinions or inferences that are rationally based on the witness's perception and that will be helpful to a clear understanding of the witness's testimony or the determination of a fact in issue. Fed. R. Evid. 701. [Cases: Criminal Law 449.1-467; Evidence 470-503.] mediate testimony. See secondary evidence under EVIDENCE.

negative testimony. See negative evidence under EVIDENCE.

nonverbal testimony. (1922) A photograph, drawing, map, chart, or other depiction used to aid a witness in testifying. • The witness need not have made it, but it must accurately represent something that the witness saw. See demonstrative evidence under EVIDENCE. [Cases: Criminal Law 437, 438; Evidence 358, 359.]

opinion testimony. (1925) Testimony based on one's belief or idea rather than on direct knowledge of the facts at issue. • Opinion testimony from either a lay witness or an expert witness may be allowed in evidence under certain conditions. See opinion evidence under EVIDENCE. [Cases: Criminal Law 448-494; Evidence 470-574.]

positive testimony. See affirmative testimony.

testimony de bene esse (dee bee nee es ee also day ben ay es ay). (1805) Testimony taken because it is in danger of being lost before it can be given at a trial or hearing, usu. because of the impending death or departure of the witness. • Such testimony is taken in aid of a pending case, while testimony taken under a bill to perpetuate testimony is taken in anticipation of future litigation. See deposition de bene esse under DEPOSITION. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 1291; Pretrial Procedure 61.]

written testimony. (17c) 1. Testimony given out of court by deposition or affidavit. • The recorded writing, signed by the witness, is considered testimony. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 1432; Pretrial Procedure 201.] 2. In some administrative agencies and courts, direct narrative testimony that is reduced to writing, to which the witness swears at a hearing or trial before cross-examination takes place in the traditional way. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure 461; Federal Civil Procedure 2011; Trial 33.]

testing clause. Scots law. The clause at the end of a formal written instrument or deed by which it is authenticated according to the forms of law. • Traditionally, the clause states the name and address of the writer, the number of pages in the instrument, any alterations or erasures, the names and addresses of the witnesses, the name and address of the person who penned the instrument, and the date and place of signing.

test oath. See oath of allegiance under OATH.

test paper. A writing that has been proved genuine and submitted to a jury as a standard by which to determine the authenticity of other writings. • The court decides the test paper's authenticity as a matter of law before it is used by the jury. Direct evidence, such as a witness to the writing's creation or an admission by the party, is preferred, but strong circumstantial evidence is usually acceptable. In Pennsylvania, a paper or instrument shown to the jury as evidence is still called a test paper (sometimes written test-paper).

Texas ballot. See BALLOT (4).

textbook digest. (1922) A legal text whose aim is to set forth the law of a subject in condensed form, with little or no criticism or discussion of the authorities cited, and no serious attempt to explain or reconcile apparently conflicting decisions.

textual citation. See CITATION (4).

textualism. See strict constructionism under CONSTRUCTIONISM.
thalweg (tahl-vayk or -veg). (1831) 1. A line following the lowest part of a (usu. submerged) valley. 2. The middle of the primary navigable channel of a waterway, constituting the boundary between states. — Also spelled talweg. — Also termed midway. [Cases: States $\Rightarrow 12.1$.]

Thayer presumption. (1958) A presumption that allows the party against whom the presumption operates to come forward with evidence to rebut the presumption, but that does not shift the burden of proof to that party. See James B. Thayer, A Preliminary Treatise on Evidence 31–44 (1898). Most presumptions that arise in civil trials in federal court are interpreted in this way. Fed. R. Evid. 301. Cf. Morgan presumption. [Cases: Criminal Law $\Rightarrow 224$; Evidence $\Rightarrow 85, 89$.]

theft, n. (bef. 12c) 1. The felonious taking and removing of another's personal property with the intent of depriving the true owner of it; larceny. [Cases: Larceny $\Rightarrow 1$.] 2. Broadly, any act or instance of stealing, including larceny, burglary, embezzlement, and false pretenses. • Many modern penal codes have consolidated such property offenses under the name "theft." — Also termed (in Latin) crimen furti. See Larceny. Cf. Robbery.

