cost-book mining company. An association of persons organized for the purpose of working mines or lodes, whose capital stock is divided into shares that are transferable without the consent of other members. • The management of the mine is entrusted to an agent called a purser. [Cases: Mines and Minerals $= 101.]

cost depletion. Oil & gas. The recovery of an oil-and-gas producer's basis (i.e., investment) in a producing well by deducting the basis proportionately over the producing life of the well. Treas. Reg. § 1.611-2. Cf. PERCENTAGE DEPLETION.

"Under cost depletion, the taxpayer in an oil and gas property deducts the basis in the property from the income as oil and gas are produced and sold. Cost depletion is calculated by a formula . . . [that] relates the recovery of the taxpayer's investment to the proportion that the current unit sales of oil and gas bear to the total anticipated sales of oil and gas from the property. The investment is recovered ratably over the life of the well. "John S. Lowe, Oil and Gas Law in a Nutshell 353 (3d ed. 1995).

cost, insurance, and freight. A mercantile-contract term allocating the rights and duties of the buyer and the seller of goods with respect to delivery, payment, and risk of loss, whereby the seller must (1) clear goods for export, (2) arrange for transportation by water, (3) procure insurance against the buyer's risk of damage during carriage, and (4) pay the costs of shipping to the port of destination. • The seller's delivery is complete (and the risk of loss passes to the buyer) when the goods are loaded on the receiving ship while docked in the port of shipment. This term is used only when goods are transported by sea or inland waterway. — Abbr. CIF. Cf. cost and freight; free on board. [Cases: Sales $= 77(2).]

"'C.I.F.' is a mercantile symbol that is commonly used in international sales contracts. It is defined by section 2-320 of the UCC and by the Incoterms — 1990 and the Revised American Foreign Trade Definitions — 1941. Under all of these definitions the letters 'C.I.F.' mean that the price covers the cost of the goods, the cost of insuring them for the benefit of the order of the buyer, and the cost of carrying them to the named point, almost always the destination. Like the other mercantile symbols, the meaning of "C.I.F." may be varied by agreement." William D. Hawkland, Uniform Commercial Code Series § 2-320.01 (1984).

CIF destination. A contractual term denoting that the price includes in a lump sum the cost of the goods and the insurance and freight to the named destination. — Also termed CIF place of destination. [Cases: Sales $= 77(2).]

cost justification. (1938) Under the Robinson-Patman Act, an affirmative defense against a charge of price discrimination dependent on the seller's showing that it incurs lower costs in serving those customers who are paying less. 15 USCA § 13(a).

cost-of-capital method. A means of measuring a utility's cost of acquiring debt and equity capital. • Regulatory commissions often use this method to determine a fair rate of return for the utility's investors. [Cases: Gas $= 14.4(10); Public Utilities $= 129.]

cost of completion. See COST (1).

cost-of-living adjustment. An automatic increase or decrease in the amount of money, usu. support or maintenance, to be paid by one party to another, the adjustment being tied to the cost-of-living-adjustment figures maintained and updated by the federal government. — Abbr. COLA.

cost-of-living clause. (1953) A provision (as in a contract or lease) that gives an automatic wage, rent, or benefit increase tied in some way to cost-of-living rises in the economy. • A cost-of-living clause may also cover a decrease, though this is rare. See INFLATION. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant $= 200.7.]

court-appointed counsel. See assigned counsel.

cumis counsel. An independent attorney hired by a defendant in a lawsuit in which the damages may be covered by the defendant's insurer but a conflict of interest between the defendant and the insurer makes it unreasonable for an attorney selected by the insurer to represent the defendant. • The term derives from San Diego Federal Credit Union v. Cumis Ins. Society, Inc., 162 Cal. App. 3d 358 (1984), in which the concept was first clearly articulated. [Cases: Attorney and Client = 215(5); Insurance = 2929.]

general counsel. (1848) 1. A lawyer or law firm that represents a client in all or most of the client's legal matters, but that sometimes refers extraordinary matters — such as litigation and intellectual-property cases — to other lawyers. 2. The most senior lawyer in a corporation's legal department, usu. also a corporate officer.

house counsel. See in-house counsel.

independent counsel. (1920) An attorney hired to provide an unbiased opinion about a case or to conduct an impartial investigation; esp., an attorney appointed by a governmental branch or agency to investigate alleged misconduct within that branch or agency. See special prosecutor under prosecutor. Cf. special counsel. [Cases: United States = 40.]

in-house counsel. (1974) One or more lawyers employed by a company. — Also termed house counsel; (when employed by a corporation) corporate counsel. Cf. corporate counsel.

count, n. (14c) Procedure. 1. The part of an indictment charging the suspect with a distinct offense. 2. In a complaint or similar pleading, the statement of a distinct claim. Cf. declaration (7). [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure = 627; Pleading = 53.]

"This word ... is in our old law-books used synonymously with declaration ... But when the suit embraces two or more causes of action (each of which of course requires a counter. Hist. An advocate or professional pleader; one who counts (i.e., orally recites) for a client. • Counters had coalesced into an identifiable group practicing before the Common Bench by the beginning of the 13th century. They were the leaders of the medieval legal profession, and over time came to be known as serjeants at law. — Also spelled counter; contor; counteur. See SERJEANT-AT-LAW.

counteraction. See COUNTERCLAIM.

counteraffidavit. See AFFIDAVIT.

counterclaim, n. (18c) A claim for relief asserted against an opposing party after an original claim has been made; esp., a defendant’s claim in opposition to or as a setoff against the plaintiff’s claim. — Also termed counteraction; countersuit; cross-demand. Cf. CROSS-CLAIM. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure (775–784; Pleading (9); Set-off and Counterclaim (9)].

counterclaimant, n. "Under [Fed. R. Civ. P.] Rule 13 the court has broad discretion to allow claims to be joined in order to expedite the resolution of all controversies between the parties in one suit. Rule 13(c) specifically provides that the counterclaimant is not limited by recovery sought by the opposing party but may claim relief in excess of that amount. Further, the general legal rule is that it is immaterial whether a counterclaim is legal or equitable for purposes of determining whether it properly is brought under Rule 13. . . . The expectation is that this liberal joinder policy will further the elimination of circuitry of action and multiple litigation.” 6 Charles Alan Wright et al., Federal Practice and Procedure, § 1403, at 15–16 (2d ed. 1990).

compulsory counterclaim. (1938) A counterclaim that must be asserted to be cognizable, usu. because it relates to the opposing party’s claim and arises out of the same subject matter. • If a defendant fails to assert a compulsory counterclaim in the original action, that claim may not be brought in a later, separate action (with some exceptions). See Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(a). [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure (775; Judgment (585(4); Set-off and Counterclaim)].

permissive counterclaim. (1924) A counterclaim that need not be asserted to be cognizable, usu. because it does not arise out of the same subject matter as the opposing party’s claim or involves third parties over which the court does not have jurisdiction. • Permissive counterclaims may be brought in a later, separate action. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(b).

counter-complaint. See COMPLAINT.

counterfeit, vb. (14c) To unlawfully forge, copy, or imitate an item, esp. money or a negotiable instrument (such as a security or promissory note) or other officially issued item of value (such as a postage stamp or a food stamp), or to possess such an item without authorization and with the intent to deceive or defraud by presenting the item as genuine. • Counterfeiting includes producing or selling an item that displays a reproduction of a genuine trademark, usu. to deceive buyers into thinking they are purchasing genuine merchandise. See 18 USCA §§ 470 et seq. [Cases: Counterfeiting ☞ 1; Trademarks ☞ 1432.] — counterfeit, n. — counterfeit, adj.

‘Literally a counterfeit is an imitation intended to pass for an original. Hence it is spurious or false, and to counterfeit is to make false. For this reason the verbs counterfeit and forge are often employed as synonyms and the same is true to some extent of the corresponding nouns. No error is involved in this usage but it is important to distinguish between the words as far as possible when used as the labels of criminal offenses. In the most restricted sense, (counterfeiting is the unlawful making of false money in the similitude of the genuine. At one time under English statutes it was made treason. Under modern statutes it is a felony.' Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 431–32 (3d ed. 1982).

Counterfeit Access Device and Computer Fraud and Abuse Act of 1984. A federal statute that criminalizes various computer-related activities such as accessing without permission a computer system belonging to a bank or the federal government, or using that access to improperly obtain anything of value. 18 USCA § 1030. [Cases: Telecommunications ☞ 1342, 1348.]

counterfeiter. A person who forges or otherwise makes a copy or an unauthorized imitation of something (esp. a document, currency, or another’s signature) with the intent to deceive or defraud.

counterfeiting, n. The unlawful forgery, copying, or imitation of an item, esp. money or a negotiable instrument (such as a security or promissory note) or other officially issued item of value (such as a postage stamp), or the unauthorized possession of such an item, with the intent to deceive or defraud by claiming or passing the item as genuine. See 18 USCA §§ 470 et seq. [Cases: Counterfeiting ☞ 1.] — counterfeit, vb. — counterfeit, n. — counterfeit, adj.

counterfeit mark. See counterfeit trademark under TRADEMARK.

counterfeit recording. Copyright. An unauthorized copy of a copyright-protected recording’s sounds, artwork, label, trademark, or packaging. — Also termed bootleg recording. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property ☞ 70.]

counterfeit trademark. See trademark.

counterfoil (kown-tar-foyl), n. A detachable part of a writing on which the particulars of the main part are summarized. • The most common example is a check stub, on which the date, the payee, and the amount are typically noted.

counterletter. Civil law. A document in which the parties to a simulated contract record their true intentions. La. Civ. Code art. 2025. • For example, the record owner of real property may acknowledge in a counterletter that another person actually owns the property; the counterletter may then be used when the property is to be reconveyed after a period. A counterletter can have no effect against a third party acting in good faith. See simulated contract under CONTRACT.

countermand (kown-tar-mand), n. (16c) 1. A contradictory command that overrides or annuls a previous one. 2. An action that has the effect of voiding something previously ordered; a revocation. — countermand (kown-tar-mand or kown-), vb.

counteroffer, n. (18c) Contracts. An offeree’s new offer that varies the terms of the original offer and that ordinarily rejects and terminates the original offer. • A late or defective acceptance is considered a counteroffer. See MIRROR IMAGE RULE. [Cases: Contracts ☞ 24.] — counteroffer, vb. — counterofferer, n.

counterpart. (15c) 1. In conveyancing, a corresponding part of an instrument <the other half of the indenture — the counterpart — could not be found>. 2. One of two or more copies or duplicates of a legal instrument <this lease may be executed in any number of counterparts, each of which is considered an original>.

“For Formerly ‘part’ was used as the opposite of ‘counterpart,’ in respect to covenants executed in duplicate, but now each copy is called a ‘counterpart.’” 2 Stewart Ralpaj & Robert L. Lawrence, A Dictionary of American and English Law 927 (1883).

“Counterparts are not nowadays written on the same parchment, but that which is executed by the grantor of an interest is called the ‘original,’ while that which is executed by the party to whom the interest passes — for example, a lessee — is called the ‘counterpart.’” G.C. Cheshire, Modern Law of Real Property 674 (3d ed. 1933).

counterpromise, n. (18c) A promise made in exchange for another party’s promise . See bilateral contract under CONTRACT. [Cases: Contracts ☞ 55.] — counterpromise, vb.

counter-roll. Hist. A record kept by an officer as a check on another officer’s record, esp. the rolls maintained by a sheriff and a coroner.

countersuit. See COUNTERCLAIM.

countertrade. A type of international trade in which purchases made by an importing nation are linked to offsetting purchases made by the exporting nation.

“Countertrade is barter in modern clothes. It developed rapidly as a form of doing business with the USSR and Eastern European nations in the 1970s and 1980s, before the major economic and political reforms tended to diminish its emphasis as a means of doing business.” Ralph H. Folsom & Michael W. Gordon, International Business Transactions § 2.1, at 46 (1995).

counter will. See mutual will under will.

countez (kown-teez). [Law French] Hist. A direction given by a clerk of a court to a crier, after a jury was sworn, to count the jury members.
"Of this ignorance we may see daily instances, in the abuse of two legal terms of ancient French; one, the prologue to all proclamations, 'oyez, or hear ye,' which is generally pronounced most unmeaningly, 'O yes,' the other, a more pardonable mistake, viz., when a jury are all sworn, the officer bids the crier number them, for which the word in law-French is, 'couvez'; but we now hear it pronounced in very good English, 'count these,'" 4 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 334 n.s (1769).

countor. See COUNTER.

country. (14c) The largest territorial division for local government within a state, generally considered to be a political subdivision and a quasi-corporation. • Every country exists as a result of a sovereign act of legislation, either constitutional or statutory, separating it from the rest of the state as an integral part of its territory and establishing it as one of the primary divisions of the state for purposes of civil administration. — Abbr. co. [Cases: Counties C=--1.1.

"A county is a part of the realm, entirely governed by one sheriff under the king, but all subject to the general government of the realm: and therefore every county is as it were an entire body of itself, so that upon a feoffment of lands in many towns in one county, livery of seisin made in one parcel in any one of the towns in the name of all, sufficeth for all the lands in all the other towns within the same county: but upon a feoffment of lands in divers counties, there must be livery of seisin in every county." Sir Henry Finch, Law, or a Discourse Thereof 79 (1759).

foreign county. Any county separate from that of a county where matters arising in the former county are called into question, though both may lie within the same state or country.

county palatine (pal-a-tin or -tin). Hist. A county in which the lord held certain royal privileges, such as the right to pardon a felon or to have indictments recite that offenses were committed against the lord's — rather than the king's — peace. • In England, there were three such counties: Chester, Durham, and Lancaster. The separate legal systems in these counties were slowly eliminated; the last vestiges of a separate system were abolished by the Courts Act (1971). Cf. proprietary government under GOVERNMENT.

"The counties palatine were Chester, Durham, and Lancaster. Whatever may be the precise date at which these counties became 'palatine,' it seems likely that there was in Saxon times a jurisdiction equivalent to that of the Palatine earl, and originating in usurpation and necessity. The Central Government was too far away both before and after the Conquest to control effectively the administration of the Marches, which were always turbulent and lawless districts." A.T. Carter, A History of English Legal Institutions 192 (4th ed. 1910).

county property. Property that a county is authorized to acquire, hold, or sell. [Cases: Counties C=--103.]

county purpose. An objective pursued by a county; esp., one that a county levies taxes for. [Cases: Counties C=--190.1.]

county seat. The municipality where a county's principal offices are located. — Also termed county town. [Cases: Counties C=--25.]

courier. A messenger, esp. one who delivers parcels, packages, and the like. • In international law, the term denotes a messenger duly authorized by a sending state to deliver a diplomatic pouch.

course of business. (17c) The normal routine in managing a trade or business. — Also termed ordinary course of business; regular course of business; ordinary course; regular course. [Cases: Customs and Usages C=--9.]

course of dealing. (16c) An established pattern of conduct between parties in a series of transactions (e.g., multiple sales of goods over a period of years). • If a dispute arises, the parties' course of dealing can be used as evidence of how they intended to carry out the transaction. Cf. course of performance; trade usage under USAGE. [Cases: Contracts C=--170.]

"A course of dealing is distinguishable from a course of performance. As defined by the [UCC], 'course of dealing' relates to conduct under other transactions which occurred with regularity prior to the formation of the present contract, while 'course of performance' relates to the conduct of the parties under the contract in question subsequent to its formation. However, in meaning the course of employment. (17c) Events that occur or circumstances that exist as a part of one's employment; esp., the time during which an employee furthers an employer's goals through employer-mandated directives. Cf. SCOPE OF EMPLOYMENT; ZONE OF EMPLOYMENT.

course of performance. (18c) A sequence of previous performance by either party after an agreement has been entered into, when a contract involves repeated occasions for performance and both parties know the nature of the performance and have an opportunity to object to it. • A course of performance accepted or acquiesced in without objection is relevant to determining the meaning of the agreement. Cf. COURSE OF DEALING; TRADE USAGE under USAGE. [Cases: Contracts C=170.]

"Common law courts have recognized the necessity of learning how people usually talk and what they usually mean by their language before one interprets their contracts. . . . 'Course of performance' refers to a pattern of performance of the contract that is the subject of the dispute, as contrasted to 'course of dealing' which refers to the pattern of performance in prior contracts between the same parties." Claude Rohwer & Gordon D. Schaber, Contracts in a Nutshell 171-73 (4th ed. 1997).

"The phrase 'course of performance' relates to the way the parties have acted in performance of the particular contract in question. The judicial inquiry on this point is limited to the way the parties have acted in carrying out the particular contract that is in controversy, as distinguished from a general pattern of dealing that may embrace many other contracts or transactions between the parties." Ronald A. Anderson, Uniform Commercial Code § 1-205.74 (1997).

court, n. (12c) 1. A governmental body consisting of one or more judges who sit to adjudicate disputes and administer justice

"A court . . . is a permanently organized body, with independent judicial powers defined by law, meeting at a time and place fixed by law for the judicial public administration of justice." 1 William J. Hughes, Federal Practice, Jurisdiction & Procedure § 7, at 8 (1931).

2. The judge or judges who sit on such a governmental body <the court asked the parties to approach the bench.> 3. A legislative assembly <in Massachusetts, the General Court is the legislature.> 4. The locale for a legal proceeding <an out-of-court statement.> 5. The building where the judge or judges convene to adjudicate disputes and administer justice <the lawyers agreed to meet at the court at 8:00 a.m.> — Also termed (in sense 5) courthouse.

admiralty court. See ADMIRALTY (1).
appellate court. (18c) A court with jurisdiction to review decisions of lower courts or administrative agencies. — Also termed apellate court; appeal court; court of appeals; court of review; court of review. [Cases: Courts C=203-254.]

"Appellate courts are among the most important institutions of governance in the United States. Through their review of trial court and administrative agency decisions they ensure that those bodies function lawfully and that litigants receive justice under law. Moreover, they provide authoritative interpretations of statutory and constitutional provisions and control the shaping of the common law in response to ever-changing circumstances; they are thus major sources of law." court of competent jurisdiction. A court that has the power and authority to do a particular act; one recognized by law as possessing the right to adjudicate a controversy. - Also termed competent court.

court of equity. (16c) A court that (1) has jurisdiction in equity, (2) administers and decides controversies in accordance with the rules, principles, and precedents of equity; and (3) follows the forms and procedures of chancery. Cf. court of law. [Cases: Courts [42.7].]

court of final appeal. 1. See court of last resort. 2. Eccles. law. (cap.) JUDICIAL COMMITTEE OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL.

court of first instance. See trial court.

court of general jurisdiction. (18c) A court having unlimited or nearly unlimited trial jurisdiction in both civil and criminal cases. - Also termed general-jurisdiction court. [Cases: Courts [117.5-158.1.]

court of impeachment. See court for the trial of impeachments.

court of inquiry. 1. Hist. In English law, a court appointed by the monarch to ascertain whether it was proper to use extreme measures against someone who had been court-martialed. 2. Hist. In American law, an agency created under articles of war and vested with the power to investigate the nature of a transaction or accusation of an officer or soldier. 3. In some jurisdictions, a procedure that allows a magistrate to examine witnesses in relation to any offense that the magistrate has a good-faith reason to believe was committed. court of instance. See trial court. court of last resort. (17c) The court having the authority to handle the final appeal of a case, such as the U.S. Supreme Court.
court of law. (16c) 1. Broadly, any judicial tribunal that administers the laws of a state or nation. 2. A court that proceeds according to the course of the common law, and that is governed by its rules and principles. Cf. court of equity.
court of limited jurisdiction. A court with jurisdiction over only certain types of cases, or cases in which the amount in controversy is limited. [Cases: Courts \(\Rightarrow\) 159–197] court of review. See appellate court.
court of ordinary. See probate court.
court of original jurisdiction. (18c) A court where an action is initiated and first heard. [Cases: Courts \(\Rightarrow\) 117.5–158.1, 206] court of record. (18c) 1. A court that is required to keep a record of its proceedings. • The court's records are presumed accurate and cannot be collaterally impeached. See of record (2). [Cases: Courts \(\Rightarrow\) 48, 205] 2. A court that may fine and imprison people for contempt.

"A court of record is, strictly speaking, a court which has record (habet recordum) or is a court of record, while a court whose record may be disputed has no record (non habet recordum) and is no court of record." - Frederick Pollock & Frederic William Maitland, History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I (1669) (2d ed. 1899).

court of review. See appellate court.
court of special jurisdiction. See limited court.
court of special session. (1813) A court that has no stated term and is not continuous, but is organized only for hearing a particular case. [Cases: Courts \(\Rightarrow\) 64, 191] court of summary jurisdiction. See magistrate's court.
criminal court. A court with jurisdiction over criminal matters.
Crown Court. See crown court.
Dean of Guild Court. See dean of guild court.
de facto court (de fak-toh). 1. A court functioning under the authority of a statute that is later adjudged to be invalid. • Also termed court de facto. [Cases: Courts \(\Rightarrow\) 59] 2. A court established and acting under the authority of a de facto government.
dependency court. A court having jurisdiction over matters involving abused and neglected children, foster care, the termination of parental rights, and sometimes adoption.
diocesan court (di-ahs-i sin). Eccles. law. A court exercising general or limited jurisdiction (as determined by patent, local custom, or legislation) of matters arising within a bishop's diocese. • Diocesan courts include the consistory court, the courts of the commissaries, and the courts of archdeacons.
divided court. See divided court.
divisional court. An English court made up of two or more judges from the High Court of Justice sitting in special cases that cannot be disposed of by one judge. • Each division of the High Court has a divisional court, e.g., the Divisional Court of the Family Division. With the exception of the Divisional Court of the Chancery Division, which has jurisdiction to review land-registration appeals from the county court, almost all judicial appeals are from decisions of a magistrates' court. The Divisional Court of the Queen's Bench Division hears appeals from the Crown Court or the magistrates' court by way of case stated in criminal prosecutions, which is the most frequent use of a divisional court.
domestic court. (1801) 1. A court having jurisdiction at the place of a party's residence or domicile. 2. See family court.
domestic-relations court. See family court. drug court. A court that hears cases against nonviolent adults and juveniles, who are often first-time offenders and who are usu. charged with possession of a controlled substance or with committing a minor drug-related crime. • Drug courts focus on treatment rather than on incarceration. Cf. problem-solving court. [Cases: Chemical Dependents \(\Rightarrow\) 12; Sentencing and Punishment \(\Rightarrow\) 2051]

the clergy and doctrines of the Church. The jurisdiction of these courts was of particular significance before the Reformation, but, in certain matters and especially in matrimonial causes and the law of succession to property on death (testate and intestate succession), it remained of importance till the middle of the nineteenth century.” 1 A.K.R. Kiralfy, Potter's Historical Introduction to English Law and Its Institutions 211 (4th ed. 1958).

examining court. (18c) A lower court (usu. presided over by a magistrate) that determines probable cause and sets bail at a preliminary hearing in a criminal case.

family court. (1923) A court having jurisdiction over matters involving divorce, child custody and support, paternity, domestic violence, and other family-law issues. — Also termed domestic-relations court; court of domestic relations; domestic court. [Cases: Courts ☞-174.]

federal court. (18c) A court having federal jurisdiction, including the U.S. Supreme Court, circuit courts of appeals, district courts, bankruptcy courts, and tax courts. — Also termed United States court.

foreigner court. (16c) 1. The court of a foreign nation. 2. The court of another state.

forty-days court. See COURT OF ATTACHMENTS.

franchise court. See FRANCHISE COURT.

full court. (16c) A court session that is attended by all the court's judges; an en banc court. — Also termed full bench.

General Court. See GENERAL COURT.

general-jurisdiction court. See court of general jurisdiction.

High Commission Court. See COURT OF HIGH COMMISSION.

High Court. 1. See HIGH COURT OF JUSTICE. 2. See HIGH COURT OF JUSTICIARY.

High Court of Admiralty. See HIGH COURT OF ADMIRALTY.

High Court of Chivalry. See HIGH COURT OF CHIVALRY.

High Court of Delegates. See COURT OF DELEGATES.

High Court of Errors and Appeals. See COURT OF ERRORS AND APPEALS.

High Court of Justice. See HIGH COURT OF JUSTICE.

High Court of Justiciary. See HIGH COURT OF JUSTICIARY.

higher court. See court above.

highest court. (16c) The court of last resort in a particular jurisdiction; a court whose decision is final and cannot be appealed because no higher court exists to consider the matter. • The U.S. Supreme Court, for example, is the highest federal court.

hot court. (1972) A court, esp. an appellate court, that is familiar with the briefs filed in the case, and therefore with the issues, before oral argument. • Typically, a hot court controls the oral argument with its questioning, as opposed to listening passively to set presentations of counsel.

housing court. A court dealing primarily with landlord-and-tenant matters, including disputes over maintenance, lease terms, and building and fire codes. [Cases: Courts ☞-174.]

hundred court. Hist. In England, a larger court baron, held for all inhabitants of a particular hundred rather than a manor, in which the free suitors were the judges (iurers) and the steward the register. • A hundred court was not a court of record, and it resembled a court-baron in all respects except for its larger territorial jurisdiction. The last hundred court was abolished in 1971. — Also termed hundred moot. See COURT BARON.

impeachment court. See COURT FOR THE TRIAL OF IMPEACHMENTS.

inferior court. (17c) 1. Any court that is subordinate to the chief appellate tribunal within a judicial system. 2. A court of special, limited, or statutory jurisdiction, whose record must show the existence of jurisdiction in any given case to give its ruling presumptive validity. — Also termed lower court.

inquisitorial court. A court in which the inquisitorial system prevails.

instance court. 1. See trial court. 2. Hist. 'The admiralty court in England that exercised original jurisdiction in all cases except those involving prizes.

insular court. A federal court with jurisdiction over U.S. island territories, such as the Virgin Islands. [Cases: Federal Courts ☞-1021-1024.]

intermediate court. An appellate court that is below a court of last resort.

International Court of Justice. See INTERNATIONAL COURT OF JUSTICE.

International Criminal Court. See INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL COURT.

International Trade Court. See UNITED STATES COURT OF INTERNATIONAL TRADE.

J.P. court. See JUSTICE COURT.

justice court. (16c) A court, presided over by a justice of the peace, that has jurisdiction to hear minor criminal cases, matters involving small amounts of money, or certain specified claims (such as forcible-entry-and-

juvenile court. (1903) 1. A court having jurisdiction over cases involving children under a specified age, usu. 18. • Illinois enacted the first statewide juvenile court act in 1899. Today every state has a specialized juvenile or family court with exclusive original delinquency jurisdiction. — Also termed children's court. [Cases: Courts C=174.] 2. A court having special jurisdiction over orphaned, delinquent, dependent, and neglected children. • This type of juvenile court is created by statute and derives its power from the specific wording of the statute, usu. having exclusive original jurisdiction over matters involving abuse and neglect, adoption, status offenses, and delinquency. Generally, juvenile courts are special courts of a paternal nature that have jurisdiction over the care, custody, and control of children (as defined by the statute). The jurisdiction of the juvenile court is exercised as between the state (for the child) and the parents of the child and is not concerned with a custody controversy that does not affect the morale, health, or welfare of the child. A juvenile court is not a criminal court. The primary concern of a juvenile court is the child’s immediate welfare. See Uniform Juvenile Court Act. [Cases: Infants C=185.]

kangaroo court. (1849) 1. A self-appointed tribunal or mock court in which the principles of law and justice are disregarded, perverted, or parodied. • Kangaroo courts may be assembled by various groups, such as prisoners in a jail (to settle disputes between inmates) and players on a baseball team (to “punish” teammates who commit fielding errors). 2. A court or tribunal characterized by unauthorized or irregular procedures, esp. so as to render a fair proceeding impossible. 3. A sham legal proceeding. • The term’s origin is uncertain, but it appears to be an Americanism. It has been traced to 1853 in the American West. “Kangaroo” might refer to the illogical leaps between “facts” and conclusions, or to the hapless defendant’s quick bounce from court to gallows.

land court. A court having jurisdiction over land-related matters including: (1) exclusive original jurisdiction of applications for registration of land titles and related questions, writs of entry and petitions to clear title to real estate, petitions to determine the validity and extent of municipal zoning ordinances, bylaws, and regulations, and proceedings for foreclosure and redemption from tax titles; (2) original concurrent jurisdiction of declaratory judgment proceedings, shared with the supreme judicial, superior, and probate courts; and (3) original concurrent equity jurisdiction in land-related matters, except for cases of specific performance of land contracts. • Land courts today exist in the United States only in Massachusetts and Hawaii. [Cases: Courts C=174, 472.1.]

landed-estates court. Hist. English law. A statutorily established tribunal to dispose of encumbered real estate more promptly and easily than could be accomplished through the ordinary judicial machinery. • This type of court was first established in Ireland by acts of 11 & 12 Vict., ch. 48 and 12 & 13 Vict., ch. 77. The purpose of the court was to enable the owner, or any lessee of an unexpired term of 63 years or less, of encumbered land to apply to commissioners to direct a sale. The court served as a court of record and was called the Incumbered Estates Court. A later act abolished that court and created a new permanent tribunal called the Landed Estates Court. 21 & 22 Vict., ch. 72.

legitime court. A court held by a papal legate and having ecclesiastical jurisdiction.

legislative court. (1828) A court created by a statute, as opposed to one created by a constitution. • Also termed (in federal law) Article I court. [Cases: Courts C=41.]

levy court. Hist. A court in the District of Columbia that exercised many of the functions typical of county commissioners or county supervisors in the states, such as constructing and repairing roads and bridges.

limited court. A court having special jurisdiction conferred by statute, such as a probate court. • Also termed court of special jurisdiction. [Cases: Courts C=159–197.]

liquidation court. Any court in which a liquidation proceeding takes place.

local court. A court whose jurisdiction is limited to a particular territory, such as a state, municipal, or county court.

lord mayor's court. Hist. A court of law and equity that had jurisdiction in civil cases arising within the city of London and acted as the appellate court from the Chamberlain Court. • It was abolished by the Court Act of 1971.

lower court. 1. See court below. 2. See inferior court.

magistrate’s court (maj-i-strats or -strists). (1904) 1. A court with jurisdiction over minor criminal offenses. • Such a court also has the power to bind over for trial persons accused of more serious offenses. • Also termed police court. 2. A court with limited jurisdiction over minor criminal and civil matters. • Sometimes spelled (esp. in England) magistrates’ court. • Also termed (in England) court of petty sessions; court of summary jurisdiction. [Cases: Justices of the Peace C=31.]

mayor’s court. A municipal court in which the mayor presides as the judge, with jurisdiction over minor criminal (and sometimes civil) matters, traffic offenses, and the like. [Cases: Municipal Corporations C=635.] military court. A court that has jurisdiction over members of the armed forces and that enforces the military court. A military court that has special and limited jurisdiction and that is convened to investigate specific matters and, traditionally, to determine whether further procedures are warranted. 10 USCA § 935. [Cases: Armed Services >> 41.]

moot court. See moot court.

municipal court. (17c) A court having jurisdiction (usu. civil and criminal) over cases arising within the municipality in which it sits. • A municipal court’s civil jurisdiction to issue a judgment is often limited to a small amount, and its criminal jurisdiction is limited to petty offenses. — Also termed city court. [Cases: Courts >> 186; Municipal Corporations >> 634.]

naturalization court. See naturalization court.

nisi prius court. See nisi prius.

open court. See open court.

ordinary’s court. See probate court.

orphan’s court. See probate court.

Palace Court. See palace court.

parish court. See county court.

peacemaker’s court. Native American law. A tribal court that adjudicates, arbitrates, or mediates some disputes, usu. according to traditional and statutory tribal law. [Cases: Indians >> 220.]

people’s court. See people’s court.

piepowder court. See piepowder court.

police court. See magistrate’s court (1).

policy court. An appellate court, usu. a court of last resort, that must consider a decision’s effects not only on the litigants but also on public policy.

practice court. 1. See moot court. 2. (cap.) See bail court.

prerogative court. In New Jersey, a probate court. See probate court. [Cases: Courts >> 200.]

pretorial court. Hist. A 17th-century Maryland court that had jurisdiction over capital and other serious crimes. • It consisted of three judges: the colony’s lord proprietor or his lieutenant-general, the Secretary or Register of the Council of State, and one other member of the Council.

prize court. A court having jurisdiction to adjudicate the captures made at sea in time of war. See prize (2). Cf. court of appeals in cases of capture. [Cases: War and National Emergency >> 28(1).]

probate court. (18c) A court with the power to declare wills valid or invalid, to oversee the administration of estates and (in some states) to appoint guardians and approve the adoption of minors. — Also termed surrogate’s court; surrogate court; court of ordinary; ordinary’s court; county court; orphan’s court (abbr. O.C.). See probate. [Cases: Courts >> 198.]

problem-solving court. A specialized court that matches community resources to litigants whose problems or cases may benefit from those resources. • In criminal cases, a problem-solving court endeavors to promote solutions to underlying behavior problems that may lead to misconduct by providing treatment rather than imprisonment. For example, it may match offenders with resources for drug-abuse or mental-health treatment, often with close court supervision. In civil cases, a problem-solving court may help the parties try to resolve disputes through counseling or mediation rather than litigation. Cf. drug court.

provisional court. A federal court with jurisdiction and powers governed by the order granting its authority, such as a temporary court established in a conquered or occupied territory.

Quarter Sessions Court. See court of general quarter sessions of the peace.

recorder’s court. A court having jurisdiction over felony cases. • This court exists in only a few jurisdictions, such as Michigan, where the recorder’s court hears felony cases arising within the Detroit city limits. [Cases: Criminal Law >> 90.]

register’s court. Hist. A probate court in Pennsylvania or Delaware. See probate court. [Cases: Courts >> 200.]

roque court. A court that fails to apply controlling law in making its decisions.

sheriff’s court. Scots law. The principal inferior court in Scotland, having both civil and criminal jurisdiction.

small-claims court. (1923) A court that informally and expeditiously adjudicates claims that seek damages below a specified monetary amount, usu. claims to collect small accounts or debts. — Also termed small-debts court; conciliation court. [Cases: Courts >> 174.] spiritual court. See ecclesiastical court.

state court. (18c) A court of the state judicial system, as opposed to a federal court.

superior court. (18c) 1. In some states, a trial court of general jurisdiction. [Cases: Courts >> 117.5–158.1.] 2. In Pennsylvania, an intermediate court between the trial court and the chief appellate court. [Cases: Courts >> 242(3).] supreme court. See supreme court.

Supreme Court of the United States. See supreme court of the United States.

Supreme Judicial Court. (18c) The highest appellate court in Maine and Massachusetts. [Cases: Courts >> 225, 227.]

surrogate’s court. See probate court.

tax court. See tax court.

teen court. A group of teenagers who (1) hear cases involving juveniles, usu. first-time offenders, who have acknowledged their guilt or responsibility, and
(2) impose sanctions within a fixed range, usu. involving counseling, community service, or restitution.

Some local jurisdictions in more than half the states have provided for this type of tribunal. The juvenile offender consents to the assessment of punishment by this jury of peers. The American Bar Association encourages the formation of these kinds of courts. — Also termed youth court.

Teind Court. See teind court.

territorial court. A U.S. court established in a U.S. territory (such as the Virgin Islands) and serving as both a federal and state court. • The Constitution authorizes Congress to create such courts. U.S. Const. art. IV, § 3, cl. 2. [Cases: Federal Courts C→ 1021–1024.]

three-judge court. A court made up of three judges; esp., a panel of three federal judges convened to hear a trial in which a statute is challenged on constitutional grounds. • Three-judge courts were virtually abolished in 1976 when Congress restricted their jurisdiction to constitutional challenges to congressional reapportionments. Occasionally, Congress creates three-judge courts in special legislation, as with the 2002 campaign-finance law. Appeals from a three-judge court go directly to the Supreme Court. See 28 USCA § 2284. [Cases: Federal Courts C→991–1013.]

trial court. (18c) A court of original jurisdiction where the evidence is first received and considered. — Also termed court of first instance; instance court; court of instance.

Tribal Court. See tribal court.

unified family court. In some jurisdictions, a court that hears all family matters, including matters of divorce, juvenile delinquency, adoption, abuse and neglect, and criminal abuse. • A unified family court also hears matters typically heard in family court (in jurisdictions that have statutory family courts) or in courts of general jurisdiction, such as divorce, paternity, and emancipation proceedings. Proponents of unified family courts cite the benefits of having all family-related matters heard by one court — for instance, the benefit of having a child testify only once rather than forcing the child to testify in one court in a divorce proceeding, in a different court in criminal proceedings against an abuser, and in yet another in a civil proceeding initiated by Child Protective Services. [Cases: Courts C→174.]

United States Claims Court. See united states court of federal claims.

World Court. See international court of justice.

youth court. See teen court.

court-appointed attorney. See assigned counsel under counsel.

court-appointed counsel. See assigned counsel under counsel.

court-appointed expert. See impartial expert under expert.

court-appointed special advocate. A trained volunteer appointed by a court to represent the interests of a child in an abuse or neglect case. — Abbr. CASA. Cf. guardian ad litem under guardian. [Cases: Infants C→205.]

Court Appointed Special Advocates. A federally funded program in which trained laypersons act on behalf of children in abuse and neglect cases. • The CASA program began in 1977 in Seattle, Washington. In 1989, the American Bar Association endorsed using a combination of CASA volunteers and attorneys in abuse and neglect cases. CASA volunteers are sanctioned by the ABA as permissible guardians ad litem. — Abbr. CASA. [Cases: Infants C→205.]

court baron. Hist. A manorial court that had jurisdiction over amounts in controversy of 40 shillings or less. • According to some authorities, the court baron developed into two courts: the custom baron and the court baron proper (also known as the freeholders' court baron), in which freeholders were allowed to hold court concerning minor disputes. — Also termed freeholder's court baron.

"In Coke's day it was said that the lord of a manor had one court, 'a court baron'; for his freeholders and another court, 'a customary court,' for his copyholders, and that in the latter the lord or his steward was the judge. Now over his unfree men the lord had, according to the law of the king's court, almost unlimited power; short of maiming them he might do what he liked with them; and every tenant of an unfree tenement was a tenant at will. Nevertheless in the court rolls and the manuals for stewards which come to us from the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries we cannot discover two courts or two methods of constituting the court. Freeholders and serfs are said to owe suit to the same halimoot, and so far as we can see, the curia which pronounces judgment is always the same body." 1 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 593 (2d ed. 1898).

court christian. See ecclesiastical court under court.
court clinic. A medical clinic, established for the benefit of the courts, to which a judge may send a defendant for psychiatric evaluation or, esp. in the case of a juvenile, to explore why the defendant committed the offense and what treatment is appropriate.

"Court Clinics have developed in two ways: one, in which the clinic has its own social workers to take case histories and to investigate the past of the offenders, and the second is when the Clinic utilizes the probation department as historians and as therapists. In both types of clinics, a history is taken, appropriate psychological tests are given to the offender, with particular reference to his intelligence, and a physical examination and a psychiatric examination are made. Usually these clinics have a meeting in which the whole staff discuss the cases when a diagnosis is made and, finally a report is sent to the referring judge, informing him as to the probable reason why the offender has committed the offense, the appropriate treatment if any is necessary, and the probably outcome of the case if the treatment procedures recommended are carried out." courtesy supervision. (1970) Oversight of a parolee by a correctional agency located in a jurisdiction other than where the parolee was sentenced. • Courtesy supervision is usu. arranged informally between correctional authorities in cases in which the offense is not serious and the parolee's rehabilitative needs are better served in another jurisdiction.

Court for Consideration of Crown Cases Reserved. Hist. A court established in 1848 to review questions of law arising in criminal cases. • Trial judges posed the postverdict questions of law to the Court, which decided whether error had been committed. The Court was abolished in 1907, and its jurisdiction was transferred to the Court of Criminal Appeal. — Also termed Court for Crown Cases Reserved.

"It was an old practice for the judge, in case of a conviction, if he felt a doubt as to the law, to respite judgment or sentence, and discuss the matter informally with the other judges. If they thought that the prisoner had been improperly convicted, he was pardoned. Statutory authority was given to this practice in 1848 by the establishment of the court for Crown Cases Reserved. All the judges were members of this court; and five, of whom the Lord Chief Justice must be one, formed a quorum." 3 William Holdsworth, A History of English Law 217 (7th ed. 1956).

Court for Divorce and Matrimonial Causes. Hist. A court that exercised jurisdiction over family issues, such as legitimacy and divorce. • The Court, which was established in 1857, acquired the matrimonial jurisdiction previously exercised by the ecclesiastical courts. It consisted of the Lord Chancellor, the Chief Justices of the Queen's Bench and Common Pleas, the Chief Baron of Exchequer, the senior puisne judges of the last three courts, and the Judge Ordinary. In most instances, the Judge Ordinary heard the cases. The Judicature Act of 1873 abolished the Court and transferred its jurisdiction to the Probate Divorce and Admiralty Division (now Family Division) of the High Court of Justice.

Court for the Correction of Errors. A court having jurisdiction to review a lower court. • The name was formerly used in New York and South Carolina.

Court for the Relief of Insolvent Debtors. Hist. A court located in London that had jurisdiction over bankruptcy matters. • The Bankruptcy Act of 1861 abolished the Court.

court for the trial of impeachments. (18c) A tribunal empowered to try a government officer or other person brought before it by the process of impeachment. • The U.S. Senate and the British House of Lords have this authority, as do the upper houses of most state legislatures. — Also termed impeachment court; court of impeachment.
court hand. Hist. A script style used by English court clerks, the words being abbreviated and contracted according to a set of common principles for maintaining brevity and uniformity. • This type of writing, along with the use of Latin (except for technical or untranslatable phrases), was banned early in the 18th century in an effort to make court records more accessible to nonlawyers.

"[T]echnical Latin continued in use from the time of its first introduction, till the subversion of our ancient constitution under Cromwell; when, among many other innovations in the law, some for the better and some for the worse, the language of our records was altered and turned into English. But, at the restoration of king Charles, this novelty was no longer countenanced; the practitioners finding it very difficult to express themselves so concisely or significantly in any other language but the Latin. And thus it continued without any sensible inconvenience till about the year 1730, when it was again thought proper that the proceedings at law should be done into English, and it was accordingly so ordered by statute 4 Geo. II. c. 26. . . . What is said of the alteration of language by the statute 4 Geo. II. c. 76 will hold equally strong with respect to the prohibition of using the ancient immutable court hand in writing the records of other legal proceedings; whereby the reading of any record that is forty years old is now become the object of science, and calls for the help of an antiquarian." 3 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 322–23 (1768). courthouse. See court (5).
courthouse steps. The figurative location of settlement negotiations that occur shortly before trial commences, regardless of the literal location of the negotiations (the parties settled the lawsuit on the courthouse steps).
court lands. Hist. The part of a manor used for the lord's household. — Also termed (in Latin) curtiles terrae.
court leet (kort leet). Hist. A feudal court responsible for receiving frankpledges and notices of criminal accusations. • Courts leet exercised both governmental and judicial powers, but they declined in the 14th century after the justices in eyre began to take over serious criminal cases. The court met once or twice a year, and was presided over by the lord's steward, a lawyer who acted as judge.

court-martial, n. (18c) An ad hoc military court convened under military authority to try someone, particularly a member of the armed forces, accused of violating the Uniform Code of Military Justice. [Cases: Military Justice (1870-1878).] Pl. courts-martial. — court-martial, vb.

"Courts-martial are not a part of the federal judicial system, and the procedure in such courts is regulated by the Articles of War, Army Regulations, orders of the President, and military custom." Altmayer v. Sanford, 148 F.2d 161, 162 (5th Cir. 1945).

BCD special court-martial. A special court-martial in which a possible punishment is a bad-conduct discharge (a "BCD").

general court-martial. A proceeding that is presided over by a military judge, and no fewer than five members (who serve as jurors), and that has jurisdiction over all the members of the armed forces. • It is the highest military trial court.

special court-martial. A proceeding that is presided over by a military judge and no fewer than three members (who serve as jurors) to hear noncapital offenses and prescribe a sanction of hard labor, dismissal, or extended confinement (up to one year). • It is the intermediate level of courts martial.

summary court-martial. A proceeding presided over by a single commissioned officer who is jurisdictionally limited in what sanctions can be imposed. • It is the lowest level of courts martial.

court-martial order. A written order containing the result of a court-martial trial.

Court-Martial Reports. A publication containing the opinions of the U.S. Court of Military Appeals and select decisions of the Courts of Military Review. • This publication appeared during the years 1951-1975. — Abbr. CMR.

court of ancient demesne. Hist. A court made up of freeholders of land held by the Crown (i.e., an ancient demesne). • The freeholders acted as judges much the same way that freeholders of an ordinary manor would in a court baron. See ancient demesne under demesne; court baron.

Court of Appeal. An English court of civil and criminal appellate jurisdiction established by the Judicature Acts of 1873 and 1875. • The court is made up of the Lord Chancellor, Lord Chief Justice, Master of the Rolls, President of the Family Division, Vice-Chancellor of the Chancery Division, former Lord Chancellors, Lords of Appeal in Ordinary, and Lords Justices of Appeal. In practice it is made up of the Master of Rolls and the Lords Justices. It sits in several divisions, each having three members.

Court of Appeal in Chancery. Hist. An English court of intermediate appeal in equity cases, established in 1851 and abolished in 1873–1875, when its jurisdiction was transferred to the Court of Appeal.

court of appeals. See court.

Court of Appeals in Cases of Capture. Hist. A court responsible for reviewing state-court decisions concerning British ships captured by American privateers during the Revolution. • Congress established the court under the Articles of Confederation. It was the first federal court in the United States and the chief United States court from 1780 to 1787. Cf. prize court under court.

Court of Archdeacon (ahrch-dee-kan). Hist. Eccles. law. An inferior ecclesiastical court that had jurisdiction over cases arising within the archdeaconry and probate matters. • Appeal was to the Bishop's Court. The Court of Archdeacon was abolished in 1967. — Also termed Archdeacon's Court; Archdiocesan Court (ahrk-da-ti-se-an).

Court of Arches. Eccles. law. The ecclesiastical court of the province of Canterbury, responsible for appeals from provincial diocesan courts. • The Pope heard appeals from the Court of Arches until the break with Rome prompted a transfer of the appellate jurisdiction to the Court of Delegates. The Judicial Committee of the Privy Council now hears certain appeals from the Court of Arches. — Also termed Arches Court of Canterbury; Court of Canterbury; Court of the Official Principal. Cf. CHANCERY COURT OF YORK.

"The Court of Arches is the provincial court of the Archbishop of Canterbury, it is held by a judge generally called the Dean of the Arches. Its jurisdiction was important while testamentary cases were dealt with in the Ecclesiastical Courts. The name is derived from the fact that the court was originally held in the Church of St. Mary-le-Bow (Ecclesia Beatae Mariae de Arcibus), the steeple of which is raised on stone pillars formed archwise like bent bows." W.J.V. Windeyer, Lectures on Legal History 184 n.11 (2d ed. 1949).

Court of Assistants. Hist. A colonial body organized in Massachusetts Bay Colony in 1630 to act as a legislature and court for the colony. Cf. GENERAL COURT.

"The court of assistants, made up of governor, deputy governor, and magistrates, heard appeals from lower Courts, and took original jurisdiction in certain cases — for example, cases of divorce. Below it were the county courts. Lawrence M. Friedman, A History of American Law 40 (2d ed. 1985).

Court of Attachments. Hist. An inferior forest court with jurisdiction over trespasses of the royal forests. • The judges of this court (the verderers) met every 40 days to hear charges made by the royal foresters. Major trespass cases were heard by the justices in eyre. — Also termed wood-mote; forty-days court. See VERDERER.

Court of Audience. Hist. Eccles. law. A court in which the Archbishop of York or Canterbury exercised personal jurisdiction. • This court was abolished in 1663.

"Just as the bishop did not deprive himself of all jurisdiction by delegation to an official or commissary, so the archbishop did not originally deprive himself of all jurisdiction by delegation to the official principal. He possessed a jurisdiction concurrent with that of the Court of the Arch, which was exercised in the court of Audience. In later times this jurisdiction was exercised by the judge of the court of Audience. At one time the archbishop may have exercised a considerable part of this jurisdiction in this court." 1 William Holdsworth, A History of English Law 601 (7th ed. 1956).

Court of Augmentations. Hist. A court established in 1536 by Henry VIII to determine controversies arising from the royal policy of taking over property owned by monasteries. • The court was merged into the Court of Exchequer in 1554.

Court of Canterbury. See court of ARCHES.

Court of Cassation (ka-say-shan). The highest court of France. • The court's name derives from its power to quash (casser) the decrees of inferior courts. — Also termed (more formally) Cour de Cassation.

court of chivalry. See HIGH COURT OF CHIVALRY.

Court of Civil Appeals. (1892) An intermediate appellate court in some states, such as Alabama and (formerly) Texas. [Cases: Courts C–210, 247.]

court of claims. 1. See COURT. 2. (cap.) See UNITED STATES COURT OF FEDERAL CLAIMS.

Court of Common Pleas. (16c) 1. Hist. A superior court having jurisdiction of all real actions and common pleas (i.e., actions between subjects). • The Court was presided over by a chief justice with four (later five) puisne judges. In 1873 it became the Common Pleas Division of the High Court of Justice. In 1881 it merged into the Queen's Bench Division. 2. An intermediate-level court in some states, such as Arkansas. [Cases: Courts C–211.] 3. A trial court of general jurisdiction in some states, such as Ohio, Pennsylvania, and South Carolina. [Cases: Courts C–150, 151, 153.] — Also termed Court of Common Bench. — Abbr. C.P.

"Common pleas is the kings Court now held in Westminster hall, but in ancient time moveable, as appeareth by the statute called Magna charta ... . [U]ntil the time that Henry the third granted the great charter, there were but two courts in all, called the Kings courts: whereof one was the Exchequer, and the other, the kings bench, which was then called (cura Domini regis) and (aula regis) because it followed the court or king: and that upon the grant of that charter, the court of common pleas was erected and setted in one place certain: viz. at Westminster ... . All civil causes both real and personal are, or were in former times, tried in this court, according to the strict lawe of the realme. and by Fortescue, cap. 50 it seemeth to have bene the onely court for real causes." John Cowell, The Interpreter (1607).

court of conscience. Hist. A local English court that had jurisdiction over small-debt cases. • The court was so called because its judgments were supposed to reflect equity and good conscience. County courts assumed the jurisdiction of the courts of conscience in 1846.

Court of Convocation. Eccles. law. An assembly of high-ranking provincial officials and representatives of the lower clergy having jurisdiction over cases of heresy, schism, and other ecclesiastical matters.

Court of Criminal Appeals. (1856) 1. For each armed service, an intermediate appellate court that reviews court-martial decisions. • The court was established by the Military Justice Act of 1968. 10 USCA §§ 859–876. — Formerly termed Court of Military Review (abbr. CMR). [Cases: Military Justice C–1411.] 2. In some jurisdictions, such as Texas and Oklahoma, the highest appellate court that hears criminal cases.

Court of Customs and Patent Appeals. Hist. An Article III court created in 1929 to hear appeals in customs and patent cases. • This court was abolished in 1982 and was superseded by the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit. — Abbr. CCPA. See UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE FEDERAL CIRCUIT. [Cases: Patents C–113.]

Court of Delegates. Hist. Eccles. law. A court serving as the final court of appeal for admiralty and ecclesiastical matters. • The Court was established in 1534 to serve in the stead of the Papal Curia when the English Church severed its ties with the Papacy. Six delegates, appointed to hear only one case, made up the Court, usu. three persons trained in common law and three in civil law. This mixture led to confused rulings and unreliable precedents that hindered the Court's credibility and ultimately led to its dissolution. The Court was abolished in 1833 and its jurisdiction transferred to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council. — Also termed High Court of Delegates.

"The crown had an absolute discretion as to the person to be appointed. But, as the lawyers of Doctors' Commons were the only lawyers acquainted with canon or civil law, certain of them were usually included in the commission.... It is not surprising to find that the [Court of Delegates] was unsatisfactory. It was a shifting body, so that no general rules of procedure could be established. It did not as a rule give reasons for its decisions. Its members were only paid a guinea a day: and consequently it was usually composed of the junior civilans. On them, the judges of the common law courts, appointed as delegates, were obliged to rely for their law. In consequence of the dissatisfaction felt at its working the Ecclesiastical Commission of 1832, in a special report, recommended the transfer of its jurisdiction to the Privy Council...." 1 William Holdsworth, A History of English Law 605 (7th ed. 1936).

court of equity. See court.

court of error. 1. Hist. Formerly, the Court of Exchequer Chamber and the House of Lords. Appeals from common-law courts lay to the Court of Exchequer Chamber, and then to the House of Lords until 1873, when the Judicature Act gave jurisdiction of superior-court appeals to the Court of Appeal. Cf. court of exchequer chamber. 2. Generally, a court having jurisdiction to review a lower court's rulings.

Court of Errors and Appeals. Hist. Formerly, the court of last resort in New Jersey and New York. — Also termed High Court of Errors and Appeals.

Court of Exchequer (eks-chek-ar or eks-chek-ar). Hist. A former English superior court responsible primarily for adjudicating disputes about the collection of public revenue. • In 1873 it became the Exchequer Division of the High Court of Justice. In 1881 that Division was merged into the Queen's Bench Division. See Queen's bench division. Cf. chamber of accounts.

Court of Exchequer Chamber. Hist. 1. An informal assembly of common-law judges who (sometimes with the Lord Chancellor) gathered to discuss important cases that had adjourned pending an opinion from the Court. • This body never became a court of law in a technical sense, but judges gave great weight to its decisions. The last reported decision of this body is from 1738.

"Earlier than these two statutory courts was the practice, which apparently originated about the time of Edward I, of informal meetings of the judges in the Exchequer Chamber to decide matters connected with litigation. . . . The purpose of the meeting was to bring before the judges a point of law which caused difficulty and which had arisen in a case being heard before one or other of the courts. Any resolution passed did not constitute a judgment; it was left to the court concerned to make the appropriate decree, and the official record made no reference to the informal decision. . . . Civil cases were debated in the Exchequer Chamber as late as the seventeenth century, and criminal cases continued to be 'reserved' for full discussion by all the common law judges until the nineteenth century." A.K.R. Kiralfy, Potter's Outlines of English Legal History 202-04 (5th ed. 1958).

2. A court created by statute in 1357 to hear appeals from the Court of Exchequer. 3. A court created by statute in 1585 to hear appeals from the King's Bench. • This court consisted of all the justices of the Common Pleas and the Barons of Exchequer who were serjeants. At least six judges were necessary to render a judgment.

"Parliament was only occasionally summoned in the sixteenth century: and as Parliament was the only court which could amend errors of the King's Bench, the want of a court which could hold regular sessions was much felt. To supply this want a new court of Exchequer Chamber was created in 1585 for the purpose of amending the errors of the King's Bench." 1 William Holdsworth, A History of English Law 244 (7th ed. 1956).

4. A court charged with hearing appeals from the common-law courts of record. • This court was created in 1830 by combining the courts created by the statutes of 1357 and 1585. Appeals from one common-law court were heard by judges from the other two courts.

"This complicated system of appellate courts was abolished in 1830, when a new Court of Exchequer Chamber was set up as the court of error from each of the three common law courts. It was composed of the judges of the two common law courts other than those of the court appealed from. At the same time the right of the King's Bench to hear error from the Common Pleas was abolished. From the judgment of this new court a further appeal still lay to the House of Lords. This court was thus, until the Judicature Act, 1873, a court of intermediate appeals. Its jurisdiction after the Judicature Act passed to the Court of Appeal which was then created." W.J.V. Windeyer, Lectures on Legal History 144 (2d ed. 1949).

Court of General Quarter Sessions of the Peace. Hist. 1. English law. A court of criminal jurisdiction held in each county (or borough) once in every quarter of a year. • The court was made up of a county's justices of the peace. It committed certain cases to the Assizes. Quarter Sessions were abolished in 1971, with most jurisdiction transferred to the Crown Court. — Often shortened to Quarter Sessions; Sessions.

"The court of general quarter sessions of the peace is a court that must be held in every county, once in every quarter of a year. . . . It is held before two or more justices of the peace, one of which must be of the quorum. The jurisdiction of this court, by statute 34 Edw. III. c. 1, extends to the trying and determining all felonies and trespasses whatsoever, though they seldom, if ever, try any greater offence than small felonies within the benefit of clergy. . . ." 4 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 268 (1769).

2. A court held in some states four times a year with jurisdiction over misdemeanors and occasionally tasks of an administrative nature, such as the care of public roads and bridges. — Often shortened to Quarter Sessions Court. — Also termed Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace.

Court of Great Sessions in Wales. Hist. A common-law court established in 1543 in Wales with jurisdiction equivalent to that of the English assizes. • The Court of Great Sessions was bound to follow English law, but not necessarily English case precedent. — Also termed King's Great Sessions in Wales.
"There was no outcry when, in 1536, 'the sinister usages and customs' of the Welsh were abrogated and Welsh subjects were granted the same laws and liberties as the English. . . . A new system of courts, called the Great Sessions in Wales, was set up. The courts were to sit twice a year in four circuits, each comprising three counties, and to each circuit were appointed justices 'learned in the laws of this realm'. These courts operated alongside the English courts, and they had the same jurisdiction in Wales as the King's Bench and Common Pleas had in England. . . . In 1830 the Great Sessions were abolished, and by complete procedural assimilation England and Wales became at last one unified jurisdiction, two extra circuits being added to the English assize system.' J.H. Baker, An Introduction to English Legal History 37-38 (3d ed. 1990).

Court of High Commission. Hist. Eccles. law. A tribunal responsible for inquiring into religious offenses such as the holding of heretical opinions, and absence from church. • Functioning as a court, the High Commission also prosecuted violations of the Acts of Supremacy and Uniformity (1559), the statutes that gave the Crown supreme power over the Church of England. The Commission's broad powers and use of civil-law procedures in ways counter to the common law (such as compelling suspects to testify against themselves) sparked opposition to its existence. Its close relationship with the Court of Star Chamber hastened its demise (along with the Star Chamber) in 1641. — Also termed High Commission Court.

"[T]he court of the king's high commission in causes ecclesiastical . . . was intended to vindicate the dignity and peace of the church, by reforming, ordering, and correcting the ecclesiastical state and persons, and all manner of errors, heresies, schisms, abuses, offences, contempt, and enormities. Under the shelter of which very general words, means were found in that and the two succeeding reigns, to vest in the high commissioners extraordinary and almost despotic powers, of fining and imprisoning; which they exerted much beyond the degree of the offence itself, and frequently over offences by no means of spiritual cognizance. For these reasons this court was justly abolished by Statute 16 Car. I, c. 11. And the weak and illegal attempt that was made to revive it, during the reign of King James the second, served only to hasten that infatuated prince's ruin." 3 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 67-68 (1768).

Court of Honor. Hist. 1. English law. A feudal court of the manor. 2. English law. A court with jurisdiction to hear complaints concerning either affronts to honor or encroachments in precedence rights, heraldry, or coat-armor. 3. A tribunal of army officers convened to review and punish any dereliction from a code of honor.

Court of Hastings (has-tingz). Hist. 1. English law. A local court with jurisdiction over real and mixed actions, held in the Guildhall of London before the Recorder, the Lord Mayor, and Sheriff (the latter two officials serving as honorary judges). • This court dates from before the Conquest. 2. Formerly, a local court in Virginia. — Also termed curia burgi. See Husting.

Court of Oyer and Terminer (oy-ar an[d] ter-ma-nar). (17c) 1. Hist. An assize court commissioned by the Crown to pass through the counties two or more times a year and hear felonies and treason cases. • The judges sat by virtue of several commissions, each of which, strictly speaking, created a separate and distinct court. A judge with an oyer and terminer commission, for example, was allowed to hear only cases of felony and treason; he could not try persons charged with other criminal offenses. But if the judge also carried a commission of gaol delivery (as most did), he could try ali prisoners held in gaol for any offense; in this way most Courts of Oyer and Terminer gathered full criminal jurisdiction. The jurisdiction of the assize courts was taken over by the Crown Court in 1971. See assize (1); commission of oyer and terminer; commission of gaol delivery. 2. In some states, a court of higher criminal jurisdiction.

Court of Oyer and Terminer and General Gaol Delivery. Hist. 1. A court that carries the commissions of oyer and terminer and gaol delivery. See commission of oyer and terminer; commission of gaol delivery. 2. In Pennsylvania, a court of criminal jurisdiction.

Court of Peculiars. Hist. Eccles. law. A branch of the Court of Arches that had jurisdiction over the provincial parishes of Canterbury that were exempt from the jurisdiction of the diocesan bishop and responsible to the metropolitan only. • The Court of Peculiars was abolished in the 19th century. See court of arches; peculiar.

Court of Pleas. Hist. A court of the county palatine of Durham, England having a local common-law jurisdiction. It was abolished in 1873, and its jurisdiction was transferred to the High Court. — Also termed Court of Pleas of Durham.

Court of Policies of Insurance. Hist. A court that determines in a summary way insurance-policy issues arising between merchants. • The Court’s jurisdiction extended only to London, and appeal was taken to the Court of Chancery. The Court was abolished in 1863. — Also termed Court of Policies of Assurance.

Court of Private Land Claims. Hist. A federal court — in existence from 1891 to 1895 — with jurisdiction to hear private parties’ claims to public-domain land located in the southwestern part of the United States and deriving from Spanish or Mexican grants.

Court of Probate. 1. Hist. A court established in 1857 to receive the testamentary jurisdiction formerly held by the ecclesiastical courts. • In 1873 the Court was merged into the High Court of Justice, where its jurisdiction was exercised by the Probate Divorce and Admiralty (now Family) Division. 2. See probate court under court.

Court of Regard. Hist. A forest court responsible for looking into matters of waste and encroachment onto forest land (i.e., purpresture). • The Court also ensured that the feet of all mastiffs — a breed allowed in royal forests as guard dogs — within the forest were declawed and cut so as to prevent them from chasing deer.

Court of Requests. Hist. A royal court whose jurisdiction was mainly civil, though it exercised quasi-criminal jurisdiction in offenses such as riot and forgery. • Dating from 1483, the Court of Requests was a part of the Privy Council. It was disbanded in 1641 when Parliament limited the Privy Council’s judicial functions.

"The establishment of the court of Requests was due to the large increase in the judicial business of the Council and the Chancery under the Tudors. . . . It was related both to the judicial side of the Council, which, as we shall see, came, in the course of the Tudor period, to be known as the court of Star Chamber, and to the court of Chancery. . . . [F]rom the end of Henry VIII’s reign onwards, the legal assessors of the court assumed entire control, with the result that it became a court which was quite separate from the court of Star Chamber. These legal assessors were styled Masters of Requests, and from their title the court got its name." — William Holdsworth, A History of English Law 412-13 (7th ed. 1956).

court of review. See appellate court under court.

Court of Session. 1. Scots law. The supreme Scottish civil court. • Its jurisdiction corresponds generally to the English High Court of Justice. The Court of Session is divided into Outer House and Inner House. In Outer House, one judge hears cases of first instance. The Outer House’s jurisdiction corresponds generally to the English High Court of Justice. The Outer House has two appellate chambers, the First and Second Division, in which three-judge panels sit. The Inner House’s jurisdiction corresponds generally to the English Court of Appeal. The Court of Session also has several Lords Ordinary, who sit individually as trial judges. — Also termed Supreme Civil Court in Scotland. 2. In a few states, a court with jurisdiction over criminal cases.

Court of Shepway. Hist. The Court of the Lord Warden of the Cinque Ports, exercising civil jurisdiction. • The civil jurisdiction of the Cinque Ports was abolished in 1855. See cinque ports. court of special jurisdiction. See limited court under court.
court of special session. See court.

Court of Star Chamber. See star chamber (i). court of summary jurisdiction. See magistrate’s court under court.

Court of Swainmote. See court of sweinmote.

Court of Sweinmote (sweyn-moht). Hist. A medieval forest court with jurisdiction over a variety of matters, esp. the right to graze animals during the summer when deer were fawning. • The forest freeholders (the sweins) made up the jury of the Court. By the 14th century, the Court’s jurisdiction had expanded, and it acquired a form similar to the eyre courts. — Also spelled Court of Swainmote.

Court of Teinds. See teind court.

Court of the Chief Justice in Eyre (air). Hist. An eyre court responsible for trying offenses against the forest laws. • The jurisdiction of this Court was similar to that of the Court of Swinebote. — Also termed Court of Justice Seat.

Court of the Earl Marshal. 1. COURT OF THE LORD HIGH CONSTABLE AND EARL MARSHAL. 2. HIGH COURT OF CHIVALRY.

Court of the Lord High Admiral. See high court of admiralty.

Court of the Lord High Constable and Earl Marshal. Hist. A court having jurisdiction over diverse military matters, such as treason, prisoners of war, and disputed coats of arms. • The Lord High Constable and the Earl Marshal were the top military officials of the Norman kings. After the office of Lord High Constable was forfeited in 1521, the court continued on as the Court of the Earl Marshal, but its jurisdiction was reduced to questions of chivalry only. Cf. high court of chivalry.

Court of the Lord High Steward. Hist. A court commissioned to try a peer indicted for treason or a felony. • The Court met only if the House of Lords was not in session. The Lord High Steward sat as a judge and decided questions of law, and the peers decided facts only. The Court last sat in 1688.
Court of the Lord High Steward of the Universities. Hist. A court convened to try scholars, esp. Oxford or Cambridge students, who have been indicted for treason, felony, or mayhem.

Court of the Marshalsea (mahr-shal-see). Hist. A court that moved about with the king, and had jurisdiction over certain cases arising within 12 miles of the king's residence (an area known as the verge). • The Court's steward and marshal acted as judges of the Court, and heard criminal cases and the common pleas of debt, covenant, and certain trespasses. The court's migratory nature made it inconvenient for litigants, and prompted its abolition in 1849. — Also termed Court of the Steward and Marshal. Cf. PALACE COURT.

"Coke points out that all the Acts passed concerning this court restrained, or explained, but never added to its jurisdiction. He decided, in the Case of the Marshalsea, that it could not try the newer forms of action such as assumpsit and trover. Its once general jurisdiction had passed to the court of King's Bench, and the attitude of that court to the more limited court of the Marshalsea made the court of the Marshalsea almost useless. There were complaints in the seventeenth century of the conduct of its officials, and, as it was obliged to follow the king in his progresses, it was a court extremely inconvenient to use." 1 William Holdsworth, A History of English Law 208 (7th ed. 1956).

Court of the Official Principal. See COURT OF ARCHES.

Court of the Steward and Marshal. See COURT OF ARCHES.

Court of the Steward of the King's Household. Hist. A court having jurisdiction over criminal cases involving a member of the royal household. • This court's jurisdiction was at first limited to acts of violence by the king's servants toward a member of the king's council, but it was later given broader criminal authority. The Court was abolished in 1828.

Court of Verge. 1. See VERGE (1). 2. See VERGE (2).

Court of Veterans Appeals, U.S. See UNITED STATES COURT OF VETERANS APPEALS.

Court of Wards and Liveries. Hist. A court created in 1540 to assert the Crown's right to income from a variety of feudal tenures. • The Court's unpopularity led to its abolition in 1660.

"[I]nquests of office were more frequently in practice than at present, during the continuance of the military tenures among us: when, upon the death of every one of the king's tenants, an inquest of office was held, called an inquisitio post mortem, to enquire of what lands he died seised, who was his heir, and of what age, in order to entitle the king to his marriage, wardship, relief, primer-seisin, or other advantages, as the circumstances of the case might turn out. To superintend and regulate these enquiries, the court of wards and liveries was instituted by statute 32 Hen. VIII c. 46 which was abolished at the restoration of king Charles the second, together with the oppressive tenures upon which it was founded." 3 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 258 (1768).

court-ordered arbitration. See JUDICIAL ARBITRATION.

court-packaging plan. An unsuccessful proposal — made in 1937 by President Franklin D. Roosevelt — to increase the number of U.S. Supreme Court justices from nine to fifteen. • The ostensible purpose of the proposal was to increase the court's efficiency, but President Roosevelt wanted to appoint justices who would not block his administration's New Deal programs.

court papers. (17c) All documents that a party files with the court, including pleadings, motions, notices, and the like. — Often shortened to papers. — Also termed suit papers.

court probation. See BENCH PROBATION under PROBATION.

court reporter. (1894) 1. A person who records testimony, stenographically or by electronic or other means, and when requested, prepares a transcript (the deposition could not start until the court reporter arrived). — Also termed (in BrE) OFFICIAL SHORTHAND WRITER. Cf. COURT RECORDER under RECORDER. [Cases: COURTS C=57; TRIAL C=23.] 2. REPORTER OF DECISIONS.

court roll. Hist. A record of a manor's tenures; esp., a record of the terms by which the various tenants held their estates. • Copyhold tenure, for example, developed from the practice of maintaining court rolls. See COPYHOLD.

courtroom. The part of a courthouse where trials and hearings take place. Cf. JUDGE'S CHAMBER UNDER CHAMBER. [Cases: COURTS C=72.]

courtroom privilege. See judicial privilege under PRIVILEGE (1).

court rules. (17c) Regulations having the force of law and governing practice and procedure in the various courts, such as the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, the Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, the U.S. Supreme Court Rules, and the Federal Rules of Evidence, as well as any local rules that a court promulgates. — Also termed RULES OF COURT. [Cases: COURTS C=78-85; FEDERAL CIVIL PROCEDURE C=21.]

court system. The network of courts in a jurisdiction.

court trial. See bench trial under TRIAL.

court witness. See WITNESS.

cousin. 1. A child of one's aunt or uncle. — Also termed first cousin; full cousin; cousin-german. 2. A relative descended from one's ancestor (such as a grandparent) by two or more steps in a diverging line. 3. Any distant relative by blood or marriage; a kinsman or kinswoman.

cousin-german. A first cousin; a child of a full sibling of one's mother or father. See GERMAN.

cousin-in-law. 1. The husband or wife of one's cousin. 2. A cousin of one's husband or one's wife. cousin once removed. 1. A child of one's cousin. 2. A cousin of one's parent.
cousin twice removed. 1. A grandchild of one's cousin. 2. A cousin of one's grandparent.
first cousin. See cousin (1). second cousin. A person related to another by descending from the same great-grandfather or great-grandmother.
third cousin. A person related to another by descending from the same great-great-grandfather or great-great-grandmother. covenant (kav-ə-nant), n. (14c) 1. A formal agreement or promise, usu. in a contract or deed, to do or not do a particular act.
absolute covenant. (17c) A covenant that is not qualified or limited by any condition. Cf. conditional covenant. affirmative covenant. A covenant that obligates a party to do some act; esp., an agreement that real property will be used in a certain way. • An affirmative covenant is more than a restriction on the use of property. For the real-property sense, see affirmative covenant under covenant (4). Cf. negative covenant. [Cases: Covenants C−49, 69.]
assertory covenant (ə-sər-tə-ree). One that affirmatively states certain facts; an affirming promise under seal.
auxiliary covenant (awg-zil-ə-ree). A covenant that does not relate directly to the primary subject of the agreement, but to something connected to it. Cf. principal covenant.
collateral covenant (kə-lat-ə-rəl). A covenant entered into in connection with the grant of something, but that does not relate immediately to the thing granted; esp., a covenant in a deed or other sealed instrument not pertaining to the conveyed property. Cf. inherent covenant.
concurrent covenant. (1819) A covenant that requires performance by one party at the same time as another's performance.
conditional covenant. (17c) A covenant that is qualified by a condition. Cf. absolute covenant.
continuing covenant. A covenant that requires the successive performance of acts, such as an agreement to pay rent in installments.
covenant in deed. See express covenant.
covenant in law. See implied covenant. covenant not to compete. See noncompetition covenant. covenant not to execute. A covenant in which a party who has won a judgment agrees not to enforce it. • This covenant is most common in insurance law. [Cases: Insurance C−3367; Release C−37.]
covenant not to sue. (18c) A covenant in which a party having a right of action agrees not to assert that right in litigation. — Also termed contract not to sue. [Cases: Release C−7, 37.]

"A covenant not to sue is a promise by the creditor not to sue either permanently or for a limited period. If the promise is one never to sue it operates as a discharge just as does a release. The theory is that should the creditor sue despite his promise not to, the debtor has a counterclaim for damages for breach of the creditor's covenant not to sue which is equal to and cancels the original claim. ... If the covenant is not to sue for a limited time, the modern view is that the covenant may be raised as an affirmative defense to any action brought in violation of the covenant." John D. Calamari & Joseph M. Perillo, The Law of Contracts § 21-11, 878-79 (3d ed. 1987).

dependent covenant. A covenant that imposes a duty that depends on the other party's prior performance. • Until the performance, the other party does not have to perform. Cf. concurrent covenant; independent covenant. executed covenant. A covenant that has been fully performed. executory covenant (eg-zek-ə-tor-ee). A covenant that remains unperformed in whole or in part.
express covenant. (17c) A covenant created by the words of the parties. — Also termed covenant in deed. Cf. implied covenant.

implied covenant. (17c) A covenant that can be inferred from the whole agreement and the conduct of the parties. — Also termed covenant in law. See implied term under term (3). Cf. express covenant.
implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing. (1924) An implied covenant to cooperate with the other party to an agreement so that both parties may obtain the full benefits of the agreement; an implied covenant to refrain from any act that would injure a contracting party's right to receive the benefit of the contract. • Breach of this covenant is often termed bad faith. See bad faith (2). [Cases: Contracts C−168.]
implied negative covenant. (1890) A covenant binding a grantor not to permit use of any reserved right in a manner that might destroy the benefits that would otherwise inure to the grantee. independent covenant. A covenant that imposes a duty that does not depend on the other party's prior performance. Cf. dependent covenant. inherent covenant. A covenant that relates directly to land, such as a covenant of quiet enjoyment. Cf. collateral covenant.
intransitive covenant. A covenant whose performance does not pass from the original covenantor to the covenantor's representatives. Cf. transitive covenant.
joint covenant. A covenant that binds two or more covenantors together. Cf. several covenant. negative covenant. (18c) A covenant that requires a party to refrain from doing something; esp., in a real-estate financing transaction, the borrower's promise to the lender not to encumber or transfer the real estate as long as the loan remains unpaid. Cf. affirmative covenant.

noncompetition covenant. A promise, usu. in a sale-of-business, partnership, or employment contract, not to engage in the same type of business for a stated time in the same market as the buyer, partner, or employer. • Noncompetition covenants are valid to protect business goodwill in the sale of a company. In other contexts, they are generally disfavored as restraints of trade; courts generally enforce them for the duration of the business relationship, but provisions that extend beyond the termination of that relationship must be reasonable in scope, time, and territory. — Also termed noncompetition agreement; noncompete covenant; covenant not to compete; restrictive covenant; promise not to compete; contract not to compete. [Cases: Contracts C=115.]

positive covenant. A covenant that requires a party to do something (such as to erect a fence within a specified time).

principal covenant. A covenant that relates directly to the principal matter of an agreement. Cf. auxiliary covenant.

several covenant. A covenant that binds two or more covenantors separately. — Also termed separate covenant. Cf. joint covenant.

transitive covenant. A covenant whose duty of performance passes from the original covenantor to the covenantor’s representatives. Cf. intransitive covenant.

2. TREATY. 3. A common-law action to recover damages for breach of contract under seal. 4. A promise made in a deed or implied by law; esp., an obligation in a deed burdening or favoring a landowner. See contract under seal under contract. [Cases: Covenants C=1–84.] — covenantal, adj.

“A covenant is properly defined as a promise made in deed, although in practice the term is used rather more loosely to mean simply an obligation affecting a landowner whether created by deed or not.” Peter Butt, Land Law 334–35 (2d ed. 1988).

“In their nature, covenants are first cousins to easements appurtenant. The burdened land corresponds to a servient tenement, the benefitted land, to a dominant tenement. In concept, the main difference between easements and covenants is that, whereas an easement allows its holder to go upon and to use something upon the servient tenement, the beneficiary of a covenant may not enter the burdened land, but may require the owner of that land to do, or more likely not to do, something on that land.” Roger A. Cunningham et al., The Law of Property § 8.13, at 467 (2d ed. 1993).

affirmative covenant. An agreement that real property will be used in a certain way. • An affirmative covenant is more than a restriction on the use of property. It requires the owner to undertake certain acts on the property. For a more general definition of this term, see affirmative covenant under covenant (1).

covenant against encumbrances. (1807) A grantor’s promise that the property has no visible or invisible encumbrances. • In a special warranty deed, the covenant is limited to encumbrances made by the grantor. — Also termed general covenant against encumbrances. Cf. special covenant against encumbrances. [Cases: Covenants C=42, 64.]

covenant appurtenant. (a-par-to-nant). (1899) A covenant that is connected with the grantor’s land; a covenant running with the land. Cf. covenant in gross. [Cases: Covenants C=53–70.]

covenant for further assurances. (18c) A covenant to do whatever is reasonably necessary to perfect the title conveyed if it turns out to be imperfect. See further assurance under assurance. [Cases: Covenants C=44, 66.]

covenant for quiet enjoyment. (17c) 1. A covenant insuring against the consequences of a defective title or any other disturbance of the title. [Cases: Covenants C=43, 65.] 2. A covenant ensuring that the tenant will not be evicted or disturbed by the grantor or a person having a lien or superior title. • This covenant is sometimes treated as being synonymous with covenant of warranty. — Also termed covenant of quiet enjoyment.

covenant for title. (18c) A covenant that binds the grantor to ensure the completeness, security, and continuance of the title transferred. • This covenant usu. includes the covenants for seisin, against encumbrances, for the right to convey, for quiet enjoyment, and of warranty. [Cases: Covenants C=38–48, 62–67.]

covenant of nonclaim. (1848) A covenant barring a grantor or the grantor’s heirs from claiming title in the conveyed land.

covenant of seisin (see-zin). (18c) A covenant, usu. appearing in a warranty deed, stating that the grantor has an estate, or the right to convey an estate, of the quality and size that the grantor purports to convey. • For the covenant to be valid, the grantor must have both title and possession at the time of the grant. — Also termed covenant of good right to convey; right-to-convey covenant. [Cases: Covenants C=40, 62.]

covenant of warranty. (18c) A covenant by which the grantor agrees to defend the grantee against any lawful or reasonable claim of superior title by a third party and to indemnify the grantee for any loss sustained... by the claim. • This covenant is sometimes treated as being synonymous with covenant for quiet enjoyment. The covenant is not breached if the grantor fails to defend the grantee against an invalid claim. See warranty (1). [Cases: Covenants 46–48, 67.]

covenant running with the land. (18c) A covenant intimately and inherently involved with the land and therefore binding subsequent owners and successor grantees indefinitely. — Also termed real covenant. [Cases: Covenants 53–70.]

The important consequence of a covenant running with the land is that its burden or benefit will thereby be imposed or conferred upon a subsequent owner of the property who never actually agreed to it. Running covenants thereby achieve the transfer of duties and rights in a way not permitted by traditional contract law." Roger Bernhardt, Real Property in a Nutshell 212 (3d ed. 1993).

covenant running with the title. 1. A covenant that relates to the land but has a specific or reasonably determinable expiration time. 2. See covenant running with the land.

covenant to convey. A covenant in which the covenantor agrees to transfer an estate's title to the covenantee.

covenant to renew. An executory contract that gives a lessee the right to renew the lease.

covenant to stand seised (seezd). Archaic. A covenant to convey land to a relative. • This covenant could not be used to convey land to a stranger; the only consideration that supports the covenant is the relationship by blood or marriage. [Cases: Deeds 24.]

future covenant. A covenant that can be breached only upon interference with the possession of the grantee or the grantee's successors. • The covenants in this class are the covenant for further assurances, the covenant for quiet enjoyment, and the covenant of warranty. The distinction between future and present covenants becomes important in determining when the statute of limitations begins to run. Cf. present covenant.

general covenant against encumbrances. See covenant against encumbrances.

implied reciprocal covenant. A presumption that a promisee has, in return for a promise made respecting land, impliedly made a promise to the promisor respecting other land. — Also termed implied reciprocal servitude.

personal covenant. A covenant that creates a personal right or obligation enforceable only between the covenanting parties and that is not binding on the heirs or assigns of the parties. Cf. covenant running with the land. [Cases: Covenants 1.]

present covenant. A covenant that can be breached only at the time of conveyance. • The three covenants in this class are the covenant against encumbrances, the covenant of right to convey, and the covenant of seisin. Cf. future covenant.

restrictive covenant. (1811) 1. A private agreement, usu. in a deed or lease, that restricts the use or occupancy of real property, esp. by specifying lot sizes, building lines, architectural styles, and the uses to which the property may be put. • Some restrictive covenants, such as race-based restrictions on transfers, are unenforceable but do not necessarily void the deed. — Also termed restrictive covenant in equity; equitable easement; equitable servitude. [Cases: Covenants 49–52, 69.] 2. See noncompetition covenant under covenant (1).

special covenant against encumbrances. (1860) A grantor's promise that the property is free of encumbrances created by the grantor only, not the grantor's predecessors. See special warranty deed under deed. Cf. covenant against encumbrances. [Cases: Covenants 42, 64.]

covenant, vb. (14c) To promise or undertake in a covenant; to agree formally.

covenantee (kav-a-nan-tee). (17c) The person to whom a promise by covenant is made; one entitled to the benefit of a covenant.

covenant of good right to convey. See covenant of seisin under covenant (4).

covenantor (kav-a-nan-tor or kav-a-nan-tor). (17c) The person who makes a promise by covenant; one subject to the burden of a covenant. — Also spelled covenanter.

covenant running with the land. See covenant (4).

covenant to protect against drainage. See protection covenant.

Coventry Act (kav-on-tree or kov-). Hist. An 1803 English statute establishing the death penalty for anyone who, with malice aforethought, did "cut out or disable the tongue, put out an eye, slit the nose, cut off a nose or lip, or cut off or disable any limb or member of any subject; with the intention in so doing to maim or disfigure him."

"[At common law,] an injury such as cutting off [a man's] ear or nose did not constitute mayhem . . . , because it did not result in permanent disablement, but merely disfigured the victim. This was corrected by an early English statute. It seems that an assault was made upon Sir John Coventry on the street by persons who waylaid him and slit his nose in revenge for obnoxious words uttered by him in Parliament. This emphasized the weakness of the law of mayhem, and the so-called `Coventry Act' was passed [in 1803]." Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 239–40 (3d ed. 1982).

coventer (koh-ven-chur-er). (1913) A person who undertakes a joint venture with one or more persons. — Also termed co-venturer. Cf. joint venture. [Cases: Joint Adventures 11.]
cover, n. The purchase on the open market, by the buyer in a breach-of-contract dispute, of goods to substitute for those promised but never delivered by the seller. • Under UCC § 2-712, the buyer can recover from the seller the difference between the cost of the substituted goods and the original contract price. [Cases: Sales ☞ 418(7).]

coverage, n. (1912) 1. Inclusion of a risk under an insurance policy; the risks within the scope of an insurance policy. [Cases: Insurance ☞ 2091.] — cover, vb.

dependent coverage. An insurance provision for protection of an insured’s dependents.

full coverage. Insurance protection that pays for the full amount of a loss with no deduction.

2. The ratio between corporate pretax income and corporate liability for bond interest payments.

cover-baron. See covert baron.

covered-interest arbitrage. See arbitrage.

covered wages. See wage.

cover letter. See transmittal letter.

cover note. A written statement by an insurance agent confirming that coverage is in effect. • The cover note is distinguished from a binder, which is prepared by the insurance company.

covert baron (kav-ar-tn). [Law French] Hist. The condition or status of a married woman at common law. — Also written covert-baron. — Also termed covert de baron.

"By marriage, the husband and wife are one person in law: that is, the very being or legal existence of the woman is suspended during the marriage, or at least is incorporated and consolidated into that of the husband: under whose wing, protection, and cover, she performs every thing; and is therefore called in our law-french a feme covert; is said to be covert-baron, or under the protection and influence of her husband, her baron, or lord; and her condition during her marriage is called her coverture." | William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 430 (1765).

coventry (cov-in-tn). Hist. A secret conspiracy or agreement between two or more persons to injure or defraud another. — Also spelled covine.

"Covine is a secret assent determined in the hearts of two or more, to the prejudice of another: As if a tenant for term of life, or tenant in tail, will secretly conspire with another, that the other shall recover against the tenant for life the land which he holds, &c. in prejudice of him in the revision." | Termes de la Ley 129 (1st Am. ed. 1812).

covinous (kav-ns), adj. Hist. Of a deceitful or fraudulent nature.

cozens (kaz-ns), vb. Hist. To cheat or defraud. — Also spelled casen.

cozening (kaz-ning), Hist. A deceitful practice; the offense of cheating, or fraudulent dealing. — Also spelled cosening. Cf. stellionatus.

"Cosingen is an offence unnamed, whereby any thing is done guilefully in or out of contracts, which cannot be fitly termed by any special name. It is called stellionatus in the civil law . . . ." | John Cowell, The Interpreter (1607).

C.P. abbr. court of common pleas.

CPA. abbr. 1. See certified public accountant under accountant. 2. See continued-prosecution application under patent application.

CPT. abbr. Carriage paid to.

crack. vb. Slang. 1. To open (a lock). 2. To decode (security information); esp., to decipher or discover (a code, a password, etc. needed to break into a computer, network, server, or database). Cf. hack. 3. To bypass (an encryption or a security device, esp. one designed to prevent unauthorized access, as in a cable television box, or copying, as in a DVD player). 4. To hack (a computer, network, server, or database) with the intention of causing damage or disruption.

cracking, n. A gerrymandering technique in which a geographically concentrated political or racial group that is large enough to constitute a district’s dominant force

craft union. See union.

cramdown, n. (1954) Court confirmation of a Chapter 11 bankruptcy plan despite the opposition of certain creditors. • Under the Bankruptcy Code, a court may confirm a plan — even if it has not been accepted by all classes of creditors — if the plan (1) has been accepted by at least one impaired class, (2) does not discriminate unfairly, and (3) is fair and equitable. 11 USCA § 1129(b). [Cases: Bankruptcy C=3563.] — cram down, vb.

crash-and-dash. See ram raid.

crashworthiness doctrine. (1969) Products liability. The principle that the manufacturer of a product will be held strictly liable for injuries occurring in a collision, even if the collision results from an independent cause, to the extent that a defect in the product causes injuries above and beyond those that would have occurred in the collision itself. — Also termed second-collision doctrine; second-impact doctrine. [Cases: Products Liability C=20.8.]

crassa ignorantia (kras-a ig-na-ran-shy-a). Hist. Gross ignorance, esp. in circumstances where a person was able to acquire knowledge and should have done so.

crastino (kras-ta-noh). [Law Latin] Hist. Tomorrow; on the morrow. • The return day of writs, so-called because the court terms always began on a saint’s day; writs were therefore returnable the day after.

create a blank. Parliamentary law. To amend a motion by striking out one or more terms and replacing them with blanks rather than different terms. See amendment by striking out and inserting under amendment (3). • This form allows a vote on several competing proposals at one time, rather than the usual process of voting separately upon each proposal. See blank (2).

creationism. The teaching of the biblical version of the creation of the universe. • The United States Supreme Court held unconstitutional a Louisiana law that forbade the teaching of the theory of evolution unless biblical creation was also taught. The Court found the law violated the Establishment Clause of the First Amendment because it lacked a “clear secular purpose.” Edwards v. Aguillard, 482 U.S. 578, 107 S.Ct. 2573 (1987).

scientific creationism. A doctrine holding that the biblical account of creation is supported by scientific evidence.

creation science. The interpretation of scientific evidence, arguments, and knowledge to support creationism. See creationism.

creative sentence. See alternative sentence under sentence.

creative work. See work of authorship under work (2).

creativity. Copyright. The degree to which a work displays imaginativeness beyond what a person of very ordinary talents might create. • Labor and expense are not elements of creativity; for that reason, they are not protected by copyright. Feist Pubs. Inc. v. Rural Tel. Serv. Co., 499 U.S. 340, 111 S.Ct. 1282 (1991). Cf. originality, sweat-of-the-brow doctrine. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property C=12.]

“...Where creativity refers to the nature of the work itself, originality refers to the nature of the author’s contribution to the work. Thus, a public domain painting may evince great creativity, but if a copyright claimant adds nothing of his own to it, by way of reproduction or otherwise, then copyright will be denied on the basis of lack of originality. Conversely, a work may be entirely the product of the claimant’s independent efforts, and hence original, but may nevertheless be denied protection as a work of art if it is completely lacking in any modicum of creativity.” 1 Melville B. Nimmer & David Nimmer, Nimmer on Copyright § 2.08(b)(2), at 2-88 (Supp. 1995).

lien creditor. A creditor whose claim is secured by a lien on the debtor’s property. UCC § 9-102(a)(52). [Cases: Secured Transactions ☞ 140.]

preferred creditor. A creditor with a superior right to payment, such as a holder of a perfected security interest as compared to a holder of an unsecured claim. [Cases: Secured Transactions ☞ 138-140, 168.]

principal creditor. A creditor whose claim or demand greatly exceeds the claims of other creditors.

prior creditor. A creditor who is given priority in payment from the debtor’s assets.

secondary creditor. A creditor whose claim is subordinate to a preferred creditor’s.

secured creditor. A creditor who has the right, on the debtor’s default, to proceed against collateral and apply it to the payment of the debt. UCC § 9-102(a)(72). — Also termed secured party.

“Secured party” means (A) a person in whose favor a security interest is created or provided for under a security agreement, whether or not any obligation to be secured is outstanding; (B) a person that holds an agricultural lien; (C) a consignor; (D) a person to which accounts, chattel paper, payment intangibles, or promissory notes have been sold; or (E) if a security interest or agricultural lien is created or provided for in favor of a trustee, agent, collateral agent, or other representative, that representative.” UCC § 9-102(a)(50).

single creditor. In the marshaling of assets, a creditor with a lien on one fund. See RULE OF MARSHALING ASSETS. Cf. double creditor.

specialty creditor. A creditor to whom an heir is liable for a decedent’s debts to the extent of the land inherited. • Historically, unless the creditor obtained a judgment against the debtor before the debtor’s death, the creditor’s right of action on the debt was limited to the decedent’s lawful heir. If the debtor devised the land to a stranger, the creditor’s claim was defeated. See HEIR (1). [Cases: Descent and Distribution ☞ 126; Executors and Administrators ☞ 263.]

subsequent creditor. A creditor whose claim comes into existence after a given fact or transaction, such as the recording of a deed or the execution of a voluntary conveyance.

unsecured creditor. A creditor who, upon giving credit, takes no rights against specific property of the debtor. — Also termed general creditor. See creditor at large.

warrant creditor. A creditor of a municipal corporation who is given a municipal warrant for the amount of the claim because the municipality lacks the funds to pay the debt. Cf. certificate creditor. [Cases: Municipal Corporations ☞ 896.]

creditor beneficiary. See BENEFICIARY.

"Creditor dominii . . . In commodate the lender is creditor of the subject, and on the bankruptcy of the borrower may vindicate his right of property and recover the subject itself . . . . " John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 114 (4th ed. 1894).

creditor's claim. See claim (5).

creditors' committee. (1874) Bankruptcy. A committee comprising representatives of the creditors in a Chapter 11 proceeding, formed to negotiate the debtor's plan of reorganization. • Generally, a committee has no fewer than 3 and no more than 11 members and serves as an advisory body. 11 USCA § 1102. [Cases: Bankruptcy ≤<−3024.] creditors' composition. See composition (1).

creditors' meeting. See MEETING.

creditors' scheme of arrangement. See SCHEME OF ARRANGEMENT.

creditor's suit. See CREDITOR'S BILL.

credit plan. A financing arrangement under which a borrower and a lender agree to terms for a loan's repayment with interest, usu. in installments.

open-end credit plan. A plan under which a creditor reasonably expects repeated transactions, prescribes terms for those transactions, and includes a finance charge that may be periodically computed on the outstanding balance. 15 USCA § 1602(i).

credit rating. An evaluation of a potential borrower's ability to repay debt, prepared by a credit bureau at the request of a lender. [Cases: Credit Reporting Agencies ≤−1-4.]

credit report. 1. A credit bureau's report on a person's financial status, usu. including the approximate amounts and locations of a person's bank accounts, charge accounts, loans, and other debts, bill-paying habits, defaults, bankruptcies, foreclosures, marital status, occupation, income, and lawsuits. See CREDIT BUREAU. 2. The report of a credit-reporting bureau, usu. including highly personal information gathered through interviews with a person's friends, neighbors, and coworkers. See CREDIT-REPORTING BUREAU. [Cases: Credit Reporting Agencies ≤−1-4.]

credit-reporting bureau. (1904) An organization that, on request, prepares investigative reports not just on people's creditworthiness but also on personal information gathered from various sources, including interviews with neighbors, friends, and coworkers. • These reports are used chiefly by employers (for prospective employees), insurance companies (for applicants), and landlords (for prospective tenants). — Also termed investigating bureau. credit slip. A document that allows a store customer to either purchase another item or receive cash or credit for merchandise the customer has returned to the store.

credit union. A cooperative association that offers low-interest loans and other consumer banking services to persons sharing a common bond — often fellow employees and their family members. • Most credit unions are regulated by the National Credit Union Administration. State-chartered credit unions are also subject to regulation by the chartering state, and they may be regulated by state banking boards. [Cases: Building and Loan Associations ≤−1−6, 24−40.]

"Credit unions were the last major thrift institutions developed in the United States . . . . What distinguished credit unions from mutual savings banks and savings and loan associations was their emphasis on a common bond of workers, church members, or people in a local area, wanting to borrow relatively small amounts at reasonable interest rates from each other, and help each other save to meet these short-term needs. Their goal was to provide a low interest rate alternative . . . . to loan sharks and pawn-brokers." William A. Lovett, Banking and Financial Institutions Law in a Nutshell 284 (1997).

creditworthy, adj. (1924) (Of a borrower) financially sound enough that a lender will extend credit in the belief default is unlikely; fiscally healthy. — creditworthiness, n.

creation (kree-shan), n. [fr. Latin cernere "to decide"] Roman law. 1. A method or form of accepting an inheritance by an heir who is appointed in a testament. • Creation usu. had to be declared within 100 days from the date an heir received notice of the appointment. "In the old law it was the practice to fix a time limit, usually of one hundred days, within which the heir was to make a formal acceptance, with the addition that if he failed to do so, he was to be disinherited and a substitute was to take the inheritance in his place. This formal acceptance was known as cretio from the Latin verb cernere — to decide. The practice had fallen into disuse before Justinian, who formally abolished it." R.W. Lee, The Elements of Roman Law 199 (4th ed. 1956).

2. The period within which an heir might decide whether to accept an inheritance. — Also termed (in Latin) cretio (kree-shan-ed), adj.

criez la pees (krI-eez la pees). [Law French] Hist. Rehearse the concord (or peace). • This phrase was used to confirm the conveyance of land by fine. The serjeant or countor in attendance read the phrase aloud in court. See FINE (1).

crim. con. abbr. CRIMINAL CONVERSATION.

crime. (14c) An act that the law makes punishable; the breach of a legal duty treated as the subject-matter of a criminal proceeding. — Also termed criminal wrong. See OFFENSE (1).

"Understanding that the conception of Crime, as distinguished from that of Wrong or Tort and from that of Sin, involves the idea of injury to the State of collective community, we first discover that the commonwealth, in literal conformity with the concept, itself interposed directly, and by isolated acts, to avenge itself on the author of the evil which it had suffered." Henry S. Maine, Ancient Law 320 (17th ed. 1901).

"It is a curious fact that all the minor acts enumerated in the penal code of a state like, say, New York are in law called crimes, which term includes both murder and overparking. It is a strong term to use for the latter, and of course the law has for centuries recognized that there are more serious and less serious crimes. At the common law, however, only two classes were recognized, serious crimes or felonies, and minor crimes or misdemeanors." Max Radin, The Law and You 91 (1948).

administrative crime. (1943) An offense consisting of a violation of an administrative rule or regulation that carries with it a criminal sanction.

capital crime. See capital offense under OFFENSE (1).

commercial crime. (1900) A crime that affects commerce; esp., a crime directed toward the property or revenues of a commercial establishment.

- Examples include robbery of a business, embezzlement, counterfeiting, forgery, prostitution, illegal gambling, and extortion. See 26 CFR § 403.38.

common-law crime. (1827) A crime that is punishable under the common law, rather than by force of statute. Cf. statutory crime.

complainantless crime. See victimless crime.

computer crime. (1971) A crime involving the use of a computer, such as sabotaging or stealing electronically stored data. — Also termed cybercrime. [Cases: Telecommunications C=1342, 1348.]

constructive crime. A crime that is built up or created when a court enlaras a statute by altering or straining the statute’s language, esp. to drawing unreasonable implications and inferences from it. — Also termed implied crime; presumed crime.

continuous crime. (1907) 1. A crime that continues after an initial illegal act has been consummated; a crime that involves ongoing elements. • An example is illegal U.S. drug importation. The criminal act is completed not when the drugs enter the country, but when the drugs reach their final destination. 2. A crime (such as driving a stolen vehicle) that continues over an extended period. Cf. instantaneous crime.

corporate crime. (1934) A crime committed by a corporation’s representatives acting on its behalf. • Examples include price-fixing and consumer fraud. Although a corporation as an entity cannot commit a crime other than through its representatives, it can be named as a criminal defendant — Also termed organizational crime. Cf. occupational crime. [Cases: Corporations C=526.]

crime of omission. (18c) An offense that carries as its material component the failure to act.

crime of passion. (18c) A crime committed in the heat of an emotionally charged moment, with no opportunity to reflect on what is happening. See HEAT OF PASSION.

crime of violence. See violent crime.

crime without victims. See victimless crime.

cybercrime. See computer crime.

economic crime. A nonphysical crime committed to obtain a financial gain or a professional advantage.

"There are two major styles of economic crime. The first consists of crimes committed by businessmen as an adjunct to their regular business activities. Businessmen’s responsibilities give them the opportunity, for example, to commit embezzlement, to violate regulations directed at their areas of business activity, or to evade the payment of taxes. This style of economic crime is often called white-collar crime. The second style of economic crime is the provision of illegal goods and services or the provision of goods and services in an illegal manner. Illegal provision of goods and services requires coordinated economic activity similar to that of normal business, but all of those engaged in it are involved in crime. The madam operating a brothel has many concerns identical to the manager of a resort hotel, and the distributor of marijuana must worry about the efficacy of his distribution system just as does a distributor of any other product. This type of economic crime is often called organized crime because the necessity of economic coordination outside the law leads to the formation of criminal groups with elaborate organizational customs and practices." Edmund W. Kitch, "Economic Crime," in 2 Encyclopedia of Crime and Justice 670, 671 (Sanford H. Kadish ed., 1983).

expressive crime. A crime committed for the sake of the crime itself, esp. out of frustration, rage, or other emotion rather than for financial gain. Cf. instrumental crime.

federal crime. See federal crime.

general-intent crime. A crime that involves performing a particular act without intending a further act or a further result. [Cases: Criminal Law \( \supseteq 20 \).

hate crime. (1874) A crime motivated by the victim's race, color, ethnicity, religion, or national origin. Certain groups have lobbied to expand the definition by statute to include a crime motivated by the victim's disability, gender, or sexual orientation. Cf. hate speech under speech. [Cases: Civil Rights \( \supseteq 1808 \); Sentencing and Punishment \( \supseteq 70, 753 \).

high crime. (18c) A crime that is very serious, though not necessarily a felony. • Under the U.S. Constitution, a government officer's commission of a "high crime" is, along with treason and bribery, grounds for removal from office. U.S. Const. art. II, § 4. See impeachable offense.

honor crime. A crime motivated by a desire to punish a person who the perpetrator believes has injured a person's or group's sense of honor. • The term is most often applied to crimes committed against Muslim women by members of their own families for behavior that leads to perceived social harm, esp. loss of family honor. The term also extends to non-Muslims and covers many acts of violence, including assault, rape, infanticide, and murder. When the crime involves a death, it is also termed honor killing.

implied crime. See constructive crime.

inchoate crime. See inchoate offense under offense (1).

index crime. See index offense under offense (1).

infamous crime (in-fə-məs). (16c) 1. At common law, a crime for which part of the punishment was infamy, so that one who committed it would be declared ineligible to serve on a jury, hold public office, or testify. • Examples are perjury, treason, and fraud. [Cases: Jury \( \supseteq 45 \); Officers and Public Employees \( \supseteq 31 \).]

2. A crime punishable by imprisonment in a penitentiary. • The Fifth Amendment requires a grand jury indictment for the prosecution of infamous (or capital) crimes, which include all federal felony offenses. See indictable offense under offense (1). Cf. noninfamous crime.

"At common law an infamous crime was one ... inconsistent with the common principles of honesty and humanity. Infamous crimes were treason, felony, all offenses found in fraud and which came within the general notion of the crimes falsi of the civil law, piracy, swindling, cheating, barratry, and the bribing of a witness to absent himself from a trial, in order to get rid of his evidence." Justin Miller, Handbook of Criminal Law § 5, at 25 (1934).

instantaneous crime. (1874) A crime that is fully completed by a single act, as arson or murder, rather than a series of acts. • The statute of limitations for an instantaneous crime begins to run with its completion. Cf. continuous crime.

instrumental crime. A crime committed to further another end or result; esp., a crime committed to obtain money to purchase a good or service. Cf. expressive crime.

international crime. See international crime.

major crime. See felony (1).

noninfamous crime. A crime that does not qualify as an infamous crime. Cf. infamous crime.

occupational crime. A crime that a person commits for personal gain while on the job. Cf. corporate crime.

personal crime. A crime (such as rape, robbery, or pick-pocketing) that is committed against an individual's person.

political crime. See political offense.

predatory crime. A crime that involves preying upon and victimizing individuals. • Examples include robbery, rape, and carjacking.

preliminary crime. See inchoate offense under offense (1.

presumed crime. See constructive crime.

quasi-crime. (18c) Hist. 1. An offense not subject to criminal prosecution (such as contempt or violation of a municipal ordinance) but for which penalties or forfeitures can be imposed. • The term includes offenses that give rise to qui tam actions and forfeitures for the violation of a public duty. 2. An offense for which someone other than the actual perpetrator is held liable, the perpetrator being presumed to act on the command of the responsible party. See quasi-defect (1) under delict.

2. See felony (1).

signature crime. (1974) A distinctive crime so similar in pattern, scheme, or modus operandi to previous crimes that it identifies a particular defendant as the perpetrator. [Cases: Criminal Law \( \supseteq 369.15 \).

spontaneous crime. A criminal act that occurs suddenly and without premeditation in response to an unforeseen stimulus. • For example, a husband who discovers his wife in bed with another man and shoots him could be said to have committed an effectively spontaneous crime.

status crime. (1961) A crime of which a person is guilty by being in a certain condition or of a specific character. • An example of a status crime is vagrancy. Also termed status offense; personal-condition crime. [Cases: Criminal Law \( \supseteq 26 \).

statutory crime. (1940) A crime punishable by statute. Cf. common-law crime. [Cases: Criminal Law \( \supseteq 21 \).]
street crime. (1966) A crime generally directed against a person in public, such as mugging, theft, or robbery. — Also termed visible crime.

strict-liability crime. A crime that does not require a mens rea element, such as traffic offenses and illegal sales of intoxicating liquor. [Cases: Criminal Law $21.]

criminal conversation. Archaic. A tort action for adultery, brought by a husband against a third party who engaged in sexual intercourse with his wife. 1. Criminal conversation has been abolished in most jurisdictions. — Abbr. crim. con. See heartbalm statute. [Cases: Husband and Wife C:: 340-354.] ‘An action (whether of trespass or case is uncertain, but probably trespass) formerly lay against one who had committed adultery with the wife of the plaintiff. It was known as an action for criminal conversation. The wife's consent was irrelevant. The action was distinct from that of enticement: one may commit adultery without enticing a wife away from her husband. The action was no doubt a necessity when divorce could only be obtained by Act of Parliament: as Parliament was not a tribunal suitable for trying allegations of adultery it was reasonable to require the petitioner to establish the truth of his allegations before a court of law. The action might also have been justified on the ground that the plaintiff is in substance complaining of the invasion of privacy of his marriage, and the insult thereby caused to his honour as a husband.’ K.F.V. Heuston, Salmont on the Law of Torts 358 (17th ed. 1977).

criminal justice. (16c) 1. The methods by which a society deals with those who are accused of having committed crimes. See law enforcement (1). Cf. CIVIL JUSTICE. 2. The field of study pursued by those seeking to enter law enforcement as a profession. • Many colleges offer degrees in criminal justice, typically after two to four years of study. — Also termed (in sense 2) police science; law enforcement. criminal-justice system. (1929) The collective institutions through which an accused offender passes until the accusations have been disposed of or the assessed punishment concluded. • The system typically has three components: law enforcement (police, sheriffs, marshals), the judicial process (judges, prosecutors, defense lawyers), and corrections (prison officials, probation officers, and parole officers). — Also termed law-enforcement system.
criminal law. (18c) The body of law defining offenses against the community at large, regulating how suspects are investigated, charged, and tried, and establishing punishments for convicted offenders. — Also termed penal law.

"Often the term 'criminal law' is used to include all that is involved in 'the administration of criminal justice' in the broadest sense. As so employed it embraces three different fields, known to the lawyer as (1) the substantive criminal law, (2) criminal procedure, and (3) special problems in the administration and enforcement of criminal justice. . . . The phrase 'criminal law' is more commonly used to include only that part of the general field known as the substantive criminal law . . . " — Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. crit. (1985) An adherent to the critical-legal-studies school of thought. — Also termed CLSer; Critic; critter.
 fem-crit. A feminist adherent of critical legal studies.
critical evidence. See evidence.
Critical Legal Studies. (1978) 1. A school of thought advancing the idea that the legal system perpetuates the status quo in terms of economics, race, and gender by using manipulable concepts and by creating an imaginary world of social harmony regulated by law. The Marxist wing of this school focuses on socioeconomic issues. Fem-crits emphasize gender hierarchy, whereas critical race theorists focus on racial subordination. See fem-crit under crit; critical race theory. 2. The body of work produced by adherents to this school of thought. — Abbr. CLS.
critical limitation. Patents. A limitation essential either to the operativeness of an invention or to the patentability of a patent claim for the invention. [Cases: Patents C= 165(2).]
Critical Race Theory. (1989) 1. A reform movement within the legal profession, particularly within academia, whose adherents believe that the legal system has disempowered racial minorities. The term first appeared in 1989. Critical race theorists observe that even if the law is couched in neutral language, it cannot be neutral because those who fashioned it had their own subjective perspectives that, once enshrined in law, have disadvantaged minorities and even perpetuated racism. 2. The body of work produced by adherents to this theory. — Abbr. CRT.
critical stage. (1962) Criminal procedure. A point in a criminal prosecution when the accused’s rights or defenses might be affected by the absence of legal representation. Under the Sixth Amendment, a critical stage triggers the accused’s right to appointed counsel. Examples of critical stages include preliminary hearings, jury selection, and (of course) trial. Cf. accusatory stage. [Cases: Criminal Law C= 1718.]

cross-bill. See bill (2).

cross-claim. n. (1825) A claim asserted between codefendants or coplaintiffs in a case and that relates to the subject of the original claim or counterclaim. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 13(g). — Also termed cross-action; cross-suit. Cf. counterclaim. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure $\rightarrow$786; Pleading $\rightarrow$147, 148, 149; Set-off and Counterclaim $\rightarrow$10.] — cross-claim, vb. — cross-claimant, n.

“The courts have not always distinguished clearly between a cross-claim and a counterclaim, and have used one name where the other is proper under the rules, perhaps because in some states, and in the old equity practice, the term cross-complaint or cross-bill is used for what the rules regard as a counterclaim. Under Rule 13 a counterclaim is a claim against an opposing party, while a cross-claim is against a co-party. Further there is not the same freedom in asserting cross-claims that the rules provide for counterclaims. An unrelated claim against an opposing party may be asserted as a permissive counterclaim, but only claims related to the subject matter of the original action, or property involved therein, are appropriate as cross-claims.” Charles Alan Wright, The Law of Federal Courts § 80, at 574 (5th ed. 1994).

cross-collateral clause. (1965) An installment-contract provision allowing the seller, if the buyer defaults, to repossess not only the particular item sold but also every other item bought from the seller on which a balance remained due when the last purchase was made. — Also termed dragnet clause.

cross-collateralization. See cross-collateral under collateral.

cross-complaint. (1854) 1. A claim asserted by a defendant against another party to the action. — Also termed (in some jurisdictions) cross-petition. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure $\rightarrow$786; Pleading $\rightarrow$148, 149.] 2. A claim asserted by a defendant against a person not a party to the action for a matter relating to the subject of the action.

cross-default clause. (1979) A contractual provision under which default on one debt obligation triggers default on another obligation.

cross-defendant. The party against whom a cross-claim is asserted. Cf. cross-plaintiff. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure $\rightarrow$786.]

cross-examination, n. (18e) The questioning of a witness at a trial or hearing by the party opposed to the party who called the witness to testify. • The purpose of cross-examination is to discredit a witness before the fact-finder in any of several ways, as by bringing out contradictions and improbabilities in earlier testimony, by suggesting doubts to the witness, and by trapping the witness into admissions that weaken the testimony. The cross-examiner is typically allowed to ask leading questions but is traditionally limited to matters covered on direct examination and to credibility issues. — Also termed cross-interrogation. Cf. direct examination; recross-examination. [Cases: Witnesses $\rightarrow$266-284, 330.] — cross-examine, vb.

cross-interrogatory. See interrogatory.

cross-license. See license.

cui ante divorium (kr [or kwir or kwee] an-tee da-vor-shew-am). [Law Latin "to whom before divorce"] Hist. A writ of entry enabling a divorced woman to recover land that she had held in fee but that her husband had sold without her permission during the marriage. • The name of this writ derives from the words within it: cui ipsa ante divorium inter eos celebratum, contradicere non potuit ("whom she, before the divorce between them, could not gainsay"). The writ was abolished in 1833. — Also termed sur cui ante divorium.

Cui bono? [Latin] For whose advantage? Who benefits? • The explanation may be used to ask who benefited from the results of a crime, usu. to cast suspicion without offering evidence of guilt. Despite the literal meaning, the term is more often used to mean "what's the good of it?" or "what benefits are there?"

cui in vita (ki [or kwir or kwee] in-vi-ta). [Law Latin "to whom in the life"] Hist. A writ of entry enabling a woman to recover land that she had held in fee but that her deceased husband had sold without her permission. • It is so called from the words of the writ: cui ipsa in vita sua contradicere non potuit ("whom she, in his lifetime, could not gainsay"). — Also termed sur cui in vita.

"Cui in vita, is a writ of entry, which a Widow hath against him, to whom her husband alienated her Lands or Tenements in his life-time, which must specify, that During his life, she could not withstand it." Thomas Blount, Nomo-Lexicon: A Law-Dictionary (1670).

cujus contrarium est verum (k[yo]-jas kan-trair ee-am est veer-am). [Latin] Hist. The contrary of which is the truth.

"Cujus haeredibus maxime prospicitur. . . . This is a rule of construction to be attended to in ascertaining from the terms of a destination, in whom the fee of a property is vested, the ordinary rule being, that he is the fief whose heirs are preferred. Thus, a conveyance to 'A and B jointly, and the heirs of B,' gives A merely a joint right of liferent, and gives B the fee. Under such a destination, B is so absolutely the fief that his rights cannot be impaired by any acts, even onerous, of A, who is held, as we have said, to be a liferenter." John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 121 (4th ed. 1894).

culpa (kal-pa). [Latin] 1. Roman & civil law. Fault, neglect, or negligence; unintentional wrong. See NEGLIGENCE. Cf. DILIGENTIA; CASUS (1); DOLUS (1). 2. Roman law. Conduct that made a party to a contract, or quasi-contract, liable to the other party.

lata culpà (lay-ta kal-pa). [Latin "grave fault"] Gross negligence amounting to bad faith (dolus). • This phrase occurs most commonly in bailment law and in the law of the transport of persons. — Also termed culpa lata. See gross negligence under NEGLIGENCE.

levis culpa (lee-vis kal-pa). [Latin "slight fault"] 1. Ordinary negligence. 2. Failure to act as the ideal paterfamilias should. — Also termed culpa levis; culpa levis in concreto. See ordinary negligence under NEGLIGENCE.

levisissima culpa (la-vis-a-ma kali-pa). [Latin "the slightest fault"] Slight negligence. — Also termed culpa levisissima. See slight negligence under NEGLIGENCE.

culpability (kal-pa-bil-tee), n. Blameworthiness; the quality of being culpable. • Except in cases of absolute liability, criminal culpability requires a showing that the person acted purposely, knowingly, recklessly, or negligently with respect to each material element of the offense. See Model Penal Code § 2.02. [Cases: Criminal Law C=19.]

"The concept of culpability is used as a reference point to assess the defendant's guilt and punishment even though, in the two contexts, culpability denotes different aspects of the defendant and the murder. At the guilt phase, culpability is most often used to refer to the state of mind that the defendant must possess. Also at the guilt phase, culpability may reflect a broader judgment about the defendant: when he is culpable for his conduct, it means that he is blameworthy and deserves punishment. At the punishment phase, the concept of culpability stands as the benchmark for when the death penalty is an appropriate punishment." Phyllis L. Crocker, Concepts of Culpability and Deathworthiness, 66 Fordham L. Rev. 21, 35-36 (1997).

culpable (kal-pa-bal), adj. (14c) 1. Guilty; blameworthy. 2. Involving the breach of a duty.

culpa-in-contrahendo doctrine. [Law Latin "fault in contracting"] The principle that parties must act in good faith during preliminary contract negotiations; esp., the principle that a breach by the offeror after the offeree has begun performance of a unilateral contract and is stopped by the offeror before completion will give rise to liability in tort. [Cases: Torts C=433.]

culpa lata. See lata culpa under CULPA.

culpa levis. See levis culpa under CULPA.

culpa levis in concreto. See levis culpa under CULPA.
culpa levissima. See levissima culpa under culpa.

culprit. (17c) 1. A person accused or charged with the commission of a crime. 2. A person who is guilty of a crime. • Culprit may be a running together of cul, shortened from the Latin culpabilis ("guilty"), and prit, from Old French presi ("ready"), two words formerly used to orally plead at the outset of a criminal case.

"When the prisoner hath thus pleaded not guilty, non culpabilis ... the clerk of the assise, or clerk of the arraigns, on behalf of the crown replies, that the prisoner is guilty, and that he is ready to prove him so. This is done by two monosyllables in the same spirit of abbreviation, 'cul, prit,' which signifies first that the prisoner is guilty, (cul, culpable, or culpabilis) and then that the king is ready to prove him so; prit, praeviso sum, or paratus verificare. ... How our courts came to express a matter of this importance in so odd and obscure a manner ... can hardly be pronounced with certainty. It may perhaps, however, be accounted for by supposing that these were at first short notes, to help the memory of the clerk, and remind him what he was to reply; or else it was the short method of taking down in court, upon the minutes, the replication and averment; 'cul, prit;' which afterwards the ignorance of succeeding clerks adopted for the very words to be by them spoken. But however it may have arisen, the joining of issue ... seems to be clearly the meaning of this obscure expression; which has puzzled our most ingenious etymologists, and is commonly understood as if the clerk of the arraigns, immediately on plea pleaded, had fixed an inopportunus name on the prisoner, by asking him, 'culprit, how wilt thou be tried?" 4 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 333-34 (1769).

cultural agreement. Int'l law. A bilateral or multilateral agreement between nations for the purpose of furthering cultural or intellectual relations.

cultural property. Int'l law. Movable and immovable property that has cultural significance, whether in the nature of antiquities and monuments of a classical age or important modern items of fine arts, decorative arts, and architecture. • Some writers prefer the term cultural heritage, which more broadly includes intangible cultural things such as folklore, crafts, and skills.

cum domibus, aedicificis (kom dom-a-bas, ee-di-fish-ee-is). [Law Latin] Scots law. With houses, buildings. • These words in a conveyance included within the conveyance every structure erected on the conveyed land.

"Prescription does not run against any one ... unless he is able to act in defence of his right cum effectu ... Under the old feudal system the casualty of ward was not incurred except where the vassal alienated his lands cum effectu. Thus, if the vassal was interdicted and disposed without the consent of his interdictors, his conveyance being reducible was not effectual, and the casualty was not incurred." John Trayner, Trayner’s Latin Maxims 127-28 (4th ed. 1894).

cum fabrilibus, brasinibus, et bruerciis (kom fa-bril-a-bas, bra-st-nas, et broo-er-ee-is). [Law Latin] Scots law. With forges, maltkilns, and breweries. • A tenant was restricted from building these structures on land unless the tenant first obtained the superior’s permission.

curfew (kar-foo). 1. Hist. A law requiring that all fires be extinguished at a certain time in the evening, usu. announced by the ringing of a bell. 2. A regulation that forbids people (or certain classes of them, such as minors) from being outdoors or in vehicles during specified hours. [Cases: Infants ☞ 13.]

curia (kyoor-ee-a), n. [Latin] 1. Roman law. One of 30 divisions (three tribes of ten curiae) into which the Roman people were said to be divided by Romulus. See comitia curiata under COMITIA. 2. Roman law. A legislative gathering, esp. of the Roman Senate; the building used for the gathering. 3. Hist. A judicial tribunal held in the sovereign's palace; a royal court. — Abbr. cur. 4. Hist. A court. 5. The papal court, including its functionaries and officials.

"The word curia in classical Latin is used in a number of ways. Apparently, it meant at first a subdivision of the people. It was also used, by a transfer which is not too clear, for the building in which the Roman Senate met. By an almost inevitable development it became the word for the Senate itself and later the ordinary designation for the Council in municipalities of the later Empire. . . . How much of this was still recalled in Medieval times, we cannot tell, but . . . in the early Middle Ages, curia was a common word to describe both the groups of men who generally were found in attendance on pope, emperor, king or prince, and the groups which were summoned by him to give him counsel. The curia in the latter sense, however, was not really a casual group of persons, summoned spasmodically to advise the king or any other person. It had come to be in feudal Europe the ordinary Latin word for the general meeting of the lord's vassals, which itself grew out of the Germanic mot or thing. . . . The curia of the king was in theory a larger and more important example of the same kind of assemblage. " Max Radin, Handbook of Anglo-American Legal History 46-48 (1936).

curia admiralityis (kyoor-ee-a ad-ma-ral-a-tay-tis). [Law Latin] See HIGH COURT OF ADMIRALTY.

curia advisari vult (kyoor-ee-a ad-va-sair-1 volt). [Latin] The court will be advised; the court will consider. • This phrase signaled a court's decision to delay judgment pending further consideration. In England, the phrase is still used in all Court of Appeal decisions when the judgment is reserved; that is, not delivered after the hearing. — Abbr. cur. adv. vult; c.a.v.

curia burgi (kyoor-ee-a bar-ji). See COURT OF HUSTINGS.

curia cancellaria. See CANCELLARIA.

curia domini (kyoor-ee-a dom-ee-ni). [Law Latin "lord's court"] Hist. A lord's house or hall, used as a meeting place for tenants during court sessions.

curia palatii (kyoor-ee-a po-lay-shee-1). [Law Latin "court of the palace"] PALACE COURT.

Curia Regis (kyoor-ee-a ree-jis). [Latin "king's court"] Hist. (sometimes not cap.) 1. The chief court in early Norman England, established by William the Conqueror. • The curia regis was a body of advisers who traveled with the king, advising him on political matters and acting as an appellate court in important or complicated cases. Over time the functions of the curia regis became exclusively judicial in nature. — Also termed King's Court; aula regis. — Abbr. C.R.

"[W]e are tempted to use terms which are more precise than those that were current in the twelfth century. In particular we are wont to speak of the Curia Regis without remembering that the definite article is not in our documents. Any court held in the king's name by the king's delegates is Curia Regis. Thus the institution of what in course of time will be a new tribunal, a Court of King's Bench or a Court of Common Pleas, may be found in some small rearrangement, some petty technical change, which at the moment passes unnoticed." 1 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 153 (2d ed. 1898).

"[A small] body collects round the king, a body of administrators selected from the ranks of the baronage and of the clergy. At its head stands the chief-justice, the king's right-hand man, his viceroy when the king is, as often he is, in his foreign dominions. . . . This body when it sits for curing title. The act of removing defects from a land title to make it marketable.

currency. (17c) An item (such as a coin, government note, or banknote) that circulates as a medium of exchange. See LEGAL TENDER. [Cases: United States currency.]

fractional currency. Paper money worth less than one dollar; esp., the currency issued by the federal government from 1863 to 1876.

hard currency. Currency backed by reserves, esp. gold and silver reserves.

national currency. Currency approved by a national government and placed in circulation as a medium of exchange. See LEGAL TENDER. [Cases: United States national currency.]

postal currency. Hist. A fractional currency bearing a facsimile of postage stamps. ● The United States Post Office issued these miniature notes in the 19th century until 1876. They were exchangeable for postage stamps, accepted for payments to the government in amounts up to $5, and could be exchanged for federal currency in multiples of $5. They were also used as small change when people hoarded coins during the Civil War. — Also termed postage currency.

soft currency. Currency not backed by reserves and therefore subject to sharp fluctuations in value.