"[T]he distinctions between larceny, embezzlement and false pretenses serve no useful purpose in the criminal law but are useless handicaps from the standpoint of the administration of criminal justice. One solution has been to combine all three in one section of the code under the name of 'larceny.' This has one disadvantage, however, because it frequently becomes necessary to add a modifier to make clear whether the reference is to common-law larceny or to statutory larceny. To avoid this difficulty some states have employed another word to designate a statutory offense made up of a combination of larceny, embezzlement, and false pretenses. And the word used for this purpose is 'theft.' 'Theft' is not the name of any common-law offense. At times it has been employed as a synonym of 'larceny,' but for the most part has been regarded as broader in its general scope. Under such a statute it is not necessary for the indictment charging theft to specify whether the offense is larceny, embezzlement or false pretenses." Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 389–90 (3d ed. 1982).

cybertheft. See cybertheft.

identity theft. See identity theft.

petty theft. A theft of a small quantity of cash or of low-value goods or services. • This offense is usu. a misdemeanor. [Cases: Larceny $\Rightarrow 23$.]

theft by deception. (1930) The use of trickery to obtain another's property, esp. by (1) creating or reinforcing a false impression (as about value), (2) preventing one from obtaining information that would affect one's judgment about a transaction, or (3) failing to disclose, in a property transfer, a known lien or other legal impediment. Model Penal Code § 223. [Cases: False Pretenses $\Rightarrow 1$.]

theft by extortion. (1969) Larceny in which the perpetrator obtains property by threatening to (1) inflict bodily harm on anyone or commit any other criminal offense, (2) accuse anyone of a criminal offense, (3) expose any secret tending to subject any person to hatred, contempt, or ridicule, or impair one's credit or business reputation, (4) take or withhold action as an official, or cause an official to take or withhold action, (5) bring about or continue a strike, boycott, or other collective unofficial action, if the property is not demanded or received for the benefit of the group in whose interest the actor purports to act, (6) testify or provide information or withhold testimony or information with respect to another's legal claim or defense, or (7) inflict any other harm that would not benefit the actor. Model Penal Code § 223.4. — Also termed larceny by extortion. See Extortion. [Cases: Extortion and Threats $\Rightarrow 25.1$.]

theft by false pretext. The use of a false pretext to obtain another's property. [Cases: False Pretenses $\Rightarrow 1$.]

theft of property lost, mislaid, or delivered by mistake. (1973) Larceny in which one obtains control of property the person knows to be lost, mislaid, or delivered by mistake (esp. in the amount of property or identity of recipient) and fails to take reasonable measures to restore the property to the rightful owner. Model Penal Code § 223.5. — Also termed larceny of property lost, mislaid, or delivered by mistake. [Cases: Larceny $\Rightarrow 10$.]

theft of services. (1946) The act of obtaining services from another by deception, threat, coercion, stealth, mechanical tampering, or using a false token or device. See Model Penal Code § 223.7.

theftbote. (theft-boht) See bote (2).

theftuous (theft-choo-as), adj. 1. (Of an act) characterized by theft. 2. (Of a person) given to stealing. — Also spelled theftious.

thence, adv. (13c) 1. From that place; from that time. • In surveying, and in describing land by courses and distances, this word, preceding each course given, implies that the following course is continuous with the one before it <south 240 feet to an iron post, thence west 59 feet>. 2. On that account; therefore.

thence down the river. (16c) With the meanders of a river. • This phrase appears in the field notes of patent surveyors, indicating that the survey follows a meandering river unless evidence shows that the meander line as written was where the surveyor in fact ran it. Meander lines show the general course of the river and are used in estimating acreage, but are not necessarily boundary lines. See Meander line. [Cases: Boundaries $\Rightarrow 12$.]

theocracy (thee-ok-ra-see). (17c) 1. Government of a state by those who are believed to be or represent that they are acting under the immediate direction of God or some other divinity. 2. A state in which power is exercised by ecclesiastics.
Theodosian Code (thee-a-doh-shan). Roman law. A compilation of imperial enactments prepared at the direction of the emperor Theodosius II and published in A.D. 438. The Theodosian Code replaced all other imperial legislation from the time of Constantine I (A.D. 306–337), and remained the basis of Roman law until it was superseded by the first Justinian Code in A.D. 529. — Also termed (in Latin) Codex Theodosianus (koh-deks thee-a-doh-shee-ay nas).

As a literary work the Theodosian Code has a dismal reputation. . . . Some quaestors possessed an elegant, powerful, or agreeably ornate style. . . . Against these may be set others with literary pretensions whose prose is ponderous or marred by excessive alliteration, assonance, pleonasm, or fondness for technical terms, or whose compositions are in other ways inept.” Tony Honore, Law in the Crisis of the Empire 379–455 ad 21 (1998).

theolonio. See DE THEOLONIO.

theory of law. The legal premise or set of principles on which a case rests.

theory-of-pleading doctrine. (1956) The principle — now outmoded — that one must prove a case exactly as pleaded. Various modern codes and rules of civil procedure have abolished this strict pleading-and-proof requirement. For example, Fed. R. Civ. P. 15 allows amendment of pleadings to conform to the evidence. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure C≈881; Pleading C≈370.]

theory of the case. (1800) A comprehensive and orderly mental arrangement of principles and facts, conceived and constructed for the purpose of securing a judgment or decree of a court in favor of a litigant; the particular line of reasoning of either party to a suit, the purpose being to bring together certain facts of the case in a logical sequence and to correlate them in a way that produces in the decision-maker’s mind a definite result or conclusion favored by the advocate. things. (bef. 12c) 1. The subject matter of a right, whether it is a material object or not; any subject matter of ownership within the sphere of proprietary or valuable rights. • Things are divided into three categories: (1) things real or immovable, such as land, tenements, and hereditaments, (2) things personal or movable, such as goods and chattels, and (3) things having both real and personal characteristics, such as a title deed and a tenancy for a term. The civil law divided things into corporeal (tangi possunt) and incorporeal (tangi non possunt). La. Civ. Code art. 461. [Cases: Property 1.]
accessory thing. A thing that stands in a dependency relationship with another thing (the principal thing).
• An accessory thing ordinarily serves the economic or other purpose of the principal thing and shares its legal fate in case of transfer or encumbrance. corporeal thing. (17c) The subject matter of corporeal ownership; a material object. — Also termed res corporales; tangible thing. immovable thing. See immovable.

third-degree instruction. See allen charge.
third-degree murder. See murder. third estate. Property. A landowner's right to have the land supported below the surface against subsidence when it is undermined by tunnels, such as those made for mining operations. • The phrase appears most frequently in Pennsylvania, where the common law traditionally recognizes three estates in land: the surface (first or surface estate), the minerals (second or mineral estate), and an estate in the support of the surface (the third estate). The third estate originated with the common-law duty of miners to support the surface estate.
[Cases: Mines and Minerals 55(6).] third opposition. Civil law. A species of intervention, usu. in a real-property case, in which the third party asserts a claim of ownership or other real right to seized property, and the claim does not depend on the outcome of the original suit between the plaintiff and the defendant. La. Code Civ. Proc. art. 1092. See, e.g., three-step test. Copyright. An analysis of an infringement defense under TRIPs and the Berne Convention, looking at whether the defendant’s use of a protected work (1) is inherently limited to special cases, (2) did not conflict with the owner’s normal exploitation of the work, and (3) did not unreasonably prejudice the legitimate interests of the owner. The test is analogous to the analysis under the fair-use doctrine in U.S. law.

three-strikes law. (1984) Slang. A statute prescribing an enhanced sentence, esp. life imprisonment, for a repeat offender’s third felony conviction. About half the states have enacted a statute of this kind. — Also termed three-strikes-and-you’re-out law. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment C-1200-1219.]

three wicked sisters. Slang. The three doctrines — contributory negligence, the fellow-servant rule, and assumption of the risk — used by 19th-century courts to deny recovery to workers injured on the job.

30(b)(6) deposition. See DEPOSITION.

thirty-day letter. (1929) A letter that accompanies a revenue agent’s report issued as a result of an Internal Revenue Service audit or the rejection of a taxpayer’s claim for refund and that outlines the taxpayer’s appeal procedure before the Internal Revenue Service. If the taxpayer does not request any such procedure within the 30-day period, the IRS will issue a statutory notice of deficiency. Cf. NINETY-DAY LETTER. [Cases: Internal Revenue C-4542.1, 5044.] for employees to recover from their employers for the increasing number of work-related injuries. . . . By the late 1800s, courts began to recognize the harsh results generated by rote application of the fellow servant, assumption of the risk, and contributory negligence doctrines. Mark A. threshold. Parliamentary law. The number or proportion of votes needed for election.

threshold confession. See confession.

thrift institution. See savings-and-loan association.

through bill of lading. See bill of lading.

through lot. A lot that abuts a street at each end.

through rate. The total shipping cost when two or more carriers are involved. • The carriers agree in advance on a through rate, which is typically lower than the sum of the separate rates. [Cases: Carriers C=12(2), 29.]