United States currency. Currency issued under the authority of the federal government.

currency arbitrage. See ARBITRAGE.

currency market. See foreign-exchange market under MARKET.

currency swap. See SWAP.

currency-market report. A deposit report that must be signed by a person who deposits $10,000 or more in a bank account. ● The report is on blue paper, much like the skin color of the cartoon characters called Smurfs, so it is also termed (in slang) a smurf.

current asset. See ASSET.

current-cost accounting. (1938) A method of measuring assets in terms of replacement cost. ● This approach accounts for inflation by recognizing price changes in a company’s assets and restating the assets in terms of their current cost.

curren'de termi'n'o (kar-ren-te tar-mi-noh). [Law Latin] Scots law. During the currency of the term. ● The phrase might be used in leases.

cursitor baron. Hist. An officer of the Court of Exchequer with administrative, but not judicial, duties. ● Over time, as the Barons of the Exchequer took on more judicial rather than fiscal duties, the need for someone with financial experience became apparent. So in 1610 a cursitor baron was appointed to sit alongside the judges. The office was abolished in 1856.

cursitor. (kar-sa-tar). Hist. A chancery clerk responsible for making out original writs. ● Cursitor derives from the words de cursu that the clerks wrote out.

curtesy (kar-ta-see). (16c) At common law, a husband's right, upon his wife's death, to a life estate in the land that his wife owned during their marriage, assuming that a child was born alive to the couple. ● This right has been largely abolished. Traditionally, the full phrase was estate by the curtesy of England (or Scotland). — Also spelled (esp. in Scots law) courtesy. — Also termed tenancy by the curtesy. Cf. DOWER. [Cases: Dower and Curtesy C=1.]
curtesy initiate (kar-ta-see 1-nish-e-ee-it). The interest the husband has in his wife's estate after the birth of issue capable of inheriting, and before the death of the wife.

curtilage (kar-ta-laj). (14c) The land or yard adjoining a house, usu. within an enclosure. • Under the Fourth Amendment, the curtilage is an area usu. protected from warrantless searches. — Also termed (in Latin) curtillium. See OPEN FIELDS DOCTRINE. Cf. MESSUAGES. [Cases: Searches and Seizures C2:27.]

custodes libertatis angiae autoritate parliamenti (ka-stoh-deez lib-ar-tay-tis ang-glee-ee awk tor-a-tay-tee parl-ee-men-ti). [Latin] Hist. Guardians of the liberty of England by the authority of Parliament. • The style of all writs and judicial process that issued during the period between the execution of Charles I (January 1649) and the proclamation of Oliver Cromwell as Lord Protector (December 1655).
custodiae causa (ka-stoh-dee-ee-kaw-za). [Latin] Scots law. For keeping; for preserving. • The phrase described a bailment's purpose.
custodial account. See ACCOUNT.
custodia legis. See in CUSTODIA LEGIS. custodial interference. Family law. 1. The abduction of a child or the inducement of a minor child to leave the parent legally entitled to custody or not to return to the parent entitled to legal custody. [Cases: Child Custody C2:57, 569, 969; Kidnapping C2:23.] 2. Any hindrance to a parent's rightful access to a child. • The Restatement (Second) of Torts § 700 (1977) provides for an action in tort by the parent entitled to custody against one who, with knowledge that the parent does not consent, either takes the child or compels or induces the child to leave or not to return to the parent legally entitled to custody. [Cases: Child Custody C2:969, — Also termed custody interference.
custodial interrogation. See INTERROGATION.
custodial parent. See PARENT. custodial responsibility. Family law. Physical child custody and supervision, usu. including overnight responsibility for the child. • This term encompasses visitation and sole, joint, and shared custody. Both parents share responsibility for the child regardless of the amount of time they spend with the child. See CUSTODY.
custodial trust. See TRUST.
custodian, n. 1. A person or institution that has charge or custody (of a child, property, papers, or other valuables); GUARDIAN. • In reference to a child, a custodian has either legal or physical custody. See CUSTODIAN. 2. Bankruptcy. A prepetition agent who has taken charge of any asset belonging to the debtor. 11 USCA § 101(1). [Cases: Bankruptcy C2:2021, — CUSTODIANSHIP, n.

custodia terrae et haeredis. See DE CUSTODIA TERRAE ET HAEREDIS.
custody, n. (15c) 1. The care and control of a thing or person for inspection, preservation, or security. constructive custody. (1822) Custody of a person (such as a parolee or probationer) whose freedom is controlled by legal authority but who is not under direct physical control.
penal custody. Custody intended to punish a criminal offender. [Cases: Escape C2:1. physical custody. See PHYSICAL CUSTODY (1). preventive custody. (1976) Custody intended to prevent further dangerous or criminal behavior.
protective custody. (1929) 1. The government's confinement of a person for that person's own security or well-being, such as a witness whose safety is in jeopardy or an incompetent person who may harm him- or herself or others. [Cases: Witnesses C2:20.] 2. Family law. An arrangement intended to protect a child from abuse, neglect, or danger whereby the child is placed in the safety of a foster family after being removed from a home or the custody of the person previously responsible for the child's care. [Cases: Infants C2:226.] 3. An arrangement made by law-enforcement authorities to safeguard a person in a place other than the person's home because of criminal threats to harm the person.
2. Family law. The care, control, and maintenance of a child awarded by a court to a responsible adult. • Custody involves legal custody (decision-making authority) and physical custody (caregiving authority), and an award of custody usu. grants both rights. In a divorce or separation proceeding between the parents, the court usu. awards custody to one of them, unless both are found to be unfit, in which case the court may award custody to a third party, typically a relative. In a case involving parental dereliction, such as abuse or neglect, the court may award custody to the state for placing the child in foster care if no responsible relative or family friend is willing and able to care for the child. — Also termed child custody; legal custody; managing conservatorship; parental functions. See MANAGING CONSERVATORSHIP (2) UNDER CONSERVATOR; PARENTING PLAN. [Cases: Child Custody C2:1. divided custody. (1905) An arrangement by which each parent has exclusive physical custody and full control of and responsibility for the child part of the time, with visitation rights in the other parent.

- For example, a mother might have custody during the school year, and the father might have custody during the summer vacation. [Cases: Child Custody C=210.]

joint custody. (1870) An arrangement by which both parents share the responsibility for and authority over the child at all times, although one parent may exercise primary physical custody. ● In most jurisdictions, there is a rebuttable presumption that joint custody is in the child's best interests. Joint-custody arrangements are favored unless there is so much animosity between the parents that the child or children will be adversely affected by a joint-custody arrangement. An award of joint custody does not necessarily mean an equal sharing of time; it does, however, mean that the parents will consult and share equally in the child's upbringing and in decision-making about upbringing. In a joint-custody arrangement, the rights, privileges, and responsibilities are shared, though not necessarily the physical custody. In a joint-custody arrangement, physical custody is usu. given to one parent. In fact, awards of joint physical custody, in the absence of extraordinary circumstances, are usu. found not to be in the best interests of the child. — Also termed shared custody; joint managing conservatorship. [Cases: Child Custody C=120–155.

"The statutes, and the cases as well, differ over the definition of joint custody. It is most often defined as meaning only that both parents will share in the decisions concerning the child's care, education, religion, medical treatment and general welfare." Homer H. Clark Jr., The Law of Domestic Relations in the United States § 19.5, at 815 (2d ed. 1988).

legal custody. 1. CUSTODY (2). 2. CUSTODY (3). 3. The authority to make significant decisions on a child's behalf, including decisions about education, religious training, and healthcare. [Cases: Child Custody C=100–107.]

sole custody. (1870) An arrangement by which one parent has full control and sole decision-making responsibility — to the exclusion of the other parent — on matters such as health, education, religion, and living arrangements. [Cases: Child Custody C=1, 100–107, 100–107, 27.]

split custody. An arrangement in which one parent has custody of one or more children, while the other parent has custody of the remaining children. ● Split custody is fairly uncommon, since most jurisdictions favor keeping siblings together. [Cases: Child Custody C=27.]

3. The detention of a person by virtue of lawful process or authority. — Also termed legal custody. [Cases: Arrest C=68(3).] — custodial, adj.

custody decree. See decree.

custody determination. Family law. A court order determining custody and visitation rights. ● The order typically does not include any instructions on child support or other monetary obligations. [Cases: Child Custody C=511, 530.]

custody hearing. See HEARING.

custody of the law. (17c) The condition of property or a person being under the control of legal authority (as a court or law officer). See IN CUSTODIA LEGIS.

custody proceeding. Family law. An action to determine who is entitled to legal or physical custody of a child. ● Legal custody gives one the right to make significant decisions regarding the child, and physical custody gives one the right to physical care and control of the child. See CUSTODY; custody hearing under HEARING. [Cases: Child Custody C=401.]

custom, n. (13c) 1. A practice that by its common adoption and long, unvarying habit has come to have the force of law. See USAGE. [Cases: Customs and Usages C=1. — customary, adj.

conventional custom. A custom that operates only indirectly through the medium of agreements, so that it is accepted and adopted in individual instances as conventional law between the parties to those agreements. — Also termed usage. See USAGE.

general custom. 1. A custom that prevails throughout a country and constitutes one of the sources of the law of the land. [Cases: Customs and Usages C=1–22.] 2. A custom that businesses recognize and follow. See trade usage under USAGE.

legal custom. A custom that operates as a binding rule of law, independently of any agreement on the part of those subject to it. — Often shortened to custom.

local custom. A custom that prevails in some defined locality only, such as a city or county, and constitutes a source of law for that place only. — Also termed particular custom; special custom. [Cases: Customs and Usages C=1–22.]

2. (pl.) Duties imposed on imports or exports. 3. (pl.) The agency or procedure for collecting such duties.

custom and usage. General rules and practices that have become the norm through unvarying habit and common use. Cf. custom (1); USAGE. [Cases: Customs and Usages C=1–22.]

customary, n. (16c) A record of all the established legal and quasi-legal practices within a community. — Also termed customal; customal.

customary law. (16c) Law consisting of customs that are accepted as legal requirements or obligatory rules of conduct; practices and beliefs that are so vital and intrinsic a part of a social and economic system that they are treated as if they were laws. — Also termed consuetudinary law.

"In contrast with the statute, customary law may be said to exemplify implicit law. Let us, therefore, describe customary law in terms that will reveal to the maximum this quality of implicitness. A custom is not declared or enacted, but grows or develops through time. The date when it first came into full effect can usually be assigned only within broad limits. Though we may be able to describe in general the class of persons among whom the custom has come to prevail as a standard of conduct, it has no definite author; there is no person or defined human agency we can praise or blame for its being good or bad. There is no authoritative verbal declaration of the terms of the custom; it expresses itself not in a succession of words, but in a course of conduct." Lon L. Fuller, Anatomy of the Law 71 (1968).

cybercrime. See computer crime under crime.

cyberlaw (si-bar-law). (1994) The field of law dealing with the Internet, encompassing cases, statutes, regulations, and disputes that affect people and businesses interacting through computers. • Cyberlaw addresses issues of online speech and business that arise because of the nature of the medium, including intellectual property rights, free speech, privacy, e-commerce, and safety, as well as questions of jurisdiction. — Also termed cyber-space law.

“Much of the hoopla about ‘cyberspace law’ relates more to climbing the steep learning curve of [the Internet’s] technological complexities than to changes in fundamental legal principles. To the extent there was ‘new’ law, it was almost entirely case-by-case development, in accordance with accepted and well-understood basic legal principles, albeit applied to new technology and new circumstances.” Jay Dratler Jr., Cyberlaw § 1.01, at 1–3 (2001).

cyberpatent. See business-method patent and Internet patent under patent (3).

cyberpayment. A transfer of money over the Internet, usu. through a payment service. — Also termed Internet payment.

cyberpiracy. Trademarks. The act of registering a well-known name or mark (or one that is confusingly similar) as a website’s domain name, usu. for the purpose of deriving revenue. • One form of cyberpiracy is cybersquatting. Another is using a similar name or mark to mislead consumers. For example, a site called Nikee.com that sells Nikee branded athletic shoes and sporting goods would draw customers away the famous Nike brand. [Cases: Trademarks ☞ 1490–1503.] — cyberpirate, n.

cybersquatting. (1997) The act of reserving a domain name on the Internet, esp. a name that would be associated with a company’s trademark, and then seeking to profit by selling or licensing the name to the company that has an interest in being identified with it. • The practice was banned by federal law in 1999. See anti­cybersquatting consumer protection act. [Cases: Telecommunications ☞ 1333.]

cyberstalking. (1995) The act of threatening, harassing, or annoying someone through multiple e-mail messages, as through the Internet, esp. with the intent of placing the recipient in fear that an illegal act or an injury will be inflicted on the recipient or a member of the recipient’s family or household.

cyberterrorism. See TERRORISM.

cybertheft. (1994) The act of using an online computer service, such as one on the Internet, to steal someone else’s property or to interfere with someone else’s use and enjoyment of property. • Examples of cybertheft are hacking into a bank’s computer records to wrong­fully credit one account and debit another, and interfering with a copyright by wrongfully sending protected material over the Internet. [Cases: Telecommunications ☞ 461.15.]

cyclical (si-klə-kəl or sik-ə-kəl), adj. (Of a stock or an industry) characterized by large price swings that occur because of government policy, economic conditions, and seasonal changes.

cy pres (see pray or si). [Law French “as near as”] (1885)

1. The equitable doctrine under which a court reforms a written instrument with a gift to charity as closely to the donor’s intention as possible, so that the gift does not fail. • Courts use cy pres esp. in construing charitable gifts when the donor’s original charitable purpose cannot be fulfilled. It is also used to distribute unclaimed portions of a class-action judgment or settlement funds to a charity that will advance the interests of the class. More recently, courts have used cy pres to distribute class-action-settlement funds not amenable to individual claims or to a meaningful pro rata distribution to a nonprofit charitable organization whose work indirectly benefits the class members and advances the public interest. Cf. Doctrine of Approximation. [Cases: Charities ☞ 37; Deposits in Court ☞ 11.]

“The cy pres doctrine has been much discussed, if not a little severely criticised, and in many cases misunder­stood. . . . The cy pres doctrine is one under which Courts of Chancery act, when a gift for charitable uses cannot be applied according to the exact intention of the donor. In such cases the courts will apply the gift, as nearly as possible (cy pres) in conformity with the presumed general intention of the donor, for it is an established maxim in the interpretation of wills, that a court is bound to carry the will into effect if it can see a general intention consistent with the rules of law, even if the particular mode or manner pointed out by the testator cannot be followed.” George T. Bispham, The Principles of Equity § 104, at 113–14 (11th ed. 1931).

“Although the reason for the adoption of the cy pres rule by the English chancery court in the middle ages is not known, various hypotheses as to the motives of the court have been suggested. The most plausible theory is that the chancellors, being ecclesiastics and trained in Roman law, resurrected this civil law doctrine in order to save gifts made for religious purposes and thereby subject the property to church control. Justification for the use of the doctrine was laid on the shoulders of the donor, the idea being that since the object of the testator in donating the money to charity was to obtain an advantageous position in the kingdom of heaven, he ought not to be frustrated in this desire because of an unexpected or unforeseen failure.” Edith L. Fisch, The Cy Pres Doctrine in the United States 4 (1950).

2. A statutory provision that allows a court to reform a will, deed, or other instrument to avoid violating the rule against perpetuities. See RULE AGAINST PERPETU­TIES. [Cases: Perpetuities ☞ 4(22).]

daily balance. (1859) The final daily accounting for a day on which interest is to be accrued or paid.
average daily balance. The average amount of money in an account (such as a bank account or credit-card account) during a given period. • This amount serves as the basis for computing interest or a finance charge for the period.
daily newspaper. See NEWSPAPER.
daisy chain. A series of purchases and sales of the same daily newspaper. See NEWSPAPER. damage, n. (16c) Loss or injury to person or property <the plaintiff seeks $8,000 in damages from the defendant>. — damage, adj.
“Damages are the sum of money which a person wronged is entitled to receive from the wrongdoer as compensation for the wrong.” Frank Gahan, The Law of Damages 1 (1856).
accumulative damages. Statutory damages allowed in addition to amounts available under the common law. — Also termed enhanced damages.
actual damages. (18c) An amount awarded to a complainant to compensate for a proven injury or loss; damages that repay actual losses. — Also termed compensatory damages; tangible damages; real damages. [Cases: Damages $; 15(2).] added damages. See punitive damages.
additional damages. Damages usu. provided by statute in addition to direct damages. • Additional damages can include expenses resulting from the injury, consequential damages, or punitive damages.
benefit-of-the-bargain damages. (1955) Damages that a breaching party to a contract must pay to the aggrieved party, equal to the amounts that the aggrieved party would have received, including profits, if the contract had been fully performed. — Also termed loss-of-bargain damages. [Cases: Damages $; 117 ; Fraud $; 59(2).]
compensatory damages (kam-pen-sat-or-ee). (1817) 1. Damages sufficient in amount to indemnify the injured person for the loss suffered. — Often shortened to compensatories. 2. See actual damages. [Cases: Damages $; 15(2).]
consequential damages. (17c) Losses that do not flow directly and immediately from an injurious act but that result indirectly from the act. — Also termed indirect damages. [Cases: Damages C='21-25.]

contemptuous damages. See nominal damages.

continuing damages. 1. Ongoing damages arising from the same injury. 2. Damages arising from the repetition of similar acts within a definite period.

cosmetic damages. The amount awarded to compensate for personal disfigurement.

damages for lost expectations. See expectation damages.

damages ultra (al-tra). Additional damages claimed by a plaintiff who is not satisfied with the amounts the defendant paid into court.

direct damages. See general damages.

discretionary damages. Damages (such as mental anguish or pain and suffering) that are not precisely measurable but are determined by the subjective judgment of a jury. — Also termed indeterminate damages.

double damages. Damages that, by statute, are twice the amount that the fact-finder determines is owed or twice the amount of actual damages awarded. • In some cases, double damages are awarded in addition to actual damages, so the effect is the same as treble damages. [Cases: Damages C='227.]

enhanced damages. 1. See accumulative damages. 2. Patents. Damages for patent infringement in an amount up to three times that of compensatory damages, at the discretion of the court, based on the egregiousness of the defendant's conduct, including the willfulness of the infringement. 35 USCA § 284. [Cases: Patents C='319(3).]

estimated damages. See liquidated damages.

excess damages. Damages awarded to an insured — beyond the coverage provided by an insurance policy — because the insurer did not settle the claim within policy limits. • If the insurer acted in bad faith in not settling, the insured may have a claim to recover the excess damages from the insurer. — Also termed excess-liability damages. [Cases: Insurance C='350.]

excessive damages. A jury award that grossly exceeds the amount warranted by law based on the facts and circumstances of the case; unreasonable or outrageous damages, which are subject to reduction by remittitur. See REMITTITUR. [Cases: Damages C='127-140.]

exemplary damages. See punitive damages.

expectation damages. (1939) Compensation awarded for the loss of what a person reasonably anticipated from a transaction that was not completed. — Also termed expectancy damages; lost-expectation damages; damages for lost expectations. [Cases: Damages C='23.]

fee damages. Damages awarded to the owner of property abutting an elevated railway foreseeable damages. Damages that a breaching party knew or should have known when the contract was made would be likely to result from a breach. [Cases: Damages C='21.]

future damages. (17c) Money awarded to an injured party for an injury's residual or projected effects, such as those that reduce the person’s ability to function. • Examples are expected pain and suffering, loss or impairment of earning capacity, and projected medical expenses. [Cases: Damages C='25.]

general damages. (18c) Damages that the law presumes follow from the type of wrong complained of; specific, compensatory damages for harm that so frequently results from the tort for which a party has sued that the harm is reasonably expected and need not be alleged or proved. • General damages do not need to be specifically claimed. — Also termed direct damages; necessary damages. [Cases: Damages C='5.]

gross damages. The total damages found before adjustments and offsets.

hedonic damages (hi-don-ik). (1985) Damages that attempt to compensate for the loss of the pleasure of being alive. • Such damages are not allowed in most jurisdictions. — Also termed (erroneously) hedonistic damages. [Cases: Damages C='48-56.20.]

imaginary damages. See punitive damages.

inadequate damages. Damages insufficient to fully and fairly compensate the parties; damages bearing no reasonable relation to the plaintiff's injuries, indicating prejudice, mistake, or other fact to support setting aside a jury’s verdict. [Cases: Damages C='127.1-140.7.]

incidental damages. (18c) 1. Losses reasonably associated with or related to actual damages. 2. A seller's commercially reasonable expenses incurred in stopping delivery or in transporting and caring for goods after a buyer's breach. UCC § 2-710. [Cases: Sales C='384(4).] 3. A buyer's expenses reasonably incurred in caring for goods after a seller's breach. UCC § 2-715(1). [Cases: Sales C='418(19).]

What are incidental damages? The Code does not define incidental damages; rather 2-715(1) lists many expenses that are included as incidental damages. However, Comment 1 to 2-715 stresses that those listed are not intended to be exhaustive but are merely illustrative of the typical kinds of incidental expenses that can be recovered under 2-715: (1) those associated with rightful rejection (for instance, inspection and storage); (2) those associated with a proper revocation of acceptance; and (3) those involved in effecting cover. 1 James J. White & Robert S. Summers, Uniform Commercial Code § 10-3, at 561-62 (4th ed. 1995).

indeterminate damages. See discretionary damages.

indirect damages. See consequential damages.
intervening damages. Continuing damages that accrue during the pendency and prosecution of an unsuccessful appeal. A lower court may include intervening damages in an award.

irreparable damages (i-rep-a-ra-bal). Damages that cannot be easily ascertained because there is no fixed pecuniary standard of measurement, e.g., damages for a repeated public nuisance. Also termed non-pecuniary damages.

land damages. See just compensation under compensation.

lawful damages. Those damages fixed by law and ascertained in a court of law.

liquidated damages. (18c) An amount contractually stipulated as a reasonable estimation of actual damages to be recovered by one party if the other party breaches. If the parties to a contract have properly agreed on liquidated damages, the sum fixed is the measure of damages for a breach, whether it exceeds or falls short of the actual damages. Also termed stipulated damages; estimated damages. See liquidated-damages clause. Cf. unliquidated damages; penalty clause. (Cases: Damages C—74—84.)

‘Where the terms of a contract specify a sum payable for non-performance, it is a question of construction whether this sum is to be treated as a penalty or as liquidated damages. The difference in effect is this: The amount recoverable in case of a penalty is not the sum named, but the damage actually incurred. The amount recoverable as liquidated damages is the sum named as such. In construing these terms a judge will not accept the phraseology of the parties: they may call the sum specified “liquidated damages,” but if the judge finds it to be a penalty, he will treat it as such.” William R. Anson, Principles of the Law of Contract 470 (Arthur L. Corbin ed., 3d Am. ed. 1919).

‘The distinction between a penalty and genuine liquidated damages, as they are called, is not always easy to apply, but the Courts have made the task simpler by laying down certain guiding principles. In the first place, if the sum payable is so large as to be far in excess of the probable damage on breach, it is almost certainly a penalty. Secondly, if the same sum is expressed to be payable on any one of a number of different breaches of varying importance, it is again probably a penalty, because it is extremely unlikely that the same damage would be caused by these varying breaches. Thirdly, where a sum is expressed to be payable on a certain date, and a further sum in the event of default being made, this latter sum is prima facie a penalty, because more delay in payment is unlikely to cause damage. Finally, it is to be noted that the mere use of the words “liquidated damages” is not decisive, for it is the task of the Court and not of the parties to decide the true nature of the sum payable.” P.S. Atiyah, An Introduction to the Law of Contract 316–17 (3d ed. 1981).

loss-of-bargain damages. See benefit-of-the-bargain damages.

lost-expectation damages. See expectation damages.

lost-profits damages. See lost-profits (1).

moratory damages (mor-a-tor-e or mahr-). Civil law. Damages for a delay in performing an obligation. La. Civ. Code arts. 1899, 1994. There must be a default before these damages can be recovered, while compensatory damages are recoverable for both a failure of performance and for a defective performance.

multiple damages. Statutory damages (such as double or treble damages) that are a multiple of the amount that the fact-finder determines to be owed. Also termed multiplied damages. See double damages; treble damages. (Cases: Damages C—227.)

‘The statutory multiple damages differ from the common law punitive damages in that punitive damages involved no fixed sum or limit. The fixed limit of multiple damages not only reduces their threat to the defendant and the potential for abuse, it also reduces the possibility of a measured deterrence. Likewise, because the enhancement of the award is fixed by the statutory multiple, there is no occasion for introducing evidence of the defendant’s wealth as there is in the case of common law punitive damages. Perhaps a more important distinction is that multiple damages statutes may be enacted for entirely non-punitve purposes. Specifically, some double or treble damages statutes, and also specified ‘civil penalties,’ are intended to provide a kind of liquidated damages for actual losses that cannot be proved or that are otherwise unrecognized by the law.” Dan B. Dobbs, Law of Remedies § 3.12, at 359 (2d ed. 1993).

nominal damages. (18c) 1. A trifling sum awarded when a legal injury is suffered but there is no substantial loss or injury to be compensated. 2. A small amount fixed as damages for breach of contract without regard to the amount of harm. Also termed contemptuous damages. Cf. substantial damages. (Cases: Damages C—8—14.)

‘Nominal damages are damages awarded for the infraction of a legal right, where the extent of the loss is not shown, or where the right is one not dependent upon loss or damage, as in the case of rights of bodily immunity or rights to have one’s material property undisturbed by direct invasion. The award of nominal damages is made as a judicial declaration that the plaintiff’s right has been violated.” Charles T. McCormick, Handbook on the Law of Damages § 20, at 85 (1935).

‘Nominal damages are awarded if the plaintiff establishes a breach of contract or a tort of the kind that is said to be “actionable per se” but fails to establish a loss caused by the wrong. In the case of tort not actionable per se as, for example, negligence, if the plaintiff fails to establish a loss, the action will be dismissed. The practical significance of a judgment for nominal damages is made as a judicial declaration that the plaintiff’s right has been violated.” Charles T. McCormick, Handbook on the Law of Damages § 20, at 85 (1935).

nonpecuniary damages. Damages that cannot be measured in money. See irreparable damages.

particular damages. See special damages.

pecuniary damages (pah-kyoo-nee-er-e). (17c) Damages that can be estimated and monetarily compensated.

Although this phrase appears in many old cases, it is now widely considered a redundancy — since damages are always pecuniary. permanent damages. Damages for past, present, and future harm that cannot be avoided or remedied. [Cases: Damages \(\supseteq\) 39, 98, 110, 216(6).]

presumptive damages. See punitive damages.

prospective damages. Future damages that, based on the facts pleaded and proved by the plaintiff, can reasonably be expected to occur. [Cases: Damages \(\supseteq\) 25.]

proximate damages. Damages directly, immediately, and naturally flowing from the act complained of. Cf. speculative damages (1). [Cases: Damages \(\supseteq\) 18.]

punitive damages. (1848) Damages awarded in addition to actual damages when the defendant acted with recklessness, malice, or deceit; specifically, damages assessed by way of penalizing the wrongdoer or making an example to others. • Punitive damages, which are intended to punish and thereby deter blameworthy conduct, are generally not recoverable for breach of contract. The Supreme Court has held that three guidelines help determine whether a punitive-damages award violates constitutional due process: (1) the reprehensibility of the conduct being punished; (2) the reasonableness of the relationship between the harm and the award; and (3) the difference between the award and the civil penalties authorized in comparable cases. BMW of North America, Inc. v. Gore, 517 U.S. 559, 116 S.Ct. 1589 (1996). Also termed exemplary damages; vindictive damages; punitive damages: presumptive damages; added damages; aggravated damages; speculative damages; imaginary damages; smart money; punies. [Cases: Damages \(\supseteq\) 87–94.]

'Although compensatory damages and punitive damages are typically awarded at the same time by the same decisionmaker, they serve distinct purposes. The former are intended to redress the concrete loss that the plaintiff has suffered by reason of the defendant's wrongful conduct. The latter, which have been described as 'quasi-criminal,' operate as 'private fines' intended to punish the defendant and to deter future wrongdoing. A jury's assessment of the extent of a plaintiff's injuries is essentially a factual determination, whereas its imposition of punitive damages is an expression of its moral condemnation' Cooper Indus. v. Leatherman Tool, 532 U.S. 424, 432, 121 S.Ct. 1678, 1683 (2001) (per Stephens, J.). putative damages. Damages that are alleged; claimed but unproved damages.

real damages. See actual damages.

reliance damages. (1938) Damages awarded for losses incurred by the plaintiff in reliance on the contract. • Reliance damages restore the plaintiff to the economic condition the plaintiff enjoyed before the contract was formed. [Cases: Damages \(\supseteq\) 22.]

'reliance damages are . . . 'real' losses in a much more tangible way than losses of expectations. The distinction is nicely illustrated by McRae v. Commonwealth Disposals Commission . . . in this case, . . . the defendants sold a shipwrecked tanker which they advertised as lying on a certain reef in the Pacific, and the plaintiffs spent a substantial sum of money equipping a salvage expedition to go in search of the ship. The ship was wholly non-existent, and the plaintiffs were held entitled to damages. Here it was clear that the plaintiffs had incurred substantial expenses — real losses — in reliance on the contract, and the Australian High Court awarded these reliance damages to the plaintiffs." P.S. Atiyah, An Introduction to the Law of Contract 311 (3d ed. 1981).

reliance-loss damages. A reimbursement for losses or expenses that the plaintiff suffers in reliance on the defendant's contractual promise that has been breached.

remote damages. See speculative damages (1).

rescissionary damages (ri-sis-a-rey or ri-siz-). Damages awarded to restore a plaintiff to the position occupied before the defendant's wrongful acts.

restitution damages. (1939) Damages awarded to a plaintiff when the defendant has been unjustly enriched at the plaintiff's expense.

'suppose A pays money to B in pursuance of a contract which turns out to be void, or perhaps is subsequently frustrated: clearly A cannot sue B for breach of contract. B's promise to perform his side of the bargain is vitiated by the mistake or the frustrating event, so A's lost expectations are losses which he must just put up with. But his claim to repayment of the money is evidently much stronger: for this money is a tangible loss to A and a tangible enrichment to B. So in this sort of case the money will often be recoverable, though English lawyers think of this as a quasi-contractual claim to recover money as on a total failure of consideration, and not a contractual claim to restitution damages. There is, however, no strong reason for refusing to call this a contractual action, any more than there is a reason for calling an action for damages quasi-contractual." P.S. Atiyah, An Introduction to the Law of Contract 312 (3d ed. 1981).

severance damages. In a condemnation case, damages awarded to a property owner for diminution in the fair market value of land as a result of severance from the land of the property actually condemned; compensation awarded to a landowner for the loss in value of the tract that remains after a partial taking of the land. [Cases: Eminent Domain \(\supseteq\) 95, 96, 138] special damages. Damages that are alleged to have been sustained in the circumstances of a particular wrong. • To be awardable, special damages must be specifically claimed and proved. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 9(g). — Often shortened to specials. — Also termed particular damages. [Cases: Damages \(\supseteq\) 5.]

speculative damages. (1804) 1. Damages that are so uncertain to occur that they will not be awarded. — Also termed remote damages. 2. See punitive damages.

statutory damages. Damages provided by statute (such as a wrongful death and survival statute), as distinguished from damages provided under the common law. [Cases: Death \(\supseteq\) 80.]

stipulated damages. See liquidated damages.

substantial damages. A considerable sum awarded to compensate for a significant loss or injury. Cf. nominal damages. [Cases: Damages \(\supseteq\) 6, 10.]

'substantial damages . . . are the result of an effort at measured compensation, and are to be contrasted with nominal damages which are in no sense compensatory, tangible damages. See actual damages.

temporary damages. Damages allowed for an intermittent or occasional wrong, such as a real-property injury whose cause can be removed or abated. [Cases: Damages $= 39, 109.]

treble damages. (18c) Damages that, by statute, are three times the amount of actual damages that the fact-finder determines is owed. — Also termed triple damages. [Cases: Damages $= 227.]

uncertain damages. Damages that are not clearly the result of a wrong. • The rule against allowing recovery of uncertain damages refers to these damages, not damages that are uncertain only in amount. [Cases: Damages $= 6.]

unliquidated damages. (18c) Damages that cannot be determined by a fixed formula and must be established by a judge or jury. Cf. liquidated damages. [Cases: Damages $= 6, 194.]

damages, mitigation of. See mitigation of damages doctrine.

damages clause. See surface-damage clause.

damages for detention. See noncontract demurrage under demurrage.

da. dame. 1. The legal title of the wife of a knight or baronet. 2. The female equivalent of a knight. 3. A form of address to a woman of high rank. 4. A matron. 5. Slang. A woman. — Also termed (in senses 1 & 2) domina. 6. A person condemned, esp. in a capital case. 7. Hist. Something prohibited by law; something that is unlawful, as in damnatus coitus ("an injurious inheritance"). 8. Pl. damna. 9. Slang. Something that causes damage. • The principle that an insurer may deny (esp. liability) coverage when an insured engages in behavior that is so ill-conceived that the insurer should not be compelled to bear the loss resulting from the insured's actions. — Also termed damned fool doctrine.

damnification. n. Something that causes damage/damnification in the form of a penalty.

damnify, vb. To cause loss or damage to; to injure (the surety was damnified by the judgment obtained against it).

damn in-juria actio (dam-ni in-joor-ee-ee ak-shee-oh). [Latin "an action for wrongful damage"] See actio damn iniuria under actio.

damnosa aut lucrosa (dam-noh sa awt loo-kroh-sa). [Latin "an injurious inheritance"] 1. Roman & civil law. An inheritance more onerous than beneficial, esp. because it is burdened with debt. 2. English law. A bankrupt debtor's property that creditors will disclaim under the bankruptcy laws because debt on the property will exceed revenues. 3. Generally, anything that is acquired but turns out to be disadvantageous. — Also spelled damnosa haereditas.

damnous (dam-nas), adj. Causing loss or damage.

damnno vitando. 1. See certans de damno vitando. 2. See in damno vitando.

damnum (dam-nam), n. [Latin (1828) A loss; damage suffered. See ad damnum. Pl. damna. 2. A bankrupt's property that creditors will disclaim under the bankruptcy laws. 3. A bankrupt's property that creditors will disclaim under the bankruptcy laws because debt on the property will exceed revenues.] See Damnum sine injuria.

damnum emergens (dam-nam i-mar-jenz). [Latin "damage arising"] Hist. An actual realized loss (such as a decline in the value of property) as opposed to an expected future loss (such as loss of profit). — Consequential loss.

These kinds of damage are distinguished by the commentators as damnum emergens and lucrum cessans, which may be rendered "positive damage" and "loss of profit." The first may be immediate (e.g., my slave is killed or has lost an eye), or consequential (I have lost his services — I have incurred medical expenses — I was one of a troupe of singers and the whole troupe is less valuable in consequence of his death or injury). Where there is no pecuniary loss there is no action. An action does not lie ... for striking a slave if his value to me has not been depreciated by the blow nor for trespass to land unattended by damage." R.W. Lee, The Elements of Roman Law 354 (4th ed. 1956).

damnum et interesse (dam-nam et in-tar-es-ee). [Latin] Scots law. The loss and damage sustained.

"Damnum et interesse. — The loss and interest; or, as the words may also be translated, damage, and its issues or consequences. The words are used by Erskine in treating of the liability of cautioners who become bound to see a specific act performed. Failing performance, the cautioners are liable to the creditors for the damnum et interesse — that is, the actual and consequential damage suffered

damnum fatale (dam-nam fā-tay-lee). [Latin "unavoidable damage"] Roman law. Damage caused by an unavoidable circumstance, such as a storm or a shipwreck, for which bailees or others will not be held liable.

• But an exception was made for damages resulting from theft.

"The liability of innkeepers, carriers, and stable keepers, at Roman law, was provided for in the praetor's edict. They were under an obligation to restore all goods which the guests or passengers had with them, or left in their charge, and they could not defend themselves by showing the utmost degree of diligence. Unavoidable accident, which no human prudence would avert or provide against, *damnum fatale, or overwhelming force, via maior, were, however, an adequate defense.... It was particularly noted that theft by a third person would not be permitted as a defense and the reason assigned was the fact that travelers have scarcely any chance to protect themselves against collusion between the innkeeper and the thief." Max Radin, Handbook of Roman Law 254 (1927).

damnum infectum (dam-nam in-fek-tom). [Latin "damage not done"] Roman law. Loss not yet suffered but threatened or apprehended, as when a neighbor's building is likely to collapse onto one's property.

damnum injuria datum (dam-nam in-joor-ee-a day-tom). [Latin "damage causing injury"] Roman law. Willful or negligent damage to corporeal property; damage for which compensation was given under the Aquilian law. *In this phrase, the word *damnum refers to economic loss, not the physical damage (if any). See actio legis Aquilae under ACTIO.

damnum sine injuria (dam-nam si-nee-in-joor-ee-a or sin-ay). [Latin "damage without wrongful act"] Loss or harm that is incurred from something other than a wrongful act and occasions no legal remedy.

• An example is a loss from fair trade competition. — Also termed *damnum absque injuria; *absque injuria, *damnum; *absque injuria. Cf. INJURIA ABSQUE DAMNO. [Cases: Damages ≤3.]

"There are cases in which the law will suffer a man knowingly and wilfully to inflict harm upon another, and will not hold him accountable for it. Harm of this description — mischief that is not wrongful because it does not fulfil even the material conditions of responsibility — is called *damnum sine injuria, the term injuria being here used in its true sense of an act contrary to law (injust), not in its modern and corrupt sense of harm." John Salmond, Jurisprudence 372-73 (Glaveville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

"There are many forms of harm of which the law takes no account. Damage so done and suffered is called *damnum sine injuria, and the reasons for its permission by the law are various and not capable of exhaustive statement. For example, the harm done may be caused by some person who is merely exercising his own rights; as in the case of the loss inflicted on individual traders by competition in trade, or where the damage is done by a man acting under necessity to prevent a greater evil." R.F.V. Heuston, Salmond on the Law of Torts 13 (17th ed. 1977).

Dan (dan), n. [Fr. Latin dominus] Archaic. In England, an honorable title for a man; the English equivalent to the Spanish Don. *The term was replaced by the terms Master, Mister, and Sir.

D&O liability insurance. See directors' and officers' liability insurance under INSURANCE.

danelaw (dayn-law). Hist. 1. A system of rules, introduced by the Danes during their invasions of England primarily in the ninth century and maintained principally in the midland and eastern counties where the invasions occurred. *Danelaw was the prevailing law in these regions from the reign of King Edgar to Edward the Confessor, who compiled a uniform law that included some Danelaw components. 2. The counties in England where the Danish law was enforced primarily in the ninth and tenth centuries — Also termed danelage; lex Danorum; denelage.

"The Danish invasions of the ninth century subjected the eastern parts of the island to new Scandinavian influences. Where the Danes conquered, their 'Danelaw' prevailed. The very word 'law' is believed to have been given to the English language by the Danes." J.H. Baker, An Introduction to English Legal History 3 (3d ed. 1990).

danger. (13c) 1. Peril; exposure to harm, loss, pain, or other negative result. 2. A cause of peril; a menace.

apparent danger. (16c) 1. Obvious danger; real danger. — Also termed patent danger. 2. Criminal law. The perceived danger in one person's actions toward another, as a result of which it seems necessary for the threatened person to use force in self-defense. See SELF-DEFENSE. [Cases: Assault and Battery ≤78; Homicide ≤787.]

deterrent danger. (1959) An obvious danger that an occupier of land creates to discourage trespassers, such as a barbed-wire fence or spikes on the top of a wall.

imminent danger. (16c) 1. An immediate, real threat to one's safety that justifies the use of force in self-defense. 2. Criminal law. The danger resulting from an immediate threatened injury sufficient to cause a reasonable and prudent person to defend himself or herself. [Cases: Assault and Battery ≤78; Homicide ≤789.]

patent danger. See apparent danger (I).

retributive danger. A concealed danger that an occupier of land creates to injure trespassers. *A retributive danger is lawful only to the extent that it could be justified if the occupier had inflicted the injury personally or directly to the trespasser. Thus, a spring gun or a land mine is an unlawful means of defending land against a trespasser.

seeming danger. Danger that a reasonable person would perceive to be real, even if it is not.

unavoidable danger. (16c) 1. Inescapable danger. 2. A danger that is unavoidable, esp. by a person operating a vessel.

danger-creation doctrine. (2000) The theory that if a state's affirmative conduct places a person in jeopardy, then the state may be liable for the harm inflicted on that person by a third party. • This is an exception to the general principle that the state is not liable for an injury that a third party inflicts on a member of the public. — Also termed danger-creation exception. Cf. special-relationship doctrine. [Cases: States C=112.2(1).]

danger-invites-rescue doctrine. See rescue doctrine. danger of navigation. See peril of the sea.
danger of river. See peril of the sea.
danger of the sea. See peril of the sea.
dangerous, adj. (15c) 1. (Of a condition, situation, etc.) perilous; hazardous; unsafe . 2. (Of a person, an object, etc.) likely to cause serious bodily harm  . imminently dangerous. (1834) (Of a person, behavior, activity, or thing) reasonably certain to place life and limb in peril. • This term is relevant in several legal contexts. For example, if a mental condition renders a person imminently dangerous to self or others, he or she may be committed to a mental hospital. And the imminently dangerous behavior of pointing a gun at someone's head could subject the actor to criminal and tort liability. Further, the manufacturer of an imminently dangerous product may be held to a strict-liability standard in tort. [Cases: Mental Health C=36; Products Liability C=8, 21.]

inherently dangerous. (1887) (Of an activity or thing) requiring special precautions at all times to avoid injury; dangerous per se. See dangerous instrumentality; inherently dangerous activity.

darrein continuance (dar-ayn kan-tin-yoo-ants), n. [fr. French dernier continuance "the last continuance"] Hist. Every plea of a new matter after the last entry of a plea on the record. • Every entry of a pleading after the first pleading on the record was called a continuance. — Also spelled dareyne continuance.
data protection. Any method of securing information. A compilation of information arranged in a systematic way and offering a means of finding specific elements it contains, often today by electronic means. ● Unless the information itself is original, a database is not protected by U.S. copyright law. Elsewhere, it may be protected as a distinct class of "literary works," or it may be the subject of sui generis intellectual-property laws. See SWEAT-OF-THE-BROW DOCTRINE. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property ⊁12(3).

date. 1. The day when an event happened or will happen <date of trial>. 2. A period of time in general <at a later date>. 3. An appointment at a specified time <no dates are available>.

answer date. See answer day under Day.

appearance date. See answer day under Day.

cutoff date. A deadline; esp., in the sale of a note or other interest-paying asset, the last date on which the seller is entitled to any interest due on the note or asset.

date of bankruptcy. (1809) Bankruptcy. The date when a court declares a person to be bankrupt; the date of bankruptcy adjudication. ● This date may coincide with the voluntary-filing date. [Cases: Bankruptcy ⊁2202.]

date of clearavage. Bankruptcy. The filing date of a voluntary-bankruptcy petition. ● With a few exceptions, only the debts existing at this time are dischargeable.

date of injury. (1831) Torts. The inception date of an injury; the date of an accident causing an injury.

date of invention. Patents. For purposes of a patent application, the date when the creation was reduced to practice. ● If the invention has not been built, the date of invention is the date when the patent application is filed, since that is a constructive reduction to practice. [Cases: Patents ⊁90(5).]

date of issue. 1. Commercial law. An arbitrary date (for notes, bonds, and other documents in a series) fixed as the beginning of the term for which they run; the date that a stock or bond bears its face, not the date on which it is actually signed, delivered, or put into circulation. ● When a bond is delivered to a purchaser, it is considered "issued." But this concept is distinguishable from the "date of issue," which remains fixed, regardless of the date of sale or delivery. 2. Insurance. The date specified in the policy as the "date of issue," not the date on which the policy is executed or delivered, and regardless of other dates that may be specified in the policy or elsewhere, such as the date that the policy is to "take effect." [Cases: Insurance ⊁3125.]

date of maturity. Commercial law. The date when a debt falls due, such as a debt on a promissory note or bond. — Also termed maturity date. [Cases: Bills and Notes ⊁129.] date of record. See record date (1).

declaration date. Corporations. The date when corporate directors declare a dividend. Cf. dividend date; ex-dividend date. [Cases: Corporations ⊁155(4).] dividend date. See dividend date.

effective filing date. Patents. The date that a patent application is considered to have been filed. ● The actual filing date may be later, as for a continuing application. But under the doctrine of continuity, the child application is usu. entitled to the filing date of the parent application to prove priority. — Also termed parent filing date. See Doctrine of Continuity. [Cases: Patents ⊁110.]

filing date. 1. Generally, the date when any document is delivered to the appropriate authority. 2. Patents. The date when a patent application is filed. ● The filing date closes the door on prior art; starts the clock on the period of eligibility to file in other countries; sets the priority date for public use, disclosure, or sale; and (absent other evidence) establishes the date of constructive reduction to practice. [Cases: Patents ⊁90(5).] 3. Trademarks. The date when a trademark application is filed. [Cases: Trademarks ⊁1367.]

parent filing date. See effective filing date.

payable date. Corporations. The official date on which shareholder dividends or distributions become payable. — Also termed record date.

payment date. Corporations. The date on which stock dividends or interest checks are paid to shareholders.

priority date. Patents. The date that will determine which applicant will get a patent in an interference proceeding. ● The priority date is also the cut-off date for prior art. In the United States the priority date is the date of invention; in the rest of the world it is the date the patent application was filed. Cf. First-To-File, First-To-Invent. [Cases: Patents ⊁90(1)]. record date. Corporations. 1. The date on which a stockholder must own shares to be entitled to vote or receive a dividend. — Also termed date of record. See ex-dividend date. 2. See payable date. [Cases: Corporations ⊁155(2), 155(4), 194, 197.]

settlement date. Securities. 1. The date on which an investor must pay the broker for securities purchased. 2. The date on which a seller must deliver negotiable certificates for securities sold. 3. The date on which a real-estate purchaser pays for and takes title to the

submission date. 1. The date that a case is to be submitted to a court for determination. 2. The date on which an investor must pay the broker for securities purchased. 3. The date on which a seller must deliver negotiable certificates for securities sold.

date certain. A fixed or appointed day; a specified day, esp. a date fixed by an instrument such as a deed. Cf. TIME CERTAIN (1). — Also termed (in French law) date certaine (dat sair-tayn).

date of record. See record date under DATE.

date rape. See rape.

datio (day-shoh-oh), n. [fr. Latin dare “to give”] Roman law. 1. An act of giving, as in datio in solutum (“giving in payment”). 2. An appointment, as in datio in solutum (“appointment of a guardian”). Pl. dationes (day-shee-oh-jeez).

datio in solutum (day-shoh-oh in soh-lyoo-tom). Roman law. The discharging of an obligation by the giving and acceptance of something other than the thing due.

dation (day-shan), n. [fr. Latin dare “to give”] Civil law. A grant of something the recipient is actually entitled to, such as an office.

datio en paiement (day-shan in pay-mont or da-syon ahn pay-mon). n. [French “a giving in payment”] Civil law. 1. An exchange of something of value to satisfy a debt. See ACCORD AND SATISFACTION. [Cases: Accord and Satisfaction ☞13.] 2. Louisiana law. A contract in which the obligor gives a thing to the obligee, who accepts it in payment of a debt. La. Civ. Code art. 2655. • Datation en paiement requires court approval after petition and notice. 3. A method of satisfying a mortgage debt by transferring the mortgaged property when the mortgage exceeds the property’s value and the mortgage-holder is willing to accept the property in satisfaction of the debt. [Cases: Mortgages ☞304.]

dative (day-tiv), n. [fr. French datif “of giving”] 1. Roman & civil law. An appointment made by judicial or magisterial authority; esp., something granted that is not provided by law or a will. • In Scotland, an executor-dative is a court-appointed executor. 2. Hist. Something that can be given or retracted at will, such as an appointment to a nonperpetual office. — Also spelled datatif.

dative curatorship. See dative tutorship under TUTORSHIP.

dative tutorship. See TUTORSHIP.

datus bonis (day-tas boh-nis). [Latin] Scots law. (Of a person) appointed to manage an estate.

Daubert hearing (dah-bart or doh behr). A hearing conducted by federal district courts, usu. before trial, to determine whether proposed expert testimony meets the federal requirements for relevance and reliability, as clarified by the Supreme Court in Daubert v. Merrell Dow Pharms., Inc., 509 U.S. 579, 113 S.Ct. 2786 (1993). [Cases: Criminal Law ☞472, 481, 486; Evidence ☞508, 546, 555.]

Daubert test. (1993) Evidence. A method that federal district courts use to determine whether expert testimony is admissible under Federal Rule of Evidence 702, which generally requires that expert testimony consist of scientific, technical, or other specialized knowledge that will assist the fact-finder in understanding the evidence or determining a fact in issue. • In its role as “gatekeeper” of the evidence, the trial court must decide whether the proposed expert testimony meets the requirements of relevance and reliability. The court applies the test outside the jury’s presence, usu. during a pretrial Daubert hearing. At the hearing, the proponent must show that the expert’s underlying reasoning or methodology, and its application to the facts, are scientifically valid. In ruling on admissibility, the court considers a flexible list of factors, including (1) whether the theory can be or has been tested, (2) whether the theory has been subjected to peer review or publication, (3) the theory’s known or potential rate of error and whether there are standards that control its operation, and (4) the degree to which the relevant scientific community has accepted the theory. Daubert v. Merrell Dow Pharms., Inc., 509 U.S. 579, 113 S.Ct. 2786 (1993). Similar scrutiny must be applied to nontechnical expert testimony. Kumho Tire Co. v. Carmichael, 556 U.S. 137, 119 S.Ct. 1167 (1999). Variations of the Daubert test are applied in the trial courts of most states. [Cases: Criminal Law ☞472, 481, 486; Evidence ☞508, 546, 555.]

daughter-in-law. The wife of one’s son.

Davis-Bacon Act. A federal law originally enacted in 1931 to regulate the minimum-wage rates payable to employees of federal public-works projects. 40 USC A § 276a.

day. (bef. 12c) 1. Any 24-hour period; the time it takes the earth to revolve once on its axis <we have a day to prepare a mandamus petition>. [Cases: Time ☞8.] 2. The period between the rising and the setting of the sun <day or night>. — Also termed natural day. 3. Sunlight <we can see it in the day>. 4. The period when the sun is above the horizon, along with the period in the early morning and late evening when a person’s face is discernible. 5. Any specified time period, esp. as distinguished from other periods <the good old days> . — Also termed (in senses 2–4) daytime. Cf. night.

adjournment day. 1. The day on which an organization, such as a court or legislature, adjourns. 2. Hist. A later day appointed by the judges at regular sittings at nisi prius to try an issue of fact not then ready for trial. adjournment day in error. Hist. A day scheduled for completion of matters not finished on the affirmance day of the term.

affirmance day general. Hist. In the Court of Exchequer, a day appointed after the beginning of every term to affirm or reverse judgments.

answer day. (1859) Civil procedure. The last day for a defendant to file and serve a responsive pleading in a lawsuit. • Under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, a defendant generally must serve an answer (1) within 20 days after being served with the summons and complaint, or (2) if a defendant timely waives service at the plaintiff's request, within 60 days after the request for waiver was sent. Fed. R. Civ. P. 4(d), 12(a). — Also termed answer date; appearance date; appearance day.

artificial day. The period from the rising to the setting of the sun. — Also termed solar day; civil day; dies solars. astronomical day. See solar day; civil day; dies solars.

A writ directing the treasurer and barons of the Exchequer allowing certain officers (such as accountants and customs collectors) to have in their accounts the funds necessary to make certain payments.

de alode parentum (dee al-a-dee pa-ren-tam). [Law Latin] Hist. From freehold of one's parents. • De alode parentum. — Lands descending by inheritance from parents were said to be so acquired, in contradistinction to lands held in feu . . . and to those acquired by a singular title. Subsequently the phrase acquired a more comprehensive signification, as all lands were, in process of time, termed allodial, in which the holder had a right of absolute property, without rendering any service therefor, or recognizing any superior therein, and of which he had an unlimited power of disposal.” John Trayner, Trayner’s Latin Maxims 137 (4th ed. 1894).

de alto et basso (dee al-toh et bas-oh), n. [Law Latin "of high and low"] Hist. The total submission of all differences — great or small — to arbitration.

de ambitu (dee am-bi-tyoo). [Latin "of going around"] Of devious methods of securing a position, as through bribery. • Several Roman laws (such as the Lex Julia de Ambitu) dealt with these methods, such as prohibiting electoral bribery.

de ampliori gratia (dee am-pl-or-gray shcee-a), [Law Latin] Of more abundant or more full grace.

dean. 1. Eccles. law. An officer who leads a chapter, parish, or other subdivision of a diocese, usu. upon a bishop’s request or appointment.

"A dean and chapter are the council of the bishop, to assist him with their advice in affairs of religion, and also in the temporal concerns of his see . . . . All ancient deans are elected by the chapter, by congé d’eslire from the king, and letters missive of recommendation; in the same manner as bishops: but in those chapters, that were founded by Henry VII out of the spoils of the dissolved monasteries, the deanery is donative . . . . The chapter, consisting of canons or prebendaries, are sometimes appointed by the king, sometimes by the bishop, and sometimes elected by each other." 1 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 370-71 (1765).

2. In a school, college, or university, the administrative head. • In larger schools, there may be several kinds of deans, such as a dean of admissions and a dean of student affairs. Within a university, there may be deans of specific schools. [Cases: Colleges and Universities 139-47.] 3. The head or commander of a group of ten, such as ten soldiers or ten monks.

de anno bisextili (dee an-oh bis-sek-sti-li), n. [Law Latin "of the bissextile year"] Hist. A law of Henry III advising the justices of the bench that in a case requiring something to be done within a year, the leap-year day and the day before should be counted as one day.

de annua pensione (dee an-yoo-oh-pen-shnee-oh-nee), n. [Law Latin "of annual pension"] Hist. A royal writ demanding payment from an abbey or prior, of a yearly pension for the king’s chaplain named in the writ.

de annuo reditu (dee an-yoo-oh red-i-tyoo), n. [Law Latin "for a yearly rent"] Hist. A writ to recover an annuity payable in goods or money.

de apostata capiendo (dee a-pos-ta-ta kap ee-en-doh), n. [Law Latin "of the taking of an apostate"] Hist. A writ ordering a sheriff to apprehend and return to a monastery a person who had entered the monastery, professes the religious order, and then left and wandered around the country.

de arbitratione facto (dee ahr-bi-tray-shee-oh-nee fakt-toh), n. [Law Latin “of arbitration had”] Hist. A writ staying an action already settled by arbitration.

de arrestandis bonis ne dissipentur (dee ar-sahn-dis dis-pis-sien-tur), n. [Law Latin “of goods arrested lest they be dispersed”] Hist. A writ to seize goods from a party to ensure that the goods do not disappear while a lawsuit is pending.

de arrestando ipsum qui pecuniam receptit (dee ar-sahn-doh ip-so kwi-pay-koo-neen-ee-mee-reh-peh-sipit), n. [Law Latin “for the apprehension of one who took the king’s money”] Hist. A writ ordering the arrest of a person who took the king’s money for war service, and then hid to keep from serving.

de asportatis religiosorum (dee as-sor-tay-tiss ri-li-jee-eoh-sor-ee-mee), n. [Law Latin “concerning the property of religious persons carried away”] Hist. A statute of Edward I passed to curb alienation of clerical possessions, including the removal of those possessions to foreign countries.

de assisa proroganda (dee a-sih-sah pror-o-gahnda), n. [Law Latin “of the proroguing of an assize”] Hist. A writ ordering justices to postpone an assize because a party is busy in the Crown’s service.

dead. (bef. 12c) The ending of life; the cessation of all vital functions and signs. — Also termed decease; demise.

accidental death. A death that results from an unusual event, one that was not voluntary, intended, expected, or foreseeable. — Also termed death by misadventure.

brain death. (1964) The bodily condition of showing no response to external stimuli, no spontaneous movements, no breathing, no reflexes, and a flat reading (usu. for a full day) on a machine that measures the brain’s electrical activity. • In 1971, Kansas became the first state to enact a statutory definition of the term. Before that, heart transplants raised the question of when — and whether — death had occurred. Early cases dealing with this problem include a tort case (wrongful death), Tucker v. Lower, No. 2831 (Richmond, Va., L. & Eq. Ct., May 23, 1972) (jury accepted the defendants’ definition of brain death); a criminal case (vehicular homicide), People v. Flores, No. 20190 (Sonoma Co. Mun. Ct. Dec. 19, 1973), No. N746-C (Sonoma Co. Super. Ct. July 23, 1974) (defendant acquitted because no statute defined brain death); and a criminal case (murder), People v. Lyons, 15 Crim. L. Rep. 2240, No. 56072 (Alameda Co. Super. Ct. May 21, 1974) (court accepted prosecutor’s definition of brain death and convicted defendant). [Cases: Death C-1.] — Also termed legal death.

civil death. 1. Archaic. At common law, the loss of rights — such as the rights to vote, make contracts, inherit, and sue — by a person who has been outlawed or convicted of a serious crime, or who is considered to have left the temporal world for the spiritual by entering a monastery. Cf. de catallis felonum. [Cases: Convicts C-1.]

“..."In one large department of law the fiction [civil death] is elegantly maintained. A monk or nun cannot acquire or have any proprietary rights. When a man becomes ‘professed in religion,’ his heir at once inherits from him any land that he has, and, if he has made a will, it takes effect at once as though he were naturally dead.” 1 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, History of English Law 434 (2d ed. 1898).

“Civil death arises from outlawry; it seems doubtful whether there are any other circumstances to which the phrase is now applicable.” William R. Anson, Principles of the Law of Contract 193 n.(b) (Arthur L. Corbin ed., 3d Am. ed. 1919).

2. In some states, the loss of rights — such as the right to vote and hold public office — by a person serving a life sentence. Cf. civil disability under disability (3). [Cases: Officers and Public Employees C-31.] 3. The state of a corporation that has formally dissolved or become bankrupt, leaving an estate to be administered for the benefit of shareholders and creditors. — Also termed (in senses 2 & 3) legal death. [Cases: Corporations C-1617(1).]

compensable death. Workers’ compensation. A death that, because it occurred in the course of employment, entitles the employee’s heirs to compensation. [Cases: Workers’ Compensation C-408-510.]

immediate death. (16c) 1. See instantaneous death. 2. A death occurring within a short time after an injury or seizure, but not instantaneously.

“A distinction has been made between ‘instantaneous’ and ‘immediate’ death. . . . As an example of ‘immediate’ rather than ‘instantaneous’ death is the situation in which a blow on the head produces unconsciousness and renders the victim incapable of intelligent thought, speech, or action for several minutes until he dies.” 22A Am. Jur. 2d Death § 43, at 159 (1988).

instantaneous death. (16c) Death occurring in an instant or within an extremely short time after an injury or seizure. • It is a factor in determining an award of damages for the victim’s pain and suffering. — Sometimes also termed immediate death.

“Although the possibility of a death that is truly simultaneous with the injury that caused it has been denied, it has been pointed out that death may be so contemporaneous with the injury as to be instantaneous in the sense that there could be no recovery for the victim’s pain and suffering. Ordinarily, death is not regarded as instantaneous if an appreciable length of time elapsed between the injury and the death. Indeed, even where the injury causing the death is necessarily fatal and death results therefrom in a few moments, it has been held that although it would commonly be called an instantaneous death, still if the injured person survives the injury for a brief period, it may not be said that the death is instantaneous. . . . In such case it is immaterial that the period of time between the injury and death is short.” 22A Am. Jur. 2d Death § 43, at 158 (1988).

natural death. (15c) 1. Bodily death, as opposed to civil death. 2. Death from causes other than accident or violence; death from natural causes. — Also termed mors naturalis. See natural-death act. Cf. violent death.

presumptive death. (1856) Death inferred from proof of the person's long, unexplained absence, usu. after seven years. See Enoch Arden law. [Cases: Death C=::1, 2.]

simultaneous death. (1878) The death of two or more persons in the same mishap, under circumstances that make it impossible to determine who died first. See uniform simultaneous death act; common disaster; commorientes.

violent death. (16c) Death accelerated by human intervention and resulting from a sharp blow, explosion, gunfire, or the like. Cf. natural death.

dearth, contemplation of. See contemplation of death.

dearth action. See wrongful-death action.

dead by misadventure. 1. See accidental killing. 2. See accidental death under death. 3. Archaic. A defense to a murder charge on the ground that the defendant lacked the requisite mental state for murder. • The defense was abolished as redundant because the prosecution had to prove state of mind anyway as an essential element of murder.

dead case. (1907) 1. A criminal case in which the death penalty may be or has been imposed. 2. wrongful-death action.

dead certificate. (1888) An official document issued by a public registry verifying that a person has died, with information such as the date and time of death, the cause of death, and the signature of the attending or examining physician. [Cases: Health C=::398.]

dead-knell doctrine. (1972) A rule allowing an interlocutory appeal if precluding an appeal until final judgment would moot the issue on appeal and irreparably injure the appellant's rights. • Once recognized as an exception to the final-judgment rule, the doctrine was limited by the U.S. Supreme Court in Coopers v. Lybrand v. Livesay, 437 U.S. 463, 98 S.Ct. 2454 (1978). There, the Court held that the death-knell doctrine does not permit an immediate appeal of an order denying class certification. But the doctrine still applies in some contexts. For example, the doctrine allows an immediate appeal of the denial of a temporary restraining order when the lack of an appeal would leave nothing to be considered in the trial court. Woratzek v. Arizona Bd. of Executive Clemency, 117 F.3d 400 (9th Cir. 1997). — Also termed death-knell exception. Cf. final-judgment rule. [Cases: Appeal and Error C=::68, 73(2); Federal Courts C=::572.1.]

dead on the high seas act. A federal law, enacted in 1920, permitting a wrongful-death action to be filed in a U.S. district court for a death occurring on the high seas. 46 USCA app. §§ 761–67. — Abbr. DOHSA. [Cases: Death C=::7, 13.]

dead penalty. (1848) 1. Capital punishment. 2. A penalty that makes a person or entity ineligible to participate in an activity that the person or entity previously participated in. • The penalty is usu. imposed because of some type of gross misconduct. 3. See death-penalty sanction under sanction.

dead-penalty sanction. See sanction.

dead-qualified jury. See jury.

dead row. (1950) The area of a prison where those who have been sentenced to death are confined.

dead sentence. See sentence.

deadsman. An executioner; a hangman.

dead-spiral deal. A convertible security for which the conversion price depends on the market price less a percentage discount on the date of conversion. — Also termed ioxic convert.

dead statute. (1910) A law that protects the interests of a decedent's family and other dependents, who may recover in damages what they would reasonably have received from the decedent if the death had not occurred. Cf. survival statute. [Cases: Death C=::7, 10.]

dead tax. 1. See estate tax under tax. 2. See inheritance tax under tax.

dead trap. (1835) 1. A structure or situation involving an imminent risk of death. 2. A situation that, although seemingly safe, is actually quite dangerous.

dead warrant. See warrant (1).

de attornato recipiendo (dee a-tor-nay-toh ri-sip ee-en-doh), n. [Law Latin "of receipt of an attorney"] Hist. A writ requiring a court to receive and admit an attorney for a party.

de audiendo et terminando (dee aw-dee-end-doh et tar-mi-mah-nah-doh), n. [Law Latin "for hearing and determining"] Hist. A writ or commission directing certain justices to hear and resolve particular cases resulting from a riot, including those involving heinous misdemeanors, breaches of the peace, and trespass. Cf. commission of oyer and terminer.

de averiis capitis in withernamium (dee a-veer-is kap-tis in with-ahr-nay-mee-ahm), n. [Law Latin "for taking cattle in withernam""] Hist. A writ directing a sheriff to detain a defendant's cattle because the defendant had unlawfully taken the plaintiff's cattle out of... the county. • The defendant’s cattle would be detained until the sheriff could replevy the plaintiff’s cattle.

de averiis replegiandis (dee a-veer-ee-is ri-plee-jean-dis), n. [Law Latin “of repleving beasts”] Hist. A writ ordering a sheriff to replevy someone’s beasts or chattels that had been unlawfully taken and detained. • This is the old writ of reprieve.

debarment, n. The act of precluding someone from having or doing something; exclusion or hindrance. — debar, vb.

debasement. (17c) 1. The act of reducing the value, quality, or purity of something; esp., the act of lowering the value of coins by either reducing the weight of gold and silver in the coins or increasing the coins’ alloy amounts. 2. Degradation. 3. The state of being degraded.

debate. Parliamentary law. Formal consideration of a motion’s merits in the form of speeches for, against, or otherwise addressing the motion. See CONSIDERATION (2). — debatable, adj. — debatability, n. controlled debate. Debate in which designated managers, usu. a partisan leader, lead each side and allot time for speeches. — Also termed controlled time.

extended debate. Debate that continues beyond an otherwise applicable limit. See EXTEND DEBATE.

floor debate. (1884) The legislative process of debating a proposed bill before an entire chamber rather than before a committee. [Cases: States C=32.]

pro–con debate. A debate that adheres to the parliamentary principle that speeches should alternate between opposing viewpoints. • Sometimes those seeking the floor on one side outnumber those on the other side, in which case the chair may allow two (or more) speeches in a row on the same side of the question.

debauch (di-bawch), vb. 1. Archaic. To draw (a person) away from duty; to lead (a person) astray. 2. To corrupt (a person) with lewdness; to seduce (someone). 3. To mar or spoil (a person or thing).

debauchery (di-bawch-tee), n. Excessive indulgence in sensual pleasures; sexual immorality or excesses. — debauch, vb.

debellatio (deb-ay-shay-oh), [Latin] Int’l law. A means of ending a war and acquiring territory when one of the belligerent countries has been so soundly defeated that its adversary is able to decide alone the fate of the defeated country’s territory; conquest followed by annexation. — Also termed subjugation.

"[There are] three possible alternative meanings of debellatio in international law. The first is that debellatio denotes the change wrought by the conquest and total subjugation of a State together with that State’s annexation by the conqueror. The second view is that debellatio corresponds to the total defeat of an enemy State, its occupation, and the elimination of a vital component of Statehood: in this view, debellatio implies the extinction of the old State, but it leaves open the legal future of the occupied territory (annexation or the founding of one or more new States). The third view is that debellatio only describes a factual situation and that even the elimination of all the State organs combined with the occupation of the territory does not exclude the continuing existence of that State. It is mainly the second and the third meanings of debellatio which have been advocated for the situation of Germany since the end of World War II." Karl-Ulrich Meyn, “Debellatio,” in 1 Encyclopaedia of Public International Law 166 (1992).

de bene esse (dee bee-nee es ee also day ben-ay es-ay), adv. [Law Latin “of well-being”] (17c) As conditionally allowed for the present; in anticipation of a future need.

The word ‘debenture’ in its archaic sense was applied to a form given under seal as an acknowledgment for goods supplied to the Royal Household, and it was probably meant a charge on Public Funds. The term was further applied to drawback certificates issued for repayment, on the exportation of goods, of duty which had already been paid upon them, and this term is still so used by H.M. Customs. . . . The word is now, however, generally used to indicate an acknowledgment of indebtedness given under seal by an incorporated company, containing a charge on assets of the company, and carrying an agreed rate of interest until payment, but the variety of the forms which a debenture may take makes it difficult to find a good general definition in any reported case." Thomas Froude & Eric V.E. White, The Practice Relating to Debentures 1 (1935).

convertible debenture. (1908) A debenture that the holder may change or convert into some other security, such as stock. [Cases: Corporations C=470.]

convertible subordinated debenture. (1961) A debenture that is subordinate to another debt but can be converted into a different security.

sinking-fund debenture. (1893) A debenture that is secured by periodic payments into a fund established to retire long-term debt. subordinate debenture. (1929) A debenture that is subject to the prior payment of ordinary debentures and other indebtedness.

4. English law. A company’s security for a monetary loan. • The security usu. creates a charge on company stock or property. 5. A customhouse certificate providing for a refund of the duties on imported goods when the importer reexports the goods rather than selling them in the country where they were imported.

debenture bond. See debenture (3).

debenture indenture. See indenture.

debit card. A card used to pay for purchases by electronic transfer from the purchaser’s bank account. Cf. credit card.

debit card. A card used to pay for purchases by electronic transfer from the purchaser’s bank account. Cf. credit card.

debitor (deb-i-tor), n. Roman law. Someone who has a legal obligation to someone else. Cf. creditor (1). Pl. debitores.

debitorum locupletem essse (deb-i-tor-um lok-yoo-plee-tam es-ee). [Latin] Hist. That the debtor is solvent. • In assigning a debt, a creditor might sometimes warrant that the debtor had the money to pay it.

debitor non praesumitur donare (deb-i-tor non pri-zyoo-mi-tur doh-nair-ee), n. [Law Latin “a debtor is not presumed to make a gift”] Hist. The presumption that any payment from a debtor is intended to satisfy the debt, unless the disposition clearly shows the debtor’s intent to make a donation.

debit sans breve. See debet sine breve.

debitum (deb-i-tam), n. [Latin “a debt”] Roman law. Money or other thing that is actually owed, where there is both a duty and liability to repay; an actionable debt. Cf. indebitum.

debitum fructuum (deb-i-tam frak-choo-am). [Law Latin] Hist. A debt upon the fruits; that is, a debt from the fruit of the land, not from the land itself. • Tithes, for example, were usu. payable debitum fructuum.

debitum in diem (deb-i-tam in di-ee-am). [Latin “a debt to a date”] Hist. A debt payable at a future date. • The phrase appeared in reference to a debt that is due but for which the time for payment had not yet arrived. See ubi dies cessit, licet nondum venerit.

debitum in praesenti solvendum in futuro (deb-i-tam in pri-zen-ti sol-ven-dam in fyoo-o-t(y)oor-oh). [Latin] A present debt (or obligation) to be paid at a future time; a debt or obligation complete when contracted, but of which the performance cannot be required until some future period.

debitum sine breve. See debet sine breve.

debis asportatis (dee boh-nis as-par-tay-tis). See trespass de bonis asportatis under trespass.

debis non (dee boh-nis non). See administration de bonis non under administration.

debis non administratis (dee boh-nis non ad-min- a-stray-tis). [Law Latin] Hist. Of the goods not administered. • When the first administrator of an intestate estate dies or is removed, the second administrator is called an administrator bonis non, who administers the goods not administered by the previous executor.

de bonis non amovendis (dee boh-nis non ay-moh-ven-dis), n. [Latin "of goods not to be moved"] Hist. A writ directing the sheriffs of London to make sure that a defendant's goods are not removed while the defendant's writ of error on a judgment is pending.

de bonis propriis (dee boh-nis proh-pree-is), n. [Law Latin "of his own goods"] Hist. A judgment allowing execution on an administrator's individual property rather than the property of an estate, as when the administrator mismanages the estate. Cf. de bonis testatoris.

de bonis testatoris (dee boh-nis tes-toh-rih), n. [Law Latin "of the goods of the testator"] Hist. A judgment awarding execution on a testator's property, rather than the individual property of an administrator. Cf. de bonis propriis.

de bonis testatoris ac si (dee boh-nis tes-toh-rih as ak sti), [Law Latin "of the goods of the testator if he has any; and if not, from those of the executor"]). Hist. A judgment holding an executor responsible if the testator's estate is insufficient or if the executor falsifies a pleading as a release.

de bonne memoire (da bawn mem-wahr). [Law French] Of sound mind; of good memory. — Also spelled de bone memorie. See mind and memory; composit mentis.

de bono et malo (dee boh-noh et mal-oh), n. [Law Latin "for good and evil"] Hist. 1. For good and evil. — A criminal defendant indicated full submission to the jury's verdict by placing himself or herself at the jury's mercy de bono et malo. — Also termed de bien et de mal. 2. A special writ of jail delivery issued by the justices of assize to enable them to try all criminal defendants who were in jail where the court traveled. — Formerly, the judges were required to issue a separate writ for every prisoner. This was replaced by a general commission of jail delivery.

'They have . . . a commission of general gaol delivery; which empowers them to try and deliver every prisoner, who shall be in the gaol when the judges arrive at the circuit town, whenever indicted, or for whatever crime committed.

It was anciently the course to issue special writs of gaol delivery for each particular prisoner, which were called the writs de bono et malo; but these being found inconvenient and oppressive, a general commission for all the prisoners has long been established in their stead. So that, one way or other, the gaols are cleared, and all offenders tried, punished, or delivered, twice in every year: a constitution of singular use and excellence." William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 267 (1769).

debt. (13c) 1. Liability on a claim; a specific sum of money due by agreement or otherwise <the debt amounted to $2,500>. 2. The aggregate of all existing claims against a person, entity, or state <the bank denied the loan application after analyzing the applicant's outstanding debt>. 3. A nonmonetary thing that one person owes another, such as goods or services <her debt was to supply him with 20 international first-class tickets on the airline of his choice>. 4. A common-law writ by which a court adjudicates claims involving fixed sums of money <he brought suit in debt>. — Also termed (in sense 4) writ of debt. [Cases: Debt, Action of C-171.]

The action of debt lies where a party claims the recovery of a debt: that is, a liquidated or certain sum of money due him. The action is based upon contract, but the contract may be implied, either in fact or in law, as well as express; and it may be either a simple contract or a specialty. The most common instances of its use are for debts: (a) Upon unilateral contracts express or implied in fact. (b) Upon quasi-contractual obligations having the force and effect of simple contracts. (c) Upon bonds and covenants under seal. (d) Upon judgments or obligations of record. (e) Upon obligations imposed by statute." Benjamin J. Shipman, Handbook of Common-Law Pleading § 52, at 132 (Henry Winthrop Ballantine ed., 3d ed. 1923).

active debt. Civil law. A debt due to another person.

ancient debt. An ancestor's debt that an heir can be compelled to pay.

antecedent debt. 1. Contracts. An old debt that may serve as consideration for a new promise if the statute of limitations has run on the old debt. See preexisting-duty rule. [Cases: Contracts C-67.] 2. Bankruptcy. A debtor's prepetition obligation that existed before a debtor's transfer of an interest in property.

- For a transfer to be preferential, it must be for or on account of an antecedent debt. See preferential transfer. [Cases: Bankruptcy C-2612.]

bad debt. A debt that is uncollectible and that may be deductible for tax purposes. [Cases: Internal Revenue C-3420.]

bonded debt. A debt secured by a bond; a business or government debt represented by issued bonds.

community debt. A debt that is chargeable to the community of husband and wife. See community property. [Cases: Husband and Wife C-268.]

consumer debt. A debt incurred by someone primarily for a personal, family, or household purpose. [Cases: Bankruptcy C-2021.1.]

"What are 'consumer' debts? Section 101(8) defines a consumer debt as follows: 'consumer debt means debt incurred by an individual primarily for a personal, family, or household purpose.' The touchstone is the debtor's use of the money. The nature of the collateral, the business of the creditor and the form of the loan are all irrelevant. A loan of $23,000 from a Credit Union to pay for a child's education is a consumer debt, but the same loan used to finance the opening of an accounting business is not a consumer debt. This is so irrespective of the nature of the collateral put up for the debt." David G. Epstein et al., Bankruptcy § 7-45, at 579 (1993).

contingent debt. A debt that is not presently fixed but that may become fixed in the future with the occurrence of some event.

convertible debt. A debt whose security may be changed by a creditor into another form of security.

debt by simple contract. See simple-contract debt.

debtor. (13c) 1. One who owes an obligation to another, esp. an obligation to pay money. 2. Bankruptcy. A person who files a voluntary petition or against whom an involuntary petition is filed. — Also termed bankrupt. [Cases: Bankruptcy C=1221.]

"Section 101 [of the Bankruptcy Code] also introduces us to the language of modern bankruptcy practice. It tells us, for instance, that the person whom a bankruptcy case concerns is a debtor. A person or a firm in bankruptcy is no longer called a bankrupt. Although that word retains some currency among lay people, among bankruptcy lawyers it sounds old-fashioned and precious." Douglas G. Baird, Elements of Bankruptcy 6 (2001).

3. Secured transactions. A person who either (1) has a property interest — other than a security interest or other lien — in collateral, even if the person is not an obligor, or (2) is a seller of accounts, chattel paper, payment intangibles, or promissory notes. UCC § 9-102(a)(28). — Abbr. Dr. Cf. creditor. [Cases: Secured Transactions C=12, 21.]

abscinding debtor. (18c) A debtor who flees from creditors to avoid having to pay a debt. • Abscinding from a debt was formerly considered an act of bankruptcy. See ACT OF BANKRUPTCY.

absent debtor. A debtor who lacks the intent to defraud creditors but is beyond the geographic reach of ordinary service of process.

account debtor. A person obligated on an account, chattel paper, or general intangible. • The UCC exempts from the definition of account debtor a person obligated to pay a negotiable instrument, even if the instrument constitutes chattel paper. UCC § 9-102(a)(3).

common debtor. Scots law. A debtor whose property has been arrested by more than one creditor.

concealed debtor. A debtor who hides from creditors, usu. with the intent to defraud the creditors or to avoid service of process, but does not leave the community or move out of state.

joint debtor. One of two or more debtors jointly liable for the same debt.

judgment debtor. See JUDGMENT DEBTOR.

new debtor. (18c) Secured transactions. A person who becomes bound as debtor under a security agreement previously entered into by another person. UCC §§ 9-102(a)(56), 9-203(c).

solvent debtor. A debtor who owns enough property to cover all outstanding debts and against whom a creditor can enforce a judgment.

debtor-in-possession. (1806) Bankruptcy. A Chapter 11 or 12 debtor that continues to operate its business as a fiduciary to the bankruptcy estate. • With certain exceptions, the debtor-in-occupation has all the rights, powers, and duties of a Chapter 11 trustee. — Abbr. DIP. [Cases: Bankruptcy C=3622, 3672.]

debtor rehabilitation. See REHABILITATION (3).

Debtor's Act of 1869. An English statute that, among other things, (1) abolished imprisonment for debt except in certain cases, as when a debtor owed a debt to the Crown or a debtor had money but refused to pay a debt, (2) abolished arrest by mesne process, that is, by compelling the defendant to appear and give bail unless it was believed that the defendant would leave the country, (3) made it a misdemeanor to obtain credit under false pretenses or to defraud creditors, and (4) defined how warrants and judgment orders would be executed.

debtor's examination. Bankruptcy. A meeting between a debtor and his or her creditors during which the creditors ask the debtor questions designed to uncover information about the location and extent of the debtor's assets and the dischargeability of debts. • The examination may be conducted under § 343 of the Bankruptcy Code or Rule 2004 of the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy Procedure. The bankruptcy trustee may be present and preside over the initial § 343 examination, which is held shortly after the bankruptcy filing. But the party (usu. a creditor) who requests a Rule 2004 examination presides over the meeting, which can be held at any time. See 11 USCA § 343; Fed. R. Bankr. P. 2004. [Cases: Bankruptcy C=3040.1–3048.] debtor's petition. See voluntary petition under PETITION.

debtor's property. See PROPERTY OF THE DEBTOR.

debt pooling. (1957) 1. Bankruptcy. An arrangement by which a person’s debts are consolidated and creditors agree to accept lower monthly payments or to take less money. • Also termed debt consolidation; debt adjustment. 2. An arrangement under which a debtor agrees to pay (1) a sum of money periodically or otherwise to a third person who will then distribute the money among certain specified creditors in accordance with a plan, and (2) a fee to the third person for his or her services as distributor. • Debt-pooling in this manner is generally illegal if the arrangement is not made with a bank, attorney, judicial officer, retail-merchants’ association, or nonprofit organization that provides debt-counseling services.

debt ratio. (1932) A corporation’s total long-term and short-term liabilities divided by the firm’s total assets. • A low debt ratio indicates conservative financing and thus usu. an enhanced ability to borrow in the future. • Also termed debt-to-total-assets ratio.

debt retirement. (1928) Repayment of debt; retirement (3).

debt security. See SECURITY.

debt service. (1930) 1. The funds needed to meet a long-term debt’s annual interest expenses, principal payments, and sinking-fund contributions. 2. Payments due on a debt, including interest and principal.

debt-to-equity ratio. (1954) A corporation’s long-term debt divided by its owners’ equity, calculated to assess its capitalization. — Also termed debt-equity ratio; debt-to-net-worth ratio.

debt-to-total-assets ratio. See debt ratio.

deCA. abbr. DEFENSE COMMISSARY AGENCY.

de caetero (dee see-to-roh) [Latin “about the other”] Henceforth; in the future. — Also spelled de cetero.

de calceto reparando (dee kal-sa-toh rep-a-ran-doh), n. [Law Latin “for repairing a causeway”] Hist. A writ directing a sheriff to restrain residents of a place to repair a road.

decalvatio (dee-kal-vay-shee-oh). Hist. The act of cutting off a person’s hair to symbolize a total loss of honor. • Although some early legal historians interpreted this Germanic practice as scalping, a leading historian of the early 20th century insisted that it referred only to the cutting of hair. See Munroe Smith, The Development of European Law 99 (1928).

decanatus (dek-a-nay-tas), n. [Law Latin] Hist. A group of ten people; a decenary. See DECANUS.

decapitation (dee-kap-a-tay-shan). Hist. The act of cutting off a head; a beheading. • This was once a common method of capital punishment.

decapite minutis (dee kap-a-tec mi-n(y)oo-tis). [Latin “of those who have lost their status”] Roman law. A title in the Digest, referring to people who lost their civil status. See CAPITIS DEMINUTO.

decarceration. See DISIMPRISONMENT.

decastri reddendis (dee kahr-tis ri-den-dis), n. [Law Latin “for restoring charters”] Hist. A writ ordering redelivery of a charter or deed; a writ of detinue. See DETINUE.

De Catallis Felonum. Hist. A 1326 statute providing that a felon forfeited his or her personal property and also lost all rights and means of acquiring property. • This statute is one of the earliest written laws imposing civil death. Cf. civil death (1) under death.

decatallis reddendis (dee ka-tal-issi-den-dis), n. [Law Latin “of chattels to be restored”] Hist. A writ ordering a bailee to deliver chattels kept from the owner. • This was replaced by the writ of detinue. See DETINUE.

de cautione admittenda (dee kaw-shee-oh nee ad-mi-ten-do), n. [Law Latin “of security to be taken”] Hist. A writ commanding a bishop who had ordered an excommunicated person held for contempt, even though the prisoner had offered bail and promised to obey the church in the future, to take the offered security and order the prisoner’s release.

decese, n. See DEATH.

decese, vb. To die; to depart from life.

decesan, n. See DECENDANT.

decedent (di-see-dent), n. (16c) A dead person, esp. one who has died recently. • This term is little used outside law. It typically appears in legal proceedings or administrative inquiries. — Also termed deceased.

nonresident decedent. A decedent who was domiciled outside the jurisdiction in question (such as probate jurisdiction) at the time of death.

decet, n. (14c) 1. The act of intentionally giving a false impression (the juror’s deceit led the lawyer to believe that she was not biased). 2. A false statement of fact made by a person knowingly or recklessly (i.e., not caring whether it is true or false) with the intent that someone else will act upon it. See fraudulent misrepresentation under MISREPRESENTATION. [Cases: Fraud C==3.] 3. A tort arising from a false representation made knowingly or recklessly with the intent that another person should detrimentally rely on it (the new homeowner sued both the seller and the realtor for deceit after discovering termites). See FRAUD; MISREPRESENTATION. — deceit, vb.

decem tales (des-em-tay-lecc), n. [Law Latin “ten such people”] Hist. A writ directing a sheriff to summon ten people for a jury panel when a sufficient number have not already appeared.

decenary. [fr. Latin decena “a tithing”] Hist. A town or district consisting of ten freeholding families. • A freetholder of the decenary (a decennarius) was bound by frankpledge to produce any wrongdoer living in the decenary. — Also spelled (incorrectly) decenary. — Also termed decenna; tithing. Cf. FRANKPLEDGE.

"The civil division of the territory of England is into counties, of those counties into hundreds, of those hundreds into tithings or towns. Which division, as it now stands, seems to owe its original to king Alfred; who, to prevent the rapines and disorders which formerly prevailed in the realm, instituted tithings; so called from the Saxon, because ten freetholders, with their families, composed one. These all dwelt together, and were sureties or free pledges to the king for the good behavior of each other; and, if any offence was committed in their district, they were bound to have the offender forthcoming. And therefore anciently no man was suffered to abide in England above forty days, unless he were enrolled in some tithing or decenary." 1 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 110 (1765).

decency. The state of being proper, as in speech or dress; the quality of being seemly.

decenna (di-sen-ə), n. [fr. Latin decem “ten”] See DECENCY.

decennarius (des-a-nair-ee-as), n. [Law Latin “a deciner”] One of ten families of freetholders comprising a decenary. See DECENARY.

decennary. See DECENARY.

deceitful act. (1939) As defined by the Federal Trade Commission and most state statutes, conduct that is likely to deceive a consumer acting reasonably under similar circumstances. — Also termed deceptive practice; deceptive sales practice. [Cases: Consumer Protection C 14; Antitrust and Trade Regulation C 136.]

decent advertising. See FALSE ADVERTISING.

decptive practice. See DECEPTIVE ACT.

decptive warranty. See WARRANTY (2).

decern (di-sərn), vb. Scots law. To decree; to give final judgment.

"Before the judgment or interlocutor of any court in Scotland can be extracted, to the effect of warranting execution, it must import a decree. Hence, all extractable judgments close with the word ‘decern.’" William Bell, Bell’s Dictionary and Digest of the Law of Scotland 287 (George Watson ed., 7th ed. 1890).

decertando (dee sar-shē-a-ran-doh), n. [Law Latin “about certification”] A writ ordering a sheriff to certify a fact.

decessus (di-ses-əs), n. [fr. Latin decedere “to depart”] 1. Roman law. A death. 2. A departure. • This term has been used in both the civil and common law, esp. in reference to the desertion of a ground in a previous pleading in favor of another. See DEPARTURE.

decet. See DE CAETERO.

dechamperia (dee kam-par-shē-a), n. [Law Latin “about champerty”] Hist. A writ ordering justices of the bench to enforce the champerty laws. See CHAMPERTO; CHAMPERTY.

dechimino (dee kim-ə-noh), n. [Law Latin “writ of way”] Hist. A writ to enforce a right-of-way.

decibaria utendis (dee si-bair-ee-əs yoo-o-ten-diis), n. [Law Latin “of victuals to be used”] Hist. The statute of 10 Edw. 3 ch. 3 restraining entertainment expenses. • This was one of several statutes limiting luxury spending.

decies tantum (desh-ee-ez oor deesh-ee-ez tan-tam), n. [Law Latin “ten times as much”] Hist. A writ ordering a juror who accepted a bribe for a verdict to pay ten times the bribery amount, half to the suing party and half to the Crown.

"Decies tantum is a writ that lies where a juror in any inquest takes money of the one part or other, to give his verdict; then he shall pay ten times as much as he hath received: and every one that will sue may have this action, and shall have the one half, and the king the other .... And the same law is of all other actions popular, where one part is to the king, the other to the party that sues. Also the embracers, who procure such inquests, shall be punished in the same manner, and they shall have imprisonment a year. But no justice shall inquire thereof ex officio, but only at the suit of the party." Termes de la Ley 146 (1st Am. ed. 1812).

decima (des-a-mee), n. [fr. Latin decem “ten”] Eccles. law. 1. The tenth part of the annual profits of a benefice originally payable to the Pope, and later to the Crown by 26 Hen. 8, ch. 3.

"The tenths, or decimae, were the tenth part of the annual profit of each living ... which was also claimed by the holy see ... But this claim of the pope met with a vigorous resistance from the English parliament; and a variety of acts were passed to prevent and restrain it ... But the popish clergy, blindly devoted to the will of a foreign master, still kept it on foot; sometimes more secretly, sometimes more openly and avowedly .... And, as the clergy expressed this willingness to contribute so much of their income to the head of the church, it was thought proper (when in the same reign the papal power was abolished, and the king was declared the head of the church of England) to annex this revenue to the crown ..." 1 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 274 (1765).

2. Tithes paid to the church, often in grain or wool.

decimae garbles (des-i-mee gahr-bay-lees), [Law Latin] Hist. Eccles. law. Tithe sheaves; grain tithes. • The parish rector was entitled to each tenth sheaf of the cut grain as a tithe. decimae rекторiae (des-i-mee rek-tor-ee-ee). [Law Latin] Hist. Eccles. law. Parsonage tithes; that is, fixed tithes payable to the parson of a parish. • The right to levy such tithes could not be lost by prescription.

decimae vicariae (des-i-mee vi-kair-ee-ee). [Law Latin] Hist. Eccles. law. Vicarage tithes. • Vicars received tithes from various sources (such as from wool or eggs) according to need or custom. The right to levy them could not be lost by prescription.

decimation (des-i-may-shan). 1. A major destruction of people; a great loss of life. 2. Hist. A tithing; a payment of the tenth part. 3. Hist. A punishment, esp. by death, of every tenth person by lot. • Under Roman law, decimatio referred to the punishment by lot of every tenth soldier in a legion for mutiny or cowardice.

decision, n. (16c) 1. A judicial or agency determination after consideration of the facts and the law; esp., a ruling, order, or judgment pronounced by a court when considering or disposing of a case. See judgment (1); opinion (1). • Also termed decisional, adj.

appealable decision. (1870) A decree or order that is sufficiently final to be appealed to a higher court or to a reviewing body. • Under judicial law, an appealable decision is an order from which an appeal can be taken.

final decision. See final judgment under judgment.

interlocutory decision. See interlocutory order under order (2).

unreasonable decision. (1962) An administrative agency's decision that is so obviously wrong that there can be no difference of opinion among reasonable minds about its erroneous nature. [Cases: Administrative Law Procedure 4763.] • 2. Parliamentary law. Vote (4). 3. Parliamentary law. The chair's ruling on a point of order. See appeal from the decision of the chair under appeal.

decisional law. See caselaw.

decision-making responsibility. The authority to come to a binding resolution of an issue. • For example, in child-rearing, decision-making responsibility involves the authority to make significant decisions on a child's behalf, including decisions about education, religious training, and healthcare.

decision on the merits. See judgment on the merits under judgment.

decisive oath. See oath.

decisory oath. See decisive oath under oath.

Decker test. See subject-matter test.

declarant (di-klair-ant), n. (17c) 1. One who has made a statement <in accordance with the rules of evidence, the statement was offered to prove the declarant's state of mind>. 2. One who has signed a declaration, esp. one stating an intent to become a U.S. citizen <the declarant grew up in Italy>. • declarant, adj.

declaration, n. (15c) 1. A formal statement, proclamation, or announcement, esp. one embodied in an instrument. Cf. affidavit.

deathbed declaration. See dying declaration.

declaration against interest. (1940) A statement by a person who is not a party to a suit and is not available to testify at trial, discussing a matter that is within the declarant's personal knowledge and is adverse to the declarant's interest. • Such a statement is admissible into evidence as an exception to the hearsay rule. Fed. R. Evid. 804(b)(3). Also termed self-serving declaration. See admission against interest under admission (1). [Cases: Criminal Law 417(15); Evidence 272.]

declaration of pain. (1891) A person's exclamation of present pain, which operates as an exception to the hearsay rule. Fed. R. Evid. 803(3). [Cases: Criminal Law 419(2.20); Evidence 268.]

declaration of state of mind. (1843) A person's state-of-mind statement that operates as an exception to the hearsay rule. Fed. R. Evid. 803(3). [Cases: Criminal Law 419(2.20); Evidence 268.]

dying declaration. (18c) A statement by a person who believes that death is imminent, relating to the cause or circumstances of the person's impending death. • The statement is admissible in evidence as an exception to the hearsay rule. Also termed deathbed declaration; ante mortem statement. [Cases: Evidence 275.5; Homicide 1075.]

"[A] rule peculiar to criminal cases is the exception to the rule respecting hearsay evidence which renders dying declarations as to the cause of death admissible in trials for murder or manslaughter. . . . The earliest emphatic statement of it . . . is to be found in Woodcock's case, decided in 1789. . . . This case refers to a decision in 1720. . . . and to the case of R. v Reason and Tranter, decided in 1722. That case, however, says nothing as to any limitation on the rule. A series of cases from 1678 to 1765 show that during that period declarations of deceased persons as to the cause of their death were admitted even though the declarants had hopes of recovery when they were made." 1 James Fitzjames Stephen, A History of the Criminal Law of England 447–48 (1883).

self-disserving declaration. See declaration against interest.

self-serving declaration. (1881) An out-of-court statement made to benefit one's own interest. [Cases: Criminal Law 413; Evidence 271.]

7. Common-law pleading. The plaintiff's first pleading in a civil action. • It is an amplification of the original writ on which the action is founded, with the additional circumstances of the time and place of injury. In a real action, the declaration is called a count. Today the equivalent term in English law is statement of claim; in most American jurisdictions, it is called a petition or complaint. • Also termed narration. See count (2), (3). Cf. PLEA (2). [Cases: Pleading 41.]

"The declaration is a statement of all material facts constituting the plaintiff's cause of action in a methodical and legal form. It consists of the following parts: (a) Statement of title of court. (b) Statement of venue in the margin. (c) The commencement, (d) The body, or statement of the cause of action. (e) The conclusion." Benjamin J. Shipman, Handbook of Common-Law Pleading § 76, at 192 (Henry Winthrop Ballantine ed., 3d ed. 1923).

declaration in chief. A declaration for the principal cause of action.

8. A formal, written statement — resembling an affidavit but not notarized or sworn to — that attests, under penalty of perjury, to facts known by the declarant. • Such a declaration, if properly prepared, is admissible in federal court with the same effect as an affidavit, 28 USCA § 1746. — Also termed declaration under penalty of perjury; unsworn declaration under penalty of perjury. Cf. AFFIDAVIT; sworn statement under statement. 9. Int'l law. An oral or written statement, unilaterally made, by which a state expresses its will, intent, or opinion when acting in the field of international relations. 10. See declaratory judgment under JUDGMENT. 11. Declaration of Rights. — declare, vb. — declaratory, adj.

declaration date. See DATE.

declaration of a desire for a natural death. See living will.

declaration of alienage. See declaration (1).

declaration of estimated tax. (1946) A required IRS filing by certain individuals and businesses of current estimated tax owed, accompanied by periodic payments of that amount. • The requirement ensures current collection of taxes from taxpayers (such as self-employed persons) whose incomes are not fully taxed by payroll withholding. IRC (26 USCA) §§ 6315, 6654. [Cases: Internal Revenue 4832, 5219.40.]

declaration of incontestability. Trademarks. A sworn statement submitted by the owner of a trademark after five years of registration, averring that the mark has been in continuous use in commerce for at least five consecutive years since registration, that the mark has not become generic, that there has been no final adverse decision to ownership in the mark, and that there is no pending proceeding in the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office or courts involving the mark. • The statement entitles the mark to immunity from some legal challenges under § 15 of the Lanham Act. — Also termed affidavit of incontestability; affidavit under § 15; declaration under § 15; Section 15 affidavit; Section 15 declaration. [Cases: Trademarks 1352.]

Declaration of Independence. The formal proclamation of July 4, 1776, in the name of the people of the American colonies, asserting their independence from the British Crown and announcing themselves to the world as an independent nation.

declaration of legitimacy. See declaration (1).

declaration of no defenses. See waiver of defenses.
declaration of pain. See declaration (6).

Declaration of Paris. An international agreement, signed by Great Britain, France, Turkey, Sardinia, Austria, Prussia, and Russia in 1856 (at the end of the Crimean War), providing that (1) privateering is illegal, (2) with the exception of contraband, a neutral flag covers an enemy's goods, (3) with the exception of contraband, neutral goods cannot be confiscated under a hostile flag, and (4) a blockade must work to be binding. • The agreement was later adopted by most other maritime powers, except the United States and a few others.

"The Declaration of Paris is one of the greatest triumphs won by commercial interests over the strict rules of maritime warfare. Its importance resides in its first three articles. Article 4 did no more than formulate a principle acknowledged for more than a century. Construed strictly it requires an impossibility; for no blockade, however strict, can always 'prevent access to the coast of the enemy.' But it is clear that the words were meant to be understood in a reasonable sense as merely prohibitory of ineffective or 'paper' blockades. • Article 1 struck at a most objectionable practice. The current of opinion had long been running strongly against the use of privateers. . . . Article 2 . . . has provoked an enormous amount of controversy. Together with Article 3 it amounted to a new departure in the law of maritime capture. Up to 1856 the great naval powers had been divided between the old principle that the liability of goods to capture should be determined by the character of their owner, and the more modern principle . . . that the character of the ship in which the goods were laden should settle their fate." 1 R.H. Inglis Palgrave, Palgrave's Dictionary of Political Economy 520-21 (Henry Higgs ed., 2d ed. 1925).

declaratory theory. (1895) The belief that judges' decisions never make law but instead merely constitute evidence of what the law is. • This antiquated view — held by such figures as Coke and Blackstone — is no longer accepted.

There are . . . at least three good reasons why the declaratory theory should have persisted for some time after the modern English doctrine [of precedent] had begun to take shape. In the first place, it appealed to believers in the separation of powers, to whom anything in the nature of judicial legislation would have been anathema. Secondly, it concealed a fact which Bentham was anxious to expose, namely, that judge-made law is retrospective in its effect.

There are . . . at least three good reasons why the declaratory theory should have persisted for some time after the modern English doctrine [of precedent] had begun to take shape. In the first place, it appealed to believers in the separation of powers, to whom anything in the nature of judicial legislation would have been anathema. Secondly, it concealed a fact which Bentham was anxious to expose, namely, that judge-made law is retrospective in its effect.
If in December a court adjudges that someone is liable, in consequence of his conduct during the previous January, it would certainly appear to be legislating retrospectively, unless the liability is based on an earlier Act of Parliament, or unless the court is simply following a previous decision. A way of disguising the retrospective character of such a judgment would be to maintain the doctrine that the court really was doing no more than state a rule which anyone could have deduced from well-known principles or common usage, for the conduct in question would then have been prohibited by the law as it stood in January. The third reason for the persistence of the declaratory theory may be thought to justify its retention in a revised form today. When confronted with a novel point, judges always tend to speak as though the answer is guided by the common law. Rupert Cross & J.W. Harris, Precedent in English Law 30 (4th ed. 1991).

declared trust. See express trust under trust.

de clauso fructo. (dee klaw-zoh frak-toh). [Law Latin] Of a breach of close. See clausum frigat. 4. At common law, a plea to the court’s jurisdiction by reason of the law, a plea to the court’s jurisdiction by reason of the law of refusal <declination of a gift>. 3. A document filed in matters, including presentations and indictments.

de clerico admittendo. (dee kler-a-koh ad-mi-tendoh). [Law Latin “for admitting a clerk”] Hist. A writ of execution commanding a bishop to accept a nominee for a vacant benefice. • A benefice’s patron could enforce the right to fill a vacancy (the right of presentation) in the Court of Common Pleas by writ of quare impedit. — Also termed admissendo deriico; ad admittendum clericum. Cf. advowson; presentation; quare impedit.

de clerico capto per statutum mercatorum deliberando. (dee kler-a-koh kap-toh par sta-tyoo-tam mor-ka-tor-e-am di-lib-a-ran-doh). declination. (dek-le-nay-shan). (1c) 1. A deviation from proper course <declination of duty>. 2. An act of refusal <declination of a gift>. 3. A document filed by a fiduciary who chooses not to serve. 4. At common law, a plea to the court’s jurisdiction by reason of the judge’s personal interest in the lawsuit. — Also termed (esp. in sense 2) declinature.

decree, vb. Slang. To entice (a person) without force; to inveigle <the victim was decoyed out of her home> <the defendant was decoyed into the county and then served with process>. See ENTRAPMENT.

decoy letter. A letter prepared and mailed to detect a criminal who has violated the postal or revenue laws. [Cases: Postal Service C=; 31.8, 42.]

decrees. n. (14c) 1. Traditionally, a judicial decision in a court of equity, admiralty, divorce, or probate — similar to a judgment of a court of law <the judge's decree in favor of the will's beneficiary>. 2. A court's final judgment. 3. Any court order, but esp. one in a matrimonial case <divorce decree>. See JUDGMENT; ORDER (2); DECISION. [Cases: Divorce C=; 152.]

"The chief differences between decrees in equity and judgments at common law are as follows. The former are pronounced by courts of equity; the latter, by courts of law. The former result from an investigation and determination of the rights of the parties by the means provided and according to the principles recognized in equity jurisprudence; the latter result from an investigation and determination made by the more limited means and more inflexible rules of the common law. The former may be adjusted to all the varieties of interest and of circumstance, and may contain such directions as are needed to carry them into effect, both in letter and in spirit; the latter are in an invariable form, general in terms, and absolute for plaintiff or defendant. And the former often enforce rights not recognized by the common law. . . . The term 'judgment' is frequently used in a broad sense to include decrees in equity." 1 A.C. Freeman, A Treatise of the Law of Judgments § 12, at 23-24 (Edward W. Tuttle ed., 5th ed. 1925).

consent decree. (1831) A court decree that all parties agree to. — Also termed consent order. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure C=; 2397; Judgment C=; 87.]

custody decree. A decree awarding or modifying child custody. - The decree may be included in the decree for a related proceeding — such as a divorce — or it may be a separate order. [Cases: Child Custody C=; 521.]

decrees absolute. (1826) A ripened decree nisi; a court's decree that has become unconditional because the time specified in the decree nisi has passed. — Also termed ORDER ABSOLUTE; RULE ABSOLUTE.

decree pro confesso (proh kon-fes-oh). (1821) Equity practice. A decree entered in favor of the plaintiff as a result of the defendant's failure to timely respond to the allegations in the plaintiff's bill; esp., a decree entered when the defendant has defaulted by not appearing in court at the prescribed time. — Also termed decree taken pro confesso. [Cases: Equity §§ 417-420.]

"A decree pro confesso in equity is similar to a default judgment in an action at law. If a defendant in an equity suit fails to answer the plaintiff’s petition within the prescribed time period, the bill will be taken pro confesso, and a decree entered in favor of the plaintiff . . . . However, whereas a default judgment in an action at law effects an admission of pleaded facts and conclusions of law . . . a decree pro confesso in an equity action admits only the material and well pleaded facts in the petition and does not admit the legal claims upon which the plaintiff seeks relief." 27A Am. Jur. 2d Equity § 249, at 733-34 (1996).

deficiency decree. See deficiency judgment under judgment.

divorce decree. A final judgment in a suit for divorce. • A divorce decree dissolves the marriage and usu. resolves all matters concerning property and children. Generally, matters concerning children can be modified in a post-divorce action if there has been a substantial change in circumstances. [Cases: Divorce C-152.]

decreta (di-kree-ta), n. [Latin “decisions”] Roman law. Judgments of magistrates; esp., sentences pronounced by the emperor as the supreme judge. See decreetum.

"Decreta. In Roman law decisions of magistrates given after investigation of a case by cognitio . . . . and in particular, decisions of the emperor as judge of first instance after trial by cognitio, or as a judge of appeal. As the highest authority in the State the emperor could interpret the law freely and even introduce new principles. Consequently imperial decisions were authoritative interpretations of the law or even innovatory and regarded as statements binding for the future, and as such quoted by the jurists. They were not only communicated to the parties but recorded in the records of the imperial court and private persons.
decreetal (di-kree-tal), adj. Of or relating to a decree.
decretal child support. See CHILD SUPPORT.

de die in diem (dec di-e ee in di-a-nm). [Law Latin] From day to day; daily.

dedi et concessi (dec-dii et kan-sess-i). [Law Latin] I have given and conveyed. • These were the words generally used to convey a gift.

dedimus et concessimus (dec-a-mas et kan-sess-i-mas). [Law Latin] We have given and granted. • These words were used in a conveyance when there was more than one grantor or when the grant was from the Crown.

dedimus potestatem (dec-a-mas poh-tes-tay-tay-tam). [Law Latin] "we have given power". 1. A commission issuing from the court before which a case is pending, authorizing a person named in the commission to compel the attendance of certain witnesses, to take their testimony on the written interrogatories and cross-interrogatories attached to the commission, to reduce the answers to writing, and to send it sealed to the court issuing the commission. 2. In England, a chancery writ commissioning the persons named in the writ to take certain actions, including administering oaths to defendants and justices of the peace. • The writ was formerly used to commission a person to take action such as acknowledging a fine and appointing an attorney for representation in court. Before the Statute of Westminster (1285), an attorney could not appear on behalf of a party without this writ. — Also termed dedimus potestatem de attorno faciendo.

"Dedimus potestatem is a writ that lies where a man sues in the king's court, or is sued, and cannot well travel, then he shall have this writ directed to some justice, or other discreet person in the country, to give him power to admit some man for his attorney, or to levy a fine, or to take his confession, or his answer, or other examination, as the matter requires." Terms de la Ley 148 (1lst Am. ed. 1812).

dediticii (dec-dee-sh-tsh-ee-1 or dec-dee-dee-sh-shee-1). n., pl. [Latin "those who have surrendered"] Roman law. The lowest class of freemen whose members were ineligible for Roman citizenship, including enemies granted freedom in exchange for surrender, or, under the Lex Aelia Sentia, manumitted slaves convicted of a crime in a court, or branded or put in chains by their former owners. • Dediticii who were formerly slaves were not allowed to live within 100 miles of Rome. Justiniain abolished this status. — Also spelled dedititti. — Sing. dediticus, dedititius.

"Dediticii . . . were not reduced to slavery, but to a condition quite analogous. They were not allowed to make a will, or to take under one; they never obtained Roman citizenship, and they could not come within one hundred miles of the city of Rome." Andrew Stephenson, A History of Roman Law § 119, at 324 (1912).

"Slaves who before manumission had been subjected to degrading punishment (e.g. had been branded or made to fight in the arena) were given, on manumission, a special status, viz. that of enemies surrendered at discretion (dedicii). A dediticus, though free and not a slave, had none of the rights of a citizen, could never under any circumstances better his position (e.g. become a citizen), and was not allowed to live within 100 miles of Rome." R.W. Leage, Roman Private Law 67 (C.H. Ziegler ed., 2d ed. 1942).

dedition (di-dis-an), n. [fr. Latin deditio "give up"] 1. A surrender of something, such as property.

de domo reparanda (dee doh-moh rep-a ran-da). n. [Law Latin "to repair a house"] Hist. A writ ordering a cotenant to contribute to the expenses of maintaining common property.

De Donis Conditionalibus (dee doh-nis kan-dish-ee-eh-nal-ibas). An English statute, enacted in 1285, that gave rise to the ability to create a fee tail. — Often shortened to De Donis. — Sometimes written de donis conditionalibus.

"[T]he statute de donis of 13 Edw. I. . . . was intended to check the judicial construction, that had, in a great degree, discharged the conditional fee from the limitation imposed by the grant. Under that statute, fees conditional were changed into estates tail. . . ." A James Kent, Commentaries on American Law *444 (George Comstock ed., 11th ed. 1866).

"[A]fter De Donis, the formula 'to A and the heirs of his body' gave to A an estate known as an estate in fee tail. Because A had no power to transfer an estate in fee simple absolute, it became theoretically possible for persons like O to tie up the ownership of land in a single family for hundreds of years. We say theoretically possible because by 1472 a way would be found for the tenant in tail (as A was called) to transfer an estate in fee simple absolute despite De Donis." Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 29 (2d ed. 1984).

de dote assignanda (dee doh-tee as-i-g-nah-nah-da), n. [Law Latin “for assigning dower"] Hist. A writ ordering a royal escheater to provide dower to a widow of a tenant holding an estate directly from the Crown.

de dote unde nil habet (dee doh-tee an-dee nil hay-bet), n. [Law Latin “of dower whereof she has none”] A writ ordering a tenant interfering with a widow’s right to dower to provide a reasonable dower. — Also termed writ of dower. Cf. unde nihil habet.

"De dote unde nil. habet. This is a writ of right in its nature . . . . It must be brought by the widow as demandant, against the tenant of the freehold, that is, the heir or his alenee, and its effect is to enable the former to recover from the latter the seisin of a third part of the tenements in demand, to be set forth to her in severalty by metes and bounds, deductible, adj. Capable of being subtracted, esp. from taxable income. See DEDUCTION (2).

deductible, n. (1929) 1. Under an insurance policy, the portion of the loss to be borne by the insured before the insurer becomes liable for payment. Cf. SELF-INSURED RETENTION. [Cases: Insurance $2106, 2523.]

2. The insurance-policy clause specifying the amount of this portion.

deduction, n. (15c) 1. The act or process of subtracting or taking away. 2. Tax. An amount subtracted from gross income when calculating adjusted gross income, or from adjusted gross income when calculating taxable income. — Also termed tax deduction. Cf. EXEMPTION (3); TAX CREDIT. [Cases: Internal Revenue $3270-3516; Taxation $3501-3523.]

additional standard deduction. (1956) The sum of the additional amounts that a taxpayer who turns 65 or becomes blind before the close of the taxable year is entitled to deduct. [Cases: Internal Revenue $3295; Taxation $3501.]

charitable deduction. (1925) A deduction for a contribution to a charitable enterprise that has qualified for tax-exempt status in accordance with IRC (26 USCA) § 501(c)(3) and is entitled to be deducted in full by the donor from the taxable estate or from gross income. See CHARITABLE CONTRIBUTION (2); CHARITABLE ORGANIZATION. [Cases: Internal Revenue $3337; Taxation $3501.]

deduction in respect of a decedent. (1949) A deduction that accrues to the point of death but is not recognizable on the decedent’s final income-tax return because of the accounting method used, such as an accrued-interest expense of a cash-basis debtor.

itemized deduction. (1943) An expense (such as a medical expense, home-mortgage interest, or a charitable contribution) that can be subtracted from adjusted gross income to determine taxable income.

marital deduction. (1949) A federal tax deduction allowed for lifetime and testamentary transfers from one spouse to another. IRC (26 USCA) §§ 2056, 2523. [Cases: Internal Revenue $4169.]

miscellaneous itemized deduction. (1955) Generally, an itemized deduction of job or investment expenses; a deduction other than those allowable in computing adjusted gross income, those enumerated in IRC (26 USCA) § 67(b), and personal exemptions. • This type of deduction is allowed only to an itemizing taxpayer whose total miscellaneous itemized deductions exceed a statutory percentage of adjusted gross income.

standard deduction. (1944) A specified dollar amount that a taxpayer can deduct from adjusted gross income, instead of itemizing deductions, to determine taxable income. [Cases: Internal Revenue $3295; Taxation $3501.]

3. The portion of a succession to which an heir is entitled before a partition. 4. The act or process of reasoning from general propositions to a specific application or conclusion. Cf. INDUCTION (2). — deduct (for senses 1–3), vb. — deduce (for sense 4), vb.

deduction for new. See NEW-FOR-OLD (1).

deduction in respect of a decedent. See DEDUCTION.

deductis debitis (di-dak-tis deb-i-tis). [Latin] Hist. The debts being deducted. • Before an estate could be ascertained, the debts had to be deducted.

de ea reita censuere (dee ee-a ree 1-ta sen-s[ss]yloo-a-reec). [Latin] Concerning that matter they have so decreed. • This phrase was used to record decrees of the Roman senate. — Abd. de r.e.i.c.

deed, n. (bef. 12c) 1. Something that is done or carried out; an act or action. 2. A written instrument by which land is conveyed. 3. At common law, any written instrument that is signed, sealed, and delivered and that conveys some interest in property. See special contract & contract under seal under CONTRACT. — Also termed (in senses 2 & 3) evidence of title. Cf. CONVEYANCE; BILL OF SALE. — deed, vb.

“A deed is a writing sealed and delivered. For either a parchment without writing be delivered as one’s deed, yet it is not his deed, though an obligation be afterwards written in it; or if it be a writing but not sealed at the time of the delivery of it as his deed, it is a scrolle and not his deed. Or if I make and seal a Deed, and the party take it without my delivery, I may plead it is not my deed.” Sir Henry Finch, Law, or a Discourse Thereof 108 (1759).

“What then is a deed? Unfortunately the word is not free from ambiguity. In the original and technical sense a deed is a written instrument under the seal of the party executing it. Because, however, of the wide use of such instruments in the conveyance of real estate, it has come to mean in popular acceptance any formal conveyance for the transfer of land or of an interest therein. The dual use of the term has crept into the language of courts and law writers, so that in the reading of cases it is difficult to determine whether the word is used in the first and original sense, or whether it connotes a formal instrument of the type ordinarily employed for the conveyance of land.” Ray Andrews Brown, The Law of Personal Property § 46, at 118-19 (2d ed. 1955).

“All deeds are documents, but not all documents are deeds. For instance, a legend chalked on a brick wall, or a writing tattooed on a sailor’s back may be documents but they are not deeds. A deed is, therefore, a particular kind of document. It must be a writing and a writing on paper or its like, e.g., vellum or parchment. Any instrument under seal is a deed if made between private persons. It must be signed, sealed, and delivered. A deed must either (a) effect the transferance of an interest, right or property, or (b) create an obligation binding on some person or persons, or (c) confirm some act whereby an interest, right, or property has already passed.” Gerald Dworkin, Odgers’ Construction of Deeds and Statutes 1 (5th ed. 1967).

absolute deed. (17c) A deed that conveys title without condition or encumbrance. — Also termed deed absolute.

bargain-and-sale deed. (1972) A deed that conveys property to a buyer for valuable consideration but that lacks any guarantee from the seller about the validity of the title. See bargain and sale. [Cases: Deeds \(\leq 22\).]

composition deed. A deed reflecting the terms of an agreement between a debtor and a creditor to discharge or adjust a debt. [Cases: Debtor and Creditor \(\leq 10\).]

counterdeed. A secret deed, executed either before a notary or under a private seal, that voids, invalidates, or alters a public deed.

deathbed deed. Rare. A deed executed by a grantor shortly before death. • The grantor need not be aware that he or she is near death when the deed is executed. [Cases: Deeds \(\leq 68(3), 70(7), 72(2)\).] deed absolute. See absolute deed.

deed in fee. (18c) A deed conveying the title to land in fee simple, usu. with covenants.

deed in lieu of foreclosure. (1934) A deed by which a borrower conveys fee-simple title to a lender in satisfaction of a mortgage debt and as a substitute for foreclosure. • This deed is often referred to simply as "deed in lieu." [Cases: Mortgages \(\leq 293\).]

deed of covenant. (17c) A deed to do something, such as a document providing for periodic payments by one party to another (usu. a charity) for tax-saving purposes. • The transferor can deduct taxes from the payment and, in some cases, the recipient can reclaim the deducted tax.

deed of distribution. A fiduciary's deed conveying a decedent's real estate.

deed of gift. (16c) A deed executed and delivered without consideration. • Also termed gratuitous deed.

deed of trust. (17c) A deed conveying title to real property to a trustee as security until the grantor repays a loan. • This type of deed resembles a mortgage. • Also termed trust deed; trust indenture; indemnity mortgage; common-law mortgage. Cf. deed of reconveyance. [Cases: Mortgages \(\leq 8\).]

deed poll. (16c) A deed made by and binding on only one party, or on two or more parties having similar interests. • It is so called because, traditionally, the parchment was "polled" (that is, shaved) so that it would be even at the top (unlike an indenture). • Also spelled deed-poll. Cf. indenture.

deed to lead uses. A common-law deed prepared before an action for a fine or common recovery to show the object of those actions.

deed without covenants. See quitclaim deed.

defeasible deed. (1802) A deed containing a condition subsequent causing title to the property to revert to the grantor or pass to a third party.

derivative deed. See secondary conveyance under conveyance.

disentailing deed. Hist. A tenant-in-tail's assurance that the estate tail will be barred and converted into an estate in fee. • The Fines and Recoveries Act (3 & 4 Will. 4 ch. 74) introduced this way of barring an entail. It authorized nearly every tenant in tail, if certain conditions were met, to dispose of the land in fee simple absolute and thus to defeat the rights of all persons claiming under the tenant.

donation deed. A deed granted by the government to a person who either satisfies the statutory conditions in a donation act or redeems a bounty-land warrant. See donation act; bounty-land warrant. [Cases: Public Lands \(\leq 42\).]

full-covenant-and-warranty deed. See warranty deed.

genral warranty deed. See warranty deed.

gift deed. (1864) A deed given for a nominal sum or for love and affection.

good deed. A deed that conveys good title as opposed to a deed that is merely good in form. • Also termed lawful deed.

grant deed. (1891) A deed containing, or having implied by law, some but not all of the usual covenants of title; esp., a deed in which the grantor warrants that he or she (1) has not previously conveyed the estate being granted, (2) has not encumbered the property except as noted in the deed, and (3) will convey to the grantee any title to the property acquired after the date of the deed.

gratuitous deed. See deed of gift.

inclusive deed. See inclusive grant under grant.

indented deed. See indenture (2).

latent deed. A deed kept in a strongbox or other secret place, usu. for 20 years or more.
lawful deed. See good deed.

mineral deed. A conveyance of an interest in the minerals in or under the land. [Cases: Mines and Minerals $\approx 55$] mortgage deed. The instrument creating a mortgage. A mortgage deed typically must contain (1) the name of the mortgagor, (2) words of grant or conveyance, (3) the name of the mortgagor, (4) a property description sufficient to identify the mortgaged premises, (5) the mortgagor’s signature, and (6) an acknowledgment. To be effective and binding, a mortgage deed must also be delivered. [Cases: Mortgages $\approx 42$] onerous deed. Scots law. A deed given in exchange for a valuable consideration, often as part of a marriage settlement.

quitclaim deed. (18c) A deed that conveys a grantor’s complete interest or claim in certain real property but that neither warrants nor professes that the title is valid. — Often shortened to quitclaim. — Also termed deed without covenants. Cf. warranty deed. [Cases: Deeds $\approx 25, 121$.]

release deed. A deed that is issued once a mortgage has been discharged, explicitly releasing and reconveying to the mortgagor the entire interest conveyed by an earlier deed of trust. — Also termed reconveyance; satisfaction; release. [Cases: Mortgages $\approx 309$.]

sheriff’s deed. A deed that gives ownership rights in property bought at a sheriff’s sale. [Cases: Deeds $\approx 303$.]

special warranty deed. (1808) 1. A deed in which the grantor covenants to defend the title against only those claims and demands of the grantor and those claiming by and under the grantor. [Cases: Covenants $\approx 48, 67$.] 2. In a few jurisdictions, a quitclaim deed. Cf. warranty deed. [Cases: Deeds $\approx 25, 121$.]

statutory deed. (1832) A warranty-deed form prescribed by state law and containing certain warranties and covenants even though they are not included in the printed form.

support deed. A deed by which a person (usu. a parent) conveys land to another (usu. a son or daughter) with the understanding that the grantee will support the grantor for life. Support deeds often result in litigation.

tax deed. A deed showing the transfer of title to real property sold for the nonpayment of taxes. See office grant under grant; tax sale under sale. Cf. tax certificate. [Cases: Taxation $\approx 308c$.]

trust deed. See deed of trust.

warranty deed. (1802) A deed containing one or more covenants of title; esp., a deed that expressly guarantees the grantor’s good, clear title and that contains covenants concerning the quality of title, including warranties of seisin, quiet enjoyment, right to convey, freedom from encumbrances, and defense of title against all claims. — Also termed general warranty deed; full-covenant-and-warranty deed. See warranty (1). Cf. quitclaim deed; special warranty deed. [Cases: Covenants $\approx 46–48, 67$.]

wild deed. (1914) A recorded deed that is not in the chain of title, usu. because a previous instrument connected to the chain of title has not been recorded.

deed box. Archaic. A box in which deeds of land title are traditionally kept. Such a box is considered an heirloom in the strict sense. See heirloom (1).

deed of agency. A revocable, voluntary trust for payment of a debt.

deed of crime. See actus reus.

deed of feoffment. See feoffment (3).

deep of inspectorship. See deed.

deed of reconveyance. See deed.

decijeone custodeiae (dee ee-jek-shih-ee-oh nee kas-toh-dee-ee). [Latin “ejectment of a ward”] Hist. A writ available to a guardian after being ejected from the ward’s land during the ward’s minority. The writ lay to recover the land or person of the ward, or both. The French equivalent was ejectment de garde.

decijeone firmae (dee ee-jek-shih-oh nee far-mee). [Latin “ejectment of farm”] Hist. A writ or action of trespass to obtain the return of lands or tenements to a lessee for a term of years that had been ousted by the lessor or by a reversioner, remainderman, or stranger. The lessee was then entitled to a writ of ejectment to recover, at first, damages for the trespass only, but later the term itself, or the remainder of it, with damages. This action is the foundation of the modern action of ejectment. See ejectment.

‘A writ then of ejectione firmae, or action of trespass in ejectment, lieth, where lands or tenements are let for a term of years; and afterwards the lessor, reversioner, remainder-man, or any stranger, doth eject or oust the lessee of his term. In this case he shall have his writ of ejectio, to call the defendant to answer for entering on the lands so demised to the plaintiff for a term that is not yet expired, and ejecting him. And by this writ the plaintiff shall recover back his term, or the remainder of it, with damages.’ 3 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 199 (1768).

deam, vb. (bref. 12c) 1. To treat (something) as if (1) it were really something else, or (2) it has qualities that it does not have although the document was not in fact deemed transferor. (1988) Tax. A person who holds an interest in a generation-skipping trust on behalf of a beneficiary, and whose death will trigger the imposition of a generation-skipping transfer tax. • A deemed transferor is often a child of the settlor. For example, a grandfather could establish a trust with income payable for life to his son (who, because he is only one generation away from his father, is also known as a nonskip person) with the remainder to his grandson, a beneficiary also known as the skip person. When the son dies, the trust will be included in his gross estate for determining the generation-skipping transfer tax. IRC (26 USCA) §§ 2601-2663. See GENERATION-SKIPPING TRANSFER; generation-skipping transfer tax under tax; generation-skipping trust under trust; skip person; nonskip person.

deep link. Intellectual property. A Web-page hyperlink that, when clicked, opens a page on another website other than that site's home page. • Some plaintiffs have argued, with mixed success, that bypassing their home page in this manner deprives them of advertising revenue. Deep linking does not violate copyright if the portal provided does not copy any of the linked page's content. And if there is no confusion about the source of the information, deep linking does not constitute unfair competition.

deep pocket. (1975) 1. (pl.) Substantial wealth and resources <the plaintiff nonsuited the individuals and targeted the corporation with deep pockets>. 2. A person or entity with substantial wealth and resources against which a claim may be made or a judgment may be taken <that national insurance company is a favorite deep pocket among plaintiff's lawyers>.

Deep Rock doctrine. Bankruptcy. The principle by which unfair or inequitable claims presented by controlling shareholders of bankrupt corporations may be subordinated to claims of general or trade creditors. • The doctrine is named for a corporation that made fraudulent transfers to its parent corporation in Taylor v. Standard Gas & Elec. Co., 306 U.S. 307, 59 S.Ct. 543 (1939). [Cases: Bankruptcy Cc=2968.]

de essendo quietum de theolonia (dee e-sen-doh kwet-tam dee thee-a-loh-nee-oh), n. [Law Latin “of being quit of toll”] Hist. A writ authorizing a person who is exempt from paying a toll to enforce the exemption without harassment. — Also spelled de essendo quietum de tonelonia.

de essonio de malo lecti (dee e-sohn-nee-oh dee mal-oh lekti), n. [Law Latin “of essoin of sickness of bed”] Hist. A writ ordering a determination whether a person is truly sick after the person has issued an essoin claiming sickness as an excuse for not appearing in court.

de estoveriis habendis (dee es-to-veer-ee-ee-is ha-ben-dis), n. [Law Latin “for having estovers”] Hist. A writ allowing a wife divorced a mensa et thoro (“from bed and board”) to recover alimony or estovers. — Often shortened to estoveriis habendis.