throwaway. Slang. 1. An unemancipated minor whose parent or caregiver has forced him or her to leave home. 2. A runaway whose parent or caregiver refuses to allow him or her to return home. Cf. runaway.

throwback rule. (1972) Tax. 1. In the taxation of trusts, a rule requiring that an amount distributed in any tax year that exceeds the year's distributable net income must be treated as if it had been distributed in the preceding year. • The beneficiary is taxed in the current year although the computation is made as if the excess had been distributed in the previous year. If the trust did not have undistributed accumulated income in the preceding year, the amount of the throwback is tested against each of the preceding years. IRC (26 USCA) §§ 665-665. [Cases: Internal Revenue C=4019.] 2. A taxation rule requiring a sale that would otherwise be exempt from state income tax (because the state to which the sale would be assigned for apportionment purposes does not have an income tax, even though the seller's state does) to be attributed to the seller's state and thus subjected to a state-level tax. • This rule applies only if the seller's state has adopted a throwback rule.

throw out, vb. (1817) To dismiss (a claim or lawsuit).

thrust-upon conflict. See conflict of interest.

thumbprint. See fingerprint.

ticket, n. 1. A certificate indicating that the person to whom it is issued, or the holder, is entitled to some right or privilege <she bought a bus ticket for Miami>. 2. CITATION (2) <he got a speeding ticket last week>. 3. BALLOT (2) <they all voted a straight-party ticket>.

ticket of leave. Archaic. The English equivalent of parole.

ticket-of-leave man. A convict who has obtained a ticket of leave.

ticket speculator. A person who buys tickets and then resells them for more than their face value; in slang, a scalper. See scalper (1).

tidal, adj. Affected by or having tides. • For a river to be "tidal" at a given spot, the water need not necessarily be salt, but the spot must be one where the tide, in the ordinary and regular course of things, flows and refloows.

tide. The rising and falling of seawater that is produced by the attraction of the sun and moon, uninfluenced by special winds, seasons, or other circumstances that create meteorological and atmospheric meteorological tides; the ebb and flow of the sea. • Tides are used to measure a shore's upland boundary.

lower low tide. The lowest point of the daily tide.

mean high tide. The average of all high tides, esp. over a period of 18.6 years. — Also termed ordinary high tide.

mean lower low tide. The average of lower low tides over a fixed period.

neap tide. The average of all low tides — both low and lower low — over a fixed period.

spring tide. A tide, either high tide or low tide, that is lower than average because it occurs during the first or last quarter of the moon, when the sun's attraction partly counteracts the moon's.

ordinary high tide. See mean high tide.

spring tide. A tide, either high tide or low tide, that is higher than average because it occurs during the new moon and full moon.

tideland. (18c) Land between the lines of the ordinary high and low tides, covered and uncovered successively by the ebb and flow of those tides; land covered and uncovered by the ordinary tides. [Cases: Navigable Waters C=36(3).]

tidesman. English law. A customhouse officer appointed to watch or attend upon ships until the customs are paid. • A tidesman boards a ship at its arrival in the mouth of the Thames and comes up with the tide. See customhouse.

tidewater. (18c) Water that falls and rises with the ebb and flow of the tide. • The term is not usu. applied to the open sea, but to coves, bays, and rivers.

tide-day. (18c) Land between high- and low-water marks. [Cases: Navigable Waters C=36(3).]

tie, n. 1. An equal number of votes for two candidates in an election. [Cases: Elections C=238.] 2. An equal number of votes cast for and against a particular measure by a legislative or deliberative body. • In the U.S. Senate, the Vice President has the deciding vote in the event of a tie. U.S. Const. art. 1, § 3. See tie vote under vote.

tied product. See tying arrangement (1).

tied service. See tying arrangement (1).

tie-in arrangement. See tying arrangement.

tiempo inhabil. Hist. Louisiana law. The time at which a person becomes insolvent.

time. (bef. 12c) 1. A measure of duration. 2. A point in or period of duration at or during which something is alleged to have occurred. 3. Slang. A convicted criminal's period of incarceration.

dead time. (1909) Time that does not count for a particular purpose, such as time not included in calculating an employee's wages or time not credited toward a prisoner's sentence. • The time during which a prisoner has escaped, for example, is not credited toward the prisoner's sentence. — Also termed nonrun time. [Cases: Labor and Employment C=2311; Sentencing and Punishment C=1155-1182.]

earned time. A credit toward a sentence reduction awarded to a prisoner who takes part in activities designed to lessen the chances that the prisoner will commit a crime after release from prison. • Earned time, which is usu. awarded for taking educational or vocational courses, working, or participating in certain other productive activities, is distinct from good time, which is awarded simply for refraining from misconduct. Cf. good time. [Cases: Prisons C=243.]

flat time. (1943) A prison term that is to be served without the benefit of time-reduction allowances for good behavior and the like.

good time. (1886) The credit awarded to a prisoner for good conduct, which can reduce the duration of the prisoner's sentence. Cf. good behavior; earned time. [Cases: Prisons C=243.]

jail-credit time. See jail credit.

nonrun time. See dead time.

street time. The time that a convicted person spends on parole or on other conditional release. • If the person's parole is revoked, this time may or may not be credited toward the person's sentence, depending on the jurisdiction and the particular conditions of that person's parole. See dead time.

time agreement. 1. A pact made by the party leaders in the U.S. Senate to limit the time allowed for debate on a bill or amendment. 2. See unanimous-consent agreement.

time arbitrage. See arbitrage.

time-bar. n. (1881) A bar to a legal claim arising from the lapse of a defined length of time, esp. one contained in a statute of limitations. [Cases: Limitation of Actions C=1.] — time-barred, adj.

time-bargain. See futures contract.

time bill. See time draft under draft.

time certain. 1. A definite, specific date and time. Cf. date certain. 2. Parliamentary law. A specified time or condition for which a matter's consideration is scheduled or to which its consideration is postponed. See postpone definitely under postpone (3); special order under order (4).

time-place-or-manner restriction. (1974) Constitutional law. A government's limitation on when, where, or how a public speech or assembly may occur, but not on the content of that speech or assembly. • As long as such restrictions are narrowly tailored to achieve a legitimate governmental interest, they do not violate the First Amendment. — Also written time, place, or manner restriction. — Also termed time-place-and-manner restriction. See public forum.

time policy. See insurance policy.

time-price differential. 1. A figure representing the difference between the current cash price of an item and the total cost of purchasing it on credit. [Cases: Consumer Credit $\leq 14$; Usury $\leq 32$.] 2. The difference between a seller’s price for immediate cash payment and a different price when payment is made later or in installments.

time-price doctrine. The rule that if a debt arises out of a purchase and sale, the usury laws do not apply. • If a higher price is charged for a deferred payment than for an immediate payment, the difference between the time price and the cash price is deemed compensation to the seller for the risk that the buyer will default and for the interest that the seller could have earned on an immediate payment. Because the buyer can usu. choose to postpone a purchase and save up the cash price, the buyer does not have the same status as a needy borrower who must deal with a potentially predatory lender. [Cases: Usury $\leq 32$.]

time-sharing, n. (1976) Joint ownership or rental of property (such as a vacation condominium) by several persons who take turns occupying the property. — Also termed time-share. [Cases: Estates in Property $\leq 1$.] — time-share, vb.

time-shifting. The practice of recording a broadcast for viewing at a later time. • Time-shifting was found to be a noninfringing fair use of videocassette recorders in Sony Corp. v. Universal Studios, Inc., 464 U.S. 417, 104 S.Ct. 774 (1984). [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property $\geq 67.1$.]

time unity. See unity of time under unity.

time value. The price associated with the length of time that an investor must wait until an investment matures or the related income is earned. Cf. YIELD TO MATURITY.

timocracy (ti’-mok-ər-se). (15c) 1. An aristocracy of property; government by propertied, relatively rich people. 2. A government in which the rulers’ primary motive is the love of honor.

TIN. abbr. See TAX-IDENTIFICATION NUMBER.

tin parachute. An employment-contract provision that grants a corporate employee (esp. one below the executive level) severance benefits in the event of a takeover. • These benefits are typically less lucrative than those provided under a golden parachute. — Also termed silver parachute. Cf. GOLDEN PARACHUTE.

tip, n. 1. A piece of special information; esp., in securities law, advance or inside information passed from one person to another. See INSIDE INFORMATION; INSIDER TRADING. [Cases: Securities Regulation $\geq 60.28(2)$.] 2. A gratuity for service given. • Tip income is taxable. IRC (26 USCA) § 61(a). [Cases: Internal Revenue $\geq 3163$; Taxation $\geq 3455$.]

tippee. Securities. A person who acquires material nonpublic information from someone in a fiduciary relationship with the company to which that information pertains. [Cases: Securities Regulation $\geq 60.28(5)$.]

tipper. Securities. A person who is in a fiduciary relationship with a company that the person possesses material inside information about, and who selectively discloses that information for trading or other personal purposes <the tippee traded 5,000 shares after her conversation with the tipper>. [Cases: Securities Regulation $\geq 60.28(5)$.]

tippling house. See PUBLIC HOUSE.