“In case of divorce a mensa et thoro, the law allows alimony to the wife which is that allowance, which is made to a woman for her support out of her husband’s estate; being settled at the discretion of the ecclesiastical judge, on consideration of all the circumstances of the case. This is sometimes called her estovers for which, if he refuses payment, there is: (besides the ordinary process of excommunication) a writ at common law de estoveriis habendis, in order to recover it . . . It is generally proportioned to the rank and quality of the parties. But in case of elopement, and living with an adulterer, the law allows her no alimony.” 1 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 429 (1765).

de estrepedamento (dee e-strep-o-men-toh), n. [Law Latin “of estrepetment”] Hist. A writ to prevent waste by a tenant while a suit to recover the land is pending against the tenant. • Because this writ was only auxiliary to a real action to recover land, and because equity afforded the same relief by injunction, the writ fell into disuse and was abolished by 3 & 4 Will. 4, ch. 27. — Also termed writ of estrepetment. See estrepedamento.

de eu et trene (da yoo ay trayn). [French] Hist. Of water and whip of three cords. • This term referred to a neife who, as a servant, could be corporally punished. See NEIFE.

de eve et de treve (da ev ay da trey). [Law French] Hist. From grandfather and great-grandfather’s great-grandfather. • This phrase described the ancestral rights of lords to their villeins.

de excommunicato capiendo (dee eks-koh-myoo-nikay-toh kap-ee-en-doh), n. [Law Latin “for taking an excommunicated person”] Hist. Eccles. law. A writ ordering a sheriff to imprison an excommunicated person until the person reconciled with the church. •
It was replaced by the writ de contumace capiendo. See DE CONTUMACI CAPIENDO.

defamation, n. (14c) 1. The act of harming the reputation of another by making a false statement to a third person. • If the alleged defamation involves a matter of public concern, the plaintiff is constitutionally required to prove both the statement’s falsity and the defendant’s fault. 2. A false written or oral statement that damages another’s reputation. See LIBEL; SLANDER. Cf.
DEFAMATION PRIVILEGE. [Cases: Libel and Slander $\leftrightarrow 1$]

"Defamation is the publication of a statement which tends to lower a person in the estimation of right-thinking members of society generally, or which tends to make them shun or avoid that person." P.H. Winfield, A Textbook of the Law of Tort $\S$ 72, at 242 (5th ed. 1950).

"The wrong of defamation consists in the publication of a false and defamatory statement concerning another person without lawful justification. That person must be in being, hence not only does an action of defamation not survive for or against the estate of a deceased person, but a statement about a deceased or unborn person is not actionable at the suit of his relatives, however great their pain and distress, unless the statement is in some way defamatory of them." R.F.V. Heuston, Salmond on the Law of Torts 138 (17th ed. 1977).

"For entirely too long a period of time, English and American law have recognized two distinct kinds of defamation based solely on the form in which it is published. Oral defamation is slander; written defamation is libel. Libel is a crime and a tort which subjects the defamer to liability without proof of special damages. Slander is not a common law crime and, with certain exceptions, does not subject the defamer to liability unless there is proof of special damages. Under this distinction in form alone the defamatory letter read only by its addressee and burned to ashes after being read is a more serious defamation than a defamatory statement spoken to an audience of 3,000 community leaders and molders of public opinion. This is utterly absurd and completely indefensible." Laurence H. Eldredge, The Law of Defamation $\S$ 12, at 77 (1978).

"Defamation... is involved in two related harms, libel and slander. A familiar statement is that libel is written whereas slander is oral. This covers the idea in a general way but tends to mislead because defamation may be published without the use of words and hence be neither written nor oral. Thus libel may be perpetrated by hanging a person in effigy and slander, by sign or gesture." Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 489 (3d ed. 1982).

defamation per quod. (1915) Defamation that either (1) is not apparent but is proved by extrinsic evidence showing its injurious meaning or (2) is apparent but is not a statement that is actionable per se. [Cases: Libel and Slander $\leftrightarrow 33$.]

defamation per se. (1928) A statement that is defamatory in and of itself and is not capable of an innocent meaning. [Cases: Libel and Slander $\leftrightarrow 33$.]

trade defamation. The damaging of a business by a false statement that tends to diminish the reputation of that business. • Trade defamation may be trade libel if it is recorded, or trade slander if it is not. — Also termed commercial defamation. Cf. TRADE DISPARAGEMENT. [Cases: Libel and Slander $\leftrightarrow 130$.]

defamatory, adj. (16c) (Of a statement or communication) tending to harm a person’s reputation, usu. by subjecting the person to public contempt, disgrace, or ridicule, or by adversely affecting the person’s business. [Cases: Libel and Slander $\leftrightarrow 6-14$.]

"A communication is defamatory if it tends so to harm the reputation of another as to lower him in the estimation of the community or to deter third persons from associating or dealing with him." Restatement (First) of Torts $\S$ 559 (1938).

"No exhaustive definition of ‘defamatory’ emerges from the cases for, as Lord Reid once said, it is not for the judges to ‘frame definitions or to lay down hard and fast rules. It is their function to enunciate principles and much that they say is intended to be illustrative or explanatory and not to be definitive’ [Cassell & Co. Ltd. v. Broome (1972) AC 1027, 1085]. One can nevertheless achieve a working description by combining two statements, namely: a defamatory statement is one which injures the reputation of another by exposing him to hatred, contempt, or ridicule, or which tends to lower him in the esteem of right-thinking members of society." R.W.M. Dias & B.S. Markesinis, Tort Law 423–24 (2d ed. 1989).

defamatory statement. A statement that tends to injure the reputation of a person referred to in it. • The statement is likely to lower that person in the estimation of reasonable people and in particular to cause that person to be regarded with feelings of hatred, contempt, ridicule, fear, or dislike. — Also termed defamatory communication. [Cases: Libel and Slander $\leftrightarrow 6-14$.]

defames (di-fay-mez or di-fahm), adj. [Law French] Infamous.

default (di-fawlt also deo-fawlt), n. (13c) The omission or failure to perform a legal or contractual duty; esp., the failure to pay a debt when due. [Cases: Contracts $\leftrightarrow 312, 315$.]

default (di-fawlt), vb. 1. To be negligent; esp., to fail to perform a contractual obligation. 2. To fail to appear or answer. 3. To enter a default judgment against (a litigant).

defaultant (di-fawl-tant), adj. In default; having defaulted. See DEFAULTER.

defaulter. 1. A person who is in default. 2. A person who misappropriates or fails to account for money held in the person’s official or fiduciary capacity. — Also termed defaultant.

default judgment. (16c) 1. A judgment entered against a defendant who has failed to plead or otherwise defend against the plaintiff’s claim. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure $\leftrightarrow 2411$; Judgment $\leftrightarrow 92$.] 2. A judgment entered as a penalty against a party who does not comply with an order, esp. an order to comply with a discovery request. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 55(b). — Also termed judgment by default. See JUDGMENT. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure $\leftrightarrow 1278, 2820$; Pretrial Procedure $\leftrightarrow 46$.]

nil-dicit default judgment (nil dI-sit). [Latin “he says nothing”] (2002) A judgment for the plaintiff entered after the defendant fails to file a timely answer, often after the defendant appeared in the case by filing a preliminary motion. — Often shortened to nihil dicet. — Also termed nihil-dicit default judgment; judgment by nil dict. [Cases: Judgment $\leftrightarrow 106$.]

no-answer default judgment. (1979) A judgment for the plaintiff entered after the defendant fails to timely answer or otherwise appear. [Cases: Judgment \(\rightarrow\) 106.]

defeasance (di-feez-\(\text{nts}\), n. (15c) 1. An annulment or abrogation; VOIANCE. 2. The fact or an instance of bringing an estate or status to an end, esp. by conditional limitation. 3. A condition upon the fulfillment of which a deed or other instrument is defeated or made void; a contractual provision containing such a condition. - Also termed defeasance clause. 4. Hist. A collateral deed made simultaneously with a conveyance containing a condition by which the main deed might be defeated or made void. - Also spelled defeasance. — defease, vb.

"A defeasance is a collateral deed, made at the same time with a fee or other conveyance, containing certain conditions, upon the performance of which the estate then created may be defeated or totally undone." 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 327 (1766).

defeasance clause. A mortgage provision stating that the conveyance to the mortgagee shall be ineffective if the mortgagor pays the debt on time. See DEFEASANCE (3). [Cases: Mortgages \(\rightarrow\) 33.]

To vanquish; to conquer (someone or something) <to defeat the armies>. 4. To frustrate (someone or something) <the expenditures defeat the bill's purpose>.

defect, n. (15c) An imperfection or shortcoming, esp. in a part that is essential to the operation or safety of a product. - defective, adj. [Cases: Products Liability \(\rightarrow\) 119.]

apparent defect. See patent defect.

design defect. (1954) An imperfection occurring when the seller or distributor could have reduced or avoided a foreseeable risk of harm by adopting a reasonable alternative design, and when, as a result of not using the alternative, the product or property is not reasonably safe. Cf. manufacturing defect. [Cases: Products Liability \(\rightarrow\) 127, 128.]

fatal defect. (18c) A serious defect capable of nullifying a contract.

hidden defect. (1896) A product imperfection that is not discoverable by reasonable inspection and for which a seller or lessor is generally liable if the flaw causes harm. - Upon discovering a hidden defect, a purchaser may revoke a prior acceptance. UCC § 2-608(1)(b). - Also termed latent defect; inherent defect. [Cases: Sales \(\rightarrow\) 119.]

manufacturing defect. (1925) An imperfection in a product that departs from its intended design even though all possible care was exercised in its assembly. Cf. design defect. [Cases: Products Liability \(\rightarrow\) 125.]

marketing defect. (1980) 1. The failure to adequately warn of a potential risk of harm that is known or should have been known about a product or its foreseeable use. 2. The failure to adequately instruct the user about how to use a product safely. [Cases: Products Liability \(\rightarrow\) 133.]

patent defect. (1827) A defect that is apparent to a normally observant person, esp. a buyer on a reasonable inspection. - Also termed apparent defect.

defectus (di-fek-tas), n. [fr. Latin deficere "to be deficient"] Hist. A defect; a deficiency. defendant. (14c) A person sued in a civil proceeding or accused in a criminal proceeding. — Abbr. D. Cf. Plaintiff.

John Doe defendant. An anonymous defendant labeled "John Doe" because the plaintiff does not, at the time of filing suit, know the person's name. ● John Doe defendants are common in several situations, such as police-brutality lawsuits in which the plaintiff does not know the names of the officers allegedly at fault, and in some copyright-infringement lawsuits where defendants are identified only by Internet addresses. See John Doe. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ☻=101; Parties ☻=73.]
target defendant. In a case with multiple defendants, the one whom the plaintiff considers the primary source for any recovery of damages. ● Among several defendants, one is usu. the most blameworthy or has the most insurance or greatest assets, or both.
defendant in error. (18c) Archaic. In a case on appeal, the prevailing party in the court below. See Appellee; Respondent (1). defendant's gain. (1882) The amount of money or the value of property that a criminal defendant has obtained by committing a crime. ● Some states, such as New York, consider the defendant's gain when assessing a criminal fine or ordering restitution.
defendemus (di-fen-da-mas). [fr. Latin defendere] We will defend. ● This term was used in conveyancing to require the donor and the donor's heirs to defend the donee against any attempted encumbrance not specifically agreed to. Although defendemus was not a warranty, it became part of the warranty clause “shall and will warrant and forever defend.”
defender. 1. One who defends, such as the defendant in a lawsuit, a person using self-defense, or defense counsel. 2. Public defender.
defendere (di-fen-da-re), vb. [Law Latin] To deny; to defend.

defense (di-fen[t]s). (16c) 1. A defendant's stated reason why the plaintiff or prosecutor has no valid case; esp., a defendant's answer, denial, or plea <her defense was that she was 25 miles from the building at the time of the robbery>. [Cases: Criminal Law ☻=31.]

"Defence is defined to be that which is alleged by a party proceeded against in an action or suit, as a reason why the plaintiff should not recover or establish that which he seeks by his complaint or petition." Edwin E. Bryant, The Law of Pleading Under the Codes of Civil Procedure 240 (2d ed. 1899).

affirmative defense. (1837) A defendant's assertion of facts and arguments that, if true, will defeat the plaintiff's or prosecution's claim, even if all the allegations in the complaint are true. ● The defendant bears the burden of proving an affirmative defense. Examples of affirmative defenses are duress (in a civil case) and insanity and self-defense (in a criminal case). — Also termed plea in avoidance; plea in justification. Cf. negative defense; confession and avoidance. [Cases: Criminal Law ☻=31; Federal Civil Procedure ☻=751; Pleading ☻=76, 78, 130.] capacity defense. (1967) A defense based on the defendant's inability to be held accountable for an illegal act or the plaintiff's inability to prosecute a lawsuit (as when the plaintiff was a corporation, but has lost its corporate charter). See Capacity.

choice-of-evils defense. See lesser-evils defense.
collateral defense. (ko-la-lat-a-ral). Criminal law. A defense of justification or excuse not involving a rebuttal of the allegation and therefore collateral to the elements that the prosecutor must prove. See Excuse (2); Justification (2). [Cases: Criminal Law ☻=38.]
cultural defense. 1. A criminal defendant's assertion that because an admitted act is not a crime in the perpetrator's culture or native land, it should not be judged by the laws of the place where it was committed. • This cultural defense is asserted as an affirmative defense to a criminal charge. 2. The defense that the actor's mental state at the time the alleged crime was committed was heavily influenced by cultural factors. • This is not a complete defense but a mitigating one, pleaded to reduce the charges, the sentence, or both. See female genital mutilation. [Cases: Criminal Law  34.]

defense of habitation. The defense that conduct constituting a criminal offense is justified if an aggressor unjustifiably threatens the defendant's place of abode or premises and the defendant engages in conduct that is (1) harmful to the aggressor, (2) sufficient to protect that place of abode or premises, and (3) reasonable in relation to the harm threatened. • Also termed defense of premises. See Castle doctrine. [Cases: Assault and Battery  69; Criminal Law  38, Homicide  759.]

defense of inequitable conduct. Patents. A defense to an action for patent infringement, made by charging the plaintiff with breaching the duty of candor and good faith. • To succeed, the defendant must show that, in the patent prosecution, the plaintiff intentionally withheld material information from or misled the examiner. Inequitable conduct is a combination of two former defenses: unclean hands and fraud on the Patent Office. [Cases: Patents  97.]

definition of derivative defense. (1972) A defense that rebuts the criminal elements that a prosecutor must establish to justify the submission of a criminal case to a jury. [Cases: Criminal Law  31.]
definition of designer defense. A novel defense based on diminished capacity attributed to stress or impairment. • The phrase derives from the fact that the defense is tailored to the defendant and the circumstances of the crime. Examples include extraordinary reactions to snack food (the Twinkie defense), unconsciousness or sleepwalking, and postpartum psychosis. See automatism. [Cases: Criminal Law  46; Homicide  815, 816.]
dilationary defense (dil-a-tor-ee). (1845) A defense that temporarily obstructs or delays a lawsuit but does not address the merits. • Examples of dilationary defenses include misjoinder, nonjoinder, res judicata, misnomen, lack of capacity to sue, another action pending, statute of limitations, prematurity, unripe ness, release, and settlement.
dwelling defense. See Castle doctrine.
deemosynary defense. See charitable immunity under Immunity. (2). empty-suit defense. A defense in which a high-ranking officer or director in an organization claims ignorance of any wrongdoing by subordinates.
equitable defense. (18c) A defense formerly available only in a court of equity but now maintainable in a court of law. • Examples include mistake, fraud, illegality, failure of consideration, forum non conveniens, laches, estoppel, and unclean hands.
frivolous defense. (18c) A defense that has no basis in fact or law. full defense. A technical common-law defensive plea, stated at length and without abbreviation. • This plea is obsolete because of the pleading requirements in federal and state rules of civil procedure.
general-justification defense. See lesser-evils defense. honesty defense. Rare. An assertion that the defendant acted honestly and in good faith. • This defense, almost unique to civil suits, is rarely raised. For example, a defendant may assert honesty as a defense to a charge of fraudulent misrepresentation. • Also termed defense of honesty. Cf. claim of right (1). [Cases: Fraud  36.]
imperfect defense. (1835) A defense that fails to meet all legal requirements and usu. results only in a reduction in grade or sentence rather than an acquittal, as when a defendant is charged with manslaughter rather than murder because the defendant, while defending another, used unreasonable force to repel the attack. See imperfect self-defense under self-defense. Cf. perfect defense.
inconsistent defense. (1852) A defense so contrary to another defense that the acceptance of one requires abandonment of the other. • A person accused of murder, for example, cannot claim both self-defense and the alibi of having been in a different city when the murder took place. [Cases: Criminal Law  43.5.]
innocent-owner defense. In forfeiture action, an affirmative defense in which the owner of property (such as real estate or money) asserts that another person committed the wrongful act or omission while using the property without the owner's knowledge or consent. See 18 USCA §983(d). See civil forfeiture under forfeiture. [Cases: Controlled Substances  74; Forfeitures  4.] insanity defense. See insanity defense.
justification defense. See justification defense.
legal defense. (17c) A complete and adequate defense in a court of law.
lesser-evils defense. (1982) The defense that, while the defendant may have caused the harm or evil that would ordinarily constitute a criminal offense, in the present case the defendant has not caused a net harm or evil because of justifying circumstances and therefore should be exculpated. • Also termed choice-of-evils defense; necessity; general-justification defense.
meritorious defense (mer-ə-tor-ē-as). (18c) 1. A defense that addresses the substance or essentials of a case rather than dilatory or technical objections. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ¶ 2450, 2651; Judgment ¶ 145, 379, 447.] 2. A defense that appears likely to succeed or has already succeeded.

negative defense. A defendant's outright denial of the plaintiff's allegations without additional facts pleaded by way of avoidance. Cf. affirmative defense. [Cases: Pleading ¶ 76.]

new-value defense. Bankruptcy. A defense to a suit to recover preferential payments whereby the transferee of the payments can reduce liability by the amount of consideration or value that the transferee provided to the transferor after a suspect transfer. [Cases: Bankruptcy ¶ 2613.]

ostrich defense. A criminal defendant's claim not to have known of the criminal activities of an associate.

partial defense. (1818) A defense going either to part of the action or toward mitigation of damages.

pass-on defense. An antitrust defense that a member of the distributive chain who was overcharged or undercharged passed on the price adjustment to reflect the charge and thereby suffered no damage. — Also termed passing on. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation ¶ 908.]

peremptory defense (por-empt-ə-rē). (1860) A defense that questions the plaintiff's legal right to sue or contends that the right to sue has been extinguished.

perfect defense. (1817) A defense that meets all legal requirements and results in the defendant's acquittal. See perfect self-defense under self-defense. Cf. imperfect defense.

pretermitted defense (pree-tər-mit-id). (1947) A defense available to a party that must be pleaded at the right time or be waived.

sham defense. (1853) A fictitious, untrue defense, made in bad faith.

SODDI. See soddi defense.

true defense. A defense admitting that a defendant committed the charged offense, but seeking to avoid punishment based on a legal excuse (such as insanity) or justification (such as self-defense).

unconsciousness defense. See automatism.

XYY-chromosome defense. See xyy-chromosome defense.

2. A defendant's method and strategy in opposing the plaintiff or the prosecution; a doctrine giving rise to such a method or strategy <the lawyer advised her client to adopt a passive defense and to avoid taking the witness stand>.

empty-chair defense. (1981) A trial tactic in a multi-party case whereby one defendant attempts to put all the fault on a defendant who plea-bargained or settled before trial or on a person who was neither charged nor named as a party.

malicious defense. Torts. A defendant's use of unfair, harassing, or illegal tactics to advance a frivolous or unmeritorious defense. • The elements of the tort are (1) the defendant's initiation, continuation, or procurement of proceedings; (2) knowledge that the defense lacks merit; (3) the assertion of the defense for a purpose other than to properly adjudicate the claim, such as to harass, annoy, or injure, or to cause unnecessary delay or needless increase in the cost of litigation; (4) termination of the suit in the plaintiff's favor; and (5) harm to the plaintiff resulting from the proceeding. Damages are the same as in an action for malicious prosecution. A minority of states recognize the tort. Cf. malicious prosecution. [Cases: Torts ¶ 437.]

Stalingrad defense. The strategy of wearing down the plaintiff by tenaciously fighting by whatever means anything the plaintiff presents and appealing every ruling favorable to the plaintiff, rather than presenting a meritorious case. • The tactic is named for the Russian city besieged by the Germans in World War II. The defenders refused to surrender and used every available tactic and tool to hold the attackers at bay until winter cut the enemy's supply lines, leaving the attackers with inadequate resources with which to continue the siege.

3. One or more defendants in a trial, as well as their counsel <the defense rests>. 4. Commercial law: A basis for avoiding liability on a negotiable instrument <the drawer asserted a real defense against the holder in due course>.

personal defense. (1950) An ordinary defense in a contract action — such as failure of consideration or nonperformance of a condition — that the maker or drawer of a negotiable instrument is precluded from raising against a person who has the rights of a holder in due course. See UCC § 3-305(b). • A personal defense can be asserted only against a transferee who is not a holder in due course. — Also termed limited defense.

real defense. A type of defense that is good against any possible claimant, so that the maker or drawer of a negotiable instrument can raise it even against a holder in due course. • The ten real defenses are (1) fraud in the factum, (2) forgery of a necessary signature, (3) adjudicated insanity that, under state law, renders the contract void from its inception, (4) material alteration of the instrument, (5) infamy, which renders the contract voidable under state law, (6) illegality that renders the underlying contract void, (7) duress, (8) discharge in bankruptcy, or any discharge known to the holder in due course, (9) a suretyship defense (for example, if the holder knew...

that one indorser was signing as a surety or accommodation party, and (10) a statute of limitations (generally three years after dishonor or acceptance on a draft and six years after demand or other due date on a note). — Also termed absolute defense; universal defense. 1. A classification or specification of the bidders within the first degree of development. 4. A stage in intensity . 5. In the line of descent, a measure of removal determining the proximity of a blood or marital relationship <the council member did not participate in the vote because he was related to one of the bidders within the first degree of consanguinity. In the civil law, and in the degree-of-relationship system used by many American jurisdictions, an intestate estate passes to the closest of kin, counting degrees of kinship. To calculate the degree of relationship of the decedent to the claimant, one counts the steps (one for each generation) up from the decedent to the nearest common ancestor of the decedent and the claimant, and on down to the claimant from the common ancestor. The total number of steps is the degree of relationship. For example, a decedent’s cousin stands in the fourth degree of relationship. Degrees of relationship are used not only to determine who is the closest heir but also to establish the incest prohibition in marriage requirements. — Also termed degree of kin; degree of relationship; degree of descent. See AFFINITY (2); CONSANGUINITY. [Cases: Descent and Distribution "22."] equal degree. (16c) A relationship between two or more relatives who are the same number of steps away from a common ancestor. [Cases: Descent and Distribution "22."]

prohibited degree. (17c) A degree of relationship so close (as between brother and sister) that marriage between the persons is forbidden by law. Generally, with slight variations from jurisdiction to jurisdiction, the law forbids marriages between all persons lineally related and within the third civil-law degree of relationship. That is, aunt-nephew and uncle-niece relations are prohibited. Prohibited degrees are also known as Levitical degrees, since the incest prohibition is pronounced in the Bible in Leviticus 18:6–18. — Also termed forbidden degree. [Cases: Marriage "10.]

6. A title conferred on a graduate of a school, college, or university, either after the completion of required studies or in honor of special achievements (she began studying for the bar exam the day after receiving her law degree). Cf. DIPLOMA (3).

degree of care. (17c) A standard of care to be exercised in a given situation. See CARE. [Cases: Negligence "230.]

degree of crime. (1826) 1. A division or classification of a single crime into several grades of guilt, according to the circumstances surrounding the crime’s commission, such as aggravating factors present or the type of injury suffered. [Cases: Criminal Law "28.] 2. A division of crimes generally, such as felonies or misdemeanors. [Cases: Criminal Law "27.]

degree of descent. See DEGREE (5).

degree of kin. See DEGREE (5).

degree of negligence. (18c) One of the varying levels of negligence typically designated as slight negligence, ordinary negligence, and gross negligence. See NEGLIGENCE. [Cases: Negligence "272–276.]

"Although the common law concept of degrees of negligence has been criticized or repudiated in many jurisdictions, the usefulness of the view at common law that degrees of negligence exist is still recognized in a number of jurisdictions, particularly in regard to the distinction between ordinary and gross negligence. Furthermore, legislators have not been dissuaded from using the degrees of negligence concept when it is helpful to achieve a legislative purpose." 77A Am. Jur. 2d Negligence § 233, at 274 (1989).

degree of proof. 1. See BURDEN OF PROOF. 2. BURDEN OF PRODUCTION.

degree of relationship. See DEGREE (5).

de haerede deliberoando illi qui habet custodiam terrae (dee hi-ree-dee di-lib-so-ran-doh il-i kwai hay-bat ko-stoh-dee-oo ter-ee). n. [Law Latin "for delivering an heir to him who has wardship of the land"] Hist. A writ ordering the sheriff to deliver an heir to a person who had wardship.

de haerede rapto et ab ducto (dee hi-ree-dee rap-toh et ab-dak-toh). n. [Law Latin "of an heir ravished and carried away"] Hist. A writ allowing a lord to recover a ward who had been taken by another person.

de haereticum removendo (dee hi ret-ik kom-byaren-doh). n. [Law Latin "for removing a heretic"] Hist. 1. A writ ordering the execution by burning of a convicted heretic who refused to recant, or was convicted of heresy again after recanting. — Also termed writ de haereticum removendo.

"We find among our ancient precedents a writ de haereticum removendo, which is thought by some to be as ancient as the common law itself. However, it appears from thence, that the conviction of heresy by the common law was not in any petty ecclesiastical court, but before the archbishop himself in a provincial synod, and that the delinquent was delivered over to the king to do as he should please with him: so that the crown had a control over the spiritual power, and might pardon the convict by issuing no process against him; the writ de haereticum removendo being not a writ of course, but issuing only by the special direction of the king in council." 4 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 46–47 (1769).

"But the case of Sawtry (1400) is a clear case in which the rule of the canon law was applied. He was convicted of heresy before the Bishop of Norwich and recanted his heresy. He fell again into heresy, and was condemned by the archbishop and his provincial Council, as a relapsed heretic. On this conviction the king issued a writ de haereticum removendo. This case clearly shows that the common law recognized the rule of the canon law . . . ." 1 William Holdsworth, A History of English Law 617 (7th ed. 1956).

2. The first English penal law against heresy, enacted in 1401 (2 Hen. 4, ch. 15). — The law authorized the burning of defendants who relapsed or refused to abandon their heretical opinions.

"The first English statute that denounced the penalty of death against heretics was passed in the year 1401. Whether before that statute the law that was in force in our land demanded or suffered that such persons should be burnt is a question that has been eagerly debated; on it in the days of Elizabeth and James I depended the lives of Anabaptists and Anabaptists and Anabaptists. It has not yet lost its interest; but it is a question that buzzes in a vacuum, for until Lollardy became troublesome there was too little heresy in England to beget a settled course of procedure." 2 Frederick Pollock & Frederic Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 1544 (1899).

de homine replegiando (dee hom-in-ə-nee ri-plee-jee-an-doh), n. [Law Latin "for replevying a man"] A writ to replevy a person out of jail or out of the custody of another person after giving security that the repleved person will answer any charge.

"The writ de homine replegiando lies to replevy a man out of prison, or out of the custody of any private person, in the same manner that chattels taken in distress may be repleved ... upon giving security to the sheriff that the man shall be forthcoming to answer any charge against him. And, if the person be conveyed out of the sheriff's jurisdiction, the sheriff may return that he is elogied ... upon which a process issues ... to imprison the defendant himself, without bail ... till he produces the party. But this writ is guarded with so many exceptions, that it is not an effectual remedy in numerous instances, especially where the crown is concerned." 3 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 129 (1768).

dehors (da-hor or da-hor-z). [Law French] (18c) Outside; beyond the scope of <the court cannot consider the document because it is dehors the record>.

delict (di-lik-t), n. [Latin _delictum_ “an offense”] (16c) _Roman & civil law._ A violation of the law, esp., a wrongful act or omission giving rise to a claim for compensation; _tort._ — Also termed (in Roman law) _delictum_; (in French law) _délit._ [Cases: _Torts C:=107._] private delict. A wrong regarded primarily as a matter of compensation between individuals.

public delict. A wrong for which the community as a whole takes steps to punish the offender. _Cf._ _public tort under tort._

quasi-delict. 1. _Roman law._ A residuary category of private wrongs, characterized by either vicarious or strict liability.

“QUASI-DELICT . . . Justinian enumerates four cases of obligations said to arise quasi ex delicto. The implication seems to be that in all of them the law creates a liability though the defendant may not in fact be to blame. The cases are the following: — (1) The judge who ‘makes the case his own’ . . . incurs a penalty fixed by the magistrate at discretion . . . (2) If anything was thrown, or poured, from an upper room . . . the occupier was liable for double the damage . . . (3) If a thing was kept placed or suspended over a way used by the public . . . there was a penalty . . . which might be recovered from the occupier . . . (4) Ship-owners, innkeepers and stable-keepers were liable for damage or theft committed by slaves or free persons in their employ . . .” _R.W. Lee, The Elements of Roman Law_ 401–02 (4th ed. 1956).

2. See _quasi-offense under offense_ (2).

deliction (di-lik-shun), (1966) The loss of land by gradual, natural changes, such as erosion resulting from a change in the course of a river or stream. _Cf._ _accretion_ (1); _alluvion_; _avulsion_ (2); _erosion._ [Cases: Navegable Waters ☞ 44; Waters and Water Courses ☞ 93.

deliverance. (14c) 1. A jury's verdict. 2. A judicial opinion or judgment. 3. A court's order directing that a person in custody be released; esp., such an order by an ecclesiastical court. • Also termed writ of deliverance. 4. Archaic. In a replevin action, a writ ordering the delivery of goods to the owner.

second deliverance. Hist. A second replevin remedy after the plaintiff has been nonsuited and the distrained property has been returned to the defendant. — Also termed writ of second deliverance.

'And at the common law, the plaintiff might have brought another replevin, and so in infinitum, to the intolerable vexation of the defendant. Wherefore the statute of Westm. 2, c. 2 restrains the plaintiff, when nonsuited, from suing any fresh replevin, but allows him a judicial writ issuing out of the original record, and called a writ of second deliverance, in order to have the same distress again delivered to him, on giving the like security as before. And, if the plaintiff be a second time nonsuit, or if the defendant has judgment upon verdict... he shall have a writ or return irreplevisable; after which no writ of second deliverance shall be allowed.' 3 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 150 (1767).

5. Such a release (as in sense 3) or redelivery (as in sense 4).

delivered at frontier. A mercantile-contract term allocating the rights and duties of the buyer and the seller of goods with respect to delivery, payment, and risk of loss, whereby the seller must (1) clear the goods for export, (2) arrange and pay for transportation, and (3) deliver the goods to a specified place on the importing nation's border. • The seller's delivery is complete (and the risk of loss passes to the buyer) when the goods arrive at the designated point and are placed at the disposal of the buyer. This term is generally used when the delivery place is on land, but it places no explicit restrictions on the mode of carriage. If the delivery place is a border port and delivery is complete either onboard or alongside the vessel, the term delivered ex ship or delivered ex quay is preferred. — Abbr. DAF. Cf. delivered ex ship; delivered ex quay.

delivered duty paid. A mercantile-contract term allocating the rights and duties of the buyer and the seller of goods with respect to delivery, payment, and risk of loss, whereby the seller must (1) clear the goods for export, (2) bear the costs of carriage (apart from unloading charges and import duties), and (3) make the goods available to the buyer on board the carrier at the destination. • The seller's delivery is complete (and the risk of loss passes to the buyer) when the seller's carrier arrives at the agreed destination. This term is generally used when the delivery place is on land, but it places no explicit restrictions on the mode of carriage. If the delivery point is a port and delivery is complete either onboard or alongside the vessel, the term delivered ex ship or delivered ex quay is preferred. — Abbr. DDP. Cf. delivered duty unpaid; delivered ex ship; delivered ex quay.

delivered duty unpaid. A mercantile-contract term allocating the rights and duties of the buyer and the seller of goods with respect to delivery, payment, and risk of loss, whereby the seller must (1) clear the goods for export, (2) bear the costs of carriage (apart from unloading charges and import duties), and (3) make the goods available to the buyer on board the carrier at the destination. • The seller's delivery is complete (and the risk of loss passes to the buyer) when the seller's carrier arrives at the agreed destination. The buyer is responsible for all import duties. This term is generally used when the delivery place is on land, but it places no explicit restrictions on the mode of carriage. If the delivery point is a port and delivery is complete either onboard or alongside the vessel, the term delivered ex ship or delivered ex quay is preferred. — Abbr. DDU. Cf. DELIVERED DUTY PAID; DELIVERED EX SHIP; DELIVERED EX QUAY.

Delivered ex quay. A mercantile-contract term allocating the rights and duties of the buyer and the seller of goods with respect to delivery, payment, and risk of loss, whereby the seller must (1) clear the goods for export, (2) bear the costs of transportation to the port named by the importing buyer, and (3) place the goods alongside the ship in the port of destination. • The seller's delivery is complete (and the risk of loss passes to the buyer) when the goods are unloaded in the destination port. This term is used only when goods are transported by sea or inland waterway. — Abbr. DEQ. Cf. DELIVERED EX SHIP; FREE ALONGSIDE SHIP.

Delivered ex ship. A mercantile-contract term allocating the rights and duties of the buyer and the seller of goods with respect to delivery, payment, and risk of loss, whereby the seller must clear the goods for export and bear the costs of transportation (apart from unloading charges and import duties) to the importing nation's port of destination. • The seller's delivery is complete (and the risk of loss passes to the buyer) when the seller's carrier arrives at the destination port. This term is used only when goods are transported by sea or inland waterway. — Abbr. DES. Cf. DELIVERED EX QUAY; FREE ON BOARD.

delivery, n. (15c) 1. The formal act of transferring something, such as a deed; the giving or yielding possession or control of something to another. 2. The thing so transferred or conveyed. Cf. LIVERY. — DELIVER, vb.

Absolute delivery. (1808) A delivery that is complete upon the actual transfer of the instrument from the grantor's possession. • Such a delivery does not usually depend on recordation.

Actual delivery. (17c) The act of giving real and immediate possession to the buyer or the buyer's agent.

Conditional delivery. (18c) A delivery that passes possession subject to the happening of a specified event. • Possession passes immediately; title remains conditional.

Constructive delivery. (18c) An act that amounts to a transfer of title by operation of law when actual transfer is impractical or impossible. • For example, the delivery of a deposit-box key by someone who is ill and immobile may amount to a constructive delivery of the box's contents even though the box may be miles away. For the three traditional types of constructive delivery, see ATTORNMENT; CONSTITU- TUM POSSESSORIUM; TRADITIO BREVI MANU.

Good delivery. Securities. A security's delivery when the certificate (1) is in good condition, (2) belongs to the person transferring it, (3) is properly indorsed, and (4) is accompanied by any legal documents necessary for its negotiability.

Jail delivery. See JAIL DELIVERY.

Second delivery. (17c) A legal delivery by the depositary of a deed placed in escrow. [Cases: Deeds 58; Deposits and Escrows 21.]

Symbolic delivery. (18c) The constructive delivery of the subject matter of a sale or gift by the actual delivery of an article that represents the item, that renders access to it possible, or that provides evidence of the title to it, such as the key to a warehouse or a bill of lading for goods on shipboard. [Cases: Sales 162.]

Unconditional delivery. (18c) A delivery that immediately passes both possession and title and that takes effect immediately.

delivery in escrow. (1842) The physical transfer of something to an escrow agent to be held until some condition is met, at which time the agent will release it. • An example of such a delivery is a stock buyer's transfer of cash to a bank that will give the seller the cash upon receiving the stock certificates. This type of delivery creates immediate conditional rights in the promisee. The device may be used to create an option contract in which the promisee has the option. See ESCROW. [Cases: Deposits and Escrows 14.]

delivery of deed. (18c) The placing of a deed in the grantee's hands or within the grantee's control. • By this act, the grantor shows an intention that the deed operates immediately as a conveyance. A deed may also be held to be delivered when the grantor manifests the intention to complete the conveyance, regardless of actual delivery. [Cases: Deeds 54-67.]

delivery order. A written order to deliver goods, directed to a warehouseman, carrier, or other person who ordinarily issues warehouse receipts or bills of lading. UCC § 7-102(1)(d).

The term appeared, for example, in the phrase capitis deminutio "the loss of civil status." — Also spelled diminutum. See CAPITIS DEMINUTIO. Pl. diminutiones (dee-mi-n[y]oo-shee-oh neez).

demise (di-mIZ), n. (15c) 1. The conveyance of an estate usu. for a term of years, a lease <the demise set forth the terms of the transfer>. 2. The instrument by which such a conveyance is accomplished <the demise set forth the terms of the transfer>. 3. The passing of property by descent or bequest . 4. The death of a person or (figuratively) of a thing <the corporation’s untimely demise>. Abbr. dem. See DEATH. — demise, vb.

demise of the Crown. The immediate, automatic transfer of a kingdom to a successor upon a sovereign’s death or long absence from the throne.

"The king never dies. Henry, Edward, or George may die; but the king survives them all. For immediately upon the decease of the reigning prince in his natural capacity, his kingship or imperial dignity, by act of law, without any interval, is vested at once in his heir; who is, eo instanti, king to all intents and purposes. And so tender is the law of supposing even a possibility of his death, that his natural dissolution is generally called his demise... an expression which signifies merely a transfer of property; for... when we say the demise of the crown, we mean only that, in consequence of the disunion of the king’s body natural from his body politic, the kingdom is transferred or demised to his successor, and so the royal dignity remains perpetual." 1 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 242 (1765).

joint demise. In an ejectment action, a demise made by two or more persons in one declaration. [Cases: Ejectment C-65.]

several demise. (often pl.) Hist. In an ejectment action, a list of demises by all people potentially owning the property at issue, used to ensure that the plaintiff had proved a lease from the person actually having title. See EJECTMENT.

demurrage (di-mar-ij), (usu. pl.) Maritime law. 1. Liquidated damages owed by a charterer to a shipowner for the charterer’s failure to load or unload cargo by the agreed time. [Cases: Shipping C=170.]

contract demurrage. Demurrage paid by a vessel’s charterer if the time to load or unload the vessel at port takes longer than that agreed on in the charterer’s contract with the shipowner. Cf. DISPATCH MONEY.

“The contract may also provide that if . . . the loading time exceeds that fixed by the charter, the charterer will pay a liquidated compensation termed ‘contract demurrage.’” Frank L. Maraist, Admiralty in a Nutshell § 4-8, at 212 (2d ed. 1988).

noncontract demurrage. Demurrage not provided by contract, but ordered by a court. — Also termed damages for detention.

2. A charge for the late return of ocean containers or other equipment.

demurrage lien. See LIEN.

demurrant (di-mar-ant). One who demurs; esp., a litigant who files a demurrer.

demurrer (di-mar-ar). [Law French demerer "to wait or stay"] (16c) A pleading stating that although the facts alleged in a complaint may be true, they are insufficient for the plaintiff to state a claim for relief and for the defendant to frame an answer. In most jurisdictions, such a pleading is now termed a MOTION TO DISMISS, but demurrer is still used in a few states, including California, Nebraska, and Pennsylvania. Cf. DENIAL. (1). [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure C=658, 1725; Pleading C=189, 193(5)].

“..."The word 'demurrer,' derived from the Latin demonari, or the French demerrer, meaning to 'wait or stay,' imports that the party demurring waits or stays in his proceedings in the action until the judgment of the court is given whether he is bound to answer to so insufficient a pleading. Each party may demurr to what he deems an insufficient pleading of the other. The demurrer was general when it was to matter of substance; it was special when it was made to matter of form, and must specifically point out the defect." Edwin E. Bryant, The Law of Pleading Under the Codes of Civil Procedure 15 (2d ed. 1899).

demurrer book. Hist. A record of the demurrer issue used by the court and counsel in argument.

demurrer to evidence. (17c) A party’s objection or exception that the evidence is legally insufficient to make a case. (b) Its effect on a joined by the demurrer by the opposite party, is that the jury is discharged and the demurrer is entered on record and decided by the court. A demurrer to evidence admits the truth of all the evidence and the legal deductions from that evidence. [Cases: Criminal Law C=752; Trial C=150.]

demurrer to interrogatories. (18c) The objection or reason given by a witness for failing to answer an interrogatory.

de non decimando (dee non des-i-man-doh), n. [Law Latin “of not paying tithes”] Eccles. law. A claim for release from paying a tithe. — Also termed modus de non decimando.

“A prescription de non decimando is a claim to be entirely discharged of tithes, and to pay no compensation in lieu of them. Thus the king by his prerogative is discharged from all tithes. So a vicar shall pay no tithes to the rector, nor the rector to the vicar. […] But these privileges are personal to both the king and the clergy; for their tenant or lessee shall pay tithes … And from this original have sprung all the lands, which, being in lay hands, do at present claim to be tithe-free: for, if a man can show his lands to have been such abbey lands, and also immemorially discharged of tithes … this is now a good prescription, de non decimando. But he must show both these requisites for abbey lands, without a special ground of discharge, are not discharged of course; neither will any prescription de non decimando avail in total discharge of tithes, unless it relates to such abbey lands.” William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 31–32 (1766).

de non procedendo ad assiam (dee non proh-sa den-doh ad a-si-zam), n. [Law Latin “of not proceeding to hold an assize”] Hist. A writ ordering justices not to hold an assize in a particular case.

deposition (dep-o-zish-an). (14c) 1. A witness’s out-of-court testimony that is reduced to writing (usu. by a court reporter) for later use in court or for discovery purposes. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 30; Fed. R. Crim. P. 15. — Also termed examination before trial. [Cases: Criminal Law  627.2; Federal Civil Procedure  1311–1456; Pretrial Procedure  91–206.] 2. The written record of a witness’s out-of-court testimony. A. Eccles. law. The involuntary release of a clergyman from the exercise of his office. Cf. DEGRADATION (1); DEPRIVATION (4).

deposition on written questions. (1970) A deposition given in response to a prepared set of written questions, as opposed to a typical oral deposition. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 31. — Formerly also termed deposition on written interrogatories. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure  1369; Pretrial Procedure  155.]

• The advantage of a deposition on written questions is that counsel for the parties need not go to some distant place to be present at the taking of the deposition. Instead they serve on each other questions and cross questions — and even redirect and recross questions — that they wish to have put to the deponent. These are then sent to the officer who is to take the deposition. The officer puts the questions to the witness, records the answers, and transcribes and files the deposition as with an oral deposition. The officer is merely to record what the witness says in response to the various questions propounded to him or her.” Charles Alan Wright, The Law of Federal Courts § 85, at 618–19 (5th ed. 1994).

oral deposition. (1910) A deposition given in response to oral questioning by a lawyer. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure  1381; Pretrial Procedure  151.]

30(b)(6) deposition. (1979) Under the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, the deposition of an organization, through the organization’s designated representative. • Under Rule 30(b)(6), a party may take the deposition of an organization, such as a corporation. The notice of deposition (or subpoena) may name the organization and may specify the matters to be covered in the deposition. The organization must then designate a person to testify about those matters on its behalf. Fed. R. Civ. P. 30(b)(6). Most states authorize a similar procedure under state-court procedural rules. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure  1325.]

3. The written record of a witness’s out-of-court testimony. 4. Eccles. law. The involuntary release of a clergyman from the exercise of his office. Cf. DEGRADATION (1); DEPRIVATION (4).

accelerated depreciation. Depreciation recorded using a method that writes off the cost of an asset more rapidly than the straight-line method.

accumulated depreciation. (1916) The total depreciation currently recorded on an asset. • On the balance sheet, an asset's total cost less accumulated depreciation reflects the asset's book value. — Also termed accrued depreciation.

annual depreciation. (1862) The yearly decrease in a property's value due to regular wear and tear.

economic depreciation. A reduction in the value of an asset due to a shortening of the asset's economic life.

functional depreciation. (1910) Depreciation that results from the replacement of equipment that is not yet worn out but that is obsolete in light of new technology or improved methodology allowing more efficient and satisfactory production.

depreciation method. (1915) A set formula used in estimating an asset's use, wear, or obsolescence over the asset's useful life or some portion thereof. • This method is useful in calculating the allowable annual tax deduction for depreciation. See USEFUL LIFE. [Cases: Internal Revenue C=3470-3505; Taxation C=3516.]

accelerated depreciation method. (1964) A depreciation method that yields larger deductions in the earlier years of an asset's life and smaller deductions in the later years.

annuity depreciation method. A depreciation method that allows for a return of imputed interest on the undepreciated balance of an asset's value. • The imputed interest is subtracted from the current depreciation amount before it is credited to the accumulated depreciation accounts.

declining-balance depreciation method. (1947) A method of computing the annual depreciation allowance by multiplying the asset's undepreciated cost each year by a uniform rate that may not exceed double the straight-line rate or 150 percent.

double-declining-balance depreciation method. (1956) A depreciation method that spreads over time the initial cost of a capital asset by deducting in each period twice the percentage recognized by the straight-line method and applying that double percentage to the undepreciated balance existing at the start of each period.

replacement-cost depreciation method. A depreciation method that fixes an asset's value by the price of its substitute.

sinking-fund depreciation method. A depreciation method that accounts for the time value of money by setting up a depreciation-reserve account that earns interest, resulting in a gradual yearly increase in the depreciation deduction.

straight-line depreciation method. (1930) A depreciation method that writes off the cost or other basis of the asset by deducting the expected salvage value from the initial cost of the capital asset, and dividing the difference by the asset's estimated useful life.

sum-of-the-years'-digits depreciation method. A method of calculating the annual depreciation allowance by multiplying the depreciable cost basis (cost minus salvage value) by a constantly decreasing fraction, which is represented by the remaining years of useful life at the beginning of each year divided by the total number of years of useful life at the time of acquisition. — Sometimes shortened to SYD method.

unit depreciation method. A depreciation method — directly related to the productivity of the asset — that divides the asset's value by the estimated total number of units to be produced, and then multiplies the unit cost by the number of units sold during the year, representing the depreciation expense for the year.

units-of-output depreciation method. A method by which the cost of a depreciable asset, minus salvage value, is allocated to the accounting periods benefited based on output (as miles, hours, number of times used, and the like).

depreciation reserve. An account built up to offset the depreciable reserve of property because of time and use, so that at the end of the property's service there is enough money to replace the property. [Cases: Electricity C=11.3(3); Gas C=14.4(9); Public Utilities C=127.]

depredation. (15c) The act of plundering; pillaging.

4. legal description. 5. Patents. In a U.S. patent application, a section that (1) comprehensively characterizes the invention in language that is clear and complete enough to enable anyone of ordinary skill in the relevant art to make and use the invention; (2) explains the best mode for using the invention; and (3) uses an explanation of drawings that are part of the application. • The detailed description typically makes up the largest portion of the application’s specification. — Also termed (in sense 5) enabling disclosure; written description. [Cases: Patents ◄ 99.]

descriptio personae (di-skrip-shoo-oh par-soh nee). [Law Latin] Description of the person. • This phrase, typically used to identify or describe a person in a contract or deed, is not essential to a document’s validity. Cf. designatio personae.

descriptive comparative law. See comparative law.

descriptive mark. See comparative law.

descriptive trademark. See trademark.

descriptive word. Trademarks. A term that portrays a general characteristic or function of a product or service. • A descriptive word may not be registered as a trademark unless it has acquired secondary meaning in the minds of consumers such that it is directly associated with one brand. [Cases: Trademarks ◄ 1035.]

"A trader cannot appropriate to his exclusive use words or symbols which (in the application he is to make of them) are public property. The right of all to use descriptive words in their ordinary and usual meaning must not be restricted. No sign or form of words may be appropriated as a trade-mark, for use in its primary meaning, which, from the nature of the fact conveyed by that primary meaning, others may employ with equal truth, and with

A writ authorizing a lord who had served in the war or paid the required fine, to recover the scutage from his knights' fees. See scutage.

"Such a baron, having proved that he fulfilled his contract or paid his fine, will have a royal writ de scutagio habendo, whereby the sheriff will be ordered to cause him to have the scutage due from his tenants. Still, before he can get his scutage, he has to obtain something that the king is apt to treat as a favour." 1 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward 1270 (2a ed. 1898).

desecrate, vb. (17c) To divest (a thing) of its sacred character; to defile or profane (a sacred thing).

de secta ad molendinum (dee sek-ta ad ma-len-di-nam), n. [Law Latin "of suit at mill"] Hist. A writ forcing a person to continue grinding corn at a particular mill, as was customary, or to give a good reason why the custom should not be continued.

"There are also other services, due by ancient custom and prescription only. Such is that of doing suit to another's mill where the persons, resident in a particular place, by usage time out of mind have been accustomed to grind their corn at a certain mill; and afterwards any of them go to another mill, and withdraw their suit . . . from the ancient mill. This is not only a damage, but an injury, to the owner . . . . And for this injury the owner shall have a writ de secta ad molendinum commanding the defendant to do his suit at that mill . . . or show good cause to the contrary in which action the validity of the prescription may be tried, and if it be found for the owner, he shall recover damages against the defendant." 3 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 234–35 (1768).

destructibility, n. (18c) The capability of being destroyed by some action, turn of events, or operation of law. — destructible, adj.
destructibility of contingent remainders. (1918)
Property. The common-law doctrine requiring a future interest to vest by the time it is to become possessory or else be totally destroyed, the interest then reverting to the grantor. • The doctrine could be avoided by the use of trustees to preserve contingent remainders. This doctrine has been abolished in all but a few American jurisdictions; the abolishing statutes are commonly termed anti-destructibility statutes. — Also termed destructibility rule. [Cases: Remainders C=10.]

"The destructibility rule still exists in its old common-law form in Florida. Various authors have suggested that it also exists unchanged in Arkansas, North Carolina, Oregon, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, and Tennessee; but there are no statutes or recent decisions to clarify the rule's status in these states." Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 79 n.46 (2d ed. 1984).

destructible trust. See TRUST.

dettaggio non concedendo (dee ta-lay-jee-oh non kon-sa-den-doh), n. [Law Latin "of not granting tallage"] Hist. The title of a statute declaring that no taxes will be imposed by the king or his heirs without the consent of the archbishops, bishops, earls, barons, knights, and other freemen of the realm.* • The statute has been used to support the constitutional doctrine disallowing taxation except by Parliament. 34 Edw. 1 st. 4.

detection. The act of discovering or revealing something that was hidden, esp. to solve a crime.

"There is a clear distinction between inducing a person to do an unlawful act and setting a trap to catch him in the execution of a criminal plan of his own conception. There is also a distinction between the terms 'detection' and 'entrapment,' as applied to the activities of law enforcement officers. Legitimate detection of crime occurs when officers test a suspected person by offering him an opportunity to transgress the law in such manner as is usual in the activity alleged to be unlawful. On the other hand, entrapment occurs when officers induce a person to violate the law when he would not otherwise do so." 21 Am. Jur. 2d Criminal Law § 202 (1981).
not run to the contrary.” 1 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 460–61 (1765). See LEGAL MEMORY.

investigative detention. (1968) The holding of a suspect without formal arrest during the investigation of the suspect's participation in a crime. • Detention of this kind is constitutional only if probable cause exists. [Cases: Arrest C=63.5.]

pretrial detention. (1962) 1. The holding of a defendant before trial on criminal charges either because the established bail could not be posted or because release was denied. [Cases: Bail C=42.] 2. In a juvenile-delinquency case, the court's authority to hold in custody, from the initial hearing until the probable-cause hearing, any juvenile charged with an act that, if committed by an adult, would be a crime. • If the court finds that releasing the juvenile would create a serious risk that before the return date the juvenile might commit a criminal act, it may order the juvenile detained pending a probable-cause hearing. Juveniles do not have a constitutional right to bail. The Supreme Court upheld the constitutionality of such statutes in Schall v. Martin, 467 U.S. 253, 104 S.Ct. 2403 (1984). — Also termed temporary detention. [Cases: Infants C=192.]

preventive detention. (1952) Confinement imposed usu. on a criminal defendant who has threatened to escape, poses a risk of harm, or has otherwise violated the law while awaiting trial, or on a mentally ill person who may cause harm.

secret detention. The holding of a suspect in an undisclosed place, without formal charges, a legal hearing, or access to legal counsel, and without the knowledge of anyone other than the detaining authority. See secret detainee under detainee.

detinuit de una parte. Hist. An action to recover property that the defendant acquired by bailment but refuses to return.

de transgression (dee trans-gresh-ee-oh-nee), n. [Law Latin “of trespass”] The general name of various writs of trespass. See TRESPASS.

de transgressione, ad audiendum et terminandum (dee trans-gresh-ee-oh-nee, ad aw-dee-en-dam et tor-mi-nan-dam), n. [Law Latin “of trespass, for determining and hearing a misdemeanor”] Hist. A commissioner for hearing and determining an outrage or misdemeanor.

detriment. (15c) 1. Any loss or harm suffered by a person or property. 2. Contracts. The relinquishment of some legal right that a promisee would have otherwise been entitled to exercise. — Also termed legal detriment. Cf. BENEFIT (2).

“A promise or an act may be a detriment although on balance the promisor is making a good bargain. Thus a promise to pay £10,000 for a Rolls Royce worth £12,000, is none the less a detriment, and a good consideration for a promise to deliver the car.” P.S. Atiyah, An Introduction to the Law of Contract 101 (3d ed. 1981).

detriment to a promisee. Contracts. Consideration offered by a promisee to a promisor, esp. in a unilateral contract. [Cases: Contracts ⊃ 52.]

devastation. (17c) 1. An executor’s squandering or mismanagement of the deceased’s estate. 2. An act of destruction. 3. WASTE (i).

devastaverunt (di-vas-ta veer-ant). [Latin pl. of devastavit “he (or she) has wasted”] They have wasted. • This word usu. referred to both an executor’s waste of a decedent’s property and the action against the executor for that waste.

devastavit (dev-a-stay-vit), n. [Latin “he (or she) has wasted”] A fiduciary’s failure to administer an estate or trust promptly and properly, esp. by spending extravagantly or misapplying assets. • A fiduciary who commits waste in this way becomes personally liable to those having claims on the assets, such as creditors and beneficiaries.

de vasto (dee vas-toh), n. [Law Latin "of waste"] A writ allowing a reversioner or remainderman to compel a tenant for life or for years to appear and answer for the waste and resulting damage to the plaintiff’s inheritance. See waste (1).

developed water. See WATER.

development. (1885) 1. A substantial human-created developing country. (1885) 2. An activity, action, or alteration that changes undeveloped property into developed property.

developmental disability. See DISABILITY (2).

de ventre inspiciendo [Law Latin "of (or for) inspecting the belly"] A writ allowing a presumptive heir to summon a jury of matrons to verify the pregnancy of a widow where a widow is suspected to feign herself with child: an attempt which the rigor of the Gothic constitutions esteemed equivalent to the most atrocious theft, and therefore punished with death. In this case with us the heir presumptive may have a writ de ventre inspiciendo to examine whether she be with child, or not: . . . and, if the widow be upon due examination found not pregnant, any issue she may afterwards produce, though within nine months, will be bastard.” 1 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 444 (1765).

2. A writ providing a temporary stay of execution if a jury of matrons determines that a woman scheduled for execution and claiming pregnancy is “quick with child.” • The execution would be postponed until after the birth, but if the woman became pregnant a second time before execution, she had no remedy. — Sometimes shortened to vente inspiciendo. — Also spelled de ventre in spiciendo.

devest (di-vest), vb. 1. Hist. To deprive (a person) of possession, title, or property. 2. To take; to draw away. — Also spelled divest.

deviation. 1. Generally, a change from a customary or agreed-on course of action. 2. Employment law. A departure from one’s course of employment to tend to a personal matter. • A deviation from the course of employment may be an issue in disputes about workers’ compensation or about the employer’s tort liability to third parties based on the employee’s actions. See COURSE OF EMPLOYMENT. Cf. FROLIC. [Cases: Labor and Employment <3047; Workers’ Compensation <666]. 3. Insurance. A departure by an insured party from a routine course of action, resulting in increased risk of some loss that the insured is indemnified against. [Cases: Insurance <3059]. 4. Maritime law. A departure from the terms expressed in a bill of lading or other transportation contract.

"For both geographic deviations and quasi-deviations, the contractual voyage is the benchmark against which the carrier’s performance is to be measured. If the parties agreed to an indirect route, the carrier commits no deviation in following it; if the parties agreed to deck carriage, the carrier may stow the cargo on deck. All deviations ‘have one common, indispensable element — a violation of the terms of the bill of lading.’” Michael F. Sturley, “Deviation Defined,” in 2A Benedict on Admiralty 122 (7th rev. ed. 2002) (quoting Rockwell Int’l Corp. v. M/V Incorrrns Spirit, 707 F. Supp. 272, 273 (S.D. Tex. 1989), aff’d, 998 F.2d 316 (5th Cir. 1993)). [Cases: Shipping <125.]

quasi-deviation. A deviation from an agreed-on shipping term other than a deviation in course or destination (e.g., an unreasonable delay or the unauthorized carriage of cargo on deck). [Cases: Shipping <125.]

reasonable deviation. A deviation that is justified by circumstances. • If a deviation is reasonable, the carrier does not lose its usual limitations and exemptions under the Carriage of Goods by Sea Act. [Cases: Shipping <125, 138.]

unreasonable deviation. A deviation that is not justified by circumstances. • An unreasonable deviation causes the carrier to lose the benefit of its usual limitations and exemptions under the Carriage of Goods by Sea Act. [Cases: Shipping <125, 138.]

deviation doctrine. (1948) 1. A principle allowing variation from a term of a will or trust to avoid defeating the document’s purpose. 2. A principle allowing an agent’s activity to vary slightly from the scope of the principal’s deviance. (16c) A scheme to trick or deceive; a stratagem or artifice, as in the law relating to fraud. [Cases: Fraud § 3.]

devil on the neck. Hist. A torture device made of irons that fastened to a person's neck and legs and then wrenched together to either gradually or quickly break the person's back. • It was often used to coerce confessions.

devilous, adj. (16c) 1. Capable of being bequeathed by a will. 2. Capable of being invented. 3. Feigned.

devise (di-VIZ), vb. (15c) 1. The act of giving property by will. • Although this term traditionally referred to gifts of real property — and in British usage the term is still confined to real property — in American usage the term has been considerably broadened. In both the Restatement of Property and the Uniform Probate Code, a disposition of any property by will is a devise. In the United States today, it is pedantry to insist that the noun devise be restricted to real property. [Cases: Wills § 1.2] 2. The provision in a will containing such a gift. 3. Property disposed of in a will. 4. A will disposing of property. Cf. TESTAMENT (1); BEQUEST; LEGACY. — devise, vb.

alternative devise. A devise that, under the terms of the will, is designed to displace another devise if one or more specified events occur. — Also termed secondary devise. [Cases: Wills § 553, 856.]

demonstrative devise. A devise, usu. of a specific amount of money or quantity of property, that is primarily payable from a designated source, but that may be payable from the estate's general assets if the designated property is insufficient. See Restatement (Third) of Property: Wills and Other Donative Transfers § 5.1 (1999). Cf. pecuniary devise. [Cases: Wills § 751, 755.]

executor devise. (17c) An interest in land, created by will, that takes effect in the future and depends on a future contingency; a limitation, by will, of a future estate or interest in land when the limitation cannot, consistently with legal rules, take effect as a remainder. • An executor devise, which is a type of conditional limitation, differs from a remainder in three ways: (1) it need not include property to support it, (2) with it a fee simple or lesser estate can be limited after a fee simple, and (3) with it a remainder can be limited after a chattel interest after a particular estate for life is created in that interest. See conditional limitation in human nature. [Cases: Wills § 7.]

"The reason of the institution of the executor devise was to support the will of the testator; for when it was evident that he intended a contingent remainder, and when it could not operate as such by the rules of law, the limitation was then, out of indulgence to wills, held to be good as an executor devise. They are not mere possibilities, but certain and substantial interests and estates, and are put under such restraints only as have been deemed requisite to prevent the mischiefs of perpetuities, or the existence of estates that were unalienable." A James Kent, Commentaries on American Law *264 (George Comstock ed., 11th ed. 1866).

failed devise. See lapsed devise.

general devise. (16c) 1. A devise, usu. of a specific amount of money or quantity of property, that is payable from the estate's general assets. See Restatement (Third) of Property: Wills and Other Donative Transfers § 5.1 (1999). 2. A devise that passes the testator's lands without specifically enumerating or describing them. [Cases: Wills § 583.]

lapsed devise. (18c) A devise that fails because the testator outlives the named recipient. — Also termed failed devise; failed gift.

pecuniary devise. A demonstrative devise consisting of money. Cf. demonstrative devise. [Cases: Wills § 750.]

primary devise. A devise to the first person named as taker. • For example, a devise of "Blackacre to A, but if A does not survive me then to B" names A as the recipient of the primary devise and B as the recipient of the secondary or alternative devise. residuary devise. (18c) A devise of the remainder of the testator's property left after other specific devises are taken. [Cases: Wills C-751.]

secondary devise. See alternative devise.

specific devise. (18c) A devise that passes a particular piece of property. [Cases: Wills C-751.]

younger-generation devise. An alternative devise to a descendant of the recipient of a primary devise. Unif. Probate Code § 2-603. • A devise of "Blackacre to A, but if A does not survive me then to A's child B." creates a younger-generation devise in A's descendant, B. See alternative devise.

devisor. (16c) One who invents or contrives <the deviser> devolve (di-vahlv), devisee (dev-;:l-zee devise, dev-wahr). (17c) 1. To give (property) by will. [Cases: Wills C-751.]

the modern convention which sets apart 'devise' for 'reality' and 'bequeath' for 'personalty' is modern; in the middle ages, the English word . . . is the equivalent of the French word." 2 Frederick Pollock & Frederic William Maitland, History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 338 (2d ed. 1899).

"The modern convention which sets apart 'devise' for 'reality' and 'bequeath' for 'personalty' is modern; in the middle ages, the English word . . . is the equivalent of the French word." 2 Frederick Pollock & Frederic William Maitland, History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 338 (2d ed. 1899).

devisee (dev-ə-zee or di-vi-zee). (16c) A recipient of property by will. Cf. legatee.

first devisee. The first devisee designated to receive an estate under a will.

next devisee. The devisee who receives the remainder of an estate in tail, as distinguished from the first devisee. See fee tail. [Cases: Wills C-751.]

residuary devisee. The person named in a will to receive the testator's remaining property after the other devises are distributed.

deviser. (16c) One who invents or contrives <the deviser of these patents>.

devisor. (16c) One who disposes of property (usu. real property) in a will. [Cases: Wills C-751.]

devor (da-vwar or dev-wahr). Hist. A duty; a tax. — Also spelled devoire.

"Devoire is as much as to say a duty. It is used in the statute of 2 R. 2, cap. 3, where it is provided, that all the western merchants, being of the king's amity, shall pay all manner of customs and subsidies, and other devoire of Calais." Terms of de la Ley 168 (1st Am. ed. 1812).

devolution (dev-ə-loo-shan), n. (16c) The act or an instance of transferring one's rights, duties, or powers to another; the passing of such rights, duties, or powers by transfer or succession <the federal government's devolution of police power to the states>. — devolutionary, adj. — devolutionist, n.

devolutive appeal. See appeal.

devolve (di-vahlv), vb. (16c) 1. To transfer (rights, duties, or powers) to another. 2. To pass (rights, duties, or powers) by transmission or succession. See devolution.

devy (da-vi), vb. [Law French] To die.

de warrantia chartae (dee wa-ran-shée-ə kahr-tee), n. [Law Latin "of a warranty of charter"] Hist. A writ allowing a tenant enjoined with a warranty, who was impeached in an assize or other action in which the tenant could not call upon the warranty, to compel the feoffor to assist the tenant with a plea or defense, or else to pay damages and the value of the land, if it is recovered against the tenant.

"This we still make use of in the form of common recoveries, which are grounded on a writ of entry; a species of action that we may remember relies chiefly on the weakness of the tenant's title, who therefore vouches another person to warrant it . . . . In assises indeed, where the principal question is whether the demandant or his ancestors were or were not in possession till the ouster happened, and the title of the tenant is little (if at all) discussed, there no voucher is allowed; but the tenant may bring a writ of warrantia chartae against the warrantor, to compel him to assist him with a good plea or defence, or else to render damages and the value of the land, if recovered against the tenant." 3 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 299 (1768).

de warrantia diæ (dee wa-ran-shée-ə di-ee), n. [Law Latin "of warranty of day"] Hist. A writ ordering a judge not to default a party for nonappearance because the Crown warranted that the party was busy in its service.

dextrarius (dek-strair-ee-as). Hist. One at the right hand of another.

dextras dare (dek-stras dair-e-ə), vb. [Latin "to give right hands"] 1. To shake hands to show friendship. 2. To give oneself up to the power of another.

diagnosis (di-ag-noh-sis). (17c) 1. The determination of a medical condition (such as a disease) by physical examination or by study of its symptoms. 2. The result of such an examination or study. Cf. prognosis.

clinical diagnosis. A diagnosis from a study of symptoms only.

physical diagnosis. A diagnosis from physical examination only.

diagnostic commitment. See commitment.

dialectic (di-a-lek-tik), n. (16c) 1. A school of logic that teaches critical examination of the truth of an opinion, esp. by discussion or debate. • The method was applied by ancient philosophers, such as Plato and Socrates, primarily in the context of conversational discussions involving questions and answers, and also by more modern philosophers, such as Immanuel Kant, who viewed it as a theory of fallacies, and G.W.F. Hegel, who applied the term to his philosophy proceeding from thesis, to antithesis, to synthesis. 2. An argument made by critically examining logical consequences.
A logical debate. 4. A disputant; a debater. Pl. dialectics.

diallage (dI-al-æ-jee), n. [fr. Greek diallage “interchange”] A rhetorical figure of speech in which arguments are placed in several points of view, and then brought to bear on one point.

Dialogus de Scaccario (dI-al-æ-gas ske-kaire-ee-oh), n. [Law Latin “a dialogue of or about the Exchequer”] Hist. A treatise, written during the reign of Henry II, on the Court of Exchequer, set up in imaginary dialogue form between a master and a disciple. Although some originally attributed the work to Gervase of Tilbury, it was probably written by Richard Fitz Nigel, the bishop of London under Richard I, and the former Treasurer of the Exchequer.

"The Dialogus de Scaccario is an anonymous book, but there can be little doubt that we are right in ascribing it to Richard Fitz Neal: that is to say, to Richard the son of that Nigel, bishop of Ely .... The book stands out as an unique book in the history of medieval England, perhaps in the history of medieval Europe. A high officer of state, the trusted counsellor of a powerful king, undertakes to explain to all whom it may concern the machinery of government. He will not deal in generalities, he will condescend to minute details. Perhaps the book was not meant for the general public so much as for the numerous clerks who were learning their business in the exchequer, but still that such a book should be written, is one of the wonderful things of Henry’s wonderful reign." 1 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 161-62 (2d ed. 1898).

dianetic (dI-an-æ-tik). See DIANOETIC.

diarchy. See DYARCHY.

diairie. See TALLY.

diacritic (dI-a-air-ee-am), n. [fr. Latin] A form of logical reasoning that proceeds from one statement of opinion or belief considered authoritative because of the dignity of the person making it. 2. A familiar rule; a maxim. PI. diacia. [Cases: Courts C—92.]

"As a dictum is by definition no part of the doctrine of the decision, and as the citing of it as a part of the doctrine is almost certain to bring upon a brief maker adverse comment, lawyers are accustomed to speak of a dictum rather slightly, and sometimes they go so far as to intimate a belief that the pronouncing of a dictum is the doing of a wrong. Yet it must not be forgotten that dicta are frequently, and indeed usually, correct, and that to give an occasional illustration, or to say that the doctrine of the case would not apply to some case of an hypothetical nature, or to trace the history of a doctrine, even though it be conceded, as it must, that such passages are not essential to the deciding of the very case, is often extremely useful to the profession." William M. Lile et al., Brief Making and the Use of Law Books 307 (3d ed. 1914).

dictum proprium (dI-tam proh-pree-æm). A personal or individual dictum that is given by the judge who delivers an opinion but that is not necessarily concurred in by the whole court and is not essential to the disposition of the case. — Also termed (loosely) dictum proprium.

dictum de Kenilworth (dI-tam dee ken-æl-warrth). n. [Law Latin “edict of Kenilworth”] Hist. A declaration of an agreement between Edward I and the barons who had opposed him under the leadership of Simon de Montfort. The agreement, which concerned rent on the lands forfeited in the rebellion, was so called because it was made at Kenilworth castle in Warwickshire in A.D. 1266. It was published in the Statutes of the Realm and 52 Hen. 3.

diei dictio (dt-e-e dik-shee-oh), [Latin “appointing a day”] Roman law. 1. A magistrate’s notice summoning the accused to appear on a fixed day for trial. 2. The service of a summons. — Also written diei dictitio, diem dicere.

diem clausit extremum (d1-am klaw-zit ek-stree-mom), n. [Law Latin “he closed his last day”] Hist. 1. A chancery writ, founded on the statute of Marlbury, ordering the county escheator, after the death of a chief tenant of the Crown, to summon a jury to determine the amount and value of land owned by the chief tenant, to determine the next heir, and to reclaim the property for the Crown. • It was a type of inquisition post mortem.

“Diem clausit extremum is a writ that lies where the king’s tenant that holds in chief, dies; then this writ shall be directed to the escheator, to inquire of what estate he was seised, who is next heir, and his age, and of the certainty and value of the land, and of whom it is helden; and the inquisition shall be returned into the chancery, which is commonly called the office after the death of that person.” Termes de la Ley 169 (1st Am. ed. 1812).

2. An Exchequer writ ordering a sheriff to summon a jury to investigate a Crown debtor’s place of death and amount of property owned, and to levy the property of the deceased’s heirs and executors. • It was repealed by the Crown Proceedings Act of 1947.

“And there is another writ of diem clausit extremum awarded out of the exchequer, after the death of an escheator or debtor of his majesty, to levy the debt of his heir, executor, administrator’s lands or goods.” Termes de la Ley 169 (1st Am. ed. 1812).

dies ad quem (dt-eez ad kwem), n. [Latin “the day to which”] Civil law. An ending date for a transaction; the ending date for computing time, such as the day on which interest no longer accrues.

dies amoris (dt-eez o-mor-is), n. [Law Latin] Hist. A day of favor; esp., a day set by the court for the defendant to make an appearance. • This was usu. the fourth day of the term, which was the first day the court normally sat for business. In addition, the defendant usu. had three days of grace from the summons to appear, but an appearance on the fourth day quarto die post (“on the fourth day thereafter”) was usu. sufficient.

dies a quo (dt-eez ay kwoh), n. [Latin “the day from which”] Civil law. A transaction’s commencement date; the date from which to compute time, such as a day when interest begins to accrue. La. Civ. Code art. 1784.

dies cedit (dt-eez see-dit). [Latin “the time begins to run”] Roman & Scots law. The day on which an interest, esp. a legacy, vests; the day on which a conditional obligation becomes due. • An interest usu., but not always, vested on the day of the testator’s death. — Also termed dies cedens. Cf. dies venit.

“...a legacy was due, or became a valid right, either at the death of the testator or the occurrence of a condition precedent. This vesting of the property or the accruing of an obligation determined the content and nature of the interests involved. What the legatary got was discovered by examining what the legacy actually carried with it on the day it became vested. To express the fact that the legacy had become vested, the technical expression dies cedens was used.” Max Radin, Handbook of Roman Law 434-35 (1927).

dies comitiales (dt-eez ko-mish-e-ee-ay-leez). [Latin] Roman law. The 190 days in the year when an election could be held or the people could assemble as a legislative body. • The praetors could not hold court while a legislative assembly was in session.

dies communes in banco (dt-eez ka-myoo neez in bang-koh), n. [Law Latin “common days before the bench”] 1. Regular appearance dates in court. — Also termed common-return days. 2. An enactment printed under the Statutes of Henry III, regulating continuances and writ return dates.

dies datus (dt-eez day-tas), n. [Law Latin “a given day”] A continuance, esp. for a defendant before a declaration is filed; a time of respite in a case. • A continuance granted after the filing of the declaration is called an imparlance. See imparlance.

dies datus in banco (dt-eez day-tas in bang-koh), n. [Law Latin “a day given before the bench”] 1. A day given before the bench, as distinguished from a day at nisi prius. 2. A day given at the parties’ request.

dies Dominicus (dt-eez do-min-i-kas), n. [Latin] The Lord’s day; Sunday.

dies excrescens (dt-eez ek-skree-sanz), n. [Law Latin “the increasing day”] The additional day in a leap year.

dies fasti (dt-eez fas-ti). [Latin] Roman law. A day when justice could be administered; a day when the praetor could officially pronounce the three words “do,” “dico,” and “addico.” — Also called trierbial days. Cf. nepastus.

dies feriati (dt-eez fer-ee-ay-ee-ti), n. [Latin] Roman & civil law. A holiday; holidays.

dies gratiae (dt-eez gray-shee-ee), n. [fr. Law French jour de grace] Hist. A day of grace, usu. granted to the plaintiff.

dies in banco. See days in bank.

dies intercissi (dt-eez in-tar-sti), n. [Latin “divided days”] Roman law. A day when the courts were open for only part of the day.

dies juridicus (dt-eez zuu-rid-i-kas), n. [Latin] A day when justice can be administered. • "This term was derived from the civil-law term dies fasti. See dies fasti.

dies marchiae (di-ez mar-kih-ee), n. [Law Latin "a day of the march"]. Hist. In the reign of Richard II, the annual day set aside for the wardens of the English and Scottish borders to hold peace talks and resolve differences.

dies nefasti (di-ez nee-fas-i), n. 1. NEFASTUS (2). 2. See dies non juridicus.

dies non (di-ez Non). See dies non juridicus.

dies non juridicus (di-ez non juu-rid-i-kos), n. [Law Latin "a day not juridical"] A day exempt from court proceedings, such as a holiday or a Sunday. — Often shortened to dies non.

dies pacis (di-ez pay-sis), n. [Law Latin "day of peace"] Hist. A day of peace. • The days were originally divided into two categories: dies pacis ecclesiae ("a day of the peace of the church") and dies pacis regis ("a day of the Crown’s peace").

dies religiosi (di-ez re-lih-ee-oh-si), [Latin] Roman law. Religious days on which it was unlawful to transact legal or political business.

dies solis (di-ez soh-lis), n. [Latin "day of the sun"] See solar day under DAY.

dies veniti (di-ez vee-nit), [Latin "the day has come"] Roman & Scots law. The date when an interest is both vested and actionable. • It is usu. the day when the heir accepts the inheritance and a legatee can claim payment of a legacy. — Also termed dies veniens. Cf. dies cedit.

"But the legacy, though vested, is not yet so completely the property of the legateary that he may bring an action for it. To express the fact that such a right of action accrues, the term dies veniti was used. In general, it may be said that dies veniens occurred when, and not until, the heres has actually entered upon the inheritance. But, of course, if the legacy was conditional, the heres may enter before the condition happens. In that case, dies venienti will occur simultaneously with dies cedens; i.e., the legacy will vest and the bequest become actionable at the same moment.

diet. 1. A regimen, esp. of food. 2. (cap.) A nation’s parliamentary assembly, as in Israel, Japan, or some eastern European nations. 3. A governing body’s meeting day for legislative, political, or religious purposes; specif., a national assembly of various European countries, such as the diet of the German empire, which was summoned by the emperor regularly to perform various functions, including levying taxes, enacting laws, and declaring war. 4. Scots law. A day to perform a duty, such as a court sitting day, an appearance day, and a criminal pleading or trial day. — Also spelled dyet.

"In procedure on indictment there are two diets, the pleading diet, when the accused is called to plead, and the trial diet when, if he has pled not guilty, he is tried." David M. Walker, The Oxford Companion to Law 357 (1980).

dieta (di-ee-to), n. [fr. Latin dies "day"] Hist. 1. A day’s journey. 2. A day’s work. 3. A day’s expenses.

dietary law. Any of the body of laws observed by members of various faiths regulating what foods may be eaten, how the foods must be prepared and served, and what combinations and contacts (e.g., between meat and milk) are prohibited.

di. et fi. (di et fi). abbr. DILECTO ET FIDEI.

Dieu et mon droit (dyuu a japan drwah). [French "God and my right"] The motto of the royal arms of England. • It was first used by Richard I and, with the exception of Elizabeth I, was continually used from Edward III to William III, who used the motto je maintiendrai. Queen Anne used Elizabeth I’s motto, semper eadem, but Dieu et mon droit has been used since her death.

difacere (di-fay-see-ree), vb. [fr. Old French defacer] Hist. To deface; to mutilate. — Also termed disfacere; defacere.

different-department rule. A doctrine holding that people who work for the same employer are not fellow servants if they do not do the same work or do not work in the same department. • This rule, which creates an exception to the fellow-servant doctrine, has been rejected by many jurisdictions. See FELLOW-SERVANT DOCTRINE; fellow servant under SERVANT. [Cases: Labor and Employment C: 2921.]

differential pricing. (1946) The setting of the price of a product or service differently for different customers. See PRICE DISCRIMINATION.

difforciare (di-for-shee-air-ee), vb. [Law Latin "to deny"] Hist. To keep (something) from someone; to deny (something) to someone.

diffused surface water. See WATER.

DIF system. See DISCRIMINANT FUNCTION.

digama (dig-a-ma), See DEUTEROGAMY.

digamy (dig-a-mee). See DEUTEROGAMY.

digest. n. (14c) 1. An index of legal propositions showing which cases support each proposition; a collection of summaries of reported cases, arranged by subject and subdivided by jurisdiction and court. • The chief purpose of a digest is to make the contents of reports available and to group together those cases bearing on some specific point. The American Digest System covers the decisions of all American courts of last resort, state and federal, from 1658 to present. — Abbr. D.; Dig.

"An important and numerous class of books included in the general division designated as books of secondary authority is the group known by the generic name of 'Digests.' A Digest is essentially an index to Cases. But it is much more than an ordinary index, for it indicates the holdings and (in some, though not all, publications) the facts of each case. Any particular digest is a summary of the case law coming within its scope, and its units are summaries of particular points of particular cases. What the syllabi of a reported case are to that case, a digest is to many cases. Were a digest simply a collection of citations to cases, arranged logically according to the contents of such cases, it would be a search book; but, being a summary of the case law, it is a book of secondary authority.' William M. Lile et al., Brief Making and the Use of Law Books 68 (3d ed. 1914).

2. Civil law. (cap.) A compilation and systematic statement of the various areas of law; chiefly, the Pandects of Justinian in 50 books, known as the Digest. — Also termed digesta; digests. See PANDECT (2).

digital agenda. Copyright. A series of 10 proposed changes to copyright law announced by WIPO in 1999 and designed to protect intellectual-property rights on the Internet while promoting e-commerce. — Also termed WIPO digital agenda.

digital cash. See e-money under money.

digital certificate. A publicly available computer-based record that identifies the certifying authority and the subscriber who was issued a digital signature for electronically transmitted documents and that also provides the person's public key for decrypting the digital signature. • Subscribers register with certification authorities to obtain digital signatures. Certificates may include additional information, including issuance and expiration dates, and recommended reliance limits for transactions relying on the certificate. The certificate also serves as an electronic notarization when attached to an electronic document by the sender.

digital fingerprinting. See steganography.

Digital Millennium Copyright Act. A 1998 federal law harmonizing United States copyright protection with international law, limiting copyright liability for Internet service providers, and expanding software owners' ability to copy programs. • Among many other provisions, the statute extends copyright protection to computer programs, movies, and other audiovisual works worldwide; attempts to regulate cyberspace; forbids devices whose purpose is to evade digital antipiracy tools; and bars the production or distribution of falsified copyright-management information. 17 USCA §§ 1301–1332. — Abbr. DMCA. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property ⊂ □ 34, 67.3.] digital sampling. See sampling.

digital signature. See signature.

digital watermarking. See steganography.

dignitary, adj. Of or relating to one's interest in personal dignity, as contrasted with one's interest in freedom from physical injury and property damage. • Tort actions that compensate a plaintiff for a dignitary insult rather than physical injury or property damage include false-light privacy and negligent infliction of emotional distress.

dignitary, n. 1. A person who holds a high rank or honor. 2. Eccles. law. A person who, by virtue of holding a superior office stands above ordinary priests and canons.

dignitary tort. See tort.

dignity, n. 1. The state of being noble; the state of being dignified. 2. An elevated title or position. 3. A person holding an elevated title; a dignitary. 4. A right to hold a title of nobility, which may be hereditary or for life. "Dignities may be hereditary, such as peerages . . . or for life, such as life peerages and knightshoods. The dignities of peerages and baronetcies are created by writ or letters patent, that of knighthood by dubbing as knight. A dignity of inheritance may also exist by prescription. Dignities of inheritance are incorporeal hereditaments having been originally annexed to the possession of certain lands or created by a grant of those lands and are generally limited to the grantee and his heirs or his heirs of the body. If heirs are not mentioned, the grantee holds for life only. The heirs are determined by the rules which governed the descent of land prior to 1926." David M. Walker, The Oxford Companion to Law 358 (1980).

dilapidation. (often pl.) Damage to a building resulting from acts of either commission or omission. • A dilapidation may give rise to liability if it constitutes an act of waste, a breach of contract, or a statutory violation. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant ⊂ □ 55, 125, 154, 166.]

dilapidations, action for (di-lap-a-day-shənz). Hist. An action brought by a new incumbent of a benefice for damages rising from the disrepair of the houses or buildings on the benefice. • The incumbent — whether of a rectory, a vicarage, or a chapel — sued the executors or administrators of the incumbent's deceased predecessor (who was not liable for the disrepairs while living). The incumbent of a benefice was bound to maintain the parsonage, farm buildings, and chancel in good and substantial repair, restoring and rebuilding when necessary, according to the original plan. But the incumbent did not have to supply or maintain anything in the nature of ornament.

dilatory (di-lə-tor-ə), adj. (15c) Tending to cause delay <the judge's opinion criticized the lawyer's persistent dilatory tactics>.

dilecto et fideli (di-lek-toh et fī-deel i). [Law Latin] To his beloved and faithful. • This phrase was used in various writs. — Abbr. dl. et fi.

diligence. (14c) 1. A continual effort to accomplish something. 2. Care; caution; the attention and care required from a person in a given situation. • The Roman-law equivalent is dilegentia. See DILEGENTIA.

"Care, or the absence of negligentia, is dilegentia. The use of the word diligence in this sense is obsolete in modern English, though it is still retained as an archaism of legal diction. In ordinary usage, diligence is opposed to idleness, great diligence. 1. See due diligence (1). 2. See ordinary diligence.

due diligence. (18c) 1. The diligence reasonably expected from, and ordinarily exercised by, a person who seeks to satisfy a legal requirement or to discharge an obligation. — Also termed reasonable diligence; common diligence. 2. Corporations & securities. A prospective buyer's or broker's investigation and analysis of a target company, a piece of property, or a newly issued security. • A failure to exercise due diligence may sometimes result in liability, as when a broker recommends a security without first investigating it adequately. [Cases: Securities Regulation §§ 25.21(4), 25.62(2).] 3. Due diligence against the heritage. Scots law. A writ of execution allowing a creditor to proceed against a debtor's real property.

diligent, adj. Careful; attentive; persistent in doing something.

diligentia (dil-a-jen-shee-a), n. [Latin] Roman law. Carefulness; diligence. • The failure to exercise diligentia might make a person liable if contractually obliged to look after another's interests, or it might result in tort liability. See DILIGENCE. Cf. NEGLIGENTIA. ‘The texts distinguish two standards of diligence, a higher and a lower. The higher is the diligence which the good father of a family habitually exhibits in his own affairs (diligentia exacta or exactissima — diligentia boni patris-familias). The lower is the diligence which the person in question exhibits in his own affairs (diligentia quam suis rebus). This may, in fact, reach a high degree of diligence or it may not. But, at least, where this standard is applied nothing extraordinary is expected. It is a concrete standard. It is enough that the person in question pursues his normal course. According to a traditional terminology, where the first standard is applied, there is said to be liability for culpa levis in abstracto — slight negligence in the abstract; in the second case there is liability for culpa levis in concreto — slight negligence in the concrete.' R.W. Lee, The Elements of Roman Law 288 (4th ed. 1956).

diligentia exactissima (dil-a-jen-shee-a eks-ak-tis-sa-ma), n. [Latin] Roman law. Extraordinary diligence that a head of a family habitually exercises in business. — Also termed diligentia exacta; diligentia boni patris-familias. See extraordinary diligence under DILIGENCE.

diligentia media (dil-i-jen-shee-a mee-dee-a), n. [Law Latin] Scots law. Middle level of diligence; the level of diligence that a person of ordinary prudence exercises in his or her own affairs. — Also termed diligentia quam suis rebus (dil-a-jen-shee-a kwam s[i]t-oo is ree-bas). See ordinary diligence under DILIGENCE.

diligentia quam suis rebus. See diligentia media.

diligent inquiry. A careful and good-faith probing to ascertain the truth of something.

Dillon's rule. The doctrine that a unit of local government may exercise only those powers that the state expressly grants to it, the powers necessarily and fairly implied from that grant, and the powers that are indispensable to the existence of the unit of local government. • For the origins of this rule, see 1 John F. Dillon, The Law of Municipal Corporations § 89, at 115 (3d ed. 1881). [Cases: Municipal Corporations §§ 57-58.]

dilution. (17c) 1. The act or an instance of diminishing a thing's strength or lessening its value. 2. Corporations. The reduction in the monetary value or voting power of stock by increasing the total number of outstanding shares. 3. Constitutional law. The limitation of the effectiveness of a particular group's vote by legislative reapportionment or political gerrymandering. • Such dilution violates the Equal Protection Clause. — Also termed vote dilution. [Cases: Constitutional Law 3658.] 4. Trademarks. The impairment of a famous trademark's strength, effectiveness, or distinctiveness through the use of the mark on an unrelated product, usu. blurring the trademark's distinctive character or tarnishing it with an unsavory association. • Trade­mark dilution may occur even when the use is not competitive and when it creates no likelihood of confusion. The elements of trademark dilution are (1) ownership of a famous mark and (2) actual dilution. But a plaintiff does not have to prove actual loss of sales or profits. Moseley v. V Secret Catalogue, Inc., 537 U.S. 418, 123 S.Ct. 1115 (2003). See BLURRING; TARNISHMENT. [Cases: Trademarks 1458.]

dilution doctrine. Trademarks. The rule protecting a trademark from a deterioration in strength, as when a person seeks to use the mark for an unrelated product.

diplomatic, n. See DIPLOMATICS.

diplomatic agent. See AGENT (2).

diplomatic bag. See DIPLOMATIC POUCH.

diplomatic corps. Int'l law. The ambassador and other diplomatic personnel assigned by their government to a foreign capital.

diplomatic immunity. See IMMUNITY (1).

diplomatic pouch. 1. A bag containing official correspondence, documents, or articles intended exclusively for official communications of a nation with its diplomatic protection. Protection given by one country’s representatives to a person, usu. its citizen, against another country’s alleged violation of international law.

“The term diplomatic protection is not altogether precise. First, not only diplomatic agents and missions and other foreign offices may and do exercise diplomatic protection, but also, at a different level, consuls, and, although very rarely, military forces. Secondly, the term diplomatic protection does not clearly denote the boundary line to other diplomatic activities for the benefit of individuals, such as mere promotion of interests in one’s own nationals in a foreign State, or friendly intercessions with foreign authorities. Thus, diplomatic or consular actions to obtain concessions or other government contracts for nationals from the receiving State, or the arrangement of legal defense for a justly imprisoned national are not diplomatic protection in our sense; they are usually neither directed against the other State nor based on a real or alleged violation of international law. All these last-mentioned activities may be called diplomatic protection only if the term is taken in a very broad sense.” William Karl Geck, “Diplomatic Protection,” in 1 Encyclopedia of Public International Law 1046 (1992).

diplomatic relations. Int’l law. The customary form of permanent contact and communication between sovereign countries. [Cases: Ambassadors and Consuls ☐–3; International Law ☐–10–10.2.]

diplomatics. The science of deciphering and authenticating ancient writings. • The principles were largely developed by the Benedictine Dom Mabillon in his 1681 work entitled De re diplomatica. — Also termed diplomatic (n.).

“Diplomatics, the science derived from the study of ancient diplomas, so called from being written on two leaves, or on double tablets. The Romans used the term more specially for the letters of license to use the public conveyances provided at the different stations, and generally for public grants. Subsequently it attained a more extended signification, and in more modern times has been used as a general term for ancient imperial and ecclesiastical acts and grants, public treaties, deeds of conveyance, letters, wills, and similar instruments, drawn up in forms and marked with peculiarities varying with their dates and countries. With the revival of literature, the importance of such documents in verifying facts and establishing public and private rights led to their being brought together from the historical works and the monastic registers in which they had been copied, or, in rarer instances, from public and ecclesiastical archives where the originals were still preserved. Then arose questions of authenticity, and doubts of the so-called originals; disputants defended or condemned them; and, in order to establish principles for distinguishing the genuine from the forged, treatises were written on the whole subject of these diplomas.” 7 Encyclopaedia Britannica 220 (9th ed. 1907).

Diplomatic Security Service. See BUREAU OF DIPLOMATIC SECURITY.

diptych (di-tikh), n. [fr. Latin diptycha fr. Greek diptycha “two-leaved”] 1. Roman law. Two tablets usu. made of wood or metal and tied with string through holes at the edges so that they could fold over (like a book with two leaves). • Diptychs were often used to send letters, and the text was sometimes written using a stylus, once on the inside waxed leaves and again on the outside, so that it could be read without opening the tablets. 2. Hist. Eccles. law. Tablets used by the church, esp. to register names of those making supplication, and to record births, marriages, and deaths. 3. Hist. Eccles. law. The registry of those names.

dirigation (di-ray-sha-nair-ee), vb. [fr. Latin dis “thoroughly” + ratiocinari “to reason”] Hist. 1. To prove; to establish one’s right. 2. To disprove; to refute (an allegation).

direct action (di-rek-shan). 1. The course taken in relation to the point toward or away from which something or someone is moving; a point to or from which a person or thing moves <the storm moved in a northerly direction>. 2. The course on which something is aimed <the direction of the trial>. 3. An act of guidance <under the chair's direction>. 4. An order; an instruction on how to proceed <the judge's direction to the jury>. See JURY INSTRUCTION. 5. The address to the court contained on a bill of equity <the direction on the bill>. [Cases: Equity $131.] 6. A board of directors; a board of managers <the direction met on Wednesday>.

directive. See ADVANCE DIRECTIVE.

Directive Harmonizing the Term of Copyright and Certain Related Rights. Copyright. A 1993 European Commission initiative setting the term of most copyright protection at the life of the author plus 70 years. • The directive extended coverage in most member countries to match that of Germany, whose term was the longest on the Continent. In 2006, it was repealed. Its provisions were incorporated into the Directive on the Term of Protection of Copyright and Certain Related Rights. — Also termed Duration Directive.

Directive on Certain Aspects of Electronic Commerce in the Internal Market. Copyright. A 2000 European Commission initiative that harmonizes members' laws governing commercial use of the Internet, including electronic contracts, the liability of service providers, unsolicited commercial e-mail, and related issues. — Also termed Electronic Commerce Directive; E-Commerce Directive.

Directive on Rental, Lending and Certain Neighboring Rights. Copyright. A 1991 European Commission initiative requiring members, among other things, to (1) recognize the right of a copyright owner to decide whether the work may be relayed by either cable or satellite, and (2) define the "place" of a satellite broadcast as the location where the signal originates. — Also termed Cable and Satellite Directive.

Directive on the Coordination of Certain Rules Concerning Copyright and Neighbouring Rights Applicable to Satellite Broadcasting and Cable Re-transmission. Copyright. A 1993 European Commission initiative requiring members, among other things, to (1) recognize the right of a copyright owner to decide whether the work may be relayed by either cable or satellite, and (2) define the "place" of a satellite broadcast as the location where the signal originates. — Also termed Cable and Satellite Directive.

Directive on the Legal Protection of Computer Programs. Copyright. A 1991 European Commission initiative requiring members to protect computer software by copyright rather than by patent or some sui generis set of legal rights. • The purpose of the Directive was to harmonize copyright laws among the members of the European Commission. It standardized the degree of originality required for software to qualify for copyright protections. — Also termed Computer Programs Directive; Software Directive.
Directive on the Legal Protection of Databases. Copyright. A 1996 European Commission initiative that sets uniform copyright protection among members for databases of original content and requires a sui generis system of protection for databases that do not qualify for copyright protection because their content is not original. — Also termed Database Directive.

Directive on the Term of Protection of Copyright and Certain Related Rights. See directive harmonizing the term of copyright and certain related rights.

directive to physicians. See living will.

direct order of alienation. (1852) Real estate. The principle that a grantee who assumes the debt on a mortgaged property is required to pay the mortgage debt if the original mortgagor defaults. [Cases: Mortgages C——279.]

director (di-rek-tor). (15c) 1. One who manages, guides, or orders; a chief administrator. 2. A person appointed or elected to sit on a board that manages the affairs of a corporation or other organization by electing and exercising control over its officers. — Also termed trustee. See board of directors. Cf. officer (1).

affiliated director. See outside director.

class director. 1. A director whose term on a corporate board is staggered with those of the other directors to make a hostile takeover more difficult. 2. A director elected or appointed to a corporate board to represent a special interest group, e.g., the preferred stockholders.

dummy director. A board member who is a mere figurehead and exercises no real control over the corporation’s business. — Also termed accommodation director; nominal director.

inside director. A director who is also an employee, officer, or major shareholder of the corporation. [Cases: Corporations C——310(1).] interlocking director. A director who simultaneously serves on the boards of two or more corporations that deal with each other or have allied interests.

outside director. A nonemployee director with little or no direct interest in the corporation. — Also termed affiliated director. [Cases: Corporations C——310(1).]

provisional director. A director appointed by a court to serve on a close corporation’s deadlocked board of directors.

public director. A director elected from outside a corporation’s shareholders or an organization’s membership to represent the public interest.

dirt-for-debt transfer. A transaction in which a bankrupt debtor satisfies all or part of a secured debt by transferring the collateral to the creditor. [Cases: Bankruptcy C—3564.]

disability. (18c) 1. The inability to perform some function; esp., the inability of one person to alter a given relation with another person. 2. An objectively measurable condition of impairment, physical or mental <his disability entitled him to workers’ compensation benefits>. — Also termed handicap; incapacity. [Cases: Civil Rights C—1019, 1218; Workers’ Compensation C—802.]

“The Supreme Court has cautioned that [the Americans with Disabilities Act] requires that disabilities be evaluated ‘with respect to an individual’ and must be determined based on whether an impairment substantially limits the ‘major life activities of such individual.’ The Court conceded that ‘some impairments may invariably cause a substantial limitation of a major life activity,’ but ‘[t]he determination of whether an individual has a disability is not necessarily based on the name or diagnosis of the impairment the person has, but rather on the effect of that impairment on the life of the individual.’ As a result, courts are reluctant to characterize any particular impairment as a per se disability under ADA. And the fact that an impairment is considered to be a disability under a different set of criteria for some purpose other than the ADA has no bearing on the determination of whether an individual is disabled within the meaning of ADA.” Harold S. Lewis Jr. & Elizabeth J. Norman, Employment Discrimination Law and Practice 485–86 (2001).

partial disability. A worker’s inability to perform all the duties that he or she could do before an accident or illness, even though the worker can still engage in some gainful activity on the job. [Cases: Workers’ Compensation C—856–862.]

permanent disability. (1804) A disability that will indefinitely prevent a worker from performing some or all of the duties that he or she could do before an accident or illness. [Cases: Workers’ Compensation C—863, 864.]

physical disability. (1826) An incapacity caused by a physical defect or infirmity, or by bodily imperfection or mental weakness.

temporary disability. (18c) A disability that exists until an injured worker is as far restored as the nature of the injury will permit. [Cases: Workers’ Compensation C—863, 864.]

temporary total disability. Total disability that is not permanent.

total disability. (18c) A worker’s inability to perform employment-related duties because of a physical or mental impairment. [Cases: Workers’ Compensation C—846–855.]

3. Incapacity in the eyes of the law <most of a minor’s disabilities are removed when he or she turns 18>. — Also termed incapacity.

canonical disability. A canonical impediment (usu. impotence). See canonical impediment under IMPEDIMENT.

civil disability. (18c) The condition of a person who has had a legal right or privilege revoked as a result of a criminal conviction, as when a person’s driver’s license is revoked after a DWI conviction. Cf. civil death (2) under DEATH.
disability benefits. See disability compensation.

disability clause. Insurance. A life-insurance-policy provision providing for a waiver of premiums during the policyholder’s period of disability, and sometimes providing for monthly payments equal to a percentage of the policy’s face value. [Cases: Insurance C=>2035.]

disability compensation. Payments from public or private funds to a disabled person who cannot work, such as social-security or workers’ compensation benefits. — Also termed disability benefits. [Cases: Social Security and Public Welfare C=>140.5–140.85; Workers’ Compensation C=>836–902.]

disability insurance. See insurance.

disability retirement plan. See employee benefit plan.

disabled person. See person (1).

disablement, n. (15c) 1. The act of incapacitating or immobilizing. 2. The imposition of a legal disability.

disabling restraints. (1963) Limits on the alienation of property. • These restraints are sometimes void as being against public policy. [Cases: Perpetuities C=>6(1).]

disabling statute. See statute.

disadvocate (dis-ad-v;:;-kair-ee), vb. [Law Latin] To deny; to disavow.

disaffirm (dis-a-form), vb. (16c) 1. To repudiate; to revoke consent; to disclaim the intent to be bound by an earlier transaction. 2. To declare (a voidable contract) to be void.

disaffirmance (dis-a-form-ants). 1. An act of denial; a repudiation, as of an earlier transaction. [Cases: Contracts C=>272.] 2. A declaration that a voidable contract (such as one entered into by a minor) is void. — Also termed disaffirmation. [Cases: Infants C=>58(1).]

"Disaffirmance is an operative act whereby the legal relations created by an infant’s contract are terminated and discharged and other legal relations substituted. Inasmuch as the infant’s executory promise does not operate to create any legal duty in him (the infant being at all times at liberty or privileged not to perform), his disaffirmance is not the discharge of such a duty. A return promise by an adult, however, creates a legal duty and the infant has a correlative right in personam. A disaffirmance terminates these." William R. Anson, Principles of the Law of Contract 181 (Arthur L. Corbin ed., 3d Am. ed. 1919).

disafforestation (dis-a-for-ast or fahr-ast), vb. [fr. French desaforester] Hist. To free lands from the restrictions of the forest laws and return them to the status of ordinary lands. — Also termed deforestation.

disagreement. 1. A difference of opinion; a lack of agreement. 2. A quarrel. 3. An annulment; a refusal to accept something, such as an interest in an estate.

disallow, vb. (14c) 1. To refuse to allow (something). 2. To reject (something).

disant (dis-awlt), vb. Hist. To disable (a person).

disappeared person. (1944) 1. A person who has been absent from home for a specified number of continuous years (often five or seven) and who, during that period, has not communicated with the person most likely to know his or her whereabouts. See seven-years’ absence rule; missing person. [Cases: Absentees C=>2.] 2. Human-rights law. A person who has been illegally detained or kidnapped, often by governmental authorities or soldiers, and whose current whereabouts and condition are unknown and undiscoverable.

disappearing quorum. See quorum.

disappropriation. 1. Eccles. law. The alienation of church property from its original use; the severance of property from church ownership or possession. 2. The release of property from individual ownership or possession.

disapprove, vb. 1. To pass unfavorable judgment on (something). 2. To decline to sanction (something).

disarmament. Int’l law. The negotiated or voluntary reduction of military arms, esp. nuclear weapons, to a greatly reduced level or to nil. Cf. arms control.

disaster. A calamity; a catastrophic emergency.

disaster area. (1953) A region officially declared to have suffered a catastrophic emergency, such as a flood or hurricane, and therefore eligible for government aid. [Cases: United States C=>82(5).] disaster loss. See loss.

Disaster Relief Act. A federal statute that provides a means by which the federal government can help state and local governments to relieve suffering and damage resulting from disasters such as hurricanes, tornadoes, floods, earthquakes, volcanic eruptions, landslides, mudslides, drought, fire, and explosions. • A 1974 amendment established a process for the President to declare affected communities disaster areas. [Cases: United States C=>82(5).]

disavow (dis-a-vow), vb. To disown; to disclaim knowledge of; to repudiate <the company disavowed the acts of its agent>. — disavowal, n.

disbarment, n. (1862) The action of expelling a lawyer from the bar or from the practice of law, usu. because of some disciplinary violation. • One who has passed the bar, been called to the bar, or been admitted to the bar is privileged to stand inside the wooden barrier that separates the gallery from the actual courtroom, particularly the judge’s bench, and conduct business with the court. So this term literally describes the loss of the privilege. Although disbarment is typically a permanent removal from the practice of law, in some jurisdictions a disbarred attorney may (after a certain period) petition for readmission. In England and Wales, only a barrister is disbarred; a solicitor is struck off the roll, so the expulsion of a solicitor is termed striking off the roll. See struck off. [Cases: Attorney and Client C=>59,14.] — disbar, vb. disbursement (dis-bə-rə-mənt), n. The act of paying out money, commonly from a fund or in settlement of a debt or account payable <dividend disbursement>. — disburse, vb.

DISC. abbr. DOMESTIC INTERNATIONAL SALES CORPORATION.

discarcare (dis-kahr-kair-ee), vb. [fr. Latin dis- + carcare “to charge”] Hist. To unload (cargo), usu. from a ship. — Also termed discargare.

discharge (dis-chahrj), n. (15c) 1. Any method by which a legal duty is extinguished; esp., the payment of a debt or satisfaction of some other obligation. 2. Bankruptcy. The release of a debtor from monetary obligations upon adjudication of bankruptcy; DISCHARGE IN BANKRUPTCY. Cf. RELEASE (1). [Cases: Bankruptcy C= 3341-3378.]

— dischargeability proceeding. Bankruptcy. A hearing at which the court determines whether a debt is dischargeable or is subject to an exception to discharge. 11 USCA § 523. [Cases: Bankruptcy C= 3385, 3395.]

— dischargeable claim. Bankruptcy. A claim that can be discharged in bankruptcy. [Cases: Bankruptcy C= 3341-3378.]

— discharged contract. See void contract (2) under CONTRACT.

— discharge hearing. Bankruptcy. A hearing at which the court informs the debtor whether a discharge has been granted or the reasons why a discharge has not been granted. See REAFFIRMATION HEARING. [Cases: Bankruptcy C= 310.1.]

— discharging bond. See bond (2).

— disciplinary proceeding. (1900) An action brought to reprimand, suspend, or expel a licensed professional or other person from a profession or other group because of unprofessional, unethical, improper, or illegal conduct. • A disciplinary proceeding against a lawyer

9. Parliamentary law. A motion by which a deliberative assembly, having referred a matter to a committee, takes the matter’s further consideration out of the committee and back into its own hands. — Also termed discharge a committee; withdrawal. — discharge (dis-chahrj), vb.

administrative discharge. A military-service discharge given by administrative means and not by court-martial.

bad-conduct discharge. A punitive discharge that a court-martial can give to a member of the military, usu. as punishment for repeated minor offenses. — Abbr. BCD.

dishonorable discharge. The most severe punitive discharge that a court-martial can give to a member of the military. • A dishonorable discharge may result from conviction for an offense recognized in civilian law as a felony or of a military offense requiring severe punishment. Only a general court-martial can give a dishonorable discharge.

general discharge. One of the administrative discharges given to a member of the military who does not qualify for an honorable discharge.

— honorable discharge. A formal final judgment passed by the government on a soldier’s entire military record, and an authoritative declaration that he or she has left the service in a status of honor. • Full veterans’ benefits are given only to a person honorably discharged.

— undesirable discharge. One of the administrative discharges given to a member of the military who does not qualify for an honorable discharge.

— retaliatory discharge. A discharge that is made in retaliation for the employee’s conduct (such as reporting unlawful activity by the employer to the government) and that clearly violates public policy. • Federal and state statutes may entitle an employee who is dismissed by retaliatory discharge to recover damages. [Cases: Civil Rights C= 1247, 1249(2); Labor and Employment C= 758.]

— wrongfull discharge. (1825) A discharge for reasons that are illegal or that violate public policy. [Cases: Civil Rights C= 1122; Labor and Employment C= 758.]

8. The dismissal of a member of the armed services from military service <the sergeant was honorably discharged>. [Cases: Armed Services C= 11, 22.]

most constructive discharges fall into one of two basic fact patterns. First, the employer can cause a constructive discharge by breaching the employee’s contract of employment in some manner short of termination. Second, the employer can make working conditions so intolerable that the employee feels compelled to quit.” — Mark A. Rothstein et al., Employment Law § 9.7, at 539 (1994).

9. Parliamentary law. A motion by which a deliberative assembly, having referred a matter to a committee, takes the matter’s further consideration out of the committee and back into its own hands. — Also termed discharge a committee; withdrawal. — discharge (dis-chahrj), vb.

dischargeability proceeding. Bankruptcy. A hearing at which the court determines whether a debt is dischargeable or is subject to an exception to discharge. 11 USCA § 523. [Cases: Bankruptcy C= 3318.1.]

discharge hearing. Bankruptcy. A hearing at which the court informs the debtor whether a discharge has been granted or the reasons why a discharge has not been granted. See REAFFIRMATION HEARING. [Cases: Bankruptcy C= 3318.1.]

— discharging bond. See bond (2).

— disciplinary proceeding. (1900) An action brought to reprimand, suspend, or expel a licensed professional or other person from a profession or other group because of unprofessional, unethical, improper, or illegal conduct. • A disciplinary proceeding against a lawyer disciplinary rule. (often cap.) (1890) A mandatory regulation stating the minimum level of professional conduct that a professional must sustain to avoid being subject to disciplinary action. • For lawyers, the disciplinary rules are found chiefly in the Model Code of Professional Responsibility. — Abbr. DR. Cf. ETHICAL CONSIDERATION. [Cases: Licenses C=>38.]

disciplinary, n. 1. Punishment intended to correct or instruct; esp., a sanction or penalty imposed after an official finding of misconduct. [Cases: Licenses C=>38.]

2. The punishment or penalties (often termed "sanctions") imposed by a disciplining agency on an attorney who has breached a rule of professional ethics. • Three types of discipline are common: disbarment, suspension, and reprimand (public or private). 3. Control gained by enforcing compliance or order. 4. Military law. A state of mind inducing instant obedience to a lawful order, no matter how unpleasant or dangerous such compliance might be. — discipline, vb. — disciplinary, adj.

disclaimer, n. (15c) 1. A renunciation of one's legal right or claim; esp., a renunciation of a patent claim, usu. to save the remainder of the application from being rejected. 2. A repudiation of another's legal right or claim. 3. A writing that contains such a renunciation or repudiation. 4. renunciation (2). — disclaim, vb.

disclaimer of warranty. (1881) An oral or written statement intended to limit a seller's liability for defects in the goods sold. • In some circumstances, printed words must be specific and conspicuous to be effective. [Cases: Sales C=>267.]

patent disclaimer. See statutory disclaimer.

qualified disclaimer. (1889) 1. A disclaimer with a restriction or condition attached. • In this sense it is qualified because it carries the restriction or condition. 2. A person's refusal to accept an interest in property so that he or she can avoid having to pay estate or gift taxes. • To be effective under federal tax law, the refusal must be in writing and must be executed no later than nine months from the time when the interest was created. In this sense, it is qualified in the sense of being within the lawful exemption. IRC (26 USCA) § 2518. [Cases: Internal Revenue C=>4177.20, 4205.10; Taxation C=>3319.]

statutory disclaimer. Patents. A patent applicant's amendment of a specification to relinquish one or more claims to the invention. 35 USCA § 253. • Before the statute was enacted, a single invalid claim was grounds for denying a patent. — Also termed patent disclaimer. See SPECIFICATION (3). [Cases: Patents C=>149, 154.]

terminal disclaimer. A patent applicant's statement shortening the term of the patent. • To revive an abandoned application for a design application or for a utility or plant application filed before June 8, 1995, the applicant must disclaim a period equal to the duration of abandonment. A terminal disclaimer may also be required in an application for an obvious variation on an existing patent with a common inventor or owner: to avoid a double-patenting rejection the inventor agrees that both patents will expire on the same day. 37 CFR 1.321. [Cases: Patents C=>131.]

disclosure, n. (16c) 1. The act or process of making known something that was previously unknown; a revelation of facts . See DISCOVERY.

defensive disclosure. See DEFENSIVE DISCLOSURE.

full disclosure. A complete revelation of all material facts.

public disclosure of private facts. (1964) The public revelation of some aspect of a person's private life without a legitimate public purpose. • The disclosure is actionable in tort if the disclosure would be highly objectionable to a reasonable person. See INVASION OF PRIVACY. [Cases: Torts C=>350.]

voluntary disclosure of offense. A person's uncoerced admission to an undiscovered crime. • Under the federal sentencing guidelines, a lighter sentence may be allowed. See USSG 5K2.16. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment C=>861.]

2. The mandatory divulging of information to a litigation opponent according to procedural rules. — Also termed compulsory disclosure; automatic disclosure. See DISCOVERY (2). [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure C=>1261; Pretrial Procedure C=>11.] — disclose, vb. — disclosural, adj.

"Rule 26(a) [of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure] reflects a shift away from the traditional method of obtaining discovery through the service of written demands toward requiring automatic disclosure by the parties of information that would invariably be requested. The goal of automatic disclosure is the creation of a more efficient and expeditious discovery process. . . . Rule 26(a)(1) provides for the initial disclosure of specified information relating to witnesses, documents, and insurance agreements. Rule 26(a)(2) provides for the disclosure of information regarding experts who may be used at trial. Rule 26(a)(3) provides for specified pretrial disclosures regarding witnesses, evidence, and objections." Jay E. Grenig & Jeffrey S. Kinsler, Handbook of Federal Civil Discovery and Disclosure § 1.15, at 65–66 (2d ed. 2002).

initial disclosure. Civil procedure. In federal practice, the requirement that parties make available to each other the following information without first receiving a discovery request: (1) the names, addresses, and telephone numbers of persons likely to have relevant, discoverable information, (2) a copy or description of all relevant documents, data compilations, and tangible items in the party's possession, custody, or control, (3) a damages computation, and (4) any relevant insurance agreements. Fed. R. Civ. P. 26(a) (1)(A)–(D). [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure C=>1261, 1272.]
3. Patents. A document explaining how an invention works in sufficient detail for one skilled in the art to be able to understand and duplicate the invention; everything revealed about an invention in the patent application, including drawings, descriptions, specifications, references to prior art, and claims. • An invention disclosure statement is sometimes attested by a knowledgeable witness, who signs and dates the disclosure document to establish the inventor's identity and the date of the invention before the patent application is prepared. An inventor can file a disclosure document with the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office before submitting a patent application, but the document's date has no relationship to the later application's effective filing date. See enablement requirement. Cf. enabling source; defensive disclosure. [Cases: Patents $99] 4. Patents. Publication (1).

Disclosure Document Program. Patents. A U.S. Patent and Trademark Office program allowing an inventor to file a preliminary description of an invention and establish its date of conception before applying for a patent. • The document can help establish a date of inventive effort for use in a later interference. — Abbr. DDP. Cf. provisional patent application. [Cases: Patents $97] discommon (dis-köm-an), vb. 1. To deprive of the right of common (e.g., the right to pasture). 2. To deprive (something, esp. land) of communable character. • A person could discommon land by separating or enclosing it. 3. To deprive (someone) of the privileges of a place, such as the right to use common land or to enjoy a church fellowship.

disconformity. See new matter.

discontinuance (dis-kan-tin-yoo-ants), n. (14c) 1. The termination of a lawsuit by the plaintiff; a voluntary dismissal or nonsuit. See dismissal; nonsuit (1); judgment of discontinuance under judgment. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure $1691; Pietrail Procedure $501.] 2. The termination of an estate-tail by a tenant in tail who conveys a larger estate in the land than is legally allowed. [Cases: Estates in Property $12] “Such is the injury of discontinuance; which happens when he who hath an estate-tail, maketh a larger estate of the land than by law he is entitled to do: in which case the estate is good, so far as his power extends who made it, but no farther. As if tenant in tail makes a feoffment in fee-simple, or for the life of the feoffee, or in taie which are beyond his power to make, for that by the common law extends no farther than to make a lease for his own life: the entry of the feoffee is lawful during the life of the feoffee: but if he retains the possession after the death of the feoffee, it is an injury, which is termed a discontinuance; the ancient legal estate, which ought to have survived to the heir in tail, being gone, or at least suspended, and for a while discontinued.” 3 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 171-72 (1768).

discontinuee, n. A person whose acquisition of an entailed estate causes a discontinuance of the fee tail heirs' right to the estate. Cf. discontinuor.

discontinuing easement. See discontinuous easement under easement.

discontinuor, n. A tenant in tail whose conveyance of the entailed estate causes a discontinuance. Cf. discontinuee.

discontinuous easement. See easement.

discontinuous servitude. See discontinuous easement under easement.

discount, n. (17c) 1. A reduction from the full amount or value of something, esp. a price. 2. An advance deduction of interest when a person lends money on a note, bill of exchange, or other commercial paper, resulting in its present value. See present value. 3. The amount by which a security's market value is below its face value. — Also termed bond discount. Cf. premium (3). — discount, vb.

bulk discount. See volume discount.
cash discount. (1889) 1. A seller's price reduction in exchange for an immediate cash payment. 2. A reduction from the stated price if the bill is paid on or before a specified date.

functional discount. 1. A supplier's price discount given to a purchaser based on the purchaser's role (such as warehousing or advertising) in the supplier's distributive system. • This type of discount typically reflects the value of services performed by the purchaser for the supplier. If a functional discount constitutes a reasonable reimbursement for the purchaser's actual marketing functions, it does not constitute unlawful price discrimination and does not violate antitrust laws. 2. A supplier's price discount based on the purchaser's relative distance from the supplier in the chain of distribution. • For example, a wholesaler or distributor usu. receives a greater discount than a retailer.

trade discount. (1889) 1. A discount from list price offered to all customers of a given type — for example, a discount offered by a lumber dealer to building contractors. 2. The difference between a seller's list price and the price at which the dealer actually sells goods to the trade.

volume discount. (1939) A price decrease based on a large-quantity purchase. — Also termed bulk discount; quantity discount.

discount bond. See bond (3). discount broker. See broker. discounted cash flow. See cash flow. discounted-cash-flow method. See discounted cash flow under cash flow. discount interest. See interest (3). discount loan. See loan. discount market. See market.
discount rate. See interest rate. discount share. See discount stock under stock. discount stock. See STOCK.
discount yield. See YIELD.
discouragable, adj. Subject to pretrial discovery <the defendant's attorney argued that the defendant's income-tax returns were not discoverable during the liability phase of the trial>. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure C= 1272; Pretrial Procedure C=27] discovered peril doctrine. See LAST-CLEAR-CHANCE DOCTRINE.
discreee. A party who is required to respond to a litigation's discovery request or order. Cf. DISCOVERER (1). discoverer. 1. A litigant who seeks information or material information. <the plaintiff filed a motion to compel discovery>. See INVENTOR. See 35 USCA § 101. [Cases: Patents C=1.]
discovering party. See DISCOVERER (1). discovery (dis-k3v-drt), adj. Archaic. Uncovered; exposed. 2. Not married, esp. a widow or a woman who has never married. discovery, n. (16c) 1. The act or process of finding or learning something that was previously unknown <after making the discovery, the inventor immediately applied for a patent>. 2. Compulsory disclosure, at a party's request, of information that relates to the litigation <the plaintiff filed a motion to compel discovery>. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 26–37; Fed. R. Crim. P. 16. • The primary discovery devices are interrogatories, depositions, requests for admissions, and requests for prod­uction. Although discovery typically comes from parties, courts also allow limited discovery from nonparties. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure C= 1261; Pretrial Procedure C=11.] 3. The facts or documents disclosed <the new associate spent all her time reviewing discovery>. 4. The pretrial phase of a lawsuit during which depo­sitions, interrogatories, and other forms of discovery are conducted. — discover, vb. — discoverable, adj.

“Discovery has broad scope. According to Federal Rule 26, which is the model in modern procedural codes, inquiry may be made into 'any matter, not privileged, that is relevant to the subject matter of the action.' Thus, discovery may be had of facts incidentally relevant to the issues in the pleadings even if the facts do not directly prove or disprove the facts in question." Geoffrey C. Hazard Jr. & Michele Tarullo, American Civil Procedure: An Introduction 115 (1993).

accelerated discovery. A party's production of relevant evidence to an opponent at a time earlier than would otherwise be required by rule or standing order of the court. • The accelerated discovery is usu. carried out in compliance with a specific court order or the parties' agreement. — Also termed accelerated disclosure. [Cases: Pretrial Procedure C=25.]
jurisdictional discovery. Discovery that is limited to finding facts relevant to whether the court has juris­diction. • A court may allow limited jurisdictional discovery before it rules on a motion to dismiss for lack of jurisdiction. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure C=1269.1; Pretrial Procedure C=24.]

merits discovery. Discovery to uncover facts that support the claim or defense, or that might lead to other facts that will support the allegations of a legal proceeding.

postjudgment discovery. (1967) Discovery conducted after judgment has been rendered, usu. to determine the nature of the judgment debtor's assets or to obtain testimony for use in future proceedings. — Also termed posttrial discovery. [Cases: Execution C= 373–400; Federal Civil Procedure C=2713.]

pretrial discovery. (1939) Discovery conducted before trial to reveal facts and develop evidence. • Modern procedural rules have broadened the scope of pretrial discovery to prevent the parties from surprising each other with evidence at trial. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure C=1261; Pretrial Procedure C=11.] reciprocity. See reverse Jencks material under JENCKS MATERIAL.

discovery abuse. (1975) 1. The misuse of the discovery process, esp. by making overbroad requests for information that is unnecessary or beyond the scope of permissible disclosure or by conducting discovery for an improper purpose. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure C= 1278; Pretrial Procedure C=28.] ‘The term ‘discovery abuse’ has been used as if it were a single concept, but it includes several different things. Thus, it is useful to subdivide ‘abuse’ into ‘misuse’ and ‘overuse.’ What is referred to as ‘misuse’ would include not only direct violation of the rules, as by failing to respond to a discovery request within the stated time limit, but also more subtle attempts to harass or obstruct an opponent, as by giving obviously inadequate answers or by requesting information that clearly is outside the scope of discovery. By ‘overuse’ is meant asking for more discovery than is necessary or appropriate to the particular case. ‘Overuse,’ in turn, can be subdivided into problems of ‘depth’ and of ‘breadth,’ with ‘depth’ referring to discovery that may be relevant but is simply excessive and ‘breadth’ referring to discovery requests that go into matters too far removed from the case." Charles Alan Wright, The Law of Federal Courts § 81, at 580 (5th ed. 1994). 2. The failure to respond adequately to proper discovery requests. — Also termed abuse of discovery. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure C= 1278; Pretrial Procedure C=44.1.] discovery immunity. (1975) An exemption provided by statute, caselaw, or court rules to exclude certain docu­ments and information from being disclosed during discovery.

discovery policy. See claims-made policy under INSURANCE POLICY.

discovery rule. (1916) Civil procedure. The rule that a limitations period does not begin to run until the plain­tiff discovers (or reasonably should have discovered) the injury giving rise to the claim. • The discovery rule usu. applies to injuries that are inherently difficult to detect, such as those resulting from medical malpractice. See STATUTE OF LIMITATIONS. Cf. OCCURRENCE RULE. [Cases: Limitation of Actions C=95, 100.]
discredit, vb. To destroy or impair the credibility of (a witness, a piece of evidence, or a theory); to lessen the degree of trust to be accorded to (a witness or document). [Cases: Witnesses <-> 330.] — discredit, n.

discreet (di-skreet), adj. Exercising discretion; prudent; judicious; discerning.

discrete (di-skreet), adj. Individual; separate; distinct.

discretion (di-skresh-<n-an). (14c) 1. Wise conduct and management; cautious discernment; prudence. 2. Individual judgment; the power of free decision-making.

sole discretion. An individual’s power to make decisions without anyone else’s advice or consent.

3. Criminal & tort law. The capacity to distinguish between right and wrong, sufficient to make a person responsible for his or her own actions. [Cases: Criminal Law <-> 46.] 4. A public official’s power or right to act in certain circumstances according to personal judgment and conscience, often in an official or representative capacity. — Also termed discretionary power.

administrative discretion. A public official’s or agency’s power to exercise judgment in the discharge of its duties. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure <-> 324, 754.]

judicial discretion. (17c) The exercise of judgment by a judge or court based on what is fair under the circumstances and guided by the rules and principles of law; a court’s power to act or not act when a litigant is not entitled to demand the act as a matter of right. — Also termed legal discretion. [Cases: Courts <-> 26.]

prosecutorial discretion. (1866) A prosecutor’s power to choose from the options available in a criminal case, such as filing charges, prosecuting, not prosecuting, plea-bargaining, and recommending a sentence to the court. [Cases: Criminal Law <-> 29(3); District and Prosecuting Attorneys <-> 8.] discretion, abuse of. See abuse of discretion.

discretionary (di-skresh-<n-er-e), adj. (18c) (Of an act or duty) involving an exercise of judgment and choice, not an implementation of a hard-and-fast rule.

• Such an act by a court may be overturned only after a showing of abuse of discretion.

discretionary account. An account that allows a broker access to a customer’s funds to purchase and sell securities or commodities for the customer based on the broker’s judgment and without first having to obtain the customer’s consent to the purchase or sale. [Cases: Brokers <-> 19.]

discretionary-transfer statute. See transfer statute.

discretionary trust. See trust.

discretion statement. Hist. English law. In an action for divorce or judicial separation, a written request for the court to consider granting a judgment favorable to a spouse who has admittedly committed a matrimonial offense, esp. adultery.

"In a suit for divorce or judicial separation, the defendant’s own adultery is a discretionary bar. The petitioner asking the court to exercise its discretion to grant a decree notwithstanding his own adultery must lodge in the Divorce Registry a statement, known as a ‘discretion statement’, dated and signed by him or his solicitor, stating that the court will be asked to exercise its discretion on his behalf notwithstanding his own adultery, and setting forth particulars of his acts of adultery and of the facts which is it material for the court to know for the purpose of exercising its discretion." N. Simon Tessy, Is a Discretion Statement Really Necessary?, 21 Mod. L. Rev. 48, 48 (1958).

discriminant function (di-skrim-<n-ant). An IRS method of selecting tax returns to be audited. • The method consists of (1) using a computer program to identify returns with a high probability of error (such as those showing a disproportionate amount of deductible expenses), and (2) having examiners manually review the selected returns to determine which ones should be audited. — Also termed Diff system. [Cases: Internal Revenue <-> 4443.]

discriminatee (di-skrim-<n-er-tee). A person unlawfully discriminated against. [Cases: Civil Rights <-> 1007.]

discrimination, n. (1866) 1. The effect of a law or established practice that confers privileges on a certain class or that denies privileges to a certain class because of race, age, sex, nationality, religion, or disability. • Federal law, including Title VII of the Civil Rights Act, prohibits employment discrimination based on any one of those characteristics. Other federal statutes, supplemented by court decisions, prohibit discrimination in voting rights, housing, credit extension, public education, and access to public facilities. State laws provide further protections against discrimination. [Cases: Civil Rights <-> 1001–1263.] 2. Differential treatment; esp., a failure to treat all persons equally when no reasonable distinction can be found between those favored and those not favored. [Cases: Civil Rights <-> 1033, 1138.]

"The dictionary sense of ‘discrimination’ is neutral while the current political use of the term is frequently non-neutral, pejorative. With both a neutral and a non-neutral use of the word having currency, the opportunity for confusion in arguments about racial discrimination is enormously multiplied. For some, it may be enough that a practice is called discriminatory for them to judge it wrong. Others may be mystified that the first group condemns the practice without further argument or inquiry. Many may be led to the false sense that they have actually made a moral argument by showing that the practice discriminates (distinguishes in favor of or against). The temptation is to move from "X distinguishes in favor of or against" to "X discriminates" to "X is wrong" without being aware of the equivocation involved." Robert K. Fullinwider, The Reverse Discrimination Controversy 11-12 (1986).

age discrimination. Discrimination based on age. Federal law prohibits discrimination in employment against people who are age 40 or older. [Cases: Civil Rights 1014, 1199.]

gender discrimination. See sex discrimination.

invidious discrimination (in-vid-e-as). (1856) Discrimination that is offensive or objectionable, esp. because it involves prejudice or stereotyping.

racial discrimination. Discrimination based on race. [Cases: Civil Rights 1009, 1107.]

reverse discrimination. (1964) Preferential treatment of minorities, usu. through affirmative-action programs, in a way that adversely affects members of a majority group. See AFFIRMATIVE ACTION. [Cases: Civil Rights 1033(3), 1232.]

sex discrimination. Discrimination based on gender, esp. against women. The Supreme Court has established an intermediate-scrutiny standard of review for gender-based classifications, which must serve an important governmental interest and be substantially related to the achievement of that objective. Craig v. Boren, 429 U.S. 190, 97 S.Ct. 451 (1976). — Also termed gender discrimination. [Cases: Civil Rights 1011, 1164, 1236.]

viewpoint discrimination. Content-based discrimination in which the government targets not a particular subject, but instead certain views that speakers might express on the subject; discrimination based on the content of a communication. If restrictions on the content of speech are reasonable and not calculated to suppress a particular set of views or ideas, a governmental body may limit speech in a nonpublic forum to expressions that serve a specific purpose. For example, an agency holding a workshop to inform state employees of laws related to the agency's functions may reasonably prohibit the expression of opinions regarding the motives of the legislators. But if speech favorable to the legislators' intent is allowed and opponents are denied the opportunity to respond, the restriction would constitute viewpoint discrimination. — Also termed viewpoint-based discrimination. [Cases: Constitutional Law 1507, 1516.]

3. The effect of state laws that favor local interests over out-of-state interests. Such a discriminatory state law may still be upheld if it is narrowly tailored to achieve an important state interest. Cf. FAVORITISM. [Cases: Commerce 54.1. — discriminate, vb. discriminatory, adj.

discussion. 1. The act of exchanging views on something; a debate. 2. Civil law. A creditor's act of exhausting all remedies against the principal debtor before proceeding with a lawsuit against the guarantor. See BENEFIT OF DISCUSSION. [Cases: Guarantee 42, 77; Principal and Surety 138, 168.]

disease. 1. A deviation from the healthy and normal functioning of the body <the drug could not be linked to his disease>. 2. (pl.) Special classes of pathological conditions with similar traits, such as having similar causes and affecting similar organs <respiratory diseases> <occupational diseases>. 3. Any disorder; any deprived condition.

functional disease. A disease that prevents, obstructs, or interferes with an organ's special function, without anatomical defect or abnormality in the organ itself.

industrial disease. See OCCUPATIONAL DISEASE.

occupational disease. See OCCUPATIONAL DISEASE.

organic disease. A disease that is caused by an injury to, or lesion or malfunction in, an organ.

disgernment, n. (15c) The act of giving up something (such as profits illegally obtained) on demand or by legal compulsion. [Cases: Securities Regulation ⊑ 150.] — disgem, vb.

disgracing. Hist. 1. The act of disgracing. 2. The depriving of an order; the depriving of a dignity.

"Disgrading, or disgracing, is when a man having taken upon him a dignity temporal or spiritual, is afterwards thereof deprived, be he knight, clerk or other. Whereof if a clerk be delivered to his ordinary, and cannot clear himself of the offence whereof he is convicted by the jury, he shall be disgraced for it, which is nothing else but the deprivation of him from those orders he hath taken upon him, as priesthood, deaconship, or otherwise. . . . In like manner there is disgracing of a knight . . . . And it is worthy the observation, that by the canon law there are two kinds of disgragements: the one summary, by word only, and the other solemn, by devesting the party disgraced from those ornements and rites which are the ensigns of his order or degree." Termes de la Ley 175-76 (1st Am. ed. 1812).

disguised dividend. See informal dividend under dividend.

disguised installment sale. See installment sale.

disjoinder (dis-joyn-dər). (1936) The undoing of the joinder of parties or claims. See joinder. Cf. misjoinder (1); nonjoinder (1).

disjuncta (dis-junkt-o), n.pl. [Latin] Roman & civil law. Things (usu. words or phrases) that are separated or opposed. — Also spelled disiuncta. Cf. conjuncta.

disjunctim (dis-junkt-im), adv. [Latin] Roman law. Separately; severally. ● A condition imposed disjunctim, for example, would bind the persons severally, rather than jointly. — Also spelled disiunctim. Cf. conjunctim.

disjunctive allegation. See allegation.

disjunctive condition. See condition (2).

disjunctive denial. See denial.

disjunctive obligation. See alternative obligation under obligation.

disme (dim), n. [Law French] A tithe; a tenth part, as in a tithe due the clergy equal to the tenth of all spiritual livings as required by the statute 25 Edw. 3, st. 2. ● This dismemberment. 1. The cutting off of a limb or body part. 2. Int'l law. The disappearance of a country as a result of a treaty or an annexation, whereby it becomes part of one or more other countries. 3. Int'l law. The reduction of a country's territory by annexation or cession, or the secession of one part. 4. Int'l law. The extinguishment of a country and the creation of two or more new countries from the former country's territory.

dismemberments of ownership. Civil law. The three elements composing the right of ownership, namely the usufruct, the fructus, and the abusus. • The right of ownership may be dismembered and its components conveyed in the form of independent real rights, such as the right of use, the right of usufruct, and the right of security. See ABUSUS; FRUCTUS; USUS.

dissim, vb. 1. To send (something) away; specif., to terminate (an action or claim) without further hearing, esp. before the trial of the issues involved. 2. To release or discharge (a person) from employment. See DISMISSAL.

dismiss, vb. 1. Termination of an action or claim without further hearing, esp. before the trial of the issues involved. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure C= 1691–1842; Pretrial Procedure C= 501–699.]

dismissal agreed. A court's dismissal of a lawsuit with the acquiescence of all parties. • Among other possibilities, the parties may have settled out of court or chosen to have their dispute arbitrated or mediated. — Also termed agreed dismissal.

dismissal for failure to prosecute. See dismissal for want of prosecution.

dismissal for lack of prosecution. See dismissal for want of prosecution.

dismissal for want of equity. (1859) A court's dismissal of a lawsuit on substantive, rather than procedural, grounds, usu. because the plaintiff's allegations are found to be untrue or because the plaintiff's pleading does not state an adequate claim. [Cases: Pretrial Procedure C= 552, 622.]

dismissal for want of prosecution. (1831) A court's dismissal of a lawsuit because the plaintiff has failed to pursue the case diligently toward completion. — Abbr. DWOP. — Also termed dismissal for failure to prosecute; dismissal for lack of prosecution. [Cases: Criminal Law C= 303.30(1); Federal Civil Procedure C= 1758; Pretrial Procedure C= 581–602.]

dismissal without prejudice. (1831) A dismissal that does not bar the plaintiff from refiling the lawsuit within the applicable limitations period. See WITHOUT PREJUDICE. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure C= 1713, 1837.1; Pretrial Procedure C= 517, 690.]

dismissal with prejudice. (1898) A dismissal, usu. after an adjudication on the merits, barring the plaintiff from prosecuting any later lawsuit on the same claim. • If, after a dismissal with prejudice, the plaintiff files a later suit on the same claim, the defendant in the later suit can assert the defense of res judicata (claim preclusion). See RES JUDICATA; WITH PREJUDICE. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure C= 1713, 1837.1; Pretrial Procedure C= 517, 690.]

2. A release or discharge from employment. See discharge (7). [Cases: Labor and Employment C= 825.]

dismissal for cause. (1877) A dismissal of a contract employee for a reason that the law or public policy has recognized as sufficient to warrant the employee's removal. [Cases: Labor and Employment C= 762.]

3. Military law. A court-martial punishment for an officer, commissioned warrant officer, cadet, or midshipman, consisting of separation from the armed services with dishonor. • A dismissal can be given only by a general court-martial and is considered the equivalent of a dishonorable discharge. dismissal compensation. See severance pay.

dismissal order. See order (2).

dismissed for want of equity. (Of a case) removed from the court's docket for substantive reasons, usu. because the plaintiff's allegations are found to be untrue or because the plaintiff's pleading does not state an adequate claim. See dismissal for want of equity under DISMISSAL (1). [Cases: Pretrial Procedure C= 552, 622.]

dismissed for want of prosecution. (Of a case) removed from the court's docket because the plaintiff has failed to pursue the case diligently toward completion. See dismissal for want of prosecution under DISMISSAL (1). [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure C= 1758; Pretrial Procedure C= 581–602.]

dismissed without prejudice. (Of a case) removed from the court's docket in such a way that the plaintiff may refile the same suit on the same claim. See dismissal without prejudice under DISMISSAL (1); WITHOUT PREJUDICE. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure C= 1713, 1837.1; Pretrial Procedure C= 517.1, 690.]

dismissed with prejudice. (Of a case) removed from the court's docket in such a way that the plaintiff is foreclosed from filing a suit again on the same claim or claims. See dismissal with prejudice under DISMISSAL (1); WITH PREJUDICE. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure C= 1713, 1837.1; Pretrial Procedure C= 517.1, 690.]
dismortgage. See redemption (4).

Disneyland parent. See parent.

disobedient child. See incorrigible child under child.

disorder. (1877) 1. A lack of proper arrangement <of the files>. 2. An irregularity . 3. A public disturbance; a riot <civil disorder>. 4. A disturbance in mental or physical health <an emotional disorder> .

disorderly conduct. See conduct.

disorderly house. (16c) 1. A dwelling where people carry on activities that are a nuisance to the neighborhood. [Cases: Disorderly House ☞ 1.] 2. A dwelling where people conduct criminal or immoral activities. • Examples are brothels and drug houses. — Also termed (more narrowly) bawdy house; house of prostitution; house of ill fame; house of ill repute; lewd house; assignation house; house of assignation.

“The keeping of one type of disorderly house — the bawdy house — is punished because it violates the social interest in maintaining proper standards of morality and decency. . . . As included here a house may be disorderly for other reasons. Any house in which disorderly persons are permitted to congregate, and to disturb the tranquility of the neighborhood by fighting, quarreling, swearing or any other type of disorder, is a disorderly house; and the keeping thereof is a misdemeanor at common law.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 487 (3d ed. 1982).

disorderly person. (18c) 1. A person guilty of disorderly conduct. [Cases: Disorderly Conduct ☞ 108–140.] 2. A person who breaches the peace, order, decency, or safety of the public, as defined by statute. • The offense of being a disorderly person is usu. a misdemeanor. • Ordinarly, a person who is guilty of disorderly conduct is a ‘disorderly person,’ but where statutes define ‘a disorderly person’ and distinguish acts which may constitute the offense of disorderly conduct, the distinction is to be preserved and the different provisions relative to the different offenses particularly followed.” 27 C.J.S. Disorderly Conduct § 1(1), at 509 (1959).

disparate impact (dis-pa-rit). (1973) The adverse effect of a facially neutral practice (esp. an employment practice) that nonetheless discriminates against persons because of their race, sex, national origin, age, or disability and that is not justified by business necessity. • Discriminatory intent is irrelevant in a disparate-impact claim. — Also termed adverse impact. [Cases: Civil Rights ☞ 1033, 1140.] disparate treatment. The practice, esp. in employment, of intentionally dealing with persons differently because of their race, sex, national origin, age, or disability. • To succeed on a disparate-treatment claim, the plaintiff must prove that the defendant acted with discriminatory intent or motive. [Cases: Civil Rights ☞ 1033, 1138.]

disparity (di-spar-a-tee). (16c) Inequality; a difference in quantity or quality between two or more things.

dispatch (di-spac also dis-pach), n. 1. A prompt sending off of something . 2. A prompt completion of something <dispatch of a business transaction>. 3. Something quickly sent <the dispatch was mailed>. 4. Maritime law. The required diligence in discharging cargo <dispatch is required on all charters>. [Cases: Shipping ☞ 47, 49(6).]

customary dispatch. Dispatch that follows the rules, customs, and usages of the port where cargo is discharged. [Cases: Shipping ☞ 47, 49(6).]
quick dispatch. A speedy dispatch that does not strictly follow the customs of the port, esp. to avoid delays resulting from a crowded wharf. [Cases: Shipping \(\Rightarrow\) 47, 49(6).]

5. Maritime law. dispatch money.
dispatch money. Maritime law. An amount paid by a shipowner to a vessel’s charterer if the vessel’s cargo is unloaded at the port sooner than provided for in the agreement between the charterer and the shipowner. — Also termed dispatch. Cf. contract demurrage under demurrage. [Cases: Shipping \(\Rightarrow\) 49(6).]

‘Some charters contain a provision for ‘dispatch money,’ which is in the nature of a reward to the charterer for loading or unloading more rapidly than provided for — i.e., in less time than the stipulated ‘lay days.’ Dispatch, where payable, is usually stated, just as is demurrage, in terms of a rate per day and pro rata part thereof.’ Grant Gilmore & Charles L. Black Jr., The Law of Admiralty § 4-8, at 212 (2d ed. 1975).

dispatch rule. See mailbox rule.

dispute-resolution procedure. Intellectual property. A mechanism for resolving international grievances over intellectual-property protection, conducted by the World Trade Organization under the TRIPS agreement.

• The procedure begins with a complaint by one nation against another, followed by consultations between the nations, a WTO panel report on the issue, and (potentially) trade sanctions against one of the nations.

disqualification, n. (18c) 1. Something that makes one ineligible; esp., a bias or conflict of interest that prevents a judge or juror from impartially hearing a case, or that prevents a lawyer from representing a party. [Cases: Judges C=39; Jury C=97.]

vicarious disqualification. (1949) Disqualification of all the lawyers in a firm or in an office because one of the lawyers is ethically disqualified from representing the client at issue. — Also termed imputed disqualification. [Cases: Attorney and Client C=21.15.]

"In general, disqualification of a lawyer from representation, at least in multiple client-conflict scenarios, means disqualification of that lawyer's entire firm from the same representation. When a lawyer has been exclusively or chiefly responsible for the representation of a client and that lawyer changes jobs, there is little question but that the imputed-disqualification rule will apply to disqualify the new firm from representing the opponent of the first client. But because lawyers often work for large organizations, ... a question may arise about the application of the imputation rule when a lawyer has left employment . . . . If the lawyer had little or no responsibility in the first organization for the representation or if the lawyer can be effectively shielded from the representation in the new organization, or both, there may be no useful purpose served by imputing the lawyer's disqualification to the new organization . . . ." James E. Moliterno & John M. Levy, Ethics of the Lawyer's Work 151 (1993).

2. The act of making ineligible; the fact or condition of being ineligible. Cf. recusal. — disqualify, vb.

involuntary dissolution. The termination of a corporation administratively (for failure to file reports or pay taxes), judicially (for abuse of corporate authority, management deadlock, or failure to pay creditors), or through involuntary bankruptcy. [Cases: Corporations C=612.]

voluntary dissolution. A corporation's termination initiated by the board of directors and approved by the shareholders. [Cases: Corporations C=610(1).]

4. The termination of a previously existing partnership upon the occurrence of an event specified in the partnership agreement, such as a partner's withdrawal from the partnership, or as specified by law. Cf. winding up. [Cases: Partnership C=263.] 5. Patents. The dismissal of an interference contest before a final judgment and an express award of priority. • The effect of dissolving an interference is that junior parties fail to meet their burden of proof, so the senior party retains priority. [Cases: Patents C=106(5).] 5. Parliamentary law. An adjournment sine die without any provision for reconvening the same deliberative assembly, even if another assembly of the same kind (such as a legislative body or a convention) will eventually convene. — dissolve, vb.

dissolution bond. See discharging bond under bond (2).

dissolution of marriage. 1. Divorce. 2. Archaic. A divorce-like remedy available when both spouses have signed a separation agreement that deals with (1) the issue of alimony (providing either some or none), and (2) if there are children, the issues of support, custody, and visitation. • Under a dissolution of marriage in this sense, the court is bound by the separation agreement and cannot later modify alimony payments. Courts in jurisdictions where the term has been used in this specific sense traditionally distinguish it from divorce, which was formerly available only on certain grounds and which allowed the court to modify alimony payments.

distress, n. (13c) 1. The seizure of another's property to secure the performance of a duty, such as the payment of overdue rent. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant C=263-270.] 2. The legal remedy authorizing such a seizure; the procedure by which the seizure is carried out.
"Distress . . . may be defined as the taking, either with legal process, or extra-judicially subject to the performance of some necessary condition precedent, by a private individual or by an officer of the court, of a personal chattel, out of the possession of a wrongdoer or defaulter and into the custody of the law to be impounded as a pledge in order to bring pressure to bear upon the owner of the chattel to redress an injury, to perform a duty, or to satisfy a lawful demand, subject, however, to the right of the owner to have the chattel returned to him [upon the injury being redressed, or the duty performed, or the demand satisfied or [upon security being given so to do]." F.A. Enever, History of the Law of Distress 7-8 (1931).

The word distress is derived from distringere, meaning to put into a strait or pound. In early English customals the word used is nam, which is of Scandinavian derivation and indicates a taking. In the Latin legal documents of early medieval times pignorare is used as well as distringere to denote the act of distraining, but whereas distringere is used in relation to distress for rent and services, pignorare is applied to distress for debts. F.A. Enever, History of the Law of Distress 3 (1931).

distributive (di-strib-ya-tiv), adj. Of or relating to apportioning, dividing, and assigning in separate items or shares; of or relating to distributing.

distributive clause. (1821) A will or trust provision governing the distribution of income and gifts.

distributive deviation. A trustee's authorized or unauthorized departure from the express distributional terms of a trust. • A trustee must apply to the court for authority to deviate from the terms of a trust. In American law, courts rarely authorize deviation unless all the beneficiaries consent and there is no material purpose of the settlor yet to be served. Some state statutes provide that deviation is permitted if the court finds that deviation would effectuate the settlor’s intention, though the modification is not expressly authorized by the trust’s provisions. The Pulitzer trust illustrates the possibility that extraordinary circumstances not anticipated by the settlor may justify deviation, despite an express prohibition within the trust. Joseph Pulitzer set up a testamentary trust with shares of World newspaper stock; his will directed that the sale of these shares was not authorized under any circumstances. Nonetheless, the court later approved the stock sale when given evidence that because of hemorrhaging losses, the trust’s continuation was jeopardized. In re Pulitzer’s Estate, 249 N.Y.S. 87 (Sur. Ct. 1931).

distributive finding. A jury’s decision partly in favor of one party and partly in favor of another.

districting (di-string-gas), n. [Law Latin “you are to distraint”] 1. A writ ordering a sheriff to distraint a defendant’s property to compel the defendant to perform an obligation, such as appearing in court or giving up a chattel to a plaintiff awarded judgment in a detinue action. 2. A writ ordering the sheriff to seize jurors’ goods to compel them to appear for jury service. 3. An equitable process of execution against a corporation that has refused to obey a summons. [Cases: Execution ⊂=15.] 4. Hist. An order, issued initially from the Court of Exchequer, then the Court of Chancery, and finally the High Court of Justice, for someone interested in purchasing Bank of England stock, temporarily restraining the bank officers from transferring the stock or paying a dividend on it. • This proceeding was used to prevent fraudulent dealing by a trustee or other stockholder. The relief was only temporary, and if the bank received a request from the stockholder to permit a stock deal, the bank had to warn the distrainting party to promptly obtain a restraining order or a writ of injunction, or else the stock deal would go through.

distriingas juratores (di-string-gas Joor-ah-or-ter-ez), n. [Law Latin “you are to distress the jurors”] Hist. A writ ordering the sheriff to distraint jurors or their property to compel their appearance before the judges of assize and nisi prius for jury duty on an appointed day.

A writ calling on an ex-sheriff to account for the proceeds taken in execution.

distriingas vicecomitem (di-string-gas vi-see kom-i-tam), n. [Law Latin “you are to distraint the sheriff”] Hist. A distraing writ ordering the coroner to distraint the sheriff for not executing a writ of venditioni exponas. See VENDITIONI EXPONAS.
distringere (di-strin-j̩-ə-ree), vb. [Latin] To distrain; to coerce; to compel. • The first-person form of the verb was distingo ("I distrain").

disturbance, n. (13c) 1. An act causing annoyance or disquiet, or interfering with a person’s pursuit of a lawful occupation or the peace and order of a neighborhood, community, or meeting. [Cases: Disorderly Conduct C−106.] 2. At common law, a wrong done to an incorporeal hereditament by hindering the owner’s enjoyment of it.

disturbance of a public meeting. The unlawful interference with the proceedings of a public assembly. [Cases: Breach of the Peace C−1(4).]

"Generally speaking, any conduct which, being contrary to the usages of the particular sort of meeting and class of persons assembled, interferes with its due progress and services, or is annoying to the congregation in whole or in part, is a disturbance; and a meeting may be said to be 'disturbed' when it is agitated, aroused from a state of repose, molested, interrupted, hindered, perplexed, disqualified, or diverted from the object of the assembly." 27 C.J.S. Disturbance of Public Meetings § 1, at 817 (1959).

disturbance of common. At common law, a wrongful interference with, or impediment to, another’s right to commonal property, such as a wrongful fencing or surcharge on the common.

"The disturbance of common comes next to be considered; where any act is done, by which the right of another to his common is incommoded or diminished. This may happen, in the first place, where one who hath no right of common, puts his cattle into the land; and thereby robs the cattle of the commoners of their respective shares of the pasture. Or if one, who hath a right of common, puts in cattle which are not commonal, as hogs and goats; which amounts to the same inconvenience." 3 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 237 (1768).

disturbance of franchise. At common law, a wrongful interference with a liberty or privilege.

"Disturbance of franchises happens when a man has the franchise of holding a court-leet, of keeping a fair or market, of free-warren, of taking toll, of seizing waifs or estrays, or (in short) any other species of franchise whatsoever, and he is disturbed or incommoded in the lawful exercise thereof." 3 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 236 (1768).

disturbance of patronage. A wrongful obstruction of a patron from presenting a clerk to a benefice.

disturbance of public worship. Any conduct that interferes with the peaceful, lawful assembly of people for religious exercises. [Cases: Disturbance of Public Assemblage C−1(1).]

disturbance of tenure. A stranger’s ouster of a tenant from a tenancy. • The tenant’s lord could recover damages for the ouster.

disturbance of the peace. See BREACH OF THE PEACE.

disturbance of ways. An impediment to a person’s lawful right-of-way, as by an obstruction.

disturber. See IMPEDITOR.

disturbing the peace. See BREACH OF THE PEACE.

dittay (dit-ay), n. Scots law. 1. The grounds for an indictment. 2. An indictment.

diversification, n. 1. A company’s movement into a broader range of products, usu. by buying firms already serving the market or by expanding existing operations <the soft-drink company’s diversification into the potato-chip market has increased its profits>. 2. The act of investing in a wide range of companies to reduce the risk if one sector of the market suffers losses <the prudent investor’s diversification of the portfolio among 12 companies>. • diversify, vb.

diversified holding company. See COMPANY.

diversion, n. (17c) 1. A deviation or alteration from the natural course of things; esp., the unauthorized alteration of a watercourse to the detriment of a lower riparian owner, or the unauthorized use of funds. 2. A distraction or pastime. • divert, vb.

diversion program. (1972) 1. Criminal law. A program that refers certain criminal defendants before trial to community programs on job training, education, and the like, which, if successfully completed may lead to the dismissal of the charges. • Also termed pretrial diversion; pretrial intervention. Cf. deferred judgment under JUDGMENT. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment C−2051–2054.] 2. A community-based program or set of services designed to prevent the need for court intervention in matters of child neglect, minor juvenile delinquency, truancy, or incorrigibility. • Sustained by government funding, the program provides services quickly and in a nonadversarial manner so that there is no need for a formal court trial.

Diversité des courts (di-var-si-tay da koort). [Law French] A treatise on courts written in French, supposedly by Fitzherbert during the reign of Edward III. • It was printed initially in 1525 and again in 1534. • Also spelled Diversité des courtes.

"[For] in the ancient treatise, entitled diversité des courts... we have a catalogue of the matters of conscience then cognizable by subpoena in chancery, which fall within a very narrow compass." 3 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 53 (1768).

diversity, n. 1. DIVERSITY OF CITIZENSHIP. 2. Ethnic, socioeconomic, and gender heterogeneity within a group; the combination within a population of people with different backgrounds. • The Supreme Court has found diversity in education to be a compelling government interest that can support a narrowly tailored affirmative-action plan. Grutter v. Bollinger, 123 S.Ct. 2325...
divestment,

A divestiture is the complete or partial loss of an interest in an asset, such as land or stock. 2. The complete or partial loss of an interest in an asset, such as land or stock. — divest, vb.

divestitive fact. See FACT.

diversity, adj. Of, relating to, or involving diversity jurisdiction. See JURISDICTION.

diversity jurisdiction. See JURISDICTION.

diversity of citizenship. (1876) A basis for federal-court jurisdiction that exists when (1) a case is between citizens of different states, or between a citizen of a state and an alien, and (2) the matter in controversy exceeds a specific value (now $75,000). 28 USC § 1332.

- For purposes of diversity jurisdiction, a corporation is considered a citizen of both the state of incorporation and the state of its principal place of business. An unincorporated association, such as a partnership, is considered a citizen of each state where at least one of its members is a citizen. — Often shortened to diversity. See diversity jurisdiction under JURISDICTION. [Cases: Federal Courts C=281-360.]

complete diversity. (1925) in a multiparty case, diversity between both sides to the lawsuit so that all plaintiffs have different citizenship from all defendants. • Complete diversity must exist for a federal court to have diversity jurisdiction over the matter. The rule of complete diversity was first laid down by Chief Justice Marshall in Strawbridge v. Curtiss, 7 U.S. (3 Cranch) 267 (1806). [Cases: Federal Courts C=286.]

manufactured diversity. (1968) Improper or collusively created diversity of citizenship for the sole or primary purpose of creating federal jurisdiction. • Manufactured diversity is prohibited by 28 USC § 1359. [Cases: Federal Courts C=303.]

divertee. A defendant who participates in a diversion program. See DIVERSION PROGRAM.

dives costs (d1-veez), n. Ordinary court costs granted to a successful party, as distinguished from limited costs (such as out-of-pocket costs) allowed to a successful pauper who sued or defended in forma pauperis. • The term derives from the name of Dives, the supposed name of the rich man in the parable of the rich man and Lazarus (Luke 16:19-31). Dives is a Latin word meaning "rich."

divestivest fact. See FACT.

divestivest publication. See PUBLICATION.

dividends. (17c) A portion of a company's earnings or profits distributed pro rata to its shareholders, usu. in the form of cash or additional shares. [Cases: Corporations C=155(1).]

bond dividend. A dividend in which a shareholder receives a bond instead of scrip, property, or money.

capital-gain dividend. A taxable payment to a mutual-fund shareholder. • The payment is the shareholder's proportional share of the net capital gains realized by securities sales from the mutual fund's portfolio. — Also termed capital-gain distribution.

consent dividend. A dividend that is not actually paid to the shareholders, but is taxed to the shareholders and increases the basis in their stock investment. • A corporation declares a consent dividend to avoid or reduce an accumulated-earnings or personal-holding-company penalty tax.

constructive dividend. A taxable benefit derived by a shareholder from the corporation even though the benefit was not designated a dividend. • Examples divide-and-pay-over rule. (1916) Wills & estates. The principle that if the only provisions in a testamentary disposition are words ordering that payment be made at some time after the testator's death, time will be of the essence and the interest is future and contingent rather than vested and immediate. [Cases: Wills C=630(6).]

divided court. (18c) An appellate court whose opinion or decision in a particular case is not unanimous, esp. when the majority is slim, as in a 5-to-4 decision of the U.S. Supreme Court. [Cases: Appeal and Error C=1123; Courts C=102(2); Federal Courts C=462, 928.]

divided-damages rule. Maritime law. The obsolete principle that when two parties are jointly liable to a third party for a tort, each party is liable for only half the damages. • The courts now apply a comparative-negligence standard. [Cases: Collision C=143.]

"For over a hundred years admiralty law embraced the rule of 'divided damages' in collision cases ... In 1975, in United States v. Reliable Transfer Co., 421 U.S. 397, 95 S.Ct. 1708, 44 L.Ed.2d 251 (1975), the Supreme Court jettisoned that inequitable and illogical rule in favor of proportionate allocation of fault among joint-tortfeasors in collision cases. Each vessel now is liable to the other offending vessel in contribution for that part of the total damages proportionate to its fault, and liable for its per capita (virile) share only when the respective faults of the vessels are equal, or when proportionate fault can not be ascertained." Frank L. Maraist, Admiralty in a Nutshell 165 (2d ed. 1988).

dividend. (17c) A portion of a company's earnings or profits distributed pro rata to its shareholders, usu. in the form of cash or additional shares. [Cases: Corporations C=155(1).]

capital-gain dividend. A taxable payment to a mutual-fund shareholder. • The payment is the shareholder's proportional share of the net capital gains realized by securities sales from the mutual fund's portfolio. — Also termed capital-gain distribution.

consent dividend. A dividend that is not actually paid to the shareholders, but is taxed to the shareholders and increases the basis in their stock investment. • A corporation declares a consent dividend to avoid or reduce an accumulated-earnings or personal-holding-company penalty tax.

constructive dividend. A taxable benefit derived by a shareholder from the corporation even though the benefit was not designated a dividend. • Examples cumulative dividend. A dividend that grows from year to year when not paid. A cumulative dividend is usu. on preferred shares, and it must be paid in full before common shareholders may receive any dividend. If the corporation does not pay a dividend in a particular year or period, it is carried over to the next year or period and must be paid before the common shareholders receive any payment. — Also termed accumulative dividend. [Cases: Corporations <= 155.] deferred dividend. A dividend that is declared, but is payable at a future date.
deficiency dividend. A dividend paid to reduce or avoid personal-holding-company tax in a prior year.
disguised dividend. See informal dividend. extraordinary dividend. A dividend paid in addition to a regular dividend, usu. because of exceptional corporate profits during the dividend period. — Also termed extra dividend; nonrecurring dividend; special dividend. [Cases: Corporations <= 155(1).]
fixed-return dividend. A dividend that is constant throughout the investment’s life. informal dividend. A payment of salary, rent, interest, or the like to or for a shareholder as a substitute for a dividend. — Also termed disguised dividend. liability dividend. See scrip dividend.
liquidation dividend. A dividend paid to a dissolving corporation’s shareholders, usu. from the capital of the corporation, upon the decision to suspend all or part of its business operations. — Also termed liquidating dividend. [Cases: Corporations <= 629.] nimble dividend. A dividend paid out of current earnings when there is a deficit in the account from which dividends may be paid. Some state statutes prohibit nimble dividends.
noncumulative dividend. A dividend that does not accrue for the benefit of a preferred shareholder if there is a passed dividend in a particular year or period. Cf. cumulative dividend. [Cases: Corporations <= 152.] nonrecurring dividend. See extraordinary dividend.
passed dividend. A dividend that is not paid when due by a company that has a history of paying regular dividends.
preferred dividend. A dividend paid to preferred shareholders, who are generally paid a fixed amount and take priority over common shareholders. [Cases: Corporations <= 151, 156.] property dividend. See asset dividend.
reinvested dividend. A dividend that is used to purchase additional shares in the corporation, instead of being taken in cash by the shareholder. See dividend-reinvestment plan.
scrip dividend. A dividend paid in certificates entitling the holder to ownership of capital stock to be issued in the future. This type of dividend may signal that the corporation’s cash flow is poor. — Also termed liability dividend.
special dividend. See extraordinary dividend. stock dividend. A dividend paid in stock expressed as a percentage of the number of shares already held by a shareholder. [Cases: Corporations <= 157.] unpaid dividend. A declared but unpaid dividend. year-end dividend. An extra dividend paid at the end of the fiscal year depending on the amount of the profits.
dividenda (div-i-den-da), n. [fr. Latin dividere “to divide”] Hist. Something to be divided; an indenture. dividend addition. An amount added to the face value of a life-insurance policy and purchased by using a dividend as a single premium payment. [Cases: Insurance <= 2037.] dividend-credit rule. The principle that a corporate reserve fund amassed from unpaid dividends on preferred stock must be used to pay subsequent dividends on preferred stock before dividend payments on common stock. — Also termed cast-iron-pipe doctrine.
dividend date. The date on which a corporation distributes dividends to record owners of stock shares. See record date under DATE. Cf. Ex-dividend date.
dividend income. See Income. dividend-payout ratio. A profitability ratio computed by dividing annual dividends per share by earnings per share.
dividend preference. The right of a holder of preferred shares to receive a dividend before the company pays dividends to holders of common shares. See preferred stock under STOCK. [Cases: Corporations <= 156.]
dividend-received deduction. (1957) A deduction allowed to a corporate shareholder for dividends received from a domestic corporation. IRC (26 USCA) §§ 243–247. [Cases: Internal Revenue <= 3777.]
dividend-reinvestment plan. (1969) A stock-purchase program that allows investors to reinvest their dividends, and perhaps convert additional voluntary payments, into shares of the entity’s common stock, usu. with no sales charge, and sometimes at a discount from the stock’s market price. Although the investor never receives the cash, it is still treated as income to the investor. An investor may be allowed to make optional cash purchases of additional stock. — Abbr. DRIP; DRP. brokerage-run dividend-reinvestment plan. A formal or informal program managed by a brokerage and allowing shareholders to reinvest dividends in a portfolio, often at no cost. • Brokerage-run plans are usu. limited to dividend reinvestment.

company-run dividend-reinvestment plan. A program operated by a corporation for its own shareholders. • Company-run plans may offer additional features such as IRAs.

transfer-agent-run dividend-reinvestment plan. A program administered by a financial institution for several companies. • An investor can participate in more than one DRIP program simultaneously and also make additional cash investments in multiple companies.

dividend yield. The current annual dividend divided by the market price per share.

divide the assembly. Parliamentary law. To order that votes in a meeting be counted. — Also termed challenge the vote; divide the house; doubt the vote. See counted vote under VOTE (4).

divide the house. See DIVIDE THE ASSEMBLY.

divide the question. Parliamentary law. To break a long or complex motion, usu. one covering more than one subject, into shorter motions that the assembly considers independently.

divinare (div-i-nair-ee) vb. [Latin] To foretell or divine (something).

divinatio (div-i-nay-shu-oh), n. [Latin] Roman law. A preliminary process for deciding which of two or more applicants had the best claim to conduct a criminal prosecution against an accused.

divine law. Law that emanates from a supernatural source, such as a deity. Cf. NATURAL LAW.

divine right of kings. The political theory that the sovereign is a direct representative of God and has the right to rule absolutely by virtue of royal birth.

"Divine Right of Kings . . . originated in the mediaeval concept of God's award of temporal power to civil rulers and spiritual power to the Church. It was claimed by the earlier Stuart kings in England, and explains many of their attitudes in the struggle which developed between them and Parliament for political sovereignty. . . . The principle of divine right was submerged during the Commonwealth but re-emerged under James II, but disappeared with his flight and abdication." David M. Walker, The Oxford Companion to Law 366 (1980).

divine service. 1. Hist. A feudal tenure in which the tenants were obligated to perform special divine functions, such as singing at a certain number of masses or distributing a specified amount in alms. 2. A public worship service.

divisa (di-vi-zo), n. [fr. French divisor "to divide"] 1. A division, as of goods by a will; a devise. 2. A boundary of neighboring lands. 3. A court held on such a boundary to settle the tenants' disputes.

divisible contract. See severable contract under contract.

divisible divorce. See DIVORCE.

divisible obligation. See obligation.

divisible offense. See OFFENSE (1).

divisible promises. See PROMISE.

division. 1. Parliamentary law. A counted vote. See counted vote under VOTE (4); DIVIDE THE ASSEMBLY. — Also termed division of the assembly; division of the house; division vote. 2. Parliamentary law. The separation of a long or complex motion, usu. one covering more than one subject, into shorter motions that the assembly considers independently. — Also termed division of the question. See DIVIDE THE QUESTION.

standing division. See standing vote under VOTE (4).

3. RESTRICTION (4).

divisional application. See patent application.

divisional bond. See BOND (3).

divisional court. See COURT.

divisional security. See SECURITY.

division of fees. See FEE-SPLITTING.

division of powers. (18c) The allocation of power between the national government and the states. • Under the Tenth Amendment, powers not delegated to the federal government are reserved to the states or to the people. But today the Tenth Amendment provides only a limited check on Congress's power to regulate the states. Cf. SEPARATION OF POWERS. [Cases: States C–– 4:16.]

division of property. See PROPERTY SETTLEMENT (1).

division of the assembly. See DIVISION (1).

division of the question. See DIVISION (2).

division order. Oil & gas. A contract for the sale of oil or gas, specifying how the payments are to be distributed. • Royally: owners enter into division orders to sell minerals and to instruct how payments are to be made under a mineral lease. Working-interest owners also commonly sign division orders to instruct purchasers how payments are to be divided. [Cases: Mines and Minerals C–– 79.1(3).]

division vote. See DIVISION (1).

divisum imperium (di-vi-zam-im-peer ee-am), n. [Latin "a divided empire"] Divided jurisdiction; alternate jurisdiction, as of courts.

"This main sea begins at the low-water-mark. But between the high-water-mark and the low-water-mark, where the sea ebbs and flows, the common law and admiralty have divisum imperium, an alternate jurisdiction; one upon the water, when it is full sea; the other upon the land, when it is an ebb." 1 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 107 (1765).

divorce. (14c) The legal dissolution of a marriage by a court. — Also termed matrimonial dissolution; dissolution of marriage. Cf. ANNULMENT. [Cases: Divorce C–– 1.]

divorce, vb.

"When used without qualification, the term [divorce] imports a dissolution of the marriage relation between absolute divorce. See divorce a vinculo matrimonii.

bifurcated divorce. See divisible divorce.

collaborative divorce. A divorce negotiated in a non-adversarial forum, usu. between spouses who, with or without a lawyer, are assisted as needed by a team of experts in law, mental health, and financial matters (such as taxes and real estate).

conditional divorce. See conversion divorce.

contested divorce. 1. A divorce that one spouse opposes in court. 2. A divorce in which the spouses litigate. • In this sense, although both spouses may want the divorce, they disagree on the terms of the divorce decree. Cf. uncontested divorce.

conversion divorce. A divorce granted after (1) a legal separation has been granted or the parties have signed a separation agreement, and (2) the parties have lived separately for a statutorily prescribed period. — Also termed convertible divorce; conditional divorce [Cases: Divorce $\Rightarrow 36].

divisible divorce. (1943) A divorce whereby the marriage itself is dissolved but the issues incident to the divorce, such as alimony, child custody, and visitation, are reserved until a later proceeding. • This type of divorce can be granted when the court has subject-matter jurisdiction but lacks personal jurisdiction over the defendant-spouse. The doctrine of divisible divorce was recognized by the Supreme Court in Estin v. Estin, 334 U.S. 541, 68 S.Ct. 1213 (1948), and Vanderbill v. Vanderbill, 354 U.S. 416, 77 S.Ct. 1360 (1957). — Also termed bifurcated divorce [Cases: Divorce $\Rightarrow 8, 146].

divorce a mensa et thoro (ay men-sa et thor-oh). [Latin "(divorce) from board and hearth"] (18c) Hist. A partial or qualified divorce by which the parties were separated and allowed or ordered to live apart, but remained technically married. • This type of divorce, abolished in England in 1857, was the forerunner of modern judicial separation. — Also termed separation a mensa et thoro; separation from bed and board; limited divorce; legal separation; judicial separation. [Cases: Divorce $\Rightarrow 155].

Dominican divorce. See Mexican divorce.

ex parte divorce (eks pahr-tee). (1870) A divorce proceeding in which only one spouse participates or appears in court. [Cases: Divorce $\Rightarrow 146].

fault divorce. A divorce granted to one spouse on the basis of some proven wrongful act (grounds for divorce) by the other spouse. • Although all states now have some form of no-fault divorce, some jurisdictions still consider a spouse's fault in precipitating the divorce, esp. when dividing marital property or when awarding alimony. Traditionally, the common grounds for a fault divorce were adultery, abandonment, imprisonment, and physical or mental cruelty; the defenses to alleged fault in a petition for divorce were condonation, connivance, recrimination, and insanity. Section 303(e) of the Uniform Marriage and Divorce Act has abolished the defenses to divorce. Cf. no-fault divorce.

foreign divorce. (1831) A divorce obtained outside the state or country in which one spouse resides. [Cases: Divorce $\Rightarrow 351-420].

Haitian divorce. See Mexican divorce.

hotel divorce. Slang. A form of collusive divorce — occurring before widespread passage of no-fault divorce laws — in which the spouses agree to fake an adultery scene to create "fault." Cf. no-fault divorce.

"Clearly a lawyer may not originate or participate in a scheme to make it appear to the court that a ground for divorce has occurred when this is not the fact. Such is the case in the so-called 'hotel divorces,' prevalent in jurisdictions where adultery is the only ground for divorce, and based on the principle that intercourse will be presumed occurring before widespread passage of no-fault divorce laws — in which the spouses agree to fake an adultery scene to create "fault." Cf. no-fault divorce.

legislative divorce. Hist. The legal termination of a particular marriage, through a statute enacted by the legislature rather than by a court’s decree. • In the 18th century, Colonial American legislatures granted these special statutes. In 1816, the House of Burgesses of Virginia granted a divorce to Rachel Robards Jackson, the wife of then President Andrew Jackson, from a former spouse. Mrs. Jackson’s untimely death was attributed to her reaction to the scandal that she had married Jackson before the divorce was procured. Now only state courts have authority to grant decrees of divorce. — Also termed parliamentary divorce. [Cases: Divorce $\Rightarrow 5]. limited divorce. (1831) 1. A divorce that ends the legal relationship of marriage by court order but does not address financial support, property distribution, or care and custody of children. • In the days before no-fault divorce, a spouse might seek a quick divorce in a state with a short residency requirement (such as Nevada). Then courts in the home state would give full faith and credit only to the dissolution of the marital res, while maintaining sole jurisdiction over property-division, support, and custody issues. [Cases: Divorce C= 155.] 2. Loosely, a legal separation. 3. See divorce a mensa et thoro. Cf. divorce a vinculo matrimonii.

mail-order divorce. (1922) Slang. A divorce obtained by parties who are not physically present or domiciled in the jurisdiction purporting to grant the divorce. • Such a divorce is not recognized in the United States because of the absence of the usual bases for jurisdiction.

Mexican divorce. A divorce obtained in Mexico by mail order or by the appearance of one spouse who does not have a Mexican domicile. • Neither type is recognized in the United States. — Also termed Dominican divorce (if granted in the Dominican Republic); Haitian divorce (if granted in Haiti).

migratory divorce. (1911) A divorce obtained in a jurisdiction other than the marital domicile; esp., a divorce obtained by a spouse who moves to, or temporarily resides in, another state or country to get the divorce.

no-fault divorce. (1969) A divorce in which the parties are not required to prove fault or grounds beyond a showing of the irretrievable breakdown of the marriage or irreconcilable differences. • The system of no-fault divorce has been adopted throughout the United States. By 1974, 45 states had adopted no-fault divorce; by 1985, every state but New York had adopted some form of it. In New York — one of the last bastions of fault grounds for divorce — the closest equivalent is a conversion divorce one year after legal separation or a legal-separation agreement. Cf. fault divorce; hotel divorce. [Cases: Divorce C= 12.] parliamentary divorce. See legislative divorce.

pro-con divorce. Slang. An uncontested divorce granted after only the plaintiff appears at the proceeding (since the defendant contests nothing).

quickie divorce. Slang. A fast divorce granted with minimal paperwork. — Also termed quick divorce.

rabbinal divorce. A divorce granted under the authority of a rabbi. • This type of divorce affects the relationship of the parties under the tenets of Judaism. It affects particularly a Jewish woman's ability to remarry in accordance with Judaic law. In the United States, it is not generally a divorce recognized in civil courts. — Also termed get.

uncontested divorce. A divorce that is unopposed by the spouse who did not initiate it. Cf. contested divorce.

divorce agreement. A contractual agreement that sets out divorcing spouses' rights and responsibilities regarding property, alimony, custody, visitation, and child support. • The divorce agreement usu. becomes incorporated by court order as a part of the divorce decree and thus is enforceable by contempt, among other remedies. — Also termed agreement incident to divorce; marital settlement agreement; separation agreement. Cf. property settlement. [Cases: Husband and Wife C= 277.]

divorce decree. See decree.

divorce proctor. A person (such as a guardian) who is appointed to protect the interest of the state or children in a divorce action. — Sometimes shortened to proctor. [Cases: Infants C= 76.]

divortium (di-vor she-am), n. [Latin] 1. Roman law. Divorce: a severance of the marriage tie. • In classical law, no grounds were required. Cf. repudiium. 2. Ecclesi. law. A decree allowing spouses to separate or declaring their marriage invalid.

"Owing to the fact that the church had but slowly made up her mind to know no such thing as a divorce in our acceptation of that term (i.e., the dissolution of a valid marriage) the term divortium is currently used to signify two very different things, namely (1) the divortium quod torum, which is the equivalent of our 'judicial separation,' and (2) what is very often called the divortium quod vinculum but is really a declaration of nullity. The persistence of the word divortium in the latter case is a trace of an older state of affairs, but in medieval practice the decree of nullity often served the purpose of a true divorce: spouses who had quarrelled began to investigate their pedigrees and were unlucky if they could discover no impedimentum dirimens." 2 Frederick Pollock & Frederic William Maitland, History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 1393 n.5 (2d ed. 1899; repr. 1959).

DMCA. abbr. DIGITAL MILLENNIUM COPYRIGHT ACT.

DNA. abbr. Deoxyribonucleic acid; the double-helix structure in cell nuclei that carries the genetic information of most living organisms.

DNA identification. (1987) A method of scientific identification based on a person's unique genetic makeup; specif., the comparison of a person's deoxyribonucleic acid (DNA) — a patterned chemical structure of genetic information — with the DNA in a biological specimen (such as blood, tissue, or hair) to determine whether the person is the source of the specimen. • DNA evidence is used in criminal cases for purposes such as identifying a victim's remains, linking a suspect to a crime, and exonerating an innocent suspect. — Also termed DNA... fingerprinting; genetic fingerprinting; DNA profiling; DNA typing. Cf. human-leukocyte antigen test. [Cases: Criminal Law $\Rightarrow$ 388.2; Evidence $\Rightarrow$ 150.]

DNR order. abbr. do-not-resuscitate order.

do (doh). [Latin] Hist. I give. • This term was considered the oldest and aptest for a feoffment and gift.

DOC. abbr. DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE.

dock, n. 1. A structure that encloses water, often between two piers, in which ships are received for loading, unloading, safekeeping, or repair. [Cases: Wharves $\Rightarrow$ 4.] 2. The part of a warehouse or other building (usu. elevated with oversized doors) at which trucks are received for loading and unloading. 3. English law. In a criminal court, the enclosure in which the prisoner is placed during trial <it was through his own deliberate choice that Mr. Bourne found himself in the dock at the Old Bailey, charged with a felony>. See BAIL DOCK.

dockage. A charge for the use of a dock, esp. while a vessel is undergoing repairs.

docket, n. (15c) 1. A formal record in which a judge or court clerk briefly notes all the proceedings and filings in a court case <review the docket to determine the filing date>. — Also termed judicial record; bench docket; docket sheet. [Cases: Appeal and Error $\Rightarrow$ 493–543; Criminal Law $\Rightarrow$ 1086.1–1088.20.]

appearance docket. (18c) A list of the parties and lawyers participating in an action, together with a brief abstract of the successive steps in the action. [Cases: Appearance $\Rightarrow$ 5; Federal Civil Procedure $\Rightarrow$ 561.]

judgment docket. (1826) A book that a court clerk keeps for the entry or recordation of judgments, giving official notice of existing judgment liens to interested parties. — Also termed judgment book; judgment file; judgment record; judgment roll. [Cases: Judgment $\Rightarrow$ 277, 284.]

2. A schedule of pending cases <the case is third on Monday’s trial docket>. — Also termed court calendar; cause list; trial calendar. [Cases: Criminal Law $\Rightarrow$ 632(2); Federal Civil Procedure $\Rightarrow$ 1991; Trial $\Rightarrow$ 9(1).]

DWOP docket. A list of cases that the court has set for possible dismissal for want of prosecution. — Also termed doowop docket; DLOP docket. See dismissal for want of prosecution under DISMISSAL (1).

preferred docket. (1993) A list of cases set for trial, arranged in order of priority. • Criminal cases are, for example, generally given precedence over civil cases on the preferred docket because of the constitutional right to a speedy trial. [Cases: Criminal Law $\Rightarrow$ 632(2); Trial $\Rightarrow$ 13.]

3. DOCKET CALL <the agreed judgment was signed at the court’s uncontested docket call on May 24>. 4. Parliamentary law. A list of each motion, report, election, and other business that awaits a deliberative assembly’s consideration, from which a board or officer prepares and circulates an agenda for each meeting or for a series of upcoming meetings <in planning the meeting, the chair worked from an exhaustive docket>. See AGENDA. 5. A written abstract that provides specific information (usu. about something attached); esp., a label <check the docket to determine the goods’ destination and value>. 6. Hist. A notary’s attestation at the end of a deed or other instrument; esp., the attestation at the end of an instrument of seisin. — Also spelled doquent. See MANU ALIENA.

docket, vb. (17c) 1. To make a brief entry in the docket of the proceedings and filings in a court case <to docket the filing date>. 2. To abstract and enter in a book <to docket a judgment>. 3. To schedule (a case) for trial or some other event <the case was docketed for a May trial.>

docket call. (1899) A court session in which attorneys (and sometimes parties) appear in court to report the status of their cases. • For example, they may announce readiness for trial or report the suit’s settlement. — Often shortened to docket.

docket entry. A note made in the court’s formal record of proceedings and filings. See docket (1).

docket fee. See FEE (1).

docket number. (1866) A number that the court clerk assigns to a case on the court’s docket.

docket order. See ORDER (2).

docket sheet. See docket (1).

dockmaster. English law. An officer who directs the mooring and removal of ships to avoid the obstruction of commerce.

dock receipt. Maritime law. An interim document issued by a maritime carrier to evidence the delivery of goods at the dock. • Generally, a dock receipt entitles the designated person to receive a bill of lading, waybill, or other transport document. — Also termed dock warrant. See DOCUMENT OF TITLE. [Cases: Shipping $\Rightarrow$ 106(6).]

dock sale. See SALE.

dock warrant. See DOCK RECEIPT.

doctor. 1. Hist. In Roman Catholic canon law, an honorary title for a scholar. 2. A title of a person who has acquired an advanced degree in academics, or has achieved an honorable distinction. 3. A physician. — Abbr. Dr. [Cases: Health $\Rightarrow$ 110.]

Doctor of Jurisprudence. See JURIS DOCTOR.

Doctor of Law. See JURIS DOCTOR.

Doctor of Laws. An honorary degree bestowed on one who has achieved great distinction. — Abbr. LL.D. Cf. JURIS DOCTOR; MASTER OF LAWS.

doctor–patient privilege. See privilege (3).

Doctors' Commons. Hist. informal. The College of Advoca­tes and Doctors of Law, which trained specialists in admiralty and ecclesiastical law and housed admiralty and ecclesiastical courts from the 16th century to the 19th. • The College was dissolved in the 1860s after its functions were absorbed by the High Court. — Sometimes written Doctors' Common.

doctrine. (14c) 1. A principle, esp. a legal principle, that is widely adhered to. 2. Archaic. holding (1). doctrine of acquired rights. See acquired-rights doctrine.

doctrine of adverse domination. See adverse-domi­nation doctrine.

doctrine of approximation. (1845) A doctrine that au­thorizes a court to vary the details of a trust's admin­istration to preserve the trust and to carry out the donor's intentions. — Also termed equitable doctrine of approximation. Cf. cy pres.

doctrine of capture. See rule of capture.

doctrine of claim differentiation. See claim differen­tiation.

doctrine of coercion. See coercion (3).

doctrine of completeness. See rule of optional com­pleteness.

doctrine of constructive service. 1. See constructive service under service (2). 2. Employment law. The prin­ciple that a person who contracts to work for a definite period and is wrongfully discharged after begin­ning work may wait until the contract period expires and then sue on the contract for the wages that the person would have earned between the time of the discharge and the expiration of the contract. • In a jurisdiction that has adopted this principle, it is an exception to the mitigation-of-damages doctrine. — Often shortened to constructive service. Cf. mitigation-of-damages doctrine. [Cases: Labor and Employment C = 171, 239.] doctrine of contagion. See contagion.

doctrine of continuity. See continuity (2).

doctrine of contra non valentem: (kon tê non va­len­tem). (1938) The rule that a limitations or prescriptive period does not begin to run against a plaintiff who is unable to act, usu. because of the defendant's culpable act, such as concealing material information that would give rise to the plaintiff's claim. — Often shortened to contra non valentem. [Cases: Limitation of Actions C = 43, 95.]

doctrine of contra proferentem. See contra profer­entem.

doctrine of curative admis­sibility. A rule allowing a party to introduce otherwise inadmissible evidence to remove the prejudice caused by the improper admission of evidence that was offered by the opposing party. • The doctrine applies when a motion to strike cannot cure the prejudice created by the adverse party. — Also termed curative-admissibility doctrine. [Cases: Criminal Law C = 396; Evidence C = 155.]

doctrine of discovered peril. See last-clear-chance doctrine.

doctrine of election (18c). A doctrine holding that when a person has contracted with an agent without knowing of the agency and later learns the principal's identity, the person may enforce the contract against either the agent or the principal, but not both. See election (1); election of remedies.

doctrine of entit­eties (en-ti-ar-teez). In customs law, the rule that when an entry consists of parts that assemble to form an article different from any of the parts, the proper classification will be of the whole article, rather than the individual components. • For example, an unassembled product consisting of an empty decorative glass, powdered wax in a cellophane bag, wicks, and fragrance, boxed together and sold as one product may be properly classified as a candle.

doctrine of equitable indemnity. See equitable indem­nity under indemnity.

doctrine of equivalents. (1856) Patents. A judicially created theory for finding patent infringement when the accused process or product falls outside the literal scope of the patent claims. • The doctrine evolved to prevent parties from evading liability for patent infringement by making trivial changes to avoid the literal language of the patent claims. — In determining whether infringement exists under the doctrine, the court must first determine whether "the accused product or process contain[s] an element identical or equivalent to each claimed element of the patented invention." Warner­Jenkinson Co. v. Hilton Davis Chem. Co., 520 U.S. 17, 39–40, 117 S.Ct. 1040, 1054 (1997). If it does, it infringes on the patent if the differing element performs substantially the same function in substantially the same way to get the same result as the patented product or process. Prosecution-history estoppel is not an absolute bar to a patentee who seeks to invoke the doctrine of equivalents to prove infringement on a claim that was voluntarily amended. Festo v. Shoketsu Kinzoku Kogyo Kabushiki Co., 535 U.S. 722, 122 S.Ct. 1831 (2002). — Also termed equivalents doctrine; doctrine of equival­ence; doctrine of equivalency; doctrine of substantial equivalents; nonliteral infringement. Cf. literal infringe­ment under infringement. [Cases: Patents C = 237.] reverse doctrine of equivalents. The doctrine prevent­ing infringement liability when the invention is sub­stantially described by the claims of another's patent but performs the same or a similar function in a sub­stantially different way.

doctrine of estates. Hist. The rule that a person cannot own land, but can merely own an estate in it, authorizing the person to hold it for some period of time. • This doctrine answers the question of the duration of an estate. Cf. doctrine of tenures.

document of finality. See finality doctrine.

document of general average. Maritime law. A rule allowing a carrier to require cargo owners and the shipowner to contribute pro rata to the cost of protecting the ship and its cargo. [Cases: Shipping C= 186.]

document of identification. Hist. English law. The rule that if a person traveling in a conveyance is injured in an accident that occurs because of someone else's negligence, and the driver of the conveyance is contributorily negligent, the passenger cannot claim damages against the tortfeasor since the passenger is "identified" with the contributorily negligent driver. • The leading authority for this doctrine was Thorogood v. Bryan, 8 C.B. 15 (1849), but the Court of Appeal repudiated the doctrine as unsound in The Bernina [1887], 13 App. Cas. 1 (1888).

document of illusory coverage. A rule requiring an insurance policy to be interpreted so that it is not merely a delusion to the insured. • Courts avoid interpreting insurance policies in such a way that an insured's coverage is never triggered and the insurer bears no risk. [Cases: Insurance C= 2090.]

document of ineffective revocation. See dependent rel. revocation.

document of inchoate or incomplete facts. See personal facts rule.

document of inheritance. See inheritance doctrine.

document of intervening rights. See intervening rights.

document of legal unities. See legal-unities doctrine.

document of marital privacy. See marital-privacy doctrine.

document of necessaries. (1870) 1. The rule holding a parent or spouse liable to anyone who sells goods or provides medical services to that person's child or spouse if the goods or services are required for sustenance, support, or healthcare. 2. Archaic. The common-law rule holding a husband or father liable to anyone who sells goods to his wife or child if the goods are required for sustenance or support. See necessaries. [Cases: Husband and Wife C= 19.]

document of obligation. English law. The rule that if a foreign court of competent jurisdiction has adjudicated a certain sum to be due from one person to another, the liability to pay that sum becomes a legal obligation enforceable domestically by a debt action. • Once the plaintiff proves the judgment, the burden shifts to the defendant to show why the obligation should not be performed. The doctrine was established by Baron Parke in Russell v. Smyth, 9 M. & W. 810, 819 (1842). — Often shortened to obligation.

document of optional completeness. See rule of optional completeness.

document of parens patriae. See parens patriae (2).

document of practical location. See agreed-boundary doctrine.

document of precedent. (18c) 1. The rule that precedents not only have persuasive authority but also must be followed when similar circumstances arise. • This rule developed in the 19th century and prevails today. See stare decisis. [Cases: Courts C= 88.] 2. A rule that precedents are reported, may be cited, and will probably be followed by courts. • This is the rule that prevailed in England until the 19th century.

document of preclusion of inconsistent positions. See judicial estoppel under estoppel.

document of relation back. See relation back.

document of res judicata. See res judicata.

document of revestment. A rule by which a court regains jurisdiction after the entry of final judgment when the former opposing parties have actively participated in proceedings inconsistent with the court's judgment. [Cases: Courts C= 30.]

document of scrivener's error. (1992) A rule permitting a typographical error in a document to be reformed by parol evidence, if the evidence is precise, clear, and convincing. See clerical error under error (2). [Cases: Reformation of Instruments C= 17(2).]

document of separate spheres. See separate-spheres doctrine.

document of specialty. Int'l law. The principle, included as a provision in most extradition treaties, under which a person who is extradited to a country to stand trial for certain criminal offenses may be tried only for those offenses and not for any other pre-extradition offenses. Also termed specialty doctrine. See extradition. [Cases: Extradition and Detainers C= 19.]

document of spousal unity. See spousal-unity doctrine (1).

document of subsequent negligence. See last-clear-chance doctrine.

document of substantial equivalents. See doctrine of equivalents.

document of substituted judgment. See substituted-judgment doctrine.

document of superior equities. Insurance. A rule by which an insurer is unable to recover from anyone whose equities are equal or superior to the insurer's; esp., a rule that a right of subrogation may be invoked against another party only if that party's guilty conduct renders the party's equity inferior to that of the insured. — Also termed risk-stops-here rule. [Cases: Insurance C= 3513(3), 3517; Subrogation C= 1.]
doctrine of tenures. Hist. The rule that all land is held of the Crown, either directly or indirectly, on some type of tenure. • This doctrine answers the question of the manner in which an estate is held. — Also termed doctrine of tenure. Cf. doctrine of estates.
document of the conclusiveness of the judgment. See judicial estoppel under estoppel.
document of the last antecedent. See RULE OF THE LAST ANTECEDENT.
document of the last preceding antecedent. RULE OF THE LAST ANTECEDENT. document of ultimate negligence. See LAST-CLEAR-CHANCE DOCTRINE.

document, n. (15c) 1. Something tangible on which words, symbols, or marks are recorded. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 34(a). 2. (pl.) The deeds, agreements, title papers, letters, receipts, and other written instruments used to prove a fact. ancient document. (1846) Evidence. A document that is presumed to be authentic because its physical condition strongly suggests authenticity, it has existed for 20 or more years, and it has been maintained in proper custody (as by coming from a place where it is reasonably expected to be found). Fed. R. Evid. 901(b)(8). — Also termed ancient writing. [Cases: Evidence ☐=372.] document of authority. See governing document.
foreign document. (1816) A document that originated in, or was prepared or executed in, a foreign state or country.
governing document. Parliamentary law. A document that defines or organizes an organization, or grants or establishes its authority and governance. • An organization’s governing documents may include a charter, articles of incorporation or association, a constitution, bylaws, and rules. A charter or articles of incorporation or association, if they have been granted or adopted, are an organization's most authoritative governing document, followed by the constitution, bylaws, and rules, in that order. — Also termed document of authority. See CHARTER (4), (5); ARTICLES OF INCORPORATION; ARTICLES OF ASSOCIATION (2); CONSTITUTION (4); BYLAW (1); SUBORDINATION (2). public document. (17c) A document of public interest issued or published by a political body or otherwise connected with public business. Cf. public record under RECORD. [Cases: Evidence ☐=325–337.]

3. Evidence. Under the best-evidence rule, a physical embodiment of information or ideas, such as a letter, contract, receipt, account book, blueprint, or X-ray plate; esp., the original of such an embodiment. See Fed. R. Evid. 1001 et seq. [Cases: Criminal Law ☐=400; Evidence ☐=157–187.]
document, vb. (18c) 1. To support with records, instruments, or other evidentiary authorities <document the chain of custody>. 2. To record; to create a written record of <document a file>.
documentary credit. 1. Credit extended on a document of title or any other legal document. 2. A financing arrangement in which a financial institution authorizes or makes a payment to a third party (usu. an exporter) at a customer’s request. • This financing method facilitates international transactions by providing the importer with necessary credit and the exporter with an expedited cash payment.
documentary draft. See DRAFT.
documentary evidence. See EVIDENCE.
documentary instruction. A written agreement between an importer and exporter covering the reëlegation of various documents relating to the shipment and disposition of goods.

documentary sale. See SALE.
documentary stamp. A stamp required to be affixed to a deed or other instrument before it is recorded. documentary-stamp transfer tax. See stamp tax under TAX. document of title. (18c) A written description, identification, or declaration of goods authorizing the holder (usu. a bailee) to receive, hold, and dispose of the document and the goods it covers. • Documents of title, such as bills of lading, warehouse receipts, and delivery orders, are generally governed by Article 7 of the UCC. See BAILMENT (1)–(3). [Cases: Bills and Notes ☐=51; Warehousemen ☐=11.]
negotiable document of title. A document of title that actually stands for the goods it covers, so that any transfer of the goods requires a surrender of the document. UCC § 7-104(1). [Cases: Bills and Notes ☐=151; Warehousemen ☐=15.]
nonnegotiable document of title. A document of title that merely serves as evidence of the goods it covers. UCC § 7-104(2). [Cases: Warehousemen ☐=15.]
document request. See REQUEST FOR PRODUCTION. documentum (dok-ya-men-tum), n. [Latin] Roman law.
1. Proof. 2. A document. • This term appeared in post-classical imperial constitutions.

DOD. abbr. Department of Defense. See DEFENSE DEPARTMENT.
DOE, abbr. DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE DEPENDENTS SCHOOLS.

do, dico, addico (doh, doh-koh, a-doh-koh or dik-oh, a-dik-oh), [Latin] I give, I say, I adjudge. • These formal words were spoken by the Roman praetor in the exercise of his jurisdiction on certain days, such as dies fasti. They could not be officially spoken on dies nefasti. Do refers to the granting of actions, exceptions, and the appointment of judges; dico refers to the pronouncement of judgments; and addico refers to the adjudication of controverted property.

DOE, abbr. 1. DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION. 2. DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY.

Doe, Jane. See JANE DOE.

Doe, John. See JOHN DOE.

D'Oench Duhme doctrine (dench doom). The rule that stops a borrower from asserting a claim or defense against a federal successor to a failed financial institution — if the claim or defense is based on a side or secret agreement or representation — unless the agreements or representations have been (1) put into writing, (2) executed by the financial institution and borrower when the loan was issued, (3) approved by the financial institution's board of directors or loan committee, and (4) made a permanent part of the financial institution's records. D'Oench, Duhme & Co. v. FDIC, 315 U.S. 447, 62 S.Ct. 676 (1942) (now partially codified at 12 USCA §§ 1823(e), and otherwise of questionable standing in light of O'Melveny & Myers v. FDIC, 512 U.S. 79, 114 S.Ct. 2048 (1994)). [Cases: Banks and Banking ⊅= 642, 665(1); Courts ⊅= 12(2.15).]

doing business. The act of engaging in business activities; specif., the carrying out of a series of similar acts for the purpose of realizing a pecuniary benefit, or otherwise accomplishing a goal, or doing a single act with the intention of starting a series of such acts; esp., a nonresident's participation in sufficient business activities in a foreign state to allow the state's courts to exercise personal jurisdiction over the nonresident. See business (1); d/b/a; doing-business statute; long-arm statute; minimum contacts. [Cases: Corporations ⊅= 642, 665(1); Courts ⊅= 12(2.15).]

doing-business statute. A state law defining the acts that constitute undertaking business there, usu. for the purpose of establishing the circumstances under which the state's courts may exercise personal jurisdiction over a nonresident. See minimum contacts; long-arm statute. [Cases: Courts ⊅= 12(2.15).]

DOJ, abbr. DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE.

DOL, abbr. DEPARTMENT OF LABOR.

dol (dohl or dol), n. [French "deceit; fraud"] Civil law. Fraud committed in inducing another to enter into a contract. See fraud in the inducement under fraud. Cf. fraude.

dole, n. 1. A share of something that is jointly owned but divisible. 2. Slang. Welfare benefits received from a governmental agency. 3. Scots law. Criminal intent; the equivalent of mens rea.

do, lego (doh, lee-goh). [Latin] Hist. I give and bequeath. • In Roman law, this was the phrase used to make a bequest.

dole-land. Hist. Jointly owned land in which each owner or user has an assigned portion with distinct landmarks. • The share may be allotted annually on a rotating basis or permanently. — Also termed dole-meadow; dole-moor.

dole-meadow. See dole-LAND.

dole-moor. See dole-LAND.

Dole test. A four-part test used to determine the constitutionality of a condition attached by Congress under its Spending Clause power to the receipt of federal money. • The spending must be in pursuit of the general welfare, and the condition must be unambiguous, related to some federal interest, and not barred by any other provision of the Constitution. South Dakota v. Dole, 483 U.S. 203, 107 S.Ct. 2793 (1987). [Cases: United States ⊅= 82(2).]

doli capax (doh-lay kay-paks), adj. [Latin "capable of wrong"] Roman law. Capable of committing a crime or tort; esp., old enough to determine right from wrong. — Also termed capax doli. Cf. DOLI INCAPAX.

and fourteen is subject to much uncertainty: for the infant shall, generally speaking, be judged prima facie innocent; yet if he was doli capax, and could discern between good and evil at the time of the offence committed, he may be convicted and undergo judgment and execution of death, though he hath not attained to years of puberty or discretion. 1 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 452-53 (1765).

doli incapax (doh-li in-kay-paks), adj. [Latin “incapable of wrong”] Roman law. Incapable of committing a crime or tort. — Also termed incapax doli. Cf. DOLI CAPAX.

dollar-cost averaging, n. The investment practice of purchasing a fixed dollar amount of a type of security at regular intervals.

dolo (doh-loh), n. [Spanish] Spanish law. Fraud or deceit; bad or mischievous design.

dolus (doh-las). [Latin “device; artifice”] Roman & civil law. 1. Fraud or deceit: conduct intended to deceive someone; bad faith. • Although there may be dolus without fraud, fraud always includes dolus. Cf. CASES (1); CULPA (1). 2. Intentional aggression; willful injury, esp. to another’s property. — Also termed dolus malus; fraus.

“In the twelfth century the resuscitated Roman law introduced some new ideas. Men began to contrast, as Glanvill does, civil with criminal causes, to speak of dolus and culpa and casus, and to lay stress on the psychical element in crime.” 2 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 477 (2d ed. 1899).

“Although the word malitia is not unknown to the Roman lawyers, the usual and technical name for wrongful intent is dolus, or more specifically dolus malus. Dolus and culpa are two forms of mens rea. In a narrower sense, however, dolus includes merely that particular variety of wrongful intent which we term fraud — that is to say, the intent to deceive. From this limited sense it was extended to cover all forms of willful wrongdoing. The English term fraud has never received an equally wide extension.” John Salmond, Jurisprudence 385 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

dolus bonus (doh-las boh-nas). [Latin “good deceit”] Shrewdness or justifiable deceit, as when a person lies to an attacker to prevent an assault. • Dolus bonus does not produce any legal consequences.

dolus dans locum contractui (doh-las danz loh-kam kon-trak-choo-ti). [Latin] Fraud (or deceit) giving rise to the contract; specif., a fraudulent misrepresentation that, having been made by one of the parties to the contract and relied on by the other, was actually instrumental in inducing the latter to enter into the contract.

dolus incidens (doh-las in-si-denz). [Law Latin] Hist. Fraud incidental; fraud that does not affect the essential terms of an agreement.

dolus malus (doh-las mal-as). [Latin “bad or evil deceit”] Evil or fraudulent design or intent; an unjustifiable deceit.

DOMA. abbr. DEFENSE OF MARRIAGE ACT.

domain (doh-mayn), n. (15c) 1. The territory over which sovereignty is exercised <the 19th-century domains of the British Empire>. 2. An estate in land <the family domain is more than 6,000 acres>. 3. The complete and absolute ownership of land <his domain over this land has now been settled>. See EMINENT DOMAIN; PUBLIC DOMAIN.

domain name. The words and characters that website owners designate for their registered Internet addresses.

• All domain names have at least two levels. The first-level domain name identifies the registrant’s category as, e.g., a commercial site (.com), a governmental institution (.gov), an educational institution (.edu), a nonprofit group (.org), or a discussion group (.net). The second-level domain name is the unique identifier for the user in a particular category <rhaptangel.com> <rhaptangel.org>. A second-level domain name may be protected under trademark law but first-level domain names are not. In some circumstances, the entire domain name may be validly registered as a trademark. But trademark rights are not automatically created by registering a domain name. See INTERNET-PROTOCOL ADDRESS. [Cases: Telecommunications 6:330.] domain-name infringement. See INFRINGEMENT.

dombook. See DOOMBOOK.

• The doctrine was greatly cut back six years after it was announced, when the Supreme Court ruled that a speculative First Amendment chilling effect does not justify federal-court intervention in state affairs. Younger v. Harris, 401 U.S. 37, 91 S.Ct. 746 (1971). [Cases: Courts 6:508.]

domebook. See DOOMBOOK.

Domesday Book (doomz-day). The census or survey, ordered by William the Conqueror and substantially completed in 1086, of England’s landholdings, buildings, people, and livestock. — Abbr. D.B. — Also spelled Domesday Book.

“Domesday Book had several variant names — Liber de Wintonia, Rotulius Wintoniae, Scriptura Tesauri Regis, Liber Regis, Liber Judicarius, Censuales Angliae, Angliae Notitia et Lustratio, Rotulus Regis, Liber de Tesaurio, Exchequer Domesday. . . . Domesday Book had as its main object a fiscal one, and a limited fiscal one at that. Beyond that it does not profess to go, and if we get any further information from it as to contemporary law and society, we get it as an indirect consequence.” Percy H. Winfield, The Chief Sources of English Legal History 110–11 (1925).

“Domicelli, is an old obsolete... Word, anciently given as an Appellation or Addition to the King’s natural Sons in France, and sometimes to the eldest Sons of Noblemen there; from whence we borrowed these Additions: As several natural Children of John of Gaunt, Duke of Lancaster, are stiled Domicelli by the Charter of Legitimation... But according to Thorn, the Domicelli were only the better Sort of Servants in Monasteries.” Giles Jacob, A New Law-Dictionary (8th ed. 1762).

domicile (dom-a-sil), n. (15c) 1. The place at which a person has been physically present and that the person regards as home; a person’s true, fixed, principal, and permanent home, to which that person intends to return and remain even though currently residing elsewhere. • A person has a settled connection with his her domicile for legal purposes, either because that place is home or because the law has so designated that place. — Also termed permanent abode; habitation. [Cases: Domicile 1; Federal Courts 282.]

“By domicile we mean home, the permanent home, and if you do not understand your permanent home, I am afraid that no illustration drawn from foreign writers or foreign languages will very much help you to it.” Whicker v. Hume (1858) 7 H.L.C. 124, 160 (per Lord Cranworth).

“It is difficult to give a definition of domicile that will cover at once domicile by operation of law and domicile by choice. The idea of domicile certainly includes the idea of place and the idea of settled connection with the place. Domicil of choice is so closely connected with the idea of home that it seems desirable to include that idea in any definition, and yet the idea is not applicable to many kinds of domicile by operation of law. It has therefore seemed best to state this element in the alternative. If a home is in the place, that is sufficient. If there is no home, or if the party is not sui juris, then the place is assigned by law without his will." 1 Joseph H. Beale, A Treatise on the Conflict of Laws § 9.1, at 89–90 (1935).

"A person's domicile is the place with which that person is most closely associated — his or her 'home' with all the connotations of that word. A person can be domiciled in a nation, a state of the United States, a city, or a house within a city. He or she can have a domicile within a broader geographical designation without having a domicile in a narrower geographical designation. For example, a person may be domiciled in a state without being domiciled within any particular city within the state. For interstate choice-of-law purposes, it is the state in which a person is domiciled that is significant." Russell J. Weintraub, Commentary on the Conflict of Laws § 2.2, at 14 (4th ed. 2001).

2. The residence of a person or corporation for legal purposes. — Also termed (in sense 2) legal residence; domicile by operation of law. Cf. residence; place of business. — Also spelled (in BrE) domicil.

"Tax statues frequently speak in terms of residence, intending it to be the equivalent of domicile. For example, the New York estate tax speaks in terms of residence and non-residence. Similarly . . . the United States imposes an estate tax on any resident or citizen of the U.S. Although both statutes use the term 'residence,' its usage has been construed to mean 'domicile.' " Robert C. Lawrence III, International Tax and Estate Planning § 1.03(a)(4), at 8-9 (1989).

after-acquired domicile. (1858) A domicile established after the facts relevant to an issue arose. • An after-acquired domicile cannot be used to establish jurisdiction or choice of law.

commercial domicile. (1839) 1. A domicile acquired by a nonresident corporation conducting enough activities to permit taxation of the corporation's property or activities located outside the bounds of the taxing state. 2. A domicile acquired by a person or company freely residing or carrying on business in enemy territory or enemy-occupied territory. — Also termed quasi-domicile.

corporate domicile. (1890) The place considered by law as the center of corporate affairs, where the corporation's functions are discharged; the legal home of a corporation, usu. its state of incorporation or the state in which it maintains its principal place of business. • For purposes of determining whether diversity jurisdiction exists in federal court, a corporation is considered a citizen of both its state of incorporation and the state of its principal place of business. See diversity of citizenship. [Cases: Corporations C=52, 503(1); Federal Courts C=296; Taxation C=2562, 3486.] domicile of origin. See domicile of origin.

domicile of birth. See domicile of origin.

domicile of choice. (1878) 1. A domicile established by physical presence within a state or territory, coupled with the intention to make it home. [Cases: Domicile C=4.] 2. The domicile that a person chooses after reaching majority or being emancipated.

domicile of choice. (1831) The domicile of a person at birth, derived from the custodial parent or imposed by law. — Also termed natural domicile; domicile of birth; original domicile. See necessary domicile. [Cases: Domicile C=3.]

"Domicil is sometimes divided into domicil of birth, that by operation of law, and that of choice. Domicil of origin in modern times is domicil in the place where his parents at his birth were domiciled." Theodore D. Woolsey, Introduction to the Study of International Law § 71, at 105 n.2 (5th ed. 1878).

"Domicile of origin is the domicile the law assigns to each person at birth, usually the domicile of the father in the case of a legitimate child and of the mother in the case of an illegitimate child. Domicile of origin has particular significance in English law. If one abandons one's domicile of choice without attaining a new one, the domicile of origin 'revives' until a new domicile of choice is attained. In contrast, U.S. jurisdictions generally will not find a domicile abandoned until a new one has been adopted." Robert C. Lawrence III, International Tax and Estate Planning § 1.03(a)(1), at 4 (1989).

domicile of succession. (1874) The domicile that determines the succession of a person's estate.

domicile of trustee. The domicile where a trustee is appointed. [Cases: Trusts C=113.]

elected domicile. A contractually agreed domicile between parties for purposes of the contract.

foreign domicile. A domicile established by a citizen or subject of one sovereignty within the territory of another.

matrimonial domicile. A domicile that a husband and wife, as a married couple, have established as their home. — Also termed marital domicile; matrimonial home. [Cases: Divorce C=62; Husband and Wife C=3(1).]

municipal domicile. A person's residence in a county or municipality, as distinguished from the person's state or national domicile.

national domicile. A domicile considered in terms of a particular nation rather than a locality or subdivision of a nation.

natural domicile. See domicile of origin.

necessary domicile. A domicile legally fixed and independent of choice, as in the domicile of origin. See domicile of origin.

original domicile. See domicile of origin.

quasi-domicile. See commercial domicile.

domiciliate (dom-a-sil-ee-ayt), vb. To establish a domicile; to fix a place of residence.

domiciliation (dom-i-sil-ee-ay-shan), n. The act of establishing a domicile.

dominatus, dominium, dominicum (da-min-a-kam), n. [Latin "domain"] 1. Hist. Domain; lordship. 2. Hist. Land ownership, esp. that retained by a lord for his own possession, as distinguished from the rights given to a tenant. 3. Eccles. law. A church or other religious building.

dominion. (14c) 1. Control; possession <dominion over the car>. 2. Sovereignty <dominion over the nation>. 3. Foreign dominion.

dominium (da-min-ee-um), n. [fr. Latin dominus "lord"] 1. Roman & civil law. Absolute ownership including the right to possession and use; a right of control over property that the holder might retain or transfer at pleasure. • Dominium was subject to any servitudes, planning restrictions, etc. This term gradually came to also mean merely ownership of property, as distinguished from the right to possession or use.

"Dominium is the Roman term for the rights of an owner against all the world: and the contrast of dominium and obligatio is the nearest approach that can be made, in classical Roman language, to the distinction marked by the modern terms in rem and in personam." Frederick Pollock, A First Book of Jurisprudence 83 (1896).

"The one word dominium has to assume so many shades of meaning. The tenant qui tenet terram in dominio, is dominus rei et dominium rei; but then he has above him one who is his dominus, and for the rights of this lord over him and over his land there is no other name than dominium." 2 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 14 (2d ed. 1899).

dominium directum et utile (da-min-ee-um di-rektam et you-ta-lee), n. [Law Latin] Civil law. Complete ownership of property, including both title and exclusive use.

dominium eminens (da-min-ee-um em-a-nen), n. [Law Latin] Civil law. Eminent domain. See EMINENT DOMAIN.

dominium ex jure quiritingum (da-min-ee-um eks joor-ee kwis-ryesh ee-am), Roman law. Ownership exercised by Roman citizens in the most complete manner (plena jure), the property being domestic (not foreign) and having been acquired according to all the forms of law. — Also termed dominium quirriturium; dominium legitimum.

dominium legitimum (la-jit-i-num), See dominium ex jure quiritingum.

dominium plenum (da-min-ee-um plee-nam), n. [Law Latin] Civil law. Full ownership combining dominium directum and dominium utile. — Also termed plenum dominium.

dominium quirriturium (kwis-ta-tair ee-am). See dominium ex jure quiritingum.

dominical (da-min-ee-kal), adj. Of or relating to a Sunday; of or relating to the Lord's day.

Dominican divorce. See Mexican divorce under divorce.

domicide (da-min-a-sid), n. [fr. Latin dominus "master" + caedo "to kill"] Hist. 1. The crime of killing one's master. 2. A person who kills his or her master.
dominium utile (da-min-ee-am yoo-ta-lee), n. [Law Latin] Civil law. Equitable ownership; a beneficial right to use property; the right of a tenant to use the soil and its profits.

“The special characteristic of Feudal land was that ownership in it was split into two kinds, the dominium directum of the superior (lord) and the dominium utile of the vassal. The feudists correctly insisted that this was not a form of joint ownership, not yet of ownership burdened with an easement or a ‘usufruct,’ but that two kinds of ownership were present, and that each of these persons, the lord and the vassal, was properly called ‘owner’ or dominus. The lord’s dominium directum gave him a reversion in the case of forfeiture of failure of issue and the enjoyment of whatever the naturalia and accidentalia were. The vassal’s dominium utile gave him the immediate enjoyment of the land itself.” Max Radin, Handbook of Anglo-American Legal History 148 (1936).

nudum dominium (da-min-ee-am n’yoo-dam). [Latin “bare ownership”] Roman Law. Ownership divorced from present possession or use.

“The Latin word for ownership, dominium, is particularly confusing, since in medieval times it is also the word for lordship.” J.H. Baker, An Introduction to English Legal History 255 (3d ed. 1990).

domino volente (do-mo-voh voh-len-ti). [Law Latin “the owner being willing”] With the owner’s consent.

dominus (do-mo-nas), n. [Latin “lord”] 1. Roman law. An owner of a thing or inheritance. 2. Roman law. The title of the emperor in the later empire. 3. Hist. A lord; a feudal superior, as in dominus rex (“the lord of the king”), dominus capitalis (“a chief lord”), dominus medius (“an intermediate lord”), and dominus ligius (“a liege lord”). 4. Hist. Eccles. law. Lord; sir. • This is a title of distinction usu. given to a knight, a clergyman, a lord of a manor, or another gentleman of quality. 5. Civil law. Someone who possesses something by right. Pl. domini.

dominus directus (do-min-ee-as di-rek-tas). [Law Latin “the immediate feudal superior.”] dominus litis (do-min-ee-as li-tis), n. [Latin] 1. Civil law. The party who makes the decisions in a lawsuit, usu. as distinguished from the attorney. 2. Maritime law. A third person who represents an absent party in a case. — Also termed litis dominus.

dominus navis (do-min-ee-as na-vi), n. [Latin] Civil law. The absolute owner of a shipping vessel.

dominus omnium bonorum (do-min-ee-as ahm-nee-am bo-nor-am). [Law Latin] Hist. Proprietor of all moveable goods. • This phrase formerly described a husband who owned goods in common with his wife.

domitae naturae (do-mi-ta-tee na-tyoor-e). [Latin] Hist. Of a tame nature; not wild. • This term usu. refers to long-domesticated animals, such as sheep or cattle, in which a person has absolute property rights. But it can also refer to naturally wild animals that have been tamed.

dommage survenu (daw-mazh suur-voh-noo). [French] Damage sustained. • This is from article 17 of the Warsaw Convention providing for compensatory damages, rather than awards for loss of society or punitive damages, for bodily injury that a passenger suffers while on board an aircraft, or while boarding or disembarking. [Cases: Carriers C-- 307, 319.]

domo reparaunda (do-mo rep-ah-ran-da), n. [Latin “to repair a house”] Hist. A writ available to a person to force a neighbor who owns a decrepit house to repair it because the person is worried that the neighbor’s house will fall and cause injury.

domus (doh-moos), n. [Latin] A house; an abode.

domus conversorum (doh-moos kon-var-sor-am), n. [Law Latin “house of the converts”] Hist. An institution, established by Henry III for converted Jews, that continued until Edward III expelled Jews from the kingdom and converted the institution to a chancery record office.

domus Dei (doh-moos dee-ee), n. [Law Latin] House of God. • This term was applied to various hospitals and religious houses, such as the Hospital of St. Julian in Southampton.

donarius (doh-nah-tair-ee-ahs), n. [Latin] A donee; a gift recipient.

donate, vb. (18c) To give (property or money) without receiving consideration for the transfer. — donation, n. — donative (doh-nah-tiv), adj.

donatio inofficiosa (doh-nay-shee-oh in-ah-fish-ee-oh-so), n. [Latin “inofficious gift”] A gift so large that it diminishes an heir’s birthright portion of the donor’s property.

donatio inter virum et uxorem (doh-nay-shee-oh in-eh-roh vee-ee-ee-ee-oo-sah), n. [Latin] Roman law. Donation between husband and wife. • With a few exceptions (such as suitable anniversary gifts), a donation between spouses was invalid, but might be confirmed if the donor died without revoking it.

donatio inter vivos (doh-nay-shee-oh in-eh-roh vee-ee-vohs). See inter vivos gift under gift.

donatio mortis causa, n. See gift causa mortis under gift. Pl. donationes mortis causa.

donation. 1. A gift, esp. to a charity. [Cases: Gifts C-- 1.] donation purely gratuitous. Louisiana law. An unconditional inter vivos gift. Cf. onerous donation. [Cases: Gifts C=1.]

onerous donation. Civil law. An inter vivos gift burdened with a condition imposed by the donor. There is no gift unless the gift's value is more than twice as much as the condition's value to the donor. La. Civ. Code arts. 1524, 1526. Cf. donation purely gratuitous. [Cases: Gifts C=34.]

remunerative donation. Civil law. An inter vivos gift made to compensate a person for services rendered. It is not a gift unless the value of the property given is more than twice as much as the value of the services. La. Civ. Code arts. 1525, 1526. [Cases: Gifts C=1.]

out-of-hospital do-not-resuscitate order. A do-not-resuscitate order, executed by a person who has been diagnosed by a physician as having a terminal condition, directing healthcare professionals to withhold certain life-sustaining treatments when acting outside a hospital or similar facility. — Abbr. OOH-DNR order.

donum (doh-nam), n. [Latin “a gift”] Roman law. A gift. donation gratuitum. See gratuitous gift under gift.

doom, n. Hist. 1. A statute or law. 2. A judgment; esp., a sentence in a criminal matter. 3. Justice; fairness. 4. A trial; the process of adjudicating.

“The word ‘doom’ is, perhaps, best translated as ‘judgment.’ It survived in occasional use until the fourteenth century. Wyclif’s translation of the Bible, rendering the verse, ‘For with what judgment ye judge, ye shall be judged.’ The distinction which we make to-day between the legislator, who makes the law, and the judge, who interprets, declares and applies it, was not known to our Anglo-Saxon ancestors. The dooms were judgments in the sense that they were declarations of the law of the people.” W.J.V. Windeyer, Lectures on Legal History (2d ed. 1949).

doombook, n. [fr. Saxon dombec] Hist. A code, compiled under Alfred, containing maxims of common law, judicial forms, and criminal penalties. The code existed until the reign of Edward IV, when it was lost. — Also termed doneebook (dowm buk), domboe; liber judicialis of Alfred.

door-closing statute. (1960) A state law closing or denying access to local courts unless a plaintiff meets specified conditions; esp., a statute requiring a foreign corporation to "qualify" before doing business in the state, including registering with the secretary of state, paying a fee or tax, and appointing an agent to receive service of process. [Cases: Corporations C:0=661(2), (6); Courts C:0=6, 14.]

double jeopardy. (1847) The fact of being prosecuted or sentenced twice for substantially the same offense. • Double jeopardy is prohibited by the Fifth Amendment. In 2005, the United Kingdom abolished the rule for certain serious offenses, such as murder and hijacking. A court may quash an acquittal and order a retrial if new and compelling evidence of the defendant’s guilt is discovered, and the evidence was not available before the acquittal. Only one retrial is allowed. Cf. former jeopardy. [Cases: Double Jeopardy ©=132.1.]

Double Jeopardy Clause. (1928) The Fifth Amendment provision stating, “nor shall any person be subject for the same offence to be twice put in jeopardy of life or limb.” • The clause, which was ratified in 1791, does not prevent postacquittal appeals by the government if those appeals could not result in the defendant’s being subjected to a second trial for substantially the same offense before a second fact-trier. See United States v. Wilson, 420 U.S. 332, 95 S.Ct. 1013 (1975). [Cases: Double Jeopardy ©=2.] double patenting. 1. Obtaining two patents covering the same invention. • An inventor is not allowed to receive more than one patent on one invention. 37 CFR 1.56. — Also termed same-invention double patenting. [Cases: Patents ©=120.] 2. The issuance or obtaining of a patent for an invention that differs from an already patented invention only in some unpatentable detail. — Also termed obviousness double patenting. [Cases: Patents ©=120.]

judicially created double patenting. Attempting to patent an invention that is an obvious variation of another invention by the same inventor when the first invention has already been patented or has a pending application. • Double patenting is grounds for rejecting a patent application, limiting the term of a patent through a terminal disclaimer, or invalidating a patent. In re Longi, 225 U.S.P.Q. 645 (Fed. Cir. 1985). A double-patenting challenge can be overcome by filing a terminal disclaimer. 37 CFR 1.321. — Also termed obviousness-type double patenting. double use. See use (1).

double value. Twice the value of something; specif., a penalty payable by a tenant to a landlord of twice the yearly value of lands held by the tenant, who refused to leave when the landlord provided written notice of intent to possess the property. • The penalty was provided under the Landlord and Tenant Act (1730). St. 4 Geo. 2. ch. 28, s. 1. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant ☼=216].

double voucher. In a common-recovery suit, a voucher first by the fictitious tenant to the real tenant, and then by the real tenant to the common vouchee. • The use of a fictitious tenant was necessary because if the recovery had been obtained directly against the real tenant, it would be effective only to the limited extent that the real tenant actually possessed an interest in the estate. But if recovery was obtained against another party, it would be effective against any latent interest that the real tenant might assert in the estate. See common recovery.

The recovery, here described, is with a single voucher only; but sometimes it is with double ... or farther voucher, as the exigency of the case may require. And indeed it is now usual always to have a recovery with double voucher at the least; by first conveying an estate of freehold to any indifferent person, against whom the praecipe is brought, and then he vouches the tenant in tail, who vouches over the common voucher. For, if a recovery be had immediately against tenant in tail, it bars only such estate in the premises of which he is then actually seised; whereas if the recovery be had against another person, and the tenant in tail be vouched, it bars every latent right and interest which he may have in the lands recovered. 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 359 (1766).

dovable (dow-a-bal), adj. 1. Capable of being endowed <the widow received the dovable estate>. [Cases: Dower and Curtesy ☼=10.] 2. Capable of receiving dower <the woman was dovable of the estate>. [Cases: Dower and Curtesy ☼=21.]

dowager (dow-a-jar). A widow holding property or title — esp. a life estate in real property — received from her deceased husband.

dowager-queen. The widow of the king of England. • If she is also the mother of the reigning monarch, she may also be known as the queen mother. — Also written dower queen. — Also termed queen dower; queen mother.

“A queen dowager is the widow of the king, and as such enjoys most of the privileges belonging to her as queen consort. But it is not high treason to conspire her death, or to violate her chastity ... because the succession to the crown is not thereby endangered. Yet still, ... no man can marry a queen dowager without special licence from the king, on pain of forfeiting his lands and goods. ... A queen dowager, when married again to a subject, doth not lose her regal dignity, as peeresses dowager do their peerage when they marry commoners.” 1 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 217 (1765).

dower (dow-ar). (14c) At common law, a wife's right, upon her husband's death, to a life estate in one-third of the land that he owned in fee. • With few exceptions, the wife could not be deprived of dower by any transfer made by her husband during his lifetime. Although most states have abolished dower, many states retaining the concept have expanded the wife's share to a life estate in all the land that her husband owned in fee. — Also termed dowment; maritagium. Cf. curtesy. [Cases: Dower and Curtesy ☼=118.] consummated dower (kan-som-it or kahn-so-mit), n. [Law Latin “dower at the church door”] Hist. An endowment of dower made by a man to his wife at the church door or porch, usu. as part of the marriage ceremony.

“Dower ad ostium ecclesiae ... This appears to have been the original English dower... It was formerly the most usual species of dower, and, though latterly fallen into disuse, was not abolished until the statute of 3 & 4 Will. IV. c. 105, s. 13 ... The wife might be endowed of personality or goods as well as of lands, and a trace of this ancient kind of dower is still distinctly preserved in the marriage ritual of the church of England, in the expression ‘with all my worldly goods I thee endow.’” 1 Alexander M. Burrill, A Law Dictionary and Dictionary of 520 (2d ed. 1867).

dowar by custom. Hist. Dower that is determined by custom rather than the general law. — Also termed dower by particular custom.

dower by particular custom. See dower by custom.

dower by the common law. The regular dower, consisting of a life interest in one-third of the lands that the husband held in fee. — Also termed dos dowery (dow-ree). Archaic. The money, goods, or property that a woman brings to her husband in marriage. — Also termed marriage portion; maritlagium (mair-ә-ty-ә-әm); marriage (mair-ә-тij).

Drago doctrine. The principle asserted by Luis Drago, Minister of Foreign Affairs of the Argentine Republic, in a December 29, 1902 letter to the Argentine Minister in Washington, in which Drago, responding to the forcible coercion of Venezuela's unpaid loans by Great Britain and others, argued that no public debt should be collected from a sovereign state by force or through the occupation of American territory by a foreign power. The subject was presented at the Hague Conference of 1907, when a modified version of the Drago doctrine was adopted.

drain, n. 1. The act of drawing a liquid off gradually; the act of emptying. 2. The act of gradually exhausting. 3. A conduit for draining liquid, as a ditch or a pipe.

drain, vb. 1. To draw (a liquid) off gradually <the farmer drained water from the property>. 2. To exhaust gradually <the facility has drained the area's natural resources>. 3. To empty gradually <the water drained>.

Drainage district. A political subdivision authorized to levy assessments for making drainage improvements within its area. [Cases: Drains \(=\) 12.]

"In the United States there are numerous special districts that administer drainage projects. They are typically formed under state law after a local election or petition showing consent of a majority of affected landowners. The projects are usually publicly financed, and assessments are made against all property benefited, whether or not all individual landowners have consented. Such projects can increase the agricultural capacity of drained lands and provide 'new' land for buildings and other improvements ... Special statutes governing drainage districts generally exempt them from restraints ... But if private property rights are taken or if others are damaged, compensation must be paid." David H. Getches, Water Law in a Nutshell 301 (3d ed. 1997).

drainage rights. The interest that a property owner has in the natural drainage and flow of water on the land. [Cases: Waters and Water Courses \(=\) 119.]

drama, n. 1. A presentation of a story portrayed by words and actions or actions alone; a play. Cf. dramatic composition.

"The term [dram] is applied to compositions which imitate action by representing the personages introduced in them as real and as employed in the action itself. The varieties of the drama differ more or less widely, both as to the objects acted and as to the means used in the imitation. But they all agree as to the method or manner which is essential to the dramatic art, viz., imitation in the way of action." 7 Encyclopaedia Britannica 338 (9th ed. 1907).

2. An event or series of events having conflicting and exciting elements that capture people's attention.

drama-pricing. A seller's tactic of dramatically dropping the price of something, esp. real estate, to attract a buyer. — Also termed trauma-pricing.

dram shop. Archaic. A place where alcoholic beverages are sold; a bar or saloon. — Also spelled dram-shop; drinking shop.

dram shop act. (1859) A statute allowing a plaintiff to recover damages from a commercial seller of alcoholic beverages for the plaintiff's injuries caused by a customer's intoxication. — Also termed civil-liability act; civil-damage law. [Cases: Intoxicating Liquors \(=\) 282–324.]

"Largely at the behest of the temperance movement, statutes (called 'dram shop acts') were enacted in many states which imposed some form of civil liability on those engaged in the business of selling such beverages in favor of third persons injured thereby .... At one time, almost half the states had such laws; today, that number seems to be declining. ... A growing minority of states have overturned the common law rule and have created a common law dram shop action. In most of these jurisdictions, liability is predicated on statutes which regulate the liquor business and prohibit certain sales by liquor licensees (to minors, intoxicated persons, etc.) thus, where the sale is unlawful, it is negligence per se ...." Edward J. Klonka, Torts in a Nutshell 293–94 (2d ed. 1992).
dram-shop liability. (1995) Civil liability of a commercial seller of alcoholic beverages for personal injury caused by an intoxicated customer. • Claims based on a similar type of liability have been brought against private citizens for personal injury caused by an intoxicated social guest. [Cases: Intoxicating Liquors ☻ 282–324.]

draw, vb. (13c) 1. To create and sign (a draft) <draw a check to purchase goods>. 2. To prepare or frame (a legal document) <draw up a will>. 3. To take out (money) from a bank, treasury, or depository <she drew $6,000 from her account>. 4. To select (a jury) <the lawyers began voir dire and had soon drawn a jury>.

drawee (draw-ee). (18c) The person or entity that a draft is directed to and that is requested to pay the amount stated on it. • The drawee is usu. a bank that is directed to pay a sum of money on an instrument. — Also termed payor. [Cases: Banks and Banking ☻ 137; Bills and Notes ☻ 24.]

drawee bank. See payor bank under BANK.

drawer. (17c) One who directs a person or entity, usu. a bank, to pay a sum of money stated in an instrument — for example, a person who writes a check; the maker of a note or draft. See MAKER. [Cases: Banks and Banking ☻ 137; Bills and Notes ☻ 23.]

drawing. 1. Patents. A specially prepared figure included with a patent application to explain and describe the invention. • A drawing is required when necessary to understand the invention. — A drawing is required when necessary to understand the invention. 35 USCA § 113. [Cases: Patents ☻ 100.] 2. Trademarks. A graphic or textual depiction of a trademark, filed as part of an application for the mark to be placed on the primary register. • The drawing serves as the element that is published in the Official Gazette. It must include the applicant’s name and address, the type of goods or services it will identify, and the date of first use or a statement of intent to use it in commerce. [Cases: Trademarks ☻ 1282.]

formal drawing. A drawing that complies with the formatting requirements of the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office, as set forth in 37 CFR 1.84, and is stamped “Approved” by the PTO Drafter. Cf. informal drawing. [Cases: Patents ☻ 100.]

front-page drawing. A drawing submitted with the patent application and selected by the examiner as the application’s representative drawing. • The drawing is reproduced on the front page of the published application or patent. [Cases: Patents ☻ 100.]

informal drawing. A drawing that does not comply with the formatting requirements of the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office. • A drawing may be submitted as informal by the patent applicant, or declared informal by the PTO Drafter. Cf. formal drawing.

original drawing. A drawing submitted with the original application.

special-form drawing. A drawing of a trademark that contains some graphical element, such as a logo, a picture, or a special type style. • A stylized or special-form drawing must be submitted in black-and-white, with a description of the colors to be used on the final mark. — Also termed stylized drawing.

substitute drawing. A drawing submitted after the original application has been filed. • A substitute drawing is often a formal drawing filed to replace an informal drawing. [Cases: Patents ☻ 100.]

typed drawing. A drawing of a trademark that is purely textual, with no graphical component. • A typed drawing consists solely of the words, letters, and numbers that make up the mark, typed in all-caps. — Also termed typed-form drawing.

drift of the forest. Hist. A periodic examination of forest cattle by officers who drive them to an enclosed place to determine their ownership or common status.

"Drift of the forest is nothing else but an exact view or examination taken once, twice, or oftener in a year as occasion shall require, what beasts there be in the forest, to the end that the common in the forest be not overcharged, that the beasts of foreigners that have no common there be not permitted, and that beasts not commonable may be put out." Termes de la Ley 185–87 (1st Am. ed. 1812).

drift-stuff. Any material floating at random in water without a discoverable source. • Drift-stuff is usu. the property of the riparian owner.

drilling contract. Oil & gas. A well-drilling agreement between a drilling contractor, who owns drilling rigs and associated equipment, and the owner or lessor of the mineral rights. • The contract spells out the rights and duties of the parties. In general, the more control the interest-owner retains over the contractor, the more liability the owner is exposed to for damages the drilling causes. See DAYWORK DRILLING CONTRACT; FOOTAGE DRILLING CONTRACT. [Cases: Mines and Minerals ☻ 109.]

turnkey drilling contract. Oil & gas. A drilling contract under which the drilling contractor promises to perform specified functions for an agreed price. • The lease operator has little or no discretion to control the drilling contractor, and so assumes little or no liability for damages the drilling may cause. [Cases: Mines and Minerals $109, 120.]

drilling-delay rental clause. Oil & gas. A provision in an oil-and-gas lease giving the lessee the right to maintain the lease from period to period during the primary term by paying delay rentals instead of starting drilling operations. • Lessees use drilling-delay rental clauses because courts have said that they obviate any implied covenant to drill a test well on the premises. They are accepted by lessors because they provide for periodic income from the lease. See "or" lease, "unless" lease under LEASE. [Cases: Mines and Minerals $78.1(3).]

"The purpose of the lease drilling-delay rental clause is to ensure that the lessee has no obligation to drill during the primary term by negating any implied obligation to test the premises. Before drilling-delay rental clauses became common in oil and gas leases, many courts held that lessees had an implied duty to drill a test well on the leased premises within a reasonable time after grant of the lease. The rationale for the implied covenant was that the major consideration for the grant of the lease by the lessor was the expectation that the property would be tested within a reasonable time after grant of the lease. The courts' determination of what was a reasonable time ranged from a few months to several years, depending upon the circumstances. Lessees found that they could not rely upon a long stated term alone to preserve their rights." John S. Lowe, Oil and Gas Law in a Nutshell 195-96 (3d ed. 1995).

"Under the French rule of law, known as the droit d'auteur... the whole property of an alien dying in France without leaving children born in that country escheated to the crown. The royal right was not universally exacted, and at a very early period special exceptions were introduced in favour of certain classes. Thus Louis XI exempted merchants of Brabant, Flanders, Holland, and Zealand from the operation of the law, and a similar privilege was extended by Henri II to merchants of the Hanse towns, and from Scotland." 1 R.H. Inglis Palgrave, Palgrave's Dictionary of Political Economy 68 (Henry Higgins ed., 2d ed. 1925).

"In France by the fourteenth century it was accepted that a stranger might acquire and possess but not inherit or transmit by will or on intestacy. In 1386 the French king assumed the seigneurial droit d'aubaine or right to inherit. In treaties in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries the right was frequently renounced. Louis XVI in 1787 abolished the right as against subjects of Great Britain without reciprocity. The constituent Assembly abolished the right in 1790 and it was commonly abolished elsewhere in the early nineteenth century." David M. Walker, The Oxford Companion to Law 378 (1980).

droit d'auteur (droy d-o-tar), n. [French "author's right"] The copyright system used in France and other civil-law nations and differing from common-law copyright by giving more protection to an author's moral right. See AUTHOR'S RIGHT.

droit de bris (droy da bree), n. [Law French "right of a wreck"] Hist. A right claimed by lords of the coasts of France to fragments of shipwrecks, including persons or property that had washed ashore. • The right was exercised primarily in Bretagne but was abrogated by Henry III as duke of Normandy, Aquitaine, and Guinéenne, in a charter granted in A.D. 1226. — Also termed droit de bris sur le naufrages. Cf. DROIT DE NAUFRAGE.

droit de détraction (droy da day-trak-see-awn), n. [French "the right of withdrawal"] Int'l law. A tax on property acquired by succession or by will and then removed to another state or country.

droit de garde (droy da gahr), n. [French "right of ward"] Hist. French law. A king's right to wardship of a noble vassal who has not reached majority.

droit de gite (droy do zheet), n. [French "right of lodging"] Hist. French law. A duty of a commoner holding land in the royal domain to provide lodging and food to a royal party traveling on royal business.

droit de prise (droy da preez), n. [French "a right of prize"] Hist. French law. A commoner's duty to supply articles on credit to the royal household for domestic consumption.

droit de quint (droy da kant), n. [French "the right of a fifth"] Hist. French law. A required payment made by a noble vassal to the king each time ownership of the vassal's fief changed.

droit de suite (droy da sweet), n. [French "right to follow"] 1. A creditor's right to recover a debtor's property after it passes to a third party. 2. Copyright. An artist's resale royalty; the right of a work's creator to benefit from appreciation in the value of the work by receiving a portion of the profit from its later resales. • A droit de suite is recognized in some European nations.

"The droit de suite (literally translated as the right to follow the work) enables artists to claim a portion of the price for which a work is resold. The idea is that an artist may sell a painting for a low price at a time when they are unknown and have little bargaining power. In due course, as the artist's reputation develops, the painting may be resold for continually increasing sums. . . . The right is seen to be justified not only because it encourages creation, but also because the artist is conceived (through the authorial link) as being responsible for the increase in value [economic success of their works]." Lionel Bentley & Brad Sherman, Intellectual Property Law 281 (2001).

droit d'exécution (droy deh-say-koo-awn), n. [French "right of execution"] French law. 1. A stockbroker's right to sell the stock bought for a client who later refuses it. 2. A stockbroker's right to sell deposited securities to secure the broker against a loss in buying for a client.

droit-droit (droy-droy), n. [Law French "double right"] Hist. The unification of the right of possession with the right of property. — Also termed jus duplicatum; droit droit.

"A complete title to lands, tenements, and hereditaments. For it is an ancient maxim of the law, that no title is completely good, unless the right of possession be joined with the right of property; which right is then denominated a double right, jus duplicatum, or droit droit. And when to this double right the actual possession is also united . . . then, and then only, is the title completely legal." 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 199 (1766).

droit du seigneur (droy da sen-yuur). [French "right of the lord"] Hist. 1. A supposed customary right of a feudal lord to have sexual intercourse with a tenant's bride on her wedding night. 2. A supposed custom requiring sexual abstinence by a couple on their wedding night. — Also spelled droit de seigneur. — Also termed jus primae noctis.

droit écrit (droy ay-kree), n. [French "the written law"] French law. The civil law; the corpus juris civilis.

droit international (droy an-tair-nah-syoh-nahl), n. [French] International law.

droit moral (droy maw-ral). [French] The doctrine of moral right, which entitles artists to prevent others from altering their works. • The basic rights protected by this doctrine are (1) the right to create, (2) the right to disclose or publish, (3) the right to withdraw from publication, (4) the right to be identified with the work, and (5) the right to ensure the integrity of the work, including the right to object to any mutilation or distortion of the work. These rights are sometimes called moral rights. See moral right. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property C-6.]

droit natural (drew ah nuh-tu-ray), n. [French] Natural law.

droits civils (drew ah see-vay), n. [French] French law. Private rights not connected to a person's civil status. • Foreigners had certain rights that could be enforced when there was reciprocity with the foreigner's home country.

droits of admiralty (droyhts), n. The Lord High Admiral's rights in connection with the sea, such as the right to recover proceeds from shipwrecks, enemy goods confiscated at the beginning of hostilities, jetsam, flotsam, treasure, deodand, fines, forfeitures, sturgeons, whales, and other large fishes. • The droit proceeds are paid to the Exchequer's office for the public's use. "The crown had originally certain rights to property found upon the sea, or stranded upon the shore. The chief kinds of property to which the crown was thus entitled were, great fish (such as whales or porpoises), deodands, wreck of the sea, flotsam, jetsam, and lagan, ships or goods of the enemy found in English ports or captured by uncommissioned vessels, and goods taken or retaken from pirates. . . . . After the rise of the court of Admiralty the Lord High Admiral became entitled to these droits by royal grant. . . . The right to droits carried with it a certain jurisdiction. Inquisitions were held into these droits at the ports, or the Vice-Admirals or droit gatherers reported them to the Admiral. The large terms of the Admiral's Patents incited them, or their grantees, to frequent litigation with private persons or other grantees of the crown. . . . The Admiralty droits . . . are now transferred to the consolidated fund." 1 William Holdsworth, A History of English Law 559-61 (7th ed. 1956).

dual distributor. (1945) A firm that sells goods simultaneously to buyers on two different levels of the distribution chain; esp., a manufacturer that sells directly to both wholesalers and retailers.

dual distributorship. See DISTRIBUTORSHIP.

dual employment. See MOONLIGHTING.

dual fund. See MUTUAL FUND.

dual inheritance. See INHERITANCE.

duality of art. Copyright. The twofold nature of applied art as both functional and aesthetic. • The United States takes a duality-of-art approach to copyright, protecting applied art only when the item could stand alone as an identifiable work of art even if it did not perform the function it was designed to do. — Also termed noncumulative approach. Cf. UNITY OF ART.

dual-priorities rule. The principle that partnership creditors have priority for partnership assets and that individual creditors have priority for a partner's personal assets. • This rule has been abandoned by the bankruptcy laws and the Revised Uniform Partnership Act. The bankruptcy code now allows partnership creditors access to all assets of bankrupt partners, not just those remaining after payment to individual creditors. — Also termed jingle rule.

dual-prosecution rule. (1981) The principle that the federal government and a state government may both prosecute a defendant for the same offense because both governments are separate and distinct entities. See DUAL-SOVEREIGNTY DOCTRINE. [Cases: Double Jeopardy ⇐ 186.]

dual-purpose doctrine. (1953) The principle that an employer is liable for an employee's injury that occurs during a business trip even though the trip also serves a personal purpose. Cf. DUAL-CAPACITY DOCTRINE. [Cases: Labor and Employment ⇐ 3046(2); Workers' Compensation ⇐ 715.]

due influence. (17c) The sway that one person has over another, esp. as a result of temperate persuasion, argument, or appeal to the person’s affections. Cf. undue influence.

duel. (15c) 1. TRIAL BY COMBAT. 2. A Single combat; specif., a prearranged combat with deadly weapons fought between two or more persons under prescribed rules, usu. in the presence of at least two witnesses, to resolve a previous quarrel or avenge a deed. • In England and the United States, death resulting from a duel is treated as murder, and seconds may be liable as accessories. — Also termed monomachy; single combat. Cf. mutual combat. [Cases: Homicide (28A C.J.S. Criminal Law (2006)).]

“[A] duel which did not end in death was only a misdemeanor, till the passing of Lord Ellenborough’s Act, 43 Geo. 3, c. 58, passed in 1803 .... A duel which did end fatally might be either murder or manslaughter, according to the following distinctions: — If the duel was on a sudden falling out, if the parties fought in hot blood and on the spot and one was killed, the offence was only manslaughter, however aggravated the case might be .... If a fatal duel took place when the parties were in cool blood, it was held to be murder, and of this there has never been any doubt whatever in this country, though juries not unfrequently acquitted in such cases if they sympathized with the prisoner.” 3 James Fitzjames Stephen, A History of the Criminal Law of England 100 (1883).

“Dueling is distinguished from other offenses in that it has none of the elements of sudden heat and passion, and is usually carried out with some formality. A duel has been distinguished from an ‘affray’ in that an affray occurs on a sudden quarrel while a duel is always the result of design.” 28A C.J.S. Dueling § 2, at 154 (1996).

dueling. n. The common-law offense of fighting at an appointed time and place after an earlier disagreement.

• If one of the participants is killed, the other is guilty of murder, and all who are present, abetting the crime, are guilty as principals in the second degree. [Cases: Criminal Law C-258, 45, 50.]
no death result, to challenge another to a duel, intention­ally to provoke such a challenge, or knowingly to be the bearer of such a challenge." Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 243 (3d ed. 1982).

due process. (16c) The conduct of legal proceedings according to established rules and principles for the protection and enforcement of private rights, including notice and the right to a fair hearing before a tribunal with the power to decide the case. — Also termed due process of law; due course of law. See FUNDAMENTAL-FAIRNESS DOCTRINE. [Cases: Constitutional Law C–3840–4841.]

"The words 'due process' have a precise technical import, and are only applicable to the process and proceedings of the courts of justice; they can never be referred to an act of legislature." Alexander Hamilton, Remarks on an Act for Regulating Elections, New York Assembly, 6 Feb. 1787, in 4 Papers of Alexander Hamilton 34, 35 (Harold C. Syrett ed., 1962).

"The words, 'due process of law,' were undoubtedly intended to convey the same meaning as the words, 'by the law of the land,' in Magna Charta." Murray's Lessee v. Hoboken Land & Improvement Co., 59 U.S. (18 How.) 272, 276 (1856) (Curtis, J.).

"Due process of law in each particular case means, such an exertion of the powers of government as the settled maxims of law sanction, and under such safeguards for the protection of individual rights as those maxims prescribe for the class of cases to which the one in question belongs." Thomas M. Cooley, A Treatise on the Constitutional Limita­tions 356 (1868).

"An elementary and fundamental requirement of due process in any proceeding which is to be accorded finality is notice reasonably calculated, under all the circum­stances, to apprise interested parties of the pendency of the action and afford them an opportunity to present their objections... . The notice must be of such nature as reasonably to convey the required information." Mullane v. Central Hanover Bank & Trust Co., 339 U.S. 306, 314, 70 S.Ct. 652, 657 (1950) (Jackson, J.).

economic substantive due process. (1957) The doctrine that certain social policies, such as the freedom of contract or the right to enjoy property without inter­ference by government regulation, exist in the Due Process Clause of the 14th Amendment, particularly in the words "liberty" and "property."

procedural due process. (1934) The minimal require­ments of notice and a hearing guaranteed by the Due Process Clauses of the 5th and 14th Amendments, esp. if the deprivation of a significant life, liberty, or property interest may occur. • The Supreme Court has ruled that the fundamental guarantees of due process apply to children as well as to adults and that they apply in situations in which a juvenile may be deprived of liberty even though the juvenile proceed­ings may be labeled civil rather than criminal. In re Gault, 387 U.S. 1, 87 S.Ct. 1428 (1967). In that case, the Court held that an accused child was entitled to notice of the charges, the privilege against self-incrimina­tion, the right to confront witnesses, and the right to summon witnesses on his or her own behalf. Justice Abe Fortas wrote the majority opinion in Gault, and Chief Justice Earl Warren predicted that it would come to be called the "Magna Carta for juveniles." [Cases: Constitutional Law C–3867.] substantive due process. (1933) The doctrine that the Due Process Clauses of the 5th and 14th Amendments require legislation to be fair and reasonable in content and to further a legitimate governmental objective. [Cases: Constitutional Law C–3892.]

Due Process Clause. (1890) The constitutional provision that prohibits the government from unfairly or arbitr­arily depriving a person of life, liberty, or property. • There are two Due Process Clauses in the U.S. Con­stitution, one in the 5th Amendment applying to the federal government, and one in the 14th Amendment applying to the states (although the 5th Amendment's Due Process Clause also applies to the states under the incorporation doctrine). Cf. EQUAL PROTECTION CLAUSE. [Cases: Constitutional Law C–3840–4841.] due process of law. See DUE PROCESS.

due-process rights. (1930) The rights (as to life, liberty, and property) so fundamentally important as to require compliance with due-process standards of fairness and justice. See DUE PROCESS; DUE PROCESS CLAUSE; FUNDAMENTAL-FAIRNESS DOCTRINE.

due proof. Sufficient and properly submitted evidence to produce a result or support a conclusion, such as an entitlement to benefits supported by an insur­ance policy. • The evidence need not be the best proof possible. Metropolitan Life Ins. Co. v. Frisch, 65 N.E. 2d 852, 855 (Ind. App. 1946).

Duhiq rule. Oil & gas. A rule of title interpretation devel­oped to deal with the common problem of overconve­nance of fractional interests by giving priority to the granted interest over the reserved interest. Duhiq v. Peavy Moore Lumber Co., Inc., 144 S.W.2d 878 (Tex. 1940). • The rule is not accepted in all states and is generally limited to conveyances by warranty deed. [Cases: Mines and Minerals ∽55(4), 55(7).]

DUI. abbr. DRIVING UNDER THE INFLUENCE.

DUII. abbr. Driving under the influence of liquor. See DRIVING UNDER THE INFLUENCE.

"The rack . . . to extort a confession from criminals, is a practice of a different nature . . . . And the trial by rack is utterly unknown to the law of England; though once when the dukes of Exeter and Suffolk . . . had laid a design to introduce the civil law into this kingdom as the rule of government, for a beginning thereof they erected a rack for torture; which was called in derision the duke of Exeter's daughter, and still remains in the tower of London: where it was occasionally used as an engine of state, not of law, more than once in the reign of queen Elizabeth." 4 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 385 (1765).

dump, vb. 1. To drop (something) down, esp. in a heap; to unload. 2. To sell (products) at an extremely low price; specif., to sell (products) in a foreign market at a lower price than at home.

dumping. (1857) 1. The act of selling a large quantity of goods at less than fair value. 2. Selling goods abroad at less than the market price at home. See ANTIDUMPING LAW. [Cases: Environmental Law ∽353, 354.]

"Dumping involves selling abroad at a price that is less than the price used to sell the same goods at home (the 'normal' or 'fair' value). To be unlawful, dumping must threaten or cause material injury to an industry in the export market, the market where prices are lower. Dumping is recognized by most of the trading world as an unfair practice (akin to price discrimination as an antitrust offense)." Ralph H. Folsom & Michael W. Gordon, International Business Transactions § 6.1 (1995).

3. The disposal of waste matter into the environment. [Cases: Environmental Law ∽341.]

Dumping Act. A federal antidumping law requiring the Secretary of the Treasury to notify the U.S.
International Trade Commission (USITC) whenever the Secretary determines that goods are likely to be sold abroad at less than their fair value, so that the USITC can take appropriate action. 19 USCA § 1673. [Cases: Customs Duties ☞ 21.[5] dump-truck lawyer. Slang. A public defender who spends little time or effort and exhibits little skill mounting a defense on behalf of an indigent defendant. • This derogatory term arises from criminal defendants' common perception (typically a misperception) that public defenders prefer to dump cases by making plea bargains rather than spend time preparing for trial. People v. Clark, 833 P.2d 561, 590 (Cal. 1992); People v. Huffman, 139 Cal. Rptr. 264, 267 n.2 (Cal. App. 1977).

duplicatio (d[y]oo-pli-kay-shay-oh), n. [fr. Latin duplicare “to double”] 1. Roman & civil law. A defendant's answer to the plaintiff's replication, similar to a rejoinder in common law. — Also termed (in Scots law) duply. See replication. 2. The fourth in a series. 3. A duplication of a transaction.

duplicative (doo-pli-ka-tiv also doo-pli-kay-tiv), adj. 1. Having or characterized by having overlapping content, intentions, or effect <duplicative sources> <duplicative evidence> <duplicative regulations>. 2. Duplicate; having or characterized by having identical content <duplicative database> <duplicative backup>.

duplicatum jus (doo-pli-kay jas), n. [Law Latin “double right”] A double right, such as droit droit (both the “right of possession and right of property”).

duplicitous (doo-pli-si-tus), adj. 1. (Of a person) deceitful; double-dealing. 2. (Of a pleading, esp. an indictment) alleging two or more matters in one plea; characterized by double pleading.

duplicitous appeal. See appeal.

duplicitous indictment. See indictment.

duplicitous information. See information.

duplicity (doo-pli-si-tee), n. (15c) 1. Deceitfulness; double-dealing. 2. The charging of the same offense in more than one count of an indictment. 3. The pleading of two or more distinct grounds of complaint or defense for the same issue. • In criminal procedure, this takes the form of joining two or more offenses in the same count of an indictment. — Also termed double pleading. Cf. alternative pleading under pleading (2); double plea under plea (3). [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure C=>675; Indictment and Information C=>125; Pleading C=>64.]

duplum (doo-plam). [Latin] Roman & civil law. Double the price of something; esp., a measure of damages equal to double a thing’s value. • This measure was used for certain delicts. Cf. simplum.

duply. See duplicatio (1).

durable goods. See goods.

durable lease. See lease.

durable power of attorney. See power of attorney.

durables. See durable goods under goods.

durante (doo-ran-tee). [Law Latin] While; during, as in durante minore aetate (“during minority”), durante viduitate (“during widowhood”), durante virginitate (“during virginity”), and durante vita (“during life”). • The term was often used in conveyancing.

durante absentia (doo-ran-tee ab-sen-shee-a). [Law Latin] During absence. • This term referred to the administration of an estate while the executor was out of the county or otherwise absent. During the executor’s absence, the administration sometimes continued because a delay until the executor’s return would impair the estate settlement.

durante bene placito (doo-ran-tee bee-npee plas-a-toh). [Law Latin] During good pleasure. • This phrase was used in the royal writ granting tenure durante bene placito to the king’s judges.

durante furor (doo-ran-tee fyu-rou-er). [Law Latin] Hist. While the insanity endures. • The phrase appeared in reference to the rule prohibiting the state from prosecuting an insane person. The state could, however, prosecute the person once the insanity ended.

duration. (14c) 1. The length of time something lasts <the duration of the lawsuit>.

duration of interest. The length of time a property interest lasts.

duration of trust. The length of time a trust exists. [Cases: Trusts C=>60.]

2. A length of time; a continuance in time <an hour’s duration>.

durational-residency requirement. (1970) The requirement that one be a state resident for a certain time, such as one year, as a precondition to the exercise of a specified right or privilege. • When applied to voting, this requirement has been held to be an unconstitutional denial of equal protection because it burdens voting rights and impairs the fundamental personal right of travel.

Duration Directive. See directive harmonizing the term of copyright and certain related rights.

Duren test. (1980) Constitutional law. A test to determine whether a jury’s composition violates the fair-cross-section requirement and a criminal defendant’s Sixth Amendment right to an impartial jury. • Under the test, a constitutional violation occurs if (1) a distinctive group is not fairly and reasonably represented in the jury pool in relation to its population in the community, (2) the underrepresentation is the result of a systematic exclusion of the group from the jury-selection process, and (3) the government cannot reasonably justify the discrepancy. Duren v. Missouri, 433 U.S. 357, 99 S.Ct. 664 (1979). See fair-cross-section requirement; statistical decision theory; absolute disparity; comparative disparity. [Cases: Jury C=>331[L.1].] duress (doo-ress). (13c) 1. Strictly, the physical confinement of a person or the detention of a contracting party’s property. • In the field of torts, duress is considered a species of fraud in which compulsion takes the place of deceit in causing injury.

“Few areas of the law of contracts have undergone such radical changes in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries as has the law governing duress. In Blackstone’s time relief from an agreement on grounds of duress was a possibility only if it was coerced by actual (not threatened) imprisonment or fear of loss of life or limb. ‘A fear of battery, . . . is no duress; neither is the fear of having one’s house burned, or one’s goods taken away or destroyed’: he wrote, ‘because in these cases, should the threat be performed, a man may have satisfaction by recovering equivalent damages: but no suitable atonement can be made for the loss of life, or limb.’ Today the general rule is that any wrongful act or threat which overcomes the free will of a party constitutes duress. This simple statement of the law conceals a number of questions, particularly as to the meaning of 'free will' and 'wrongful.'—John D. Calamari & Joseph M. Perillo, The Law of Contracts § 9-2, at 337 (3d ed. 1987).