TIPS. abbr. See TIPS bond under TREASURY BOND.

tip-stave. See SERTORIO OF BILLS.

tithe (tith), n. 1. A tenth of one’s income, esp. in reference to a religious or charitable gift or obligation. [Cases: Religious Societies $\geq 15$.] 2. Hist. A small tax or assessment, esp. in the amount of one-tenth. — tithe, vb. — tithable, adj.

"A tithe was the right of a rector to a tenth part of the produce of all the land in his parish. In some cases a rector was an individual, while in others the rector was vested in a monastery, which appointed a vicar to perform the necessary ecclesiastical duties 'vicariously' for the monastery. On the dissolution of the monasteries in the reign of Henry VIII many rectories passed into the royal hands and were granted to laymen: the result was that the right to tithes in many cases passed into lay hands. Like advowsons, tithes were deemed to be land in which the various estates could exist." Robert E. Megarry & P.V. Baker, A Manual of the Law of Real Property 415 (4th ed. 1969).

great tithe. (usu. pl.) A tithe paid in kind and therefore considered more valuable than other tithes. • The great tithes often consisted of corn, peas, beans, hay, and wood.

mixed tithes. A tithe consisting of a natural product, such as milk or wool, obtained or cultivated by human effort.

"A second species of incorporeal hereditaments is that of tithes . . . the first species being usually called prædial, as of corn, grass, hops, and wood; the second mixed, as of wool, milk, pigs, etc., consisting of natural products, but nurtured and preserved in part by the care of man; and of these the tenth must be paid in gross: the third personal, as of manual occupations, trades, fisheries, and the like; and of these only the tenth part of the clear gains and profits is due." 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 24 (1766).

personal tithe. A tithe of profits from manual occupations or trades.

prædial tithe. A tithe of crops (such as corn). — Also spelled prædial tithe.

vicarial tithe (vi-kair-ee-al). A small tithe payable to a vicar.

tithe of agistment (ə-jist-ment). Hist. A church-levied charge on grazing land. • The tithe was paid by the occupier of the land rather than the person whose cattle grazed on the land. See AGISTMENT.

tithing. See DECENARY.

Titius heres esto (tish-ce-as heer-cez es-toh). [Latin] Roman law. Let Titius be my heir. • The phrase was the testamentary form for appointing an heir. Titius was a fictitious name often used by way of example in legal writing, esp. in forms.

title. (15c) 1. The union of all elements (as ownership, possession, and custody) constituting the legal right to control and dispose of property; the legal link between a person who owns property and the property itself <no one has title to that land>. Cf. ownership; possession. 2. Legal evidence of a person’s ownership rights in property; an instrument (such as a deed) that constitutes such evidence <record your title with the county clerk>.

“Though employed in various ways, [title] is generally used to describe either the manner in which a right to real property is acquired, or the right itself. In the first sense, it refers to the conditions necessary to acquire a valid claim to land; in the second, it refers to the legal consequences of such conditions. These two senses are not only interrelated, but inseparable: given the requisite conditions, the legal consequences or rights follow as of course: given the rights, conditions necessary for the creation of those rights must have been satisfied. Thus, when the word ‘title’ is used in one sense, the other sense is necessarily implied.” Kent McNeil, Common Law Aboriginal Title (1989).

aboriginal title. 1. Land ownership, or a claim of land ownership, by an indigenous people in a place that has been colonized. — Also termed native title. 2. INDIAN TITLE. [Cases: Indians ☞ 51.]

absolute title. (17c) An exclusive title to land; a title that excludes all others not compatible with it. See fee simple absolute under FEE SIMPLE. [Cases: Estates in Property ☞ 5.]

adverse title. (18c) A title acquired by adverse possession. See ADVERSE POSSESSION. [Cases: Adverse Possession ☞ 106.]

after-acquired title. (1810) Title held by a person who bought property from a seller who acquired title only after purporting to sell the property to the buyer. See AFTER-ACQUIRED-TITLE DOCTRINE. Cf. title by estoppel. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser ☞ 8.]

apparent title. See COLOR OF TITLE.

bad title. 1. See defective title. 2. See unmarketable title.