2. Broadly, a threat of harm made to compel a person to do something against his or her will or judgment; esp., a wrongful threat made by one person to compel a manifestation of seeming assent by another person to a transaction without real volition. • A marriage that is induced by duress is generally voidable. 3. The use or threatened use of unlawful force — usu. that a reasonable person cannot resist — to compel someone to commit an unlawful act. • Duress is a recognized defense to a crime, contractual breach, or tort. See Model Penal Code § 2.09. See COERCION.

"[In most states,] the age-old rule of duress — that the doing of a prohibited act is not a crime if reasonably believed to be necessary to save from death or great bodily injury — together with the equally ancient exception in the form of the 'inexcusable choice,' are as firm today as ever except for the realization that they cover only part of the field." Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 1064 (3d ed. 1982).

"Among defenses, necessity needs to be distinguished from duress. Necessity is generally regarded as a justification, while duress is held to be an excuse. This means that the person who acts under necessity chooses to act in a way that the law ultimately approves. The person who acts under duress acts in a way that the law disapproves and seeks to discourage, but he acts under circumstances which make conviction and punishment inappropriate and unfair. This is so because to act under duress is to act under pressures that a person of reasonable firmness would not be able to resist. Thus, both the theory of necessity and the theory of duress refer to the pressure of exigent and extraordinary situations, but they do so in different ways." Thomas Morawetz, "Necessity," in 3 Encyclopedia of Crime and Justice 957, 959 (Sanford H. Kadish ed., 1983).

duress of goods. 1. The act of seizing personal property by force, or withholding it from an entitled party, and then extorting something as the condition for its release. 2. Demanding and taking personal property under color of legal authority that either is void or for some other reason does not justify the demand.

duress of imprisonment. The wrongful confining of a person to force the person to do something.

duress of the person. Compulsion of a person by imprisonment, by threat, or by a show of force that cannot be resisted.

duress per minas (per mi-nas). [Law Latin] Duress by threat of loss of life, loss of limb, mayhem, or other harm to a person.

"Duress per minas is either for fear of loss of life, or else for fear of mayhem, or loss of limb. And this fear must be upon sufficient reason . . . . A fear of battery, or being beaten, though never so well grounded, is no duress; neither is the fear of having one's house burned, or one's goods taken away and destroyed; because in these cases, should the threat be performed, a man may have satisfaction by recovering equivalent damages: but no suitable atonement can be made for the loss of life, or limb." 1 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 127 (1765).

"Duress per minas is a very rare defence, so rare that Sir James Stephen, in his long forensic experience, never saw a case in which it was raised. It has, however, been thought that threats of the immediate infliction of death, or even of grievous bodily harm, will excuse some crimes that have been committed under the influence of such threats." J.W. Cecil Turner, Kenny's Outlines of Criminal Law 58 (16th ed. 1952).

economic duress. (1929) An unlawful coercion to perform by threatening financial injury at a time when one cannot exercise free will. — Also termed business compulsion.

"Courts have shown a willingness to recognize the concept of 'economic duress.' For instance it has been held that a defense on these grounds may be available to the purchaser of a ship from a shipbuilder, if the latter extracts a promise of extra payment as a condition of delivery of the ship." P.S. Atiyah, An Introduction to the Law of Contract 230 (3d ed. 1981).

moral duress. An unlawful coercion to perform by unduly influencing or taking advantage of the weak financial position of another. • Moral duress focuses on the inequities of a situation while economic duress focuses on the lack of will or capacity of the person being influenced.

Durham (dar-am). One of the three remaining county palatines in England, the others being Chester and Lancaster. • Its jurisdiction was vested in the Bishop of Durham until the statute 6 & 7 Will. 4, ch. 19 vested it as a separate franchise and royalty in the Crown. The jurisdiction of the Durham Court of Pleas was transferred to the Supreme Court of Judicature by the Judicature Act of 1873, but Durham continued to maintain a Chancery Court according to the Palatine Court of Durham Act of 1889. See COUNTY PALATINE.

Durham rule. Criminal law. A test for the insanity defense, holding that a defendant is not criminally responsible for an act that was the product of mental disease or defect (Durham v. United States, 214 F.2d 862 (D.C. Cir. 1954)). • Formerly used in New Hampshire and the District of Columbia, the Durham rule has been criticized as being too broad and is no longer accepted in any American jurisdiction. — Also termed product test. See INSANITY DEFENSE. [Cases: Criminal Law § 48.]

Durrett rule. Bankruptcy. The principle that a transfer of property in exchange for less than 70% of the property's value should be invalidated as a preferential transfer. Durrett v. Washington Nat'l Ins. Co., 621 F.2d 201 (5th Cir. 1980); 11 USCA § 548. • This rule has been applied most frequently to foreclosure sales. But it has essentially been overruled by the U.S. Supreme Court, which has held that, at least for mortgage foreclosure sales, the price received at a regularly conducted, noncollusive sale represents a reasonably equivalent value of the property, and the transfer is presumed valid. BFP v. Resolution Trust Corp., 511 U.S. 531, 114 S.Ct. 1757 (1994). [Cases: Bankruptcy § 2650.]

duty. (13c) 1. A legal obligation that is owed or due to another and that needs to be satisfied; an obligation for which somebody else has a corresponding right.

“There is a duty if the court says there is a duty; the law, like the Constitution, is what we make it. Duty is only a word with which we state our conclusion that there is or is not to be liability; it necessarily begs the essential question . . . . [M]any factors interplay: the hand of history, our ideas of morals and justice, the convenience of administration of the rule, and our social ideas as to where loss should fall,” William L. Prosser, Palisgraf Revisited, 52 Mich. L. Rev. 1, 15 (1953).

“A classic English definition [of duty] from the late nineteenth century holds that, when circumstances place one individual in such a position with regard to another that thinking persons of ordinary sense would recognize the danger of injury to the other if ordinary skill and care were not used, a duty arises to use ordinary skill and care to avoid the injury. A much quoted American judicial definition of duty emphasizes its relational aspects, with a focus on the foreseeability of risk to those ‘within the range of apprehension.’ At about the same time, one of the most creative of American law teachers defined duty as a complex of factors, including administrative, economic, and moral ones, to be applied by judges in their analyses of the legal strength of personal injury cases.” Marshall S. Shapo, The Duty to Act xi-xii (1977).

“While courts frequently say that establishing ‘duty’ is the first prerequisite in an individual tort case, courts commonly go on to say that there is a ‘general duty’ to ‘exercise reasonable care,’ to avoid subjecting others to ‘an unreasonable risk of harm,’ or to comply with the ‘legal standard of reasonable conduct.’ Though cast in the language of duty, these formulations merely give the expression to the point that negligence is the standard of liability.” Restatement (Third) of Torts § 6 cmt. a (Discussion Draft 1999).

absolute duty. 1. A duty to which no corresponding right attaches. • According to John Austin’s legal philosophy, there are four kinds of absolute duties: (1) duties not regarding persons (such as those owed to God and to lower animals), (2) duties owed to persons indefinitely (i.e., to the community as a whole), (3) self-regarding duties (such as the duty not to commit suicide), and (4) duties owed to the sovereign. 1 John Austin, The Providence of Jurisprudence Determined 400 (Sarah Austin ed., 2d ed. 1861). 2. A duty as to which nothing but lapse of time remains necessary to make immediate performance by the promisor obligatory.

active duty. See positive duty.

affirmative duty. A duty to take a positive step to do something.

conditional duty. A duty that is conditioned on the occurrence of an event other than the lapse of time.

contractual duty. 1. A duty arising under a particular contract. [Cases: Contracts C⇒1.] 2. A duty imposed by the law of contracts.

delegable duty. (1908) A duty that may be transferred to another to perform. See assignment.

duty to act. (17c) A duty to take some action to prevent harm to another, and for the failure of which one may be liable depending on the relationship of the parties and the circumstances. [Cases: Negligence C⇒210.]

duty to defend. Insurance. The obligation of an insurer to provide an insured with a legal defense against claims of liability, within the terms of the policy. • The duty to defend applies if the terms of the policy and the facts of the claim allow an ambiguity about whether the insurer will have a duty to indemnify the insured. It does not apply if no such ambiguity exists. [Cases: Insurance C⇒291.]

duty to indemnify. An obligation to compensate another for the other’s loss. • The duty arises under the terms of an agreement, which governs the extent of the duty. An insurance policy is fundamentally an indemnification agreement, but the duty is often made a part of other contracts as well. [Cases: Indemnity C⇒25, 31-39; Insurance C⇒2092, 2268.]

duty to settle. Insurance. The obligation of an insurer to negotiate and settle third-party claims against an insured in good faith.

duty to speak. (16c) A requirement (not strictly a duty) to say something to correct another’s false impression. • For example, a duty to speak may arise when a person has, during the course of negotiations, said something that was true at the time but that has ceased to be true before the contract is signed. [Cases: Fraud C⇒17.]

equitable duty. A duty enforceable in a court of chancery or in a court having the powers of a court in chancery.

imperfect duty. 1. A duty that, though recognized by law, is not enforceable against the person who owes it. 2. A duty that is not fit for enforcement but should be left to the discretion and conscience of the person whose duty it is.

implied duty of cooperation. A duty existing in every contract, obligating each party to cooperate with, or at least not to wrongfully hinder, the other party’s performance. • Breach of this implied duty excuses performance. [Cases: Contracts C⇒168.]

legal duty. (17c) A duty arising by contract or by operation of law; an obligation the breach of which would give a legal remedy <the legal duty of parents to support their children>.

moral duty. A duty the breach of which would be a moral wrong. — Also termed natural duty.

negative duty. A duty that forbids someone to do something; a duty that requires someone to abstain from something. — Also termed passive duty.

noncontractual duty. A duty that arises independently of any contract.

nondelegable duty (non-del-a-ga-bal). (1902) 1. Contracts. A duty that cannot be delegated by a contracting party to a third party. • If a contracting party purports to delegate the duty, the other party can... duty of loyalty. A person's duty not to engage in self-dealing or otherwise use his or her position to further personal interests rather than those of the beneficiary. • For example, directors have a duty not to engage in self-dealing to further their own personal interests rather than the interests of the corporation.

fiduciary duty (fi-d[ur]e-ee). A duty of utmost good faith, trust, confidence, and candor owed by a fiduciary (such as a lawyer or corporate officer) to the beneficiary (such as a lawyer's client or a shareholder); a duty to act with the highest degree of honesty and loyalty toward another person and in the best interests of the other person (such as the duty that one partner owes to another). See FIDUCIARY; fiduciary relationship under relationship. [Cases: Fraud ⇒ 7.] ministerial duty. A duty that requires neither the exercise of official discretion nor judgment. Cf. discretionary duty.

proprietary duty. A duty owed by a governmental entity while engaged in a proprietary, rather than governmental, activity. [Cases: Municipal Corporations ⇒ 725.]

3. Torts. A legal relationship arising from a standard of care, the violation of which subjects the actor to liability. — Also termed duty of care. [Cases: Negligence ⇒ 210.] 4. A tax imposed on a commodity or transaction, esp. on imports; impost. • A duty in this sense is imposed on things, not persons.

account duty. An inheritance tax payable by a decedent's beneficiary.

ad valorem duty. A tax calculated as a percentage of an imported product's value. Cf. compound duty; specific duty.

antidumping duty. See antidumping tariff under tariff (3).

compound duty. A tax based on a combination of imported goods' weight, volume, or item count, plus a percentage of their value. Cf. ad valorem duty; specific duty.

countervailing duty. A tax imposed on manufacturers of imported goods to protect domestic industry by offsetting subsidies given by foreign governments to those manufacturers. [Cases: Customs Duties ⇒ 21.5.]

customs duty. A tax levied on an imported or exported commodity; esp., the federal tax levied on goods shipped into the United States.

death duty. An estate tax or inheritance tax. — Also termed estate duty.

duty of detraction. A tax on property acquired by succession or will and then removed from one state to another.

estate duty. Hist. English law. A tax imposed on the principal value of all property that passed on death. • Estate duties were first imposed in 1889. A capital transfer tax replaced it in 1975. Since 1986, an inheritance tax has applied instead, with exceptions for...
duty-bound certain transactions entered into before then. See death duty.

import duty. A tax on the importation of a product. — Also termed duty on import.

legacy duty. See legacy tax under tax.

probate duty. A tax assessed by the government either on every will admitted to probate or on the gross value of the decedent’s personal property.

specific duty. A tax calculated on an import’s weight, volume, or item count. Cf. ad valorem duty; compound duty.

succession duty. A tax payable by the successor to real property, esp. when the successor has not purchased the property for value but has succeeded to the property in some other way.

tonnage duty. A charge imposed on a commercial vessel for entering, remaining in, or leaving a port, usu. assessed on the basis of the ship’s weight. • U.S. Const. art. I, § 10, cl. 3 prohibits the states from levying tonnage duties. — Also termed tonnage tax; tonnage. [Cases: Commerce C—78; Shipping C—7.]

unascertained duty. A preliminary, estimated payment to a customs collector of the duty that will be due on final accounting. • An importer pays this duty to receive permission to land and sell the goods.

duty-bound, adj. Required by legal or moral obligation to do something <Jones is duty-bound to deliver the goods by Friday>.

duty-free, adj. Of or relating to products of foreign origin that are not subject to import or export taxes.

duty judge. See judge.

duty of care. See DUTY (3).

duty of the flag. Hist. A maritime ceremony by which a foreign vessel struck her flag and lowered her topsail upon meeting the British flag. • The ceremony was an acknowledgment of British sovereignty over the British seas.

duty of tonnage (ton-ij). See tonnage duty under DUTY (4).

duty of water. The amount of water necessary to irrigate a given tract.

duty on import. See import duty under DUTY (4).

duty-to-defend clause. Insurance. A liability-insurance provision obligating the insurer to take over the defense of any lawsuit brought by a third party against the insured on a claim that falls within the policy’s coverage. See duty to defend under DUTY (1). [Cases: Insurance C—2911.]

duty to mitigate (mit-i-gayt). (1891) A nonbreaching party’s or tort victim’s duty to make reasonable efforts to limit losses resulting from the other party’s breach or tort. • Not doing so precludes the party from collecting damages that might have been avoided. See mitigation-of-damages doctrine. [Cases: Damages C—62.]

duumviri (d[y]oo-am-vœ-ri), n. pl. [fr. Latin due “two” + vor “men”] 1. Roman law. Magistrates elected or appointed in pairs to hold an office or perform a function.

2. Two peers in authority. — Also termed duoviri.

dux (doks), n. [fr. Latin ducere “to lead”] 1. Roman law. An army commander. 2. Roman law. A military governor of a province. • This term was eventually used also as a title of distinction. 3. Hist. Duke; a title of nobility. See duke.

DWAI. abbr. Driving while ability-impaired. See driving under the influence.

dwell, vb. (13c) 1. To remain; to linger <the case dwelled in her memory>. 2. To reside in a place permanently or for some period <he dwelled in California for nine years>.

dwelling defense. See castle doctrine.

dwelling-house. (15c) 1. The house or other structure in which a person lives; a residence or abode. 2. Real estate. The house and all buildings attached to or connected with the house. 3. Criminal law. A building, a part of a building, a tent, a mobile home, or another enclosed space that is used or intended for use as a human habitation. • The term has referred to connected buildings in the same curtilage but now typically includes only the structures connected either directly with the house or by an enclosed passageway. — Often shortened to dwelling. — Also termed (archaically) mansion house; (more broadly) dwelling place. [Cases: Burglary C—4.] quasi-dwelling-house. Hist. Any outbuilding, such as a barn, that is in proximity to the building used as a residence. See burglary (1).

"A ‘dwelling house’ or ‘dwelling’ has been defined in connection with the crime of arson as any house intended to be occupied as a residence, or an enclosed space, permanent or temporary, in which human beings usually stay, lodge, or reside. If a building is not used exclusively as a dwelling, it is characterized as a dwelling if there is internal communication between the two parts of the building. Dwellings include mobile homes and a boat, if the person resides on it." 5 Am. Jur. 2d Arson and Related Offenses § 13, at 789 (1995).

DWI. abbr. DRIVING WHILE INTOXICATED.

DWOP (dee-wop or doo-wop). abbr. See dismissal for want of prosecution under dismissal (1).

DWOP docket. See docket (2).

dyarchy (d[ahr]-kee), n. [fr. Greek dy “two” + archein “rule”] A government jointly ruled by two people, such as William and Mary of England. — Also termed diarchy.
Dyarchy. A term applied by Mommsen to the Roman principate . . . a period in which he held that sovereignty was shared between the princes and the senate. The term has also been given to a system of government, promoted as a constitutional reform in India by Montagu and Chelmsford and introduced by the Government of India Act, 1919. It marked the introduction of democracy into the executive of the British administration of India by dividing the provincial executives into authoritarian and popularly responsible sections composed respectively of councillors appointed by the Crown and ministers appointed by the governor and responsible to the provincial legislative councils . . . . The system ended when full provincial autonomy was granted in 1935.” David M. Walker, The Oxford Companion to Law 386 (1980).

dyathanasia, (di-ath-a-nay-zha), n. The act of permitting death to occur naturally by withholding, terminating, or not offering life-prolonging treatments or intervention. — Also termed passive mercy killing. See euthanasia.

Dyer Act. A federal law, enacted in 1919, making it unlawful either (1) to transport a stolen motor vehicle across state lines, knowing it to be stolen, or (2) to receive, conceal, or sell such a vehicle, knowing it to be stolen. 18 USCA §§ 2311–2313. — Also termed National Motor Vehicle Theft Act. [Cases: Automobiles 386-391.]

dyvet. See diet.

dynamite instruction. See Allen charge.

dynasty. 1. A powerful family line that continues for a long time <an Egyptian dynasty>. 2. A powerful group of individuals who control a particular industry or field and who control their successors  .

dynasty trust. See trust.

dyvour (di-var). Scots law. A person who is heavily in debt or bankrupt.
eadem persona cum defuncto (ee-ay-dam par-soh-nah kam di-fangk-toh). [Law Latin] Hist. The same person as the decedent. An heir having full title to the decedent’s property was legally viewed to be the same person as the decedent.

E&AJA. abbr. EQUAL ACCESS TO JUSTICE ACT.

E&O insurance. See errors-and omissions insurance under INSURANCE.

earl. (12c) A title of nobility, formerly the highest in England but now the third highest, ranking between a marquis and a viscount. This title corresponds with the French comte and the German graf. Originating with the Saxons, this title is the most ancient of the English peerage. William the Conqueror first made the title hereditary, giving it in fee to his nobles. No territorial, private, or judicial rights now accompany the title; it merely confers nobility and a hereditary seat in the House of Lords.

earldom. The dignity or jurisdiction of an earl. Only the dignity remains now, the jurisdiction having been given over to the sheriff. See DIGNITY.

earles-penny. Hist. Money given in part payment; earnest. — Also termed earl’s penny.

Earl Marshal of England. A great officer of state, who historically had jurisdiction over several courts, including the court of chivalry and the court of honor. Under this office is the herald’s office, or college of arms. The Earl Marshal was also a judge of the Marshalsea court, now abolished. This office is quite ancient. Since 1672, it has been hereditary in the family of Howards, Dukes of Norfolk. — Often shortened to Earl Marshal.

earl’s penny. See EARLES-PENNY.

early voting. See VOTING.

earmark, vb. 1. To mark with an earmark. 2. To set aside for a specific purpose or recipient.

earmarking doctrine. Bankruptcy. An equitable principle that when a new lender makes a loan to enable a debtor to pay off a specified creditor, the funds are specifically set aside for that creditor so that, if the debtor lacks control over the disposition of the funds, they do not become part of the debtor’s estate and thus subject to a preference. [Cases: Bankruptcy C=2610.]

earn, vb. (bef. 12c) 1. To acquire by labor, service, or performance. 2. To do something that entitles one to a reward or result, whether it is received or not.

earned income. See INCOME.

earned-income credit. See TAX CREDIT.

earned land. See LAND.

earned premium. See PREMIUM (1).

earned surplus. See retained earnings under EARNINGS.

earned time. See TIME.

earner. 1. One who produces income through personal efforts or property or both. 2. Property or an asset that produces income for its owner.

earnest, n. (13c) 1. A nominal payment or token act that serves as a pledge or a sign of good faith, esp. as the partial purchase price of property. Though not legally necessary, an earnest may help the parties come to an agreement. 2. EARNESNT MONEY.

earnest money. (16c) A deposit paid (often in escrow) by a prospective buyer (esp. of real estate) to show a good-faith intention to complete the transaction, and ordinarily forfeited if the buyer defaults. Although earnest money has traditionally been a nominal sum (such as a nickel or a dollar) used in the sale of goods, it is not a mere token in the real-estate context; it is generally a percentage of the purchase price and may be a substantial sum. — Also termed earnest; bargain money; caution money; hand money. Cf. BINDER (2); down payment under PAYMENT. [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser C=69, 182.] ‘The amount of earnest money deposited rarely exceeds 10 percent of the purchase price, and its primary purpose is to serve as a source of payment of damages should the buyer default. Earnest money is not essential to make a purchase agreement binding if the buyer’s and seller’s exchange of mutual promises of performance (that is, the buyer’s promise to purchase and the seller’s promise to sell at a specified price and terms) constitutes the consideration for the contract.” John W. Reilly, The Language of Real Estate 131 (4th ed. 1993).’ earnest-money. See GOD’S PENNY.

earning asset. See ASSET.

earning capacity. (1872) A person’s ability or power to earn money, given the person’s talent, skills, training, and experience. Earning capacity is one element considered when measuring the damages recoverable in a personal-injury lawsuit. And in family law, earning capacity is considered when awarding child support and spousal maintenance (or alimony) and in dividing property between spouses upon divorce. — Also termed earning power. See lost earning capacity.

Earnings. Revenue gained from labor or services, from the investment of capital, or from assets. See income.

Appropriated retained earnings. Retained earnings that a company’s board designates for a distinct use, and that are therefore unavailable to pay dividends or for other uses. — Also termed appropriated surplus; surplus revenue; suspense reserve.

Earnings before interest and taxes. A company’s income calculated without deductions for interest expenses and taxes, used as a measure of the company’s ability to generate cash flow from ongoing operations. — Abb. EBIT.

Earnings before interest, taxes, and depreciation. A company’s income without deductions for interest expenses, taxes, depreciation expenses, or amortization expenses, used as an indicator of a company’s profitability and ability to service its debt. — Abb. EBITDA.

Future earnings. See lost earnings.

Gross earnings. See gross income under income.

Lost earnings. Wages, salary, or other income that a person could have earned if he or she had not lost a job, suffered a disabling injury, or died. — Lost earnings are typically awarded as damages in personal-injury and wrongful-termination cases. There can be past lost earnings and future lost earnings. Both are subsets of this category, though legal writers sometimes loosely use future earnings as a synonym for lost earnings. Cf. lost earning capacity. [Cases: Damages C=37.]

Net earnings. See net income under income.

Normalized earnings. Earnings adjusted for inflation and to remove elements that are extraordinary, nonrecurring, nonoperating, or otherwise unusual.

Ongoing earnings. See operating earnings.

Operating earnings. Business income calculated in violation of generally accepted accounting principles by including income items and excluding various business expenses. — Many companies use operating earnings to favorably skew their price-earnings (P/E) ratios. Because the rationales for the underlying calculations vary from company to company, and from period to period within a company, operating earnings are almost always artificially inflated and unreliable. The term operating earnings is meaningless under generally accepted accounting principles. — Also termed pro forma earnings; economic earnings; core earnings; ongoing earnings; earnings excluding special items. See price-earnings ratio.

Pretax earnings. Net earnings before income taxes.

Pro forma earnings. See operating earnings.

Real earnings. Earnings that are adjusted for inflation so that they reflect actual purchasing power.

Retained earnings. A corporation’s accumulated income after dividends have been distributed. — Also termed earned surplus; undistributed profit. [Cases: Corporations C=151.]

Surplus earnings. The excess of corporate assets over liabilities within a given period, usu. a year. [Cases: Corporations C=152.]

Earnings and profits. In corporate taxation, the measure of a corporation’s economic capacity to make a shareholder distribution that is not a return of capital. — The distribution will be dividend income to the shareholders to the extent of the corporation’s current and accumulated earnings and profits. Cf. accumulated earnings tax under tax; accumulated taxable income under income. [Cases: Internal Revenue C=3830.1–3845.]

Earnings before interest and taxes. See earnings.

Earnings before interest, taxes, and depreciation. See earnings.

Earnings excluding special items. See operating earnings under earnings.

Earnings per share. A measure of corporate value by which the corporation’s net income is divided by the number of outstanding shares of common stock. — Investors benefit from calculating a corporation’s earnings per share, because it helps the investors determine the fair market value of the corporation’s stock. — Abb. EPS.

Fully diluted earnings per share. A corporation’s net income — assuming that all convertible securities had been transferred to common equity and all stock options had been exercised — divided by the number of shares of the corporation’s outstanding common stock.

Earnings-price ratio. See earnings yield under yield.

Earnings report. See income statement.

Earnings yield. See yield.

Earnout agreement. An agreement for the sale of a business whereby the buyer first pays an agreed amount up front, leaving the final purchase price to be determined by the business’s future profits. — The seller usu. helps manage the business for a period after the sale. — Sometimes shortened to earnout.

Earwitness. A witness who testifies about something that he or she heard but did not see. Cf. eyewitness.

Easement (eaz-mant). An interest in land owned by another person, consisting in the right to use or control the land, or an area above or below it, for a specific limited purpose (such as to cross it for access to a public road). • The land benefiting from an easement is called the dominant estate; the land burdened by an easement is called the servient estate. Unlike a lease or license, an easement may last forever, but it does not give the holder the right to possess, take from, improve, or sell the land. The primary recognized easements are (1) a right-of-way, (2) a right of entry for any purpose relating to the dominant estate, (3) a right to the support of land and buildings, (4) a right of light and air, (5) a right to water, (6) a right to do some act that would otherwise amount to a nuisance, and (7) a right to place or keep something on the servient estate. See servitude (1). Cf. profit à prendre. — Also termed private right-of-way. [Cases: Easements C=>1.]

access easement. (1933) An easement allowing one or more persons to travel across another’s land to get to a nearby location, such as a road. • The access easement is a common type of easement by necessity. — Also termed easement of access; easement of way; easement of passage.

adverse easement. See prescriptive easement.

affirmative easement. (1881) An easement that forces the servient-estate owner to permit certain actions by the easement holder, such as discharging water onto the servient estate. — Also termed positive easement. Cf. negative easement.

"Positive easements give rights of entry upon the land of another, not amounting to profits, to enable something to be done on that land. Some are commonplace, examples being rights of way across the land of another and rights to discharge water on to the land of another. Others are more rare, such as the right to occupy a pew in a church, the right to use a kitchen situated on the land of another, and the right to use a toilet situated on the land of another." Peter Butt, Land Law 305 (2d ed. 1988).

apparent easement. (1851) A visually evident easement, such as a paved trail or a sidewalk. [Cases: Easements C=>22.]

appendant easement. See easement appurtenant.

appurtenant easement. See easement appurtenant.

aviational easement. An easement permitting unpiloted aircraft flights over the servient estate. — Also termed avigation easement; aviation easement; flight easement; navigation easement. [Cases: Aviation C=>3.]

common easement. (18c) An easement allowing the servient landowner to share in the benefit of the easement. — Also termed nonexclusive easement. [Cases: Easements C=>38.]

continuous easement. (1863) An easement that may be enjoyed without a deliberate act by the party claiming it, such as an easement for drains, sewer pipes, lateral support of a wall, or light and air. — Also termed (in Louisiana) continuous servitude. Cf. discontinuous easement. [Cases: Easements C=>38.]

conservation easement. Property. A recorded, perpetual, nonpossessory interest in real property held by a government entity or by a qualified nonprofit entity that imposes restrictions or affirmative obligations on the property’s owner or lessee to retain or protect natural, scenic, or open-space values of real property, ensure its availability for agricultural, forest, recreational, or open-space use, protect natural resources and habitat, maintain or enhance air or water quality, or preserve the historical, architectural, archeological, or cultural aspects of the real property. — Also termed conservation restriction; conservation servitude.

determinable easement. An easement that terminates on the happening of a specific event.

discontinuous easement. (1867) An easement that can be enjoyed only if the party claiming it deliberately acts in some way with regard to the servient estate. • Examples are a right-of-way and the right to draw water. — Also termed discontinuing easement; noncontinuous easement; nonapparent easement; (in Louisiana) discontinuous servitude. Cf. continuous easement. [Cases: Easements C=>38.]

easement appurtenant. (1810) An easement created to benefit another tract of land, the use of easement being incident to the ownership of that other tract. — Also termed appurtenant easement; appendant easement; pure easement; easement proper. Cf. easement in gross. [Cases: Easements C=>3.]

easement by estoppel. (1907) A court-ordered easement created from a voluntary servitude after a person, mistakenly believing the servitude to be permanent, acted in reasonable reliance on the mistaken belief. [Cases: Estoppel C=>3(1), 87.]

easement by implication. See implied easement.

easement by necessity. (1865) An easement created by operation of law because the easement is indispensable to the reasonable use of nearby property, such as an easement connecting a parcel of land to a road. — Also termed easement of necessity; necessary way. [Cases: Easements C=>18.]

easement by prescription. See prescriptive easement.

easement in gross. (1866) An easement benefiting a particular person and not a particular piece of land. • The beneficiary need not, and usu. does not, own any land adjoining the servient estate. Cf. easement appurtenant. [Cases: Easements C=>3.] equitable easement. (1869) 1. An implied easement created by equity when adjacent lands have been created out of a larger tract. • Such an easement is usu. created to allow implied privileges to continue. [Cases: Easements C=16.] 2. See restrictive covenant (I) under covenant (4).

exclusive easement. An easement that the holder has the sole right to use. Cf. common easement. [Cases: Easements C=52.]

flight easement. See avitational easement.

floating easement. An easement that, when created, is not limited to any specific part of the servient estate. [Cases: Easements C=46.]

flowage easement. A common-law easement that gives the dominant-estate owner the right to flood a servient estate, as when land near a dam is flooded to maintain the dam or to control the water level in a reservoir. [Cases: Waters and Water Courses C=165.]

implied easement. (1867) An easement created by law after an owner of two parcels of land uses one parcel to benefit the other to such a degree that, upon the sale of the benefited parcel, the purchaser could reasonably expect the use to be included in the sale. • Also termed easement by implication, way of necessity. [Cases: Easements C=15-19.]

intermittent easement. An easement that is usable or used only during time to time, not regularly or continuously.

land-conservation easement. Property. An easement arising from an agreement between a landowner and a land trust to provide for the protection of the land in its natural state while perhaps also allowing the property to be used for agricultural or low-impact recreational activities. • The easement runs with the land. • Also termed land-conservation agreement; land-preservation easement.

light-and-air easement. (1940) A negative easement preventing an adjoining landowner from constructing a building that would prevent light or air from reaching the dominant estate. See negative easement. Cf. solar easement. [Cases: Easements C=11, 19, 45.]

mineral easement. An easement that permits the holder to enter the property to remove minerals from it. [Cases: Mines and Minerals C=55(6).]

navigation easement. 1. An easement giving the federal government the right to regulate navigable waters, even when the regulation interferes with private water rights. [Cases: Navigable Waters C=16.] 2. See avitational easement.

negative easement. (1861) An easement that prohibits the servient-estate owner from doing something, such as building an obstruction. Cf. affirmative easement. [Cases: Covenants C=20, 51(2), 68, 69(2); Easements C=13.]

"Negative easements . . . confer no right of entry, but consist essentially of the right to prevent something being done; examples are the right to the flow of air through defined aperture, the right to receive light for a building, the right to the support of a building, and (possibly) the right to require a neighboring landowner to repair fences." Peter Butt, Land Law 353 (2d ed. 1988).

nonapparent easement. See discontinuous easement.

noncontinuous easement. See discontinuous easement.

nonexclusive easement. See common easement.

positive easement. See affirmative easement.

prescriptive easement. (1838) An easement created from an open, adverse, and continuous use over a statutory period. • Also termed easement by prescription; adverse easement. See adverse possession. [Cases: Easements C=5-11.]

private easement. An easement whose enjoyment is restricted to one specific person or a few specific people. [Cases: Easements C=52.]

public easement. An easement for the benefit of an entire community, such as the right to travel down a street or a sidewalk.

pure easement. See easement appurtenant.

quasi-easement. 1. An easement-like right occurring when both tracts of land are owned by the same person. • A quasi-easement may become a true easement if the landowner sells one of the tracts. 2. An obligation or license that relates to land but that is not a true easement — for example, a landowner's obligation to maintain the fence between the landowner's tract and someone else's tract.

reciprocal negative easement. An easement created when a landowner sells part of the land and restricts the buyer's use of that part; and, in turn, that same restriction is placed on the part kept by the landowner. • Such an easement usu. arises when the original landowner creates a common scheme of development for smaller tracts that are carved out of the original tract. [Cases: Covenants C=20; Easements C=13.]

reserved easement. An easement created by the grantor of real property to benefit the grantor's retained property and to burden the granted property. [Cases: Easements C=14.]

secondary easement. An easement that is appurtenant to the primary or actual easement; the right to do things that are necessary to fully enjoy the easement itself. [Cases: Easements C=38.]

solar easement. (1982) An easement created to protect the dominant estate's exposure to direct sunlight. • A solar easement is often created to prevent the servient-estate owner from constructing any building that would cause shadows on the dominant estate, thus interfering with the use of a solar-energy system. Cf. light-and-air easement. [Cases: Easements C=11, 19, 45.]

"Solar easements . . . remain difficult to describe because of the relationship of the sun to the earth. Shadow variables include land slope, terrain, solar orientation, latitude, time of day, and height of potential obstructions. Lawyers, eclesiastical (i-klee-ast-i-kal), adj. (15c) Of or relating to the church, esp. as an institution. Also termed ecclesiastic. [Cases: Religious Societies C=1.]

eclesiastical authorities. The church’s hierarchy, answerable to the Crown, but set apart from the rest of the citizens, responsible for superintending public worship and other religious ceremonies and for administering spiritual counsel and instruction. In England, the several levels of the clergy are (1) archbishops and bishops, (2) deans and chapters, (3) archdeacons, (4) rural deans, (5) parsons (under whom are included appropriators) and vicars, and (6) curates. Churchwardens, sidesmen, parish clerks, and sextons are also considered types of ecclesiastical authorities because their duties are connected with the church. Cf. ECCLESIASTICAL COURT under COURT.
eclesiastical commissioners. Hist. English law. A group of people empowered to suggest measures to improve the established church’s efficiency, to be ratified by orders in council. This body of commissioners, established in 1836 by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners Act (St. 6 & 7 Will. 4, ch. 77), has been dissolved. Its functions, rights, and property are now vested in the church commissioners.
eclesiastical controversy. A civil claim based on the decision of a religious association’s tribunal against one or more members of the association. If the decision relates solely to matters within the church, such as church governance or questions of faith, secular courts have no jurisdiction to hear what is effectively an appeal. See Watson v. Jones, 80 U.S. 679, 728–29 (1871). [Cases: Religious Societies C=14, 24.]

direct economic loss. Economic loss flowing directly from insufficient product quality. • The most common type is loss-of-bargain damages — the difference between the actual value of goods accepted and the value they would have had if they had been delivered as promised or warranted. [Cases: Products Liability ◄156; Torts ◄118.]

economic-loss rule. (1976) Torts. The principle that a plaintiff cannot sue in tort to recover for purely monetary loss — as opposed to physical injury or property damage — caused by the defendant. • Many states recognize an exception to this rule when the defendant commits fraud or negligent misrepresentation, or when a special relationship exists between the parties (such as an attorney-client relationship). — Also termed economic-harm rule; economic-loss doctrine. [Cases: Torts ◄118.]

"One way the courts have attempted to draw a line between tort and warranty is to bar recovery for 'economic loss' in tort. In some states this common law doctrine has achieved the status of the 'economic loss doctrine,' meaning that once loss is defined as 'economic' it cannot be recovered at least in negligence or strict tort and perhaps not in fraud or misrepresentation." 1 James J. White & Robert S. Summers, Uniform Commercial Code § 10-5, at 581 (4th ed. 1995).

edictal intimation. See EDICTAL CITATION.

edicta magistratum. See JUS HONORARIUM.

Edicts of Justinian. Roman law. Thirteen constitutions or laws of Justinian, appended to the Greek collection of the Novels in the Venetian manuscript. ● The Edicts were confined to administrative matters in the provinces of the Roman Empire. They were not known to the glossators.

edictum (a-dik tam), n. [Latin] Roman law. 1. In imperial Rome, an edict or mandate; an ordinance or law proclaimed by the emperor. ● An edict was a constitution of the emperor acting on his own initiative, differing from a rescript in not being returned in the way of answer; from a decree in not being given in judgment; and from both in not being founded upon solicitation. As an imperial constitution, it had the force of law. 2. A declaration by a magistrate relevant to his jurisdiction or area of competence; esp., the pronouncement of a magistrate of the principles by which he proposed to act in office. See edictum annum; FORMULA (1). Pl. edicta.

edictum aedilicum (ee-dik-tam ee-do-lish ee-am). A curule aedile’s edict regarding sales in the public market; esp., an edict giving remedies for sales of defective goods, animals, or slaves. ● An aedile could, for instance, declare that sellers would be strictly liable for latent defects in goods, and dictate how dogs and wild animals for sale should be confined to protect the public. — Also written aedilitium edictum. Pl. edicta aedilicia.

edictum annum (an-yoo-am). An edict issued by a praetor at the beginning of the one-year term of office. Pl. edicta annua.

edictum perpetuum (par-pech-oo-am). The urban praetor’s edict in its permanent form, edited by Julian in A.D. 131 and given legislative force. ● This term originally had the narrower sense of the praetors’ general edicts as opposed to edicts issued in specific cases. — Also termed perpetual edict. Pl. edicta perpetua.

edictum praetoris (pri-tor-as). The proclamation issued by a praetor at the start of the year’s term, explaining the grounds on which a formula would be granted. — Also termed praetorian edict. See edictum annum; FORMULA (1).

edictum provinciale (pra-vin-shee-ay-lee). An edict or system of rules for the administration of justice, modeled on edictum praetoris, issued by the provincial governors in the Roman Empire. Pl. edicta provincialia.

edictum repentinum (rep-an-ti-nam). [Latin] Roman law. A supplementary edict issued to deal with some emergency. ● This term was contrasted with edictum perpetuum. Pl. edicta repentina.

Edictum Theodoricii (thee-a-da-ri-sr). A collection of laws applicable to both Romans and Goths, issued by Theodoric, king of the Ostrogoths, at Rome about A.D. 500, or perhaps by Theodoric III, king of the Visigoths in Gaul about A.D. 460.

edictum tralatitium (tral-a-tish-ee-am). A praetor’s edict that retained all or a principal part of the predecessor’s edict, with only such additions as appeared necessary to adapt it to changing social conditions or juristic ideas. ● This had become standard practice by effractores (e-feerz), adv. Scots law. As appropriate; correctly.

The term ordinarily appears in the phrase as affeirs. effets (e-fe or e-fets), n. pl. [French] 1. Bills of exchange.
2. Goods; movables; chattels.
effets mobilizers (moh-beel-yay or moh-ba-leerz). Funds; stocks. efficient adequate cause. See proximate cause under CAUSE (1). efficient breach. See BREACH OF CONTRACT. efficient-breath theory. (1980) Contracts. The view that a party should be allowed to breach a contract and pay damages, if doing so would be more economically efficient than performing under the contract. • This relatively modern theory stems from the law-and-economics movement. See BREACH OF CONTRACT. [Cases: Contracts ☐ 275.] efficient cause. See proximate cause under CAUSE (1). efficient intervening cause. See intervening cause under CAUSE (1). efficient proximate cause. See proximate cause under CAUSE (1). effigy (ef-a-jee), n. (16c) A figure, image, or other representation; esp., a crude representation of someone who is disliked. • Effigies are sometimes hanged, burned, or otherwise abused to express public disapproval or ridicule.
effluent (ef-lou-ant), n. (1859) Liquid waste that is discharged into a river, lake, or other body of water. [Cases: Environmental Law ☐ 182.]
effluxion of time (i-fluk-shan), (17c) The expiration of a lease term resulting from the passage of time rather than from a specific action or event. — Also termed efflux of time. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant ☐ 93.]
effocialiter (e-for-shew-ay-la-tar), adv. [Latin] Hist. Forcibly. • This adverb referred primarily to military force. effraction (a-frak-shan), (19c) Archaic. A breach made by the use of force; BURGLARY (1). effusio sanguinis (e-fyoo-zhe-oh sang-gwi-nis). [Latin] Hist. 1. The shedding of blood. 2. The fine or penalty imposed for the shedding of blood. • The Crown granted to many lords of manors the power to collect this fine. — Also termed bloodwite; bloodwit. Cf. wergild.

EFT. abbr. Electronic funds transfer. See FUNDS TRANSFER.

e.g. abbr. [Latin exempli gratia] (17c) For example < an intentional tort, e.g., battery or false imprisonment>. Cf. i.e.

egg donation. Family law. A type of assisted-reproductive therapy in which eggs are removed from one woman and transplanted into the uterus of another woman who carries and delivers the child. • In egg donation, the egg is usu. fertilized in vitro. See IN VITRO FERTILIZATION; ASSISTED-REPRODUCTIVE TECHNOLOGY. [Cases: Child Custody ☞ 274.5; Child Support ☞ 63; Children Out-of-Wedlock ☞ 15; Parent and Child ☞ 20.]

eggshell-skull rule. (1961) Torts. The principle that a defendant is liable for a plaintiff's unforeseeable and uncommon reactions to the defendant's negligent or intentional act. • Under this rule, for example, if one person negligently scrapes another who turns out to be a hemophiliac, the negligent defendant is liable for the full extent of the plaintiff's injuries even though the harm to another plaintiff would have been minor. — Also termed eggshell-plaintiff rule; thin-skull rule; special-sensitivity rule; old-soldier's rule. [Cases: DAMAGES ☞ 33.]

ego, talis (ee-goh, tay-lis). [Latin] I, such a one. • This phrase was used in describing the forms of old deeds.

egrediens et exeunt (e-gree-dee-enz et ek-see-anz). [Latin] "stepping out and exiting"] Common-law pleading. Going forth and issuing out of (land).

egregious (i-gree-j<ls), adj. (16c) Extremely or remarkably bad; flagrant <the defendant's egregious behavior>.

egress (ee-gres). (16c) 1. The act of going out or leaving. 2. The right or ability to leave; a way of exit. Cf. INGRESS.

ei abest (ee-1 ab-est). [Latin] Roman law. It is wanting to him. • The phrase appeared in reference to any diminution in a person's assets.

EIC. abbr. See EARNED-INCOME CREDIT under TAX CREDIT.

eight-corners rule. Insurance. The principle that a liability insurer's duty to defend its insured — generally triggered if the plaintiff's claims against the insured are within the policy's coverage — is assessed by reviewing the claims asserted in the plaintiff's complaint, without reference to matters outside the four corners of the complaint plus the four corners of the policy. — Also termed allegations-of-the-complaint rule. Cf. FOUR-CORNERS RULE. [Cases: INSURANCE ☞ 2914, 2915.] 1891 Copyright Amendment Act. See CHACE ACT.

Eighteenth Amendment. The constitutional amendment — ratified in 1919 and repealed by the 21st Amendment in 1933 — that prohibited the manufacture, sale, transportation, and possession of alcoholic beverages in the United States. See PROHIBITION (3). [Cases: Intoxicating Liquors ☞ 17.]

Eighth Amendment. The constitutional amendment, ratified as part of the Bill of Rights in 1791, prohibiting excessive bail, excessive fines, and cruel and unusual punishment.

eight-hour law. A law that sets eight hours as the standard workday for some jobs and that usu. requires a higher pay rate for work beyond eight hours. • One example is the federal Fair Labor Standards Act. See WAGE-AND-HOUR LAW.

8-K. An SEC form that a registered corporation must file if a material event affecting its financial condition occurs between the due dates for regular SEC filings. — Also termed Form 8-K. Cf. 10-K.

83(b) election. Tax. An employee's choice to treat an employer's grant of unvested property, usu. stock, as being vested immediately and as currently taxable on the amount the employer paid for it. • The alternative is for the employee to wait until the property vests and pay taxes on its value at that time. An 83(b) election is typically used when the property is expected to have a dramatic increase in value before the employee's interest in it vests. IRC (26 USCA) § 83(b). [Cases: Internal Revenue ☞ 3602.]

eigne (ayn), adj. [Law French] (15c) Hist. 1. (Of a child) eldest; first-born. 2. (Of title) superior; prior. 3. (Of an estate) entitled. See ENTAILED. Entailed. • This adjective traditionally follows the noun it modifies in sense 1 < bastard eigne > but precedes the noun in senses 2 and 3 < eigne title >. — Also spelled eign; eygne; eisne; aisne. — Also termed (in Law Latin) einetius.

bastard eigne. Hist. An illegitimate son whose parents afterward marry and have a second son (mulier puisne) for lawful issue.

eignesse (ay-nes), n. [French] See ESNECY.

eisne (ayn), adj. See EIGNE.
eisnetia (iz-nee-shee-a), n. [Law Latin] The share of the oldest son; the portion of an estate acquired by primogeniture. — Also spelled einetia. Cf. esnecy.

either-or order. See alternative order under ORDER (8).

eiusdem generis. See ejusdem generis.

eject, vb. (15c) 1. To cast or throw out. 2. To oust or dispossess; to put or turn out of possession. 3. To expel or thrust out forcibly (e.g., disorderly patrons). — ejector, vb.

ejection, n. (16c) 1. An expulsion by action of law or by actual or threatened physical force. See ouster. 2. EJECTMENT (2).

ejectione custodiae. See DE EJECIONE CUSTODIAE.

ejectione firmae. See DE EJECIONE FIRMÆ.

ejectment. (16c) 1. The ejection of an owner or occupier from property. 2. A legal action by which a person wrongfully ejected from property seeks to recover possession, damages, and costs. 3. The writ by which such an action is begun. • The essential allegations in an action for ejectment are that (1) the plaintiff has title to the land, (2) the plaintiff has been wrongfully dispossessed or ousted, and (3) the plaintiff has suffered damages. — Also termed action of ejectment; action for the recovery of land; ejection. See FORCIBLE ENTRY AND DETAINER. Cf. EVICTION; OUSTER. [Cases: Ejectment C=>1.]

"The evolution of the action of ejectment from its primitive form as a mere action of trespass, enabling a lessee of lands to recover damages when ousted of his possession, through a series of most ingenious fictions, which were afterwards added to enable him to recover possession as well, until its final establishment as the proper method of trying all disputed titles to real property, presents to the student of legal science one of the most interesting studies that the history of the law affords. Few remedies have passed through so many changes of form, both in pleading and practice, and yet retained the same distinctive character that marked their origin." George W. Warvelle, A Treatise on the Principles and Practice of the Action of Ejectment § 4, at 4-5 (1905).

"Any person wrongfully dispossessed of land may sue for the specific restitution of it in an action of ejectment. Originally this action was a special variety of trespass and available only to leaseholders. But in time and by the aid of the more elaborate fictions it came to be used by freeholders also. All these fictions have now been swept away; in theory even the term ejectment has been replaced by the term action for the recovery of land. The older term is, however, replaced in practice." R.F.V. Heuston, Salmond on the Law of Torts 41 (17th ed. 1977).

equitable ejectment. (1820) A proceeding brought to enforce specific performance of a contract for the sale of land and for other purposes. • Though in the form of an ejectment action, this proceeding is in reality a substitute for a bill in equity. [Cases: Ejectment C=>156.]

justice ejectment. (1900) A statutory proceeding to evict a tenant who has held over after termination of the lease or breach of its conditions.

ejectment bill. (18c) Equity practice. A bill in equity brought to recover real property and an accounting of rents and profits, without setting out a distinct ground of equity jurisdiction (and thus demurrable). [Cases: Ejectment C=>62.]

ejectment de garde. See DE EJECIONE CUSTODIAE.

ejector, n. (17c) One who ejects, puts out, or dispossesses another.

casual ejector. The nominal defendant in an ejectment action who, under a legal fiction, is supposed to come casually or by accident upon the premises and to eject the lawful possessor. [Cases: Ejectment C=>46.]

ejectum (i-jek-tam), n. Something that is cast out, esp. by the sea. See FLOTSAM. Cf. JETSAM; LAGAN (1); WAVESON.

ejactus (ee-jek-tas), n. [Latin] Hist. A whoremonger; a pimp.

ejercitaria (ay-hair-see-tor-ee-a), n. [Spanish] Spanish law. An action lying against a shipowner upon the contracts or obligations made by the master for repairs or supplies. • This action corresponds to the actio exercitoria of Roman law. See actio exorsitaria under actio.

ejido (ay-hee-doh), n. [fr. Latin exitus "a going out"] (19c) Spanish law. Common land or pasture; esp., land used in common by inhabitants of a city, pueblo, or town for such things as pasture, wood, and threshing-ground; commons. — Also termed exidos, exedos. See common (2).

ejuration (ej-ay-ray-shen). The renouncing or resigning of one's place.

ejusdem generis (ee-jos-dam jen-a-ris also ee-jos or ee-yoos-). [Latin "of the same kind or class"] (17c) 1. A canon of construction holding that when a general word or phrase follows a list of specifics, the general word or phrase will be interpreted to include only items of the same class as those listed. • For example, in the phrase horses, cattle, sheep, pigs, goats, or any other farm animals, the general language or any other farm animals — despite its seeming breadth — would probably be held to include only four-legged, hoofed mammals typically found on farms, and thus would exclude chickens. — Also termed Lord Tenterden's rule. Cf. expressio unius est exclusio alterius; noscitur a sociis; rule of rank. [Cases: Contracts C=>156; Statutes C=>194.] 2. Loosely, noscitur a sociis.

elaborare (i-lab-a-ray-ee), vb. [Latin] Hist. To gain, acquire, or purchase, as by labor and industry.

elaboratus (i-lab-a-ray-tas), n. [Latin] Hist. Property acquired by labor.

Elastic Clause. See NECESSARY AND PROPER CLAUSE.

elbow clerk. See CLERK (5).

elder abuse. See abuse of the elderly under ABUSE.

Elder Brethren. A distinguished body of men elected as masters of Trinity House, an institution incorporated in the reign of Henry VIII and charged with many duties in marine affairs, such as superintending lighthouses.

- The full title of the corporation is Elder Brethren of the Holy and Undivided Trinity.

elder law. (1986) The field of law dealing with the elderly, including such issues as estate planning, retirement benefits, social security, age discrimination, and healthcare.

elder title. A title of earlier date but one that becomes operative simultaneously with, and prevails over, a title of newer origin.

elected domicile. See domicile.

elect. 1. A person chosen or elected. 2. A person to whom the law gives a choice about status.

electing small-business trust. See trust (3).

electio est creditoris (i-lik-shuh-oh est kred-i-tor-is). [Law Latin] Scots law. The creditor has the election or choice. • The phrase appeared in reference to the creditor's right to apply payments to one debt or another. Cf. electio est debitoris.

"Electio est creditoris. . . . This has reference to a creditor's right to apply indefinite payments, made by his debtor, to that debt or obligation which is least secured; but where the debtor at the time of payment appropriates the sum paid, towards extinction of a particular debt, it must be so applied." John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 194 (4th ed. 1894).

electio est debitoris (i-lik-shuh-oh est deb-i-tor-is). [Law Latin] Scots law. The debtor has the election or choice. • If the law provided alternative methods of fulfilling an obligation, the debtor could choose the method of payment. Cf. electio est creditoris.

election, n. (13c) 1. The exercise of a choice; esp., the act of choosing from several possible rights or remedies in a way that precludes the use of other rights or remedies <the taxpayers' election to file jointly instead of separately>. See ELECTION OF REMEDIES. 2. The doctrine by which a person is compelled to choose between accepting a benefit under a legal instrument and retaining some property right to which the person is already entitled; an obligation imposed on a party to choose between alternative rights or claims, so that the party is entitled to enjoy only one <the prevailing plaintiff was put to an election between out-of-pocket damages and lost profits>. — Also termed equitable election. See RIGHT OF ELECTION. [Cases: Election of Remedies C=1.1] 3. The process of selecting a person to occupy an office (usu. a public office), membership, award, or other title or status <the 2004 congressional election>. Cf. two-round voting under VOTING. [Cases: Elections C=1.1] — elect, vb. — elective, adj.

by-election. An election specially held to fill a vacant post. — Also spelled bye-election. Cf. general election.

election at large. An election in which a public official is selected from a major election district rather than from a subdivision of the larger unit. — Also termed at-large election. [Cases: Elections C=12(7).]

free election. An election in which the political system and processes guarantee that each voter will be allowed to vote according to conscience.

general election. 1. An election that occurs at a regular interval of time. — Also termed regular election. 2. An election for all seats, as contrasted with a by-election. Cf. by-election. [Cases: Elections C=215.] municipal election. The election of municipal officers. [Cases: Municipal Corporations C=129.]

off-year election. An election conducted at a time other than the presidential election year.

popular election. An election by people as a whole, rather than by a select group.

primary election. A preliminary election in which a political party's registered voters nominate the candidate who will run in the general election. — Often shortened to primary. [Cases: Officers and Public Employees C=70.7.]

recall election. An election in which voters have the opportunity to remove a public official from office.

regular election. See general election.

representation election. An election held by the National Labor Relations Board to decide whether a certain union will represent employees in a bargaining unit. See BARGAINING UNIT. [Cases: Labor and Employment C=1187.]
unoff election. An election held after a general election, in which the two candidates who received the most votes — neither of whom received a majority — run against each other so that the winner can be determined. Cf. two-round voting under VOTING.

special election. An election that occurs in an interim between general elections, usu. to fill a sudden vacancy in office. Cf. by-election.

4. Patents. A patent applicant's choice of a single invention to continue prosecuting under the original application, after an examiner has required a restriction. See RESTRICTION (4). [Cases: Patents C=104.]

election of species. A patent applicant's choice of one alternative over others after an examiner determines that a generic claim is not allowable. [Cases: Patents C=104.]

election, doctrine of. A doctrine holding that when a person has contracted with an agent without knowing of the agency and later learns of the principal's identity, the person may enforce the contract against either the agent or the principal, but not both. See ELECTION (1). [Cases: Principal and Agent C=145(4).] election, estoppel by. See estoppel by election under ESTOPPEL.

election board. 1. A board of inspectors or commissioners appointed for each election precinct to determine voter qualification, to supervise the polling, and often to ascertain and report the results. 2. A local agency charged with the conduct of elections. [Cases: Elections C=49-58.]
election by spouse. See right of election.

election contest. A challenge by an election's loser against the winner, calling for an analysis of the election returns, which may include reviewing voter qualifications or re-counting the ballots. [Cases: Elections (1931) 148, 269–306.]

election district. See district.

election dower. See dower.

election fraud. (18c) Illegal conduct committed in an election, usu. in the form of fraudulent voting. Examples include voting twice, voting under another person's name (usu. a deceased person), or voting while ineligible. [Cases: Elections (1931) 318.]

election judge. 1. A person appointed to supervise an election at the precinct level; a local representative of an election board. [Cases: Elections (1931) 49. 2. English law. One of two puisne judges of the Queen's Bench Division of the High Court selected to try election petitions.

election of remedies. (18c) 1. A claimant's act of choosing between two or more concurrent but inconsistent remedies based on a single set of facts. [Cases: Election of Remedies (1931) 1. 2. The affirmative defense barring a litigant from pursuing a remedy inconsistent with another remedy already pursued, when that other remedy has given the litigant an advantage over, or has damaged, the opposing party. This doctrine has largely fallen into disrepute and is now rarely applied. 3. The affirmative defense that a claimant cannot simultaneously recover damages based on two different liability findings if the injury is the same for both claims, thus creating a double recovery. Cf. alternative relief under relief (3). election of species. See election (4).

election petition. English law. A petition for inquiry into the validity of a Parliament member's election, when the member's return is allegedly invalid for bribery or other reason.

election returns. The report made to the board of canvassers or the election board, by those charged with tallying votes, of the number of votes cast for a particular candidate or proposition. [Cases: Elections (1931) 126(7), 246.] elective franchise. See franchise (1).

elective office. An office that is filled by popular election rather than by appointment.

elective share. (1931) Wills & estates. The percentage of a deceased spouse's estate, set by statute, that a surviving spouse (or sometimes a child) may choose to receive instead of taking under a will or in the event of being unjustifiably disinherited. — Also termed forced share; statutory share; statutory forced share. See right of election. [Cases: Wills (1931) 778–803.]

"In many states today, common-law dower and curtesy have been wholly replaced by statutes that make the surviving spouse an 'heir' of the deceased spouse and fix a minimum percentage of the decedent's estate (real and personal) to which the survivor will be entitled regardless of efforts of the deceased spouse to prevent it by will. This statutory minimum — called the statutory forced share — is typically an estate in fee simple, not merely a life estate. A serious disadvantage to the surviving spouse under many of these statutes, however, is that the minimum percentage applies only to property owned by the decedent at death. Both husbands and wives can, under such statutes, defeat their spouses' forced shares by inter vivos transfer." Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 37–38 (2d ed. 1984).

elector. (15c) 1. A member of the electoral college chosen to elect the U.S. President and Vice President. — Also termed presidential elector. [Cases: United States (1931) 25. 2. A voter. [Cases: Elections (1931) 59.]

qualified elector. A legal voter; a person who meets the voting requirements for age, residency, and registration and who has the present right to vote in an election. See voter. [Cases: Elections (1931) 59–87.]

3. A person who chooses between alternative rights or claims. 4. Hist. The title of certain German princes who had a voice in electing the Holy Roman Emperors. This office sometimes became hereditary and was connected with territorial possessions.

electoral college. (often cap.) (17c) The body of electors chosen from each state to formally elect the U.S. President and Vice President by casting votes based on the popular vote. [Cases: United States (1931) 25.]

electoral process. (1851) 1. The method by which a person is elected to public office in a democratic society. 2. The taking and counting of votes.

electric chair. (1889) A chair that is wired so that electrodes can be fastened to a condemned person's body and a lethal charge passed through the body for the purpose of carrying out a death penalty. The electric chair was first used in 1890 at the Auburn State Prison in New York.

electronic agent. Any electronic or automated means, such as a computer program, that can independently initiate or respond to an action or message without a human's review.

elegant (el-a-gan-tar), adv. Civil law. Accurately; with discrimination; neatly.

elegit (a-lee-jit), [Latin “he has chosen”] (16c) Hist. A writ of execution (first given by 13 Edw., ch. 18) either upon a judgment for a debt or damages or upon the forfeiture of a recognizance taken in the king’s court. • Under it, the defendant’s goods and chattels were appraised and, except for plow beasts, delivered to the plaintiff to satisfy the debt. If the goods were not sufficient to pay the debt, then the portion of the defendant’s freehold lands held at the time of judgment was also delivered to the plaintiff, to hold until the debt was satisfied out of rents and profits or until the defendant’s interest expired. During this period the plaintiff was called tenant by elegit, and the estate an estate by elegit. The writ was abolished in England in 1956, and it is no longer used anywhere in the United States.

element. (13c) 1. A constituent part of a claim that must be proved for the claim to succeed <Burke failed to prove the element of proximate cause in prosecuting his negligence claim>. 2. Patents. A discretely claimed component of a patent claim. • For a prior-art reference to anticipate a claim, it must teach each and every claim element. To recover for patent infringement, the plaintiff must prove that the accused product infringes every element of at least one claim, either literally or under the doctrine of equivalents. — Also termed (in sense 2) limitation. See doctrine of equivalents. [Cases: Patents ☐=101(1).]

elements of crime. (1909) The constituent parts of a crime — usu. consisting of the actus reus, mens rea, and causation — that the prosecution must prove to sustain a conviction. • The term is more broadly defined by the Model Penal Code in § 1.13(9) to refer to each component of the actus reus, causation, the mens rea, any grading factors, and the negative of any defense.

Eleventh Amendment. The constitutional amendment, ratified in 1795, prohibiting a federal court from hearing an action against a state by a person who is not a citizen of that state. See sovereign immunity under immunity (1). [Cases: Federal Courts ☐=265–268.]

elisior (i-il-zar), (17c) A person appointed by a court to assemble a jury, serve a writ, or perform other duties of the sheriff or coroner if either is disqualified. — Also spelled eslisor. [Cases: Sheriffs and Constables ☐=26.]

Elkins Act. A 1903 federal law that strengthened the Interstate Commerce Act by prohibiting rebates and other forms of preferential treatment to large carriers. 49 USC §§ 41–43 (superseded).

e (el). Hist. A measure of length corresponding to the modern yard.

Ellenborough’s Act (el-an-braz). An English law (the Malicious Shooting and Stabbing Act) of 1803 punishing offenses against the person. St. 43 Geo. 3, ch. 58.

elogium (i-loh-jee-am), n. Civil law. 1. A will or testament. 2. A clause or provision in a will or testament.

eloyd (i-lown), vb. (15c) 1. To remove (a person or property) from a court’s or sheriff’s jurisdiction. 2. To remove to a distance; conceal. — Also spelled eloin. — eloigner, n.

eloydment (i-lown-mant), n. (17c) The getting of a thing or person out of the way, or removing it to a distance, so as to be out of reach.

elongata (ee-lawng-gay-ta), [Latin] 1. adj. Eloigned; carried away to a distance. 2. ELONGATUS.

elongatus (ee-lawng-gay-tas), [Latin “eloigned”] A return made by a sheriff to a writ de homine replegiando, stating that the party to be repleved has been eloigned.
or conveyed out of the sheriff’s jurisdiction. — Also termed elongata.

elongavit (ee-lawng-gay-vit). [Latin “he has eloigned”]

In a proceeding by foreign attachment, the serjeant-at-mace’s return that the garnishée has eloigned the goods, so that they cannot be appraised. • Upon such a return, judgment was given for the plaintiff that an inquiry be made into the eloigned goods. The inquiry was then set for trial and an assessment made by a jury.

elope, vb. (17c) 1. Archaic. To run away; escape. 2. Archaic. To abandon one’s husband and run away with a lover. 3. To run away secretly for the purpose of getting married, often without parental consent. — eloquence, n.

elsewhere, adv. (bef. 12c) In another place. • In shipping articles, this term, following the designation of the port of destination, must be construed either as void for uncertainty or as subordinate to the principal voyage stated in the preceding words. [Cases: Seamien C==7.]

eluviation (i-loo-vey-ay-shon). (1899) Movement of soil caused by excessive water in the soil.

e-mail, n. (1982) A communication exchanged between people by computer, through either a local area network or the Internet. [Cases: Telegraphic communications C==1335, 1342, 1343, 1439.] — Also spelled email. — e-mail, vb.

emanation. (16c) 1. The act of coming or flowing forth from something. 2. That which flows or comes forth from something; an effluence.

emancipate, vb. (17c) 1. To set free from legal, social, or political restraint; esp., to free from slavery or bondage. [Cases: Slaves C==23.] 2. To release (a child) from the control, support, and responsibility of a parent or guardian. [Cases: Child Support C==386–392; Parent and Child C==16.] — emancipative, emancipatory, adj. — emancipator, n.

emancipated minor. See minor.

emancipation. (17c) 1. The act by which one who was under another’s power and control is freed. 2. A surrender and renunciation of the correlative rights and duties concerning the care, custody, and earnings of a child; the act by which a parent (historically a father) frees a child and gives the child the right to his or her own earnings. • This act also frees the parent from all legal obligations of support. Emancipation may take place by agreement between the parent and child, by operation of law (as when the parent abandons or fails to support the child), or when the child gets legally married or enters the armed forces. [Cases: Child Support C==386–392; Parent and Child C==16.] 3. Roman law. The enfanchissement of a son by his father, accomplished through the formality of an imaginary sale. • Justinian substituted the simpler proceeding of a manumission before a magistrate. — Also termed (in sense 3) emancipatio. Cf. MANCIPATION.

constructive emancipation. Emancipation by law, as opposed to a voluntary act of the parent. • Constructive emancipation may occur in several ways, as by

1. conduct of the parent that is inconsistent with the performance of parental duties, (2) marriage of the child, or (3) the child’s service in the armed forces. [Cases: Child Support C==386–392; Parent and Child C==16.]

partial emancipation. Emancipation that frees a child for only a part of the period of minority, or from only a part of the parent’s rights, or for only some purposes. [Cases: Child Support C==386–392; Parent and Child C==16.]

emancipation act. See MARRIED WOMEN’S PROPERTY ACTS.

Emancipation Proclamation. An executive proclamation, issued by President Abraham Lincoln on January 1, 1863, declaring that all persons held in slavery in designated states and districts were freed.

embargo, n. (16c) 1. A government’s wartime or peacetime detention of an offending nation’s private ships found in the ports of the aggrieved nation <the President called off the embargo of Iraq’s ships after the war ended>. — Also spelled embargo. — Also termed hostile embargo. [Cases: War and National Emergency C==12.]

“A hostile embargo is a kind of reprisal by one nation upon vessels within its ports belonging to another nation with which a difference exists, for the purpose of forcing it to do justice. If this measure should be followed by war, the vessels are regarded as captured, if by peace, they are restored.” Theodore D. Woolsey, Introduction to the Study of International Law, § 118, at 187 (5th ed. 1878).

2. A nation’s detention of all ships in its own ports, including its own, to promote safety and to preclude transportation to an offending nation <the embargo of all U.S. ships traveling to Iraq remained in effect until hostilities subsided>. — Also termed civil embargo. [Cases: War and National Emergency C==15.]

“A civil embargo may be laid for the purpose of national welfare or safety, as for the protection of commercial vessels against the rules of belligerent powers which would expose them to capture. Such was the measure adopted by the United States in December 1807, which detained in port all vessels except those which had a public commission, and those that were already laden or should sail in ballast. The right to adopt such a measure of temporary non-intercourse is undoubted.” Theodore D. Woolsey, Introduction to the Study of International Law, § 118, at 187 (5th ed. 1878).

3. The unilateral or collective restrictions on the import or export of goods, materials, capital, or services into or from a specific country or group of countries for political or security reasons <for a time, the industrialized nations placed an embargo on all goods from Libya>. — Also termed trade embargo; economic-cure trade embargo. [Cases: War and National Emergency C==15.]

4. The conscription of private property for governmental use, such as to transport troops <the Army’s embargo of the company jet to fly General White to Washington>. — Also termed trade embargo; economic-cure trade embargo. [Cases: War and National Emergency C==15.]

5. A temporary prohibition on disclosure <the embargo on the press release expired at 11:59 p.m.>. — embargo, vb.

embassy. (1534) 1. The building in which a diplomatic body is located; esp., the residence of the ambassador. 2. A body of diplomatic representatives headed by an ambassador; a diplomatic mission on the ambassadorial level. 3. The mission, business, and function of an ambassador. Cf. legation. [Cases: Ambassadors and Consuls ⊇= 3.]

Ember Days. Eccles. law. The days — which the ancient church fathers called quatuor tempora jejunii — that are observed on the Wednesday, Friday, and Saturday following (1) Quadragesima Sunday (the first Sunday in Lent), (2) Whitsuntide, or Holyrood Day, in September, and (3) St. Lucy’s day, about the middle of December. • Almanacs refer to the weeks in which these days fall as Ember Weeks; they are now chiefly noticed because, by tradition, the Sundays following Ember Days are used to ordain priests and deacons, although the canon law allows bishops to ordain on any Sunday or holiday.

ebbezzlement, n. (15c) The fraudulent taking of personal property with which one has been entrusted, esp. as a fiduciary. • The criminal intent for embezzlement — unlike larceny and false pretenses — arises after taking possession (not before or during the taking). — Also termed defalcation; peculation. See Larceny; False Pretenses. [Cases: Embezzlement ⊇= 1.] — embezzle, vb. — embezzler, n.

‘Embezzlement is not a common-law crime. It is the result of legislative efforts to make provision for an unreasonable gap which appeared in the law of larceny as it developed. Under the early English statute embezzlement was made a misdemeanor, but under most modern American statutes it is either a felony or a misdemeanor depending upon the value of the property converted.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 351 (3d ed. 1982).

‘Embezzlement can be defined as the fraudulent conversion of the property of another by one who has lawful possession of the property and whose fraudulent conversion has been made punishable by the statute.” Arnold H. Loewy, Criminal Law in a Nutshell 94 (2d ed. 1987).

eblem. (15c) 1. A flag, armorial bearing, or other symbol of a country, organization, or movement. 2. Loosely, something that is used to symbolize something else.

emblemata Triboniani (em-blee-ma-tuh troh-bohn-ee-nee-uh-nee). [Latin] Roman law. Alterations, modifications, and additions to the writings of the older jurists that were combined to form the Digest or Pandects, and generally termed interpolations. • Justinian appointed a commission over which Tribonian presided to harmonize contradictions, delete obsolete matter, and bring the law up to date. This term is considered old-fashioned by modern Romanists. See interpolations.

emblems (em-blems). (15c) 1. The growing crop annually produced by labor, as opposed to a crop occurring naturally. • Emblems are considered personal property that the executor or administrator of a deceased tenant may harvest and take regardless of who may have since occupied the land. — Also termed fructus industriales. [Cases: Crops ⊇= 1.] 2. The tenant’s right to harvest and take away such crops after the tenancy has ended. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant ⊇= 139(2).]

‘At common law those products of the earth which are annual, and are raised by yearly manurance and labor, and essentially owe their annual existence to the cultivation by man, [are] termed ’emblems’ and sometimes ’fructus industriales.” Sparrow v. Pond, 52 N.W. 36 (Minn. 1892).

‘The law of emblems has its origin and matrix, in the privilege, recognized at least as early as the fifteenth century, of the tenant for an uncertain term, to harvest and remove, even after the tenancy had terminated, the annual crop, which he had planted and nurtured.” Ray Andrews Brown, The Law of Personal Property § 159, at 806 (2d ed. 1955).

embiers de gentz (em-blerz doh zhenz). [Law French] A theft from the people. • The phrase occurs in the old English rolls of Parliament — for example, “Whereas divers murders, embiers de gentz, and robberies are committed . . . .”

eMbodied technology. Intellectual property. Know-how or knowledge that is manifest in products and equipment, including software. Cf. disembodied technology.

embodiment. Patents. 1. The tangible manifestation of an invention. [Cases: Patents ⊇= 99.] 2. The method for using this tangible form. 3. The part of a patent application or patent that describes a concrete manifestation of the invention. • Embodiments are less common in software or process patents than in manufacturing-related patents.

ebossed seal. See Notary seal.

embrace, vb. To attempt to influence (a judge or juror) by corruption, or to behave in a way that might have a corrupting influence; to engage in embracery.

embracery (im-brayz-e-ree). n. (15c) The attempt to corrupt or wrongfully influence a judge or juror, esp. by threats or bribery. — Also spelled embracery. — Also termed jury-tampering; laboring a jury. Cf. Jury-fixing; Jury-packaging. [Cases: Criminal Law ⊇= 45.35.]

‘The word ‘embracery’ . . . has tended to disappear. It is included in some of the codes but the tendency has been to divide this common-law offense into two parts, placing that which is appropriate thereto in sections on bribery and the remainder in provisions dealing with obstruction of justice.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 552 (3d ed. 1982).

embryo (em-bree-oh). A developing but unborn or unhatched animal; esp., an unborn human from conception until the development of organs (i.e., until about the eighth week of pregnancy). Cf. Fetus; Zygote.

embryo formatus (for-may-tus). Eccles. law. A human embryo organized into human shape and endowed with a soul. • Though rejected in the early doctrine of the Christian church, the distinction between the embryo formatus and informatus was accepted by Gratian (regarded as the founder of canon law) in his Decretum (ca. 1140), in which he said that abortion is not murder if the fetus has not yet been infused with a soul. Though he did not specify the time of formation or animation, by the 16th century canonists accepted that the time of formation and animation was the 40th day after conception for the male fetus and the 80th day for the female. — Also termed embryo animatus.

embryo adoption (in-'for-may-tos). Eccles. law. A human embryo before it has been endowed with a soul. — Also termed embryo inanimatus.

embryo adoption. See ADOPTION.

emend (i-mend), vb. (15c) To correct or revise; esp., to edit or change (a text).

emenda (ee-men-da), n. pl. [Latin "amends"] Things given in reparation for a trespass.

emendatio (ee-men-day-shoh), n. [Latin] Hist. The power of amending and correcting abuses, according to certain rules and measures.

emendatio panis et cerevisiae (ee-men-day-shoh pahnis et ser-a-vizh-ee-ee). [Latin "the correction of bread and ale"] The power of supervising and correcting (assizing) the weights and measures of bread and ale.

emendation (ee-men-day-shun). (16c) 1. Correction or revision, esp. of a text. 2. Hist. The correction of an error or wrongdoing; atonement for a criminal offense, esp. by the payment of money. • As criminal law developed over time, emendation by payment of reparation for a trespass. Also termed emenda.

emergency circumstances. See exigent circumstances under CIRCUMSTANCE.

Emergency Court of Appeals. Hist. A temporary court, established during World War II, whose purpose was to review wage- and price-control matters. • The court was created in 1942 and abolished in 1962. Cf. TEMPORARY EMERGENCY COURT OF APPEALS. [Cases: War and National Emergency C--108, 206.]

emergency doctrine. (1929) 1. A legal principle exempting a person from the ordinary standard of reasonable care if that person acted instinctively to meet a sudden and urgent need for aid. — Also termed imminent-peril doctrine; sudden-emergency doctrine; sudden-peril doctrine; sudden-peril rule. [Cases: Negligence C--291.] 2. A legal principle by which consent to medical treatment in a dire situation is inferred when neither the patient nor a responsible party can consent but a reasonable person would do so. — Also termed (in sense 2) emergency-treatment doctrine. Cf. GOOD SAMARITAN DOCTRINE; RESCUE DOCTRINE. [Cases: Health C--909.] 3. The principle that a police officer may conduct a search without a warrant if the officer has probable cause and reasonably believes that immediate action is needed to protect life or property. — Also termed emergency exception. See exigent circumstances under CIRCUMSTANCE.

emergency-employment doctrine. The principle that an employee may enlist another’s help in dealing with an emergency that falls within the scope of the employee’s duties and that could not be overcome without the assistance of the other person.

emergency exception. See EMERGENCY DOCTRINE (3).

emergency jurisdiction. See JURISDICTION.

Emergency Preparedness and Response Directorate. The former division of the U.S. Department of Homeland Security responsible for coordinating relief and recovery efforts and for developing and coordinating plans to prevent terrorism and to minimize risks of danger from natural disasters. • The Directorate included the Federal Emergency Management Agency and also coordinated efforts with the Strategic National Stockpile and the National Disaster Medical System from the Department of Health and Human Services, the Nuclear Incident Response Team from the Department of Energy, the Domestic Emergency Support Teams from the Department of Justice, the National Domestic Preparedness Office of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, and state and local emergency responders. It was abolished in July 2005. — Abbr. EPR. [Cases: United States C--82(5).] emergency protective order. See PROTECTIVE ORDER.

e mergency search. See SEARCH.

emergency-treatment order. See EMERGENCY DOCTRINE (2).

emerita. See EMERITUS.

emeritus. (18c) An honorary title conferred on a former officer or professor who has honorably retired, usu. after serving for an extended period well beyond the norm. • The term is loosely used as an adjective meaning "honored," but it is not a synonym for "former," "retired," or "immediate past" (as in "immediate past president"). See HONORARY. Pl. emeriti. Fem. emerita. Fem. pl. emeritae.

emigrant (em-a-grant), n. (18c) One who leaves his or her country for any reason with the intent to establish a permanent residence elsewhere. Cf. IMMIGRANT.

emigration (em-a-gray-shun), n. (17c) The act of leaving a country with the intent not to return and to reside elsewhere. Cf. IMMIGRATION. — emigrate, vb.

"Emigration is usually defined as the voluntary removal of an individual from his home State with the intention of residing abroad. However, not all emigration is voluntary; there sometimes exists forced emigration, even mass emigration. Emigration may also be due to flight for political reasons or expulsion. One then speaks of refugees or exiles." Paul Weis, "Emigration," in 2 Encyclopedia of Public International Law 76 (1995).
emigré (em-ə-gray or em-ə-gray), n. [French] (18c) One who is forced to leave his or her country for political reasons. — Also spelled émigré.

eminence (em-ə-nants), (17c) (usu. cap.) Eccles. law. An honorary title given to cardinals of the Roman Catholic Church. Until the pontificate of Urban VIII, cardinals were called illustriśsimi and reverendissimī.

eminent domain. (18c) The inherent power of a governmental entity to take privately owned property, esp. land, and convert it to public use, subject to reasonable compensation for the taking. — Also (rarely) termed compulsory purchase; (in Scots law) compulsory surrender. See CONDEMNATION (2); EXPROPRIATION; TAKING (2). [Cases: Eminent Domain ⊂ 167 U.S. 548, 574, § 57.1-57.60.]

“Emotional distress passes under various names, such as mental suffering, mental anguish, mental or nervous shock, or the like. It includes all highly unpleasant mental reactions, such as fright, horror, grief, shame, humiliation, embarrassment, anger, chagrin, disappointment, worry, and nausea, it is only where it is extreme that the liability arises. Complete emotional tranquility is seldom attainable in this world, and some degree of transient and trivial emotional distress is a part of the price of living among people. The law intervenes only where the distress inflicted is so severe that no reasonable man could be expected to endure it. The intensity and the duration of the distress are factors to be considered in determining its severity. Severe distress must be proved; but in many cases the extreme and outrageous character of the defendant's conduct is in itself important evidence that the distress has existed.” Restatement (Second) of Torts § 46 cmt. j (1965).

emotional distress. (1933) A highly unpleasant mental reaction (such as anguish, grief, fright, humiliation, or fury) that results from another person's conduct; emotional pain and suffering. ○ Emotional distress, when severe enough, can form a basis for the recovery of tort damages. — Also termed emotional harm; mental anguish; mental distress; mental suffering. See INTENTIONAL INFLICTION OF EMOTIONAL DISTRESS; NEGLIGENCE INFLICTION OF EMOTIONAL DISTRESS. Cf. mental cruelty under CULPRITY. [Cases: Damages ⊂ 57.1-57.60.]

emolument (i-mol-yŏnt), n. [Old Eng.] (15c) Any advantage, profit, or gain received as a result of one's employment or one's holding of office. [Cases: Officers and Public Employees ⊂ 94.]

Emolumenents Clause. (1991) 1. The clause of the United States Constitution preventing members of Congress from continuing to serve in Congress after accepting an appointment to another federal office, and also prohibiting such an appointment if the office was created or its emoluments increased while the Senator or Representative served in Congress. U.S. Const. art. I, § 6, cl. 2. — Also written Emolument Clause, Foreign Emoluments Clause.

emotional abuse. See ABUSE.
emphyteusis (em-fi-t(y)yoo-sis), n. [Greek "implanting"] (16c) Greek, Roman & civil law. A contract by which one person delivered to another (the emphyteuta) a tract of land, either in perpetuity or for a long period of time, in exchange for the obligation to cultivate the land and to pay annual rental. • In Roman law, the land was state-owned (ager vectigalis). In the 5th century, emphyteusis was officially recognized as distinct from ownership or a lease. The land's lessee or tenant, called an emphyteuta, had to bear any burdens imposed on the land. Although the emphyteusis was alienable, the owner had to consent to the sale. (Cf. superficiarius.) Unlike a usufruct, emphyteusis did not terminate with the death of the emphyteuta. Perpetual emphyteusis was abolished in the 18th century.

emphyteuta (em-fi-t(y)yoo-ta), n. [Latin] (18c) Roman & civil law. The person to whom an emphyteusis is granted; the lessee or tenant under a contract of emphyteusis. See fee farm.

emphyteutic (em-fi-t(y)yoo-tik), adj. [Latin] (17c) Civil law. Founded on, growing out of, or having the character of an emphyteusis; held under an emphyteusis.

empire. (14c) The jurisdiction of an emperor; the region over which an emperor's dominion extends.

empirical (em-pir-i-kal), adj. (16c) Of, relating to, or based on experience, experiment, or observation (the expert's theory was not supported by empirical data). — Also termed empiric.

emplazamiento (em-plah-zah-myen-toh), n. [Spanish] Spanish law. A summons; esp., a court-issued citation requiring the addressee to appear at a designated time and place.

emplead. See implead.

emploi (om-plwah), n. [French] French law. Equitable conversion. • When property covered by the régime dotal is sold, the purchaser must ensure that the sale proceeds are reinvested for the wife's benefit. See régime dotal under régime.

employ, vb. (15c) 1. To make use of. 2. To hire. 3. To use as an agent or substitute in transacting business. 4. To commission and entrust with the performance of certain acts or functions or with the management of one's affairs.

employee. (1822) A person who works in the service of another person (the employer) under an express or implied contract of hire, under which the employer has the right to control the details of work performance. — Also spelled employe. Cf. agent (1); independent contractor. [Cases: Labor and Employment ⇔ 23.]

borrowed employee. (1932) An employee whose services are, with the employee's consent, lent to another employer who temporarily assumes control over the employee's work. • Under the doctrine of respondeat superior, the borrowing employer is vicariously liable for the borrowed employee's acts. But the borrowing employer may also be entitled to assert immunity under workers' compensation laws. — Also termed borrowed servant; loaned employee; loaned servant; employee pro hac vice; special employee. See respon­deat superior. [Cases: Labor and Employment ⇔ 26; Workers' Compensation ⇔ 202.]

statutory employee. Workers' compensation. An employee who is covered, or required to be covered, by the employer's workers' compensation insurance and who therefore has no independent tort claim against the employer for unintentional injuries suffered on the job. See statutory employer under employer. [Cases: Workers' Compensation ⇔ 187, 2161.]

employee benefit plan. (1942) A written stock-purchase, savings, option, bonus, stock-appreciation, profit-sharing, thrift, incentive, pension, or similar plan solely for employees, officers, and advisers of a company. • The term includes an employee-welfare benefit plan, an employee-pension benefit plan, or a combination of those two. See 29 USCA § 1002(3). But the term excludes any plan, fund, or program (other than an apprenticeship or training program) in which no employees are plan participants. — Often shortened to plan. Cf. pension plan.

defined-benefit plan. A plan established and maintained by an employer primarily to provide systematically for the payment of definitely determinable benefits to employees over a period of years, usu. for life, after retirement; any pension plan that is not a defined-contribution plan. • Retirement benefits under a defined benefit plan generally are based on a formula that includes such factors as years of service and compensation. If the trust funding the plan lacks sufficient assets to pay the promised benefits, ERISA requires the employer to cover the shortfall. 29 USCA § 1002(35). Cf. defined contribution plan. [Cases: Labor and Employment ⇔ 422.]

defined-contribution plan. Under ERISA, an employee retirement plan in which each participant has a separate account — funded by the employee's contributions and the employer's contributions (usu. in a preset amount) — and each participant's benefits are based solely on what has accumulated in the participant's account. 29 USCA § 1002(34). — Also termed defined-contribution pension plan; individual account plan. Cf. defined-benefit plan. [Cases: Labor and Employment ⇔ 423.] disability retirement plan. 1. A plan that is invoked when a covered person is disabled from working to normal retirement age. 2. A plan that provides increased benefits if a person retires because of a dis­ability. [Cases: Labor and Employment ⇔ 427.]

employee-stock-ownership plan. A type of profit-sharing plan that invests primarily in the employer's stock. • Employee-stock-ownership plans receive special tax benefits and can borrow money to fund employee stock purchases, which makes them a useful corporate finance tool. IRC (26 USCA) § 4975(e)(7). — Abbr. ESOP. [Cases: Internal Revenue §3578, 4297; Labor and Employment §49(2).]

excess-benefit plan. An employee benefit plan maintained by an employer solely for the purpose of providing benefits for certain employees in excess of limitations on contributions and benefits imposed by the Internal Revenue Code. 29 USCA § 1002(36). [Cases: Labor and Employment §420.]

401(k) plan. A retirement and savings plan that allows an employee to elect to have a portion of his or her pretax salary contributed to a defined contribution plan. • Employers often match all or part of the employee's contributions. Employees usu. can choose investments from a list of options. IRC (26 USCA) § 401(k). [Cases: Internal Revenue §3575.]

403(b) plan. A retirement plan for employees of public educational systems and certain tax-exempt organizations that is funded by pretax employee contributions much like a 401(k) plan, but may also provide for employer contributions. IRC (26 USCA) § 403(b). — Also termed tax-sheltered annuity; tax-deferred annuity. [Cases: Internal Revenue §3587.]

457 plan. A type of deferred-compensation plan for employees of state and local governments and tax-exempt organizations that operates much like a 401(k) plan, but (except for governmental plans) is unfunded. IRC (26 USCA) § 457. [Cases: Labor and Employment §417.]

governmental plan. Under ERISA, an employee benefit plan established or maintained for its employees by the federal government, state or local governments, or their agencies or instrumentalities. 29 USCA § 1002(32). • If a collective-bargaining agreement between a labor union and a governmental entity includes a benefit plan, that plan may be a governmental plan if it is funded by and covers only employees of the governmental entity. — Also termed governmental employee benefit plan; government plan.

individual account plan. See defined-contribution plan.

Keogh plan. See keogh plan.

medical-expense reimbursement plan. An arrangement provided by an employer to reimburse employees for medical expenses, including vision and dental expenses, that are not covered under a medical plan available to all employees. • Some plans may also be used to substitute for health insurance, or to pay for medical expenses in excess of insurance-policy limits. IRC (26 USCA) 105. — Abbr. MERP. [Cases: Labor and Employment §426.]

money-purchase plan. A defined-contribution plan that provides for mandatory employer contributions without regard to employer profits. • Contributions are frequently stated as a percentage of employee compensation. [Cases: Labor and Employment §423.]

nonqualified deferred-compensation plan. An unfunded compensation arrangement, frequently offered to executives, that defers compensation and the recognition of its accompanying taxable income to a later date. • It is termed "nonqualified" because it does not qualify for favorable tax treatment under IRC (26 USCA) § 401(a). The plan avoids the restrictions on qualified plans, esp. the limits on contributions and benefits and rules against discrimination in favor of highly compensated employees. — Abbr. NQDC. — Also termed nonqualified executive-compensation plan; unfunded deferred-compensation plan. [Cases: Internal Revenue §3596.]

profit-sharing plan. See profit-sharing plan.

qualified plan. 1. See qualified pension plan under pension plan. 2. See qualified profit-sharing plan under profit-sharing plan.

survivor-income benefit plan. An agreement between an employer and an employee whereby the employer agrees that if the employee dies before retirement, the employer will pay a specified or determinable amount to the employee's spouse or other designated beneficiary. • Typically, a formula is used, so the benefit amount may be a multiple of the employee's salary (e.g., two times the average base pay in the three years preceding death) or based on the length of employment. — Abbr. SIB. — Also written survivor's-income benefit plan. — Also termed death-benefit-only plan (abbr. DBO). [Cases: Labor and Employment §428.] retirement plan. An employee benefit plan — such as a pension plan or Keogh plan — provided by an employer (or a self-employed person) for an employee's retirement. [Cases: Labor and Employment §420.]

SIMPLE plan. An arrangement under which an individual retirement account or annuity is established for each eligible employee and funded by elective pretax employee contributions, much as with a 401(k) plan, and certain matching or minimum employer contributions. • The plan can be attractive to employers because it is easier to administer than a 401(k) plan. The name is a loose acronym for "Savings Incentive Match Plan for Employees." IRC (26 USCA) § 408(p). [Cases: Labor and Employment §420.]

simplified employee pension plan. An arrangement under which an individual retirement account or annuity is established for each eligible employee and funded by discretionary employer contributions. IRC (26 USCA) § 408(k).

A simplified employee pension plan operates much like a 401(k) plan, in that the employee contributions can be made by deferred compensation and the employer can contribute. But the plan is attractive to small employers because it is much easier to administer than a 401(k) plan and gives the employer complete discretion on whether to make an annual contribution. IRC (26 USCA) § 408(k). — Abbr. SEP; SEP-IRA. [Cases: Labor and Employment ⇔ 420.]

split-funded plan. A retirement plan combining elements of both life-insurance and investment plans.

target benefit plan. A money-purchase plan that sets a "target" benefit for each participant and mandates employer contributions determined by an actuarial cost method designed to fund the target benefit.

unfunded deferred-compensation plan. See nonqualified deferred-compensation plan.

welfare plan. Under ERISA, any plan, fund, or program established or maintained by an employer or an employee organization for the purpose of providing to participants or their beneficiaries any number of potential benefits: medical, surgical, or hospital care or benefits; benefits in the event of sickness, accident, disability, death or unemployment; vacation benefits; apprenticeship or other training programs; daycare centers; scholarship funds; prepaid legal services; or holiday and severance benefits. 29 USC A § 1002(1). [Cases: Labor and Employment ⇔ 425.]

employee givebacks. See concession bargaining.

employee-liability exclusion. See exclusion (3).

employee pro hac vice. See borrowed employee under employee.

Employee Retirement Income Security Act. A federal statute that regulates private pension plans and employee benefit plans and that established the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation. 29 USCA §§ 1001 et seq. — Abbr. ERISA. [Cases: Labor and Employment ⇔ 401.]

"ERISA was adopted in 1974 in response to highly publicized instances of fraud and mismanagement in employee pension funds, which had resulted in thousands of workers losing retirement benefits accumulated over a lifetime of work. ERISA was intended primarily as an instrument for regulating pensions, as its title suggests, and most of its substantive provisions address protection of retirement benefits. ERISA also, however, applies to employee welfare benefit plans, and thus covers employer provided health insurance, the dominant vehicle for private finance of health care in the United States." Barry R. Furrow et al., Health Law § 2·9, at 48 (2d ed. 2000).

employee stock option. See stock option (2).

employee-stock-ownership plan. See employee benefit plan.

Employee's Withholding Allowance Certificate. See W-4 FORM.

employer. (16c) A person who controls and directs a worker under an express or implied contract of hire and who pays the worker's salary or wages. Cf. principal (1). [Cases: Labor and Employment ⇔ 23.]

equal-opportunity employer. An employer who agrees not to discriminate against any job applicant or employee on the basis of race, color, religion, sex, natural origin, age, or disability. — Abbr. EOE. [Cases: Civil Rights ⇔ 110.]

general employer. An employer who transfers an employee to another employer for a limited period. See borrowed employee under employee.

special employer. An employer who has borrowed an employee for a limited period and has temporary responsibility for and control over the employee's work.

statutory employer. Workers' compensation. One who employs a statutory employee. See statutory employee under employee. [Cases: Workers' Compensation ⇔ 187.]

employer-employee relationship. See relationship.

employer-identification number. See tax-identification number.

employers' liability. See workers' compensation.

employers' liability insurance. See insurance.

employment. (15c) 1. The relationship between master and servant. See master and servant. 2. The act of employing. 3. The state of being employed. 4. Work for which one has been hired and is being paid by an employer.

casual employment. Work that is occasional, irregular, or for a short time — often associated with day labor.

employment at will. Employment that is usual, undertaken without a contract and that may be terminated at any time, by either the employer or the employee, without cause. — Also termed at-will employment; hiring at will. [Cases: Labor and Employment ⇔ 40.]

"Surprisingly, the employment at will doctrine is not an ancient one. On the contrary, it dates only from the period in the mid-nineteenth century that saw the transformation of the employment relation from one of status to one of contract. The relentless logic of the contract approach dictated the rule that the employee had only such rights as were expressly agreed to in his contract of employment — no more and no less. This meant that there was no implication that an indefinite hiring would last for a year or any other presumed period, since if the parties had wanted a particular term they would have expressly agreed to it." Lex K. Larson, Unjust Dismissal § 1.01, at 1-3 (1992).

"The doctrine of employment at will prescribed that an employee without a contract for a fixed term could be hired or fired for any reason or no reason at all... [The] rule provided that employees categorized as 'at will' had no legal interest in continuing job security. Whereas early American masters had some responsibility to the public as well as to their servants when they turned dependent servants out on the world, under [this] formulation, masters could simply fire employees who had no contracts." Mark A. Rothstein et al., Employment Law § 1.4, at 9-10 (1994).
gainful employment. Work that a person can pursue and perform for money.

hazardous employment. High-risk work; work involving extra peril. • In the context of workers’ compensation, hazardous employment often requires an employer to carry workers’ compensation coverage or its equivalent, regardless of the number of employees.

joint employment. A job in which the essential terms and conditions of the employee’s work are controlled by two or more entities, as when a company hires a contractor to perform a task and retains control over the contractor’s employees in matters such as hiring, firing, discipline, conditions of employment, promulgation of work rules, assignment of day-to-day job duties, and issuance of operating instructions.

permanent employment. Work that, under a contract, is to continue indefinitely until either party wishes to terminate it for some legitimate reason.

seasonal employment. An occupation possible only during limited parts of the year, such as a summer-camp counselor, a baseball-park vendor, or a shopping-mall Santa.

temporary employment. Work for a specific need or fixed duration, usu. agreed upon beforehand.

employment agency. (19c) A business that procures, for a fee, employment for others and employees for employers. • Whether the employer or the employee pays the fee depends on the terms of the agreement. See FINDER (1). [Cases: Labor and Employment C=935.]

emptio honorum (bo-nor-ee-om), [Latin “purchase of goods”] A type of forced assignment for the benefit of creditors, involving a public sale of an insolvent debtor’s estate whereby the purchaser succeeded to all the debtor’s property, rights, and claims, and became responsible for the debtor’s debts and liabilities to an extent fixed before the transfer.

emptio et venditio (et ven-dish-ee-oh), [Latin “purchase and sale”] A contract of sale. • The double name reflects that both the buyer and seller had duties and rights in the transaction. In Roman law, agreement on the thing to be sold and its price were essential. The buyer could enforce the contract by actio empti, and the seller could enforce by actio venditii. — Also termed emptio venditio. See Venditio.

emptio rei speratae (ree-t spo-ray-tee), [Latin “purchase of a hoped-for thing”] The purchase of a thing not yet in existence or not yet in the seller’s possession; e.g., a future crop. La. Civ. Code art. 2451. • The price of such a purchase typically depended on the actual yield and thus could fluctuate.

emptio spei (spee-i), [Latin “purchase of a hope”] An emptio rei speratae in which the price is fixed, regardless of actual gain. • Even if the future event, such as the casting of a net, produced nothing, the buyer had to pay.

emptio venditio. See emptio et venditio.

emtor (emp-tor or -tor), n. [Latin] Civil law. A buyer; purchaser. — Also spelled emtor. See caveat emptor under CAVEAT. Pl. emptores.

enable, vb. To give power to do something; to make able.

enablement. Patents. The disclosure in a patent application; specific. The description of the subject matter clear and complete enough to teach a person of ordinary skill in the art how to make and use the invention. • If the artisan would still be unable to work the invention without undue experimentation after reading the description — in light of the information known in the art as of the filing date of the patent application — the patent application will be rejected for lack of enablement. 35 USC § 112. Cf. nonenablement. [Cases: Patents C>99.] enablement by deposit. See deposit (6).

enablement requirement. Patents. The rule that the specification of a patent application must describe the invention so that a person with ordinary skill in the art could make and use the invention without undue experimentation. • A specification that meets this requirement is referred to as enabling. Cf. enabling source. [Cases: Patents C>99.]

enabling act. See enabling statute under statute.

enabling clause. See clause.

enabling disclosure. See description (5).

enabling power. See power of appointment.

enabling source. Patents. A document that defeats the patentability of an invention because the information provided made it possible — before the patent application was filed — for a person skilled in the art to make the invention. Cf. enabling requirement.

en recouvrement (on ray-koo-vra-mon). [French “for purpose of recovery”] French law. An indorsement on a bill of exchange that does not transfer the property in the bill of exchange but merely gives the indorsee the authority to recover the amount of the bill.

enregistrement (on-ray-zhees-tro-mon), n. [French] French law. Registration. • This formality is performed by a clerk who inscribes a government register with a summary analysis of a deed or other document. The clerk then puts a stamped or sealed note on the deed or document, indicating the date on which it was registered.

enrichment. (17c) The receipt of a benefit. Cf. unjust enrichment.

enroll, vb. (14c) 1. To register or transcribe (a legal document, as a deed) into an official record on execution. — Formerly also spelled inroll. 2. To prepare (a bill passed by the legislature) for the executive’s signature. Cf. engross. [Cases: Statutes C ≥ 37] enrolled, adj. Registered; recorded.

enrolled agent. One who, though neither a certified public accountant nor an attorney, has been admitted to practice before the IRS, either by passing an examination or by working for the IRS in a technical area for at least five years. • The enrolled agent is one of four types of persons who are allowed to practice before the IRS, the other three being attorneys, certified public accountants, and persons who are admitted to represent either themselves or others in a particular case. [Cases: Internal Revenue C ≥ 4444.]

enrolled-bill rule. (1914) The conclusive presumption that a statute, once formalized, appears precisely as the legislature intended, thereby preventing any challenge to the drafting of the bill. [Cases: Statutes C ≥ 283(2).]

"Under the 'enrolled bill rule,' an enrolled bill, properly authenticated and approved by the governor, is conclusive as to regularity of its enactment. Ordinarily, the courts will not go behind the enrolled bill to determine its validity. The supreme court can look behind the enrolled bill only to determine whether the constitutional mandate relative to vote and journal entry upon the final passage have been complied with." National Conference of State Legislatures, Mason’s Manual of Legislative Procedure § 702, at 497 (2000) enrollment, n. The act of recording or registering. — Also spelled (archaically) inrollment.

enrollment of vessels. Maritime law. The recording and certification of vessels used in coastal or inland navigation, as distinguished from the “registration” of vessels used in foreign commerce. • Enrollment and registry are used to distinguish certificates granted to two classes of vessels. Enrollment evidences the national character of a vessel engaged in coasting trade or home traffic; registry is used to declare the nationality of a vessel engaged in foreign trade. Cf. registry (2). [Cases: Shipping C ≥ 6] Enrollment Office. Hist. A department of the Court of Chancery responsible for storing enrolled deeds and judgments. • The Enrollment Office was abolished in 1879; its duties were transferred to the Central Office.

en route (en or on root). [French] On the way; in the course of transportation or travel.

enschedule, vb. Archaic. To insert in a list, account, or writing.

enseal, vb. Archaic. To seal (a document).

enserver (en-sor-var), vb. [Law French] To make subject to a service or servitude.

ens legis (enz lee-jis). [Law Latin] A creature of the law; an artificial being as opposed to a natural person. • The term describes an entity, such as a corporation, that derives its existence entirely from the law.

entail, n. (14c) A fee abridged or limited to the owner's issue or class of issue rather than descending to all the heirs. See BARRING OF ENTAIL; FEE TAIL. — Also termed (in Scots law) tailzie. [Cases: Estates in Property C=12]. — entailable, adj.

"Entail is fee entailed, viz; abridged, limited, and tied to certain conditions at the will of the donor; where lands are given to, or settled on others." The Pocket Lawyer and Family Conveyancer 97 (3d ed. 1833).

quasi-entail. An estate pur autre vie that is granted to a person and the heirs of the person's body. • The interest so granted is not properly an estate-tail (because it is not granted by inheritance), but it is similar enough that the interest will go to the heir of the body as special occupant during the life of the cestui que vie, in the same manner as an estate of inheritance would descend if limited to the grantee and the heirs of his body.

entail, vb. (14c) 1. To make necessary; to involve <responding to this onerous discovery will entail countless hours of work>. 2. To limit the inheritance of (an estate) to only the owner’s issue or class of issue, so that none of the heirs can transfer the estate <the grantor entailed the property through a so-called “tail female”>. See FEE TAIL. [Cases: Wills C=604]. — entailable, adj.

entailed, adj. Settled or limited to specified heirs or in tail <entailed gifts>.

entailed estate. See FEE TAIL.

entitled interest. See INTEREST (2).

entendment. Archaic. See INTENDMENT.

entente (ahn-tahnt). [French “intent, understanding”] (19c) Int’l law. 1. An understanding that two or more nations have for carrying out a common policy or course of action. • An entente is looser than an alliance but stronger than the nations’ merely having good relations. 2. The nations having such an understanding. Cf. ALLIANCE; DÉTENTE.

enter, vb. (13c) 1. To come or go into; esp., to go onto (real property) by right of entry so as to take possession <the landlord entered the defaulting tenant’s premises>. 2. To put formally before a court or on the record <the defendant entered a plea of no contest>. 3. To become a party to <they entered into an agreement>. See ENTRY.

enterceur (en-tar-sar), n. [Law French] A party claiming goods; one who has placed goods in the hands of a third party.

enterpledger. Archaic. See INTERPLEADER (1).

enterprise, n. (15c) 1. An organization or venture, esp. for business purposes.

governmental enterprise. An enterprise undertaken by a governmental body, such as a parks department that creates a public park. — Also termed government enterprise.

To receive (a person) as a guest or provide hospitality to (a person). 4. Parliamentary law. To recognize and state (a motion); to receive and take into consideration <the chair will entertain the motion>.

entertainment expense. See EXPENSE.

entertainment law. (1953) The field of law dealing with the legal and business issues in the entertainment industry (such as film, music, and theater), and involving the representation of artists and producers, the negotiation of contracts, and the protection of intellectual-property rights.

enticce, vb. (14c) To lure or induce; esp., to wrongfully solicit (a person) to do something.

enticement, n. (14c) 1. The act or an instance of wrongfully soliciting or luring a person to do something. 2. Hist. The tort of inducing a man’s wife to leave him or to remain away from him against his will. [Cases: Seduction $\supseteq 1$–26.]

enticement of a child. Criminal law. The act or offense of inviting, persuading, or attempting to persuade a child to enter a vehicle, building, room, or secluded place with the intent of committing an unlawful sexual act against the child. — Often shortened to enticement. [Cases: Infants $\supseteq 13$.]

enticement of a parent. Rare. Torts. The tortious interference with a child’s rights and interests in maintaining the parent—child relationship, usu. caused by a third person who induces a parent to abandon the child. • Actions based on enticement, where they are recognized, are rarely successful because many states do not recognize a child’s legal right to a parent’s consortium or affection.

entire, adj. 1. Whole; complete in all its parts. 2. Not divisible into parts.

entire-agreement clause. (1960) 1. INTEGRATION CLAUSE. 2. A provision in an insurance contract stating that the entire agreement between the insured and insurer is contained in the contract, often including the application (if attached), declarations, insuring agreement, exclusions, conditions, and endorsements. • Also termed entire-contract clause. [Cases: Insurance $\supseteq 1838$, 1856.]

entire benefit. See entire use under use (4).

entire blood. See full blood under BLOOD.

entire-contract clause. See entire-agreement clause.

entire-controversy doctrine. (1970) The principle that a plaintiff or defendant who does not assert all claims or defenses related to the controversy in a legal proceeding is not entitled to assert those claims or defenses in a later proceeding. • Also termed single-controversy doctrine. Cf. compulsory counterclaim under counterclaim; res judicata (2). [Cases: Action $\supseteq 53$; Judgment $\supseteq 591$.]

entire day. See day.

entire interest. See interest (2).

entire-output contract. See output contract under CONTRACT.

entire tenancy. See TENANCY.

entirety (en-ti-ar-tee). (16c) 1. The whole, as opposed to a moiety or part. 2. Something (such as certain judgments and contracts) that the law considers incapable of being divided into parts.

entirety, tenancy by the. See estate by entirety under ESTATE (1).

entirety clause. Oil & gas. A mineral-lease or deed provision specifying that royalties must be apportioned if the property is subdivided after the lease is granted. • For the lessee, the clause makes it clear that the lessee’s duties will increase if the lessor transfers a part of the leased premises. For the lessor, the clause avoids the nonapportionment rule. [Cases: Mines and Minerals $\supseteq 79.13$.]

entire use. See use (4).

entitle, vb. (14c) 1. To grant a legal right to or qualify for. 2. Eccles. law. To ordain as a minister. — Formerly also spelled intitle.

entitlement. (19c) An absolute right to a (usu. monetary) benefit, such as social security, granted immediately upon meeting a legal requirement. [Cases: Social Security and Public Welfare $\supseteq 4.10$.]

entitlement program. A government program guaranteeing certain benefits, such as financial aid or government-provided services, to people or entities that meet the criteria set by law. • Some examples of entitlement programs are unemployment benefits, Social Security, food stamps, and agricultural price-support plans. Qualified beneficiaries have an enforceable right to participate in the programs. [Cases: Social Security and Public Welfare $\supseteq 4.10$.]

entity. An organization (such as a business or a governmental unit) that has a legal identity apart from its members or owners.

corporate entity. A corporation’s status as an organization existing independently of its shareholders. • As a separate entity, a corporation can, in its own name, sue and be sued, lend and borrow money, and buy, sell, lease, and mortgage property. [Cases: Corporations $\supseteq 1.3$.]

public entity. A governmental entity, such as a state government or one of its political subdivisions.

entity assumption. (1972) The presumption that a business is a unit separate from its owners and from other firms.

entity theory of partnership. (1916) The theory that a partnership is an entity with a legal existence apart from the partners who make it up. • Under the Uniform Partnership Act, “[a] partnership is an entity distinct from its partners.” UPA § 201 (1994). Cf. aggregate theory of partnership. [Cases: Partnership $\supseteq 63$.]

entrapment, n. (1899) 1. A law-enforcement officer’s or government agent’s inducement of a person to commit a crime, by means of fraud or undue persuasion, in an attempt to later bring a criminal prosecution against that person. [Cases: Criminal Law $\supseteq 37$.] 2. The affirmative defense of having been so induced. • To establish entrapment (in most states), the defendant must show that he or she would not have committed the crime but for the fraud or undue persuasion. — entrap, vb.

"Entrapment, so-called, is a relatively simple and very desirable concept which was unfortunately misnamed, with some resulting confusion. It is socially desirable for criminals to be apprehended and brought to justice. And there is nothing whatever wrong or out of place in setting traps for those bent on crime, provided the traps are not so arranged as likely to result in offenses by persons other than those who are ready to commit them. What the State cannot tolerate is having crime instigated by its officers..." who are charged with the duty of enforcing the law. . . . Obviously 'entrapment' is not the appropriate word to express the idea of official investigation of crime, but it is so firmly entrenched that it seems wiser to accept it with due explanation than attempt to supplant it . . . * Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 1161 (3d ed. 1982).

derivative entrapment. Entrapment in which the government uses a private person, acting either as an agent of the government or as an unwitting participant, to induce the subject of the entrapment to commit a crime. [Cases: Criminal Law C=>37(5).]

objective entrapment. Entrapment as judged by focusing on egregious law-enforcement conduct, not on the defendant's predisposition. [Cases: Criminal Law C=>37(2.1).]

sentencing entrapment. Entrapment of a defendant who is predisposed to commit a lesser offense but who is unlawfully induced to commit a more serious offense that carries a more severe sentence. — Also termed sentence-factor manipulation.

entrebâ (on-tra-ba), n. [Law French] An intruder or interloper.

entrepôt (on-tra-poh), n. [French] (18c) French law. A building or place where goods from abroad may be deposited and from which those goods may then be exported to another country without paying a duty.

entryman (en-tree-mon), n. Archaic. A person who enters public land and stakes a claim with the intention of settling.

entry of judgment. (17c) The ministerial recording of a court's final decision, usu. by noting it in a judgment book or civil docket. Cf. RENDITION OF JUDGMENT. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure C=>2621; Judgment C=>270–284.]

entry on the roll. Hist. 1. A clerk's notation on a parchment roll of the proceedings and issues in a particular case. • Before parties began submitting written pleadings, they would appear (in person or through counsel) in open court and state their respective contentions orally until they settled on the issue or precise point in dispute. During the progress of these oral statements, an appointed officer of the court would make minutes of the various proceedings on a parchment roll that... then became the official record of the suit. Even after the practice of oral pleadings had fallen into disuse, proceedings continued to be entered "on the roll." This practice was abolished early in the 19th century. 2. A future interest created in a transferor who conveys an estate on condition subsequent.

environmental criminology. See CRIMINOLOGY.

environmental effect. (1967) Environmental law. A natural or artificial disturbance of the physical, chemical, or biological components that make up the environment.

environmental-impact statement. (1971) Environmental law. 1. A document that the National Environmental Policy Act (42 USCA § 4332(2)(c)) requires a federal agency to produce for a major project or legislative proposal so that better decisions can be made about the positive and negative environmental effects of an undertaking. 2. In some states, a public document used by a government agency to analyze the significant environmental effects of a proposed project, to identify alternatives, and to disclose possible ways to reduce or avoid possible environmental damage. — Abbr. EIS. — Also termed environmental-impact report (EIR). [Cases: Environmental Law C=571–615.]

environmental law. (1971) The field of law dealing with the maintenance and protection of the environment, including preventive measures such as the requirements of environmental-impact statements, as well as measures to assign liability and provide cleanup for incidents that harm the environment. • Because most environmental litigation involves disputes with governmental agencies, environmental law is heavily intertwined with administrative law. [Cases: Environmental Law C=1.]

Environmental Protection Agency. An independent federal agency in the executive branch responsible for setting pollution-control standards in the areas of air, water, solid waste, pesticides, radiation, and toxic materials; enforcing laws enacted to protect the environment; and coordinating the antipollution efforts of state and local governments. • The commission was created by Reorganization Plan No.3 of 1970. — Abbr. EPR. abbr. EMERGENCY PREPAREDNESS AND RESPONSE DIRECTORATE.

EPS. abbr. EARNINGS PER SHARE.

Equal Access Act of 1984. A federal law that prohibits school districts receiving federal funds and allowing extracurricular activities to be held in its facilities from denying secondary-school students the right to meet for religious and other purposes in public-school facilities. 20 USCA § 4071. • The constitutionality of the Act was upheld in Board of Education of Westside Community Schools v. Mergens, 496 U.S. 226, 110 S.Ct. 2356 (1990). [Cases: Schools C≈72.]

equal-access rule. (1989) Criminal law. The doctrine that contraband found on a defendant’s premises will not support a conviction if other persons have the same access to the premises as the defendant. • To invoke this defense successfully, the defendant must show that other persons did in fact have equal access to the premises; speculative evidence that trespassers might have come onto the premises will not bar a conviction. [Cases: Controlled Substances C≈30.]

equal and uniform taxation. See TAXATION.

Equal Credit Opportunity Act. A federal statute that prohibits creditors from discriminating against credit applicants on the basis of race, color, religion, national origin, age, sex, or marital status with respect to any aspect of a credit transaction. 15 USCA §§ 1691(a)–(f). — Abbr. ECOA. [Cases: Consumer Credit C≈31.]

equal degree. See DEGREE.
equal-dignities rule. Agency. The doctrine that an agent can perform all acts requiring a writing signed by the principal only if the agent's authority is set forth in a writing. • This rule is an adjunct to the statute of frauds and applies when one or more of the signatories to a contract acted through an agent. [Cases: Principal and Agent (12).]

Equal Employment Opportunity Commission. An independent federal commission that investigates claims of employment discrimination based on race, color, religion, sex, national origin, or age and enforces antidiscrimination statutes through lawsuits. • It was created by Title VII of the Civil Rights Act of 1964. The EEOC encourages mediation and other nonlitigious means of resolving employment disputes. A claimant must file a charge of discrimination with the EEOC before pursuing a claim under Title VII of the Civil Rights Act and certain other employment-related statutes. — Abbr. EEOC. [Cases: Civil Rights (1503).]

equal-footing doctrine. (1949) The principle that a state admitted to the Union after 1789 enters with the same rights, sovereignty, and jurisdiction within its borders as did the original 13 states.

equality. (15c) The quality or state of being equal; esp., likeness in power or political status. See equal protection.

"We need not repeat the burning irony of Anatole France: 'The law in its majesty draws no distinction but forbids rich and poor alike from begging in the streets or from sleeping in the public parks.' Equality is meaningless under unequal conditions." Morris R. Cohen, Reason and Law 101 (1961).

documental equality. The sharing of governmental decisions in such a way that, in the setting of governmental policies, the preference of each citizen is assigned an equal value.

equality before the law. (18c) The status or condition of being treated fairly according to regularly established norms of justice; esp., in British constitutional law, the notion that all persons are subject to the ordinary law of the land administered by the ordinary law courts, that officials and others are not exempt from the general duty of obedience to the law, that discretionary governmental powers must not be abused, and that the task of superintending the operation of law rests with an impartial, independent judiciary.

"A number of distinct meanings are normally given to the provision that there should be equality before the law. One meaning is that equality before the law only connotes the equal subjection of all to a common system of law, whatever its content ... A second theory asserts that equality before the law is basically a procedural concept, pertaining to the application and enforcement of laws and the operation of the legal system. ... A third meaning normally borne by declarations that all are equal before the law, perhaps no more than a variant of the second, is that State and individual before the law should be equal." Polivyos G. Polyviou, The Equal Protection of the Laws 1-2 (1980).

equality of states. Int'l law. The doctrine that all fully independent nations are equal under international law. • This doctrine does not, of course, mean that all nations are equal in power or influence, but merely that, as nations, they all have the same legal rights.

equalization, n. (18c) 1. The raising or lowering of assessed values to achieve conformity with values in surrounding areas. 2. Tax. The adjustment of an assessment or tax to create a rate uniform with another. — Also termed equalization of taxes; fair and proper legal assessment. [Cases: Taxation (7)]. equalization board. (1875) A local governmental agency responsible for adjusting the tax rates in different districts to ensure an equitable distribution of the tax burden. — Also termed board of equalization. [Cases: Taxation (2621-2634)]. equalization of taxes. See equalization (2). equalize, vb. To make equal; to cause to correspond or be the same in amount or degree. equal-knowledge rule. Georgia law. The principle that a complainant who was at least as aware as the defendant of the danger has no grounds for recovery because the consequences could have been readily avoided. Cf. superi or-knowledge rule. [Cases: Negligence (506(2))].
equally divided. (16c) 1. (Of property) apportioned per capita—not per stirpes—among heirs on the testator's death. • A provision in a will calling for property to be divided "share and share alike" has the same effect. [Cases: Wills (530)]. 2. (Of a court, legislature, or other group) having the same number of votes on each side of an issue or dispute.
equal-management rule. The doctrine that each spouse alone may manage community property unless the law provides otherwise. Cf. head-and-master rule. [Cases: Husband and Wife (265)].
equal-opportunity employer. See employer. equal-or-superior-knowledge rule. See superior-knowledge rule.

Equal Pay Act. A federal law mandating that all who perform substantially the same work must be paid equally. 29 USCA § 206. [Cases: Labor and Employment (2452)]. equal protection. (1866) The 14th Amendment guarantee that the government must treat a person or class of persons the same as it treats other persons or classes in like circumstances. • In today's constitutional jurisprudence, equal protection means that legislation that discriminates must have a rational basis for doing so. And if the legislation affects a fundamental right (such as the right to vote) or involves a suspect classification (such as race), it is unconstitutional unless it can withstand strict scrutiny. — Also termed equal protection of the laws; equal protection under the law. See rational-basis test; strict scrutiny. [Cases: Constitutional Law (3000-3833)].

"Equal protection does not require that all persons be dealt with identically, but it does require that a distinction made have some relevance to the purpose for which the clas-equipment

equipment trust. A financing device commonly used by railroads in which a trustee and the railroad together buy equipment from a manufacturer, with the trustee providing most of the purchase price, and the trustee then leases the equipment to the railroad, which pays a rental fee comprising interest, amortization for serial retirement, and the trustee’s fee. See equipment trust certificate; equipment trust bond under bond (3).

equipment trust bond. See bond (3).

equipment trust certificate. A security, usu. issued by a railroad, to pay for new equipment. • Title to the equipment is held by a trustee until the note has been paid off. — Also termed car trust certificate; trust certificate. See equipment trust.

equitable (ek-wi-ta-bal), adj. (16c) 1. Just; consistent with principles of justice and right. 2. Existing in equity; available or sustainable by an action in equity, or under the rules and principles of equity.

equitable abstention. See abstention.

equitable action. See action in equity under action (4).

equitable-adjustment theory. (1979) The doctrine that in settling a federal contract dispute, the contracting officer should make a fair adjustment within a reasonable time before the contractor has to settle with its subcontractors, suppliers, and other creditors. [Cases: United States C—70(20).]

equitable adoption. See adoption by estoppel under adoption (1).

equitable asset. See asset.

equitable assignment. See assignment (2).

equitable-benefit doctrine. Bankruptcy. The principle that allows a bankruptcy court to grant preferred status to claims for service rendered by persons other than bankruptcy officers, to the extent that the service benefited the estate, when the person filing the claim acted primarily for the benefit of the estate as a whole. [Cases: Bankruptcy C==2871.]

equitable distribution. (1893) Family law. The division of marital property by a court in a divorce proceeding, under statutory guidelines that provide for a fair, but not necessarily equal, distribution of the property between the spouses. • With equitable distribution, when a marriage ends in divorce, property acquired during the marriage is divided equitably between the spouses regardless of who holds title to the property. The courts consider many factors in awarding property, including a spouse’s monetary contributions, nonmonetary assistance to a spouse’s career or earning potential, the efforts of each spouse during the marriage, and the length of the marriage. The court may take into account the relative earning capacity of the spouses. and the fault of either spouse. Equitable distribution is applied in 47 states (i.e., all the states except California, Louisiana, and New Mexico, which are "equal division" community property states). — Also termed equitable division; assignment of property. Cf. title division; community property. [Cases: Divorce ☞248.]

equitable-parent doctrine. Family law. The principle that a spouse who is not the biological parent of a child born or conceived during the marriage may, in a divorce action, be considered the child’s natural father or mother if (1) the other spouse and the child both acknowledge a parent–child relationship, esp. when that other spouse has cooperated in the development of this relationship before the divorce action, (2) the nonbiologically related spouse wants parental rights, and (3) he or she is willing to take on the responsibility of paying support. • The doctrine sometimes applies to nonspousal partners as well. Very few jurisdictions apply the doctrine. See Carolee Kvoriak Lezuch, Michigan’s Doctrine of Equitable Parenthood, 45 Wayne L. Rev. 1529 (1999). — Also termed equitable-parent doctrine. [Cases: Child Custody ☞274; Child Support ☞31; Children Out-of-Wedlock ☞1; Parent and Child ☞15.] equitable recoupment. (1878) 1. Tax. A doctrine allowing a taxpayer to offset previously overpaid taxes against current taxes due, even though the taxpayer is time-barred from claiming a refund on the previous taxes. [Cases: Internal Revenue ☞4829.10.] 2. Tax. A doctrine allowing the government to offset taxes previously uncollected from a taxpayer against the taxpayer’s current claim for a refund, even though the government is time-barred from collecting the previous taxes. • In both senses, this type of recoupment can be asserted only if the statute of limitations has created an inequitable result. See recoupment (2). [Cases: Internal Revenue ☞4845.] 3. A principle that diminishes a party’s right to recover a debt to the extent that the party holds money or property of the debtor to which the party has no right. • This doctrine is ordinarily a defensive remedy going only to mitigation of damages. The doctrine is sometimes applied so that a claim for a tax refund that is barred by limitations may nonetheless be recouped against a tax claim of the government. — Also termed equitable-recoupment doctrine. See setoff; recoupment (3). [Cases: Set-off and Counterclaim ☞6.] equitable relief. See equitable remedy under remedy.

equitable tolling. (1967) 1. The doctrine that the statute of limitations will not bar a claim if the plaintiff, despite diligent efforts, did not discover the injury until after the limitations period had expired. • Equitable tolling does not require misconduct by the defendant. [Cases: Limitation of Actions ☞104.5.] 2. The doctrine that if a plaintiff files a suit first in one court and then refiles in another, the statute of limitations does not run while the litigation is pending in the first court if various requirements are met. • Among those requirements are (1) timely notice to the defendant; (2) no prejudice to the defendant; and (3) reasonable and good-faith conduct on the part of the plaintiff.

equity, n. (14c) 1. Fairness; impartiality; evenhanded dealing <the company's policies require managers to use equity in dealing with subordinate employees>. 2. The body of principles constituting what is fair and right; natural law <the concept of "inalienable rights" reflects the influence of equity on the Declaration of Independence>. 3. The recourse to principles of justice to correct or supplement the law as applied to particular circumstances <the judge decided the case by equity because the statute did not fully address the issue>. — Also termed natural equity. [Cases: Equity C—1]. 4. The system of law or body of principles originating in the English Court of Chancery and superseding the common and statute law (together called "law" in the narrower sense) when the two conflict <in appealing to the equity of the court, she was appealing to the "king's conscience">; CHANCERY (2).

"Equity is that system of justice which was developed in and administered by the High Court of Chancery in England in the exercise of its extraordinary jurisdiction. This definition is rather suggestive than precise; and invites inquiry rather than answers it. This must necessarily be so. Equity, in its technical and scientific legal sense, means neither natural justice nor even all that portion of natural justice which is susceptible of being judicially enforced. It has, when employed in the language of English law, a precise, definite and limited signification, and is used to denote a system of justice which was administered in a particular court — the nature and extent of which system cannot be defined in a single sentence, but can be understood and explained only by studying the history of that court, and the principles upon which it acts. In order to begin to understand what equity is, it is necessary to understand what the English High Court of Chancery was, and how it came to exercise what is known as its extraordinary jurisdiction. Every true definition of equity must, therefore, be, to a greater or lesser extent, a history." George T. Bispham, _The Principles of Equity_ 1-2 (23rd ed. 1947).

"In its technical sense, equity may ... be defined as a portion of natural justice which, although of a nature more suitable for judicial enforcement, was for historical reasons, not enforced by the Common Law Courts, an omission which was supplied by the Court of Chancery. In short, the whole distinction between equity and law is not so much a matter of substance or principle as of form and history." R.E. Megarry, _Smell's Principles of Equity_ 2 (23rd ed. 1947).

"The term 'equity' is an illustration of Mr. Towkington's proposition that some words have a legal meaning very unlike their ordinary one. In ordinary language 'equity' means natural justice; but the beginner must get the idea out of his head when dealing with the system that the lawyers call equity. Originally, indeed, this system was inspired by ideas of natural justice, and that is why it acquired its name; but nowadays equity is no more (and no less) natural justice than the common law, and it is in fact nothing else than a particular branch of the law of England. Equity, therefore, is law. The student should not allow himself to be confused by the lawyer's habit of contrasting 'law' and 'equity,' for in this context 'law' is simply an abbreviation for the common law. Equity is law in the sense that it is part of the law of England; it is not law only in the sense that it is not part of the common law." — Glanville Williams, _Learning the Law_ 25-26 (11th ed. 1982).

5. A right, interest, or remedy recognizable by a court of equity <there was no formal contract formation, so they sued for breach in equity>. [Cases: Equity C—1] contravening equity (kon-tra-veen-ing). (1888) A right or interest that is inconsistent with or contrary to a right sought to be enforced.

countervailing equity (kown-tar-vayl-ing). (1824) A contrary and balancing equity, equally deserving of consideration.

latent equity (lay-tant). (18c) An equitable claim or right known only by the parties for and against whom it exists, or that has been concealed from one who is interested in the subject matter. — Also termed secret equity.

perfect equity. (1821) An equitable title or right that, to be a legal title, lacks only the formal conveyance or other investiture that would make it cognizable at law; esp., the equity of a real estate purchaser who has paid the full amount due but has not yet received a deed.

6. The right to decide matters in equity; equity jurisdiction <the court decided that the wrong was egregious enough to ignore the statute of limitations and decide the case in equity>. [Cases: Equity C—1] 7. The amount by which the value of or an interest in property exceeds secured claims or liens; the difference between the value of the property and all encumbrances upon it <thanks to the real-estate boom, the mortgaged house still had high equity>. — Also termed cushion.

negative equity. The difference between the value of an asset and the outstanding amount of the loan secured by the asset when the asset's current value is less than the loan's balance.

8. An ownership interest in property, esp. in a business <the founders gave her equity in the business in return for all her help>. See OWNERS' EQUITY; BOOK EQUITY; MARKET EQUITY. 9. A share in a publicly traded company <he did not want to cash in his equity>.

equity, bill in. See BILL (2).

equity, court of. See COURT.

equity accounting method. See ACCOUNTING METHOD.

equity capital. See CAPITAL.

equity contra legem (kon-tra lee-jam). _Int'l law_. The use of equity in derogation of the law, where, under the circumstances of the case, an exception to the law is needed to achieve an equitable and just result. — Sometimes equity financing. See FINANCING. equity insolvency. See INSOLVENCY.
equity intra legem (in-tra lee-jam). A court’s power to interpret and apply the law to achieve the most equitable result. — Sometimes shortened to intra legem. — Also written equity infra legem. Cf. EQUITY CONTRA LEGEM.
equity jurisdiction. See JURISDICTION.
equity jurisprudence. See JURISPRUDENCE.
equity of redemption. Real estate. The right of a mortgagor in default to recover property before a foreclosure sale by paying the principal, interest, and other costs that are due. • A defaulting mortgagor with an equity of redemption has the right, until the foreclosure sale, to reimburse the mortgagee and cure the default. In many jurisdictions, the mortgagor also has a statutory right to redeem within six months after the foreclosure sale, and the mortgagor becomes entitled to any surplus from the sale proceeds above the amount of the outstanding mortgage. — Also termed right of redemption. See EXONERATION.
equity of partners. The right of each partner to have the firm’s property applied to the firm’s debts. [Cases: Partnership C—179,] equity of redemption. Real estate. The right of a mortgagor in default to recover property before a foreclosure sale by paying the principal, interest, and other costs that are due. • A defaulting mortgagor with an equity of redemption has the right, until the foreclosure sale, to reimburse the mortgagee and cure the default. In many jurisdictions, the mortgagor also has a statutory right to redeem within six months after the foreclosure sale, and the mortgagor becomes entitled to any surplus from the sale proceeds above the amount of the outstanding mortgage. — Also termed right of redemption. See EXONERATION.
equity of subrogation. (1850) The right of a person who is secondarily liable on a debt to personally enforce any right that the original creditor could have pursued against the debtor, including the right to foreclose on any security held by the creditor and any right that the creditor may have to contribution from others who are liable for the debt. — Also termed right of subrogation; (in Scots law) right of relief. See SUBROGATION. [Cases: Subrogation C—1.]
equity-of-the-statute rule. (1959) In statutory construction, the principle that a statute should be interpreted according to the legislators’ purpose and intent, even if this interpretation goes beyond the literal meaning of the text. • Under this little-used rule, for example, if a statute defines jury-tampering to include a party’s “giving a juror food or drink,” the giving of cigars to a juror would also fall within that definition. Cf. GOLDEN RULE; MISCHIEF RULE; PLAIN-MEANING RULE. [Cases: Statutes C—189.] equity participation. (1947) The inclusion of a lender in the equity ownership of a project as a condition of the lender’s granting a loan. — Also termed equity kicker.
equity pleading. See PLEADING (2). equity praeter legem (pree-tar lee-jam) The use of equity to fill a gap in the law. — Sometimes shortened to praeter legem. equity ratio. 1. The percentage relationship between a purchaser’s equity value (esp. the amount of a down payment) and the property value. 2. The measure of a shareholder’s equity divided by total equity.
equity security. See SECURITY.
equity stock. See STOCK.
equity term. See TERM (5).
equity to a settlement. (1838) A wife’s equitable right, arising when her husband sues in equity for the reduction of her equitable estate to his own possession, to have all or part of that estate settled upon herself and her children. — Also termed wife’s equity; wife’s settlement. [Cases: Husband and Wife C—12.] equivalence of advantages. See RECIPROCITY (2). equivalent, adj. (15c) 1. Equal in value, force, amount, effect, or significance. 2. Corresponding in effect or function; nearly equal; virtually identical.
equivalent, n. Patents. An element that (1) existed before another element; (2) can perform the same function as the other element; and (3) is recognizable as a substitute for the other element. • For instance, mechanical devices are equivalents when one skilled in the art would have recognized that each device would produce the same result. If the equivalent is known at the time an invention is conceived, the invention’s patentability may be questioned. See ANALOG. [Cases: Patents C—237.]

"A mortgage is technically a conveyance of title to property as security for a debt. The law courts, with typical technicality, early adopted the rule that if the debt was not paid on the very day it was due, the debtor lost his land. The equity courts, however, with more liberality, and with more of a recognition of the real purpose of the transaction, recognized the fact that the securing of the debt, rather than the act of conveyance of title was the principal thing giving character to the transaction. Accordingly they alleviated the severity of the legal rule by, in effect, giving the land back to the debtor if he would pay the debt, even though it had not been paid on time. This equitable right to redeem, even after default in paying the debt when it was due, was called the ‘equity of redemption.’" Charles Herman Kinnane, A First Book on Anglo-American Law 309 (2d ed. 1952). equivalents doctrine. See DOCTRINE OF EQUIVALENTS.
equivocal (é-kwiv-ə-kal), adj. (17c) 1. Of doubtful character; questionable. 2. Having more than one meaning or sense; ambiguous.

equuleus (ék-wool-ee-as), n. [Latin] Roman law. A rack in the shape of a horse, used for torture.

ERA. abbr. equal rights amendment.

erase, vb. (14c) 1. To rub or scrape out (something written); to obliterate. 2. To obliterate (recorded material). 3. To seal (criminal records) from disclosure. [Cases: Criminal Law ⊃ 1226(3); Records ⊃ 32.] — erasure, n.

Erastian (i-ras-chan or i-ras-tee-an). (17c) Hist. A follower of Thomas Erastus (1524–1583), who thought that offenses against religion and morality should be punished by the civil power and not by the censures of the church. • As a sect, Erastians had great influence in England, particularly among 17th-century common-law lawyers.

erasure of record. See expungement of record.

erciscundus (ér-sis-kan-dás), adj. [Latin] Civil law. To be divided. • A suit judicium familiae erciscundae was one to partition an inheritance.

erect, vb. (15c) 1. To construct. 2. To establish. • In England, erect is one of the formal words of incorporation in a royal charter, being part of the phrase, "We do incorporate, erect, ordain, name, constitute, and establish." See erigimus.

ercotic dysfunction. See impotence.

E reorganization. See reorganization (2).

erigimus (i-rij-ə-mas). [Latin] Hist. We erect. • This was one of the words used in a corporation’s royal charter. See erect (2).

ERISA (ee-ə-ris-ə), abbr. employee retirement income security act.

eristic (e-ris-tik), adj. Of or relating to controversy or disputation. • Also termed eristical.
See ASSIGNMENT OF ERROR. [Cases: Appeal and Error 772–773; Federal Courts 774–775.]

Caldwell error. The constitutionally impermissible error of resting a death sentence on a determination made by a sentencer who has been led to believe that the responsibility for determining the appropriateness of the defendant’s death sentence lies elsewhere. Caldwell v. Mississippi, 472 U.S. 320, 105 S.Ct. 2633 (1985). • The error most often occurs when the prosecutor or the judge tells the jury that the death sentence, if inappropriate, may be overturned on appeal. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment 1780(2).] clear error. (18c) A trial judge’s decision or action that appears to a reviewing court to have been unquestionably erroneous. • Even though a clear error occurred, it may not warrant reversal. — Also termed clear and unmistakable error. [Cases: Appeal and Error 999(1), 1008.1(7); Criminal Law 1030(1); Federal Courts 850.1.]

clerical error. (18c) An error resulting from a minor mistake or inadvertence, esp. in writing or copying something on the record, and not from judicial reasoning or determination. • Among the boundless examples of clerical errors are omitting an appendix from a document; typing an incorrect number; mistranscribing a word; and failing to log a call. A court can correct a clerical error at any time, even after judgment has been entered. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(a); Fed. R. Crim. P. 36. — Also termed scrivener’s error; vitium clericis. See VITIUM SCRIBITORIS. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure 2653; Judgment 306.]

cross-error. (1838) An error brought by the party responding to a writ of error.

cumulative error. The prejudicial effect of two or more trial errors that may have been harmless individually. • The cumulative effect of multiple harmless errors may amount to reversible error. See CUMULATIVE-ERROR ANALYSIS. [Cases: Appeal and Error 1026; Criminal Law 1186.1; Federal Courts 891.]

error apparent of record. See plain error.

error in vacuo. See harmless error.

fatal error. See reversible error.

fundamental error. See plain error.

harmful error. See reversible error.

harmless error. (1851) An error that does not affect a party’s substantive rights or the case’s outcome. • A harmless error is not grounds for reversal. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 61; Fed. R. Crim. P. 52. — Also termed technical error; error in vacuo. Cf. substantial error. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure 764; Appeal and Error 1025–1074; Criminal Law 1162; Federal Courts 891.]

invited error. (1893) An error that a party cannot complain of on appeal because the party, through conduct, encouraged or prompted the trial court to make the erroneous ruling. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure 742; Appeal and Error 882; Criminal Law 1137.]

manifest constitutional error. (1983) An error by the trial court that has an identifiably negative impact on the trial to such a degree that the constitutional rights of a party are compromised. • A manifest constitutional error can be reviewed by a court of appeals even if the appellant did not object at trial.

manifest error. (18c) An error that is plain and indisputable, and that amounts to a complete disregard of the controlling law or the credible evidence in the record. [Cases: Appeal and Error 999(1), 1008.1(7); Criminal Law 1030(1).] obvious error. See obvious error.

plain error. (1801) An error that is so obvious and prejudicial that an appellate court should address it despite the parties’ failure to raise a proper objection at trial. • A plain error is often said to be so obvious and substantial that failure to correct it would infringe a party’s due-process rights and damage the integrity of the judicial process. See Fed. R. Evid. 103(d). — Also termed fundamental error; error apparent of record. [Cases: Appeal and Error 181; Criminal Law 1030; Federal Courts 611.] reissuable error. See reissuable error.

reversible error. (1855) An error that affects a party’s substantive rights or the case’s outcome, and thus is grounds for reversal if the party properly objected at trial. • A plain error is often said to be so obvious and substantial that failure to correct it would infringe a party’s due-process rights and damage the integrity of the judicial process. See Fed. R. Evid. 103(d). — Also termed harmful error; prejudicial error; fatal error. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure 764; Appeal and Error 1025–1074; Criminal Law 1162; Federal Courts 891.] scrivener’s error. See clerical error.

substantial error. An error that affects a party’s substantive rights or the outcome of the case. • A substantial error may require reversal on appeal. Cf. harmless error. [Cases: Appeal and Error 181; Federal Courts 891.]

technical error. See harmless error.

3. An appeal as proceeding in error.

error, assignment of. See ASSIGNMENT OF ERROR.

error, writ of. See WRIT OF ERROR.

"If it occurs in a judgment and is fully evident, no appeal is necessary. The judge himself may correct it. In public administration, errore calculi is without any legal effect. A reexamination and correction (retractatio) is admissible even after ten or twenty years." Adolf Berger, Encyclopedic Dictionary of Roman Law 456 (1953).

error de persona (dee par-soh-na). [Latin "error of the person"] A mistake about a person’s identity. Cf. ERROR NOMINIS.

ererro acerrimo non affectato insimulatove (e-ror-ee a-ser-i-moh non af ek-tay-toh in-sim-yoo-la-toh-vee). [Latin] Hist. Through error of the most pointed or positive character, not merely pretended or feigned.
error (e-ror-ee lap-sas). [Latin] Hist. Mistaken through error. • This type of mistake was usu. not sufficient to invalidate a contract.

error in fact. See mistake of fact (1) under MISTAKE.

error in law. See mistake of law (1) under MISTAKE.

error in vacuo (in vak-yoo-oh). [Latin “error in a void”] See harmless error under ERROR.

error nominis (nahm-ə-nis). [Latin “error of name”] A mistake of detail in a person’s name. Cf. ERROR DE PERSONA.

error of fact. See mistake of fact (1) under MISTAKE.

error-of-judgment rule. The doctrine that a professional is not liable to a client for advice or an opinion given in good faith and with an honest belief that the advice was in the client’s best interests, but that was based on a mistake either in judgment or in analyzing an unsettled area of the professional’s business. • For example, an attorney who makes an error in trial tactics involving an unsettled area of the law may, under certain circumstances, defeat a malpractice claim arising from the tactical error. — Also termed judgmental immunity.

error of law. See mistake of law (1) under MISTAKE.

escalation clause. See ESCALATOR CLAUSE.

escalator clause. (1930) 1. A contractual provision that makes pricing flexible by increasing or decreasing the contract price according to changing market conditions, such as higher or lower taxes or operating costs. Cf. DE-ESCALATION CLAUSE. [Cases: Contracts C=c 229, 231.] 2. A provision in a divorce decree or divorce agreement providing for the automatic increase of alimony payments upon the occurrence of any of various triggering events, such as cost-of-living increases or an increase in the obligor’s salary. • Escalation clauses for child support are often unenforceable. [Cases: Child Support C=c 161; Divorce C=c 240(2), 243, 245.] 3. Oil & gas. A provision in a long-term gas contract allowing the base price of the gas to be adjusted as the market changes. • The actual adjustment may be up or down. [Cases: Gas C=c 14.1(3).] — Also termed escalation clause; fluctuating clause.

escape, n. (14c) 1. The act or an instance of breaking free from confinement, restraint, or an obligation. 2. An unlawful departure from legal custody without the use of force. — Also termed actual escape. Cf. PRISON BREACH. [Cases: Escape C=c 1.] • "In the technical sense an ‘escape’ is an unauthorized departure from legal custody. In a loose sense the word is used to indicate either such an unlawful departure or an avoidance of capture. And while the word is regularly used by the layman in the broader sense it usually is limited to the narrower meaning when used in the law, — although this is not always so." Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, CRIMINAL LAW 539 (3d ed. 1982).

constructive escape. A prisoner’s obtaining more liberty than the law allows, while not fully regaining freedom.

3. At common law, a criminal offense committed by a peace officer who allows a prisoner to depart unlawfully from legal custody. — Also termed voluntary escape. [Cases: Escape C=c 3.] — escape, vb.

negligent escape. The offense committed by a peace officer who negligently allows a prisoner to depart from legal custody.

“Escapes are either voluntary, or negligent. Voluntary are such as are by the express consent of the keeper, after which he never can retake his prisoner again, (though the plaintiff may retake him at any time) but the sheriff must answer for the debt. Negligent escapes are where the prisoner escapes without his keeper’s knowledge or consent; and then upon fresh pursuit the defendant may be retaken, and the sheriff shall be excused, if he has him again before any action brought against himself for the escape." 3 William Blackstone, COMMENTARIES ON THE LAWS OF ENGLAND 415-16 (1768).

escape clause. (1945) A contractual provision that allows a party to avoid performance under specified conditions; specif., an insurance-policy provision — usu. contained in the “other insurance” section of the policy — requiring the insurer to provide coverage only if no other coverage is available. Cf. EXCESS CLAUSE; PRO RATA CLAUSE.

escrow (es-kroh), n. [French] Fraud; swindling; cheating.
escrow (es-kroh), n. (16c) 1. A legal document or property delivered by a promisor to a third party to be held by the third party for a given amount of time or until the occurrence of a condition, at which time the third party is to hand over the document or property to the promisee <the agent received the escrow two weeks before the closing date>. [Cases: Deposits and Escrows C=11-26.] 2. An account held in trust or as security <the earnest money is in escrow>. — Also termed escrow account; impound account; reserve account. See escrow account under ACCOUNT. [Cases: Deposits and Escrows C=11-13]. 3. The holder of such a document, property, or deposit <the attorney performed the function of escrow>. — Also termed escrow agent. [Cases: Deposits and Escrows C=13] 4. The general arrangement under which a legal document or property is delivered to a third person until the occurrence of a condition <creating an escrow>. — escrow, vb.

‘Like “scroll” and “scrawl,” the word “escrow” is derived from the Norman-French word for a writing or a written instrument. It has come in practice to refer to a security device: one or both parties to a transaction deposit property or an instrument with a third party until some condition has occurred. The property or instrument may be referred to as “the escrow;” the delivery is said to be “in escrow.” Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 102 cmt. a (1979).

E-Sign Act. The short name for the Electronic Signatures in Global and National Commerce Act, a 2000 federal statute that establishes the legal equivalency of electronic contracts, electronic signatures, and other electronic records with their paper counterparts. — The E-Sign Act applies to all types of transactions, whether in interstate or foreign commerce, unless a specific exception applies. Among the few exceptions are documents related to family law and probate law, most documents required by the Uniform Commercial Code, court documents, and a list of notices that directly impact the lives of consumers (e.g., a notice of termination of utility services or a notice of eviction). [Cases: Signatures C=1-11] esketores (es-kor-tor-ez), n. pl. Hist. Robbers; destroyers of others’ lands or fortunes.

esne (ez-ne), n. Hist. A hireling of servile condition; a hire laborer or a slave.
esnecy (es-ni-see), n. Hist. Seniority; the condition, right, or privilege of the eldest-born. — The term esp. applied to the privilege of the eldest among coparceners to make a first choice of shares upon a voluntary partition. — Also termed asesnecia.
ESOP (ee-sop). abbr. See employee-stock-ownership plan under EMPLOYEE BENEFIT PLAN.
espionage (es-phee-a-nahzh). (18c) The practice of using spies to collect information about what another government or company is doing or plans to do.

industrial espionage. (1962) Intellectual property. One company’s spying on another to steal trade secrets or other proprietary information.

Espionage Act. A federal law that criminalizes and punishes espionage, spying, and related crimes. 18 USCA §§ 793 et seq. Two Espionage Acts were passed. The 1917 act criminalized false statements intended to interfere with the war effort; to willfully cause or attempt to cause dissension in the armed forces; or to willfully obstruct national recruiting and enlistment activities. This act remains enforceable “when the United States is at war.” The 1918 act criminalized speech intended to obstruct war-bond sales; to generate scorn or contempt for democratic government, the flag, or the uniform of the Army or Navy; to urge reduced production of war materials with the intent to hinder the war effort; or to express support for a national enemy or opposition to the United States’ cause. The act’s constitutionality was upheld by the U.S. Supreme Court before it was repealed in 1921. [Cases: War and National Emergency C=1592; Labor and Employment C=1623(1).]

essentialia quietum de tolonio (e-sen-di kwet ee-tam dee to-loh-nee-oh). [Latin “a writ to be free of a toll”] Hist. A writ available to a citizen or a burgess of any city or town who, by charter or prescription, is exempt from a particular toll.

essential finding. See FINDING OF FACT.

essentialia (e-sen-she-ay-lee-o). [Law Latin “essentials”] Scots law. Terms or qualities essential to the existence of a particular right or contract. Cf. ACCIDENTALIA.

essoin (e-soyn), n. [fr. Old French essoi(g)nier “to excuse”] (14c) Hist. 1. An excuse for not appearing in court on an appointed day in obedience to a summons. 2. The offering or presentation of such an excuse. — Also spelled essoin.

“Upon the summons, the defendant either appeared, or essoined, or made default. If he did the former, the plaintiff had liberty to take out further process against him. But if he essoined, that is, sent an excuse to the court why he could not attend, or made default, the court sat to receive essoins, or excuses, of such as did not appear according to the summons of the writ. This day therefore came to be called the essoin-day of the term.” 1 George Crompton, Practice Common-Placed: Rules and Cases of Practice in the Courts of King’s Bench and Common Pleas liv (3d ed. 1787).

essoin vb. [fr. Old French essoi(g)nier “to excuse”] (14c) Hist. To present an excuse for not appearing in court as ordered.

return day of the writ

The first general return day of every term, properly speaking, is the first day of that term; and on that day the court used formerly to sit... to hear the essoins; or excuses, of such as did not appear according to the summons of the writ. The offering or presentation of such an excuse. — Also spelled essoin.

“Upon the summons, the defendant either appeared, or essoined, or made default. If he did the former, the plaintiff declared against him, and the cause was proceeded in by the court; and if he did the latter, the plaintiff had liberty to take out further process against him. But if he essoined, that is, sent an excuse to the court why he could not attend, he was to send it by the return day of the writ which if he did, a further process was not issue against him.” George Crompton, Practice Common-Placed: Rules and Cases of Practice in the Courts of King’s Bench and Common Pleas liv (3d ed. 1787).

essoin day. Hist. English law. The first general return day of the term, when the courts sat to receive essoins.
estate. (15c) 1. The amount, degree, nature, and quality of a person's interest in land or other property; esp., a real-estate interest that may become possessory, the ownership being measured in terms of duration. See periodic tenancy under TENANCY.

absolute estate. A full and complete estate that cannot be defeated.

The epithet absolute is used to distinguish an estate extended to any given time, without any condition to defeat or collateral limitation to determine [i.e., terminate] the estate in the mean time, from an estate subject to a condition or collateral limitation. The term absolute is of the same signification with the word pure or simple, a word which expresses that the estate is not determinable by any event besides the event marked by the clause of limitation." G.C. Cheshire, Modern Law of Real Property 54 (3d ed. 1933).

base estate. Hist. An estate held at the will of the lord, as distinguished from a freehold.

concurrent estate. (18c) Ownership or possession of property by two or more persons at the same time. • In modern practice, there are three types of concurrent estates: tenancy in common, joint tenancy, and tenancy by the entirety. — Also termed concurrent interest.

A concurrent estate is simply an estate — whether present or future, defeasible or non-defeasible, in fee simple, in tail, for life, or for years — that is owned by two or more persons at the same time. O transfers 'to A and B and their heirs.' A and B own a present concurrent estate in fee simple absolute." Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 53 (2d ed. 1984).

conditional estate. See estate on condition.

contingent estate. (17c) An estate that vests only if a specified event does or does not happen. Cf. estate on condition.

defeasible estate. (17c) An estate that may come to an end before its maximum duration has run because of the operation of a special limitation, a condition subsequent, or an executory limitation. • If an estate is defeasible by operation of a special limitation, it is called a determinable estate.

derivative estate. (18c) A particular interest that has been carved out of another, larger estate. Cf. original estate.

determinable estate. (17c) An estate that is defeasible by operation of a special limitation. — Also termed determinable freehold.

equitable estate. (17c) An estate recognized in equity, such as a trust beneficiary's interest. See EQUITY.

"[A] legal estate was a right in rem, an equitable estate a right in personam, that is to say, the former conferred a right enforceable against the whole world, the latter one which could be enforced only against a limited number of persons." G.C. Cheshire, Modern Law of Real Property 54 (3d ed. 1933).

equitable life estate. An interest in real or personal property that lasts for the life of the holder of the estate and that is equitable as opposed to legal in its creation. • An example is a life estate held by a trust beneficiary. [Cases: Life Estates ⊂—1, 21.]

estate ad remanentiwm (ad rem-a-nen-shee-am). An estate in fee simple.

estate at sufferance. See tenancy at sufferance under TENANCY.

estate at will. See tenancy at will under TENANCY. estate by curtesy. An estate owned by a wife, to which the husband is entitled upon her death. See curtesy. estate by elegit. An estate held by a judgment creditor, entitling the creditor to the rents and profits from land owned by the debtor until the debt is paid. See elegit.
estate by entirety. A common-law estate in which each spouse is seised of the whole of the property. • An estate by entirety is based on the legal fiction that a husband and wife are a single unit. The estate consists of five unities: time, title, interest, possession, and marriage. The last of these unities distinguishes the estate by entirety from the joint tenancy. A joint tenancy can exist with any number of persons, while an estate by entirety can be held only by a husband and wife and is not available to any other persons. And it can be acquired only during the marriage. This estate has a right of survivorship, but upon the death of one spouse, the surviving spouse retains the entire interest rather than acquiring the decedent's interest. Most jurisdictions have abolished this estate. — Also termed estate by the entirety; estate by entireties; estate in common and tenancy in common under tenancy. [Cases: Husband and Wife ⊃-14.2.] estate by purchase. An estate acquired in any manner other than by descent. See purchase.
estate by statute staple. An estate in a defendant's land held by a creditor under the statute staple until the debt was paid. See statute staple.
estate by the curtesy of England. See curtesy. estate for a term. See tenancy for a term under tenancy.
estate for life. See life estate. estate for years. See tenancy for a term under tenancy. estate in common. See tenancy in common under tenancy. estate in fee simple. See fee simple. estate in fee tail. See fee tail. estate in gage. An estate that has been pledged as security for a debt. See mortgage. estate in partnership. A joint estate that is vested in the members of a partnership when real estate is purchased with partnership funds and for partnership purposes. [Cases: Partnership ⊃-76.]
estate in possession. An estate in which a present interest passes to the tenant; an estate in which the tenant is entitled to receive the rents and other profits arising from the estate. [Cases: Estates in Property ⊃-1.] estate in remainder. See remainder (1). estate in reversion. See reversion (1). estate in severalty (sev-ə-rəl-tee). An estate held by a tenant separately, without any other person being joined or connected in interest.
estate in tail. See fee tail. estate in radio (in vad-ee-oh). An estate in gage or pledge. See mortgage. estate less than freehold. An estate for years, an estate at will, or an estate at sufferance.
estate on condition. (18c) An estate that vests, is modified, or is defeated upon the occurrence or nonoccurrence of some specified event. • While an estate on limitation can revert without any action by the grantor or the grantor's heirs, an estate on condition requires the entry of the grantor or the grantor's heirs to end the estate whenever the condition occurs. — Also termed estate on conditional limitation; conditional estate. Cf. estate on limitation.
estate on conditional limitation. See estate on condition.
estate on condition expressed. (18c) A contingent estate in which the condition upon which the estate will fail is stated explicitly in the granting instrument.
estate on condition implied. (18c) A contingent estate having some condition that is so inseparable from the estate's essence that it need not be expressed in words.
estate on limitation. (18c) An estate that automatically reverts back to the grantor according to a provision, usu. regarding the passage of a determined time period, designated by words such as “during,” “while,” and “as long as.” See fee simple determinable under fee simple. Cf. estate on condition. estate pur autre vie. See life estate pur autre vie. estate tail. See fee tail.
estate tail quasi. An estate granted by a life tenant, who, despite using language of conveyance that is otherwise sufficient to create an estate tail, is unable to grant in perpetuity.
exe.cuted estate. See remainder (1). expectant estate. See future interest.
fast estate. See real property under property.
freehold estate. See freehold.
future estate. See future interest.
joint estate. (15c) Any of the following five types of estates: (1) a joint tenancy, (2) a tenancy in common, (3) an estate in coparcenary (a common-law estate in which coheirs hold as tenants in common), (4) a tenancy by the entirety, or (5) an estate in partnership. [Cases: Husband and Wife ⊃-14.2-14.7; Joint Tenancy ⊃-1; Tenancy in Common ⊃-1.] landed estate. An interest in real property, esp. suburban or rural land, as distinguished from real estate situated in a city. — Also termed landed property.
leasehold estate. See leasehold.
estate

legal estate. An interest enforced in law rather than in equity.

legal life estate. See life estate.

life estate. (18c) An estate held only for the duration of a specified person's life, usu. the possessor's. • Most life estates — created, for example, by a grant "to Jane for life" — are beneficial interests under trusts, the corpus often being personal property, not real property. — Also termed estate for life, legal life estate, life tenancy. See life tenant. [Cases: Life Estates ☞1.]

life estate pur autre vie (pahr oh-tro vee). (1888) A life estate for which the measuring duration determines the duration of the estate — is someone's other than the possessor's. • Also spelled life estate per autre vie. [Cases: Life Estates ☞1.]

marital estate. See marital property under property.

next eventual estate. (1836) An estate taking effect upon an event that terminates the accumulation of undisposed rents and profits; an estate taking effect when the existing estate terminates.

nonancestral estate. An estate from any source other than the owner's ancestors. • Also termed nonancestral property.

nonfreehold estate. Any estate in real property without seizin, such as an estate for years, from period to period, at will, or at sufferance; any estate except a fee simple, fee tail, or life estate.

original estate. An estate that is the first of one or more derivative estates, bearing to each other the relation of a particular estate and a reversion.

particular estate. An estate or interest less than a fee simple, such as a fee tail, a life estate, or a term for years. • It is so called because the estate is a mere part (particular) of the fee simple.

periodic estate. See periodic tenancy under tenancy.

possessory estate. (18c) An estate giving the holder the right to possess the property, with or without an ownership interest in the property.

present estate. An estate in immediate possession; one vested at the present time, as distinguished from a future estate. See present interest under interest (2).

qualified estate. Any estate that is not absolute and unconditional; a limited or conditional estate.

reversionary estate. See reversion.

separate estate. The individual property of one of two persons who stand in a marital or business relationship. See separate property. [Cases: Divorce ☞ 252.3(3); Husband and Wife ☞ 110–202.]

settled estate. An estate created or limited under a settlement; an estate in which the powers of alienation, devising, and transmission according to the ordinary rules of descent are restrained by the settlement's terms.

taxable estate is the amount that is subject to the upper estate. 2. In feudal Europe, the clergy, nobles, and commons. • Because the lords spiritual had no separate assembly or negative in their political capacity, some authorities reduce the estates in Great Britain to two, the lords and commons. In England until about the 14th century) the three estates of the

"Estoppel," says Lord Coke, "cometh of the French word estoupe, from whence the English word stopped; and it is called an estoppel or conclusion, because a man's own act or acceptance stoppeth or closeth up his mouth to allege or plead the truth." [Co. Litt. 352a.] Estoppel may also be defined to be a legal result or "conclusion" arising from an admission which has either been actually made, or which the law presumes to have been made, and which is binding on all persons whom it affects." Lancelot Fielding Everest, Everest and Strange's Law of Estoppel 1 (3d ed. 1923).

In using the term 'estoppel,' one is of course aware of its kaleidoscopic varieties. One reads of estoppel by conduct, by deed, by laches, by misrepresentation, by negligence, by silence, and so on. There is also an estoppel by judgment and by verdict; these, however, obviously involve procedure. The first-named varieties have certain aspects in common. But these aspects are not always interpreted by the same rules in all courts. The institution seems to be flexible." John H. Wigmore, "The Scientific Role of Consideration in Contract," in Legal Essays in Tribute to Orrin Kip McMurray 641, 643 (1935).

administrative collateral estoppel. See collateral estoppel.

assignee estoppel. Patents. The equitable doctrine that bars the assignee of a patent from contesting the patent's validity under some circumstances, as when the assignee seeks to avoid royalty payments, to void an assignment contract, or to mitigate damages related to the assignee's fraudulent acquisition of the patent. The doctrine prevents an assignee from simultaneously attacking and defending the validity of the same patent. [Cases: Patents C=> 129(3)].

assignor estoppel. Patents. Estoppel barring someone who has assigned the rights to a patent from later attacking the patent's validity. Westinghouse Electric & Mfg. Co. v. Formica Insulation Co., 266 U.S. 342, 45 S.Ct. 117 (1924). The doctrine was narrowed by Diamond Scientific Co. v. Ambico, Inc., 848 F.2d 1220 (Fed. Cir. 1988), in which the court held that in some circumstances equity may outweigh the public-policy reasons behind the estoppel doctrine. [Cases: Patents C=> 129(2)]. collateral estoppel. See collateral estoppel.

equitable estoppel. 18c 1. A defensive doctrine preventing one party from taking unfair advantage of another when, through false language or conduct, the person to be estopped has induced another person to act in a certain way, with the result that the other person has been injured in some way. This doctrine is founded on principles of fraud. The five essential elements of this type of estoppel are that (1) there was a false representation or concealment of material facts, (2) the representation was known to be false by the party making it, or the party was negligent in not knowing its falsity, (3) it was believed to be true by the person to whom it was made, (4) the party making the representation intended that it be acted on, or the person acting on it was justified in assuming this intent, and (5) the party asserting estoppel acted on the representation in a way that will result in substantial prejudice unless the claim of estoppel succeeds. — Also termed estoppel by conduct; estoppel in pais. [Cases: Estoppel C=> 52–96]. 2. See promissory estoppel.

estoppel by conduct. See equitable estoppel.

estoppel by contract. A bar that prevents a person from denying a term, fact, or performance arising from a contract that the person has entered into.

estoppel by deed. Estoppel that prevents a party to a deed from denying anything recited in that deed if the party has induced another to accept or act under the deed; esp., estoppel that prevents a grantor of a warranty deed, who does not have title at the time of the conveyance but who later acquires title, from denying that he or she had title at the time of the transfer. See after-acquired-title doctrine. — Also termed estoppel by warranty. [Cases: Estoppel C=> 12–51].

"The apparent odiousness of some classes of estoppel, chiefly estoppels by deed, seems to result not so much from the nature of an estoppel, as from the highly technical rules of real property law upon which it operated, and with which it was associated. Estoppels by record, indeed, stand upon a considerably higher footing than estoppels by deed ... ." Lancelot Fielding Everest, Everest and Strange's Law of Estoppel 10 (1923).

estoppel by election. The intentional exercise of a choice between inconsistent alternatives that bars the person making the choice from the benefits of the one not selected.

estoppel by inaction. See estoppel by silence.

estoppel by judgment. See collateral estoppel.

estoppel by laches. (1894) An equitable doctrine by which some courts deny relief to a claimant who has unreasonably delayed or been negligent in asserting a claim. [Cases: Equity C=> 67].

estoppel by misrepresentation. An estoppel that arises when one makes a false statement that induces another person to believe something and that results in that person's reasonable and detrimental reliance on the belief. [Cases: Estoppel C=> 82–87].

estoppel by negligence. An estoppel arising when a negligent person induces someone to believe certain facts, and then the other person reasonably and detrimentally relies on that belief. [Cases: Estoppel C=> 82–87].

estoppel by record. See collateral estoppel.

estoppel by representation. An estoppel that arises when one makes a statement or admission that induces another person to believe something and that results in that person's reasonable and detrimental reliance on the belief; esp., equitable estoppel. [Cases: Estoppel C=> 82–87].

estoppel by silence. (1872) Estoppel that arises when a party is under a duty to speak but fails to do so. — Also termed estoppel by standing by; estoppel by inaction. [Cases: Estoppel C=> 95].

estoppel by standing by. See estoppel by silence.

estoppel by verdict. See collateral estoppel. estoppel by warranty. See estoppel by deed.
estoppel in pais. See equitable estoppel. estoppel on the record. See prosecution-history estoppel.
file-wrapper estoppel. See prosecution-history estoppel. judicial estoppel. (1886) Estoppel that prevents a party from contradicting previous declarations made during the same or an earlier proceeding if the change in position would adversely affect the proceeding or constitute a fraud on the court. — Also termed doctrine of preclusion of inconsistent positions; doctrine of the conclusiveness of the judgment. [Cases: Estoppel \(\Leftrightarrow\) 68.]
legal estoppel. Estoppel recognized in law (as distinguished from equitable estoppel or estoppel in pais), such as an estoppel resulting from a recital or other statement in a deed or official record, and precluding any denial or assertion concerning a fact. [Cases: Estoppel \(\Leftrightarrow\) 1–51.]
marking estoppel. Patents. Estoppel that prevents a party from asserting that a product is not covered by a patent if that party has marked the product with a patent number. • This type of estoppel has been questioned in recent years, and has been sharply limited by some courts. [Cases: Patents \(\Leftrightarrow\) 222.]

promissory estoppel. (1924) The principle that a promise made without consideration may nonetheless be enforced to prevent injustice if the promisor should have reasonably expected the promisee to rely on the promise and if the promisee did actually rely on the promise to his or her detriment. — Also termed (inaccurately) equitable estoppel. [Cases: Estoppel \(\Leftrightarrow\) 85.]

"The doctrine of promissory estoppel is equitable in origin and nature and arose to provide a remedy through the enforcement of a gratuitous promise. Promissory estoppel is distinct from equitable estoppel in that the representation at issue is promissory rather than a representation of fact. "Promissory estoppel and estoppel by conduct are two entirely distinct theories. The latter does not require a promise," Ann Taylor Schwing, California Affirmative Defenses § 34:16, at 35 (2d ed. 1996) (quoting Division of Labor Law Enforcement v. Transpacific Transp. Co., 88 Cal. App. 3d 823, 829 (Cal. Ct. App. 1979)).

prosecution-history estoppel. Patents. The doctrine limiting a patent-holder’s invocation of the doctrine of equivalents by eliminating from the claims those elements that the holder surrendered or abandoned during the prosecution of the patent. — Also termed estoppel on the record; file-wrapper estoppel. See doctrine of equivalents. [Cases: Patents \(\Leftrightarrow\) 168(2.1).]

quasi-estoppel. (1823) An equitable doctrine preventing one from repudiating an act or assertion if it would harm another who reasonably relied on the act or assertion.
technical estoppel. 1. An estoppel arising from a matter of record or from a deed made by the party who is claimed to be estopped. • Estoppels by deed or by record are called "technical" because the rules of estoppel apply with certainty in appropriate cases. [Cases: Estoppel \(\Leftrightarrow\) 1, 12.] 2. COLLATERAL ESTOPPEL. See estoppel by deed.
estoppel certificate. (1897) 1. A signed statement by a party (such as a tenant or a mortgagee) certifying for another’s benefit that certain facts are correct, such as that a lease exists, that there are no defaults, and that rent is paid to a certain date. • A party’s delivery of this statement estops that party from later claiming a different state of facts. 2. See waiver of claims and defenses.
estoppel per rem judicatam (per rem joo-di-kay-tom). See collateral estoppel.
estover (e-stoh-var). (usu. pl.) 1. Wood that a tenant is allowed to take for fuel, the manufacture or repair of agricultural instruments, and the erection and maintenance of fences and hedges; necessary supplies. — Also termed botes. See NOTE (1); common of estovers under common. 2. The tenant’s right to obtain that wood. 3. ALIMONY.
estrage, vb. 1. To separate, to keep away (a person or thing), or to keep away from (a person or thing). 2. To destroy or divert affection, trust, and loyalty. — estrangement, n.
estray (e-stray), n. 1. A valuable tame animal found wandering and ownerless; an animal that has escaped from its owner and wanders about. • At common law, an estray belonged to the Crown or to the lord of the manor, but today the general rule is that it passes to the state in trust for the true owner, who may regain it by proving ownership. An animal cannot be an estray when on the range where it was raised and where its owner permits it to run, and esp. when the owner is known to the party who takes the animal. [Cases: Animals \(\Leftrightarrow\) 58.] 2. FLOTSAM.
estreat (e-street), n. (15c) A copy or duplicate of some original writing or record, esp. of a fine or amercement imposed by a court, extracted from the record, and certified to one who is authorized and required to collect it. — Also termed (in Scots law) extract.
estreat, vb. (16c) To take out a forfeited recognizance from the recordings of a court and return it to the court to be prosecuted.
estrepe (e-streep), vb. (17c) 1. To strip; to despoil; to commit waste upon an estate, as by cutting down trees or removing buildings. 2. To injure the value of a reversionary interest by stripping or spoiling the estate. See waste (1). estrepe (e-streep mant), n. (16c) A species of aggravated waste, by stripping or devastating land to the injury of the reversioner, esp. pending a suit for possession. See de estrepamento. [Cases: Waste \(\Leftrightarrow\) 16.]
et, conj. [Latin] And. • This conjunction was the introductory word of several Latin and Law French phrases that were once common.

et adjournatur (et aj-ar-nay-tar). [Latin] Hist. And it is adjourned. • This phrase was used in the old reports, when argument of a case was adjourned to another day, or where a second argument was had.

et alii e contra (et ay-lee-ee-ee kon-tra). [Latin “and others on the other side”] Hist. A phrase often used in the Year Books, describing a joinder in issue.

et allocatur (et al-a kay-tar). [Latin] And it is allowed.

etc. abbr. et cetera.

et cetera (et set-ar-as). [Latin “and others”] (12c) And other things. • The term usu. indicates additional, unspecified items in a series. — Abbr. etc.

et de cecio mement in le pays (ay da say-oh sa me-tawn on la pay). [Law French] Hist. And of this they put themselves upon the country. See conclusion to the country going to the country.

et de hoc ponit se super patriam (et dee hok poh-nit see syloo-par pay-tree-am). [Latin] Hist. And of this he puts himself upon the country. • This was the formal conclusion of a common-law plea in bar by way of traverse.

et ei legitur in haec verba (et ee-lee-jea-tar in heek vor-ba). [Latin] Hist. And it is read to him in these words. • This phrase was formerly used in entering the prayer of oyer on the record.

eternal law. See natural law.

et habeas ibi tunc hoc breve (et hay-bee-as ib-tee tangk hoc bree-vee). [Latin] Hist. And that you have then and there this writ. • These were the formal words directing the return of a writ. The literal translation was retained in the later form of a considerable number of writs.

et habuit (et hab-yoo-it). [Latin “and he had [it]”] Hist. A common phrase in the Year Books, indicating that a party’s application or demand was granted.

etical, adj. (16c) 1. Of or relating to moral obligations that one person owes another; esp., in law, of or relating to legal ethics <the ethical rules regarding confidences> See ethical. 2. In conformity with moral norms or standards of professional conduct <refusing to identify the informant was a perfectly ethical act>. Cf. DISCIPLINARY RULE. [Cases: Attorney and Client C-32(2).]

etical drug. See drug.

ethical jurisprudence. See jurisprudence.

ethical relativism. See moral relativism.

etical wall. (1988) A screening mechanism maintained by an organization, esp. a law firm, to protect client confidences from improper disclosure to lawyers or staff who are not involved in a particular representation. • The screening mechanism is designed to prevent lawyer or law-firm disqualification from certain representations because of conflicts of interest. — Also termed screening mechanism: Chinese wall. [Cases: Attorney and Client C-21.15.]

ethics. See legal ethics.

ethnic cleansing. (1991) The officially sanctioned forcible and systematic diminution or elimination of targeted ethnic minorities from a geographic area, usu. by confiscating real and personal property, ordering or condoning mass murders and mass rapes, and expelling the survivors. • In theory, the purpose of ethnic cleansing is to drive all members of the victimized group out of a territory. In practice, ethnic cleansing is nearly synonymous with genocide as mass murder is a characteristic of both. Ethnic cleansing additionally includes mass rapes for two cultural reasons: (1) the victims are often put to death by their relatives or commits suicide, and (2) any children born are regarded as belonging to the father’s ethnic group, not the mother’s. Both acts — murder and rape — are intended to diminish or extinguish the victimized minority. Cf. genocide.

etnic profiling. See racial profiling.

et hoc paratus est verificare (et hok pa-ray-tos est ver-seh-kair). [Latin] And this he is prepared to verify. • This phrase traditionally concluded a plea in confession and avoidance, or any pleading that contained new affirmative matter. A pleading containing this phrase was technically said to “conclude with a verification,” as opposed to a simple denial.

et hoc petit quod inquiratur per patriam (et hok pet-it kwod in-kwah-ray-tar par pay-tree-am). [Latin “and this he prays may be inquired of by the country”] Archaic. The conclusion of a plaintiff’s pleading that tendered an issue to the country. See conclusion to the country.

etiam causa non cognita (ee-shoom kawz-ee non cohn-nee-to). [Latin] Hist. Even where the cause is not known; absent an investigation. • Some decrees could be issued without a full factual inquiry or trial.

etiam in articulo mortis (ee-shoom-am in ahr-tik-ee-yah-lee-tos). [Latin] Scots law. Even at the point of death. • The phrase appeared in reference to a circumstance under which one could revoke a will.

et inde petit judicium (et in-dee pet-it dish-ee-am). [Latin “and thereupon he prays judgment”] Archaic.
A clause found at the end of a pleading, requesting judgment in that party’s favor.

etiquette of the profession. See legal etiquette.

et modo ad hunc diem (et moh-doh ad hangk di-am). [Latin “and now at this day”] Archaic. The formal beginning of an entry of appearance or of a continuance.

et non (et non). [Latin “and not”] Archaic. A phrase formerly used in pleading to introduce the negative averments of a special traverse. See ABSQUE HOC.

et seq. (et sek). abbr. [Latin et sequens “and the following one,” et sequentes (masc.) “and the following ones,” or et sequentia (neuter) “and the following ones”] (18c) et sic (et sik). [Latin “and so”] Archaic. The introductory words of a special conclusion to a plea in bar, intending to render the plea positive and not argumentative.
And those (pages or sections) that follow <11 USCA §§ 101 et seq.>

And so to the country. • This phrase was used in the Year Books to record an issue to the country.

et sic de anno in annum quamdiu ambobus partibus placuerit (et sik dee an-oh in an-am kwam-dee-yoo am-bah-bal pahr-tah-bal plak-yoo-air-it). Hist. And so, from year to year, so long as both parties please, or are agreed. • The phrase appeared in reference to tacit relocation. See tacit relocation.

• This phrase was used in the old reports to signify that a point was left undetermined.

et sic ulterius (et sik al-teer-ee-em). [Latin] Archaic. And so on; and so further; and so forth.

et uxor (et ak-sor). [Latin] Archaic. And wife. • This phrase was formerly common in case names and legal documents (esp. abstracts of title) involving a husband and wife jointly. It usu. appears in its abbreviated form, et ux. <conveyed the land to Donald Baird et ux.>. See UXOR.

et vir (et veer). [Latin] Archaic. And husband. See VIR.

EU. abbr. european union.

Euclidean zoning. See ZONING.

eundo et redeundo (ee-on-doh et red ee-an-doh). [Latin] Hist. Going and returning. • This phrase was once used to describe vessels in transit.

eundo, morando, et redeundo (ee-on-doh, mo-ran-doh, et red ee-an-doh). [Latin] Hist. Going, remaining, and returning. • This phrase was once used to describe a person (for example, a witness or legislator) who is privileged from arrest while traveling to the place where assigned duties are to be performed, while remaining there, and while returning.

eunomy (yoo-na-mee), n. (19c) A system of good laws that lead to civil order and justice. — Also termed eunomia. Cf. dysnomy. — eunomic, adj.

Euratom. A European Union organization that coordinates the development and use of nuclear energy in Europe. • It was created in 1958 and merged with the European Economic Community in 1967. It is governed by the Council of the European Union.

eureka model. Patents. The view that the inventive process is the product of a stroke of luck rather than labor. • The notion is used to counter labor-based theories justifying intellectual-property rights, since no labor is involved in a “eureka” discovery. Cf. labor-desert model; value-added model.

eureka moment. Slang. The instant when an inventor realizes the answer to a question or the significance of a discovery. — Also termed flash of genius.

Euribor. abbr. euro interbank offered rate.

euro (yuur-oh). (81) The official currency of most countries in the European Union. • On January 1, 1999, the euro became the single currency of the participating countries. Euro notes and coins began circulating on January 1, 2002.

Eurodollar. (1960) United States currency held in a bank outside the U.S., usu. in Europe, and used to settle international transactions.

European Commission of Human Rights. A body of the Council of Europe charged with overseeing the operation of the European Convention on Human Rights. • The commission was abolished in 1998. The European Court of Human Rights absorbed its functions. See European Court of Human Rights.

European Community. See European union.

European Convention on Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms. A 1950 international agreement to protect human rights. • The European Commission for Human Rights and the European Court for Human Rights were created under the convention’s terms. [Cases: Treaties C–8.]

European Copyright Directive. An official instruction of the European Union designed to promote uniformity in certain aspects of copyright law and related rights, esp. on the Internet. • Officially titled Directive 2001/28 on the Harmonisation of Certain Aspects of Copyright and Related Rights in the Information Society, this is the European Union equivalent of the Digital Millennium Copyright Act. Among other provisions, the directive provides broad exclusive rights of reproduction and distribution to copyright holders, and requires E.U. member nations to prohibit the circumvention of technical measures and devices intended to prevent the alteration or reproduction of copyrighted works. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property ☍ 34.]

European Court of Human Rights. The judicial body of the Council of Europe. • The court was set up in 1959 and was substantially changed in 1994–1998. As of 2008, the court had 47 judges, each elected by the Council of Europe’s Parliamentary Assembly. The court adjudicates alleged violations of the civil and political rights enumerated in the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms.

European Currency Unit. A monetary unit that was the precursor of the euro. • Created in 1979, it was an artificial currency used by the members of the European Union as their internal accounting unit. It ceased to exist in January 1999, when it was replaced by the euro. — Abbr. ECU; ecu. See EURO.

European Economic Community. See EUROPEAN UNION.

European law. (1844) 1. The law of the European Union. 2. More broadly, the law of the European Union, together with the conventions of the Council of Europe, including the European Convention on Human Rights. 3. More broadly still, all the law current in Europe, including the law of European organizations, the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, and all the bilateral and multilateral conventions in effect, as well as European customary law.

European option. See option.

European Patent Convention. A 1973 treaty allowing a patent applicant to obtain patent protection in all signatory nations, mostly European Union members, through a single blanket filing and examination procedure. • The Community patent is valid in any member nation in which it is registered. The procedure is administered through the European Patent Office in Munich, Germany and The Hague, Netherlands. — Abbr. EPC. — Also termed Convention on the Grant of European Patent.

European Patent Office. The office that receives filings, conducts examinations, and issues Community patents applied for under the European Patent Convention. • The office is located in Munich, Germany, and The Hague, Netherlands.

European Patent Organization. A centralized patent-grant system, established in 1978, comprising a legislative body (the Administrative Council) and an executive body (the European Patent Office).

European-style option. See European option under option.

European Union. An association of European nations whose purpose is to achieve full economic unity (and eventual political union) by agreeing to eliminate barriers to the free movement of capital, goods, and labor among the member-nations. • The European Union was formed as the European Economic Community (EEC) by the Treaty of Rome in 1957, and later renamed the European Community (EC). The European Community became the European Union when the Maastricht Treaty on European Union took effect in November 1993. — Abbr. EU.

euthanasia (yoo-tha-nay-zha), n. (1869) The act or practice of causing or hastening the death of a person who suffers from an incurable or terminal disease or condition, esp. a painful one, for reasons of mercy. • Euthanasia is sometimes regarded by the law as second-degree murder, manslaughter, or criminally negligent homicide. In 2001, the Netherlands became the first nation to legalize euthanasia. — Also termed mercy killing. See LIVING WILL; ADVANCE DIRECTIVE. Cf. assisted suicide under suicide; DYATHANASIA. [Cases: Homicide ☍ 765.] — euthanasic (yoo-tha-nay-zik), adj.

"The translation of the Greek word euthanasia — ‘easy death’ — contains an ambiguity. It connotes that the means responsible for death are painless, so that the death is an easy one. But it also suggests that the death sought would be a relief from a distressing or intolerable condition of living (or dying), so that death, and not merely the means through which it is achieved, is good or right in itself. Usually, both aspects are intended when the term euthanasia is used; but when that is not the case, there can be consequences in legal analysis." — Alexander Morgan Capron, "Euthanasia," in 2 Encyclopedia of Crime and Justice 709, 709 (Sanford H. Kadish ed., 1983).

active euthanasia. Euthanasia performed by a facilitator (such as a healthcare practitioner) who not only provides the means of death but also carries out the final death-causing act.

involuntary euthanasia. Euthanasia of a competent, nonconsenting person.

nonvoluntary euthanasia. Euthanasia of an incompetent, and therefore nonconsenting, person.

passive euthanasia. The act of allowing a terminally ill person to die by either withholding or withdrawing life-sustaining support such as a respirator or feeding tube.

voluntary euthanasia. Euthanasia performed with the terminally ill person’s consent. [Cases: Health ☍ 913.]

euthanize (yoo-tha-niz), vb. (1873) To put to death by euthanasia. • This term is used chiefly in reference to animals. — Also termed euthanatize.

evacuee. A person who has been evacuated, esp. because of a natural disaster or an imminent man-made danger, such as war. • This loanword from French dates from World War I. Cf. displaced person under PERSON (1); REFUGEE.

evaluative fact. See FACT.

Evarts Act (ev-arts). An 1891 federal statute that established the circuit courts of appeals (now U.S. courts of appeals) and fixed the contemporary method of federal appellate review.

evasion. See TAX EVASION.

evasive, adj. (17c) Tending or seeking to evade; elusive; shifting. • If a pleading requiring a response is evasive, the responding party may move for a more definite statement. Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(e). evasive answer. See answer (2).

even date. The same date. • This jargonistic phrase is sometimes used in one instrument to refer to another instrument with the same date, esp. when both relate to the same transaction (as a deed and a mortgage).

evenings. Hist. The delivery at evening or night to a customary tenant of a gratuity in the form of a portion of the grass, corn, or other crop that the tenant cuts, mows, or reaps for the lord.

even lot. See round lot under lot (3).

event-driven audit. See audit.

evergreen contract. See contract.

evict, vb. (15c) 1. To expel (a person, esp. a tenant), from real property, usu. by legal process. • Also termed put out. 2. Archaic. To recover (property or title) from a person by legal process. • evictor, n.

eviction. (16c) The act of process of legally dispossessing a person of land or rental property. See forcible entry and detainer. Cf. ejectment. [Cases: Forcible Entry and Detainer 171(1), 172.]

actual eviction. (18c) A physical expulsion of a person from land or rental property. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 171(1).]

constructive eviction. (1826) 1. A landlord's act of making premises unfit for occupancy, often with the result that the tenant is compelled to leave. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 172.] 2. The inability of a land purchaser to obtain possession because of paramount outstanding title. • Such an eviction usu. constitutes a breach of the covenants of warranty and quiet enjoyment.

eviction by paramount title. An eviction by judicially establishing title superior to that under which the possessor claims. • Also termed eviction by title paramount. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 174.]

eviction by title paramount. See eviction by paramount title.

partial eviction. An eviction, either constructive or actual, from a portion of a tenant's premises. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 172(1), 190(2).]

retaliatory eviction. (1966) An eviction — nearly always illegal — commenced in response to a tenant's complaints or involvement in activities with which the landlord does not agree. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 278, 284(1), 290(3), 298(1).]

summary eviction. (1907) An eviction accomplished through a simplified legal procedure, without the formalities of a full trial. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 293.]

total eviction. (1832) An eviction that wholly deprives the tenant of any right in the premises. [Cases: Landlord and Tenant 172(1), 190(1).]

evidence, n. (14c) 1. Something (including testimony, documents and tangible objects) that tends to prove or disprove the existence of an alleged fact. • The bloody glove is the key piece of evidence for the prosecution. [Cases: Criminal Law 661; Federal Civil Procedure 33, 43.] 2. See fact in evidence under fact. 3. The collective mass of things, esp. testimony and exhibits, presented before a tribunal in a given dispute. • The evidence will show that the defendant breached the contract. 4. The body of law regulating the admissibility of what is offered as proof into the record of a legal proceeding. • Under the rules of evidence, the witness's statement is inadmissible hearsay that is not subject to any exception. • Also termed in sense 4 rules of evidence. [Cases: Criminal Law 661; Federal Civil Procedure 33, 43.] evidence, vb.

"Evidence is any matter of fact which is furnished to a legal tribunal, otherwise than by reasoning or a reference to what is noticed without proof, as the basis of inference in ascertaining some other matter of fact." James B. Thayer, Presumptions and the Law of Evidence. 3 Harv. L. Rev. 141, 142 (1889).

"Evidence, broadly defined, is the means from which an inference may logically be drawn as to the existence of a fact; that which makes evident or plain. Evidence is the demonstration of a fact; it signifies that which demonstrates, makes clear, or ascertains the truth of the very fact or point in issue, either on the one side or on the other. In legal acceptation, the term 'evidence' includes all the means by which any alleged matter of fact, the truth of which is submitted to investigation, is established or disproved. 'Evidence' has also been defined to mean any species of proof legally presented at the trial of an issue, by the act of the parties and through the medium of witnesses, records, documents, concrete objects, and the like." 31A C.J.S. Evidence § 3, at 67-68 (1996).

administrative evidence. Rare. Corroborating or auxiliary evidence presented for the purpose of explaining or completing other evidence.

admissible evidence. (18c) Evidence that is relevant and is of such a character (e.g., not unfairly prejudicial, based on hearsay, or privileged) that the court should receive it. • Also termed competent evidence; proper evidence; legal evidence. [Cases: Criminal Law 661; Federal Civil Procedure 33, 43.]

autopptic evidence. See demonstrative evidence.

best evidence. (17c) Evidence of the highest quality available, as measured by the nature of the case rather than the thing being offered as evidence. • The term is usu. applied to writings and recordings. If the original is available, it must be offered rather than a copy or oral rendition. Fed. R. Evid. 1002. • Also termed primary evidence; original evidence. See best-evidence rule. Cf. secondary evidence. [Cases: Criminal Law 398-403; Evidence 157-187.]

"In some circumstances, 'best evidence' may mean that evidence which is more specific and definite as opposed to that which is merely general and indefinite or descriptive. However, 'best evidence' or 'primary evidence' is variously defined as that particular means of proof which is indicated by the nature of the fact under investigation as the most natural and satisfactory, or as that kind of proof which under any possible circumstances affords the circumstantial evidence. (18c) 1. Evidence based on inference and not on personal knowledge or observation. - Also termed indirect evidence; oblique evidence. Cf. direct evidence. [Cases: Criminal Law (176); Evidence (184).] 2. All evidence that is not given by eyewitness testimony.

"Indirect evidence (called by the civilians, oblique, and more commonly known as circumstantial evidence) is that which is applied to the principal fact, indirectly, or through the medium of other facts, by establishing certain circumstances or minor facts, already described as evidentiary, from which the principal fact is extracted and gathered by a process of special inference . . . " Alexander M. Burrill, A Treatise on the Nature, Principles and Rules of Circumstantial Evidence 4 (1868).

"Evidence of some collateral fact, from which the existence or non-existence of some fact in question may be inferred as a probable consequence, is termed circumstantial evidence." William P. Richardson, The Law of Evidence § 111, at 68 (3d ed. 1928).

"Testimonial evidence readily defines itself by its name; it is any assertion by a human being, offered to evidence the truth of the matter asserted. Circumstantial evidence is any and all other evidence. Scientifically the term 'circumstantial' is indefensible, for it does not correlate with 'testimonial.' A more correct equivalent would be 'nontestimonial.' John H. Wigmore, A Students' Textbook of the Law of Evidence 38 (1935).

clear and convincing evidence. (17c) Evidence indicating that the thing to be proved is highly probable or reasonably certain. This is a greater burden than preponderance of the evidence, the standard applied in most civil trials, but less than evidence beyond a reasonable doubt, the norm for criminal trials. - Also termed clear and convincing proof. See reasonable doubt. Cf. preponderance of the evidence. [Cases: Evidence (182).]

communicative evidence. See testimonial evidence.

competent evidence. 1. See admissible evidence. 2. See relevant evidence.

conclusive evidence. (17c) 1. Evidence so strong as to overbear any other evidence to the contrary. - Also termed conclusive proof. [Cases: Criminal Law (172); Evidence (182).] 2. Evidence that so preponderates as to oblige a fact-finder to come to a certain conclusion.

concomitant evidence. (17c) Evidence that, at the time of the act, the alleged doer of the act was present and actually did it.

conflicting evidence. (1803) Evidence that comes from different sources and is often irreconcilable.

corroborating evidence. (17c) Evidence that differs from but strengthens or confirms what other evidence shows (esp. that which needs support). - Also termed corroborative evidence. Cf. cumulative evidence.

credible evidence. (17c) Evidence that is worthy of belief; trustworthy evidence.

critical evidence. (18c) Evidence strong enough that its presence could tilt a juror's mind. - Under the Due Process Clause, an indigent criminal defendant is usu. entitled to an expert opinion of the merits of critical evidence. - Also termed crucial evidence.

crucial evidence. See critical evidence.

cumulative evidence. (18c) Additional evidence that supports a fact established by the existing evidence (esp. that which does not need further support). Cf. corroborative evidence. [Cases: Criminal Law (176); Federal Civil Procedure (191); Trial (56).

demeanor evidence. (1809) The behavior and appearance of a witness on the witness stand, to be considered by the fact-finder on the issue of credibility. [Cases: Criminal Law (171); Evidence (181).

demonstrative evidence (di-mon-strà-tiv). (17c) Physical evidence that one can see and inspect (i.e. an explanatory aid, such as a chart, map, and some computer simulations) and that, while of probative value and usu. offered to clarify testimony, does not play a direct part in the incident in question. - This term sometimes overlaps with and is used as a synonym of real evidence. - Also termed illustrative evidence; autoptic evidence; autoptic preference; real evidence; tangible evidence. See nonverbal testimony under testimony. Cf. real evidence; testimonial evidence. [Cases: Criminal Law (176); Evidence (181).

direct evidence. (16c) 1. Evidence that is based on personal knowledge or observation and that, if true, proves a fact without inference or presumption. - Also termed positive evidence. Cf. circumstantial extrajudicial evidence. [Cases: Criminal Law ⊙ 549; Evidence ⊙ 587.] 2. See original evidence (1).

"A little reflection shows that no disputed case will ordinarily be proved solely by circumstantial or solely by testimonial evidence. Ordinarily there is evidence of both kinds. The matter has been obscured by the use of the term 'direct evidence,' — a term sometimes used to mean testimonial evidence in general, but sometimes also limited to apply only to testimony directly asserting the fact-in-issue. ... The term 'direct' evidence has no utility." John H. Wigmore, A Students' Textbook of the Law of Evidence 40 (1935).

documentary evidence. (18c) Evidence supplied by a writing or other document, which must be authenticated before the evidence is admissible. [Cases: Criminal Law ⊙ 429—446; Evidence ⊙ 325—383.] downright evidence. See extrinsic evidence (1). evidence in-chief. (18c) Evidence used by a party in making its case-in-chief. [Cases: Criminal Law ⊙ 682; Federal Civil Procedure ⊙ 2015; Trial ⊙ 61.] evidence aliunde. See extrinsic evidence (1). evidence-in-chief. (18c) Evidence used by a party to prove a matter in issue. (1Sc) Evidence used in court; esp., evidence to prove a matter in issue. (1Sc) Evidence supplied by a party in making its case-in-chief. [Cases: Criminal Law ⊙ 359, 385, 387, 389, 392.]
exculpatory evidence (ek-skəl-pə-tor-ee). (18c) Evidence tending to establish a criminal defendant’s innocence. Fed. R. Crim. P. 16. • The prosecution has a duty to disclose exculpatory evidence in its possession when the evidence may be material to the outcome of the case. See BRADY MATERIAL. [Cases: Criminal Law ⊙ 359, 1992.]
expert evidence. (16c) Evidence about a scientific, technical, professional, or other specialized issue given by a person qualified to testify because of familiarity with the subject or special training in the field. — Also termed expert testimony. Fed. R. Evid. 702—705. See DAUBERT TEST. [Cases: Criminal Law ⊙ 469—494; Evidence ⊙ 505—574.]
extrajudicial evidence. (18c) Evidence that does not come directly under judicial cognizance but nevertheless constitutes an intermediate link between judicial evidence and the fact requiring proof. • It includes all facts that are known to the tribunal only by way of inference from some form of judicial evidence. See JUDICIAL NOTICE. Cf. JUDICIAL NOTICE.
extrinsic evidence. (17c) 1. Evidence relating to a contract but not appearing on the face of the contract because it comes from other sources, such as statements between the parties or the circumstances surrounding the agreement. • Extrinsic evidence is usu. not admissible to contradict or add to the terms of an unambiguous document. — Also termed extraneous evidence; parol evidence; evidence aliunde. [Cases: Evidence ⊙ 384—469.] 2. Evidence that is not legitimately before the court. Cf. INTRINSIC EVIDENCE.
forensic evidence. (18c) Evidence used in court; esp., evidence arrived at by scientific or technical means, such as ballistic or medical evidence. [Cases: Evidence ⊙ 150.] foundational evidence. (1946) Evidence that determines the admissibility of other evidence. habit evidence. (1921) Evidence of one’s regular response to a repeated specific situation. Fed. R. Evid. 406. [Cases: Criminal Law ⊙ 385; Evidence ⊙ 138.] hearsay evidence. See HEARSAY. illegally obtained evidence. (1924) Evidence obtained by violating a statute or a person’s constitutional or other right, esp. the Fourth Amendment guarantee against unreasonable searches, the Fifth Amendment right to remain silent, or the Sixth Amendment right to counsel. [Cases: Criminal Law ⊙ 394.1—394.6; Evidence ⊙ 154.] illustrative evidence. See demonstrative evidence. immaterial evidence. (18c) 1. Evidence lacking in probative value. 2. Evidence offered to prove a matter that is not in issue. [Cases: Criminal Law ⊙ 382; Evidence ⊙ 143.] impeachment evidence. (1861) Evidence used to undermine a witness’s credibility. Fed. R. Evid. 607—610. [Cases: Witnesses ⊙ 311—409.] impertinent evidence. See irrelevant evidence. icompetent evidence. (18c) Evidence that is for any reason inadmissible. [Cases: Criminal Law ⊙ 385; Evidence ⊙ 148.]
incriminating evidence. (1878) Evidence tending to establish guilt or from which a fact-trier can infer guilt.
inculpatory evidence (in-kul-pa-tor-ee). (1849) Evidence showing or tending to show one's involvement in a crime or wrong.

indirect evidence. See circumstantial evidence (1).

indispensable evidence. (18c) Evidence without which a particular fact cannot be proved.

insufficient evidence. (17c) Evidence that is inadequate to prove or support a finding of something. This term usu. describes a case that is not strong enough to even get to the fact-finder. [Cases: Evidence $\equiv$ 584–601.]

intrinsic evidence. (17c) 1. Evidence brought out by the examination of the witness testifying. 2. Evidence existing within a writing. Cf. extrinsic evidence (2).

irrelevant evidence. Evidence not tending to prove or disprove a matter in issue. Fed. R. Evid. 401–403. — Also termed impertinent evidence. See IRRELEVANT. [Cases: Criminal Law $\equiv$ 338; Evidence $\equiv$ 99.]

judicial evidence. (17c) Evidence produced in court, consisting of all facts brought to the attention of or admitted into evidence before the tribunal. Cf. extra-judicial evidence.

legal evidence. (17c) 1. See admissible evidence. 2. All admissible evidence, both oral and documentary, of such a character that it reasonably and substantially proves the point rather than merely raising suspicion or conjecture.

material evidence. (17c) Evidence having some logical connection with the facts of consequence or the issues. Cf. relevant evidence; immaterial evidence. [Cases: Criminal Law $\equiv$ 382; Evidence $\equiv$ 143.]

mathematical evidence. (18c) 1. Loosely, evidence that establishes its conclusions with absolute certainty. 2. Evidence pertaining to mathematical or statistical matters, or probabilities.

mediate evidence. See secondary evidence.

medical evidence. (18c) Evidence furnished by a doctor, nurse, or other qualified medical person testifying in a professional capacity as an expert, or by a standard treatise on medicine or surgery. [Cases: Criminal Law $\equiv$ 473, 476; Evidence $\equiv$ 555.10.]

moral evidence. (17c) Loosely, evidence that depends on a belief, rather than complete and absolute proof. — Generally, moral evidence is testimonial.

multiple evidence. (1926) Evidence with probative or other value on more than one issue but usu. admitted into evidence for one specific purpose. — Impeachment evidence, for example, may not be probative on a particular issue but may nonetheless affect the jury's perceptions of several issues.

negative evidence. (17c) Evidence suggesting that an alleged fact does not exist, such as a witness's testifying that he or she did not see an event occur. — Negative evidence is generally regarded as weaker than positive evidence because a positive assertion that a witness saw an event is a stronger statement than an assertion that a witness did not see it. But a negative assertion will sometimes be considered positive evidence, depending on the witness's opportunity to see the event. For instance, testimony that the witness watched the entire game and saw no riot in the stands is stronger than testimony stating only that the witness did not see a riot. — Also termed negative testimony. Cf. direct evidence (1). [Cases: Criminal Law $\equiv$ 387; Evidence $\equiv$ 147, 586.]

newly discovered evidence. (18c) Evidence existing at the time of a motion or trial but then unknown to a party, who, upon later discovering it, may assert it as grounds for reconsideration or a new trial. See Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(b). [Cases: Criminal Law $\equiv$ 938; Federal Civil Procedure $\equiv$ 928, 2350, 2655; New Trial $\equiv$ 99.]

no evidence. See no evidence.

oblique evidence. See circumstantial evidence (1).

opinion evidence. (1955) A witness's belief, thought, inference, or conclusion concerning a fact or facts. Fed. R. Evid. 701–705. See opinion (3); OPINION RULE. [Cases: Criminal Law $\equiv$ 448; Evidence $\equiv$ 470–574.]

"In a sense all testimony to matter of fact is opinion evidence; i.e. it is a conclusion formed from phenomena and mental impressions." James B. Thayer, A Preliminary Treatise on Evidence at the Common Law 524 (1898).

oral evidence. See testimonial evidence.

original evidence. (18c) 1. A witness's statement that he or she perceived a fact in issue by one of the five senses, or that the witness was in a particular physical or mental state. — Also termed direct evidence. Cf. hearsay. 2. See best evidence.

parol evidence (par-ohl or par-ol). (18c) 1. Evidence of oral statements. [Cases: Criminal Law $\equiv$ 447; Evidence $\equiv$ 384–469.] 2. See extrinsic evidence (1). See PAROL- EVIDENCE RULE.

partial evidence. (17c) Evidence that establishes one of a series of facts.

personal evidence. See testimony.

positive evidence. See direct evidence (1).

preappointed evidence. (1850) Evidence prescribed in advance (as by statute) for the proof of certain facts.

preliminary evidence. (18c) Evidence that is necessary to begin a hearing or trial and that may be received conditionally in anticipation of other evidence linking it to issues in the case. Fed. R. Evid. 104. [Cases: Evidence $\equiv$ 117; Federal Civil Procedure $\equiv$ 2014.]

presumptive evidence. (17c) 1. Evidence deemed sufficient to establish another fact unless discredited by other evidence. [Cases: Evidence $\equiv$ 53–89.] 2. Archaic. Circumstantial evidence as distinct from testimonial evidence. — Also termed probable evidence.

prima facie evidence (pr-uh-fay-shuh). (18c) Evidence that will establish a fact or sustain a judgment unless contradictory evidence is produced. [Cases: Evidence C:=584(1).]

The legislative branch may create an evidential presumption, or a rule of ‘prima facie’ evidence, i.e., a rule which does not shut out evidence, but merely declares that certain conduct shall suffice as evidence until the opponent produces contrary evidence. John H. Wigmore, A Student’s Textbook of the Law of Evidence 237 (1935).

primary evidence. See best evidence.

privileged evidence. (1897) Evidence that is exempt from production to an opposing party or tribunal (with certain, limited exceptions) because it is covered by one or more statutory or common-law protections, such as the attorney–client privilege. See privileged communication under communication. [Cases: Privileged Communications and Confidentiality C:=1, 2, 100.]

probable evidence. See presumptive evidence.

probative evidence (proh-ba-tiv). (1877) Evidence that tends to prove or disprove a point in issue. Cf. relevant evidence. [Cases: Criminal Law C:=338; Evidence C:=99.]

proffered evidence (prof-ard). (1904) 1. Evidence that is offered to the court to obtain a ruling on its admissibility. 2. Evidence whose admissibility depends on the existence or nonexistence of a preliminary fact. [Cases: Evidence C:=117; Federal Civil Procedure C:=2011.]

proper evidence. See admissible evidence.

prospective evidence (pra-spek-tant). (1924) Evidence that, before someone does an act, suggests that the person might or might not do the act. • This evidence typically falls into any of five categories: (1) moral character or disposition, (2) physical and mental capacity, (3) habit or custom, (4) emotion or motive, and (5) plan, design, or intention.

Queen’s evidence. English law. Testimony provided by one criminal defendant, usu. under a promise of pardon, against another criminal defendant. — Also termed (when a king reigns) King’s evidence. See state’s evidence.

real evidence. (17c) 1. Physical evidence (such as clothing or a knife wound) that itself plays a direct part in the incident in question. — Also termed physical evidence. [Cases: Criminal Law C:=405; Evidence C:=188.] 2. See demonstrative evidence.

“Anything which is believed for any other reason than that someone has said so, is believed on real evidence.” John Salmend, jurisprudence 480 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

rebuttal evidence. (1859) Evidence offered to disprove or contradict the evidence presented by an opposing party. • Rebuttal evidence is introduced in the rebuttal phase of the trial, i.e., through cross-examination during the case-in-chief of the party to be rebutted. — Also termed rebutting evidence. [Cases: Criminal Law C:=683; Federal Civil Procedure C:=2015; Trial C:=62.]

rebuttal evidence. (1859) Evidence offered to disprove or disprove a matter in issue. • Relevant evidence is both probative and material and is admissible unless excluded by a specific statute or rule. Fed. R. Evid. 401–403. — Also termed competent evidence. Cf. material evidence; probative evidence. [Cases: Criminal Law C:=338; Evidence C:=99.]

reputation evidence. (1888) Evidence of what one is thought by others to be. • Reputation evidence may be introduced as proof of character when character is in issue or is used circumstantially. Fed. R. Evid. 405(a). — Also termed reputational evidence. Cf. character evidence. [Cases: Criminal Law C:=375; Evidence C:=106; Witnesses C:=333–362.]

retrospective evidence (re-tro-spek-tant). (1929) Evidence that, although it occurs after an act has been done, suggests that the alleged doer of the act actually did it when goods have been stolen, and the thief is sought, a person’s later possession of those goods amounts to retrospective evidence that this person took them>. — Also termed traces.

satisfactory evidence. (17c) Evidence that is sufficient to satisfy an unprejudiced mind seeking the truth. — Also termed sufficient evidence; satisfactory proof. [Cases: Evidence C:=584(1).]

scientific evidence. (17c) Fact or opinion evidence that purports to draw on specialized knowledge of a science or to rely on scientific principles for its evidentiary value. See Daubert Test. [Cases: Criminal Law C:=388; Evidence C:=150, 505–574.]

secondary evidence. (17c) Evidence that is inferior to the primary or best evidence and that becomes admissible when the primary or best evidence is lost or inaccessible. • Examples include a copy of a lost instrument or testimony regarding a lost instrument’s contents. — Also termed mediate evidence; mediate testimony; substitutionary evidence. See Fed. R. Evid. 1004. Cf. best evidence. [Cases: Criminal Law C:=398, 403; Evidence C:=157–187.]

secret evidence. (1983) Classified information that may be used against a defendant in an immigration proceeding but withheld from the defendant, the defendant’s lawyer, and the public on national-security grounds. • The use of secret evidence was made easier under the Anti-Terrorism and Effective Death Penalty Act of 1996. [Cases: Aliens, Immigration, and Citizenship C:=423.]

signature evidence. Highly distinctive evidence of a person’s prior bad acts. • While ordinarily inadmissible, signature evidence will be admitted if it shows, for example, that two crimes were committed through the same planning, design, scheme, or modus operandi, and in such a way that the prior act and the current act are uniquely identifiable as those of the defendant. See Fed. R. Evid. 404(b). [Cases: Criminal Law C:=369.15; Evidence C:=129(5), 133.]
slight evidence. (18c) A small quantity of evidence; esp., the small amount of evidence sufficient to remove a presumption from a case or for a rational fact-finder to conclude that something essential has not been established beyond a reasonable doubt. See SLIGHT-EVIDENCE RULE.

state’s evidence. (1886) Testimony provided by one criminal defendant — under a promise of immunity or reduced sentence — against another criminal defendant. See TURN STATE’S EVIDENCE.

substantial evidence. (17c) 1. Evidence that a reasonable mind could accept as adequate to support a conclusion; evidence beyond a scintilla. See STANTIAL-EVIDENCE RULE. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure ◄791; Evidence ◄597.] 2. The product of adequately controlled investigations, including clinical studies, carried out by qualified experts that establish the effectiveness of a drug under FSA regulations. 21 USCA § 355(e).

substantive evidence (sub-stand-tiv). Evidence offered to help establish a fact in issue, as opposed to evidence directed to impeach or to support a witness’s credibility. [Cases: Criminal Law ◄337; Evidence ◄266.]

sufficient evidence. See secondary evidence.

tainted evidence. (1876) Evidence that is inadmissible because it was directly or indirectly obtained by illegal means. See FRUIT-OF-THE-POISONOUS-TREE DOCTRINE. [Cases: Criminal Law ◄394; Evidence ◄154.]

testimonial evidence. (1831) A person’s testimony offered to prove the truth of the matter asserted; esp., evidence elicited from a witness. — Also termed communicative evidence; oral evidence. Cf. demonstrative evidence. [Cases: Trial ◄43.]

"An assertion is testimonial evidence whether made out of court or in court, if it is offered with a view to persuading the tribunal of the matter asserted." John H. Wigmore, A Students’ Textbook of the Law of Evidence 120 (1935).

testimony. (18c) Evidence derived from a deceased person’s former statements or reputation. — Traditioary evidence is admissible to prove ancestry, ancient boundaries, or similar facts, usu. when no living witnesses are available to testify. [Cases: Boundaries ◄35(2); Evidence ◄274, 302.]

unwritten evidence. (18c) Evidence given orally, in court or by deposition.

evidence by inspection. See demonstrative evidence under EVIDENCE.

evidence code. A relatively comprehensive set of statutory provisions or rules governing the admissibility of evidence at hearings and trials.

evidence of debt. See SECURITY (4).

evidence of indebtedness. See SECURITY (4).

evidence of insurability. Information — such as medical records or a medical examination — that an insurer may require to establish a potential insured’s qualification for a particular insurance policy. [Cases: Insurance ◄2052.]

evidence of title. (17c) The means by which the ownership of land is satisfactorily demonstrated within a given jurisdiction. See DEED (2), (3). [Cases: Property ◄9.]

"There are four kinds of evidence of title: abstract and opinion, certificate of title, title insurance and Torrens certificate. The certificate of title is used extensively in the Eastern states, and to a lesser extent in the Western states. In urban centers in the great many sections of the country, title insurance occupies a dominant position in real estate transactions. In farm areas the abstract and opinion method is common. To a great extent, the acceptability of a particular kind of evidence of title depends on the local custom." Robert Kratovil, Real Estate Law 170 (6th ed. 1974).

evidence rules. See EVIDENCE (4).

evidencing feature. Evidence. A group of circumstances that, when taken as a whole, form a composite feature that can be reliably associated with a single object. • This term appears more frequently in criminal cases than in civil. In criminal cases, the term refers to evidence that establishes a perpetrator’s identity, but in civil cases it often refers to evidence that an event did or did not occur. — Also termed evidencing mark; evidential mark.

evidencing mark. See EVIDENCING FEATURE.

evidentia (ev-i-den-sh;}-ree), n. [Law Latin] Evidence.

evidential fact. Of, relating to, relying on, or constituting evidence; evidentiary (1).

evidential fact. See evidentiary fact (2) under FACT.

evidential mark. See EVIDENCING FEATURE.

evidentiary (ev-i-den-sha-ree), adj. (1810) 1. Having the quality of evidence; constituting evidence; evidencing. 2. Pertaining to the rules of evidence or the evidence in a particular case.

evidentiary fact. See FACT.

evidentiary hearing. See HEARING.

evince, vb. (17c) To show, indicate, or reveal <in abstaining from the vote, Hariden evinced misgivings about the nomination>.

evocation (ev-ə-kay-shən). French law. The act of withdrawing a case from an inferior court and bringing it before a superior court.

evocative trademark. See suggestive trademark under TRADEMARK.

evolution statute. See ANTI-EVOLUTION STATUTE.

ex. (18c) 1. Former <ex-wife>. 2. Without <ex rights>. 3. From <ex cathedra>. 4. (usu. cap.) abbr. Exhibit <Ex. 4>. 5. abbr. Example <this is but one ex. of several that might be cited>. 6. (cap.) abbr. EXCHEQUER.

exacta diligentia. See diligentia.

exaction, n. (15c) 1. The act of demanding more money than is due; extortion. 2. A fee, reward, or other compensation arbitrarily or wrongfully demanded. [Cases: Extortion and Threats ⊑ 7, 25.1] — exact, vb.

exactor. 1. Civil law. A tax collector; a gatherer or receiver of money. 2. Criminal law. A collector of public funds; a tax collector.

ex adverso (eks ad-var-soh). [Latin] On the other side. ● This term is sometimes applied to opposing counsel.

ex aequo et bono (eks ee-kwoh et boh-noh). [Latin] According to what is equitable and good. ● A decision-maker (esp. in international law) who is authorized to decide ex aequo et bono is not bound by legal rules and may instead follow equitable principles. For example, article 38(2) of the Statute of the International Court of Justice provides that the Court may "decide a case ex aequo et bono if the parties agree thereto." 37 ILM 999. [Cases: Equity ⊑ 54.]

ex-all. Without all rights and privileges. ● Securities sold ex-all reserve all rights and privileges, such as pending dividends, to the seller.

ex altera parte (eks al-tar-oh or awl-pahr tee). [Latin] Of the other part.

examen, n. [Law Latin] A trial; investigation.

examination. (14c) 1. The questioning of a witness under oath. See direct examination; cross-examination. [Cases: Witnesses ⊑ 224–228.] 2. Bankruptcy. The questioning of a debtor, esp. at the first meeting of creditors, concerning such matters as the bankrupt's debts and assets. [Cases: Bankruptcy ⊑ 3040.]

3. An inquiry made at the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office, upon application for a patent, into the alleged invention's soundness and patentability. [Cases: Patents ⊑ 104; Trademarks ⊑ 1287.]

preliminary examination. Patents. A patent office's initial review of an application, usu. to see whether the specification is properly set out and to prepare a search report. [Cases: Patents ⊑ 104.] licenses. — Also termed board of examiners. [Cases: Licenses C21.] examining court. See court.

examining group. Patents. A subunit of the Patent Office consisting of patent examiners who specialize in a particular area of technology. [Cases: Patents C104.]

examining trial. See preliminary hearing.

element. Patents. A detailed description of an invention's embodiment. • Alternatives without detail may be referred to as by example. — Also termed specific example; working example. [Cases: Patents C99.]

ex annul roll (eks-an-yoo-al). Hist. In England, a roll into which illegible fines and desperate debts were transcribed and that was annually read to the sheriff upon his accounting to see what might be gotten.

ex ante (eks-an-tee), adj. & adv. [Latin “from before”] (1937) Based on assumption and prediction, on how things appeared beforehand, rather than in hindsight; subjective; prospective <from an ex ante perspective>. Cf. ex post.

ex arbitrio judicis (eks-ar-bit-tree-oh joo-di-sis). [Latin] Civil law. At, from, or upon the discretion of the judge.

ex assensu curiae (eks a-sen-s[y]oo kyooor-ee-ee or -t). [Latin] By or with the consent of the court.

ex assensu patris (eks a-sen-s[y]oo pay-bris). [Latin “by or with the consent of the father”] Hist. A species of dower ad ostium ecclesiae, under which a husband, by his father's express consent, would endow his wife with a parcel of the father's lands. • This type of dower was abolished in England by the Dower Act (1833). St. 3 & 4 Will. 4, ch. 105, § 13.

ex bonis (eks boh-nis). [Latin] Civil law. Of or relating to goods or property.

exambion (eks-kam-bee-ahn), n. Scots law. 1. The exchange of one piece of property for another, esp. an exchange of heritable estates. 2. excambium (1).

exambium (eks-kam-bee-am), n. [Latin] 1. An exchange; a place where merchants meet to transact their business. — Also termed (in Scots law) exambion. 2. An equivalent in recompense; a recompense in lieu of dower ad ostium ecclesiae.

ex capite doli (eks kap-i-tee doh-l). [Law Latin] Hist. On the ground of dole; for the reason of fraud. — Also termed ex capite fraudis.

ex capite lecti (eks kap-i-tee lek-ti). [Law Latin] Scots law. On the ground of deathbed. • Under some circumstances, a legal heir could overturn a deed that a grantor made to the heir's detriment if the deed were made within 60 days before the grantor's death.

ex capite metus (eks kap-i-tee mee-tus). [Latin] Scots law. On the ground of fear. • A transaction could be rescinded if it were induced by serious threats.

ex capite minoremitatis et laesiones (eks kap-i-tee minor-en-i-tay-tis et lee-zoh-nis). [Latin] Scots law. On the ground of minority and lesion. • The phrase appeared in reference to a ground upon which a minor could be restored against deeds granted by him during his minority. The phrase also referred to a basis upon which a minor could set aside a deed (on the ground of lesion) if the deed were substantially onerous.

ex cathedra (eks ka-thee-dra). [Latin] By virtue of one's high office or position; with authority <ex cathedra pronouncements>.

ex causa mandati (eks kaw-z man-day-ti). [Latin] Scots law. On account of the mandate; because of the mandate.

"A mandatory is entitled to claim from the mandate reimbursement of all moneys disbursed, as well as relief from all obligations incurred, ex causa mandati — i.e., on account of the matter which the mandate authorised to be done or performed." John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 195 (4th ed. 1894).

ex causa poestatis (eks kaw-z poe-eh-tay-tis). Roman law. Because of his position of authority. • Certain men could not marry women who were subject to their guardianship or control, and the reason was said to be ex causa poestatis.

"Certain impediments to marriage in the civil law were described as being ex causa poestatis. Thus a tutor or curator could not marry his female ward until his office had terminated, or unless his accounts had been passed. A person administering a government or public office in a province, and the members of his family, were not permitted to intermarry with a person domiciled in his province, unless they had been betrothed to each other before he had accepted the office." Alexander Wood Renton & George Grenville Phillimore, The Comparative Law of Marriage and Divorce 6 (1910).

excellency, (usu. cap.) (16c) A title of honor given to certain high officials or dignitaries, such as governors, ambassadors, and Roman Catholic bishops or archbishops.

Excelsior list. Labor law. A roster of the names and addresses of employees who are eligible to vote in a union election. • The NLRB requires an employer to file the list within seven days after the employer and a union reach a consent-election agreement. Excelsior Underwear, Inc., 156 N.L.R.B. 1236 (1966). [Cases: Labor and Employment C= 1191.]

exceptio (ek-sep-shee-oh), n. [Latin] Hist. 1. An exception, plea, or objection. 2. Roman & civil law. A defendant’s plea admitting the claim in principle but alleging facts or legal provisions that negate it in this instance. 3. A defense to a claim that is justly brought but that unjustly accuses the particular defendant named. Pl. exceptiones (ek-sep-shee-oh-neez).

exceptio dilatoria (dil-or-ee-oh-ee-a). A dilatory exception; an exception that defeated the action for a time and created a delay, such as an agreement not to sue within a certain time.

exceptio doli mali (doh-lee mal-ee). An exception, defense, or plea of fraud. — Sometimes shortened to exceptio doli.

exceptio dominii (da-min-ee). A claim of ownership by the defendant in an action to recover property.

exceptio dotis cautae non numeratae (doh-tiss kaw-tee non n[y]oo-ma-ray-tee). A defense to an action for the restitution of dowry, asserting that, although promised, dowry was never paid.

exceptio in factum (in fak-tom). An exception on the facts; an exception or plea founded on the peculiar circumstances of a case.

exceptio in personam (in par-soh-nom). A plea or defense of a personal nature that only the person to whom it is granted by law may assert.

exceptio in rem (in rem). A plea or defense that is not of a personal nature but is connected with the legal circumstances on which the suit is founded, and that may therefore be alleged by any party in interest, such as an heir or surety of the proper or original debtor.

exceptio jurisjurandi (joor-iis-juu-ran-dr). An exception of oath; an exception or plea that the matter had been sworn to. • This kind of exception was allowed if a debtor, at a creditor’s instance, had sworn that nothing was due the creditor, but the creditor sued anyway.

exceptio metus (met-eez). An exception, defense, or plea of fear or compulsion.

exceptio non adimpleti contractus (nnon ad-pee-mpl-eet kon-trak-tuss). An exception in a contract action involving mutual duties or obligations, to the effect that the plaintiff may not sue if the plaintiff’s own obligations have not been performed.

exceptio non numeratae pecuniae (ek-sep-shee-oh non n[y]oo-ma-ray-tsee pi kyoo-nee-ee). [Latin] Roman law. An exception or defense that money was not paid.

"This was one of the Roman law exceptions, founded on the obligatio literarum of the Romans. The obligatio literarum was constituted by a writing, the granter of which acknowledged receipt from the creditor of a certain sum of money. But as the obligation was sometimes granted before the money was advanced, spe numerandae pecuniae, by the Roman law, the obligation, until the lapse of two years after its date and delivery, did not prove the receipt of the money; and the debtor against whom, within that time, a demand for repayment was made, might plead the exceptio non numeratae pecuniae; that is, that the money of which repayment was demanded, was truly never advanced. The exception was sufficient to elide the demand, unless the creditor proved that he had advanced the money." William Bell, Bell’s Dictionary and Digest of the Law of Scotland 426 (George Watson ed., 7th ed. 1890).

exceptio non soluta pecuniae (non sa-loo-tee pik-yoo-nee-ee). A plea that the debt at issue in the suit had not been discharged by payment (as the adverse party alleged), notwithstanding the existence of a receipt or acquittance reflecting payment. Cf. exceptio pecuniae non numeratae.

exceptio pacti conventi (pak-ti-kon-ven-ti). An exception of compact; a defense or plea that the plaintiff had agreed not to sue.

exceptio pecuniae non numeratae (pi-kyoo-nee-ee non n[y]oo-ma-ray-tee). An exception or plea of money not paid; a defense by a party who was sued on a promise to repay money that was never received from the plaintiff. Cf. exceptio non soluta pecuniae; pecunia non numerata.

exceptio peremptoria (par-emp-tor-ee-ee-a). A peremptory exception that forever destroyed the subject matter or ground of the action, such as the exceptio doli mali and the exceptio metus. — Also termed exceptio perpetua.

exceptio plurium concubentium (ploor-ee-am kon-kyoo-ben-shy-am). Rare. The plea or defense in a paternity action that the plaintiff had several lovers around the time of conception.

exceptio rei judicatae (ree-ee joo-da-kay-tee). An exception or plea of matter adjudged; a plea that the subject matter of the action had been determined in a previous action.

exceptio rei venditae et traditae (ree-ee ven-da-tsee et trad-ee-tsee). An exception or plea of the sale and delivery [of a thing]. • This exception presumes a valid sale but, because no one can transfer a right greater than what is possessed, no valid transfer of property occurred, yet the real owner is nonetheless estopped from contesting the sale.

exceptio senatusconsulti Macedoniani (sa-nay-tos-kah-ma-do-nee-ee-ni). A defense to an action for the recovery of money loaned, on the ground that the loan was made to a person who was under another person’s paternal power. • This defense is so named from the decree of the senate that forbade the recovery of such loans.

exceptio senatusconsulti Velleiani (sa-nay-tos-vay-le-ee-ee-ni). A defense to an action on a contract of suretyship, on the ground that the surety was a woman and thus incapable of becoming bound for another. • This defense is so named from the decree of the senate forbidding such sureties.

exceptio temporis (tem-po-ris). An exception or plea that the time prescribed by law for bringing a particular action has expired.

exception, n. (14c) 1. A formal objection to a court’s ruling by a party who wants to preserve an overruled objection or rejected proffer for appeal <the prosecutor stated her exception to the court’s ruling disallowing the witness’s testimony>. • To make an exception or objection, attorneys sometimes say, “I except” or “I object.” Exception properly refers only to an objection made after an initial objection or proffer is made and overruled. In most courts, an exception is no longer required to preserve the initial objection. [Cases: Appeal and Error C= 248-280; 1048-1060; Pleading C=228-228.23.] The following quotation reflects former practice: “The exception must be distinguished from the objection. Many counsel are heard carelessly saying ‘I except’ when the thing they are doing is ‘I object.’ The exception serves an entirely distinct purpose from the objection, — a double purpose, in fact. It warns the judge and the other party that the excepter is not satisfied with the ruling and takes issue with a view to appeal; and it sums up and preserves the precise terms of the ruling. The proponent of the evidence is the excepter if the ruling excludes the evidence; but if it admits the evidence, the opponent of the evidence is the excepter. Thus the excepter and the objector are not necessarily the same parties.” John H. Wigmore, A Students’ Textbook of the Law of Evidence 421 (1935).

dehutor exception (di-klm-er-ee). Louisiana law. An exception to a court’s jurisdiction. • Grounds for refusing to submit to a court’s jurisdiction include lack of personal jurisdiction and insufficient service of process. [Cases: Pleading C= 228.2.] dilatory exception (di-ler-ee). (1822) Louisiana law. An exception intended to delay but not dismiss an action. [Cases: Pleading C= 228.6, 228.7.]

general exception. (16c) 1. An objection pointing out a substantive defect in an opponent’s pleading, such as the insufficiency of the claim or the court’s lack of subject-matter jurisdiction; an objection to a pleading for want of substance. — Also termed general demurrer. Cf. special exception (1). [Cases: Pleading C= 228.13.] 2. An objection in which the excepting party does not specify the grounds of the objection.

peremptory exception. (16c) Louisiana law. A defensive pleading asserting that no legal remedy exists for the plaintiff’s alleged injury, that res judicata or prescription bars the claim, or that an indispensable party has not been included in the litigation. [Cases: Pleading C= 228.8.]

special exception. See special exception.

2. Something that is excluded from a rule’s operation <employers with fewer than five employees are an exception to the rule>.

statutory exception. (18c) A provision in a statute exempting certain persons or conduct from the statute’s operation. [Cases: Statutes C=228.]

3. The retention of an existing right or interest, by and for the grantor, in real property being granted to another. Cf. reservation (1). [Cases: Deeds C=137, 141.] — except, vb.

exceptionable (ek-sep-shan-bal), adj. (17c) Liable to objection; objectionable.

exceptional charge. See special charge under charge.

exception clause. A clause that attempts to modify or exclude the prima facie obligations that arise when a document is signed. — Also termed exemption clause. [Cases: Deeds C=137-140.]

exceptio plurium concubentium defense. 1. See multiple access. 2. See exceptio plurium concubentium under exceptio.

exceptor, n. One who takes exception; an objector. — Also spelled excepter.

excepta (ek-sorp-ta), n. pl. [Latin] Extracts.

ex certa scientia (eks sar-ta- st-en shee a). [Latin] Of certain or sure knowledge. • This phrase was anciently used in patents, and imported full knowledge of the subject matter on the part of the sovereign.

excess-benefit plan. See employee benefit plan.

excess clause. An insurance-policy provision — usu. contained in the “other insurance” section of the policy — that limits the insurer’s liability to the amount exceeding other available coverage. • This clause essentially requires other insurers to pay first. Cf. escape clause; pro rata clause. [Cases: Insurance C= 2110.]

Exchequer (eks-chek-ar or eks-chek-ar). (14c) 1. English law. The government department charged with collecting and administering the national revenue; the treasury department. • The name is said to have derived from the checkered cloth, resembling a chessboard, that anciently covered the table on which certain of the king's accounts were tallied, the sums being marked and scored with counters. 2. COURT OF EXCHEQUER. — Abbr. Ex.

Exchequer bill. A bill of credit issued in England by the authority of Parliament; an instrument issued at the Exchequer, usu. under the authority of an act of Parliament passed for that specific purpose, containing an engagement on the part of the government to repay, with interest, the principal sums advanced.

Exchequer Chamber. An English court of intermediate appeal from the common-law courts, namely, the Court of King's Bench, the Court of Common Pleas, and the Court of Exchequer. • It was established in 1822. — Also termed Camera Scaccarii.

Exchequer Division. Hist. English law. A division of the High Court of Justice, to which the business of the Court of Exchequer was specially assigned by section.
34 of the Judicature Act of 1873, and later merged into the Queen's Bench Division in 1881.

excise, n. (15c) A tax imposed on the manufacture, sale, or use of goods (such as a cigarette tax), or on an occupation or activity (such as a license tax or an attorney occupation fee). — Also termed excise tax. Cf. income tax and property tax under tax. [Cases: Taxation ☐ 3251, 3602.]

excise lieu property tax. See tax.

excise tax. See excise.

excision. See female genital mutilation.

excited utterance. (1800) A statement about a startling event made under the stress and excitement of the event. • An excited utterance may be admissible as a hearsay exception. Fed. R. Evid. 803(2). Cf. present sense impression. [Cases: Criminal Law ☐ 363–368; Evidence ☐ 120.]

excludable, adj. (1916) 1. (Of evidence) subject to exclusion <excludable hearsay>. 2. (Of an alien) ineligible for admission or entry into a country.

excludable alien. See alien.

exclusion, n. 1. *Tax. An item of income excluded from gross income. — Also termed income exclusion. [Cases: Internal Revenue ☐ 3110; Taxation ☐ 3447.]

annual exclusion. (1940) The amount allowed as nontaxable gift income during the calendar year. • The purpose of the annual exclusion is both to serve as an estate-planning mechanism (so that gifts made during the donor's lifetime remain nontestamentary and nontaxable) and to eliminate the administrative inconvenience of taxing relatively small gifts. In 2009, for an individual, the first $13,000 in gifts can be excluded; for married persons, the exclusion is $26,000 per couple for joint gifts, regardless of which spouse supplied the donated property. IRC (26 USCA) § 2503. — Also termed annual gift-tax exclusion. [Cases: Internal Revenue ☐ 4206.10.]

2. Evidence. A trial judge's determination that an item offered as evidence may not be presented to the trier of fact (esp. the jury). 3. Insurance. An insurance-policy provision that excepts certain events or conditions from coverage. [Cases: Insurance ☐ 2098.] — exclude, vb. — exclusionary, adj.

automobile exclusion. A provision in some commercial general liability policies, excluding coverage for damages arising from the use (including loading and unloading) of an automobile, aircraft, or other motor vehicle owned, operated, rented, or borrowed by the insured. [Cases: Insurance ☐ 2278(13).]

business-risk exclusion. An exclusion in some commercial general liability policies, excluding coverage for common risks of doing business, including harm to the insured's product or work, damages arising from a product recall, damages arising from the insured's failure to perform under a contract, or damages arising from a failure of the insured's product to perform as intended. [Cases: Insurance ☐ 2278(20).]

design-defect exclusion. A provision in some umbrella policies and some older commercial general liability policies, excluding coverage for bodily injury arising from the failure of the insured's product to perform its intended function because of a defect or deficiency in its design, formula, specifications, instructions, or advertising materials. [Cases: Insurance ☐ 2278(21).]

employee-liability exclusion. A provision in some commercial general liability policies, excluding coverage for injury to an employee (or a member of the employee's family), arising from and in the course of employment with the insured. • This exclusion is generally intended to exclude from coverage all injuries covered by the workers' compensation laws. [Cases: Insurance ☐ 2278(11, 12).]

employment-related-practices exclusion. A provision in some commercial general liability policies, excluding coverage for damages arising from an insured's employment practices, including any policy, action, or omission — such as coercion, demotion, evaluation, reassignment, discipline, defamation, harassment, humiliation, or discrimination — that is directed at the person injured. [Cases: Insurance ☐ 2278(11).]

expected/intended exclusion. A provision in some commercial general liability policies, excluding coverage for property damage or bodily injury that is expected or intended by the insured, except any harm arising from the use of reasonable force to protect a person or property. • This exclusion is sometimes referred to as "exclusion a" because it is the first exclusion listed on most policies. — Also termed exclusion a; intentional-injury exclusion. [Cases: Insurance ☐ 2278(3).]

failure-to-perform exclusion. A provision in some commercial general liability policies, excluding coverage for (1) the loss of use of undamaged property resulting from the insured's delay or failure in performing an obligation, or (2) a design defect or failure in the insured's product. — Also termed loss-of-use exclusion. [Cases: Insurance ☐ 2278(21).]

knowledge-of-falsity exclusion. A provision in some commercial general liability policies, excluding coverage for damages arising from an oral or written communication made by the insured with knowledge that it is false. [Cases: Insurance ☐ 2303(2), 2313(2).]

named-insured exclusion. An exclusion limiting liability-insurance coverage to a named insured whose injuries were caused by another named insured under the same insurance policy. [Cases: Insurance ☐ 2278(1), 2745–2747.]
owned-property exclusion. Insurance. A provision in a comprehensive general liability insurance policy allowing only third parties who are injured on or by the insured's property to make liability claims against the insurer. • The provision ordinarily excludes coverage for (1) property owned, rented, occupied, sold, given away, or abandoned by the insured, (2) personal property in the care, custody, or control of the insured, and (3) property located where the insured and its employees work. [Cases: Insurance 2278(25).]

own-product exclusion. A provision in some commercial general liability policies, excluding coverage for property damage to a product that is manufactured, sold, handled, distributed, or disposed of by the insured. [Cases: Insurance 2278(21).]

own-work exclusion. A provision in some commercial general liability policies, excluding coverage for damage to the work or services performed by the insured. [Cases: Insurance 2278(21).]

pollution exclusion. A provision in some commercial general liability policies, excluding coverage for bodily injury or property damages arising from the discharge, dispersal, release, or escape of chemicals, waste, acid, and other pollutants. • Pollution-exclusion clauses may take one of two forms: (1) sudden and accidental, and (2) absolute. The sudden-and-accidental clause, usu. limited to policies issued before 1985, contains an exception under which the damages are covered (i.e., exempted from the exclusion) if the discharge or other release was sudden and accidental. The absolute pollution exclusion, in most policies issued since 1985, does not contain this exception. [Cases: Insurance 2278(24).]

sistership exclusion. A provision in some commercial general liability policies, excluding coverage for damages arising from the withdrawal, inspection, repair, replacement, or loss of use of the insured’s product or work, to the extent that the product or work is withdrawn or recalled from the market because of a known or suspected defect or deficiency. — Also termed recall exclusion. [Cases: Insurance 2278(21).] exclusion a. See expected/intended exclusion under exclusion (3).

exclusionary hearing. See HEARING.

exclusionary practice. Antitrust. A method by which a firm can gain or maintain monopoly power without the express or tacit cooperation of competing or potentially competing firms.

exclusionary rule. (1855) 1. Evidence. Any rule that excludes or suppresses evidence <despite many exceptions, hearsay has long been inadmissible under an exclusionary rule.> — Also termed exclusionary evidence rule. [Cases: Evidence 154, 314.] 2. Criminal procedure. A rule that excludes or suppresses evidence obtained in violation of an accused person's constitutional rights <in accordance with the exclusionary rule, the court did not admit the drugs into evidence because they had been obtained during a warrantless search of the defendant’s home>. See FRUIT-OF-THE-POISONOUS-TREE DOCTRINE; GOOD-FAITH EXCEPTION. [Cases: Criminal Law 394.]

“The deterrence of unreasonable searches and seizures is a major purpose of the exclusionary rule. ... But the rule serves other purposes as well. There is, for example, ... 'the imperative of judicial integrity,' namely, that the courts do not become 'accomplices in willful disobedience of a Constitution they are sworn to uphold.' ... A third purpose of the exclusionary rule ... is that of 'assuring the people -- all potential victims of unlawful government conduct -- that the government would not profit from its lawless behavior, thus minimizing the risk of seriously undermining popular trust in the government.' Wayne R. LaFave & Jerold H. Israel, Criminal Procedure § 3.1. at 107 (2d ed. 1992) (quoting Elkins v. United States, 364 U.S. 206, 80 S.Ct. 1437 (1960); United States v. Calandra, 414 U.S. 338, 94 S Ct. 613 (1974) (dissent)).

"In the simplest of exclusionary rule cases, the challenged evidence is quite clearly 'direct' or 'primary' in its relationship to the prior arrest, search, interrogation, lineup or other identification procedure. Such is the case when that evidence is an identification occurring at the confrontation between suspect and victim or witness, a confession or admission made in response to questioning, or physical evidence obtained by search or arrest. Not infrequently, however, challenged evidence is 'secondary' or 'derivative' in character. This occurs when, for example, a confession is obtained after an illegal arrest, physical evidence is located after an illegally obtained confession, or an in-court identification is made following an illegally conducted pretrial identification. In these situations, it is necessary to determine whether the derivative evidence is 'tainted' by the prior unconstitutional or other violation." Wayne R. LaFave & Jerold H. Israel, Criminal Procedure § 9.3, at 471 (2d ed. 1992).

ex continenti (eks kon-to-ten-tee). [Latin] Civil law. Immediately; without any interval or delay.
ex-coupon bond. See bond (2). exculpatory clause. (1891) A contractual provision relieving a party from liability resulting from a negligent or wrongful act. • A will or a trust may contain an exculpatory clause purporting to immunize a fiduciary from a breach of duty; the clause may reduce the degree of care and prudence required of the fiduciary. But courts generally find that if an exculpatory clause in a will or trust seeks to confer absolute immunity, it is void as being against public policy. See exemption clause. [Cases: Contracts ⊕=114, 189.5.] exculpatory evidence. See evidence.
exculpatory-no doctrine. (1977) Criminal law. The principle that a person cannot be charged with making a false statement for falsely denying guilt in response to an investigator’s question. • This doctrine is based on the Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination. But the U.S. Supreme Court has overruled this doctrine in federal law. Brogan v. United States, 522 U.S. 398, 118 S.Ct. 805 (1998). [Cases: Fraud ⊕=68.10(1).]
ex curia (eks kyoor-ee-a). [Latin] Out of court; away from the court.

ex debito justitiae (eks deb-i-toh jas-tish-ee-ee), [Latin] From or as a debt of justice; in accordance with the requirement of justice; right; as a matter of right.

ex debito naturali (eks deb-i-toh nach-a-ray-lee), [Law Latin] Scots law. Arising from natural obligation. • The phrase appeared in reference to an obligation that was moral rather than legal.

ex defectu juris (eks di-fek-tu jor-is), [Law Latin] Scots law. From a defect in the right. • A seller had to warrant a purchaser against an eviction based on a defect in the seller's own right.

ex defectu natalium (eks di-fek-tu na-tay-lee-am), [Law Latin] Hist. From defect of parentage. • Formerly, this phrase appeared in reference to a basis upon which the court rejected the will of a bastard who died without issue.

ex defectu familiae (eks di-fek-tu fa-mil-ee-ee), [Law Latin] Hist. From choice of a certain family. • The phrase appeared in reference to the sovereign's right to bestow honors on those whom he chose.

"Formerly all writs which passed the signet were procured by presentation of a bill (or petition) for such writ. The bill was perused and considered by the Lord Ordinary on the Bills, and if he was satisfied, the bill was passed and the writ issued: the latter bearing the words ex deliberatione Dominorum Concilii to signify that the bill had been considered. These words are still appended to almost all writs which pass the signet, but they are now only words of style, since the writs are now passed periculo potensit without being submitted to the Lords." John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 196-97 (4th ed. 1894).

ex delicto (eks da-lik-toh), adj. & adv. [Latin "from a wrong"] 1. Arising from a crime or tort <action ex delicto>. • Although ex delicto refers most commonly to a tort in modern usage, it referred historically to both torts and crimes. Cf. in delicto; ex contractu. 2. Int'l law. Rare. As a consequence of a crime or tort <because they were counterfeit, the goods were seized and condemned ex delicto>.

ex delicto trust. See trust.

executor de son tort (de sawn or son tor(t)). [Law French "executor of his own wrong"] (17c) A person who, without legal authority, takes on the responsibility to act as an executor or administrator of a deceased's property, usu. to the detriment of the estate's beneficiaries or creditors. [Cases: Executors and Administrators 538–544.]

"Executor de son tort — or, executor of his own wrong. Is he that takes upon him the office of an executor by intrusion, not being so constituted by the testator." The Pocket Lawyer and Family Conveyancer 98 (3d ed. 1839).
executor lucratus (loo-kray-tos). An executor who has assets of the testator, the latter having become liable by wrongfully interfering with another's property.

executor testamentarius. See executor a testator constitutus.

executor to the tenor. Eccles. law. A person who is not named executor in the will but who performs duties similar to those of an executor.

general executor. (18c) An executor who has the power to administer a decedent's entire estate until its final settlement.

independent executor. (1877) An executor who, unlike an ordinary executor, can administer the estate with very little supervision by the probate court. • Only a few states — mostly in the West and Southwest — allow testators to designate independent executors. But lawyers routinely write wills that relieve a trusted executor from obtaining appraisals, from providing inventories and surety bonds, and from obtaining court approval “to the maximum extent permitted by law.” The Uniform Probate Code endorses independent administration, and it is the usual process unless a party demands court-supervised administration. — Also termed nonintervention executor. [Cases: Executors and Administrators C-1, 7, 75.]

joint executor. (17c) One of two or more persons named in a will as executor of an estate. — Also termed coexecutor. [Cases: Executors and Administrators C-123.]

executory bequest. See bequest.

executory consideration. See consideration (1).

executory contract. See contract.

executory covenant. See covenant (1).

executory devise. See devise.

executory interest. (1833) A future interest, held by a third person, that either cuts off another's interest or begins after the natural termination of a preceding estate. Cf. remainder. [Cases: Estates in Property C-1.]

“What is an executory interest? Here is a pretty good definition: An executory interest is any future interest created in a person other than the transferor that is not a remainder. Here are five classic examples of executory interest: (1) O transfers 'to A for life; then, one day after A's death, to the heirs of A.' The transfer creates a springing executory interest in those who will be A's heirs. (2) O transfers 'to A for 200 years if he shall so long live, then to the heirs of A.' This transfer also creates a springing executory interest in A's prospective heirs. (3) O transfers 'to A and his heirs five years from the date of this deed.' A owns a springing executory interest. (4) O, when B is fifteen, transfers 'to A for life: then no sooner than one day after A's death, to B and his heirs if B ever reaches 21.' B owns a springing executory interest. (5) O transfers 'to A and his heirs; but if A marries X, to B and his heirs.' B owns a shifting executory interest.” Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 80 (2d ed. 1984).

shifting executory interest. An executory interest that operates in defeasance of an interest created simultaneously in a third person. [Cases: Wills C-625.]

springing executory interest. An executory interest that operates in defeasance of an interest left in the transferor. [Cases: Wills C-625.]

executory judgment. See judgment.

executory limitation. See limitation.

executory process. Civil law. 1. A process that can be resorted to either (1) when the right of a creditor arises from an act importing a confession of judgment, and that contains a privilege or mortgage in the creditor's favor, or (2) when the creditor demands the execution of a judgment that has been rendered by a different tribunal. 2. An accelerated procedure, summary in nature, by which the holder of a mortgage or privilege evidenced by a confession of judgment seeks to effect an exparte seizure and sale of the subject property. [Cases: Chattel Mortgages C-269; Mortgages C-499.]

executory remainder. See contingent remainder under remainder.

executory sale. See sale.

executor trust. See trust.

exemption clause. (1840) A contractual provision providing that a party will not be liable for damages for which that party would otherwise have ordinarily been liable. Cf. exception clause; excusable clause; indemnity clause. [Cases: Contracts C=114, 189.5.]

"An exemption clause may take many forms, but all such clauses have one thing in common in that they exempt a party from a liability which he would have borne had it not been for the clause. In some cases an exemption clause merely relieves a party from certain purely contractual obligations, for example, the duties of a seller in a contract of sale regarding the quality and fitness of the goods. In other cases exemption clauses go further and protect the party not merely from contractual liability but even from liability which would otherwise have arisen in tort. For example, a shipping company's ticket may exempt the company from liability to the passenger for any injuries, however caused. Now if the passenger is injured as a result of the negligence of the company's employees, that would, in the normal way, give rise to an action in tort for negligence, quite apart from the contract." P.S. Atiyah, An Introduction to the Law of Contract 167 (3d ed. 1981).

exemption equivalent. The maximum value of assets that one can transfer to another before incurring a federal gift and estate tax.

exemption law. (1839) A law describing what property of a debtor cannot be attached by a judgment creditor or trustee in bankruptcy to satisfy a debt. See exempt property (1). [Cases: Exemptions C=1; Homestead C=1.]

exempt property. (1839) 1. A debtor's holdings and possessions that, by law, a creditor cannot attach to satisfy a debt. • All the property that creditors may lawfully reach is known as nonexempt property. Many states provide a homestead exemption that excludes a person's house and household items, up to a certain amount, from the liens of most creditors. The purpose of the exemption is to prevent debtors from becoming destitute. See homestead. Cf. Nonexempt property. [Cases: Exemptions C=1; Homestead C=1.] 2. Personal property that a surviving spouse is automatically entitled to receive from the decedent's estate. [Cases: Executors and Administrators C=53.] exempt security. See security.

"The traditional rule can . . . be fairly simply stated. A litigant must normally exhaust state 'legislative' or 'administrative' remedies before challenging the state action in federal court. He or she need not normally exhaust state 'judicial' remedies. The rationale for this distinction is that until the administrative process is complete, it cannot be certain that the party will need judicial relief, but when the case becomes appropriate for judicial determination, he or she may choose whether to resort to a state or federal court for that relief. The word 'normally' is required in both branches of the rule." Charles Alan Wright, The Law of Federal Courts § 49, at 313 (5th ed. 1994).

vicarious exhaustion of remedies. The rule that if one member of a class satisfies a requirement to exhaust administrative remedies, that is enough for all others similarly situated to be considered as having exhausted the remedies. — Often shortened...

ex officio (eks nob-i-1 a-fish-ee-oh). [Latin "by virtue of its noble office". Scots law. (Of a judicial act) done as a matter of equity. See NOBILI OFFICIO.

ex officio (eks a-fish-ee-oh), adv. & adj. [Latin] (16c) By virtue or because of an office; by virtue of the authority implied by office. • The term is often misused as a synonym for "nonvoting." Some meetings mistakenly label their regularly invited guests as "ex officio members" when in fact they are not members at all; others mistakenly refer to the nonvoting members as "ex officio members" even though some nonvoting members are present only in an individual capacity and not by virtue of office, or even though some voting members also serve ex officio. But an ex officio member is a voting member unless the applicable governing document provides otherwise.

"Frequently boards include ex-officio members — that is, persons who are members of the board by virtue of an office or committee chairmanship held in the society, or in the parent state or national society or federation or some allied group; or — sometimes in boards outside of organized societies — by virtue of a public office. In the executive board of a society, if the ex-officio member of the board is under the authority of the society (that is, if he is a member, officer, or employee of the society), there is no distinction between him and the other board members. If the ex-officio member is not under the authority of the society, he has all the privileges of board membership, including the right to make motions and to vote, but none of the obligations — just as in a case, for example, where the governor of a state is ex officio a trustee of a private academy." Henry M. Robert, Robert's Rules of Order Newly Revised § 49, at 466 (10th ed. 2000).

ex officio information. English law. A criminal information filed by the attorney general ex officio on behalf of the Crown, in the Court of King's Bench, for offenses more immediately affecting the government, as distinguished from informations in which the Crown is the nominal prosecutor.

ex officio justice. (1855) A judge who serves on a commission or board only because the law requires the presence of a judge rather than because the judge was selected for the position.

ex officio member. See member ex officio under member.

ex officio service (eks a-fish-ee-oh), (1845) A service that the law imposes on an official by virtue of the office held, such as that of a local justice of the peace or in the parent state or national society or federation or some allied group; or — sometimes in boards outside of organized societies — by virtue of a public office. In the executive board of a society, if the ex-officio member of the board is under the authority of the society (that is, if he is a member, officer, or employee of the society), there is no distinction between him and the other board members. If the ex-officio member is not under the authority of the society, he has all the privileges of board membership, including the right to make motions and to vote, but none of the obligations — just as in a case, for example, where the governor of a state is ex officio a trustee of a private academy." Henry M. Robert, Robert's Rules of Order Newly Revised § 49, at 466 (10th ed. 2000).

exoneration (eg-zon-a-ray-shan). (16c) 1. The removal of a burden, charge, responsibility, or duty. 2. The right to be reimbursed by reason of having paid money that another person should have paid. 3. The equitable right of a surety — confirmed by statute in many states — to proceed to compel the principal debtor to satisfy the obligation, as when, even though the surety would have a right of reimbursement, it would be inequitable for the surety to be compelled to perform if the principal debtor can satisfy the obligation. • When a testator leaves a gift of property encumbered by a mortgage or lien, the doctrine of exoneration operates to satisfy the encumbrance from the general assets of the estate. Many states have abandoned the common-law rule in favor of exoneration. See EQUITY OF EXONERATION;quia timet. [Cases: Principal and Surety C=179; Wills C=736, 821.] exoneration, suit for. See suit for exoneration.

exoneratione sectae ad curiam baron (eg-zon-a-ray-shee-oh-nee sek-tee ad kyoor-ee-ee-am bar-an). [Latin "by exoneration of the suit to the lord's court"] Hist. A writ issued by the guardian of the Crown's ward, forbidding the sheriff or steward of a particular court from distraining or taking other action against the ward.

expressed, adj. (16c) Declared in direct terms; stated in words; not left to inference or implication.
rule, it is not even lexicographically accurate, because it is simply not true, generally, that the mere express conferment of a right or privilege in one kind of situation implies the denial of the equivalent right or privilege in other kinds. Sometimes it does and sometimes it does not, and whether it does or does not depends on the particular circumstances of context. Without contextual support, therefore, there is not even a mild presumption here. Accordingly, the maxim is at best a description, after the fact, of what the court has discovered from context. "Reed Dickerson, The Interpretation and Application of Statutes 234-35 (1975).

"The canon ex rei. est exclusio alterius is . . . based on the assumption of legislative omniscience, because it would make sense only if all omissions in legislative drafting were deliberate. Although this canon seemed dead for a while, it has been resurrected by the Supreme Court to provide a basis for refusing to create private remedies for certain statutory violations. Its recent disparagement by a unanimous Court in Herman & MacLean v. Huddleston, 459 U.S. 375, 386 n.23, 103 S.Ct. 683, 690 n. 23 (1983) puts its future in some doubt but more likely confirms that judicial use of canons of construction is opportunistic." Richard A. Posner, The Federal Courts: Crisis and Reform 282 (1985).

expunge (ek-spanj), vb. (17c) 1. To erase or destroy <the trustee wrongfully expunged the creditor's claim against the debtor>. 2. Parliamentary law. To declare (a vote or other action) null and outside the record, so that it is noted in the original record as expunged, and redacted from all future copies. — Also termed rescind and expunge; rescind and expunge from the minutes; rescind and expunge from the record. — expugnate (ek-spanj-mant), expungation (ek-spank-shun), n.

"Where it is desired not only to rescind an action but to express very strong disapproval, legislative bodies have voted to rescind the objectionable action and expunge it from the record. When a record has been expunged, the chief legislative officer should cross out the words or draw a line around them in the original minutes and write across them the words, 'Expunged by order of the senate (or house),' giving the date of the order. This statement should be signed by the chief legislative officer. The word 'expunged' must not be so blotted as not to be readable, as otherwise it would be impossible to determine whether more was expunged than ordered. When the minutes are printed or published, the expunged portion is omitted." National Conference of State Legislatures, Mason's Manual of Legislative Procedure § 444, at 296-97 (2000).

expungement of record. (1966) The removal of a conviction (esp. for a first offense) from a person's criminal record. — Also termed expunction of record; erasure of record. [Cases: Criminal Law C--1226.] extrac tion. Intellectual property. The transfer of data from a database from the server where the database resides to a different computer or medium.

"Extraction' is something of a misnomer, given that the extracted contents will remain on the original database, and are accordingly copied from, not removed from, it. It is also somewhat illogical that the contents must be removed to another medium. Removal to the same medium should also constitute extraction,” Ingrid Winternitz, Electronic Publishing Agreements 28 (2000).

extra curtem domini (eks-tra kar-tum dom-ee-an-ee). [Law Latin] Hist. Beyond the domain of the superior. • A vassal was not usu. required to perform a service (such as transporting grain) beyond the superior’s jurisdiction.

extra territorium (eks-tra ter-d-tor-ee-dm). [Latin] Beyond or outside the territory.

Extravagantes (ek-strav-a-gan-teez), n. pl. [Law Latin “wanderings”] Eccles. law. Papal constitutions and decretal epistles of Pope John XXII and certain of his successors. • These epistles were so called because they were not digested or arranged with the other papal decretals, but appeared detached from canon law. The term remained even after the epistles were later included in the body of canon law.

extra viam (eks-tra vee-am). [Latin “out of the way”] A plaintiff's responsive pleading in a trespass action, asserting that the defendant's claim of a right-of-way across the plaintiff's land is not a defense to the action because the defendant strayed from the supposed right-of-way. [Cases: Trespass C=>42.]

extra vires (eks-tra vi-recz or veer-eez). See ultra vires.

extra work. See work.

extreme cruelty. See cruelty.

extreme force. See deadly force.

extrinsic, adj. (17c) From outside sources; of or relating to outside matters. — Also termed extraneous.

extrinsic ambiguity. See latent ambiguity.

extrinsic evidence. See evidence.

extrinsic fraud. See fraud.

extrinsic test. Copyright. A test for determining whether two ideas or works are substantially similar by listing and analyzing like and unlike elements. • The test may be applied and decided by the trier of law rather than the trier of fact. Cf. intrinsic test.

ex turpi causa (eks tor-pi kaw-za). [Latin] From an immoral consideration. • This phrase, a shortened form of the maxim ex turpi causa non oritur actio (“from an immoral consideration an action does not arise”), expresses the principle that a party does not have a right to enforce performance of an agreement founded on a consideration that is contrary to the public interest. [Cases: Action φ→ 4; Contracts φ→ 158(1).]

“The doctrine ex turpi causa has made its way into the law as an extension of a moral principle. If it is misused, the principle suffers. Moreover, its misuse is a symptom of a disease of thought that debilitates the law and morals. This is the failure to recognize that there is a fundamental difference between the law that expresses a moral principle and the law that is only a social regulation. If only in the growth of English law that distinction had been maintained, much of the arbitrariness and the absurdities in the cases I have cited would have been avoided. There is a dictum of Lord Wright’s which may some day be used as a foundation for a change of heart. Speaking of the maxim ex turpi causa, he said: ‘In these days there are many statutory offences which are the subject of the criminal law and in that sense are crimes, but which would, it seems, afford no moral justification for a court to apply the maxim’. Beresford v. Royal Insurance (1937), 2 KB, at 220.” Patrick Devlin, The Enforcement of Morals 60 (1968).

ex-vere patriam (eks-ya-lair-ee), vb. [Latin] Hist. To renounce one’s country or native allegiance; to expatriate oneself.

eyewitness. (16c) One who personally observes an event. Cf. earwitness.

eyewitness identification. (1939) A naming or description by which one who has seen an event testifies from memory about the person or persons involved.

eigene (ayn), n. See eignen.

eyre (air), [Old French eire “journey, march”] (12c) Hist. A system of royal courts sent out into the counties by the Crown to investigate allegations of wrongdoing, to try cases, and to raise revenue for the Crown through the levy of fines. • The eyre system was abolished in the 13th century. See articles of the eyre; justice in eyre.