clear title. (17c) 1. A title free from any encumbrances, burdens, or other limitations. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser ☞ 130(2), 133.] 2. See marketable title. — Also termed good title.

defeasible title. (17c) A title voidable on the occurrence of a contingency, but not void on its face. [Cases: Estates in Property ☞ 6.]

defective title. (17c) A title that cannot legally convey the property to which it applies, usu. because of some conflicting claim to that property. — Also termed bad title. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser ☞ 129.]

derivative title. (17c) 1. A title that results when an already existing right is transferred to a new owner. 2. The general principle that a transferee of property acquires only the rights held by the transferor and no more. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser ☞ 210.]

doubtful title. (17c) A title that exposes the party holding it to the risk of litigation with an adverse claimant. See unmarketable title. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser ☞ 129(1), 130(2)].

equitable title. (17c) A title that indicates a beneficial interest in property and that gives the holder the right to acquire formal legal title. • Before the Statute of Uses (1536), an equitable title was enforceable only in a court of chancery, not of law. Cf. legal title. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser ☞ 54.]

good title. (16c) 1. A title that is legally valid or effective. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser ☞ 130(2), 133.] 2. See clear title (1). 3. See marketable title.

imperfect title. (18c) A title that requires a further exercise of the granting power to pass land in fee, or that does not convey full and absolute dominion.

Indian title. See INDIAN TITLE.

just title. In a case of prescription, a title that the possessor received from someone whom the possessor honestly believed to be the real owner, provided that the title was to transfer ownership of the property. [Cases: Adverse Possession ☞ 69.]

legal title. (17c) A title that evidences apparent ownership but does not necessarily signify full and complete title or a beneficial interest. • Before the Statute of Uses (1536), a legal title was enforceable only in a court of law, not chancery. Cf. equitable title. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser ☞ 54.]

lucrative title. Civil law. A title acquired without giving anything in exchange for the property; title by which a person acquires anything that comes as a clear gain, as by gift, descent, or devise. • Because lucrative title is usu. acquired by gift or inheritance, it is treated as the separate property of a married person. Cf. onerous title.

marketable title. (18c) A title that a reasonable buyer would accept because it appears to lack any defect and to cover the entire property that the seller has purported to sell; a title that enables a purchaser to hold property in peace during the period of ownership and to have it accepted by a later purchaser who employs the same standards of acceptability. — Also termed good title; merchantable title; clear title. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser ☞ 130.]

“One definition of a marketable title which has been put forward repeatedly is one free from all reasonable doubt. Stated another way, a marketable title is one which does not contain any manner of defect or outstanding interest or claim which may conceivably operate to defeat or impair the interest which is bargained for and is intended to be conveyed. This negative concept of marketability has become an implied invitation for courts to declare titles.
unmarketable if an examiner has entertained any doubt whatever with respect to them. The digests attest the painful truth that claims of a bygone era cling like barbacles to land titles and encumber them long after they should have been scraped clean. ... We need to replace this negative approach by a positive one which will make the marketability of titles depend solely upon their state during some recent interval of time rather than upon their entire history.” Paul E. Basye, Clearing Land Titles § 371, at 539 (1953).

native title. See aboriginal title (1).

nonmerchantable title. See unmarketable title.

onerous title (on-er-as). 1. Civil law. A title acquired by giving valuable consideration for the property, as by paying money or performing services. 2. A title to property that is acquired during marriage through a spouse’s skill or labor and is therefore treated as community property. Cf. lucrative title.

original title. A title that creates a right for the first time.

“The catching of fish is an original title of the right of ownership, whereas the purchase of them is a derivative title. The right acquired by the fisherman is newly created: it did not formerly exist in any one.” John Salmond, jurisprudence 345 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

paper title. See record title.

paramount title. (18c) 1. Archaic. A title that is the source of the current title; original title. 2. A title that is superior to another title or claim on the same property.

particular title. Civil law. A title acquired from an ancestor by purchase, gift, or inheritance before or after the ancestor’s death.

perfect title. 1. fee simple. 2. A grant of land that requires no further act from the legal authority to constitute an absolute title to the land. 3. A title that does not disclose a patent defect that may require a lawsuit to defend it. 4. A title that is good both at law and in equity. 5. A title that is good and valid beyond all reasonable doubt.

presumptive title. (17c) A title of the lowest order, arising out of the mere occupation or simple possession of property without any apparent right, or any pretense of right, to hold and continue that possession.