“...In 1176 the itinerant justices were organised into six circuits... The justices assigned to these circuits, who numbered as many as twenty or thirty at a time in the 1180s, were known as justiciae errantes (later justiciarii in iterine, justices in eyre); and the French word ‘eyre’ became the name of one of the most prominent forms of royal justice until the time of Edward III. Every so often a ‘general eyre’ would visit a county, bringing the king’s government with it... The general eyres were not merely law courts; they were a way of supervising local government through itinerant central government.” J.H. Baker, An Introduction to English Legal History 19 (3d ed. 1990).

eyrer (air-ar), vb. [Law French] (12c) Hist. To travel or journey; to go about.
F. 1. abbr. The first series of the Federal Reporter, which includes federal decisions (trial and appellate) from 1880 to 1924. 2. Hist. A letter branded on a felon who claimed benefit of clergy so that the felon could claim the benefit only once. • Additionally, those convicted for an affray (fray) or falsity were so branded.

"He that shall maliciously strike any person with a Weapon in Church or Churchyard, or draw any Weapon there with intent to strike, shall have one of his Ears cut off; and, if he have no Ears, then shall be marked on the Cheek with a hot Iron, having the Letter F, whereby he may be known for a Fray-maker or Fighter." Thomas Blount, Nomo-Lexicon: A Law-Dictionary (1670).

"F. is a Letter wherewith Felons, &c. are branded and marked with an hot Iron, on their being admitted to the Benefit of Clergy." Giles Jacob, A New Law-Dictionary (8th ed. 1762).

facsimile signature. See signature.

facsimile transmission. 1. See fax (1). 2. See fax (3).

fact. (15c) 1. Something that actually exists; an aspect of reality (<it is a fact that all people are mortal>). • Facts include not just tangible things, actual occurrences, and relationships, but also states of mind such as intentions and opinions. 2. An actual or alleged event or circumstance, as distinguished from its legal effect, consequence, or interpretation (<the jury made a finding of fact>). 3. An evil deed; a crime (<an accessory after the fact>).

ablativ fact. See dispositive fact.

alienative fact (ə-joo-di-kay-tiv or -ka-tiv). (1959) A controlling or operative fact, rather than a background fact; a fact that concerns the parties to a judicial or administrative proceeding and that helps the court or agency determine how the law applies to those parties. • For example, adjudicative facts include those that the jury weighs. Cf. legislative fact. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure ☞ 442.]

alienative fact (ay-lee-a-nay-tiv or ay-lee-a-na-tiv). A fact that divests a person of a right by transferring it to another.

ancient fact. A fact about a person, thing, or event that existed or occurred a very long time ago, and about which no living person has firsthand knowledge. — Also termed fact in pais.

collateral fact. A fact not directly connected to the issue in dispute, esp. because it involves a different transaction from the one at issue. [Cases: Evidence ☞ 99.]

collative fact. See investigative fact.

denotative fact (dee-noh-tay-tiv or di-noh-tay-tiv). A fact relevant to the use of a nonlegal term in a legal rule.

destitutive fact. See dispositive fact.

dispositive fact (dis-poz-ə-tiv). (1946) 1. A fact that confers rights or causes the loss of rights. • A dispositive fact may be either an investigative or a dispositive fact. — Also termed vestitive fact (ves-tay-tiv). 2. A fact that is decisive of a legal matter; evidence that definitively resolves a legal issue or controversy. See disposition.

divestitive fact (di-ves-tay-tiv or di-vat). (1973) A fact that causes the loss of rights; an act or event modifying or extinguishing a legal relation. — Also termed extinutive fact; destitutive fact; ablative fact.

elemental fact. See ultimate fact.

evaluative fact. (1986) A fact used to assess an action as being reasonable or negligent.

evidentiary fact (ev-i-den-sha-ree) (1855) 1. A fact that is necessary for or leads to the determination of an ultimate fact. — Also termed predicate fact. 2. A fact that furnishes evidence of the existence of some other fact. — Also termed evidential fact. 3. See fact in evidence.

exonerative fact (eg-zon-ə-tiv or -ay-tiv). (1980) A divestitive fact that extinguishes a duty.

extinctive fact. See dispositive fact.

fabricated fact. See fabricated evidence under evidence.

fact in evidence. (18c) A fact that a tribunal considers in reaching a conclusion; a fact that has been admitted into evidence in a trial or hearing. — Also written fact-in-evidence. — Also termed evidentiary fact.

“A fact-in-evidence, or, briefly, evidence, signifies any facts considered by the tribunal as data to persuade them to reach a reasoned belief upon a probandum. This process of thought by which the tribunal reasons from fact to probandum is termed inference.” John H. Wigmore, A Students’ Textbook of the Law of Evidence 7 (1935).

fact in issue. (usu. pl.) (17c) 1. Hist. A fact that one party alleges and that the other party contests. 2. A fact to be determined by a fact-finder; probandum. — Also written fact-in-issue. — Also termed principal fact.

“A fact-in-issue is a fact as to the correctness of which the tribunal, under the law of the case, must be persuaded; the fact in pais. See ancient fact.

fact material to risk. Insurance. A fact that may increase the risk and that, if disclosed, might induce the insurer either to decline to insure or to require a higher premium. [Cases: Insurance C=2958, 2963.]

foundational fact. See predicate fact.

immaterial fact. A fact that is not relevant to a matter in issue.

impositive fact. An investitive fact that imposes duties.

inferential fact. (1858) A fact established by conclusions drawn from other evidence rather than from direct testimony or evidence; a fact derived logically from other facts. [Cases: Criminal Law C=559; Evidence C=595.]

investitive fact (in ves-ta-tiv). (1939) A fact that confers rights. — Also termed collative fact (ka-lay-tiv).

judicial fact. (1862) See judicially noticed fact.

judicially noticed fact. A fact that is not established by admissible evidence but may be accepted by the court because the fact is generally known within the trial court’s territorial jurisdiction, or because its validity can be determined from sources whose accuracy cannot be reasonably questioned. See Fed. R. Evid. 201(b). — Also termed judicial fact. See JUDICIAL NOTICE. [Cases: Criminal Law C=304; Evidence C=1.]

jurisdictional fact. (usu. pl.) (1837) A fact that must exist for a court to properly exercise its jurisdiction over a case, party, or thing. See JURISDICTIONAL-FACT DOCTRINE.

legal fact. (18c) A fact that triggers a particular legal consequence.

legislative fact. (1828) A fact that explains a particular law’s rationality and that helps a court or agency determine the law’s content and application. • Legislative facts are not ordinarily specific to the parties in a proceeding. Cf. adjudicative fact.

“[L]egislative fact includes matters needed to construe statutes or regulations, and factual assumptions a court makes when called upon to ‘legislate.’ Examples of the latter might include the fact that spouses will communicate less if they are not granted a privilege covering their confidences, or that marital harmony will be strained if spouses can be compelled to testify against each other — facts which might be useful in helping a court decide whether to create or continue a common-law marital privilege. . . . Obviously, legislative facts of this nature do not and cannot meet the indisputability criterion of the Rule [Fed. R. Evid. 201], nor are they required to.” Paul F. Rothstein, The Federal Rules of Evidence 35-36 (3d ed. 2003).

material fact. (1848) A fact that is significant or essential to the issue or matter at hand. [Cases: Evidence C=143; Federal Civil Procedure C=2470.1; Judgment C=181(2).] minor fact. A subordinate fact or circumstance.

operative fact. (1857) 1. A fact that affects an existing legal relation, esp. a legal claim. • When applying the hearsay rule, this term distinguishes between out-of-court statements that are operative facts (e.g., a party’s saying “I agree to reimburse you” in a case for breach of oral contract), and hearsay, out-of-court statements that only relate to operative facts (e.g., “Joel told me Mike said he would reimburse me”). [Cases: Evidence C=267, 269.] 2. A fact that constitutes the transaction or event on which a claim or defense is based.

physical fact. (1857) A fact having a physical existence, such as a fingerprint left at a crime scene.

predicate fact (pred-ə-kit). (1899) 1. A fact from which a presumption or inference arises. [Cases: Criminal Law C=305, 353.] 2. A fact necessary to the operation of an evidentiary rule. • For example, there must actually be a conspiracy for the co-conspirator exception to the hearsay rule to apply. — Also termed foundational fact; evidentiary fact. [Cases: Evidence C=53.]

presumed fact. A fact whose existence can be justifiably inferred from facts established by evidence. [Cases: Criminal Law C=305; Evidence C=53.]

principal fact. (18c) A fact that can be established by direct testimony and from which inferences are made leading to ultimate facts. See ultimate fact.

principal fact. 1. See fact in issue. 2. See ultimate fact.

private fact. (16c) A fact that has not been made public. • Whether a fact is private often arises in invasion-of-privacy claims. Cf. public fact.

probative fact (proh-ba-tiv). (1858) A fact in evidence used to prove an ultimate fact, such as skid marks used to show speed as a predicate to a finding of negligence.

psychological fact. A fact that is related to mental state, such as motive or knowledge.

public fact. (1955) For the purpose of an invasion-of-privacy claim, a fact that is in a public record or in the public domain. Cf. private fact. [Cases: Torts C=357.]

relative fact. A fact incidental to another fact; a minor fact.

simulated fact. (1943) A fabricated fact intended to mislead; a lie.

translative fact (trans- or trans-lay-tiv). A fact by means of which a right is transferred from one person to another; a fact that fulfills the double function of terminating one person’s right to an object and of originating another’s right to it.

transvestitive fact. A fact that is simultaneously investitive and divestitive.

“[W]hen a person transfers the rights he has to another, the transfer divests him of the potestas, and invests that other with it. This is quite distinct from the creation or extinction of the potestas. A new descriptive term is wanted, and after the analogy of the other words, ‘transvestitive’ has been coined for the purpose.” W.A. Hunter, A Systematic and Historical Exposition of Roman Law 141 (4th ed. 1902).
ultimate fact. (18c) A fact essential to the claim or the defense. — Also termed elemental fact; principal fact.

undisputed fact. (18c) An uncontested or admitted fact.

vestitive fact. See dispositive fact (1).

fact-finder. (1926) One or more persons — such as jurors in a trial or administrative-law judges in a hearing — who hear testimony and review evidence to rule on a factual issue. — Also termed finder of fact; fact-trier or trier of fact (in a judicial proceeding); fact-finding board (for a group or committee). See FINDING OF FACT.

fact-finding. (1909) 1. The process of taking evidence to determine the truth about a disputed point of fact. 2. One who hears testimony and reviews evidence to rule on a factual issue. — Also termed fact-finder. — Also termed fact-finding board. See FACT-FINDER.

fact interrogatory. See INTERROGATORY.

fact-finding board. See FACT-FINDER.

fact issue. See issue of fact under issue (1).

facto (fak-toh), adj. In or by the fact. See DE FACTO; IPSO FACTO.

facto et animo (fak-toh et an-a-moh). [Latin] In fact and intent <taking possession facto et animo>.

factor. n. (15c) 1. An agent or cause that contributes to a particular result <punishment was a factor in the court’s decision>. 2. An agent who is employed to sell property for the principal and who possesses or controls the property; a person who receives and sells goods for a commission . — A factor differs from a broker because the factor possesses or controls the property. — Also termed commission merchant; del credere bailiff. Cf. BROKER. [Cases: Factors C–1, 1.]

"A factor by the rules of common law and of mercantile usage is an agent to whom goods are consigned for the purpose of sale, and he has possession of the goods, power to sell them in his own name, and a general discretion as to their sale. He may sell them on the usual terms of credit, may receive the price, and give a good discharge to the buyer." William R. Anson, Principles of the Law of Contract 523 (Arthur L. Corbin ed., 3d Am. ed. 1919).

3. One who buys accounts receivable at a discount <the company sold its receivables to a factor at only 5% of their stated value>. [Cases: Factors C–1, 3.] 4. A garnishee <the factor held $400 of the debtor’s property when the writ of garnishment was served>. [Cases: Garnishment C–13–24.] 5. A person in charge of managing property, esp. real property.

judicial factor. Scots law. An administrator or factor specially appointed by the Court of Session to manage an estate.

factorage. (17c) 1. The compensation paid to a factor for his or her services. [Cases: Factors C–44.] 2. The business of a factor. [Cases: Factors C–1, 5.]

factorizing. n. The buying of accounts receivable at a discount. — The price is discounted because the factor (who buys them) assumes the risk of delay in collection and loss on the accounts receivable. [Cases: Factors C–1, 5, 10.]

factorize (fak ta-riz), vb. (19c) 1. GARNISH (2). 2. GARNISH (3). — factorization, n.

factorizing process. (1837) A procedure or legal process by which a third party, rather than the creditor, attaches a debtor’s property; GARNISHMENT. — Also termed trustee process; process by foreign attachment. [Cases: Garnishment C–1.]

"In Vermont and Connecticut, the [garnishee] is also sometimes called the factor, and the process [of garnishing], factorizing process." Charles D. Drake, A Treatise on the Law of Suits by Attachment in the United States § 451, at 386 (7th ed. 1891).

factor’s act. A statute protecting one who buys goods from a factor or agent by creating the presumption that the agent was acting on the owner’s behalf and with the owner’s approval. [Cases: Factors C–58.]

factor’s lien. See LIEN.

factory act. A statute that regulates workers’ hours, health, and safety. See FAIR LABOR STANDARDS ACT.

fact pleading. See code pleading under PLEADING (2).

fact question. See QUESTION OF FACT.

fact-trier. See FACT-FINDER.

factual cause. See but-for cause under cause (1).

factual impossibility. See IMPOSSIBILITY.

factum (fak-tam), n. [Latin] (18c) 1. A fact, such as a person's physical presence in a new domicile. 2. An act or deed, such as the due execution of a will. • Over time, factum in this sense came to mean "charter" — that is, the act or deed of conveying land, reduced to written form. See fraud in the factum under fraud.

"It is only a short step to holding as a matter of law that a 'deed' — and by a deed, factum men are beginning to mean a sealed piece of parchment — has an operative force of its own which intentions expressed, never so plainly, in other ways have not. The sealing and delivering of the parchment is the contractual act. Further, what is done by 'deed' can only be undone by 'deed.'" 2 Frederick Pollock & Frederic Willoughby, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 220 (2d ed. 1889).

factum probandum (fak-tam pro-ba-dam). [Latin] A fact to be proved.

"Evidence is always a relative term. It signifies a relation between two facts, the factum probandum, or proposition to be established, and the factum probans, or material evidencing the proposition. The former is necessarily to be conceived of as hypothetical; it is that which the one party affirms and the other denies, the tribunal being as yet not committed in either direction. The latter is conceived of for practical purposes as existent and is offered as such for the consideration of the tribunal. The latter is brought forward as a reality for the purpose of convincing the tribunal that the former is also a reality." John Henry Wigmore, Evidence in Trials at Common Law § 2, at 14–15 (Peter Tillers ed., 1983).

factum probans (fak-tam proh-ban-z). [Latin] A probative or evidentiary fact; a subsidiary fact tending to prove a principal fact in issue.

3. A statement of facts. 4. BRIEF (1). PI. facta.

factum of a will. The formal ceremony of making a will; a will's execution by the testator and attestation by the witnesses.

fact work product. See WORK PRODUCT.

facultative certificate (fak-al-tay-tiv). Insurance. A contract of reinsurance separately negotiated to cover risks under a single insurance policy. • Facultative reinsurance allows the reinsurer the "faculty" of assessing and possibly rejecting a particular risk (esp. if underwriting information is inadequate). [Cases: Insurance C–3605.]

facultative reinsurance. See REINSURANCE.

faculties. (16c) Hist. Eccles. law. 1. An authorization granted to a person to do what otherwise would not be allowed. 2. The extent of a husband's estate; esp., the ability to pay alimony. See ALLEGATION OF FACULTIES.

Faculties, Master of the. See MASTER OF THE FACULTIES.

Faculties, Court of. See COURT OF FACULTIES.

Faculties, Faculty of. See court of faculties.

Faculty of Advocates. Scots law. The society comprising the members of the Scottish bar. • Unlike the English bar, the advocates do not have chambers, but all share the facilities of Advocates' Library in Parliament House.

faderfum (fa-thar-fee-am). Hist. A marriage gift to the bride from her father or brother.

faeder-feoh (fa-thor-fee). Hist. Property brought by a wife to her husband at marriage. • If the husband died, the property reverted to the widow if the heir of the deceased husband refused consent to her second marriage. The property reverted to the widow's family if she returned to them.

faggot. Hist. 1. A piece of firewood used to burn a heretic alive. 2. An embroidered figure of a faggot, required to be worn by heretics who had recanted.

fail, n. A transaction between securities brokers in which delivery and payment do not occur at the prescribed time, usu. on the settlement date. — Also termed fail contract.

fail to deliver. The nondelivery of securities from a selling broker to a buying broker by the settlement date.

fail to receive. The failure of a buying broker to receive delivery of securities from the selling broker by the settlement date.

fail, vb. (13c) 1. To be deficient or unsuccessful; to fall short <they failed to settle the dispute>. 2. To become insolvent or bankrupt <two banks failed last week>. 3. To lapse <the bequest failed as a result of ademption>.

fail contract. See FAIL.

failed devise. See lapsed devise under DEVISE.

failed gift. 1. See lapsed devise under DEVISE. 2. See lapsed legacy under LEGACY.

failed legacy. See lapsed legacy under LEGACY.

failing circumstances. See INSOLVENCY.

failing-company doctrine. Antitrust. The rule that allows an otherwise proscribed merger or acquisition between competitors when one is bankrupt or near failure. 15 USCA §§ 12–27. — Also termed failing-firm defense. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation C–910.]

"The 1992 guidelines provide a limited defense for failing firms and failing divisions of firms. The defense is available if impending failure would cause the assets of one party to leave the market if the merger does not occur. Thus to establish a failing firm defense, the parties must show that the failing firm cannot (1) meet its financial obligations, (2) reorganize in bankruptcy, and (3) find another buyer whose purchase of the firm would pose lesser anticompetitive risks. The parties must further show that (4) without the merger, the failing firm's assets will exit the market." Ernest Gellhorn & William E. Kovacic, Antitrust Law and Economics in a Nutshell 398–99 (4th ed. 1994).

fail position. A situation existing when, after all transactions in a security have been netted out, a broker owes another broker more securities than it has coming in from other firms.

failure. (17c) 1. Deficiency; lack; want. 2. An omission of an expected action, occurrence, or performance. See lapse (2).

failure of a condition. The nonoccurrence of an event that has been made a condition of the contract. • The usual result is that one or both of the parties do not have to perform because of the failure of the condition.

failure of consideration. See failure of consideration.

failure of good behavior. A civil servant's act that is ground for removal. [Cases: Officers and Public Employees ☞ 69.7.]

failure of issue. See failure of issue.

failure of justice. See miscarriage of justice.

failure of proof. A party's not having produced evidence establishing a fact essential to a claim or defense.

failure of title. A seller's inability to establish a good claim to the property contracted for sale. Cf. clear title under title (2). [Cases: Vendor and Purchaser ☞ 129(1).]

failure of trust. The invalidity of a trust because the instrument creating it has a defect or because of its illegality or other legal impediment. [Cases: Trusts ☞ 68.]

failure of will. The invalidity of a will that was not executed with necessary statutory formalities.

failure otherwise than on the merits. The defeat of a plaintiff's claim by a procedural device without a decision on the existence of the claim's elements.

failure to bargain collectively. An employer's refusal to discuss labor issues with a union. [Cases: Labor and Employment ☞ 1479.]

failure to claim. Patents. A finding by the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office or by a court that a patent applicant or patentee has forfeited the right to broader protection by not seeking protection for some disclosed subject matter. • Any art outside the explicit claims, including foreseeable alteration of the claimed structure, is considered dedicated to the public domain.

failure to make delivery. Nondelivery or misdelivery.

failure to meet obligations. 1. See bankruptcy (4). 2. See insolvency. failure to perform. A party's not meeting its obligations under a contract. See contract (4). [Cases: Contracts ☞ 261(1), 312(1), 315.]

failure to state a cause of action. A plaintiff's not having alleged facts in the complaint sufficient to maintain a claim. • This failure warrants dismissal of the complaint. [Cases: Pleading ☞ 48; Pretrial Procedure ☞ 622.]

failure to testify. A party's — esp. a criminal defendant's — decision not to testify. • Under the Fifth Amendment, the prosecutor and the judge cannot comment to the jury on a criminal defendant's failure to testify. But comments on the failure are usu. permissible in a civil case. [Cases: Criminal Law ☞ 2129; Evidence ☞ 76; Witnesses ☞ 88.]

failure of consideration. (1803) A seriously deficient contractual performance that causes a contract's basis or inducement to cease to exist or to become worthless. • Scholars disapprove of this term as misleading, since failure of performance is more accurate. Unlike consideration, the phrase failure of consideration relates not to the formation of a contract but to its performance. See consideration (1). Cf. want of consideration. [Cases: Contracts ☞ 83, 260, 309(1).]

"An illustration will help indicate how the term is used. If C promises to build a structure for O and O promises to make payment when the work is completed, it is clear that there is consideration on both sides of this contract and that therefore a contract was formed upon the exchange of promises. If C fails to perform, the result is sometimes described as a 'failure of consideration.' 'Failure of consideration' simply means a failure to perform and as used covers both a material breach of constructive conditions and a failure to perform an express condition. The use of the term 'failure of consideration' in this sense appears to be an unnecessary invitation to confusion because the word consideration is being used in two different senses. Fortunately, the use of this phrase has gradually fallen into disuse. It is, however, still sufficiently widespread to be mentioned here. This volume nowhere utilizes 'failure of consideration' as an operative concept. — John D. Calamari & Joseph M. Perillo, The Law of Contracts § 11-21, at 474-75 (3d ed. 1987)."

partial failure of consideration. (1808) A party's incomplete performance of a contract with multiple, severable performances, so that if some of the performances are not accomplished, the appropriate part of the agreement can be apportioned to whatever has been completed. [Cases: Contracts ☞ 86, 260.]

total failure of consideration. (1809) A situation in which the contract is indivisible so that a complete lack of consideration voids the contract. [Cases: Contracts ☞ 85, 260.]

failure of good behavior. See failure.

failure of issue. (17c) Archaic. The fact of a person's dying when the person has no surviving children or other descendants who are eligible to inherit the person's estate. — Also termed dying without issue; definite failure of issue: default of issue. See issue (3). [Cases: Descent and Distribution ☞ 14–16.]

"There has been considerable litigation during the past several centuries over the meaning of a gift to 'A and his heirs, but if A shall die without issue, to B and his heirs.' First of all, what does 'die without issue' mean? The answer appears simple — you look to the time of A's death to determine whether or not he has any children or grandchildren. But that is not the way the English courts originally construed this language. The English adopted the so-called 'indefinite failure of issue' construction — if at any time in the future A's line of descent should come to an end, then there was a gift over to B and his heirs. The effect of this was a fee tail in A and a remainder in B. This seems a distortion of the language, and particularly unsuited to American circumstances since the fee tail never found a real home here. Most of our jurisdictions, by judicial failure to perform. See failure.

failure-to-perform exclusion. See exclusion (3).

failure to protect. Family law. The refusal or inability of a parent or guardian to prevent abuse of a child under his or her care. [Cases: Infants C=156, 179.]

failure to state a cause of action. See failure.

failure-to-supervise statute. See parental-liability statute.

failure to testify. See failure.

failure to thrive. (1967) Family law. 1. A medical and psychological condition in which a child's height, weight, and motor development fall significantly below average growth rates. • Failure to thrive is sometimes asserted as a ground for alleging abuse or neglect by a parent or caregiver. 2. A condition, occurring during the first three years of a child's life, in which the child suffers marked retardation or ceases to grow. — Abbr. FTT.

faint action. See feigned action.

faint pleader. (17c) A false, fraudulent, or collusive manner of pleading.

fair, adj. (bef. 12c) 1. Impartial; just; equitable; disinterested <everyone thought that Judge Jones was fair>. 2. Free of bias or prejudice <in jury selection, the lawyers tried to select a fair and impartial jury>.

fair, n. (13c) Hist. A privileged market for the buying and selling of goods. • A fair was an incorporeal hereditament granted to a town by royal patent or franchise or established by prescription. The franchise to hold a fair conferred important privileges, and a fair, as a legally recognized institution, possessed distinctive legal characteristics, most of which are now obsolete. Cf. market overt under market.

fair-and-equitable requirement. (17c) Bankruptcy. A Bankruptcy Code standard requiring a forced, non-consensual Chapter 11 plan (a "cramdown" plan) to provide adequately for each class of interests that has not accepted the plan. • In determining whether a cramdown plan is fair and equitable and thus can be confirmed, a bankruptcy court must apply the Code's detailed statutory criteria, consider the plan as a whole, and weigh all the circumstances surrounding the treatment of each impaired class of interests. In addition to the fair-and-equitable requirement, the Chapter 11 cramdown plan must (1) be accepted by at least one impaired class of claims, and (2) not discriminate unfairly among impaired classes that have not accepted the plan. 11 USCA § 1129(b). See cramdown. [Cases: Bankruptcy C=3563.] fair and impartial jury. See impartial jury under jury.

fair and impartial trial. See fair trial.

fair and proper legal assessment. See equalization (2).

fair and reasonable value. See fair market value under value (2).

fair and valuable consideration. See fair consideration (1) under consideration (1).

fair averaging. The process of assessing taxes by using the average of the amount and price of goods acquired over a 12-month period rather than the amount and price at a particular time of the year.

fair cash market value. See fair market value under value (2).

fair cash value. See fair market value under value (2).

fair comment. (18c) A statement based on the writer's or speaker's honest opinion about a matter of public concern. • Fair comment is a defense to libel or slander. [Cases: Libel and Slander C=48(1).]

fair competition. See competition.

fair consideration. See consideration (1).

Fair Credit Billing Act. A federal law that facilitates the correction of billing errors by credit-card companies and makes those companies more responsible for the quality of goods purchased by cardholders. 15 USCA §§ 1666-1666j. [Cases: Consumer Credit C=37.]
fair-credit-reporting act. (1971) A federal or state law that regulates disclosure and use of consumer-credit information and ensures the right of consumers to have access to and to correct their credit reports. • The federal Fair Credit Reporting Act was enacted in 1970. 15 USCA §§ 1681–1681u. — Abbr. FCRA. [Cases: Credit Reporting Agencies ⊖1–4.]

fair-cross-section requirement. (1975) Constitutional law. The principle that a person’s right to an impartial jury, guaranteed by the Sixth Amendment, includes a requirement that the pool of potential jurors fairly represent the composition of the jurisdiction’s population. • The pool of potential jurors need not precisely match the composition of the jurisdiction. But the representation of each group must be fair — no group should be systematically excluded or underrepresented. A minimal disparity in a particular group’s representation, such as an absolute disparity of 10%, will not ordinarily violate this principle unless some aggravating factor exists. See DUREN TEST; ABSOLUTE DISPARITY; COMPARATIVE DISPARITY; STATISTICAL-DECISION THEORY. [Cases: Jury ⊖33(1.1).]

fair dealing, n. (17c) 1. The conduct of business with full disclosure, usu. by a corporate officer with the corporation. [Cases: Corporations ⊖314, 316.] 2. A fiduciary’s transacting of business so that, although the fiduciary might derive a personal benefit, all interested persons are fully apprised of that potential and of all other material information about the transaction. Cf. SELF-DEALING. 3. Canadian law. Fair use.

Fair Debt Collection Practices Act. A federal statute that regulates debt-collection practices, and defines the rights of consumers who are contacted by debt collectors. 15 USCA §§ 1692–1692p. — Abbr. FDCPA. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation ⊖210.]

fair hearing. See HEARING.

fairly-debatable rule. 1. Insurance. In some states, a test that requires an insurer to have a plausible basis for denying a claim to avoid bad-faith liability. [Cases: Insurance ⊖3336.] 2. Zoning. A doctrine that bars a court from interfering with a zoning decision that is supported by substantial evidence, although it is one on which reasonable minds can differ. • A court will not interfere with a decision supported by substantial evidence. [Cases: Zoning and Planning ⊖602, 605, 703.] fair market value. See VALUE (2).

fairness doctrine. (1965) Hist. A federal law, based on an FCC rule, requiring the broadcast media to furnish a reasonable opportunity for the discussion of conflicting views on issues of public importance. • The FCC abandoned the fairness doctrine in 1987. — Also termed equal-time doctrine. Cf. EQUAL TIME ACT. [Cases: Telecommunications ⊖1153(2).] fair notice. See NOTICE.

fair on its face. (18c) (Of a document) having the appearance of being regular or legal and not capable of being shown to be defective without extraneous evidence.

fair persuasion. See PERSUASION.

fair play. Equity, candor, and fidelity in dealings with another.

fair preponderance of the evidence. See PREPONDERANCE OF THE EVIDENCE.

fair presentation. 1. Commercial law. A materially accurate disclosure of a company’s financial condition, achieved by selecting and using appropriate accounting policies, reasonably reflecting transactions that underlie the financial data, and making any additional necessary disclosures. 2. Criminal law. The requirement that an applicant for a writ of habeas corpus in a state’s custody must show (1) he or she has exhausted all available remedies in the state courts, (2) the state has offered no corrective process, or (3) circumstances exist that render a state’s corrective process insufficient to protect the applicant’s rights. [Cases: Habeas Corpus ⊖380.] fair rate of return. See RATE OF RETURN.

fair-report privilege. (1980) A defense to liability for publishing defamatory matter from a report of an official or judicial proceeding, when the report is a full, fair, and accurate account of the proceeding. [Cases: Libel and Slander ⊖39, 42.]

fair representation. Labor law. Union representation that adequately covers all union members in collective bargaining and in the lodging of grievances. [Cases: Labor and Employment ⊖1208, 1209.]

fair return on investment. See RETURN.

fair sale. See SALE.

fair-share membership. See FINANCIAL-CORE MEMBERSHIP.

fair trade, n. Commerce conducted under a fair-trade agreement.

fair-trade agreement. (1937) A commercial agreement that a seller will sell all of a producer’s goods at or above a specified minimum price. • Fair-trade agreements were valid until 1975, when the Consumer Goods Pricing Act made them illegal. 15 USCA §§ 1, 45.

fair-trade law. A state statute that protects and enforces fair-trade agreements. • At one time, many states had fair-trade laws. But when applied to interstate commerce conducted under a fair-trade agreement, they were invalid under the commerce clause.
commerce, the laws may violate the Sherman Antitrust Act, so most states have repealed them.

fair trial. (17c) A trial by an impartial and disinterested tribunal in accordance with regular procedures; esp., a criminal trial in which the defendant's constitutional and legal rights are respected. — Also termed fair and impartial trial.

fair use. (1869) Copyright. A reasonable and limited use of a copyrighted work without the author's permission, such as quoting from a book in a book review or using parts of it in a parody. • Fair use is a defense to an infringement claim, depending on the following statutory factors: (1) the purpose and character of the use, (2) the nature of the copyrighted work, (3) the amount of the work used, and (4) the economic impact of the use. 17 USCA § 107. — Also termed (in Canadian law) fair dealing. [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property C≈ 53.2.]

"[Fair use is] the most troublesome [problem] in the whole law of copyright." Dellar v. Samuel Goldwyn, Inc., 104 F.2d 661, 662 (2d Cir. 1939) (per curiam).

"Fair use is a judicial safety valve, empowering courts to excuse certain quotations or copies of copies of material even though the literal terms of the Copyright Act prohibit them." Paul Goldstein, Copyright's Highway 84 (1994).

fair value. See fair market value under value (2).

fair-value accounting method. See accounting method.

fair-value law. A statute allowing a credit against a deficiency for the amount that the fair market value of land exceeds the price at foreclosure. — Also termed fair-value legislation. [Cases: Mortgages C≈ 559(7), 561.7.]

fair warning. (1931) Criminal law. The requirement that a criminal statute define an offense with enough precision so that a reasonable person can know what conduct is prohibited and so that a reasonably skilled lawyer can predict what conduct falls within the statute's scope. — Also termed fair notice. [Cases: Criminal Law C≈ 13.1.]

fait (fa) [Law French fr. Latin factum] Anything done; an act or deed. • The term fait accompli (fay or fe tah-kom-pless), meaning "a deed accomplished," which is not merely legal, is related to this word.

fait enrolle (fa or fe ton roh), [Law French] Hist. An enrolled deed of a sale of a freehold estate.

faith and trust. See flim flam.

Faithfully Executed Clause. (1967) The clause of the U.S. Constitution providing that the President must take care that the laws are carried out faithfully. U.S. Const. art. II, § 3. [Cases: United States C≈ 26.]

faith-healing exemption. Family law. In a child-abuse or child-neglect statute, a provision that a parent who provides a child with faith healing (in place of standard medical treatment) will not, for that reason alone, be charged with abuse or neglect. • Nearly all states have enacted some form of faith-healing exemption. But the statutes differ greatly. For example, they differ on whether the exemption is available as a defense to manslaughter or murder charges brought against a parent whose child dies as a result of the parent's having refused to consent to medical treatment. — Also termed religious-exemption statute; spiritual-treatment exemption. Cf. medical neglect under neglect.

fake, n. (19c) Something that is not what it purports to be. See forgery (2); * impostor.*

fake, vb. (19c) To make or construct falsely. See counterfeit.

Falcidian law (fal si-dee an). (17c) Roman law. A law prescribing that one could give no more than three-fourths of one's property in legacies and that the heirs should receive at least one-fourth (the Falcidian portion). • If the testator violated this law, the heir had the right to deduct proportionally from each legatee as necessary. The law, proposed by the Roman tribune Falcidius, was enacted in 40 B.C. — Also termed lex Falcidia. See legitime.

"A large number of small legacies might [either] leave nothing for the heir... or make his part so small as to seem valueless in his eyes. But a Falcidian law, passed in the year 40 B.C., put an end to the whole difficulty. This law secured to the heir a quarter of the net value of the estate; the legatees could obtain only three-quarters: if the legatees named in the will amounted to more than this, they were diminished by proportional reductions... Few measures have accomplished their purpose more satisfactorily than the Falcidian law, which remained in force through the history of the empire, and holds an important place in the system of Justinian." James Hadley, Introduction to Roman Law 321-22 (1881).

Falcidian portion. Roman law. The one-fourth part of an estate that one or more instituted heirs are entitled to retain. La. Civ. Code art. 1494. — Also termed quarta Falcidiana. See forced heir under heir; legitime. Cf. quaarta trebelianica.

Falconer error. A trial court's failure to instruct the jury that a guilty finding on a manslaughter charge requires acquittal on a murder charge. Falconer v. Lane, 905 F.2d 1129 (7th Cir. 1990).

faldage (fahl dij), n. Hist. 1. A landowner's right to require tenants to graze their sheep in designated temporary folds so that the manure will fertilize the field. — Also termed faldage; fold soc. 2. A sum of money paid to the landowner by a sheep-owning tenant in lieu of keeping the animals in the landowner's temporary fold. — Also termed faldfee.

faldfee (fahl fe), n. Hist. See faldage (2).

faldworth (fahld worth), n. Hist. A person who resides in a rural community where everyone above a certain age is responsible for the good conduct of all other members of the community and has reached that age of responsibility. • This was part of the frankpledge system. See decanary; frankpledge.

fallacy. Any unsound, and usu. deceptive, argument or inference. • Both "formal" and "material" fallacies occur in a variety of recognized categories, knowledge of which is fundamental in the analysis of the validity.
false imprisonment of legal reasoning employed in any legal argument, esp. in judicial opinions. The presence of a fallacy in a legal argument is a defect — often fatal and usu. deceptive — in the legal reasoning.

formal fallacy. A fallacy involving flaws in the form of the argument, such as a violation of the formal rules of syllogistic reasoning.

material fallacy. A fallacy involving flaws in the factual content of a logical argument.

falso (fahl-yoh), n. Spanish law. The mandate in a court's judgment; the dispositive sentence in a judicial pronouncement.

fall of the hammer. An auctioneer's closing of bidding <the bureau will be sold at the fall of the hammer>. Traditionally, an auctioneer bangs a hammer, gavel, or other object when bidding is closed. In some circumstances, such as online auctions, a verbal announcement that bidding is closed substitutes. [Cases: Auctions and Auctioneers — 7]

falsa demonstratio (fal-sa or fawl-sa dem-an-stray-shhee-oh), Roman law. A false designation; an erroneous description of a person or thing in a legal instrument. Generally, a simple error in description, grammar, or spelling will not void an instrument or even a single provision in it (such as a bequest by will). — Also termed false demonstration.

falsa moneta (fal-sa or fawl-sa mo-nee-ta), Roman law. Counterfeit money.

falsare (fal-sair-ee or fawl-), vb. [Law Latin] Hist. To counterfeit; to falsify.

falsarius (fal-sair-ee-as or fawl-). [Law Latin] Hist. A counterfeiter. — Also spelled falsarious. — Also termed fasonarius.

false, adj. (12c) 1. Untrue . 2. Deceitful; lying . 3. Not genuine; inauthentic <false coinage>. 4. What is false can be so by intent, by accident, or by mistake.

false, vb. 1. Scots law. To make or prove false. 2. Archaic. FALSIFY (1).

false action. See FEIGNED ACTION.

false advertising, n. (1911) 1. The tortious and sometimes criminal act of distributing an advertisement that is untrue, deceptive, or misleading; esp., under the Lanham Trademark Act, an advertising statement that tends to mislead consumers about the characteristics, quality, or geographic origin of one's own or someone else's goods, services, or commercial activity. — Under § 43(a) of the Lanham Act, false advertising is actionable by anyone who reasonably believes that he or she has been or is likely to be damaged by the statement. An exaggerated opinion (" puffing") is an immaterial statement and therefore not actionable. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation — 21, 163; Fraud — 11(1).] 2. At common law, a statement in a defendant's advertising about its own goods or services intended to deceive or confuse customers into buying those goods or services instead of the plaintiff's, and causing actual damage to the plaintiff, esp. the loss of sales. — Also termed (in both senses) deceptive advertising.

false answer. See ANSWER (1).

false arrest. See ARREST.

false-association claim. Intellectual property. A claim based on the wrongful use of a distinctive name, mark, trade dress, or other device to misrepresent sponsorship, origin of goods or services, or affiliation. The power to assert a false-association claim is not limited to trademark registrants. Any person who claims an injury caused by deceptive use of a trademark or its equivalent may have standing to bring suit. See 15 USCA §§ 1129(a)(1)(A). [Cases: Trademarks — 1106, 1117, 1563.]

false character. Hist. The crime of impersonating a servant's master or mistress. See IMPOSTOR.

false check. See bad check under CHECK.

false claim. An assertion or statement that is untrue; esp., overbilling.

False Claims Act. A federal statute establishing civil and criminal penalties against persons who will the government falsely, deliver less to the government than represented, or use a false record to decrease an obligation to the government. 18 USCA §§ 286 — 287; 31 USCA §§ 3729 — 3733. — The Act may be enforced by either the attorney general or by a private person in a qui tam action. See QUI TAM ACTION. [Cases: United States — 120.]

false conflict of laws. See CONFLICT OF LAWS.

false demonstration. See FALSA DEMONSTRATIO.

false designation of origin. Trademarks. A mark, design, or similar element that creates a misleading or erroneous impression of a good or product's source. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation — 1419.]

false evidence. See false testimony under TESTIMONY.

falsehood. 1. See LIE. 2. See PERJURY.

false impersonation. See IMPERSONATION.

false-implication libel. See LIBEL.

false imprisonment. (14c) A restraint of a person in a bounded area without justification or consent. — False imprisonment is a common-law misdemeanor and a tort. It applies to private as well as governmental detention. Cf. false arrest under ARREST. [Cases: False Imprisonment — 2, 43.]

"[In the phrase false imprisonment,] false is . . . used not in the ordinary sense of mendacious or fallacious, but in the less common though well-established sense of erroneous or wrong; as in the phrases false quantity, false step, false taste, etc." R.F.V. Heuston, Salmond on the Law of Torts 123 n.38 (17th ed. 1977).

"False imprisonment was a misdemeanor at common law and is recognized by some states today. It differs from kidnapping in that asportation is not required. If the imprisonment is secret, some jurisdictions treat it as kidnapping." Arnold H. Loewy, Criminal Law in a Nutshell 65 (2d ed. 1987).
false judgment. Hist. A writ filed to obtain review of a judgment of a court not of record.

"After judgment given, a writ also of false judgment lies to the courts at Westminster to rehear and review the cause, and not a writ of error; for this is not a court of record . . . ." 3 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 34 (1768).

false light. (1962) 1. Torts. In an invasion-of-privacy action, a plaintiff's allegation that the defendant attributed to the plaintiff views that he or she does not hold and placed the plaintiff before the public in a highly offensive and untrue manner. • If the matter involves the public interest, the plaintiff must prove the defendant's malice. See invasion of privacy by false light under invasion of privacy. [Cases: Torts $= 352.] 2. (usu. pl.) Maritime law. A signal displayed intentionally to lure a vessel into danger. 18 USCA § 1658(b). — Also termed false light or signal.

false making. See forgery (1).

false-memory syndrome. The supposed recovery of memories of traumatic or stressful episodes that did not actually occur, often in session with a mental-health therapist. • This term is most frequently applied to claims by adult children that repressed memories of prolonged and repeated child sexual abuse, usu. by parents, have surfaced, even though there is no independent evidence to substantiate the claims. Cf. repressed-memory syndrome.

False Memory Syndrome Foundation. An organization of parents who claim that their adult children have falsely accused them of childhood sexual abuse. • The organization was formed for the purpose of aiding persons who claim to have been wrongly accused as a result of the recovery of repressed memories. — Abbr. FMSF. Cf. victims of child abuse laws.

false misrepresentation. See misrepresentation. • This phrase is redundant because misrepresentation includes the idea of falsity.

false news. Hist. The misdemeanor of spreading false information that causes discord between the monarch and the people or between important people in the realm. 3 Edw., ch. 34.

false oath. See perjury.

false personation. See false impersonation under impersonation.

false plea. See sham pleading under pleading (1).

false pretenses. (18c) The crime of knowingly obtaining title to another's personal property by misrepresenting a fact with the intent to defraud. • Although unknown to English common law, false pretenses became a misdemeanor under a statute old enough to make it common law in the United States. Modern American statutes make it either a felony or a misdemeanor, depending on the property's value. — Also termed obtaining property by false pretenses; fraudulent pretenses. Cf. larceny by trick under larceny; embezzlement. [Cases: False Pretenses $= 1.] false promise. See promise.

false report. (1827) Criminal law. The criminal offense of informing law enforcement about a crime that did not occur. [Cases: Obstructing Justice $= 7.]

false representation. See misrepresentation.

false return. (16c) 1. A process server's or other court official's recorded misrepresentation that process was served, that some other action was taken, or that something is true. See return (2). [Cases: Process § 132-144, 153, 160.] 2. A tax return on which taxable income is incorrectly reported or the tax is incorrectly computed. See tax return. [Cases: Internal Revenue $= 4480.]

false statement. See statement.

false swearing. See perjury.

false testimony. See testimony.

false token. See token.

false verdict. See verdict.

false weight. [usu. pl.] A weight or measure that does not comply with governmentally prescribed standards or with the prevailing custom in the place and business in which the weight or measure is used. [Cases: Weights and Measures $= 10.]

false crimen. See crimen falsi under crimen.

falsify, vb. (15c) 1. To make something false; to counterfeit or forge <the chiropractor falsified his records to help the plaintiff>. — Also termed (archaically) false. See counterfeit; forgery. 2. Rare. To prove something to be false or erroneous <their goal in the appeal was to falsify the jury's verdict>. — falsification, n.

falsifying a record. (18c) The crime of making false entries or otherwise tampering with a public record with the intent to deceive or injure, or to conceal wrongdoing. 18 USCA §§ 1506, 2061, 2073; Model Penal Code § 224.4. [Cases: Fraud $= 68; Records $= 22.]

falsing of dooms, n. See appeal (1).

falsity, n. (13c) 1. Something (such as a statement) that is false. See lie. 2. The quality of being false. See false.

falsanarius. See falsarius.

falsum (fal-sam or fawl-sam), n. [Latin] Roman law. 1. A false statement. See crimen falsi under crimen. 2. A crime involving forgery or falsification. • Until the later Roman empire, the term applied to both documents and counterfeited coins.
falsus in uno doctrine (fal-sas [or fawl-sas] in yoo-noh). [fr. Latin falsus in uno, falsus in omnibus “false in one thing, false in all”] The principle that if the jury believes that a witness’s testimony on a material issue is intentionally deceitful, the jury may disregard all of that witness’s testimony. [Cases: Trial \(\rightarrow\) 187, 210; Witnesses \(\rightarrow\) 317.]

“[T]here is an old maxim ‘falsus in uno, falsus in omnibus’ (false in one thing, false in all), which is often much overemphasized by counsel, though it is recognized by many courts in their charges to the jury. But this is only primitive psychology, and should be completely discarded.” John H. Wigmore, A Students’ Textbook of the Law of Evidence 181 (1935).

faltering-company exception. A provision in the Worker Adjustment and Retraining Notification Act exempting an employer from giving the required 60-day notice for a plant shutdown if (1) at the time notice was due, the employer was seeking capital or resources that would allow the employer to avoid a shutdown, and (2) the employer reasonably believed that providing the notice would have precluded the employer from obtaining the necessary capital or other resources. 29 USCA § 2102(b)(1). See WORKER ADJUSTMENT AND RETRAINING NOTIFICATION ACT. [Cases: Labor and Employment \(\rightarrow\) 3232.]

fama publica (fay-ma pob-li-ka). [Latin “public repute”] Hist. A person’s reputation in the community. • A person’s fama publica could be used against him or her in a criminal proceeding. Cf. ill famil.

‘Now in the thirteenth century we find in the sheriff’s turn a procedure by way of double presentment, and we may see it often, though not always, when a coroner is holding an inquest over the body of a dead man. The fama publica is twice distilled. The representatives of the vills make presentments to a jury of twelve freeholders which represents the hundred, and then such of these presentments as the twelve jurors are willing to ‘avow,’ or make their own, are presented by them to the sheriff. From the very first the legal forefathers of our grand jurors are not in the majority of cases supposed to be reporting crimes that they have witnessed, or even to be the originators of the fama publica. Were it not for the practice of conveying all their property . . . to a person who is described as the familae emptor, and who is said by Gaius to be in loco heredis. Instructions were no doubt given to him as to the disposal of the property or part of it, but it is not clear that these were enforceable . . .’ W.W. Buckland, A Manual of Roman Private Law 175 (2d ed. 1953).

familiae erciscundae (fo-mil-ee-ee emp-tor). [Latin “estate Purchaser”] Roman law. A trustee who received an inheritance by a fictitious purchase and distributed it as the testator instructed. — Also termed emptor familae. See mancipitary will under Will.

“At some date, probably long before the XII Tables, men on the point of death, unable to make a true will because there was no eminent sitting of the Comitia, adopted the practice of conveying all their property . . . to a person who is described as the familae emptor, and who is said by Gaius to be in loco heredis. Instructions were no doubt given to him as to the disposal of the property or part of it, but it is not clear that these were enforceable . . .” W.W. Buckland, A Manual of Roman Private Law 175 (2d ed. 1953).

familia emptor (fo-mil-ee ee emp-tor). [Latin “estate”] 1. A person’s parents, spouse, children, and siblings. 2. A person’s parents, spouse, children, and siblings, as well as those of the person’s spouse. • Stepchildren and adopted children are usu. immediate family members. For some purposes, such as taxes, a person’s immediate family may also include the spouses of children and siblings.

intact family. A family in which both parents live together with their children. See family allowance. See allowance (1).

Family and Medical Leave Act. A 1993 federal statute providing that employees may take unpaid, job-protected leave for certain family reasons, as when a family member is sick or when a child is born. 29 USCA §§ 2601 et seq. • The statute applies to businesses with 50 or more employees. An employee may take up to 12 weeks of unpaid leave per year under the FMLA. — Abbr. FMLA. Cf. family leave. [Cases: Labor and Employment \(\rightarrow\) 331.]

family arrangement. (1817) An informal agreement among family members, usu. to distribute property in a manner other than what the law provides for.

family-court judge. See JUDGE.

family disturbance. See DOMESTIC DISPUTE.

Family Division. English law. A section of the High Court that has jurisdiction over family matters such as divorce and custody and over uncontested probate matters.

Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act. An act that prescribes minimum standards for the maintenance and dissemination of student records by educational institutions. 20 USC § 1232g. It applies only to schools that receive federal funding. — Abbr. FERPA. — Also termed Buckley Amendment. [Cases: Colleges and Universities C=>9.40; Records C=>31.]

family-expense statute. (1901) 1. A state law that permits a charge against the property of a spouse for family debts such as rent, food, clothing, and tuition. [Cases: Husband and Wife C=>19(1),] 2. A section of the federal tax code providing that a person may not deduct expenses incurred for family, living, or personal purposes. IRC (26 USCA) § 262. See NECESSARIES. [Cases: Internal Revenue C=>3364.]

family farmer. See FARMER.

family-farmer bankruptcy. See CHAPTER 12 (2).

family home. A house that was purchased during marriage and that the family has resided in, esp. before a divorce. • In some jurisdictions, the court may award the family home to the custodial parent until (1) the youngest child reaches the age of 18 or is otherwise emancipated, (2) the custodial parent moves, or (3) the custodial parent remarries. In making such an award, the court reasons that it is in the best interests of the child to remain in the family home. — Also termed marital home; marital residence. [Cases: Divorce C=>252.5.]

family-income insurance. See INSURANCE.

family law. (1919) 1. The body of law dealing with marriage, divorce, adoption, child custody and support, child abuse and neglect, paternity, juvenile delinquency, and other domestic-relations issues. • Also termed domestic relations; domestic-relations law. 2. (More broadly) the bodies of law dealing with wills and estates, property, constitutional rights, contracts, employment, and finance as they relate to families.

family leave. (1981) An unpaid leave of absence from work taken to have or care for a baby or to care for a sick family member. See FAMILY AND MEDICAL LEAVE ACT. [Cases: Labor and Employment C=>350, 351.]

family meeting. Hist. Civil law. 1. An advisory council called to aid the court in a family-law matter, such as arrangement of a guardianship for a minor or an incompetent adult. • If a person had no relatives, the court could summon friends of the person instead. 2. A council of relatives of a minor assembled to advise the minor in his or her affairs and to help administer the minor’s property. — Also termed family council. [Cases: Guardian and Ward C=>9.]

family of marks. Trademarks. A group of trademarks that share a recognizable characteristic so that they are recognized by consumers as identifying a single source. • An example of a family of marks is the variety of marks beginning with Mc- and identifying items served at McDonald’s restaurants. [Cases: Trademarks C=>1060.]

family of nations. Int’l law. The community of countries to which international law applies. • This term is now obsolete. It is increasingly rejected as Eurocentric.

“...the family of nations’ is an aggregate of States which, as the result of their historical antecedents, have inherited a common civilisation, and are at a similar level of moral and political opinion.” Thomas E. Holland, The Elements of Jurisprudence 396 (13th ed. 1924).

family partnership. See PARTNERSHIP.

family-partnership rules. (1946) Laws or regulations designed to prevent the shifting of income among partners, esp. family members, who may not be dealing at arm’s length.

family-pot trust. See TRUST.

family-purpose rule. (1927) Torts. The principle that a vehicle’s owner is liable for injuries or damage caused by a family member’s negligent driving. • Many states have abolished this rule. — Also termed family-purpose doctrine; family-automobile doctrine; family-car doctrine. Cf. guest statute. [Cases: Automobiles C=>195(5).]

“A number of jurisdictions have adopted the so-called ‘family purpose’ doctrine, under which the owner of a motor vehicle purchased or maintained for the pleasure of his family is liable for injuries inflicted by the negligent operation of the vehicle while it is being used by members of the family for their own pleasure, on the theory that the vehicle is being used for the purpose or business for which it was kept, and that the person operating it is therefore acting as the owner’s agent or servant in using it.” 8 Am. Jur. 2d Automobiles and Highway Traffic § 715, at 296 (1997).

family reunification. See REUNIFICATION.

family settlement. See FAMILY ARRANGEMENT.

family shelter. See women’s shelter under SHELTER.

family support. A combined award of child support and alimony that does not apportion the amount of each. [Cases: Bankruptcy C=>3365; Child Support C=>140(1); Divorce C=>230; Internal Revenue C=>3288.]

FAR. (often pl.) abbr. FEDERAL AVIATION REGULATION <the pilot violated several FARs before the crash>.

farley (fahr-Iee). Hist.

farm, n. (14c) 1. Land and connected buildings used for agricultural purposes. 2. Hist. Rent. • By extension, the term came to mean the land for which the rent was paid. — Also termed and spelled ferm; fearm; firme.

farm, vb. (15c) 1. To cultivate land; to conduct the business of farming. 2. To lease. See FARM OUT.

Farm Credit Administration. An independent federal agency that regulates and examines the borrower-owned banks and cooperative associations that make up the Federal Farm Credit System. • The agency was created in 1929 under the title "Federal Farm Board," became an agency in the Department of Agriculture in 1933, and again became independent in 1971. — Abbr. FCA. See FEDERAL FARM CREDIT SYSTEM. [Cases: United States – 53(7).]

farmer. (14c) A person whose business is farming.

family farmer. A person or entity whose income and debts primarily arise from a family-owned and -operated farm; esp, a person who received more than 80% of gross income from a farm in the taxable year immediately preceding a Chapter 12 filing. • Only a family farmer can file for Chapter 12 bankruptcy. 11 USCA § 101(18). See CHAPTER 12. [Cases: Bankruptcy – 2229.]

farmer bankruptcy. See CHAPTER 12 (2).

Farmers’ Home Administration. An agency, formerly in the U.S. Department of Agriculture, responsible for making mortgages and insuring loans to farmers and for funding rural public-works projects. • The agency was abolished in 1994, and its functions were assumed by other agencies in the Department — Abbr. FmHA; FHA. [Cases: United States – 53(7).]

farmee. See FARMOUTEE.

farminor. See FARMOUTOR.

farm let, vb. Hist. To lease; to let land for rent. • To farm let is a phrasal verb that commonly appeared in real-property leases; it corresponds with its Latin root, ad firmam tradidi.

“...a lease is properly a conveyance of any lands or tenements, (usually in consideration of rent or other annual recompense) made for life, for years, or at will, but always for a less time than the lessor hath in the premises; for if it be for the whole interest, it is more properly an assignment than a lease. The usual words of operation in it are, 'demise, grant, and to farm let. dimisi, concessi, et ad firmam tradidi.'” William Blackstone. Commentaries on the Laws of England 317-18 (1766).

farmor. See FARMOUTOR.

farm out, vb. (17c) 1. To turn over something (such as an oil-and-gas lease) for performance by another. • The term evolved from the Roman practice of transferring the right to collect taxes to a third party for a fee. That practice continued in England, Scotland, and France, but it has been long abolished. 2. Hist. To lease for a term. 3. To exhaust farmland, esp. by continuously raising a single crop.

farming agreement. Oil & gas. An agreement by which one who owns an oil-and-gas lease (the farmor or farminor) agrees to assign to another (the farmoutee or farmee) an interest in the lease in return for drilling and testing operations on the lease. • For the farmor, the agreement either (1) maintains the lease by securing production or complying with the implied covenant to develop or offset, or (2) obtains an interest in production without costs. For the farmee, the agreement obtains acreage that is not otherwise available or at lower cost than would otherwise be possible. A farming agreement may also serve as a device to keep people and equipment gainfully employed. — Often shortened to farmout. — Also written farm out agreement; farm-out agreement. See ASSIGNMENT. [Cases: Mines and Minerals – 74(8)]. farmoutee (farm-ow-tee). An oil-and-gas sublessee to whom the lease is assigned for purposes of drilling a well. — Also termed farmee; farminec. [Cases: Mines and Minerals C=74(8).]

farmoutor (fahrn-ow-tor or -tor). An oil-and-gas lessee who assigns the lease to another, who agrees to drill a well. — Also spelled farmouter. — Also termed farrior; farminer. [Cases: Mines and Minerals C=74(8).]

farm products. Crops, livestock, and supplies used or produced in farming or products of crops or livestock in their unmanufactured states, if they are in the possession of a debtor engaged in farming. UCC § 9-102(a) (34). Cf. growing crops under CROPS. [Cases: Secured Transactions C=17.]

Farm Service Agency. An agency in the U.S. Department of Agriculture responsible for administering farm-commodity, crop-insurance, and resource-conservation programs for farmers and ranchers and for making or guaranteeing farm emergency and operating loans through a network of state and county offices. — Abbr. FSA. [Cases: United States C=53(8).]

farthing of land (fahr-thing). Hist. An area of land measured as one-quarter of a larger area (much as a farthing was one-quarter of a penny). — A farthing of land ranged from a quarter of a hide to a quarter of an acre.

Faryndon's Inn. Hist. The ancient name of Serjeants' Inn. See SERJEANTS' INN.

FAS. abbr. 1. FREE ALONGSIDE SHIP. 2. FETAL ALCOHOL SYNDROME. 3. FOREIGN AGRICULTURAL SERVICE.

fas (fas). [Latin] Roman law. 1. Moral law of divine origin; divine law. • Jus, by contrast, is created by man. See JUS. 2. What is right, proper, lawful, and permitted. Cf. NEFAS.

"The first element to be noted in the Roman composite existing in primitive times, when religion and law were not distinguished, is fas — the will of the gods, embodied in rules that regulated not only ceremonial but the conduct of all men as such." Hannis Taylor, The Science of jurisprudence 65 (1908).

"It is true that the two spheres of ius and fas overlapped. . . . All this, however, concerned merely the question of where to draw the line between ius and fas; it did not blur the distinction between the two. From the standpoint of the history of Roman law, this distinction, consciously made from very early times, was of great importance, since it enabled the Romans to delimit the scope and the contents of strictly legal rules. This attitude may occasionally have caused a certain cold aloofness from purely human problems, but it undoubtedly contributed to the clarity of the legal system." Hans Julius Wolff, Roman Law: An Historical Introduction 51-52 (1951).

FASB (faz-bee). abbr. FINANCIAL ACCOUNTING STANDARDS BOARD.

FASB statement. An official pronouncement from the Financial Accounting Standards Board establishing a given financial-accounting practice as acceptable. [Cases: Securities Regulation C=25.18.]

fascism. A totalitarian political ideology under which all economic and social aspects of life come under rigid government control or direction, and the state's interests supersede individual interests.

fast estate. See real property under PROPERTY.

fasti (fas-ti). [Latin] Roman law. 1. The days on which court can be held. • In this sense, fasti is a shortened form of dies fasti. 2. A calendar of days on which court can be held. See dies fasti under DIES.

fast land. See LAND.

fast-tracking, n. (1996) A court's method of accelerating the disposition of cases in an effort to clear its docket. • For example, a judge might order that all discovery must be finished within 90 days and that trial is set for 30 days later. See ROCKET DOCKET. — fast-track, vb.

fetal, adj. (14c) 1. Of or relating to death; producing death <the decision had fatal consequences> <fatal blow>. 2. Providing grounds for legal invalidity .

fetal defect. See DEFECT.

fetal error. See reversible error under ERROR (2).

fetal variance. See VARIANCE (1).

fate and transport. Environmental law. The physical condition and migration of contaminants and hazardous materials along environmental pathways such as air, water, and soil.

father. (bef. 12c) A male parent. See PARENT. [Cases: Parent and Child C=1. acknowledged father. The admitted biological father of a child born to unmarried parents. See ACKNOWLEDGMENT (1). [Cases: Children Out-of-Wedlock C=12.] adoptive father. See adoptive parent under PARENT.

biological father. (1951) The man whose sperm impregnated the child's biological mother. — Also termed natural father; birth father; genetic father. [Cases: Children Out-of-Wedlock C=1.] birth father. See biological father.

de facto father. See de facto parent under PARENT.

filial father. The proven biological father of a child born to unmarried parents. See FILIATION.

foster father. See foster parent under PARENT.

intentional father. See intentional parent under PARENT.

legal father. (16c) The man recognized by law as the male parent of a child. • A man is the legal father of a child if he was married to the child's natural mother when the child was born, if he has recognized or acknowledged the child, or if he has been declared the child's natural father in a paternity action. If a man consents to the artificial insemination of his wife, he is the legal father of the child that is born as a result of the artificial insemination even though he may not be the genetic father of the child. [Cases: Children Out-of-Wedlock C=12, 68; Parent and Child C=1, 20.] natural father. See biological father.

presumed father. (1937) The man presumed to be the father of a child for any of several reasons: (1) because he was married to the child's natural mother when the child was conceived or born (even though the marriage may have been invalid), (2) because the man married the mother after the child's birth and agreed either to have his name on the birth certificate or to support the child, or (3) because the man welcomed the child into his home and held out the child as his own. This term represents a complicated category, and state laws vary in their requirements. See presumption of paternity. [Cases: Children Out-of-Wedlock 3, 43; Infants 155, 172.] psychological father. See psychological parent under parent.

putative father (pyoo-ta-tiv). (16c) The alleged biological father of a child born out of wedlock. [Cases: Children Out-of-Wedlock 1.] stepfather. (bef. 12c) The husband of one's mother by a later marriage. — Formerly also termed vitricus. [Cases: Parent and Child 14.]

fatherly power. See patria potestas under potestas.

Fatico hearing (fah-tih-coh). (1979) Criminal procedure. A sentencing hearing at which the prosecution and the defense may present evidence about what the defendant's sentence should be. United States v. Fatico, 603 F.2d 1053 (2d Cir. 1979). [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment 325, 985.]

fauces terrae (faw-seez ter-ee). [Latin "narrow passage of the land"] A body of water that experiences tides and is partially enclosed by land. This includes inlets, rivers, harbors, creeks, bays, basins, and similar aquatic bodies.

fault. (13c) 1. An error or defect of judgment or of conduct; any deviation from prudence or duty resulting from inattention, incapacity, perversity, bad faith, or mismanagement. See negligence. Cf. liability. 2. Civil law. The intentional or negligent failure to maintain some standard of conduct when that failure results in harm to another person.

contractual fault. Civil law. Fault resulting from the intentional or negligent failure to perform an enforceable obligation in a contract.

delictual fault. Civil law. Fault resulting from intentional or negligent misconduct that violates a legal duty.

inscrutable fault. Maritime law. Fault ascribed solely to human error but for which no responsible party or parties can be identified. [Cases: Collision 23.]

"Inscrutable fault" exists when a collision clearly resulted from human fault but the court is unable to locate it or allocate the fault among the parties. Atkins v. Lorentzen, 328 F.2d 66, 69 (5th Cir. 1964).

fault-based liability. See fault liability under fault.

fault divorce. See divorce.

fault-first method. (1996) A means by which to apply a settlement credit to a jury verdict, by first reducing the amount of the verdict by the percentage of the plaintiff's comparative fault, then subtracting from the remainder the amount of any settlements the plaintiff has received on the claim. See settlement credit. Cf. settlement-first method. [Cases: Damages 63.]

feal (fee-al), adj. Archaic. Faithful; truthful. — Also termed fele.

fealty (feel-tee or fee-al-tee). (14c) Hist. In feudal law, the allegiance that a tenant or vassal owes to a lord. — Also termed feodality.

"There was the possibility that if the entire top layer of the structure revolted, the king might be deprived of all support. To meet this possibility, the king also bound the vassals and feudal lords to himself the most important men in the lower strata of the [feudal] structure by an oath of loyalty. This was particularly effective for in medieval times the oath of fealty had all the sanction of the church, and in addition due to the necessity for feudal organization in times of disorder, had also a popular sanction in public opinion so that the man who broke his oath to his lord was one of the most execrable men to be found in the whole social organization." Charles Herman Kinnane, A First Book on Anglo-American Law 248 (2d ed. 1952).

fear. See FARM.

fear-of-cancer claim. Torts. A tort claim founded on a plaintiff's mental anguish or emotional distress arising from the fear of developing cancer, where either (1) the plaintiff was exposed to asbestos or other carcinogenic agents, or (2) a physician's negligence gave rise to a potentially cancerous condition or permitted a cancer to develop unchecked. • The plaintiff must demonstrate (1) actual exposure to a disease-causing agent, and (2) the reasonableness of the emotional distress. See Winik v. Jewish Hosp. of Brooklyn, 293 N.E.2d 95 (N.Y. 1972); Ferrara v. Galluchio, 152 N.E.2d 249 (N.Y. 1958). — Also termed cancerphobia claim.

federal jurisdiction. See jurisdiction.

federal-juvenile-delinquency jurisdiction. See jurisdiction.

Federal Kidnapping Act. A federal law punishing kidnapping for ransom or reward when the victim is transported interstate or internationally. • The law presumes that a victim has been transported in violation of the law if the victim is not released within 24 hours. The Federal Kidnapping Act, by express provision, does not apply to the kidnapping of a minor by either parent. The law was enacted in 1932 after the son of aviator Charles Lindbergh was kidnapped and murdered. For this reason, it is also termed the Lindbergh Act. 18 USCA § 1201. — Also termed Lindbergh Act. Cf. PARENTAL KIDNAPPING PREVENTION ACT. [Cases: Kidnapping v. United States, 330 U.S. 57 (1947).]

"The Federal Kidnapping Act was passed in 1932 to close a dangerous loophole between state and federal law. At that time, marauding bands of kidnappers were preying upon the wealthy with ruthless abandon, seizing their victims for ransom while operating outside the reach of existing state laws. Knowing that authorities in the victim's home state were powerless once a hostage was transported across state lines, the criminals would kidnap their target in one state, then move quickly to the next. In response, Congress made kidnapping a federal crime when the victim was moved from one state to another, and comprehensive language was used to cover every possible variety of kidnapping followed by interstate transportation." 1 Am. Jur. 2d Abduction and Kidnapping § 14, at 185 (1994).

Federal Labor Relations Authority. An agency that protects the right of federal employees to organize, engage in collective bargaining, and select their own union representatives. • It was established under Reorganization Plan No. 2 of 1978 and began operating in 1979. 5 USCA §§ 7101–35. — Abbr. FLRA. [Cases: Labor and Employment v. FLRA, 704 F.2d 1650 (1983).]

federal land. See land.

Federal Land Bank. (1914) One of a system of 12 regional banks created in 1916 to provide mortgage loans to farmers. • The system is now merged with federal intermediate credit banks to create the Federal Farm Credit System. [Cases: Banks and Banking v. United States, 401 U.S. 53 (1977).]

federal law. (18c) The body of law consisting of the U.S. Constitution, federal statutes and regulations, U.S. treaties, and federal common law. Cf. STATE LAW.

Federal Law Enforcement Training Center. An interagency law-enforcement training facility responsible for serving over 70 law-enforcement organizations in the federal government. • The Center was transferred from the Department of the Treasury to the Department of Homeland Security in 2003. — Abbr. FLETC.

federal magistrate. UNITED STATES MAGISTRATE JUDGE.

Federal Maritime Commission. An independent federal agency that regulates the waterborne foreign and domestic commerce of the United States by (1) ensuring that U.S. international trade is open to all countries on fair and equitable terms, (2) guarding against unauthorized monopolies in U.S. waterborne commerce, and (3) ensuring that financial responsibility is maintained to clean up oil spills and indemnify injured passengers. • The Agency was established in 1961. Its five commissioners are appointed by the President with the advice and consent of the Senate. — Abbr. FMC. [Cases: Shipping v. FMC, 334 U.S. 1 (1948).]

Federal Maritime Lien Act. A statute that confers an automatic lien on anyone who provides a vessel with any of a wide range of goods and services. 46 USCA §§ 31341–43. — Abbr. FMI.A. [Cases: Maritime Liens v. United States, 478 F.2d 401 (1973).] Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service. An independent federal agency that tries to prevent the interruption of interstate commerce that could result from a labor-management dispute by helping the parties reach a settlement without resorting to a job action or strike. • The Service can intervene on its own authority or at the request of a party to the dispute. It also helps employers and unions select qualified arbitrators. The Service was established by the Labor Management Relations Act of 1947. 29 USCA § 172. — Abbr. FMCS. Cf. NATIONAL MEDIATION BOARD.

Federal Mine Safety and Health Review Commission. An independent five-member commission that (1) monitors compliance with occupational safety and health standards in the nation's surface and underground coal, metal, and nonmetal mines, and (2) adjudicates disputes that arise under the Federal Mine Safety and Health Amendments Act of 1977. • It was established in 1977. 30 USCA §§ 801 et seq. — Abbr. FMSHRC. [Cases: Labor and Employment C=>2571.]

Federal Motor Carrier Safety Administration. A unit in the U.S. Department of Transportation responsible for regulating the operation of large trucks and buses. — Abbr. FMCSA. [Cases: Automobiles C=>116, 127.]

FNMA. — Also termed Fannie Mae. [Cases: United States C=>53(9).]

Federal Parent Locator Service. A federal program created to help enforce child-support obligations. • In an effort to increase the collection of child support, Congress authorized the use of all information contained in the various federal databases to help locate absent, delinquent child-support obligors. Although initially information could be released only if the family was receiving public assistance, any judgment obligee can now apply to receive the last known address of a delinquent child-support obligor. 42 USCA § 653. Abbr. FPLS.

Federal Power Commission. See FEDERAL ENERGY REGULATION.

federal question. In litigation, a legal issue involving the interpretation and application of the U.S. Constitution, an act of Congress, or a treaty. • Jurisdiction over federal questions rests with the federal courts. 28 USCA § 1331. [Cases: Federal Courts C=>161-247.]

federal-question jurisdiction. See JURISDICTION.

Federal Railroad Administration. A unit in the U.S. Department of Transportation responsible for promulgating and enforcing rail-safety regulations; administering rail-related financial-aid programs; conducting research on rail safety; and rehabilitating rail passenger service for the Northeast corridor. — Abbr. FRA. [Cases: Railroads C=>223.]

Federal Register. A daily publication containing presidential proclamations and executive orders, federal-agency regulations of general applicability and legal effect, proposed agency rules, and documents required by law to be published. • The Federal Register is published by the National Archives and Records Administration. — Abbr. Fed. Reg. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure C=>407.]

Federal Reserve Board of Governors. The board that supervises the Federal Reserve System and sets national monetary and credit policy. • The board consists of seven members nominated by the President and confirmed by the Senate for 14-year terms. • Often shortened to Federal Reserve Board. — Abbr. FRB.

federal reserve note. (1913) The paper currency in circulation in the United States. • Non-interest-bearing promissory notes are payable to their bearer on demand. The Federal Reserve Banks issue the notes in denominations of $1, $2, $5, $10, $20, $50, and $100. Until 1945, the United States Mint also printed $500, $1,000, $5,000, and $10,000 bills. Although the Federal Reserve System discontinued using bills larger than $100 in 1969, the outstanding bills remain legal tender. 31 USCA § 5103. Cf. GOLD CERTIFICATE; SILVER CERTIFICATE.

Federal Reserve System. The central bank that sets credit and monetary policy by fixing the reserves to be maintained by depository institutions, determining the discount rate charged by Federal Reserve Banks, and regulating the amount of credit that may be extended on any security. • The Federal Reserve System was established by the Federal Reserve Act of 1913. 12 USCA § 221. It comprises 12 central banks supervised by a Board of Governors whose members are appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate. — Abbr. FRS; Fed. [Cases: Banks and Banking C=>351-359.]

"The Federal Reserve System of 1913 evolved out of a search for consensus among bankers, politicians, and some academic experts. It was a move toward 'central bank' regulation in the European sense..." [The System] Federal Retirement Thrift Investment Board. A board that administers the Thrift Savings Plan that allows federal employees to save additional funds for retirement. • It was established in 1986. 5 USCA § 8472. — Abbr. FRTIB. [Cases: United States C—39(15).]

Federal Rules Decisions. See F.R.D.

Chief Justice Hughes in 1935 appointed fourteen lawyers and law teachers as the Advisory Committee for the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, with William D. Mitchell, former Attorney General, as chairman, and Charles E. Clark, then dean of the Yale Law School, as reporter, to recommend a draft of rules uniting law and equity. The committee proposed a system of rules that was approved by the Court with certain changes. In accordance with the Enabling Act, the rules were submitted to Congress for its acquiescence and, Congress having taken no exception to them, they became effective September 16, 1938.

"The rules thus produced bear the unmistakable imprint of the reporter, Charles L. Clark, and represent the largest single accomplishment in American civil procedure since the Field Code of 1848. Although they were not perfect and have been amended many times, experience with them has on the whole been satisfactory, and more than half of the states have adopted them in their entirety or in large part." Fleming James, Geoffrey C. Hazard Jr. & John Leubsdorf, Civil Procedure § 1.8, at 24–25 (5th ed. 2001).

Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation. A federal agency created in 1934 to insure deposits in savings-and-loan associations and savings banks. • When this agency became insolvent in 1989, its assets and liabilities were transferred to an insurance fund managed by the FDIC. — Abbr. FSIC. See Resolution Trust Corporation. [Cases: Building and Loan Associations C—48.]

Federal Supply Service. A unit in the General Services Administration responsible for providing supplies to federal agencies worldwide. • In procuring supplies the agency takes advantage of the government’s aggregate buying power. Abbr. FSS.

Federal Technology Service. A unit in the General Services Administration that provides communications services worldwide to other federal departments and agencies. — Abbr. FTS.

Federal Tort Claims Act. A statute that limits federal sovereign immunity and allows recovery in federal court for tort damages caused by federal employees, but only if the law of the state where the injury occurred would hold a private person liable for the injury. 28 USCA §§ 2671–2680 — Abbr. FTCA. See sovereign immunity under immunity (1). [Cases: United States C—78.]

"Although it has been suggested that the maxim, 'the King can do no wrong' never had an existence in the United States, it has also been declared that in enacting the Federal Tort Claims Act, Congress recognized the manifold injustice that springs from the delimiting effect of the rule represented by that maxim. And it is said that in passing the Act, Congress intended to compensate the victims of negligence in the conduct of governmental activities in circumstances in which a private person would be liable, rather than leave just treatment to the caprice and legislative burden of individual private laws, and to eliminate the burden on Congress of investigating and passing on private bills seeking individual relief." 35 Am.Jur. 2d Federal Tort Claims Act § 1, at 296 (1967).

Federal Trade Commission. An independent five-member federal commission that administers various laws against business monopolies, restraint of trade, and deceptive trade practices. • It was established by the Federal Trade Commission Act of 1914, 15 USCA §§ 41–58. The Commission's body of rulings reaches into many state-law actions because many so-called "Little FTC Acts" of the states specify that FTC interpretations should provide a model for state-court decisions. — Abbr. FTC. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation C—300.]

federal transfer. The federal district court’s right to move a civil action filed there to any other district or division where the plaintiff could have brought the action originally. 28 USCA § 1404(a). See Change of Venue. [Cases: Federal Courts ⊆ 101-146, 1152.]

Federal Transit Administration. A unit in the U.S. Department of Transportation responsible for increasing public-transit ridership through demonstration projects and financial assistance. — Abbr. FTA.

Federal Unemployment Tax Act. The federal statute requiring employers to remit taxes based on employees’ wages and salaries. 18 USCA § 1201 et seq. — Abbr. FUTA. [Cases: Internal Revenue ⊆ 4351.]

federation. (18c) A league or union of states, groups, or peoples united under a strong central authority but retaining limited regional sovereignty, esp. over local affairs. Cf. confederation.

Fed Wire. The Federal Reserve’s computer network that allows nearly instantaneous domestic money and securities transfers among the Federal Reserve’s offices, depository institutions, the U.S. Treasury, and other government agencies. [Cases: Banks and Banking ⊆ 188.5.]

fee. (14c) 1. A charge for labor or services, esp. professional services.

attorney’s fees. See attorney’s fees.

contingent fee. See contingent fee.

docket fee. (1836) A fee charged by a court for filing a claim.

expert-witness fee. A fee paid for the professional services of an expert witness. [Cases: Costs ⊆ 187.]

fixed fee. (18c) 1. A flat charge for a service; a charge that does not vary with the amount of time or effort required to complete the service. 2. In a construction contract, a predetermined amount that is added to costs for calculating payments due under the contract. [Cases: Contracts ⊆ 231(1).]

franchise fee. (1894) 1. A fee paid by a franchisee to a franchisor for franchise rights. • Franchise fees are regulated by state laws. 2. A fee paid to the government for a government grant of a franchise, such as the one required for operating a radio or television station. [Cases: Telecommunications ⊆ 798, 1215.]

jury fee. (1806) A fee, usu. a minimal one, that a party to a civil suit must pay the court clerk to be entitled to a jury trial. [Cases: Jury ⊆ 26.]

loan-origination fee. A fee charged by a lender to cover the administrative costs of making a loan.

maintenance fee. See maintenance fee.

management fee. A fee charged by an investment manager for supervisory services.

origination fee. (1921) A fee charged by a lender for preparing and processing a loan. [Cases: Usury ⊆ 53.]

probate fee. Compensation paid with a probate court’s approval to an attorney who performs probate-related services to the estate. [Cases: Executors and Administrators ⊆ 216(2).]

success fee. A bonus paid to a representative who performs exceptionally well in gaining favorable results; esp., a bonus that a client pays to an attorney if the attorney obtains something of value to the client.

For instance, a client might agree to pay a success fee for success in litigation, for favorable negotiations in a transaction, or for the successful conclusion of a corporate merger, acquisition, or loan. See conditional fee agreement. [Cases: Attorney and Client ⊆ 130, 143.]

witness fee. 1. A statutory fee that must be tendered with a subpoena for the subpoena to be binding. [Cases: Witnesses ⊆ 23.] 2. A fee paid by a party to a witness as reimbursement for reasonable expenses (such as travel, meals, lodging, and loss of time) incurred as a result of the witness’s having to attend and testify at a deposition or trial. • Any other payment to a nonexpert witness is considered unethical. — Also termed (in English law) conduct money. Cf. expert-witness fee.

2. A heritable interest in land; esp., a fee simple absolute. — Also termed fee estate; feod; feudum; feod; feudum; fief. See fee simple. Cf. feu. [Cases: Estates in Property ⊆ 5–7.]

“to enfeoff someone was to transfer to him an interest in land called a fief — or, if you prefer, a feoff, feod, or feu. Our modern word fee, a direct lineal descendant of fief, implies the characteristic of potentially infinite duration when used to describe an interest in land today; but in the earliest part of the feudal period, a fief might have been as small as a life interest. We shall see later that feoffment was not used to transfer interests ‘smaller’ than life interests — e.g., so-called terms for years — but for our purposes now we may simply note that transfers of interests for life or ‘larger’ were accomplished by livery of seisin.” Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 11 (2d ed. 1984).

arriere fee (ar-ee-air or ar-ee-ar). Hist. A fee dependent on a superior one; a subfief. — Also termed arriere fief.

base fee. (16c) A fee that has some qualification connected to it and that terminates whenever the qualification terminates. • An example of the words creating a base fee are “to A and his heirs, tenants of the manor of Tinsledale,” which would terminate when A or his heirs are no longer tenants of the manor.
of Tinsleydale. Among the base fees at common law are the fee simple subject to a condition subsequent and the conditional fee. — Also termed determinable fee; qualified fee; limited fee. See fee simple determinable under FEE SIMPLE.

"A base fee is a particular kind of determinable fee. The two essentials of a base fee are (a) it continues only so long as the original grantor or any heirs of his body are alive; and (b) there is a remainder or reversion after it. . . . In effect a base fee was a fee simple which endured for as long as the entail would have continued if it had not been barred, and determined when the entail would have ended." Robert E. Megarry & M.P. Thompson, A Manual of the Law of Real Property 38-40 (6th ed. 1993).

fee tail. See FEE TAIL.

great fee. Hist. In feudal law, a fee received directly from the Crown.

knight's fee. See KNIGHT'S FEE.

lay fee. Hist. A fee interest in land held by ordinary feudal tenure, such as socage, rather than by ecclesiastical tenure through frankalmoin. See FRANKALMOIN; SOCAGE.

limited fee. See base fee.

plowman's fee. Hist. A species of tenure for peasants or small farmers by which the land descended in equal shares to all the tenant's sons.

qualified fee. See base fee.

fee damages. See DAMAGES.

feeder organization. Tax. An entity that conducts a business or trade for the benefit of a tax-exempt organization. • The feeder organization is not tax-exempt. IRC (26 USCA) § 502. [Cases: Internal Revenue C-4351.]

fee estate. See FEE (2).

fee farm. Hist. A species of tenure in which land is held in perpetuity at a yearly rent (fee-farm rent), without fealty, homage, or other services than those in the feoffment. — Also termed feod, firma; firma feodi. See EMMETYSIS.

"Now to all appearance the term socage, a term not found in Norman, has been extending itself upwards; a name appropriate to a class of cultivating peasants has begun to include the baron or prelate who holds land at a rent but is not burdened with military service. . . . It is sometimes said to have feodium censuale, far more commonly he is said to hold 'in fee farm.' This term has difficulties of its own, for it appears in many different guises; a feoff is to hold in feoff, in feofirmain, in fedfirmain, in feudo firmain, in feudo firma, ad firmam feodalem, but most commonly, in feodi firma. The Old English language had both of the words of which this term is compounded, both feoh (property) and farom (rent); but so had the language of France, and in Normandy the term may be found in various shapes, firmam fedium, feudifirmain. But, whatever may be the precise history of the phrase, to hold in fee farm means to hold heritably, perpetually, at a rent: the fee, the inheritance, is let to farm." Z Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 293 (2d ed. 1899).

feemail (fee-mayl). (1994) Slang. An attorney's fee extorted by intimidation, threats, or pressure. 2. The act or process of extorting such a fee. Cf. BLACKMAIL; GREENMAIL (1), (2).

fee-sharing. See FEE SPLITTING.

fee-shifting, n. The transfer of responsibility for paying fees, esp. attorney's fees, from one party to another. See AMERICAN RULE (1); ENGLISH RULE. [Cases: Internal Revenue C-4351.]

fee simple. (15c) An interest in land that, being the broadest property interest allowed by law, endures until the current holder dies without heirs; esp., a fee simple absolute. — Often shortened to fee. — Also termed estate in fee simple; tenancy in fee; fee-simple title; exclusive ownership; feudum simplex. See and HIS HEIRS. [Cases: Estates in Property C-5—7.]

"[Fee simple] is a term not likely to be found in modern conversation between laymen, who would in all probability find it quite unintelligible. Yet to a layman of the 14th century the term would have been perfectly intelligible, for it refers to the elementary social relationship of feudalism with which he was fully familiar: the words 'fee' and 'feudal' are closely related. . . . The estate in fee simple is the largest estate known to the law, ownership of such an estate being the nearest approach to ownership of the land itself which is consonant with the feudal principle of tenure. It is 'the most comprehensive estate in land which the law recognises,' it is the 'most extensive in quantum, and the most absolute in respect to the rights which it confers, of all estates known to the law.' Traditionally, the fee simple has two distinguishing features: first, the owner ('tenant' in fee simple) has the power to dispose of the fee simple, either inter vivos or by will; second, on intestacy the fee simple descends, in the absence of lineal heirs, to collateral heirs — to a brother, for example, if there is no issue. Peter Butt, Lane Law 35 (2d ed. 1988).

"Fee simple. Originally this was an estate which endured for as long as the original tenant or any of his heirs survived. 'Heirs' comprised any blood relations, although originally ancestors were excluded; not until the Inheritance Act 1833 could a person be the heir of one of his descendants. Thus at first a fee simple would terminate if the original tenant died without leaving any descendants or collateral blood relations (e.g., brothers or cousins), even if before his death the land had been conveyed to another tenant who was still alive. But by 1306 it was settled that where a tenant in fee simple alienated the land, the fee simple would continue as long as there were heirs of the new tenant and so on, irrespective of any failure of the original tenant's heirs. Therefore a forward a fee simple was virtually eternal." Robert E. Megarry & M.P. Thompson, A Manual of the Law of Real Property 24-25 (6th ed. 1993).

fee simple absolute. (18c) An estate of indefinite or potentially infinite duration (e.g., "to Albert and his heirs"). — Often shortened to fee simple or fee.
fee-simple title

Also termed fee simple absolute in possession. [Cases: Estates in Property C=5.]

"Although it is probably good practice to use the word 'absolute' whenever one is referring to an estate in fee simple that is free of special limitation, condition subsequent, or executory limitation, lawyers frequently refer to such an estate as a 'fee simple' or even as a 'fee.'" Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 24 (2d ed. 1984).

fee simple conditional. (17c) An estate restricted to some specified heirs, exclusive of others (e.g., "to Albert and his female heirs"). • The fee simple condition is obsolete except in Iowa, Oregon, and South Carolina. — Also termed general fee conditional; conditional fee. [Cases: Estates in Property C=7.]

"The reader should be careful not to confuse this estate with estates having similar labels, such as the 'estate in fee simple subject to a condition subsequent' . . . ." Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 29 n.19 (2d ed. 1984).

fee simple defeasible (di-fee-zah-bal). (18c) An estate that ends either because there are no more heirs of the person to whom it is granted or because a special limitation, condition subsequent, or executory limitation takes effect before the line of heirs runs out. — Also termed defeasible fee simple; qualified fee. [Cases: Estates in Property C=6.]

fee simple determinable. (18c) An estate that will automatically end and revert to the grantor if some specified event occurs (e.g., "to Albert and his heirs while the property is used for charitable purposes"); an estate in fee simple subject to a special limitation.

• The future interest retained by the grantor is called a possibility of reverter. — Also termed determinable fee; qualified fee; fee simple subject to common-law limitation; fee simple subject to special limitation; fee simple subject to special interest; base fee; estate on limitation. [Cases: Estates in Property C=6.]

"in theory, it should be easy to determine whether an instrument creates a fee simple determinable or a fee simple subject to a condition subsequent. If the instrument includes a special limitation (introduced by words such as 'so long as' or 'until') it creates a fee simple determinable, whether or not it also includes an express reverter clause. If the instrument includes an express condition or proviso ('on condition that' or 'provided that') and an express right to re-enter for breach of the stated condition, it creates a fee simple subject to a condition subsequent. But deeds and wills often fail to employ the appropriate words to create one of the two types of defeasible estate or the others. Instead deeds and wills often contain a confusing mixture of words appropriate for creation of both types of defeasible estate." William B. Stoebuck & Dale A. Whitman, The Law of Property 43 (3d ed. 2000).

fee simple subject to a condition subsequent. (1874) An estate subject to the grantor's power to end the estate if some specified event happens (e.g., "to Albert and his heirs, upon condition that no alcohol is sold on the premises"). • The future interest retained by the grantor is called a power of termination (or a right of entry). — Also termed fee simple on a condition subsequent; fee simple subject to a power of termination; fee simple upon condition. [Cases: Estates in Property C=7.] fee simple subject to an executory limitation. (1856) A fee simple defeasible that is subject to divestment in favor of someone other than the grantor if a specified event happens (e.g., "to Albert and his heirs, but if the property is ever used as a parking lot, then to Bob"). — Also termed fee simple subject to an executory interest. [Cases: Estates in Property C=6.]

fee simple subject to a power of termination. See fee simple subject to a condition subsequent.

fee-simple title. See FEE SIMPLE.

fee-splitting. 1. The division of attorney's fees between two or more lawyers, esp. between the lawyer who handled a matter and the lawyer who referred the matter. • Some states consider this practice unethical. 2. The division of attorney's fees between two or more lawyers who represent a client jointly but are not in the same firm. • Under most states' ethics rules, an attorney is prohibited from splitting a fee with a nonlawyer. — Also termed fee-sharing; division of fees. [Cases: Attorney and Client C=151.]

fee statement. A lawyer's bill for services either already rendered or to be rendered, usu. including itemized expenses.

fee tail. (15c) An estate that is heritable only by specified descendants of the original grantee, and that endures until its current holder dies without issue (e.g., "to Albert and the heirs of his body"). • Most jurisdictions — except Delaware, Maine, Massachusetts, and Rhode Island — have abolished the fee tail. — Also termed entailed estate; estate tail; estate in tail; estate in fee tail; tenancy in tail; entail; feodum talliatum. See ENTAIL; TAIL. [Cases: Estates in Property C=12.]

"The old legal estate tail was throughout its history invariably associated with family settlements, and in particular with marriage settlements. . . . Medieval landowners sought to achieve [familial continuity and status] by perfecting a single estate which in itself would conform to three requirements: (1) While it should be an estate of inheritance it should devolve on lineal heirs only, and not on collateral — in other words that it should descend only to the heirs of the body of the first grantee. (2) As a corollary, the estate should be such that if at any time the first grantee's issue should fail the estate itself should come to an end and the land revert to the original settlor or his heirs. (3) No owner of the estate for the time being should have power to dispose of the land in such a way as to prevent it descending on his death to the next heir of the body of the original grantee. All this was attempted by limiting land, not to 'A and his heirs,' which would give A a fee simple, but to 'A and the heirs of his body.'" 1 Stephen's Commentaries on the Laws of England 130 (L. Crispin Warmington ed., 21st ed. 1950).
“If we cannot resist the temptation to say that De Donis permitted the creation of tailor-made estates, we can at least argue that it is not a pun. Our word ‘tailor’ and the word ‘tail’ as used in ‘feet tail’ come from the same source — the French tailleur, to cut. The word ‘tail’ in ‘feet tail’ has nothing to do with that which wags the dog. The estate in feet tail was a cut estate — either cut in the sense that the collateral heirs were cut out, or cut in the sense that the estate was carved into a series of discrete life-possession periods to be enjoyed successively by A and his lineal heirs. . . . We know of no state in the United States that recognizes the estate in feet tail in its strict 1285-1472 form. Wherever it is recognized, the tenant in tail in possession may disentail it by simple deed.” Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 30, 32 (2d ed. 1984).

fee tail general. A fee tail that is heritable by all of the property owner’s issue by any spouse. • Formerly, a grant “to A and the heirs of his body” created a fee tail general. [Cases: Estates in Property C—12.]

fee tail special. A fee tail that restricts the eligibility of claimants by requiring a claimant to prove direct descent from the grantee and meet the special condition in the grant. • For example, the words “to A and the heirs of his body begotten on his wife Mary” meant that only descendants of A and Mary could inherit; as children by any other wife were excluded. An estate tail special could also be restricted to only male or only female descendants, as in “to A and the heirs male of his body.” [Cases: Estates in Property C—12.]

feign (fayn), vb. (13c) To make up or fabricate; to make a false show of <he feigned an illness>.

feigned, adj. Pretended; simulated; fictitious.

feigned accomplice. See informant.

feigned action. Hist. An action brought for an illegal purpose on a pretended right. — Also termed faint action; false action.

feigned issue. Hist. A proceeding in which the parties, by consent, have an issue tried by a jury without actually action; false action.

feigned issue. Hist. A proceeding in which the parties, by consent, have an issue tried by a jury without actually bringing a formal action. • The proceeding was done when a court either lacked jurisdiction or was unwilling to decide the issue. — Also termed fictitious issue.

“The chancellor’s decree is either interlocutory or final. It very seldom happens that the first decree can be final, or conclude the cause; for, if any matter of fact is strongly controverted, this court is so sensible of the deficiency of trial by written depositions, that it will not bind the parties thereby, but usually directs the matter to be tried by jury . . . . But, as no jury can be summoned to attend this court, the fact is usually directed to be tried at the bar of the court of king’s bench or at the assizes, upon a feigned issue. For, (in order to bring it there, and have the point in dispute, and that only, put in issue) an action is feigned to be brought, wherein the pretended plaintiff declares that he laid a wager of $L. with the defendant that A was heir at law to B; and then avers that he is so; and therefore demands the $L. the defendant allows the wager, but avers that A is not the heir to B; and thereupon the issue is joined . . . . These feigned issues seem borrowed from the sponsio judicialis of the Romans: and are also frequently used in the courts of law, by consent of the parties, to determine some disputed rights without the formality of pleading . . . .” 3 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 452 (1768).

FEIN. abbr. See tax-identification number.

FEA (fe-la). abbr. FEDERAL EMPLOYERS’ LIABILITY ACT.

fellow, n. 1. One joined with another in some legal status or relation. 2. A member of a college, board, corporate body, or other organization.

fellow-officer rule. (1971) Criminal procedure. The principle that an investigative stop or an arrest is valid even if the law-enforcement officer lacks personal knowledge to establish reasonable suspicion or probable cause as long as the officer is acting on the knowledge of another officer and the collective knowledge of the law-enforcement office. — Also termed Whiteley rule; collective-knowledge rule. [Cases: Arrest C—63.4(11)].

fellow servant. A coworker having the same employer; esp., an employee who is so closely related to another employee’s work that there is a special risk of harm if either one is negligent. See fellow-servant rule; different-department rule.

superior fellow servant. A worker that has the power of control or direction over a coworker. — Also termed superior servant.

fellow-servant rule. (1905) A common-law doctrine holding that an employer is not liable for an employee’s injuries caused by a negligent coworker. • This doctrine has generally been abrogated by workers’-compensation statutes. In some jurisdictions, employees were considered fellow servants when they were working with one aim or result in view. In others, the relation of fellow servant was tested by the “doctrine of vicar principal” or the “superior-servant rule,” meaning that an employer is liable for injuries to an employee if they result from the negligence of another employee who is given power of control or direction over the injured employee. — Also termed common-employment doctrine. Cf. different-department rule. [Cases: Labor and Employment C—2921].

felo-de-se (fee-loh or fel-oh dee see), n. (17c) See suicide (2). Pl. felones de se.

“Felo de se,” or felo of himself is freely spoken of by the early writers as self-murder. Hence one who killed himself before he arrived at the age of discretion or while he was non compos mentis, was not a felo de se, or suicide . . . . [By] the early common law suicide was a felony and was punished by ignominious burial and forfeiture of goods and chattels to the king.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 120 (3d ed. 1982).

felon, n. (13c) A person who has been convicted of a felony. — Also termed (redundantly) convicted felon.

felon-de-se. See suicide (2). felonia (fa-loh-nee-a). [Latin "felony"] Hist. An offense that results in a vassal's forfeiting his fee.

“The attempt to derive felonia from fel’dpoison’ is merely a folk etymology which came into vogue when 'felony' meant a serious crime, and differed from treason. The word was well established in Feudal Law as the characteristic offense against the Feudal relationship. It will hardly do, therefore, to try to determine its meaning merely by reference to English usage..." - Max Radin, Handbook of Anglo-American Legal History 148 n.7 (1936).

felonious (fa-lon-ee-as), adj. (16c) 1. Of, relating to, or involving a felony. 2. Constituting or having the character of a felony. 3. Proceeding from an evil heart or purpose; malicious; villainous. 4. Wrongful; (of an act) done without excuse or color of right.

felonious assault. See assault.

felonious homicide. See homicide.

felonious intent. See criminal intent under offense (1).

felonious restraint. (1971) 1. The offense of knowingly and unlawfully restraining a person under circumstances that expose the person to serious bodily harm. Model Penal Code § 212.2(a). 2. The offense of holding a person in involuntary servitude. Model Penal Code § 212.2(b). [Cases: False Imprisonment ☻=43, 44.]

felon of oneself. See suicide (2).

felony, n. (14c) 1. A serious crime usu. punishable by imprisonment for more than one year or by death. • Examples include burglary, arson, rape, and murder. — Also termed major crime; serious crime. Cf. misdemeanor. [Cases: Criminal Law ☻=27.]

"Felony, in the general acceptance of our English law, comprises every species of crime, which occasioned at common law the forfeiture of lands or goods," 4 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 94 (1769).

"Amongst indictable crimes, the common law singled out some as being so consciously heinous that a man adjudged guilty of any of them incurred — not as any express part of his sentence but as a consequence that necessarily ensued upon it — a forfeiture of property, whether of his lands or of his goods or of both (in the case of treason). Such crimes came to be called "felonies." The other, and lesser, crimes were known as ‘transgressions’ or ‘trespasses,’ and did not obtain their present name of misdemeanours until a much later date. A felony is, therefore, a crime which either invoived by common law such a forfeiture, or else has been placed by statute on the footing of those crimes which did involve it," J.W. Cecil Turner, Kenny's Outlines of Criminal Law 93 (16th ed. 1952).

atrocious felony. (1814) Archaic. A serious, usu. cruel felony involving personal violence. • The common practice today is to refer to the specific type of crime alleged (e.g., first-degree murder or aggravated sexual assault).

serious felony. (1874) A major felony, such as burglary of a residence or an assault that causes great bodily injury. • In many jurisdictions, a defendant's prior serious-felony convictions can be used to enhance another criminal charge. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment ☻=1254, 1276.]

substantive felony. See substantive offense under offense (1).

treason felony. See treason felony.

violent felony. See violent offense under offense (1).

2. Hist. At common law, an offense for which conviction results in forfeiture of the defendant's lands or goods (or both) to the Crown, regardless of whether any capital or other punishment is mandated. • At early common law, the term felony included any offense for which a defendant who fled before trial could be summarily convicted, attainted, and outlawed, or that carried a right of appeal after conviction. Although treason carried the same penalties as a common-law felony, it was usu. defined as a separate class of crime. 3. Hist. Feudal law. A grave act that resulted in the forfeiture of land granted by a superior.

felony-de-se. See suicide (1).

felony injury to a child. The act of causing or allowing a child to suffer in circumstances likely to produce great bodily harm or death, or inflicting unjustifiable pain or mental suffering in those circumstances. [Cases: Infants ☻=13.]

felony murder. See murder.

felony-murder rule. (1943) The doctrine holding that any death resulting from the commission or attempted commission of a felony is murder. • Most states restrict this rule to inherently dangerous felonies such as rape, arson, robbery, and burglary. Cf. misdemeanor-man-slaughter rule. [Cases: Homicide ☻=575.]

"[I]t seems fair to suggest that the future of felony murder is uncertain. England, where the doctrine originated, has abolished it. The Model Penal Code recommends its abolition except for the purpose of creating a rebuttable presumption of malice for killings perpetrated during the course of a felony. Although most states have not yet adopted this position, many of the judicial limitations on felony murder discussed above seem to insure that in many states it will be an unusual case in which one is convicted of felony murder, who absent this doctrine, would not have been convicted of murder." Arnold H. Loewy, Criminal Law in a Nutshell 46 (2d ed. 1987).

female genital mutilation. (1979) 1. Female circumcision. 2. The act of cutting, or cutting off, one or more female sexual organs. • Female genital mutilation is practiced primarily among certain tribes in Africa, but it also occurs among some immigrant populations in the United States and in other Western nations. There are three commonly identified types: sumna, in which the hood of the clitoris is cut off; excision, in which the entire clitoris is cut off; and infibulation, in which the clitoris, the labia minora, and much of the labia majora are cut off. In the United States, Congress has outlawed female genital mutilation, specifically prohibiting the use of a cultural defense for persons accused of performing the act. 18 USCA § 16. — Abbr. FGM. See cultural defense. [Cases: Aliens, Immigration, and Citizenship ☻=533.] fem-crit. See crit. feme (fem), n. (16c) [Law French] Archaic. 1. A woman.

2. A wife. — Also spelled femme.

feme covert (fem kav-or), [Law French “covered woman”] Archaic. A married woman. • The notion, as Blackstone put it, was that the husband was the one “under whose wing, protection, and cover, she performs every thing.” 1 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Law of England 430 (1766). See coverture.

feme sole (fem sohl), [Law French] Archaic. 1. An unmarried woman. 2. A married woman handling the affairs of her separate estate. — Also termed (in sense 2) feme sole trader; feme sole merchant.

femicide (fem-a-sid), (19c) 1. The killing of a woman. 2. One who kills a woman.

feminist jurisprudence. See JURISPRUDENCE.

fence, n. (14c) 1. A person who receives stolen goods, usu. with the intent to sell them in a legitimate market.
[Cases: Receiving Stolen Goods 2:4-4.]

“The receivers of stolen goods almost never ‘know’ that they have been stolen, in the sense that they could testify to it in a court room. The business could not be so conducted, for those who sell the goods — the ‘fences’ — must keep up a more respectable front than is generally possible for the thieves.” United States v. Werner, 160 F.2d 438, 441-42 (2d Cir. 1947).

“The typical ‘fence’ takes over the stolen property and pays the thief a price. He purports to ‘buy’ the goods from the thief.” Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 395 (3d ed. 1982).

2. A place where stolen goods are sold. See RECEIVING STOLEN PROPERTY. 3. LAWFUL FENCE. 4. Scots law: The formal warning to not interrupt or obstruct judicial or legislative proceedings. 5. Scots law: A penalty of forfeiture prescribed in a statute or a contract.

feoffment to uses. An enfeoffment of land to one person for the use of a third party. • The feoffee was bound in conscience to hold the land according to the prescribed use and could derive no benefit from the holding.

“Conveyances of freehold land could originally be made only by a feoffment with livery of seisin. This was a solemn ceremony carried out by the parties entering on the land, and the feoffor, in the presence of witnesses, delivering the seisin to the feoffee either by some symbolic act, such as handing him a twig or sod of earth, or by uttering some words such as 'Enter into this land and God give you joy' and leaving him in possession of the land.” Robert E. Megarry & H.W.R. Wade, The Law of Real Property 47 (5th ed. 1984).

feoffor (fef- or feef-ar or or-or). The transferor of an estate in fee simple. — Also spelled feoffor.

fertile-octogenarian rule. (1856) The legal fiction, that a woman can become pregnant as long as she is alive. • The case that gave rise to this fiction was Lee v. Audley, 1 Cox 324, 29 Eng. Rep. 1186 (ch. 1757). See W. Barton Leach, PERPETUITIES: NEW HAMPSHIRE DEFERTIFIES OCTOGENARIANS, 77 Harv. L. Rev. 1759 (1963). — Also termed presumption-of-fertility rule.

“Suppose testator bequeaths in trust to pay the income to A for her life, then to pay the income to the children of A for their lives, and upon the death of the survivor of such children, to pay the principal to the grandchildren of A. At the time of the testator's death A is 79 years old, and she has two children. Believe it or not, it has been held that the remainder to the grandchildren of A is viable of the rule against perpetuities and invalid. The law adopted the conclusive presumption that every person is capable of having children until the day she or she dies, as far as the rule against perpetuities is concerned. Consequently, A could have an additional child who would not be a life in being at the testator's death, and that child could have a child who would be born beyond the permissible period. The result of this hypothesis is to invalidate the remainder fetiales. Hist. A bondsman; a surety. See Frank-pledge.

festing-penny. Hist. Earnest, or payment, given to a servant when hired.

festinum remedium (fes-ti-nam ri-mee-dee-am). [Latin] Hist. A speedy remedy. • It was used in cases, such as actions for dower or assize, where the redress of injury was given without unnecessary delay.

festuca (fes-tyoo-ka). Hist. A rod, staff, or stick used as a pledge (or gage) of good faith by a party to a contract or as a token of conveyance of land. • In Roman law, a festuca was a symbol of ownership. — Also termed fistuca; vindicta. See LIVERY OF SEISIN.

"The wed or gage, however, was capable of becoming a symbol; an object which intrinsically was of trifling value might be given and might serve to bind a contract. Among the Franks, whom we must regard as being for many purposes our ancestors in law, it took the shape of the festuca. Whether this transition from the 'real' to the 'formal' can be accomplished without the intervention of sacral ceremonies seems doubtful. There are some who regard the festuca as a stout staff which has taken the place of a spear and is a symbol of physical power. Others see in it a little bit of stick on which impræcatory runes have been cut. It is hard to decide such questions, for, especially under the influence of a new religion, symbols lose their old meanings and are mixed up. Popular etymology confounds confusion." 2 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 186 (2d ed. 1899).

festival. (16c) A developing but unborn mammal, esp. in the latter stages of development. — Also spelled foetus. Cf. EMBRYO; ZYGOTE. [Cases: Abortion and Birth Control ◄ 106.]

fetters. (fey-terz). vb. Beats, or a chain or shackle for the feet. — fetter, vb.

fettering of property. The act of making the disposition or ownership of property more complex so that those with separate interests must cooperate if they are to handle their interests reasonably. • Fettering of property occurs whenever ownership is split into two or more interests, as when present and future interests are divided or when a tenancy in common is created. [Cases: Perpetuities ◄ 1-1.]

feu (fey-o). n. (fr. Law Latin feudum "a fee") (15c) 1. A right to land given to a person in exchange for service to be performed. 2. Scots law: Land held by a vassal in return for an annual payment in money, crops, or services(called feu duty). • This type of tenure was abolished in Scotland in 2000. 3. Scots law. A perpetual grant of land to be held in exchange for grain or money. 4. A perpetual lease for a fixed rent. 5. A piece of land held under a perpetual lease for a fixed rent. — Also spelled fev. See FEE (2). — feu, vb. — feu, adj.

"Feu: In Latin feudum, was used to denote the feudal-holding, where the service was purely military; but the term has been used in Scotland in contradistinction to ward-holding, the military tenure of this country. . . . for, even in the purest ages of the military system, innumerable instances are to be found of grants of land in the feudal form, where the vassally delivered victual, or performed agricultural services to his superior." William Bell, Bell's Dictionary and Digest of the Law of Scotland 456 (George Watson ed., 7th ed. 1890).

feu, vb. Scots law: To grant (land) by feu.

fetidness. n. (fet-id-nis). The state or quality of being fetid; the state or quality of having a fetid odour.

they never became terms of our law. It is noticeable also that feudum was constantly used in the sense that our fee has when we speak of a lawyer’s or doctor’s fee; payments due for services rendered, at least if they are permanent periodic payments, are feudal; the judges, for example, receive feuda or feoda, not salaries. The etymological problem presented by the English fee seems no easy one, because at the Conquest the would-be Latin feudum or feuda (the d in which has puzzled philologists and does not always appear in Domesday Book) is introduced among a people which already has: feoh as a word for property in general and cattle in particular. 2. "Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 236 n.2 (2d ed. 1899).

impartible feud. An indivisible feud; a feud not subject to partition. See feudum individuum under FEUD.

improper feud. A nonmilitary feud; a feud that is base or servile in nature.

*These were the principal, and very simple, qualities of the genuine or original fees; being then all of a military nature, and in the hands of military persons: though the feodatories, being under frequent incapacity of cultivating and managing their own lands, soon found it necessary to commit part of them to inferior tenants ... But this at the same time demolished the ancient simplicity of fees; and an inroad being once made upon their constitution, it subjected them, in a course of time, to great varieties and innovations. Feuds came to be bought and sold, and devia­tions were made from the old fundamental rules of tenure and succession, which were held no longer sacred, when the feuds themselves no longer continued to be purely military. Hence these tenures began now to be divided into feoda propria et impropria, proper and improper feuds ... 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 57-58 (1766).

proper feud. A feud based on military service.

2. The interest of the tenant in the land conveyed. 3. The land itself conveyed. — Also termed (in senses 1, 2 & 3) fee; fie; feod; feude; feudum. 4. An enmity or private war existing between families or clans, esp. as a result of a murder.

"Where wrong done to an individual is not regarded as an injury to the entire tribe, the wrongdoer is out of the peace only as regards the wronged party and his kin. The situation created by such wrongful deed is feud (Anglo-Saxon feothth, Latin falsa). The root meaning of the word is 'hated.' Feud is legally sanctioned hostility. The recognition of feud by the law is found in the fact that revenge taken in lawful feud is not a breach of the peace. It is not a wrongful deed. It furnishes no basis for any claim for fine or punishment. The man slain in lawful feud is not to be avenged nor has compensation to be paid for his slaying." Munroe-Smith, The Development of European Law 29 (1928).

blood feud. A state of hostility between families in which one family seeks to avenge the killing of one of its members by killing a member of the other family. See VENDetta.

"Anglo-Saxon polity preserved, even down to the Norman Conquest, many traces of a time when kinship was the strongest of all bonds. Such a stage of society, we hardly need add, is not confined to any one region of the world or any one race of men. ... When it puts on the face of strife between hostile kindreds, it is shown in the war of tribal factions, and more specifically in the blood-feud. A man’s kindred are his avengers; and, as it is their right and honour to avenge him, so it is their duty to make amends for his misdeeds, or else maintain his cause in fight. Step by step, as the power of the State waxes, the self-centred and self-helping autonomy of the kindred wanes. Private feud is controlled, regulated, put, one may say, into legal harness; the avenging and the protecting clan on the slain and the slayer are made pledges and auxiliaries of public justice." 1 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 31 (2d ed. 1898).

feudal, adj. (17c) 1. Of, relating to, or growing out of feudalism <feudal law>. 2. Of or relating to a feud <feudal tenure>. — Also spelled (archaically) feodal. Cf. allonial.

feudal action. Hist. A real action; an action that concerned only real property.

feudalism (fyood-al-iz-əm). (19c) 1. A landholding system, particularly applying to medieval Europe, in which all are bound by their status in a hierarchy of reciprocal obligations of service and defense. • The lord was obligated to give the vassals (1) some land, (2) protection, and (3) justice. The lord guaranteed the quiet occupation of the land by the vassal and guaranteed to do right if the vassal became involved in a dispute. In return, the vassal owed the lord some type of service, called “tenure” (literally “means of holding”), because the different types of service were the methods by which the vassals held the property. 2. The social, political, and economic system of medieval Europe. — Also termed feudal system; feudal system. — feudalistic, adj.

"What do we mean by feudalism? Some such answer as the following is the best that I can give — A state of society in which the main social bond is the relation between lord and man, a relation implying on the lord’s part protection and defence; on the man’s part protection, service and reverence, the service including service in arms. This personal relation is inseparably involved in a proprietary relation, the tenure of land — the man holds land of the lord, the man’s service is a burden on the land, the lord has important rights in the land, and (we may say) the full ownership of the land is split up between man and lord." J.W. Maitland, The Constitutional History of England 143 (1908; repr. 1959).

"Modern historical research has taught us that, while it is a mistake to speak of a feudal system, the word ‘feudalism’ is a convenient way of referring to certain fundamental similarities which, in spite of local variations, can be discerned in the social development of all the peoples of western Europe from about the ninth to the thirteenth centuries." J.L. Brierly, The Law of Nations 2 (5th ed. 1955).

feudal law. Hist. The real-property law of land tenures that prevailed in England, esp. after the Norman Conquest. See feudarum consuetudines.

feudatory, adj. (16c) Hist. (Of a vassal) owing feudal allegiance to a lord.

feudatory, n. (17c) Hist. The grantee of a feud; the vassal or tenant who held an estate by feudal service. — Also termed feodary; feudatory.

“Every receiver of lands, or feudatory, was therefore bound, when called upon by his benefactor, or immediate lord of his feud or fee, to do all in his power to defend him.” 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 46 (1766).

feude. See FEUD.

feudee (fyoo-dee), n. Hist. The grantee of a feud; a feudal tenant.

feudist. (17c) A writer on feuds (for example, Cujacius, Spelman, Craig).

Ffeudor Libri (fyoo-dor-am li brt). [Latin “the books of the feuds”] Hist. The Books of Feuds, a five-book compilation of Lombardic feudal law published in Milan around 1152, during the reign of Henry III. • This unofficial compilation was the main source of tenure law among the nations in Europe. It was widely used in medieval law schools and courts in Italy, France, and Germany. The Ffeudorum Libri were probably known in England but had little effect other than influencing English lawyers to study their own tenure system more critically. — Also termed Consuetudines Feudorum; Usus Feudorum.

“The Latin equivalent of feudum or feodum is the root of the words ‘feudal’ and ‘subinfeudation’. The French form fief is favoured by some English historians, but it was not used in law-French.” J.H. Baker, An Introduction to English Legal History 256 n.4 (3d ed. 1990).

feudum antiquum (fyoo-dam an-tl-kwam), n. [Law Latin “ancient feud”] Hist. 1. A feud that passed to a vassal from an intestate ancestor. 2. A feud that ancestors had possessed for more than four generations. 3. An ancient feud. Pl. feuda antiqua (fyoo-da an-ttkwa). — Also termed feodum antiquum (fee-a-dam or fyoo-dam). See FEUD (1).

feudum apertum (fyoo-dam o-par-tam). Hist. A feud that reverted to the lord because of a tenant’s failure of issue, a crime by the tenant, or some other legal cause. — Also termed feodum apertum.

feudum burgale (fyoo-dam bar-gay-lee). [Law Latin] Hist. Land held feudally byburgage tenure — that is, tenure given in exchange for a tenant’s watching and warding in a burg. See WATCH AND WARD.

feudum ex camera aut caverna (fyoo-dam eks kam-ar-a awt ka-var-na). [Law Latin “feu from a room or hole”] Hist. An annual gift of money, grain, or other items to a deserving person, esp. a soldier.

feudum hauberticum (fyoo-dam haw-bar-ta-kam). Hist. A feud that was held on the military service of appearing fully armed when summoned by the lord. See ARRIERE-BAN.

feudum improprium (fyoo-dam im-proh-pree-am). Hist. A feud that was improper.

feudum individuum (fyoo-dam in-da-vij-oo-am). Hist. A feud that was indivisible and descendible only to the eldest son.

feudum laicum (fyoo-dam lay-a-kom). Hist. A lay feud. — Also termed feodum laicum.

feudum ligium (fyoo-dam lij-ee-am). Hist. 1. A liege feud; a feud held immediately of the sovereign. 2. A feud for which the vassal owed fealty to his lord against all other persons.

feudum maternum (fyoo-dam ma-tar-nam). Hist. A feud that descended to the feudatory from the maternal side.

feudum militare (fyoo-dam mil-a-tair-ee). Hist. A knight’s feud. • It was held by knight-service and esteemed the most honorable species of tenure. — Also termed feodum militis; (in Norman law) fief d’haubert or fief d’hauberk.

feudum nobile (fyoo-dam noh-bol-le). Hist. A feud for which the tenant did guard and owed fealty and homage. — Also termed feodum nobile.

feudum novum (fyoo-dam noh-vam). [Law Latin] Hist. A new fee; a fee that began with the person of the feudatory, and that was not acquired by succession. — Also spelled feudum novum.

“For if the feud, of which the son died seised, was really feudum antiquum, or one descended to him from his ancestors, the father could not possibly succeed to it, because it must have passed him in the course of descent, before it could come to the son.... And if it were feudum novum, or one newly acquired by the son, then only the descendants from the body of the feudatory himself could succeed, by the known maxim of the early feudal constitutions ... which was founded as well upon the personal merit of the vassal, which might be transmitted to his children but could not ascend to his progenitors ....” 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 211–12 (1766).

feudum novum ut antiquum (fyoo-dam noh-vam at an-tl-kwam). Hist. A new feud held with the qualities of an ancient feud.

feudum paternum (fyoo-dam pa-tar-nam). Hist. 1. A feud that the tenant’s paternal ancestors had held for four generations. 2. A feud descendible only to the heirs on the paternal side. 3. A feud that could be held only by males.

feudum proprium (fyoo-dam proh-pree-am). Hist. An original feud that is military in nature and held by military service.

feudum talliatum (fyoo-dam tal-ee-ay-tam). See FEE TAIL.

feu duty. Scots law. The annual rent paid by the tenant of a feu. — Also termed ground annual.

fiat money. See MONEY.

fiat ut petitur (fi-at ut pet-a-tar). [Latin] Let it be done as it is asked. • An order granting a petition.

fiaw. See FIAT.

FICA (fi-ka). abbr. FEDERAL INSURANCE CONTRIBUTIONS ACT.

fickle-fiduciary rule. The principle that a partner or employee who breaches a fiduciary duty should forfeit all compensation, bonuses, and other benefits received for as long as the breach continues. • The rule usually applies to a person who engages in or assists a competing business, or resigns from employment to set up or work for a competing business. Traditionally, mitigating factors, including the absence of harm to the employer or partnership, are not considered in applying the rule. But some courts have found that if a strict application would produce unjustly harsh results, mitigating factors must be weighed.

ficta traditio (fik-ta tra-dis-ee-oh). [Latin] Scots law. A fictitious delivery. • The phrase invoked the rule that if the parties so intended, an item could be treated as having been delivered to a buyer in possession of it without the need for physical transfer. — Also termed fictio brevis manus.

fictio (fik-shee-oh), n. [Latin fr. fingere “to feign”] Roman law. A legal fiction; a legal assumption or supposition (such as that the plaintiff was a citizen) necessary to achieve certain legal results that otherwise would not be obtained. • Legal fictions allowed Roman magistrates (praetors) to expand the law beyond what was strictly allowed by the jus civile. This practice also occurred in English law — for example, the action of common recovery, which allowed a landowner to convey land by law could not be alienated (such as land held in fee tail). Pl. fictions (fik-shee-oh-neez).

fictio brevis manus (fik-shee-oh bree-vis may-nas). [Law Latin] FICTA TRADITIO.

fideicommissary substitution. 1. SUBSTITUTION (6). 2. substitution (7).

fideicommissum (fi-dee-koh-mee-soh). Mexican law. A trust, esp., a trust that is established for the purpose of acquiring property in Mexico with a Mexican bank as trustee and a non-Mexican (who may be the settlor) as beneficiary. • The property is held in the name of the trust, but the beneficiary has all the rights and obligations of direct ownership, including the power to lease, sell, or devise the property. A Mexican fideicomiso usu. lasts 50 years and can be renewed for 50 more. Cf. fideicommissum.

fidei-commissarius. See cestui que trust.

fidei-commissary (fi-dee-t kom-a-ser-ej). See cestui que trust.

fideicommissary heir. See heir.

fideicommissum (fi-dee-t ka-mis-um). [Latin] (18c) 1. Roman law. A direction to an heir asking the heir as a matter of good faith to give some part of the inheritance, such as a particular object, or all the inheritance, to a third party. • A fideicommissum was a device to overcome some of the technicalities of the Roman will. Originally it created a mere moral obligation, but Augustus made it enforceable by legal process. 2. Roman & civil law. An arrangement similar to a trust by which a testator gave property to a person for the benefit of another who could not, by law, inherit property. • Over time, this device was used to tie up property for generations, and most civil jurisdictions now prohibit or limit it. For example, in Louisiana, an arrangement in which one person bequeaths property to a second with a charge to preserve it and, at death, to restore it to a third person is a prohibited fideicommissum. — Sometimes spelled fidei-commissum. Pl. fideicommissa.

"The many formalities with regard to the institution of heirs and the bequest of legacies, coupled with the fact that many persons, e.g. peregrini, were incapable of being instituted heirs, or of being given a legacy, led, in the late Republic, to testators leaving directions to their heirs in favour of given individuals, which, though not binding at law, they hoped their heirs would, in honour, feel bound to carry out. The beginning of fideicommissa, therefore, was very like the early practice with regard to trusts in English law, and, as in the case of trusts, a time came when trusts were made binding legally as well as morally. . . . For brevity, the fideicommissum will here be called ‘the trust’, the person upon whom it was imposed (fideiarius) ‘the trustee’, and the person in whose favour it was imposed (fideicommissarius) ‘the beneficiary’. R.W. Leage, Roman Private Law 252 (C.H. Ziegler ed., 2d ed. 1930).

fidejubere (fi-dee-yaa-beer-ee), vb. [Latin] Roman law. To become a surety. • Forms of this word were spoken by the parties to a stipulatio that bound one party to become a surety for the other; the first party asked, “Do you pledge yourself?” (“fidejubesne?”), and the second responded, “I do pledge myself” (“fidejubeo”). See stipulatio.

fidejussio (fi-di-jash-an). [fr. Latin fidejussio] (16c) Roman law. An act by which a person becomes an additional security for another. • The act does not remove the principal’s liability but only adds to the surety’s security. Fidejussio was one of the three types of adpromission, and the only type remaining in Justinian’s law. — Also spelled fidejussio; fideissio. See adpromission (1). — fidejussonary, adj.

fidejussor (fi-dee-jas-or or jas-ar). (16c) 1. Roman law. (ital.) A guarantor; a person who binds himself to pay another’s debt. 2. Hist. Maritime law. A person who acts as bail for a defendant in the Court of Admiralty. — Also spelled fideiussor. Cf. adpromissor. — fidejury, adj.

"The proceedings of the court of admiralty bear much resemblance to those of the civil law, but are not entirely founded thereon; and they likewise adopt and make use of other laws, as occasion requires; such as the Rhodian law, and the laws of Oleron. For the law of England, as has frequently been observed, doth not acknowledge or pay any deference to the civil law considered as such; but merely permits its use in such cases where it judged its determinations equitable, and therefore blends it, in the present instance, with other marine laws . . . . The first process in these courts is frequently by arrest of the defendant’s person; and they also take recognizances or stipulation of certain fidejussors in the nature of bail, and in case of default may imprison both them and their principal." 3 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 108–09 (1768).

fidem mentiri (fī-dam men-tī-ri). [Latin] Hist. To betray faith or fealty. • The term refers to a feudal tenant who did not keep the fealty sworn to the lord.

fidepromission (fī-dee-proh-mish-ōn), n. [Latin "faith-promise"] (19c) Roman law. A contract of guaranty by stipulation. • Fidepromission was one of the three types of adpromission. See ADPROMISSION (1); STIPULATION (3). — fidepromissor, n.

fides facta (fī-deez fak-ta). [Latin] Hist. Faith-making; faith-pledging. • Among the Franks and Lombards, certain transactions were guaranteed by symbolic, formal acts — making one's faith such as the giving of a rod when property was transferred. See FESTUCA.

fiducia (fī-dū-see-ā), n. [Latin "an entrusting"] Roman law. An early form of transfer of title by way of mortgage, deposit, etc., with a provision for reconveyance upon payment of the debt, termination of the deposit, etc.

"The Roman mortgage (fiducia) fell wholly out of use before the time of Justinian, having been displaced by the superior simplicity and convenience of the hypothecae; and in this respect modern Continental law has followed the Roman." John Saimond, Jurisprudence 443 (Glanville L. Williams ed., 10th ed. 1947).

fiducial, adj. (16c) Of, relating to, or characterized by confidence and reliance on another person or thing <there must be a fiducial bond between a patient and a doctor>. [Cases: Fraud C==>7; Health C==>578.]

fiducial relationship. See trust relationship under RELATIONSHIP.

fiduciarius heres (fī-dū-see-ā-ree ez heer-eez). [Latin "fiduciary heir"] Roman law. A person formally named an heir in a testament, but in a fiduciary capacity, and charged to deliver the succession to the person designated by the testament.

fiduciarius tutor (fī-dū-see-ā-ree tō-tur). Roman law. A fiduciary guardian; a person who by fulfilling a trust to free someone in power became his or her guardian.

fiduciary (fī-dū-see-ār-ee), n. (17c) 1. A person who is required to act for the benefit of another person on all matters within the scope of their relationship; one who owes to another the duties of good faith, trust, confidence, and candor <the corporate officer is a fiduciary to the corporation>. 2. One who must exercise a high standard of care in managing another's money or property <the beneficiary sued the fiduciary for investing in speculative securities>. — fiduciary, adj. [Cases: Fraud C==>7].