record title. (18c) A title as it appears in the public records after the deed is properly recorded. — Also termed title of record; paper title. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser ⊢ 132, 231(1).]

singular title. (17c) The title by which one acquires property as a singular successor.

tax title. (1831) A title to land purchased at a tax sale. [Cases: Taxation ⊢ 3060-3082.]

title by descent. (17c) A title that one acquires by law as an heir of the deceased owner.

title by devise. (1819) A title created by will.

title by estoppel. Title acquired from a person who did not have title at the time of a purported conveyance with a warranty but later acquired the title, which then inures to the benefit of the grantee. Cf. after-acquired title.

title by prescription. (17c) A title acquired by prescription. See prescription (3). [Cases: Adverse Possession ⊢ 106.]

title defective in form. (1836) A title for which some defect appears on the face of the deed, as opposed to a defect that arises from circumstances or extrinsic evidence. • Title defective in form cannot be the basis of prescription. See prescription (5). [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser ⊢ 129.]

title of entry. (16c) The right to enter upon lands.

title of record. See record title.

universal title. (17c) A title acquired by a conveyance causa mortis of a stated portion of all the conveyor’s property interests so that on the conveyor’s death the recipient stands as a universal successor.

unmarketable title. (18c) A title that a reasonable buyer would refuse to accept because of possible conflicting interests in or litigation over the property. — Also termed bad title; unmerchantable title; nonmerchantable title. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser ⊢ 130(2).]

3. The heading of a statute or other legal document <the title of the contract was "Confidentiality Agreement">. [Cases: Contracts ⊢ 152; Statutes ⊢ 109.2.]

general title. A statute’s name that broadly and comprehensively identifies the subject matter addressed by the legislature. Cf. restrictive title. [Cases: Statutes ⊢ 109.2.

long title. The full, formal title of a statute, usu. containing a brief statement of legislative purpose.

“The first Acts of Parliament did not have titles. The first time that an Act of Parliament was given a title was about 1495. Even when the long title came to be added to each Act of Parliament as a matter of course, as it did from about 1513, the long title was not regarded as part of the Act of Parliament itself. Today, however, the position is different: the long title is part of the Act of Parliament.” D.J. Gifford & John Salter, How to Understand an Act of Parliament 19 (1996).

“Because Parliament’s clerks, rather than Parliament, provided the titles of acts, the traditional rule has been that the title could not be used for interpretive purposes ... This is no longer the practice in most English-speaking jurisdictions, for the long title, and often a short title as well, are part of the legislative bill from the very beginning. In the United States, most state constitutions require the legislative enactment to have a title that gives accurate notice of the contents of the law.” William N. Eskridge Jr. & Elizabeth Garett, Legislation 831 (2001).

short title. The abbreviated title of a statute by which it is popularly known; a statutory nickname.

4. A subdivision of a statute or code <Title IX> restrictive title. A statute’s name that narrowly identifies the particular subject matter addressed by the legislature. Cf. general title. [Cases: Statutes ⊢ 109.2.]

5. The name by which a court case or other legal proceeding is distinguished from others; style (1). 6. An appellation of office, dignity, or distinction <after the election, he bore the title of mayor for the next four years.

title of right. (1917) A court-issued decree creating, transferring, or extinguishing rights. Examples include a decree of divorce or judicial separation, an adjudication of bankruptcy, a discharge in bankruptcy, a decree of foreclosure against a mortgagor, an order appointing or removing a trustee, and a grant of letters of administration. In all the examples listed, the judgment operates not as a remedy but as a title of right.

title opinion. See OPINION (2).

title registration. (1971) A system of registering title to land with a public registry, such as a county clerk's office. See TORRENS SYSTEM. [Cases: Records C=99.

title retention. (1936) A form of lien, in the nature of a chattel mortgage, to secure payment of a loan given to purchase the secured item. [Cases: Chattel Mortgages C=11.

title search. (1965) An examination of the public records to determine whether any defects or encumbrances exist in a given property's chain of title. A title search is typically conducted by a title company or a real-estate lawyer at a prospective buyer's or mortgagee's request. [Cases: Abstracts of Title C=130; Vendor and Purchaser C=231(2).]

title standards. (1938) Criteria by which a real-estate title can be evaluated to determine whether it is defective or marketable. Many states, through associations of conveyancers and real-estate attorneys, still adhere to title standards. [Cases: Abstracts of Title C=130; Vendor and Purchaser C=130(2).]

title state. See TITLE THEORY.