"Fiduciary is a vague term, and it has been pressed into service for a number of ends. . . . My view is that the term 'fiduciary' is so vague that plaintiffs have been able to claim that fiduciary obligations have been breached when in fact the particular defendant was not a fiduciary stricto sensu but simply had withheld property from the plaintiff in an unconscionable manner." D.W.M. Waters, The Constructive Trust 4 (1964).

dilatory fiduciary (dil-a-tor-ee). A trustee or other fiduciary who is unreasonably slow in administering an estate.

successor fiduciary. A fiduciary who is appointed to succeed or replace a prior one.

field-warehouse financing agreement. The loan agreement in a field-warehouse arrangement.

field warehousing. An inventory-financing method by which a merchant pledges its inventory, which is in the possession of a third person (a warehouser). • This is a method of financing an inventory that cannot economically be delivered to the creditor or third party. The borrower segregates part of the inventory and places it under the nominal control of a lender or third party, so that the lender has a possessory interest. Cf. floor-plan financing under financing; pledge.

"Field warehousing is a way of bringing about the security relationship of a pledge. It is an arrangement for allowing the pledgor a more convenient access to the pledged goods, while the goods are actually in the custody and control of a third person on the pledgor's premises." Business Factors, Inc. v. Taylor-Edward's Warehouse & Transfer Co., 585 P.2d 825, 828 (Wash. Ct. App. 1978).

"Field warehousing is . . . an arrangement whereby a wholesaler, manufacturer, or merchant finances his business through the pledge of goods remaining on his premises. The arrangement is valid and effective where there is an actual delivery to the warehouseman by the bailor who has hired the warehouseman and given him exclusive possession of the warehouse goods." In re Covington Grain Co., 638 F.2d 1362, 1365

50-percent rule. (1975) The principle that liability for negligence is apportioned in accordance with the debt financing. The raising of funds by issuing bonds or notes or by borrowing from a financial institution.

equity financing. 1. The raising of funds by issuing capital securities (shares in the business) rather than making loans or selling bonds. 2. The capital so raised.

floor-plan financing. A loan that is secured by merchandise and paid off as the goods are sold. • Usual such a loan is given by a manufacturer to a retailer or other dealer (as a car dealer). — Also termed floor planning. Cf. field warehousing.

gap financing. Interim financing used to fund the difference between a current loan and a loan to be received in the future, esp. between two long-term loans. See bridge loan under loan.

interim financing. A short-term loan secured to cover certain major expenditures, such as construction costs, until permanent financing is obtained. — Also termed construction financing.

internal financing. A funding method using funds generated through the company's operations rather than from stock issues or bank loans.

link financing. The obtaining of credit by depositing funds in another's bank account to aid the other in obtaining a loan.

outside financing. The raising of funds by selling stocks (equity financing) or bonds (debt financing).

permanent financing. A long-term loan obtained to repay an interim loan, such as a mortgage loan that is used to repay a construction loan.

project financing. A method of funding in which the lender looks primarily to the money generated by a single project as security for the loan. • This type of financing is usu. used for large, complex, and expensive single-purpose projects such as power plants, chemical-processing plants, mines, and toll roads. The lender usu. pays solely or primarily from the money generated by the contracts for the facility's output (sometimes paid by customers directly into an account maintained by the lender), such as the electricity sold by a power plant. The lender usu. requires the facility to be developed and owned by a special-purpose entity (sometimes called a bankruptcy-remote entity), which can be a corporation, limited partnership, or other legal entity, that is permitted to perform no function other than developing, owning, and operating the facility. See single-purpose project; special-purpose entity; bankruptcy-remote entity.

financing agency. See agency (1).

FinCEN. abbr. financial crimes enforcement network.

find, vb. (bef. 12c) To determine a fact in dispute by verdict or decision <find guilty> <found that no duty existed>. Cf. hold (2).

finder. (13c) 1. An intermediary who brings together parties for a business opportunity, such as two companies for a merger, a borrower and a financial institution, an issuer and an underwriter of securities, or a seller and a buyer of real estate. • A finder differs from a broker-dealer because the finder merely brings two parties together to make their own contract, while a broker-dealer usu. participates in the negotiations. See finder of fact. See fact-finder.

finder's fee. (1937) 1. The amount charged by one who brings together parties for a business opportunity. 2. The amount charged by a person who locates a lost or missing item and returns it to its owner.

finder's-fee contract. (1959) An agreement between a finder and one of the parties to a business opportunity.

finding. See finding of fact.

finding of fact. (18c) A determination by a judge, jury, or administrative agency of a fact supported by the evidence in the record, usu. presented at the trial or hearing <he agreed with the jury's finding of fact that the driver did not stop before proceeding into the intersection>. — Often shortened to finding. See fact-finder. Cf. conclusion of fact; conclusion of law.

concurrent finding. (usu. pl.) Identical factual findings by two different tribunals on a specific issue of fact.

general finding. An undifferentiated finding in favor of one party.

special finding. 1. (usu. pl.) A finding of the necessary and ultimate facts to support a judgment in favor of one party. 2. Military law. A military tribunal's finding that directly relates to the determination of guilt or innocence.

fine, n. (13c) 1. An amicable final agreement or compromise of a fictitious or actual suit to determine the true possessor of land. • The fine was formerly used as a form of conveyance to disentail an estate. — Also termed final concord; finalis concordia. See foot of the fine.

"A peculiar and persistent use of the writ [of covenant] was in levying a fine. A fine was always a compromise which ended the dispute which may have existed as to who owned the land. . . . Soon after Glanvill's book was written, an innovation was made in the procedure which endured until 1833. Instead of the compromise, a final concord was entered into by the court, and the dispute ended. . . ." C.H.S. Fifoot, History and Sources of the Common Law: Tort and Contract 256 (1949).

"Unlike the recovery, which was a real action, the fine was a compromised fictitious personal action, originally designed as a method of ensuring security in conveyancing and only later being employed for the purpose of barring estates tail. In outline, it operated in the following manner: The intending purchaser brought an action, begun by writ of covenant, against the intending vendor. The parties then applied to the court to compromise the action; by the terms of the compromise (finis) the intending vendor admitted that the land belonged to the intending purchaser because he had given it to him, and the terms of the compromise were recorded in the court records. The fine owed its popularity as a means of conveyancing to two factors, neither of which was present in the standard method of conveyance by means of feoffment. First, the enrolling in the court records provided evidence of the transaction which was both permanent and free from the danger of forgery. Secondly, the effect of the fine was to set running a short period of limitation at the expiration of which all claims to the land were barred. It was this second aspect which made the device attractive as a means of 'barring' fees tail." Peter Butt, Land Law 102–03 (2d ed. 1988).

executed fine. Hist. A fine made on acknowledgment of the right of the grantee to land given to him as a gift from the grantor. • This was abolished in England in 1833. 3 & 4 Will. 4, ch. 74.

2. fine for alienation. 3. A fine paid by a tenant to the landlord at the commencement of the tenancy to reduce the rent payments. 4. Hist. A money payment from a tenant to the tenant's lord.

common fine. A sum of money due from a tenant to a lord to defray the cost of a court leet or to allow the litigants to try the action closer to home. — Also termed head silver.

5. A pecuniary criminal punishment or civil penalty payable to the public treasury. [Cases: Fines @ 1.5] — fine, vb.

day fine. A fine payable over time, usu. as a percentage of the defendant's earnings on a weekly or monthly basis.

excessive fine. (16c) 1. Criminal law. A fine that is unreasonably high and disproportionate to the offense committed. • The Eighth Amendment proscribes excessive fines. An example of an excessive fine is a civil forfeiture in which the property was not an instrumentality of the crime and the worth of the property was not proportional to the owner's culpability. [Cases: Fines @ 1.3] 2. A fine or penalty that seriously impairs one's earning capacity, esp. from a business.

fresh fine. Hist. A fine levied within the past year.

fined. See finable.

Fine and Recovery Act. Hist. An English statute, enacted in 1833, that abolished the use of fines as a method of conveying title to land. 3 & 4 Will. 4, ch. 74. See fine (1).

fine annullando levato de tenemento quod fuit de antiquo dominico (f1-nee a-na-lan-doh la-vay-to dee ten-a-men-toh kwod fyyoo-it dee an-tr-kwod da-min-a-koh). [Latin "a fine to be annulled levied from a tenement which was of ancient demesne"] Hist. A writ for disannulling a conveyance of land in ancient demesne to the lord's prejudice.

fine capiendo pro terris (f1-nee kap-een-doh proh-teris). [Latin "a fine to be taken for lands"] Hist. A writ that an imprisoned felon could use in some circumstances to obtain release from jail and to recover lands and goods taken during imprisonment.
fine for alienation. Hist. A fee paid by a tenant to the lord upon the alienation of a feudal estate and substitution of a new tenant. • It was payable by all tenants holding by knight's service or tenants in capite by socage tenure. — Often shortened to fine.

fine for endowment. Hist. A fee paid by a widow of a tenant to the tenant's lord. • If not paid, the widow could not be endowed of her husband's land.

finem facere (fi-nam fay'-sa-rec). [Latin] Hist. 1. To make a composition or compromise; to relinquish a claim in exchange for consideration.

"In the thirteenth century the king's justices wield a wide and a 'common law' power of ordering that an offender be kept in custody. They have an equally wide power of discharging him upon his 'making fine with the king.' We must observe the language of the time. In strictness they have no power to 'impose a fine.' No tribunal of this period, unless we are mistaken, is ever said to impose a fine. To order the offender to pay so much money to the king — this the judge may not do. If he did it, he would be breaking or evading the Great Charter, for an amercement should be enforced, not by royal justices, but by neighbours of the wrong-doer. What the judges can do is this: — they can pronounce a sentence of imprisonment and then allow the culprit to 'make fine,' that is to make an end (finem facere) of the matter by paying or finding security for a certain sum of money. In theory the fine is a bilateral transaction, a bargain; it is not 'imposed,' it is 'made.'" Frederic Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 517 (2d ed. 1899).

2. To make a settlement of a penalty. • Magna Carta (ch. 55) specifically limited "[a]ll fines which were made with us unjustly and contrary to the law of the land . . . ." (Omnes fines qui injuste et contra legem terrae facti sunt nobiscum).

fine non capiendo pro pulchre placitando (fi-nee non kap-ee-en-doh proph pal-kree plas-oh-tan-doh). [Latin] "a fine not to be taken for pleading fairly"] Hist. A writ prohibiting court officers from taking fines for fair pleading (i.e., beaupleader).

fine print. (1951) The part of an agreement or document — usu. in small, light print that is not easily noticeable — referring to disclaimers, restrictions, or limitations.

fine pro redisseisina capiendo (fi-nii proh re-dis-see-zin-oh-kap-ee-en-doh). [Law Latin] "a fine to be taken for again disseising" Hist. A writ that entitled a person imprisoned for twice dispossessing someone (redisseisina) to release upon payment of a reasonable fine.

fines le roy (fi-niz la roy). [Law French] Hist. The king's fines. • A fine or fee that was paid to the monarch for an offense or contempt.

fine sur cognizance de droit, comme cee que il ad de son done (fin sar kon-a-zants da droh-tye kom say-oh kweel ad da sawn dawn). [Law French] "a fine upon acknowledgment of the right, as that which he has of his gift" Hist. The most common fine of conveyance, by which the defendant (also called the deforciant) acknowledged in court that he had already conveyed the property to the cognizee. • This form of conveyance took the place of an actual livery of seizin. See Fine (1).

"But, in general, the first species of fine, 'sur cognizance de droit come cee, etc.,' is the most used, as it conveys a clean and absolute freehold, and gives the cognizee a seizin in law, without an actual livery; and is therefore called a fine executed, whereas the others are but executory." 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 353 (1766).

fine sur concessit (fin sar kan-sees-it). [Law French] Hist. A species of conveyance in which the cognizor does not acknowledge the cognizee's preceding right in land but grants the cognizee an estate de novo, usu. for life or a term of years, by way of supposed composition. See Fine (1).

fine sur done, grant et render (fin sar dawn, grant ay ren-da-ar). [Law French] "fine upon gift, grant and render" Hist. A double conveyance, consisting of a fine sur cognizance de droit come cee que il ad de son done and a fine sur concessit, used to convey particular limitations of estates. • For example, after acknowledgment of the cognizee's right in the land, the cognizee would grant back to the cognizor or a third party some other estate in the land. See Fine (1).

finger, vb. (1930) Slang. To identify (a person) as a perpetrator, usu. of a crime <in his grand-jury testimony, Vinson fingered Bauer as the gunman>.

finger pillory. See pillory.

fingerprint, n. (1859) 1. The distinctive pattern of lines on a human fingertip <no two fingerprints are identical>. [Cases: Criminal Law C 475.5.] 2. The impression of a fingerprint made on any surface <the detective found several fingerprints on the knife>. 3. An ink impression of the pattern of lines on a fingertip, usu. taken during the booking procedure after an arrest <after Dick had his fingerprints taken, he was put in the drunk tank>. — Also termed print; thumbprint. Cf. DNA identification. — fingerprint, vb. — fingerprinting, n. fingerprint claim. See patent claim.

finire (fi-nee-re), vb. [Law Latin] Hist. 1. To fine; to pay a fine. 2. To end or finish a matter.

finis (fi-niss or fin-is). [Latin] (15c) Hist. 1. Boundary or limit. 2. The compromise of a fine of conveyance. See Fine (1).

"The parties then applied to the court to compromise the action; by the terms of the compromise (finis) the intending vendor admitted that the land belonged to the intending purchaser because he had given it to him, and the terms of the compromise were recorded in the court records." Peter Butt, Land Law 102 (2d ed. 1998).

3. A fine, or payment of money made to satisfy a claim of criminal penalty.

first policy year. Insurance. The first year of a life-insurance policy that is to be automatically renewed annually. • This statutory phrase prohibits an insurer from using the policy’s suicide exclusion as a defense — and refusing payment on the policy — when an insured commits suicide after the first year of the policy. The insurer can invoke the suicide exclusion as a defense to payment only if the insured commits suicide in the first policy year. [Cases: Insurance ⊂= 2434(1), 2594(5), 3125.]

first purchaser. See PURCHASER (2).

first refusal, right of. See RIGHT OF FIRST REFUSAL.

first-sale doctrine. (1963) 1. Copyright. The rule that the purchaser of a physical copy of a copyrighted work, such as a book or CD, may give or sell that copy to someone else without infringing the copyright owner’s exclusive distribution rights. • With regard to that physical copy, the copyright owner’s distribution right is said to be exhausted. 17 USCA § 109(a). [Cases: Copyrights and Intellectual Property ⊂= 38.5.] 2. Patents. The principle that the buyer of a patented article has the right to use, repair, and resell the article without interference from the patentee. • The patentee may still retain control of the article through terms in the license or sale contract. See PATENT-EXHAUSTION DOCTRINE. [Cases: Patents ⊂= 191.]

first taker. See TAKER.

first-to-file rule. (1969) Civil procedure. 1. The principle that, when two suits are brought by the same parties, regarding the same issues, in two courts of proper jurisdiction, the court that first acquires jurisdiction usu. retains the suit, to the exclusion of the other court. • The court with the second-filed suit ordinarily stays proceedings or abstains. But an exception exists if the first-filed suit is brought merely in anticipation of the true plaintiff’s suit and amounts to an improper attempt at forum-shopping. See ANTICIPATORY FILING. [Cases: Courts ⊂= 475, 493, 514; Federal Courts ⊂= 1145.] 2. The doctrine allowing a party to a previously filed lawsuit to enjoin another from pursuing a later-filed action. • Also termed first-filing rule; first-filed rule; priority-jurisdiction rule. [Cases: Courts ⊂= 480, 507, 508, 516; Federal Courts ⊂= 1145.]

first-to-file system. Patents. The practice of granting priority to the first person to file a patent application. • Most of the world uses a first-to-file patent system; the only major exception is the United States, which grants priority to the first inventor. Cf. FIRST-TO-INVENT SYSTEM. [Cases: Patents ⊂= 90(1).]

first-to-invent system. Patents. The practice of awarding a patent to the first person to create an invention, rather than the first to file a patent application. • Because the first inventor is not necessarily the first person to file for a patent, an interference hearing is held to decide who is entitled to the patent. This system is used only... in the United States. See CONCEPTION OF INVENTION; PRIORITY OF INVENTION. Cf. FIRST-TO-FILE SYSTEM. [Cases: Patents <901.]

first user. See senior user.

fixed trust. See trust.

fixing a jury. See jury-fixing.

fixture. (18c) Personal property that is attached to land or a building that is regarded as an irremovable part of the real property, such as a fireplace built into a home. See UCC §9-102(a)(41). • Historically, personal property becomes a fixture when it is physically fastened to or connected with the land or building and the fastening or connection was done to enhance the utility of the land or building. If personal property has been attached to the land or building and enhances only the chattel's utility, it is not a fixture. For example, if bricks are purposely stacked to form a wall, a fixture results. But if the bricks are merely stacked for convenience until used for some purpose, they do not form a fixture. — Also termed permanent fixture, immovable fixture. Cf. Improvement. [Cases: Fixtures C=1].

A fixture can best be defined as a thing which, although originally a movable chattel, is by reason of its annexation to, or association in use with land, regarded as a part of the land. . . . The law of fixtures concerns those situations where the chattel annexed still retains a separate identity in spite of annexation, for example a furnace or a light fixture. Where the chattel annexed loses such identity, as in the case of nails, boards, etc., the problem becomes one of accession." Ray Andrews Brown, The Law of Personal Property §137, at 698 & n.1 (2d ed. 1953).

"Broadly, goods can be classified for the purposes of [UCC §9-313] into three categories: those that remain "pure goods," those so substantially integrated into real estate as to become real estate themselves, "pure realty," and those in the gray area that would pass in a deed to the real estate but that retain separate status as personal property. These last are fixtures." 4 James J. White & Robert S. Summers, Uniform Commercial Code §33.8, at 338 (4th ed. 1995).

agricultural fixture. A fixture erected on leased land for use in agricultural pursuits, such as tilling the land or keeping farm animals. • These fixtures may or may not be removable at the end of the lease. [Cases: Fixtures C=16].

domestic fixture. Removable personal property provided by a tenant for the tenant's personal comfort and convenience while occupying leased premises. • This term frequently applies to items such as large kitchen appliances. See tenant's fixture. Cf. ornamental fixture. [Cases: Fixtures C=17, 18.3].

ornamental fixture. Removable personal property that a tenant attaches to leased premises to make them more attractive and comfortable. • This term sometimes overlaps with domestic fixture when an object is decorative as well as functional. See tenant's fixture. Cf. domestic fixture. [Cases: Fixtures C=17, 18.3].

tenant's fixture. (1832) Removable personal property that a tenant affixes to the leased property but that the tenant can detach and take away. — Also termed movable fixture. See domestic fixture; ornamental fixture. [Cases: Fixtures C=13].

trade fixture. (1839) Removable personal property that a tenant attaches to leased land for business purposes, such as a display counter. • Despite its name, a trade fixture is not usu. treated as a fixture — that is, as irremovable. [Cases: Fixtures C=15].

fixture filing. (1972) The act or an instance of recording, in public real-estate records, a security interest in personal property that is intended to become a fixture. See UCC §9-102(a)(40). • The creditor files a financing statement in the real-property records of the county where a mortgage on the real estate would be filed. A fixture-filing financing statement must contain a description of the real estate. [Cases: Secured Transactions C=85, 94].

FKA. abbr. Formerly known as. — Also rendered F/K/A; f/k/a; f/k/a.

flag, n. (14c) 1. A usu. rectangular piece of cloth, bunting, or other material decorated with a distinctive design and used as a symbol or signal. 2. Something symbolized by the display of a flag, such as a ship or nationality. See duty of the flag; law of the flag.
flag of convenience. Int'l law. A national flag flown by a ship not because the ship or its crew has an affiliation with the nation, but because the lax controls and modest fees and taxes imposed by that nation have attracted the owner to register it there. - After World War II, shipowners began registering their ships in countries such as Panama, Liberia, and Honduras to avoid expensive and restrictive national regulation of labor, safety, and other matters. Since the late 1950s, there has been increasing international pressure to require a "genuine link" between a ship and its flag state, but this reform has been slow in coming. - Abbr. FOC. [Cases: Shipping C=2.]

flag of truce. Int'l law. A white flag used as a signal when one belligerent wishes to communicate with the other in the field. - The bearers of such a flag may not be fired on, injured, or taken prisoner, as long as they carry out their mission in good faith.

flag desecration. The act of mutilating, defacing, burning, or flagrantly misusing a flag. - Flag desecration is constitutionally protected as a form of free speech. United States v. Eichman, 496 U.S. 310, 110 S.Ct. 2404 (1990). [Cases: United States C=5.5.]

flagrant bellum (fla-gran-tee bel-oh). [Latin "raging war"] A war currently being waged.

flagrant crime (fla-granz cr-;3n-mon). [Latin] A crime in the very act of its commission or of recent occurrence; a fresh crime.

flagrant bello (fla-gran-te bel-oh). [Latin] During an actual state of war.

flagrant delicto. See in flagrantio delicto.

flag state. Maritime law. The state under whose flag a ship is registered. - A ship may fly the flag of one state only. [Cases: Shipping C=2.]

flag-state control. Maritime law. The exercise of authority by a state over vessels that fly under its flag to ensure compliance with domestic and international safety and environmental laws and regulations. Cf. COASTAL-STATE CONTROL; PORT-STATE CONTROL. [Cases: Shipping C=2.]

flash-of-genius rule. Patents. The now-defunct principle that a device is not patentable if it was invented as the result of trial and error rather than as a "flash of creative genius." - The rule, which takes its name from language in Cuno Engineering Corp. v. Automatic Devices Corp., 314 U.S. 84, 91, 62 S.Ct. 37, 41 (1941), was legislatively overturned in 1952. 35 USCA § 103. [Cases: Patents C=17.]

flat, adv. Without an allowance or charge for accrued interest <the stock was sold flat>.

flat, n. A house in a larger block; an apartment.

folcland. Hist. Land held by customary law, without written title. — Also spelled folcland. Cf. BOOKLAND; LOANLAND.

"In all discussions on Anglo-Saxon law bookland is contrasted with 'folcland.' The most recent and probably the most correct view is that folcland simply means land subject to customary law, as opposed to land which was held under the terms of a charter. It would seem that the view that folcland means public land or land of the people, though till recently generally accepted, must be abandoned as resting on insufficient evidence. It appears that folcland might either be land occupied by individuals or families or communities, or it might be waste or unoccupied land. The only characteristic which can be universally ascribed to it is, that it is not bookland." Kenelm E. Digby, An Introduction to the History of the Law of Real Property 15 (5th ed. 1897).

folk laws. See LEGES BARBARORUM.

fool's test. The test formerly used by federal courts and by the Federal Trade Commission to determine whether an advertisement is deceptive, by asking whether even a fool might believe it. • The name comes from Isaiah: “wayfaring men, though fools, shall not err therein.” The test was announced in Charles of the Ritz Distrib. Corp. v. Fed. Trade Comm'n, 143 F.2d 676 (2d Cir. 1944). It was replaced by a “reasonable consumer” test by the FTC in 1984. Cf. reasonable consumer test. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation C=161.] foot acre. See acre.

footage drilling contract. Oil & gas. A drilling contract under which the drilling contractor is paid to drill to a specified formation or depth, is paid a set amount per foot drilled, and is given broad control over how to do the work. • The risk of unexpected delays, as well as most liabilities, is on the contractor rather than the lease operator under this type of contract. Cf. daywork drilling contract; turnkey drilling contract drilling contract.

foot-frontage rule. Tax. A method of property-tax assessment — used esp. to pay for improvements such as sidewalks and sewers — that considers only the lot's actual frontage on the line of improvement and ignores the depth of the lot and the number and character of other improvements or their value.

footgeld (fuut-geld). Hist. In forest law, a fine imposed for not making a dog incapable of hunting by either cutting out the ball of its paw or cutting off its claws. • The cutting was known as “expediting” the dog. To be “free” or “quit” of footgeld was to be relieved of the duty to expeditate one's dog.

force majeure (fors ma-zhar). [Law French "a superior force"] (1883) An event or effect that can be neither anticipated nor controlled. • The term includes both acts of nature (e.g., floods and hurricanes) and acts of people (e.g., riots, strikes, and wars). — Also termed force majesture; vis major; superior force. Cf. ACT OF GOD; VIS MAJOR (1).

force-majeure clause. (1916) A contractual provision allocating the risk of loss if performance becomes impossible or impracticable, esp. as a result of an event or effect that the parties could not have anticipated or controlled. • The term includes both acts of nature (e.g., floods and hurricanes) and acts of people (e.g., riots, strikes, and wars). — Also termed force majesture; vis major; superior force. Cf. ACT OF GOD; VIS MAJOR (1).

force-the-vote provision. Mergers & acquisitions. A contractual clause requiring a company's board of directors to approve a merger transaction and submit it to the shareholders, who then vote on the merger regardless of whether the board recommends that the shareholders approve it when the vote is held.

forcible, adj. (15c) Effected by force or threat of force against opposition or resistance.

forcible detainer. 1. The wrongful retention of possession of property by one originally in lawful possession, forcible entry. (17c) 1. The act or an instance of violently and unlawfully taking possession of lands and tenements against the will of those in lawful possession. 2. The act of entering land in another's possession by the use of force against another or by breaking into the premises.

forcible entry and detainer. (17c) 1. The act of violently taking and keeping possession of lands and tenements without legal authority. [Cases: Forcible Entry and Detainer CÈ4-7].

"To walk across another's land, or to enter his building, without privilege, is a trespass, but this in itself, while a civil wrong, is not a crime. However, if an entry upon real estate is accomplished by violence or intimidation, or if such methods are employed for detention after a peaceable entry, there is a crime according to English law, known as forcible entry and detainer. This was a common-law offense in England, although supplemented by English statutes that are old enough to be common law in this country .... It has sometimes been said that there are two separate offenses — (1) forcible entry and (2) forcible detainer. This may be true under the peculiar wording of some particular statute, but in general it seems to be one offense which may be committed in two different ways." Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 487-88 (3d ed. 1982).

2. A quick and simple legal proceeding for regaining possession of real property from someone who has wrongfully taken, or refused to surrender, possession. — Also termed forcible detainer. See EVICTION; EJECTMENT. [Cases: Forcible Entry and Detainer CÈ6; Landlord and Tenant CÈ287].

"Forcible entry and detainer is a remedy given by statute for the recovery of possession of land and of damages for its detention. It is entirely regulated by statute, and the statutes vary materially in the different states." Benjamin J. Shipman, Handbook of Common-Law Pleading § 74, at 188 (Henry Winthrop Ballantine ed., 3d ed. 1923).

foreclose, vb. (15c) To terminate a mortgagor's interest in property; to subject (property) to foreclosure proceedings. [Cases: Mortgages CÈ380].

'Should the mortgagor default in his obligations under the mortgage, the mortgagor will seek to 'forclose', — i.e., 'end' or 'close' the mortgagor's rights in the security. After taking the appropriate statutory steps, the mortgagee will sell the mortgaged property. If the sale is to someone other than the mortgagor or the mortgagee (a 'third party' sale) the proceeds will go: first, to pay the costs of the foreclosure proceedings; second, to pay off the principal indebtedness and accrued interest; third, if there is anything left over (i.e., any 'equity' existed) this is paid to the mortgagor." Edward H. Rabin, Fundamentals of Modern Real Property Law 1087 (1974).

foreclosure (for-klohr-zhar). (18c) A legal proceeding to terminate a mortgagor's interest in property, instituted by the lender (the mortgagee) either to gain title or to force a sale in order to satisfy the unpaid debt secured by the property. Cf. REPOSSESSION. [Cases: Mortgages CÈ380].

equitable foreclosure. (1876) A foreclosure method in which the court orders the property sold, and the proceeds are applied first to pay the costs of the lawsuit and sale and then to the mortgage debt. • Any surplus is paid to the mortgagor. [Cases: Mortgages CÈ386].

judicial foreclosure. (1839) A costly and time-consuming foreclosure method by which the mortgaged property is sold through a court proceeding requiring many standard legal steps such as the filing of a complaint, service of process, notice, and a hearing. • Judicial foreclosure is available in all jurisdictions and is the exclusive or most common method of foreclosure in at least 20 states. [Cases: Mortgages CÈ380].

mortgage foreclosure. (1842) A foreclosure of the mortgaged property upon the mortgagor's default. [Cases: Mortgages CÈ380, 394].

nonjudicial foreclosure. (1916) 1. See power-of-sale foreclosure. 2. A foreclosure method that does not require court involvement. [Cases: Mortgages CÈ329].

power-of-sale foreclosure. (1946) A foreclosure process by which, according to the mortgage instrument and a state statute, the mortgaged property is sold at a nonjudicial public sale by a public official, the mortgagee, or a trustee, without the stringent notice requirements, procedural burdens, or delays of a judicial foreclosure. • Power-of-sale foreclosure is authorized and used in more than half the states. — Also termed nonjudicial foreclosure; statutory foreclosure. [Cases: Mortgages CÈ329].

strict foreclosure. (1823) A rare procedure that gives the mortgagee title to the mortgaged property — without first conducting a sale — after a defaulting mortgagor fails to pay the mortgage debt within a court-specified period. • The use of strict foreclosure is limited to special situations except in those few states that permit this remedy generally. [Cases: Mortgages CÈ384].

tax foreclosure. (1869) A public authority's seizure and sale of property for nonpayment of taxes. [Cases: Taxation CÈ2922]. foreclosure decree. (1847) 1. Generally, a decree ordering a judicial foreclosure sale. 2. A decree ordering the strict foreclosure of a mortgage. [Cases: Mortgages CÈ384, 483].

Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act. A federal statute providing individuals with a right of action against foreign governments, under certain circumstances, to the extent the claim arises from the private, as opposed to the public, acts of the foreign state. 28 USCA §§ 1602–1611. — Abbr. FSIA. See RESTRICTIVE PRINCIPLE OF SOVEREIGN IMMUNITY. [Cases: International Law ¶ 10.31–10.39.]

“The Foreign Sovereign Immunities Act (FSIA) of 1976 was designed to provide a set of comprehensive regulations governing access to federal and state courts in this country for plaintiffs asserting claims against foreign states and instrumentalities thereof. The enactment of this legislation responded to the reality that increased contacts between American citizens and companies on the one hand, and foreign states and entities owned by foreign states on the other, as well as a constantly expanding range of government activities, had created the need for judicial fora in this country to resolve disputes arising out of these activities.” 14A Charles Alan Wright et al., Federal Practice and Procedure § 3662, at 160–61 (2d ed. 1998).

foreign state. 1. A foreign country. 2. An American state different from the one under discussion.

foreign substance. (17c) A substance found in a body, organism, or thing where it is not supposed to be found <the plaintiff sued because she thought she saw — and later confirmed that she had found — a foreign substance (namely, a piece of glass) in her hamburger>.

foreseeable damages. See DAMAGES.

forest. n. (13c) Hist. A tract of land, not necessarily wooded, reserved to the king or a grantee, for hunting deer and other game.

forestall (for-stawl), vb. (bef. 12c) 1. To prevent (an event, result, etc.). 2. Hist. To intercept or obstruct (as a person on a royal highway). 3. Hist. To prevent (a tenant) from coming on the premises. 4. Hist. To intercept (as a deer reentering a forest). 5. Hist. To buy (goods) for the purpose of reselling at a higher price. • At common law, this was an indictable offense. See FORESTALLING THE MARKET. — Also spelled forstall.

"[A] growing town in England might have placed a higher value on grain than a neighboring town with a static population, yet traditional patterns of business might continue to send the same amount of grain to both towns. A forestaller would bid against the traditional buyer in the smaller town, obtain the grain, and resell it where it could command a higher price in the larger town. Forestalling did not harm allocative efficiency. Indeed, it was a highly effective means of reallocating scarce goods to their most highly valued uses — the very definition of efficiency. Rather, forestalling was objectionable, and thus prohibited as a restraint of trade, because the bidding process necessarily resulted in higher grain prices in many parts of the country." Stephen F. Ross, Principles of Antitrust Law 12 (1993). forestaller, n. 1. A person who forestalls. 2. Hist. One guilty of the offense of forestalling. See FORESTALL (5).

forestalling the market. Hist. 1. The taking possession of commodities on their way to the market. 2. The purchase of goods on their way to the market, with the intention of reselling them at a higher price. 3. The deterrence of having sellers offer their goods at market at a reasonable price; specif., the crime of inhibiting normal trading by persuading sellers to raise their prices on goods or dissuading them from offering the goods in a particular market, or by purchasing as much as possible of certain goods before they reach the market to drive up prices. forfeiture. Hist. The body of law protecting game and preserving timber.

forestry right. A land interest under which a person has the right to enter the land, establish and maintain a crop of trees, harvest them, and construct works for that purpose. [Cases: Logs and Logging \(\Rightarrow\) 1.]

Forest Service. An agency in the U.S. Department of Agriculture responsible for managing the nation’s national forests. • The Forest Service also operates the Youth Conservation Corps and the Volunteers in the National Forest programs. [Cases: Woods and Forests \(\Rightarrow\) 7, 8.]

forfeiture (for-fi-chur), n. (14c) 1. The divestiture of property without compensation. 2. The loss of a right, privilege, or property because of a crime, breach of obligation, or neglect of duty. • Title is instantaneously transferred to another, such as the government, a corporation, or a private person. [Cases: Controlled Substances \(\Rightarrow\) 162; Forfeitures \(\Rightarrow\) 1.]

3. Something (esp. money or property) lost or confiscated by this process; a penalty. — forfeit, vb. — forfeitable, adj.

civil forfeiture. (1867) An in rem proceeding brought by the government against property that either facilitated a crime or was acquired as a result of criminal activity. [Cases: Controlled Substances \(\Rightarrow\) 162; Forfeitures \(\Rightarrow\) 1.] criminal forfeiture. (1866) A governmental proceeding brought against a person to seize property as punishment for the person’s criminal behavior. [Cases: Controlled Substances \(\Rightarrow\) 162; Forfeitures \(\Rightarrow\) 1.]

forfeiture of marriage. Hist. A penalty exacted by a lord from a ward who married without the lord’s consent.

• The penalty was a money payment doubling the value that the marriage would otherwise have been worth to the lord.

forfeiture of pay. Military law. A punishment depriving the guilty party of all or part of his or her military pay.

4. A destruction or deprivation of some estate or right because of the failure to perform some contractual obligation or condition.

"[When a condition is not likely to occur until the obligee has relied on the expected exchange by, for example, performing or preparing to perform, . . . nonoccurrence of the condition results in the obligee’s loss of its reliance interest when the obligee loses the right to that exchange. This loss of reliance interest is often described as ‘forfeiture.’"] E. Allan Farnsworth, Contracts § 8.4, at 533 (3d ed. 1999).

forfeiture clause. (1804) 1. A contractual provision stating that, under certain circumstances, one party must forfeit something to the other. • Forfeiture clauses are often held to be void, although they are similar to conditions and other qualifications of estates in land.

2. NO-CONTEST CLAUSE.

forfeiture restraint. An attempt by an otherwise effective conveyance or contract to cause a later conveyance to terminate or to make some or all of the later conveyance subject to termination. — Sometimes shortened to restraint. [Cases: Deeds \(\Rightarrow\) 149; Property \(\Rightarrow\) 11.]

forgavel (for-gav-3l), Hist. A small reserved rent in money; quit-rent.

forfery, n. (16c) 1. The act of fraudulently making a false document or altering a real one to be used as if genuine <the contract was void because of the seller’s forfery>.

• Though forfery was a misdemeanor at common law, modern statutes typically make it a felony. — Also termed false making. [Cases: Forfery \(\Rightarrow\) 1.]

2. A false or altered document made to look genuine by someone with the intent to deceive <he was not the true property owner because the deed was a forfery>. — Also termed fake. 3. Under the Model Penal Code, the act of fraudulently altering, authenticating, issuing, or transferring a writing without appropriate authorization. • Under the explicit terms of the Code, writing can include items such as coins and credit cards. Model Penal Code § 224.1(1). — forge, vb. — forger, n.

"While it is true that there is a distinction between fraud and forfery, and forgeries contain elements that are not included in fraud, forgeries are a species of fraud. In essence, the crime of forfery involves the making, altering, or completing of an instrument by someone other than the ostensible maker or drawer or an agent of the ostensible maker or drawer." 37 C.J.S. Forfery § 2, at 66 (1997).

double forfery. A draft having a forged payor signature and a forged indorsement.

fori disputationes (for-i-dis-poo-ta-shay-3 She-o-neez). [Latin “arguments of the court”] Roman law. Arguments or discussions before a court.

forinsec service (for-in-sik). (18c) Hist. The feudal services owed by a mesne (i.e., intermediate) lord, esp. those of a military nature. — Also termed foreign service; forinsecum servitium. Cf. INTRINSEC SERVICE.

"The terminology of Bracton’s day and of yet earlier times neatly expresses the distinction between the service which the tenant owes to his immediate lord by reason of the bargain which exists between them, and the service which was incumbent on the tenement whilst it was in the lord’s hand. The former is forinsec service, the latter forinsec service; the former is the service which is created by, which (as it were) arises within, the bargain between the two persons, A and B, whose rights and duties we are discussing; the latter arises outside that bargain <that bargain ... [The term is a relative one; what is ‘intrinsec’ between A and B is ‘forinsec’ as regards C.”] 1 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 238, 239 n.2 (2d ed. 1898).

foris (fo-3is), adj. [Latin] Abroad; outdoors; without.

forisfactus servus (for-is-fak-tas sar vas). [Law Latin] Hist. A freed slave who has forfeited his or her freedom by committing a crime.

forisfamiliate (for-is-fa-nil-ee-at), vb. [fr. Latin foris “outside” + familia “family”] (16c) Hist. To emancipate (a son) from paternal authority by a gift of land. • This act usu. rendered the son ineligible to inherit more property. — Also termed (archaically) forisfamiliare.

forisfamiliated (for-is-fa-nil-ee-ay-tid), adj. Hist. (Of a son) emancipated from paternal authority and in possession of a portion of family land in lieu of inheritance.

"If our English law at any time knew an enduring patria potestas which could be likened to the Roman, that time had passed away long before the days of Bracton . . . . Bracton, it is true, has copied about this matter some sentences from the institutes which he ought not to have copied: but he soon forgets them, and we easily see that they belong to an alien system. Our law knows no such thing as ‘emancipation,’ it merely knows an attainment of full age. . . . In old times a forisfamiliated son, that is, one whom his father had enfeoffed, was excluded from the inheritance. This is already antiquated, yet Bracton can find nothing else to serve instead of an emancipatio.” 2 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 438, 438 n.3 (2d ed. 1899).

forisfamiliation. (17c) Scots law. The liberation of a child from the father’s tutelage, as when a child under the age of majority left home, was given seisin in a part of the father’s land, or accepted something as a settled inheritance. Cf. emancipation (2).

forjudge, vb. (15c) 1. Hist. To expel a person, esp. an officer or attorney, from court for some offense or misconduct. 2. To deprive (a person) of a thing by a judgment; to condemn (a person) to lose a thing. — Also spelled (loosely) forejudge.

forjuder (for-jay-ar), n. (15c) Hist. 1. A judgment that deprives a person of a thing. 2. A judgment of expulsion or banishment. — Also termed forisjudicatio; forisjudicatus.

forjurer. See forisjurare.

forjurer royalme (for-zhur ray roy-ohm), vb. [Law French] Hist. To renounce the kingdom under oath; to abjure the realm.

form, n. (13c) 1. The outer shape or structure of something, as distinguished from its substance or matter <courts are generally less concerned about defects in form than defects in substance>. 2. Established behavior or procedure, usu. according to custom or rule <the prosecutor followed the established form in her closing argument>. 3. A model; a sample; an example <attorneys often draft pleadings by using a form instead of starting from scratch>. 4. The customary method of drafting legal documents, usu. with fixed words, phrases, and sentences <Jones prepared the contract merely by following the state bar’s form>. 5. A legal document with blank spaces to be filled in by the drafter <the divorce lawyer used printed forms that a secretary could fill in>. formal law. (17c) Procedural law.
   "Procedure is by many German writers inappropriately called "formal law." Thomas E. Holland, The Elements of Jurisprudence 358 n.2 (13th ed. 1924).

formal party. See nominal party under PARTY (2).

formal rejection. See REJECTION.

formal rulemaking. See RULEMAKING.

form of action. The common-law legal and procedural device associated with a particular writ, each of which had specific forms of process, pleading, trial, and judgment. • The 11 common-law forms of action were trespass, trespass on the case, trover, ejectment, detinue, replevin, debt, covenant, account, special assumpsit, and general assumpsit. [Cases: Action 29; Federal Civil Procedure 71.]

"Forms of action are usually regarded as different methods of procedure adapted to cases of different kinds, but in fact the choice between forms of action is primarily a choice between different theories of substantive liability, and the scope of the actions measures the existence and extent of liability at common law. ... The development and extension of the different forms of action is the history of the recognition of rights and liability in the law of torts, contracts, and property, and the essentials of rights of action." Benjamin J. Shipman, Handbook of Common-Law Pleading §§ 27, 30 at 54, 60 (Henry Winthrop Ballantine ed., 3d ed. 1923).

formula. [Latin "set form of words"] (17c) 1. Roman law. A written document, prepared by a praetor and forwarded to a judex, identifying the issue to be tried and the judgment to be given by the judex. • It was based on model pleas formulated by the praetor in his edict and adapted by him or other magistrates in civil suits for the benefit of the judex who had to try the issue. These pleas were adapted to the circumstances of the case. The usual parts of a formula were (1) the demonstratio, in which the plaintiff stated the facts of the claim; (2) the intentio, in which the plaintiff specified the relief sought against the defendant; and (3) the condemnatio, in which the judex condemned (usu. to pay the plaintiff a sum) or acquitted the defendant. Pl. formulae (for-my-lee). — Also termed verba concepta (var-ba kan-sep-ta).

"The Roman judges were not, as with us, the presiding officers in the administration of law and justice. This was the position of the magistrate, the praetor. When a suit at law was commenced, the parties appeared before the praetor, who made a preliminary examination, not to ascertain the merits of the case, but to find the precise points in controversy. He heard the statements of the plaintiff and the counter-statements of the defendant, and from the two he constructed a formula (as it was called), a brief technical expression of the disputed issues. He then appointed a judex ... instructing him to investigate the matter, and if he found the facts to be so and so, as recited in the formula, then to condemn the accused party, but, if he did not find them so, to acquit him." James Hadley, Introduction to Roman Law 59-60 (1881). [This quotation describes only the period of formulary procedure, ca. 150 B.C.-A.D. 300. — Ed.]

2. Common-law pleading. A set form of words (such as those appearing in writs) used in judicial proceedings.

formula deal. An agreement between a movie distributor and an independent or affiliated circuit to exhibit a feature movie in all theaters at a specified percentage of the national gross receipts realized by the theaters.

formulae (for-my-lee). [Latin "set forms of words"] Roman law. Model pleas formulated by the praetor in his edict and adapted by him or other magistrates in civil suits for the benefit of the judex who had to try the issue. • These pleas were adapted to the circumstances of the case. — Also termed verba concepta (var-ba kon-sep-ta).

formula instruction. See JURY INSTRUCTION.

formulary. (16c) 1. Hist. A collection of the forms of proceedings (formulae) used in litigation, such as the writ forms kept by the Chancery. See WRIT SYSTEM. 2. A list of drugs that Medicare or a health-maintenance organization will pay for.

formulary procedure. Hist. The common-law method of pleading and practice, which required formulaic compliance with the accepted forms of action even if through elaborate fictions. • In the 19th century, this type of procedure was replaced both in the United States and in England. See code pleading under pleading (2).

fornication, n. (14c) 1. Voluntary sexual intercourse between two unmarried persons. • Fornication is still a crime in some states, such as Virginia. 2. Hist. Voluntary sexual intercourse with an unmarried woman.

• At common law, the status of the woman determined whether the offense was adultery or fornication — adultery was sexual intercourse between a man, single or married, and a married woman not his wife; fornication was sexual intercourse between a man, single or married, and a single woman. Cf. ADULTERY. [Cases: Criminal Law C=45:40; Lewdness C=1.] — fornicate, vb. — fornicator, n.

"Fornication was not a common-law crime but was made punishable by statute in a few states as a misdemeanor," Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 455 (3d ed. 1982).

forprise (for-prtz). Hist. 1. An exception or reservation.

• The term was frequently used in leases and conveyances.

"Forprise . . . an exception or reservation . . . We still use it in Conveyances and Leases, wherein Excepted and Forprised is an usual expression," Thomas Blount, Nom-Lexicon: A Law-Dictionary (1670).

fossage (fos-ij), n. Hist. A duty paid to maintain a moat around a fortification.

foster, adj. (bef. 12c) 1. (Of a relationship) involving parental care given by someone not related by blood or legal adoption <foster home>. 2. (Of a person) giving or receiving parental care to or from someone not related by blood or legal adoption <foster parent> <foster child>.

foster, vb. (12c) To give care to (something or someone); esp., to give parental care to (a child who is not one's natural or legally adopted child).

fosterage, n. (17c) 1. The act of caring for another's child. 2. The entrusting of a child to another. 3. The condition of being in the care of another. 4. The act of encouraging or promoting.

foster care. (1876) 1. A federally funded child-welfare program providing substitute care for abused and neglected children who have been removed by court order from their parents' or guardians' care or for children voluntarily placed by their parents in the temporary care of the state because of a family crisis. 42 USCA §§ 670-679a. • The state welfare agency selects, trains, supervises, and pays those who serve as foster parents. Cf. ADOPTION (1). [Cases: Infants C=226.]

long-term foster care. The placing of a child in foster care for extended periods, perhaps even for the child's entire minority, in lieu of family reunification, termination and adoption, or guardianship. • Although most courts do not generally find this arrangement to be in a child's best interests, sometimes it is the only possibility, as when the child, because of age or disability, is unlikely to be adopted or when, although the parent cannot be permanently reunited with the child, limited contact with the parent would serve the child's best interests. Under the Adoption and Safe Families Act, long-term foster care is the permanent placement of last resort. [Cases: Infants C=226.]

2. The area of social services concerned with meeting the needs of children who participate in these types of programs. [Cases: Infants C=17.]

foster-care drift. The phenomenon that occurs when children placed in foster care remain in that system, in legal limbo, for too many years of their developmental life before they are reunited with their parents or freed for adoption and placed in permanent homes. • The Adoption and Safe Families Act was passed in 1997 to help rectify this problem. See ADOPTION AND SAFE FAMILIES ACT. [Cases: Infants C=155.]

foster-care placement. (1968) The (usu. temporary) act of placing a child in a home with a person or persons who provide parental care for the child. Cf. OUT-OF-HOME PLACEMENT. [Cases: Infants C=226.]

foster-care review board. A panel of screened and trained volunteers who routinely review cases of children placed in foster care, examine efforts at permanency planning, and report to the court. [Cases: Infants C=17, 226.]
four, rule of. See rule of four.

four corners. (1874) The face of a written instrument. • The phrase derives from the ancient custom of putting all instruments (such as contracts) on a single sheet of parchment, as opposed to multiple pages, no matter how long the sheet might be. At common law, this custom prevented people from fraudulently inserting materials into a fully signed agreement. The requirement was that every contract could have only four corners. [Cases: Contracts C=143(1), 147(2); Evidence C=397, 448.]

four-corners rule. (1948) 1. The principle that a document's meaning is to be gathered from the entire document and not from its isolated parts. [Cases: Contracts C=143(5); Evidence C=448.] 2. The principle that no extraneous evidence should be used to interpret an unambiguous document. Cf. parol-evidence rule. [Cases: Evidence C=448.]

IV-D agency. See child-support-enforcement agency.

four-folding. Hist. The quadrupling of a property's taxable value for purposes of penalizing a person who falsely underreported the property's true taxable value.

"In the State of Connecticut a number of men are chosen annually by each town, to receive from each inhabitant a list of the taxable property in his possession. This list is required by law; and is made up by the proprietor. The men, who receive it, are from their employment called Listers. If the proprietor gives in a false list, he is punished by having the falsified article increased on the list four-fold. ... We therefore style this punishment "four-folding." 4 Timothy Dwight, Travels in New-England and New-York 284 (1822).

401(k) plan. See employee benefit plan.

403(b) plan. See employee benefit plan.

419 fraud. See advance-fee fraud under fraud.

457 plan. See employee benefit plan.

Fourteenth Amendment. The constitutional amendment, ratified in 1868, whose primary provisions effectively apply the Bill of Rights to the states by prohibiting states from denying due process and equal protection and from abridging the privileges and immunities of U.S. citizenship. • The amendment also gave Congress the power to enforce these provisions, leading to legislation such as the civil-rights acts. [Cases: Constitutional Law C=2910-2932, 3000-3833, 3840-4841.]

Fourth Amendment. The constitutional amendment, ratified with the Bill of Rights in 1791, prohibiting unreasonable searches and seizures and the issuance of warrants without probable cause. See probable cause. [Cases: Searches and Seizures C=23.]

fourth estate. (1821) The journalistic profession; the news media. • The term comes from the British Parliament's reporters' gallery, whose influence was said to equal Parliament's three traditional estates: the Lords Spiritual, the Lords Temporal, and the Commons. (In France, the three estates were the clergy, the nobility, and the commons.)

fourth-sentence remand. See remand.

four unities. (1852) The four qualities needed to create a joint tenancy at common law — interest, possession, time, and title. See unity (2). [Cases: Joint Tenancy C=1.]

fovere consimile causam (foh-veer-ee kan-sim-oh-lam kaw-zam). [Law Latin] Hist. To favor a similar case. • A judge who is disqualified for having a personal interest in a case may also be disqualified in a later case if the ruling in the former case could affect the ruling in the latter.

Fox's Libel Act. Hist. A 1792 statute that gave the jury in a libel prosecution the right of rendering a guilty or not-guilty verdict on the whole matter in issue. • The jury was no longer bound to find the defendant guilty if it found that the defendant had in fact published the allegedly libelous statement. The Act empowered juries to decide whether the defendant's statement conformed to the legal standard for libel.

FPA. abbr. Free from particular average. "F.P.A. means Free from Particular Average; that is to say, the insured can recover only where the loss is total or is due to a general average sacrifice. The claims under the Sue and Labour clause are not affected by this stipulation." 2 E.W. Chance, Principles of Mercantile Law 128 (P.W. French ed., 10th ed. 1951).

FPC clause. See area-rate clause.

Fr. abbr. 1. French. 2. fragmenta.

FRA. abbr. 1. Federal Railroad Administration. 2. forward-rate agreement.

fractional, adj. (1815) (Of a tract of land) covering an area less than the acreage reflected on a survey; pertaining to any irregular division of land containing either more or less than the conventional amount of acreage.

fractional currency. See currency.

fractional interest. See undivided interest under interest (2).

fragmenta (frag-men-to), n. pl. [Latin "fragments"] Roman law. Passages drawn from the writings of Roman jurists and compiled in Justinian's Digest. — Abbr. Fr.; Ff.

frame, vb. (14c) 1. To plan, shape, or construct; esp., to draft or otherwise draw up (a document). 2. To incriminate (an innocent person) with false evidence, esp. fabricated. — framable, frameable, adj.

frame-up, n. A plot to make an innocent person appear guilty.

framing. On the Internet, a website's display of another entity's Web page inside a bordered area, often without displaying the page's URL or domain name. • Framing francbordus. See FREE-BORD.

franchise (fran-chiz), n. (14c) 1. The right to vote. — Also termed elective franchise. [Cases: Elections ☀ 1.] 2. The government-conferring right to engage in a specific business or to exercise corporate powers. — Also termed corporate franchise; general franchise. [Cases: Franchises ☀ 1.]

"When referring to government grants (other than patents, trademarks, and copyrights), the term 'franchise' is often used to connote more substantial rights, whereas the term 'license' connotes lesser rights. Thus, the rights necessary for public utility companies to carry on their operations are generally designated as franchise rights. On the other hand, the rights to construct or to repair, the rights to practice certain professions, and the rights to use or to operate automobiles are generally referred to as licenses." 1 Eckstrom's Licensing in Foreign and Domestic Operations § 1.02[3], at 1-10 to 1-11 (David M. Epstein ed., 1998).

"In a violent conceptual collision, some franchisors maintain that a franchise is merely an embellished license and therefore revocable at will. Franchisors contend that a franchise is a license coupled with an interest, not subject to unlimited control by franchisors. As a result of this disagreement, legislative draftsmen have had difficulty defining 'franchise.'" 1 Harold Brown, Franchising Realities and Remedies § 1.03[1], at 1-17 (1998).

franchise appurtenant to land. Rare. A franchise that is used in connection with real property and thus is sometimes characterized as real property.

general franchise. A corporation's charter.

special franchise. A right conferred by the government, esp. one given to a public utility, to use property for a public use but for private profit. [Cases: Franchises ☀ 1.]

3. The sole right granted by the owner of a trademark or tradename to engage in business or to sell a good or service in a certain area. 4. The business or territory controlled by the person or entity that has been granted such a right.

commercial franchise. A franchise using local capital and management by contracting with third parties to operate a facility identified as offering a particular brand of goods or services.

sports franchise. 1. A franchise granted by a professional sports league to field a team in that league. 2. The team itself.

trial franchise. A franchise having an initial term of limited duration, such as one year.

franchise, vb (14c) To grant (to another) the sole right of engaging in a certain business or in a business using a particular trademark in a certain area.

franchise agreement. (1905) The contract between a franchisor and franchisee establishing the terms and conditions of the franchise relationship. • State and federal laws regulate franchise agreements. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation ☀ 262; Contracts ☀ 202(1).] franchise appurtenant to land. See FRANCHISE (2).

franchise clause. Insurance. A provision in a casualty insurance policy stating that the insurer will pay a claim only if it is more than a stated amount, and that the insured is responsible for all damages if the claim is under that amount. • Unlike a deductible, which the insured always has to pay, with a franchise clause, once the claim exceeds the stated amount, the insurer pays the entire claim.

franchise court. Hist. A privately held court that (usu.) exists by virtue of a royal grant, with jurisdiction over a variety of matters, depending on the grant and whatever powers the court acquires over time. • In 1274, Edward I abolished many of these feudal courts by forcing the nobility to demonstrate by what authority (quo warranto) they held court. If a lord could not produce a charter reflecting the franchise, the court was abolished. — Also termed courts of the franchise.

"Dispensing justice was profitable. Much revenue could come from the fees and dues, fines and amercements. This explains the growth of the second class of feudal courts, the Franchise Courts. They too were private courts held by feudal lords. Sometimes their claim to jurisdiction was based on old pre-Conquest grants . . . . But many of them were, in reality, only wrongful usurpations of private jurisdiction by powerful lords. These were put down after the famous Quo Warranto enquiry in the reign of Edward I." W.J.V. Windeyer, Lectures on Legal History 56-57 (2d ed. 1949).

franchisee. One who is granted a franchise.

franchise fee. See FEE (1).

franchiser. See FRANCHISOR.

franchise tax. See TAX.

franchisor. (19c) One who grants a franchise. — Also spelled franchiser.

francus bancus. See FEE BENCH.

francus tenens. See FRANK-TENANT.

frank, adj. [Law French] Hist. Free. — Also spelled franc; francie; fraunke.

frank, n. 1. (cap.) A member of the Germanic people who conquered Gaul in the 6th century. • France received its name from the Franks. 2. A signature, stamp, or mark affixed to mail as a substitute for postage. [Cases: Postal Service ☀ 15.] 3. The privilege of sending certain mail free of charge, accorded to certain government officials, such as members of Congress and federal courts. — Also termed (in sense 3) franking privilege. [Cases: United States ☀ 12.] — frank, vb. frankalmoin ([frangk-]al-moyn). [Law French “free alms”] (16c) Hist. A spiritual tenure by which a religious institution held land, usu. with a general duty to pray for the donor. • This tenure differed from the tenure by divine service, which required specific church services, such as a certain number of masses or alms distributions. • Also spelled frankalmoign; frankalmoigne. — Also termed almaign; almoine; free alms; libera eleemosyna. See spiritual tenure under TENURE.

“Frankalmoin, or free alms, was a survival of Anglo-Saxon law, and implied simply an indefinite promise to pray for the soul of the donor; but since it was deemed a tenure by which the land was held, the general doctrine of ‘services’ was applied. On the other hand, in the case of Divine Service, which was much less frequently met with, the tenant promised a definite number of prayers, a duty which might be enforced in the King’s courts.” A.K.R. Kiralfy, Potter’s Outlines of English Legal History 210 (5th ed. 1958).

frank bank. See free bench.

frank-chase. Hist. Free chase; a person’s liberty or right to hunt or log within a certain area. • Others holding land within the frank-chase area were forbidden from hunting or logging in it. See CHASE.

frank-fee. (15c) Hist. Freehold land — land that one held to oneself and one’s heirs — exempted from all services except homage; land held other than by ancient demesne or copyhold.

frank ferm. Hist. An estate in land held in socage, the nature of the fee having been changed from knight’s service by enfeoffment for certain yearly services. • Also spelled frank-ferme.

franking privilege. See frank (3).

frank-law. Hist. The rights and privileges of a citizen or freeman; specif., the condition of being legally capable of giving an oath (esp. as a juror or witness). See LEGALIS HOMO.

“Frank law . . . may be understood from Bracton’s description of the consequences of losing it, among which the principal one was, that the parties incurred perpetual infamy, so that they were never afterwards to be admitted to oath, because they were not deemed to be othesworth, (that is, not worthy of making oath,) nor allowed to give testimony.” Alexander M. Burrill, A Law Dictionary and Glossary 657-58 (2d ed. 1867).

franklin (frangk-lin). (14c) Hist. A freeman; a freeholder; a gentleman. • Also spelled franchling; frankleyn; frankleyne.

frankmarriage. (14c) Hist. An entailed estate in which the donor retains control of the land by refusing to accept feudal services from the donee (usu. the donor’s daughter) for three generations. • If the donee’s issue fail in that time, the land returns to the donor. A donor who accepted homage (and the corresponding services arising from it) from the donee risked losing control of the land to a collateral heir. After three generations — a time considered sufficient to demonstrate that the line was well established — the donee’s heir could insist on paying homage; doing so transformed the estate into a fee simple. • Also termed liberum maritagium. See MARITAGIUM.

“Only when homage has been done are we to apply the rule which excludes the lord from the inheritance. This is at the bottom of one of the peculiarities of the ‘estate in frankmarriage.’ When a father makes a provision for a daughter, he intends that if the daughter has no issue or if her issue fails — at all events if this failure occurs in the course of a few generations — the land shall come back to him or to his heir. Therefore no homage is done for the estate in frankmarriage until the daughter’s third heir has entered, for were homage once done, there would be a danger that the land would never come back to the father or to his heir.” 2 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I (2d ed. 1899).

frankpledge. (bef. 12c) Hist. A promise given to the sovereign by a group of ten freeholders (a tithing) ensuring the group’s good conduct. • The frankpledge was of Saxon origin, but continued after the Norman Conquest. The members of the group were not liable for an injury caused by an offending member, but they did act as bail to ensure that the culprit would appear in court. They were bound to produce a wrongdoer for trial. • Also termed borrow; laughe. See VIEW OF FRANKPLEDGE. Cf. DECEANARY.

“Since there was no elaborate group of royal officials, the policing of the country had to be arranged for in a special way. The commonest way was to hold each household responsible for the offenses of any member of it. A further step was taken when, in the time of Cnut, a group of ten men was formed who were responsible for each other, in the sense that every one was security, borh, for the good behavior of the others. This group was called fri-borh, frankpledge, and remained for a long time one of the chief police methods of England.” Max Radin, Handbook of Anglo-American Legal History 33-34 (1936).

Franks hearing. (1797) A hearing to determine whether a police officer’s affidavit used to obtain a search warrant that yields incriminating evidence was based on false statements by the police officer. Franks v. Delaware, 438 U.S. 154, 98 S.Ct. 2674 (1978).

frank-tenant. Hist. A freeholder. • Also termed frances tenens. See FREEHOLD.

frank-tenement. Hist. A free tenement; a freehold. • This term described both the tenure and the estate.

FRAP (frap). abbr. FEDERAL RULES OF APPELLATE PROCEDURE.

frater consanguineus (fray-tar kon-sang-gwin-ee-as). A brother or half-brother having the same father.

frater germanus (fray-tar jar-may-nas). A brother having both parents in common.

frater nutricius (fray-tar n[y]oo-trish-ee-as). A foster brother who was suckled by the same wet nurse.

frater uterinus (fray-tar yoo-to-ri-nas). A brother or half-brother having the same mother.

fraternal, adj. (15c) 1. Of or relating to the relationship of brothers. 2. Of or relating to a fraternity or a fraternal benefit association.

fraternal benefit association. A voluntary organization or society created for its members’ mutual aid and benefit rather than for profit, and whose members have a common and worthy cause, objective, or interest. • These associations usu. have a lodge system, a governing body, rituals, and a benefits system for their members. — Also termed fraternal benefit society; fraternity; fraternal lodge; fraternal order. Cf. FRIENDLY SOCIETY. [Cases: Beneficial Associations C=1.]

fraternal insurance. See INSURANCE.

fraternal lodge. See FRATERNAL BENEFIT ASSOCIATION.

fraternal order. See FRATERNAL BENEFIT ASSOCIATION.

fraternal society. See benevolent association under association.

fraternity. See FRATERNAL BENEFIT ASSOCIATION.

frater nutricius. See frater.

frater uterinus. See frater.

fratres conjurati (fray-treez kon-ja-ray ti). [Latin "sworn brothers"] Hist. Sworn brothers or companions for the defense of their sovereign or for other purposes.

fratriage (fra-tree-ij or fray-). Hist. 1. A younger brother's portion of his father's estate, received as an inheritance. • Under feudal law, even though the land was from the father's estate, the younger brother was bound to pay homage to the older brother. 2. A portion of an inheritance given to coheirs. — Also termed fratrigium.

fratricide (fra-tra-sid or fray-). (15c) 1. The killing of one's brother or sister. 2. One who has killed one's brother or sister. Cf. SORORICIDE. — fratricidal, adj.

fraud, n. (14c) 1. A knowing misrepresentation of the truth or concealment of a material fact to induce another to act to his or her detriment. • Fraud is usu. a tort, but in some cases (esp. when the conduct is willful) it may be a crime. — Also termed intentional fraud. [Cases: Fraud C=1, 3, 16, 68.] 2. A misrepresentation made recklessly without belief in its truth to induce another person to act. [Cases: Fraud C=13(3).] 3. A tort arising from a knowing misrepresentation, concealment of material fact, or reckless misrepresentation made to induce another to act to his or her detriment. [Cases: Fraud C=13(2), 13(3), 16.] 4. Unconscionable dealing; esp., in contract law, the unfair use of the power arising out of the parties' relative positions and resulting in an unconscionable bargain. [Cases: Contracts C=1.]. — fraudulent, adj.

"[T]he use of the term fraud has been wider and less precise in the chancery than in the common-law courts. This followed necessarily from the remedies which they respectively administered. Common law gave damages for a wrong, and was compelled to define with care the wrong which furnished a cause of action. Equity refused specific performance of a contract, or set aside a transaction, or gave compensation where one party had acted unfairly by the other. Thus 'fraud' at common law is a false statement...: fraud in equity has often been used as meaning unconscientious dealing... "although, I think, unfortunately, 'a great equity lawyer has said." William R. Anson, Principles of the Law of Contract 263 (Arthur L. Corbin ed., 3d Am. ed. 1919).

actual fraud. (17c) A concealment or false representation through a statement or conduct that injures another who relies on it in acting. — Also termed fraud in fact; positive fraud; moral fraud. [Cases: Fraud C=3.]

advance-fee fraud. A criminal fraud in which the victim is persuaded by the perpetrator to pay "fees" in anticipation of receiving a much larger benefit that is ultimately never delivered. • The perpetrator usu. claims to have, or to represent someone with, a large sum of money that must be immediately transferred out of a foreign country for some compelling reason, such as to avoid seizure by a government. The criminal promises the victim a portion of the money in return for the victim's agreement to open a bank account in the victim's name. The victim then must pay "upfront fees" to the designated "bank" and others. Although the Internet has become a favorite tool for this fraud, it has been around for years, beginning with handwritten or typed letters and later faxes. Because advance-fee fraud is believed to have originated in Nigeria, it is also termed 419 fraud after the section of the Nigerian penal code designed to punish those who defraud by this method. [Cases: Fraud C=68.]

affiliate click fraud. Click fraud committed by a third party who agrees to host the ad in exchange for payment based on the number of clicks. See click fraud.

affinity fraud. A fraud in which the perpetrator tailors the fraud to target members of a particular group united by common traits or interests that produce inherent trust. • The perpetrator often is or pretends to be a member of the group. Investment scams such as Ponzi or pyramid schemes are common forms of affinity fraud. When a religious group is targeted, it is usu. called religious-affinity fraud.

bank fraud. The criminal offense of knowingly executing, or attempting to execute, a scheme or artifice to defraud a financial institution, or to obtain property owned by or under the control of a financial institution, by means of false or fraudulent pretenses, representations, or promises. 18 USCA § 1344. [Cases: Banks and Banking C=509.10, 509.25.]

bankruptcy fraud. (1815) A fraudulent act connected to a bankruptcy case; esp., any of several proscribed acts performed knowingly and fraudulently in a bankruptcy case, such as concealing assets or destroying, withholding, or falsifying documents in an effort to defeat bankruptcy-code provisions. See 18 USCA § 152. — Also termed criminal bankruptcy; bankruptcy crime. [Cases: Bankruptcy C=3861.]

civil fraud. (18c) 1. FRAUD (3). 2. Tax. An intentional — but not willful — evasion of taxes. • The distinction between an intentional (i.e., civil) and willful (i.e., criminal) fraud is not always clear, but civil fraud carries only a monetary, noncriminal penalty. Cf. criminal fraud; TAX EVASION. [Cases: Internal Revenue C=5218; Taxation C=3563.]
click fraud. A scheme in which a person or robot repeatedly clicks on a merchant's pay-per-click advertisement on a website for purposes other than viewing the website or making a purchase. [Cases: Telecommunications \(\Rightarrow 1341\)]

common-law fraud. See promissory fraud.

competitor click fraud. Click fraud committed by a business's competitor in order to increase the amount of money the advertising merchant must pay to the site hosting the ad. See click fraud.

constructive fraud. (18c) 1. Unintentional deception or misrepresentation that causes injury to another. — Also termed legal fraud; fraud in contemplation of law; equitable fraud; fraud in equity. 2. See fraud in law. [Cases: Fraud \(\Rightarrow 5\).

"In equity law the term fraud has a wider sense, and includes all acts, omissions, or concealments by which one person obtains an advantage against conscience over another, or which equity or public policy forbids as being to another's prejudice: as acts in violation of trust and confidence. This is often called constructive, legal, or equitable fraud, or fraud in equity." Encyclopedia of Criminology 175 (Vernon C. Branham & Samuel B. Kutash eds., 1949), s.v. "Fraud."

extrinsic fraud. (1851) 1. Deception that is collateral to the issues being considered in the case; intentional misrepresentation or deceptive behavior outside the transaction itself (whether a contract or a lawsuit), depriving one party of informed consent or full participation. • For example, a person might engage in extrinsic fraud by convincing a litigant not to hire counsel or answer by dishonestly saying the matter will not be pursued. — Also termed collateral fraud. 2. Deception that prevents a person from knowing or asserting certain rights. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure \(\Rightarrow 2654\); Judgment \(\Rightarrow 375,443(1)\).]

419 fraud. See advance-fee fraud.

fraud in contemplation of law. See constructive fraud (1).

fraud in equity. See constructive fraud (1).

fraud in fact. See actual fraud.

fraud in law. (17c) Fraud that is presumed under the circumstances, as when a debtor transfers assets and thereby impairs creditors' efforts to collect sums due. — Also termed constructive fraud.

fraud in the execution. See fraud in the factum.

fraud in the factum. (1848) Fraud occurring when a legal instrument as actually executed differs from the one intended for execution by the person who executes it, or when the instrument may have had no legal existence. • Compared to fraud in the inducement, fraud in the factum occurs only rarely, as when a blind person signs a mortgage when misleadingly told that the paper is just a letter. — Also termed fraud in the execution; fraud in the making. Cf. fraud in the inducement. [Cases: Contracts \(\Rightarrow 94(1)\).]

fraud in the inducement. (1831) Fraud occurring when a misrepresentation leads another to enter into a transaction with a false impression of the risks, duties, or obligations involved; an intentional misrepresentation of a material risk or duty reasonably relied on, thereby injuring the other party without vitiating the contract itself, esp. about a fact relating to value. — Also termed fraud in the procurement. Cf. fraud in the factum. [Cases: Contracts \(\Rightarrow 94(1)\); Fraud \(\Rightarrow 3, 24\).]

fraud in the procurement. See fraud in the inducement.

fraud on the community. Family law. In a community-property state, the deliberate hiding or fraudulent transfer of community assets before a divorce or death for the purpose of preventing the other spouse from claiming a half-interest ownership in the property. [Cases: Husband and Wife \(\Rightarrow 265\).]

fraud on the court. (1810) In a judicial proceeding, a lawyer's or party's misconduct so serious that it undermines or is intended to undermine the integrity of the proceeding. • Examples are bribery of a juror and introduction of fabricated evidence. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure \(\Rightarrow 2654\); Judgment \(\Rightarrow 372,440\).]

fraud on the market. 1. Fraud occurring when an issuer of securities gives out misinformation that affects the market price of stock, the result being that people who buy or sell are effectively misled even though they did not rely on the statement itself or anything derived from it other than the market price. [Cases: Securities Regulation \(\Rightarrow 60.25\).] 2. The securities-law claim based on such fraud. See FRAUD-ON-THE-MARKET PRINCIPLE.

fraud on the Patent Office. Patents. A defense in a patent-infringement action, attacking the validity of the patent on the grounds that the patentee gave the examiner false or misleading information or withheld relevant information that the examiner would have considered important in considering patentability. • The scope of prohibited acts is wider than that covered by common-law fraud, and today the defense is generally called "inequitable conduct before the PTO." If the defense is established, the entire patent is rendered unenforceable. See defense of inequitable conduct under defense (1). [Cases: Patents \(\Rightarrow 97\).]

insurance fraud. Fraud committed against an insurer, as when an insured lies on a policy application or fabricates a claim.

intrinsic fraud. (1832) Deception that pertains to an issue involved in an original action. Examples include the use of fabricated evidence, a false return of service, perjured testimony, and false receipts or other commercial documents. [Cases: Judgment ⩞ 373, 441.]

legal fraud. See constructive fraud (1).

long-term fraud. The act of obtaining goods or money on credit by falsely posing as an established business and having no intent to pay for the goods or repay the loan.

mail fraud. (1918) An act of fraud using the U.S. Postal Service, as in making false representations through the mail to obtain an economic advantage. 18 USCA §§ 1341–1347. [Cases: Postal Service ⩞ 35.]

moral fraud. See actual fraud.

positive fraud. See actual fraud.

promissory fraud. (1934) A promise to perform made when the promisor had no intention of performing the promise. — Also termed common-law fraud. [Cases: Fraud ⩞ 12.]

religious-affinity fraud. See affinity fraud.

tax fraud. See tax evasion.

wire fraud. (1955) An act of fraud using electronic communications, as by making false representations on the telephone to obtain money. — The federal Wire Fraud Act provides that any artifice to defraud by means of wire or other electronic communications (such as radio or television) in foreign or interstate commerce is a crime, 18 USCA § 1343. [Cases: Telecommunications ⩞ 1014.]

fraudare (fraw-dair-ee), vb. [Latin] Roman law. To defraud.

fraud by hindsight. Hist. Securities. A claim of fraud based on the assumption that a corporation deliberately misled investors by issuing optimistic financial statements or forecasts and later reporting worse-than-expected results. Suits for fraud by hindsight were common in the early 1990s. Congress eliminated this claim in the Private Securities Litigation Reform Act of 1995. 15 USCA §§ 78u-4(b). [Cases: Securities Regulation ⩞ 60.27.]

fraudfeasor (frawd-fee-zor). A person who has committed fraud. — Also termed defrauder.

fraud in the execution. See fraud in the factum under FRAUD.

fraud on creditors. See FRAUDULENT CONVEYANCE (1).

fraud on the community. In a community-property state, the deliberate hiding or fraudulent transfer of community assets before a divorce or death for the purpose of preventing the other spouse from claiming a half-interest ownership in the property.

fraud-on-the-market principle. Securities. The doctrine that in a claim under the antifraud provisions of the federal securities laws, a plaintiff may presumptively establish reliance on a misstatement about a security's value — without proving actual knowledge of the fraudulent statement — if the stock is purchased in an open and developed securities market. — This doctrine recognizes that the market price of an issuer's stock reflects all available public information. The presumption is rebuttable. — Also termed fraud-on-the-market theory. See fraud on the market under FRAUD. [Cases: Securities Regulation ⩞ 60.25.]

frauds, statute of. See statute of frauds.

fraudulent act. Conduct involving bad faith, dishonesty, a lack of integrity, or moral turpitude. — Also termed dishonest act, fraudulent or dishonest act.

fraudulent alienation. 1. The transfer of property with an intent to defraud others, esp. creditors and lienholders. 2. The transfer of an estate asset by the estate's administrator for little or no consideration.

fraudulent alinee. See ALIENEE.

fraudulent banking. The receipt of a deposit by a banker who knew that the bank was insolvent at the time of the deposit. [Cases: Banks and Banking ⩞ 82(2), 83.]

fraudulent claim. A false insurance claim. See FRAUD.

fraudulent concealment. See CONCEALMENT.

fraudulent-concealment rule. See CONCEALMENT RULE.

fraudulent conversion. See CONVERSION (2).

fraudulent conveyance. (17c) 1. A transfer of property for little or no consideration, made for the purpose of hindering or delaying a creditor by putting the property beyond the creditor's reach; a transaction by which the owner of real or personal property seeks to place the property beyond the reach of creditors. — Also termed fraud on creditors. [Cases: Fraudulent Conveyances ⩞ 1.]

“With respect to the general power which is exercisable by deed, it seems that the principle that the donee's creditors can reach the property subject to the exercised general power will have application only to the so-called fraudulent conveyance. That is to say, if the owned assets of the donee after the donative inter vivos exercise are sufficient to satisfy the creditors, then the exercise of the power will not subject the appointive property to the claims of the creditors; if, on the other hand, the owned assets of the donee are inadequate to satisfy creditors' claims after the exercise of the power, then the transfer resulting from the exercise is likely to fall into the category of the fraudulent conveyance and the creditors will be able to reach the appointive property in the hands of the appointee.” Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 173 (2d ed. 1984).

2. Bankruptcy. A prebankruptcy transfer or obligation made or incurred by a debtor for little or no consideration or with the actual intent to hinder, delay, or defraud a creditor. — A bankruptcy trustee may recover... such a conveyance from the transferee if the requirements of 11 USCA § 548 are met. — Also termed fraudulent transfer. Cf. preferential transfer. [Cases: Bankruptcy (≈ 2641–2651).

fraudulent debt. See debt.

fraudulent joinder. See joinder.

fraudulent marriage. See marriage (i).

fraudulent misrepresentation. See misrepresentation.

fraudulent or dishonest act. See fraudulent act.

fraudulent pretenses. See false pretenses.

fraudulent representation. See fraudulent misrepresentation under misrepresentation.

fraudulent sale. See sale.

fraudulent transfer. See fraudulent conveyance (2).

fraus (fraws). [Latin] Deceit; cheating. • For example, a debtor who conveyed property with the specific intent (fraus) of defrauding a creditor risked having the conveyance rescinded.

fraus legis (fraws lee-jis). [Latin “fraud on the law”] Roman law. Evasion of the law; specific, doing something that is not expressly forbidden by statute, but that the law does not want done.

fray. See affray.

FRB. abbr. Federal Reserve Board of Governors.

FRCA. abbr. See Fair-Credit-Reporting Act.

F.R.D. abbr. Federal Rules Decisions; a series of reported federal court decisions (beginning in 1938) that construe or apply the Federal Rules of Civil and Criminal Procedure. • Also included are rule changes, ceremonial proceedings of federal courts, and articles on federal-court practice and procedure. — Often written FRD.

Freddie Mac. See Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corporation.

free, adj. (bef. 12c) 1. Having legal and political rights; enjoying political and civil liberty  . 2. Not subject to the constraint or domination of another; enjoying personal freedom; emancipated . 3. Characterized by choice, rather than by compulsion or constraint <free will>. 4. Unburdened <the land was free of any encumbrances>. 5. Not confined by force or restraint <free from prison>. 6. Unrestricted and unregulated <free trade>. 7. Costing nothing; gratuitous <free tickets to the game>. — freely, adv.

free, vb. 1. To liberate. 2. To remove (a person, animal, or thing) from a constraint or burden.

free agency, n. (ca. 1955) A professional athlete’s ability to negotiate an employment contract with any team in the league, rather than being confined to the league’s collective-bargaining system. • Free agency is usu. granted to veteran players who have been in the league for a certain number of years. Cf. reserve clause. — free agent, n.

free alms. See frankalmoine.

free alongside ship. A mercantile-contract term allocating the rights and duties of the buyer and the seller of goods with respect to delivery, payment, and risk of loss, whereby the seller must clear the goods for export, and deliver the goods to the wharf beside the buyer’s chosen vessel. • The seller’s delivery is complete (and the risk of loss passes to the buyer) when the goods are placed on the wharf beside the vessel. The buyer is responsible for all costs of carriage. This term is used only when goods are transported by sea or inland waterway. UCC § 2-319. • Abbr. FAS. Cf. free on board; delivered ex quay. [Cases: Sales (≈ 201(4)].

free and clear, adj. Unencumbered by any liens; marketable <free and clear title>.

free and common socage. See free socage under socage.

free and equal, adj. (Of an election) conducted so that the electorate has a reasonable opportunity to vote, with each vote given the same effect. [Cases: Elections (≈ 1].

free bench. Hist. A widow’s (and occasionally a widower’s) interest in the deceased spouse’s estate. • Free bench gave the surviving spouse a half interest in the estate until death or remarriage. — Also termed francus bancus; frank bank; liber bancus.

“the bench in question was, we may guess ... a bench at the fireside. The surviving spouse has in time past been allowed to remain in the house along with the children. In the days when families kept together, the right of the widower or widow to remain at the fireside may have borne a somewhat indefinite character. ... By way of ‘free bench’ the surviving spouse now has the enjoyment of one-half of the land until death or second marriage, whether there has ever been a child of the marriage or no.” 2 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 419 (2d ed. 1899).

free-bord. (17c) Hist. 1. A small strip of land (usu. 2½ feet wide and lying just outside a fence) that the owner of the fenced property was allowed to claim and use. 2. The right of claiming that quantity of land. — Also spelled freebord; free bord; freeboard. — Also termed franchords.

free carrier. A mercantile-contract term allocating the rights and duties of the buyer and the seller of goods with respect to delivery, payment, and risk of loss, whereby the seller must clear the goods for export and deliver them to the buyer’s chosen carrier at a named place. • The seller’s delivery is complete (and the risk of loss passes to the buyer) when the goods are loaded on the collecting vehicle or otherwise placed at the carrier’s disposal. The buyer is responsible for all costs of carriage. There are no restrictions on the buyer’s choice of carrier. — Abbr. FCA.

free chapel. Hist. Eccles. law. A church founded by the Crown (or by a person under royal grant) and not subject to the bishop’s jurisdiction.
freedom. (bef. 12c) 1. The state of being free or liberated.

freedom. (bef. 12c) 1. The state of being free or liberated.

2. A political right.

Freedom of Access to Clinic Entrances Act. A 1994 federal statute that provides for criminal sanctions, private civil causes of action, and civil action by the U.S. Attorney General against a person who uses force, threat of force, or physical obstruction to injure, intimidate, or interfere with a provider or patient of reproductive services or who damages a reproductive-services facility. — Abbr. FACE. [Cases: Abortion and Birth Control C= 128.]

freedom of assembly. See right of assembly.

freedom of association. (1889) The right to join with others in a common undertaking that would be lawful if pursued individually. • This right is protected by the First Amendment to the U.S. Constitution. The government may not prohibit outsiders from joining an association, but the insiders do not necessarily have a right to exclude others. Cf. right of assembly. [Cases: Constitutional Law C= 1440–1454.]

freedom of expressive association. The constitutional right of an individual to associate with others, without undue government interference, for the purpose of engaging in activities protected by the First Amendment, such as speech, assembly, and the exercise of religion.

freedom of intimate association. The constitutional right of privacy to form and preserve certain intimate human relationships without intrusion by the state because the relationships safeguard individual freedom. • The group relationships protected by the right to freedom of intimate association are familial in nature and are characterized by deep attachments, a high degree of commitment, and the sharing of distinctly personal aspects of life. The exclusion of others is an essential characteristic of these relationships.

freedom of choice. (1817) 1. The liberty embodied in the exercise of one's rights. 2. The parents' opportunity to select a school for their child in a unitary, integrated school system that is devoid of de jure segregation. 3. The liberty to exercise one's right of privacy, esp. the right to have an abortion. — Also termed right to choose: choice. [Cases: Abortion and Birth Control C= 102.]

freedom of contract. (1879) The doctrine that people have the right to bind themselves legally; a judicial concept that contracts are based on mutual agreement and free choice, and thus should not be hampered by external control such as governmental interference. • This is the principle that people are able to fashion their relations by private agreements, esp. as opposed to the assigned roles of the feudal system. As Maine famously said, "[T]he movement of progressive societies has been a movement from Status to Contract." Henry Sumner Maine, Ancient Law 165 (1864). — Also termed liberty of contract; autonomy of the parties. [Cases: Constitutional Law C= 118.]

"Like most shibboleths, that of 'freedom of contract' rarely, if ever, received the close examination which its importance deserved, and even today it is by no means easy to say what exactly the nineteenth-century judges meant when they used this phrase. At least it may be said that the idea of freedom of contract embraced two closely connected, but none the less distinct, concepts. In the first place it indicated that contracts were based on mutual agreement, while in the second place it emphasized that the creation of a contract was the result of a free choice unhindered by external control such as governmental interference." P.S. Atiyah, An Introduction to the Law of Contract 5 (3d ed. 1981).

freedom of expression. (1877) The freedom of speech, press, assembly, or religion as guaranteed by the First Amendment; the prohibition of governmental interference with those freedoms. Cf. freedom of speech. [Cases: Constitutional Law C= 1290–1428, 1430, 1490–2304.]

Freedom of Information Act. The federal statute that establishes guidelines for public disclosure of documents and materials created and held by federal agencies. 5 U.S.C.A § 552. • The basic purpose of the statute, or of a state statute modeled after it, is to give the public access to official information so that the public will be better informed and the government will be more accountable for its actions. — Abbr. FOIA. See reverse FOIA suit. [Cases: Records C= 50–68.] freedom of intimate association. See freedom of association.

freedom of religion. (16c) The right to adhere to any form of religion or none, to practice or abstain from practicing religious beliefs, and to be free from governmental interference with or promotion of religion, as guaranteed by the First Amendment and Article VI, § 3 of the U.S. Constitution. [Cases: Constitutional Law C= 1290–1428.]

freedom of speech. (17c) The right to express one's thoughts and opinions without governmental restriction, as guaranteed by the First Amendment. — Also termed liberty of speech. Cf. freedom of expression. [Cases: Constitutional Law C= 1490–2304.]

Freedom of Speech Clause. See speech clause.

freedom of the city. Hist. An immunity or privilege from some burden, esp. from county jurisdiction and freedom of the press. (17c) The right to print and publish materials without governmental intervention, as guaranteed by the First Amendment. — Also termed liberty of the press. [Cases: Constitutional Law ⇓ 2070–2081.]

"Freedom of the press' has less significance than meets the eye. It is true, of course, that the First Amendment specifically guarantees freedom of the press as well as free speech, and the media often ascribe the freedom they enjoy to the Press Clause. Even the Supreme Court occasionally emits rhetoric that implies as much. But as a matter of positive law, the Press Clause actually plays a rather minor role in protecting the freedom of the press. Most of the freedoms the press receives from the First Amendment are no different from the freedoms everyone enjoys under the Speech Clause. The press is protected from most government censorship, libel judgments, and prior restraints not because it is the press but because the Speech Clause protects all of us from those threats." — David A. Anderson, Freedom of the Press, 80 Texas L. Rev. 429, 430 (2002).

freedom of the seas. Int'l law. The principle that the seas beyond territorial waters are not subject to any country's control. • Ships on the high seas are subject only to the jurisdiction of the country whose flag they fly, except in cases of piracy, hijacking, hot pursuit from territorial waters, slave trading, and certain rights of approach by warships. — Also termed mare liberum. [Cases: International Law ⇓ 7.]

freedom-to-create statute. Patents. A law restricting an employer's ability to require employees to assign to the employer all rights to their inventions, even those independently developed. [Cases: Labor and Employment ⇓ 309.]

freedom-to-operate search. See infringement search.

free election. See election (3).

free enterprise. (1890) A private and consensual system of production and distribution, usu. conducted for a profit in a competitive environment that is relatively free of governmental interference. See capitalism.

free entry, egress, and regress (ee-gres). Hist. A person's right to go on land as often as reasonably necessary. • A tenant could go on land to gather crops still growing after the tenancy expired. Free Exercise Clause. (1950) The constitutional provision (U.S. Const. amend. 1) prohibiting the government from interfering in people's religious practices or forms of worship. — Also termed Exercise Clause. Cf. establishment clause. [Cases: Constitutional Law ⇓ 1302.]

free fishery. See fishery (1).

free-gas clause. Oil & gas. A provision in an oil-and-gas lease entitling the lessor or the surface owner to use gas produced from the leased property without charge. • Used commonly in colder states, free-gas clauses usu. limit how the gas may be used (e.g., domestic heating and light), how much gas may be used (e.g., not more than 300 MCF per year), or both. [Cases: Mines and Minerals ⇓ 79.5.]

freehold, n. (15c) 1. An estate in land held in fee simple, in fee tail, or for term of life; any real-property interest that is or may become possessory. • At common law, these estates were all created by enfeoffment with livery of seisin. [Cases: Estates in Property ⇓ 4–7, 12.] The tenure by which such an estate is held. — Also termed freehold estate; estate in freehold; freehold interest; franktenement; liberum tenementum. Cf. leasehold.

determinable freehold. See determinable estate under estate (4).

movable freehold. (18c) The land a seashore owner acquires or loses as water recedes or approaches. [Cases: Navigable Waters ⇓ 44.]

perpetual freehold. An estate given to a grantee for life, and then successively to the grantee's heirs for life. • The effect of this type of freehold was to keep land within a family in perpetuity, much like a fee tail.

"It took the form of a grant 'to A for life, remainder to A's son for life, remainder to that son's son for life', and so on ad infinitum. Such a limitation, if valid, would have been an effective substitute for the fee tail. The courts, however, set their face against this 'perpetual freehold' (as it was sometimes termed), and in Lovelace v. Lovelace (1858) it was held that holdings which did not vest before the determination of the first life estate would fail ex post facto. Subsequently a number of other, not entirely convincing, reasons were found for invalidating perpetual freeholds, ultimately culminating in what is sometimes termed the 'old' rule against perpetuities, but, more commonly, the rule in Whitby v. Mitchell, taking its name from the case which marked its emphatic reiteration." — Peter Butt, Land Law 136 (2d ed. 1988).

freeholder. (15c) Hist. One who possesses a freehold.

freeholder's court baron. See court baron.

freehold estate. See freehold.

freehold interest. See freehold.

freehold land society. (usu. pl.) Hist. A society in England created to enable mechanics, artisans, and other workers to buy at the lowest possible price freehold land with a sufficient yearly value to entitle the owner to the right to vote in the county in which the land was located.

free ice. Hist. Ice in navigable streams that does not belong to the adjacent riparian owner or to another with the right to appropriate it, but that belongs to the person who first appropriates it.

free law. Hist. The civil rights enjoyed by a freeman (as opposed to a serf). • Free law could be forfeited if the freeman was convicted of treason or an infamous crime.

freeman. (bef. 12c) 1. A person who possesses and enjoys all the civil and political rights belonging to the people under a free government. 2. A person who is not a slave. 3. Hist. A member of a municipal corporation (a city or borough) who possesses full civic rights, esp. the right to vote. 4. Hist. A freeholder. Cf. villein. 5. Hist. An allodial landowner. Cf. vassal. — Also written free man.

Freeman–Walter–Abele test. Patents. An outmoded two-step judicial test for determining whether a claimed invention is an unpatentable mathematical algorithm. • The test looks first to whether an algorithm is explicit or inherent in the claim, and second to whether a patent would wholly preempt others from using the algorithm. In re Freeman, 573 F.2d 1237 (CCPA 1978); In re Walter, 618 F.2d 758 (CCPA 1980); In re Abele, 684 F.2d 902 (CCPA 1982). The Federal Circuit has said the test has “little, if any, applicability” after State St. Bank & Trust Co. v. Signature Fin. Group, 149 F.3d 1368 (Fed. Cir. 1998). [Cases: Patents C:-- 6.] free market. See open market under market.

free of all average. Maritime law. Insurance that covers a total loss only. — Abbr. FAA.

free on board. (ca. 1924) A mercantile-contract term allocating the rights and duties of the buyer and the seller of goods with respect to delivery, payment, and risk of loss, whereby the seller must clear the goods for export, and the buyer must arrange for transportation. • The seller’s delivery is complete (and the risk of loss passes to the buyer) when the goods pass the transporter’s tail. The buyer is responsible for all costs of carriage. UCC § 2.319. — Abbr. FOB. Cf. free alongside ship; delivered ex ship. [Cases: Sales C:-- 77(2).]

In an F.O.B. (‘free on board’) contract, the goods must be delivered on board by the seller, free of expense to the purchaser, and they are not at the latter’s risk until actually delivered on board, when the property in them passes to him. The seller must also give the buyer sufficient notice to enable him to insure against loss during the sea transit. The buyer, on the other hand, must name a ship or authorize the seller to select one. The seller cannot sue for the price until the goods are loaded, and if his inability to load was caused by the buyer’s failure to name an effective ship, his only remedy lies in damages. Similarly, F.O.R. means “free on rail.” 2 E.w. Chance, Principles of Mercantile Law 86–87 (P.W. French ed., 10th ed. 1951).

FOB destination. A mercantile term denoting that the seller is required to pay the freight charges as far as the buyer’s named destination.

FOB shipping. A mercantile term denoting that the seller is required to bear the risk of placing the goods on a carrier. [Cases: Sales C:-- 20(4).] free port. See port.

free ride. (19c) A benefit obtained without paying a fair price. • For example, a competitor who used aerial photographs of a plant-construction site to discover secret manufacturing techniques was judicially criticized for getting a free ride, in contrast to others who might spend time and effort legally reverse-engineering the same techniques.

free rider. One who obtains an economic benefit at another’s expense without contributing to it. — Also written freerider.

free seas. See sea.

free socage. See socage.

Freetone rider. See push clause.

free trade. n. (17c) The open and unrestricted import and export of goods without barriers, such as quotas or tariffs, other than those charged only as a revenue source, as opposed to those designed to protect domestic businesses. Cf. protective tariff under tariff (2).

free-trade zone. A duty-free area within a country to promote commerce, esp. transshipment and processing, without entering into the country’s market. — Also termed foreign trade zone; free port.

freeware. (ca. 1983) Software, esp. open-source code, that is made generally available with express or implicit permission for anyone to use, copy, modify, and distribute for any purpose, including financial gain. • The term “free” refers to usage rights rather than price — a distinction important in two respects. First, a user may purchase the initial copy of freeware. Second, software available at no cost may not include permission for the software’s user to copy, modify, or give away the software. — Also termed free software. Cf. proprietary software; semi-free software; shareware.

free Warren. See Warren.

freeze, n. (1942) 1. A period when the government restricts or immobilizes certain commercial activity.

credit freeze. (1922) A period when the government restricts bank-lending.

wage-and-price freeze. (1943) A period when the government forbids the increase of wages and prices.

2. A recapitalization of a closed corporation so that the value of its existing capital is concentrated primarily in preferred stock rather than in common stock. • By freezing capital, the owner can transfer the common stock to heirs without taxation while continuing to enjoy preferred-stock income during the owner’s lifetime, while the common stock grows.

freeze, vb. 1. To cause to become fixed and unable to increase <to freeze interest rates <to freeze prices>. 2. To make immobile by government mandate or banking action <to freeze assets>. 3. To cease physical movement, esp. when ordered by a law enforcement officer <the police officer shouted at the suspect to freeze>.

freeze, n. A person or entity subjected to a freeze-out.

freezeout, n. Corporations. A transaction in which a shareholder or group of shareholders obtains the entire common-equity interest in a company while the other shareholders receive cash, debt, or preferred stock in exchange for their common-equity shares. — Also termed going-private transaction. Cf. squeeze-out. [Cases: Corporations C:-- 182.3, 584; Securities Regulation C:-- 60.21.]

“A ‘freeze-out’ is usually accomplished by the merger of a corporation into its parent corporation, where the parent corporation owns a large percentage of the shares of the subsidiary, and the minority shareholders are entitled to minimal distributions of cash or securities. A ‘freeze-out’ may also be used to connote the situation where so large a number of equity shares are issued to the acquiring corporation that the public shareholders own less than 10 percent of the outstanding equity securities and, therefore, have no control over the corporation or any of its decisions. In such event, a short-form merger could later be used to eliminate the minority shareholders. 69A Am. Jur. 2d Securities Regulation — State § 245, at 971 n.60 (1993).

parent–subsidiary freezeout. A transaction in which a parent company uses its majority ownership in a subsidiary to acquire the minority shareholders' interest.

pure freezeout. A transaction in which company insiders or employees acquire all the public shares of the company, often with the help of lenders. — Also termed management buyout. See management buyout under buyout.

second-step freezeout. A freezeout that takes place as the final phase of a two-step takeover, after the initial phase in which a majority interest is acquired by the purchase of shares in a tender offer, on the open market, from the issuer, from a control group, or from an issuer–control-group combination.

freeze out, vb. 1. To subject one to a freeze-out. 2. To exclude a business competitor <freezing out the competition>.

freeze-out merger. See cash merger under merger.

freight. (15c) 1. Goods transported by water, land, or air; cargo. 2. The compensation paid to a carrier for transporting goods. [Cases: Carriers C—189; Shipping C—144.]

“Freight, in the common acceptation of the term, means the price for the actual transportation of goods by sea from one place to another; but, in its more extensive sense, it is applied to all rewards or compensation paid for the use of ships, including the transportation of passengers.” 3 James Kent, Commentaries on American Law *219 (George Comstock ed., 11th ed. 1866).

dead freight. The amount paid by a shipper to a shipowner for the ship's unused cargo space. [Cases: Shipping C—144.]

freight absorption. See absorption (9).

freight forwarder. Maritime law. A person or company whose business is to receive and ship goods for others.

• A freight forwarder may be an agent of the cargo's owner or of the carrier, or may be an independent contractor acting as a principal and assuming the carrier's responsibility for delivering the cargo. — Also termed third-party logistical service provider; forwarding agent. [Cases: Carriers C—178; Shipping C—112.]

freighting voyage. See voyage.

freight rate. See rate.

frenchman. Hist. (bef. 12c) A stranger; a foreigner. • In early English law, this term was applied to all foreigners, even those not from France.

reorganization. See reorganization (2).

fresh, adj. (13c) Recent; not stale; characterized by newness without any material interval.

fresh complaint. (1853) A reasonably prompt lodging of a grievance; esp., a victim's prompt report of a sexual assault to someone trustworthy. [Cases: Criminal Law C—366; Rape C—a48(1—49, 49.2.]} fresh-complaint rule. The theory that a sexual-assault victim's credibility is bolstered if the victim reports the assault soon after it occurs. • Most courts no longer recognize this theory. [Cases: Rape C—a48(1—49, 49.2.]

fresh disseisin. See disseisin.

fresh fine. See fine (5).

fresh force. Hist. Force, such as disseisin or defacement, newly done. • This term refers to force used in a town, and for which a remedy (the Assize of Fresh Force) existed. See assize of fresh force under assize (8).

fresh pursuit. (17c) 1. The right of a police officer to make a warrantless search of a fleeing suspect or to cross jurisdictional lines to arrest a fleeing suspect. [Cases: Arrest C—63.3, 66(3); Automobiles C—a349(12)]. 2. The right of a person to use reasonable force to retake property that has just been taken. — Also termed hot pursuit.

fresh start. (1857) Bankruptcy. The favorable financial status obtained by a debtor who receives a release from personal liability on prepetition debts or who reorganizes debt obligations through the confirmation and completion of a bankruptcy plan. [Cases: Bankruptcy C—a2363.1.]

Friday market. See market.

friendly amendment. See amendment (3).

friendly fire. (1976) 1. A fire burning where it is intended to burn, yet capable of causing unintended damage. 2. Military or police gunfire that injures one's own side.

friendly-parent law. A statute that requires or allows a judge to consider as a factor in awarding custody the extent to which one parent encourages or thwarts the child's relationship with the other parent.

friendly-parent principle. Family law. The theory that if one parent is more likely to support the child's relationship with the other parent after a divorce is granted, then that more supportive parent should be awarded custody. • This theory has been criticized as fundamentally flawed because (1) a court may not consider the legitimate fears and concerns that motivate a parent's "unfriendly" behavior, and (2) the theory's simplicity discourages a parent from revealing anything negative about the other parent to the child, even if relevant to the child's safety, for fear of being viewed as too hostile. — Also termed friendly-parent doctrine; friendly-parent paradigm.

friendly society. (18c) In Britain, a voluntary association, supported by subscriptions or contributions, for the purpose of providing financial relief to ill members and to their widows and children upon death. • Friendly societies are regulated by statute. See benevolent association under association. Cf. fraternal benefit association.

friendly subpoena. See subpoena.
friendly suit. (18c) A lawsuit in which all the parties have agreed beforehand to allow a court to resolve the issues. • Friendly suits are often filed by settling parties who wish to have a judgment entered.

friendly suitor. See white knight.

friendly takeover. See takeover.

friend of the court. (1816) 1. amicus curiae. 2. In some jurisdictions, an official who investigates and advises the court in domestic-relations cases involving minors. • The friend of the court may also help enforce court orders in those cases. [Cases: Child Custody <c=417, 421, 613, 616; Infants <c=208.]

friend-of-the-court brief. See amicus brief under brief.

fringe benefit. See benefit.

frontage assessment. Also termed assessment.

front-foot. (1863) A measurement used to calculate a frontage assessment. — Also termed abutting foot. [Cases: Municipal Corporations <c=469.]

front-foot rule. (1872) The principle that an improvement cost is to be apportioned among several properties in proportion to their frontage, without regard to the benefits conferred on each property. — Also termed front-foot plan. [Cases: Municipal Corporations <c=469.]

frontpay. Labor law. Court-awarded compensation for the post-judgment effects of continuing employment discrimination. Cf. backpay. [Cases: Civil Rights <c=1571.]

front-running, n. Securities. A broker's or analyst's use of nonpublic information to acquire securities or enter into options or futures contracts for his or her own benefit, knowing that when the information becomes public, the price of the securities will change in a predictable manner. • This practice is illegal. Front-running can occur in many ways. For example, a broker or analyst who works for a brokerage firm may buy shares in a company that the firm is about to recommend as a strong buy or in which the firm is planning to buy a large block of shares. See insider trading.

frantage. (ca. 1935) Sexual stimulation by rubbing the genitals against another person. • This may be accomplished without removing clothing. When a child is involved, it is a form of sexual abuse.

frozen account. See blocked account under account.

frozen asset. See asset.

frozen deposit. See deposit (2).

FRS. abbr. federal reserve system.

FRTIB. abbr. federal retirement thrift investment board.

frolic (frol-ik), n. Torts. An employee's significant deviation from the employer's business for personal reasons. • A frolic is outside the scope of employment, and thus the employer is not vicariously liable for the employee's actions. Cf. detour. [Cases: Labor and Employment <c=3061(1).]

front, n. (14c) 1. The side or part of a building or lot that is open to view, that is the principal entrance, or that faces out to the open (as to a lake or ocean); the foremost part of something <the property's front was its most valuable attribute>. 2. A person or group that serves to conceal the true identity or activity of the person or group in control <the political party was a front for the terrorist group>. 3. A political association similar to a party <popular front>.

frontage (fran-tij). (17c) 1. The part of land abutting a street or highway or lying between a building's front and a street or highway <the property's value was so low because of its narrow frontage>. 2. The linear distance of a frontage <the lot's frontage was 90 feet>.

frontage assessment. See assessment.

frontager (fran-tij-ar), n. (17c) A person owning or occupying land that abuts a highway, river, seashore, or the like.

front-end load. See loan fund under mutual fund.

front-end money. See seed money.

front-foot. (1863) A measurement used to calculate a frontage assessment. — Also termed abutting foot. [Cases: Municipal Corporations <c=469.]

front-foot rule. (1872) The principle that an improvement cost is to be apportioned among several properties in proportion to their frontage, without regard to the benefits conferred on each property. — Also termed front-foot plan. [Cases: Municipal Corporations <c=469.]

front money. See seed money.

fructus (fruk-tas). [Latin "fruits"] 1. Roman & civil law. The natural produce of land and animals; the profit or increase from land and animals. • The owner of the land or animals acquired ownership by separation, the separation of the fruit from the parent body. A bona fide possessor or an emphyteuta also acquired ownership by separation, which allowed a nonowner to claim title from a thief. But in Justinian's law, a bona fide possessor had to account to a successful claimant for ownership for the principal thing and any unconsumed fruits. A tenant or usufructuary acquired title only by possession, and cannot claim title from a thief. See perception. Cf. fructus civiles. 2. Usufructuary. Pl. fructus.
fructus civiles (frak-tas sa-vi-leez). [Latin “civil fruits”] Roman & civil law. Income (such as rent or interest) that one receives from another for the use or enjoyment of a thing, esp. real property or loaned money. In Roman law, fructus civiles included both minerals and the earnings of slaves.

fructus fundi (frak-tas fan-di). [Latin “land fruits”] The fruits or produce of land.

fructus legis (frak-tas lee-jis). [Latin “fruits of the law”] The proceeds of judgment or execution. [Cases: Execution C=322.]

fructus naturales (frak-tas nach-a-ray-lee-eez). [Latin “natural fruits”] The natural produce of land or plants and the offspring of animals. Fructus naturales are considered part of the real property.

fructus pecudum (frak-tas pek-ya-dam). [Latin “fruits of the herd”] The produce or increase of flocks or herds.

fructus pendentes (frak-tas pen-den-teez). [Latin “hanging fruits”] Fruits not yet severed or gathered; fruits united with that which produces them.

fructus percepti (frak-tas par-sep-tti). [Latin “gathered fruits”] Roman & civil law. Fruits that have been gathered.

fructus rei alienae (frak-tas ree-ay-lee-ee-nee or al-ee-ee). [Latin “fruits of another’s property”] The fruits of another’s property; fruits taken from another's estate.

fructus separati (frak-tas sep-a-ray-ti). [Latin “separated fruits”] Roman & civil law. The produce of a thing after being separated from it, and so becoming in law “fruits.”

fructus stantes (frak-tas stan-teez). [Latin “standing fruits”] Fruits that have not yet been severed from the stalk or stem.

fructum perceptio (frak-choo-am par-sep-shue-oh). [Latin] Roman & civil law. The rightful taking of the produce of property by a person who does not own the property.

fruges (froo-jeez). [Latin “fruits” or “crops”] Roman & civil law. Edible produce or crops; esculents.

fruit. (14c) 1. The produce or product of something (as of land or property). 2. Civil law. Income or goods derived or produced from property without a diminution of the property’s inherent value.

civil fruit. Civil law. Revenue derived from a thing by operation of law or by reason of a juridical act, such as lease or interest payments, or certain corporate distributions. La. Civ. Code art. 551. See FRUCTUS CIVILES.

natural fruit. Civil law. A product of the land or of animals. Examples are crops and eggs. La. Civ. Code art. 2317. See FRUCTUS NATURALENS.

3. Something (such as evidence) obtained during an activity or operation <the fruit of the officer's search>. See FRUIT-OF-THE-POISONOUS-TREE DOCTRINE.

fruit-and-the-tree doctrine. (1979) Tax. The rule that an individual who earns income cannot assign that income to another person to avoid taxation.

fruit-of-the-poisonous-tree doctrine. (1948) Criminal procedure. The rule that evidence derived from an illegal search, arrest, or interrogation is inadmissible because the evidence (the “fruit”) was tainted by the illegality (the “poisonous tree”). Under this doctrine, for example, a murder weapon is inadmissible if the map showing its location and used to find it was seized during an illegal search. Also termed fruits doctrine. See EXCLUSIONARY RULE; ATTENUATION DOCTRINE; INDEPENDENT-SOURCE RULE; INEVITABLE-DISCOVERY RULE. [Cases: Criminal Law C=394.1(3)].

fruits of a crime. The proceeds acquired through criminal acts. [Cases: Criminal Law C=1221.]

frustration. n. (16c) 1. The prevention or hindering of the attainment of a goal, such as contractual performance.

commercial frustration. (1918) An excuse for a party’s nonperformance because of some unforeseeable and uncontrollable circumstance. Also termed economic frustration. [Cases: Contracts C=309.I(1)].

self-induced frustration. (1926) A breach of contract caused by one party’s action that prevents the performance. The phrase is something of a misnomer, since self-induced frustration is not really a type of frustration at all but is instead a breach of contract.

temporary frustration. (1950) An occurrence that prevents performance and legally suspends the duty to perform for the duration of the event. If the burden or circumstance is substantially different after the event, then the duty may be discharged.

2. Contracts. The doctrine that if a party’s principal purpose is substantially frustrated by unanticipated changed circumstances, that party’s duties are discharged and the contract is considered terminated. Also termed frustration of purpose. Cf. IMPOSSIBILITY (4); IMPRACTICABILITY; MISTAKE. [Cases: Contracts C=309.I] — frustrate, vb.

Frye test. The defunct federal common-law rule of evidence on the admissibility of scientific evidence. It required that the tests or procedures must have gained general acceptance in their particular field. Frye v. United States, 293 F. 1013 (D.C. Cir. 1923). In Daubert v. Merrell Dow Pharm., Inc., 509 U.S. 579, 113 S.Ct. 2786 (1993), the Supreme Court held that scientific evidence must meet the requirements of the Federal Rules of Evidence, not the Frye test, to be

fuera in lege (fyoo-er-a in lay). [Law French "flight in law"] Legal flight from the law. • If the accused failed to appear, the law treated that failure as flight. — Also termed fugere in lege.

fuero (foo-er-oh). Spanish law. 1. A forum; court. 2. The territory in which a court has the power to act. 3. A privilege enjoyed by some but not others. 4. A custom having the force of law. 5. Hist. A collection of local, usu. customary, laws.

Fuero Juzgo (hooz-goh). Hist. A 7th-century Visigothic code that was revised and incorporated into the laws of 13th-century Spain. • The code contains the earliest known laws of community property. In the 18th century, much of the Fuero Juzgo was incorporated into the Code Napoleon. In the 19th century, vestiges of the Fuero Juzgo were incorporated into the Spanish Civil Code.

Fuero Real (ray-ahl). Hist. A collection of the ancient customs of Castile, collected by order of Alfonse X in 1255 to produce a uniform legal code, much of which was incorporated into local fueros. • Louisiana’s system of acquets and gains was adapted from the Fuero Real.

fugam fecit (fyoo-gam fee-sit). [Law Latin] Hist. He fled; he has made flight. • When a jury finds this finding in a felony or treason trial, the defendant’s property was subject to forfeiture.

fugere. See FUER.

fugere in facto. See fuer in fact under FUER.

fugere in lege. See fuer in ley under FUER.

fugitation (fyoo-ja-tay-shun). (18c) Hist. A sentence or declaration of fugitive status that was pronounced against an accused person for failing to answer a citation and appear. • The effect was that the person forfeited his or her goods and chattels. — fugitate, vb.

fugitive. (14c) 1. A person who flees or escapes; a refugee. 2. A criminal suspect or a witness in a criminal case who flees, evades, or escapes arrest, prosecution, imprisonment, service of process, or the giving of testimony, esp. by fleeing the jurisdiction or by hiding. See 18 USCA § 1073. — Also termed (in sense 2) fugitive from justice.

fugitive-disentitlement doctrine. An equitable rule that allows a trial or appellate court to limit a fugitive’s access to civil and criminal courts in the United States. [Cases: Action \(\supseteq 13\); Criminal Law \(\supseteq 1026.10(7)\).]

fugitive-dismissal rule. The principle that an appellate court may dismiss a criminal defendant’s appeal if the defendant is a fugitive. [Cases: Criminal Law \(\supseteq 1131(5)\).]

Fugitive Felon Act. A federal statute that makes it a felony to flee across state lines to avoid state-felony prosecution or confinement, or to avoid giving testimony in a state-felony case. 18 USCA § 1073. [Cases: Escape \(\supseteq 1\).]

fugitive from justice. See FUGITIVE.

fugitive’s goods. Hist. The goods that a person forfeited as a result of fleeing.

fugitive-slave laws. Hist. Federal statutes passed in 1793 and 1850 providing for the surrender and return of slaves who had escaped and fled to a free territory or a free state. [Cases: Slaves \(\supseteq 9\).]

fugitive warrant. See WARRANT (1).

fugitivus (fyoo-ja-tr-vas), n. [Latin] Roman law. A runaway slave; a fugitive.

fugue (fyoo-g). (16c) An abnormal state of consciousness in which one appears to function normally but on recovery has no memory of what one did while in that condition.

3. A pool of investments owned in common and managed for a fee; MUTUAL FUND .

fund, vb. (18c) 1. To furnish money to (an individual, entity, or venture), esp. to finance a particular project. 2. To use resources in a manner that produces interest. 3. To convert (a debt, esp. an open account) into a long-term debt that bears interest at a fixed rate.

fundamental error. See plain error under ERROR (2).

fundamental-fairness doctrine. (1969) The rule that applies the principles of due process to a judicial proceeding. • The term is commonly considered synonymous with due process.

fundamental interest. See FUNDAMENTAL RIGHT.

fundamental law. (17c) The organic law that establishes the governing principles of a nation or state; esp., CONSTITUTIONAL LAW. — Also termed organic law; ground-law. Cf. NATURAL LAW.

fundamental-miscarriage-of-justice exception. The doctrine allowing a federal court in a habeas corpus proceeding to address a claim of constitutional error that, although ordinarily unreviewable, is subject to review because of a state-court procedural default that rendered the proceedings basically unfair. • For the exception to apply, among other things, the petitioner must show by a preponderance of the evidence that constitutional error resulted in the conviction of one who is actually innocent. If the defaulted claim applies only to sentencing, the exception permits review of the claim if the petitioner shows by clear and convincing evidence that, but for the constitutional error, no reasonable judge or jury would have imposed the sentence that the petitioner received. [Cases: Habeas Corpus 401.]

fundamental right. (17c) 1. A right derived from natural or fundamental law. 2. Constitutional law. A significant component of liberty, encroachments of which are rigorously tested by courts to ascertain the soundness of purported governmental justifications. • A fundamental right triggers strict scrutiny to determine whether the law violates the Due Process Clause or the Equal Protection Clause of the 14th Amendment. As enunciated by the Supreme Court, fundamental rights include voting, interstate travel, and various aspects of privacy (such as marriage and contraception rights). — Also termed fundamental interest. See strict scrutiny. Cf. SUSPECT CLASSIFICATION. [Cases: Constitutional Law 3062, 3901.

furter assurance. See ASSURANCE.

further-exploration covenant. Oil & gas. In an oil-and-gas lease, an implied promise that once production has been obtained from the leased property, the lessee will continue to explore other parts of the property and other formations under it. • Some jurisdictions hold that the covenant for further exploration does not exist independently of the covenant for reasonable development. See also REASONABLE-DEVELOPMENT COVENANT; REASONABLY-PRUDENT-OPERATOR STANDARD. [Cases: Mines and Minerals C=78.1(4), 78.1(7).] further instruction. See additional instruction under JURY INSTRUCTION.

furtum (far-tam), n. [Latin “theft”] Roman law. 1. The offense of stealing movable property. • Under Roman law, furtum included not only the taking of another’s property, but any handling of the property done with the intent of profiting by it. Furtum was not only a private wrong (delictum) prosecuted by the person suffering the loss. Cf. PECULATUS. 2. The thing stolen.

furtum conceptum (far-tam kon-sep-tam). [Latin] Roman law. A theft in which someone is discovered in possession of stolen property after a search with witnesses. • The possessor was liable to pay the owner three times the value of the stolen property. The possessor could bring an action against the thief and recover triple damages.

furtum grave (far-tam gray-vee or grah-vay). Hist. Scots law. An aggravated degree of theft that, in ancient times, was punishable by death.

furtum manifestum (far-tam man-ah-fes-tam). [Latin] “open theft”] Roman law. A theft in which the thief is directed in the act. • A theft was “manifest” if the thief was caught on the day of the theft with the stolen property before reaching the place where he intended to take it. Fourfold damages were available by means of actio furti. (See actio furti under ACTIO.) A theft other than this type was known as furtum nec manifestum.

furtum oblatum (far-tam ah-blay-tam). [Latin] “offered theft”] Roman law. 1. A theft in which the thief offers stolen property to a person who is then found with the goods. • The person found in possession of the stolen goods could bring an action against the true thief. 2. The planting of stolen goods.

furtum possessivum (far-tam pa-zes[h]-ee-oh-nis). [Latin “theft of possession”] Roman law. The owner’s dishonest removal of a thing from the control of a pledgee, a bona fide possessor, a commodatarv with a lien, or a usufructuary.

furtum rei (far-tam ree-i). [Latin “theft of a thing”] Roman law. Ordinary theft, involving the dishonest taking of something to which the taker had no right.

furtum usus (far-tam yoo-sas or yoo-zas). [Latin “theft of the use of a thing”] Roman law. 1. A bailee’s dishonest use of the thing bailed or lent. 2. A creditor’s dishonest use of a pledge (pignus) without contractual authority.

Fusian Caninian law. See Lex Furia Caninia.

fustis (fas-tis). Hist. 1. A staff used in making livery of seisin. 2. A baton or club.

futhwite (footh-wIt). Hist. A fine for fighting or breaking the peace. — Also termed fithwite.

future-acquired property. See after-acquired property (1).

future advance. (1805) Money secured by an original security agreement even though it is lent after the security interest has attached. [Cases: Secured Transactions C-20, 114.]

future-advance clause. (1911) A contractual term in a security agreement covering additional loaned amounts on present collateral or collateral to be acquired in the future, regardless of whether the secured party is obliged to make the advances; esp., a provision in an open-end mortgage or deed of trust allowing the borrower to borrow additional sums in the future, secured under the same instrument and by the same security. • This type of clause makes a new security agreement unnecessary when the secured creditor makes a future loan to the debtor. [Cases: Mortgages C-16, 116; Secured Transactions C-20, 114.] future-advances mortgage. See mortgage.

future consideration. See consideration (1).

future estate. See future interest under interest (2).

future goods. See goods.

future interest. See interest (2).

future performance. See performance.

futures, n. 1. Standardized assets (such as commodities, stocks, or foreign currencies) bought or sold for future acceptance or delivery. • Also termed financial futures. 2. Futures contract. 3. Future claimants, esp. those who would become members of a class of persons injured by a defendant and thus included in a class action.

futures-commission merchant. An individual or firm that executes orders to buy and sell futures or futures options. [Cases: Commodity Futures Trading Regulation C-8, 20, 26.]

futures contract. An agreement to buy or sell a standardized asset (such as a commodity, stock, or foreign currency) at a fixed price at a future time, usu. during a particular time of a month. • Futures contracts are traded on exchanges such as the Chicago Board of Trade or the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. • Often shortened to futures. • Also termed futures agreement; time-bargain. Cf. forward contract under contract; leverage contract; option. [Cases: Commodity Futures Trading Regulation C-10.] futures market. See market.

futures option. See option.

futures trading. The buying and selling of futures contracts, usu. on formal exchanges. [Cases: Commodity Futures Trading Regulation C-11.] future use. See contingent use under use (4).

future value. See value (2).

GAAP (gap). abbr. Generally Accepted Accounting Principles.

GAAS (gas). abbr. Generally Accepted Auditing Standards.

gabel (ga-bel). Hist. 1. A tax or duty on movables. 2. Gavel (2). — Also spelled gabelle. See land-gavel.

gabelle (ga-bel). Hist. 1. A tax or duty on merchandise. 2. A peasant villager, esp. one who pays rent or tribute. See gavel (1). — Also spelled gabelle; gavella.

gage (gayj), n. (14c) A pledge, pawn, or other thing deposited as security for performance. • An archaic use of this word corresponded to the way wage was formerly used in legal contexts: a gager del ley, for example, was an earlier form of wager of law, while gager de deliverance had the same meaning as wager of deliverance. Cf. wage (2).

“A single root has sent out many branches which overshadow large fields of law. Gage, engagement, wage, wages, wager, wed, wedding, the Scottish wadset, all spring from one root. In particular we must notice that the word ‘gage,’ in Latin vadium, is applied indiscriminately to movables and immovables, to transactions in which a gage is given and to those in which a gage is taken. When a lord has seized his tenant’s goods in distress they are in his hands a gage for the payment of the rent that is in arrear, and the sheriff is always taking gages from those who have no mind to give them. The notion expressed by the word seems to be that expressed by our ‘security’...” 2 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I (117-18 (2d ed. 1899).

gage, vb. (14c) To pawn or pledge; to give as security for. • Gage is an older form of wage, and often appeared as a phrase, gager deliverance.

“Though the word Gage be retained, as it is a Substantive, yet as it is a verb, use hath turned the Gage into Wage so as it is oftener written Wage, as to Wage Deliverance, to give security, that a thing shall be delivered. For, if he that disadvantaged, being sued, have not delivered the thing that was distrained, then he shall not onely avow the Distress, but Gager Deliverance, put in surety, that he will deliver them.” Thomas Blount, Nomo Lexicon. A Law-Dictionary (1670).

gager (gay-jar), n. The giving of security; the transaction in which one gives a gage. See gage.

gager del ley. See wager of law.

gag order. (1952) 1. A judge’s order directing parties, attorneys, witnesses, or journalists to refrain from publicly discussing the facts of a case. • When directed to the press, such an order is generally unconstitutional under the First Amendment. [Cases: Criminal Law 633.33; Federal Civil Procedure 1951; Trial 18. 20.] 2. A judge’s order that an unruly defendant be bound and gagged during trial to prevent further interruptions. [Cases: Criminal Law 637.]

gain, n. (14c) 1. An increase in amount, degree, or value.

pecuniary gain. (18c) 1. A gain of money or of something having monetary value. 2. Criminal law. Any monetary or economic gain that serves as an impetus for the commission of an offense. • In most states, an offense and its punishment are aggravated if the offense was committed for pecuniary gain. Murder, for example, is often aggravated to capital murder if the murderer is paid to commit the crime. See solicitation (2).

2. Excess of receipts over expenditures or sale price over cost. See profit (1). 3. Tax. The excess of the amount realized from a sale or other disposition of property over the property’s adjusted value. IRC (26 USCA) § 1001. — Also termed realized gain; net gain; ordinary gain; extraordinary gain. (in senses 2 & 3) business gain. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3178–3216.]

capital gain. See capital gain.

extraordinary gain. (16c) A gain that is both unusual and infrequent, such as the gain realized from selling a large segment of a business.

ordinary gain. (1945) A gain from the sale or exchange of a noncapital asset. Cf. capital gain.

recognized gain. (1951) The portion of a gain that is subject to income taxation. IRC (26 USCA) § 1001(c). See boot (1). [Cases: Internal Revenue 3178–3216.]

4. (pl.) Civil law. A type of community property that reflects the increase in property value brought about by the spouses’ common skill or labor. See community property; acquit. [Cases: Husband and Wife 258.]

gainage. See wainage (2).

gainful employment. See employment.

gainor. See socman.

gains, n. See gain.

GAL. abbr. See guardian ad litem under guardian.

gale (gav). (17c) Hist. 1. A periodic payment of rent. See gavel (2). 2. Rent paid by a free miner (the galee) for the right to mine a plot of land. 3. A license to mine a plot of land. • A gale could be conveyed or devised. 4. The land so licensed.

Gallagher agreement. (1977) A contract that gives one codefendant the right to settle with the plaintiff for a fixed sum at any time during trial and that guarantees payment of the sum regardless of the trial’s outcome. City of Tucson v. Gallagher, 493 P.2d 1197 (Ariz. 1972). Cf. Mary Carter agreement. [Cases: Compromise and Settlement 100.]
gallows. (bef. 12c) A wooden frame consisting of two upright posts and a crossbeam, from which condemned criminals are hanged by a rope.

gambler. See COMMON GAMBLER.

gambling, n. (18c) The act of risking something of value, esp. money, for a chance to win a prize. Gambling is regulated by state and federal law. 18 USCA §§ 1081 et seq. — Also termed gaming. See COMMON GAMBLER. [Cases: Gaming (§ 1, 4.)]

Indian gambling. Gambling conducted by a federally recognized Indian tribe and regulated by federal law.

gambling contract. See CONTRACT.

gambling device. Any thing, such as cards, dice, or an electronic or mechanical contrivance, that allows a person to play a game of chance in which money may be won or lost. • Gambling devices are regulated by law, and the use or possession of a gambling device can be illegal. — Also termed gaming device.

gambling place. Any location where gambling occurs. 18 USCA § 1081. — Also termed gaming house; gaming room.

gambling policy. See wager policy under INSURANCE POLICY.

gambling verdict. See chance verdict under VERDICT.

game, n. (13c) 1. Wild animals and birds considered as objects of pursuit, for food or sport; esp., animals for which one must have a license to hunt. [Cases: Game (§ 2.)] 2. A contest, for amusement or for a prize, whose outcome depends on the skill, strength, or luck of the players. [Cases: Gaming (§ 6.)]

Game of chance. A game whose outcome is determined by luck rather than skill. See GAMBLING DEVICE. [Cases: Gaming (§ 6); Lotteries (§ 3.)]

“Games of chance do not cease to be such merely because they call for the exercise of skill by the players, nor do games of skill cease to be so because at times _ . . . _ their result is determined by some unforeseen accident, usually called ‘luck.’ According to some cases, the test of the character of the game is not whether it contains an element of chance or an element of skill, but which of these is the dominating element that determines the result of the game. . . . And it has been said that ‘it is the character of the game, and not the skill or want of skill of the player,’ which determines whether a game is one of chance or skill.” 38 Am. Jur. 2d Gambling § 4, at 109–110 (1968).

game of skill. A game in which the outcome is determined by a player’s superior knowledge or ability, not chance. [Cases: Gaming (§ 6.)]

Percentage game. A game of chance from which the house collects an amount calculated as a percentage of the wagers made or the sums won. • Percentage games are illegal in many states. [Cases: Gaming (§ 6.)] game, vb. To gamble; to play for a stake.

gamet intrafallopian transfer. (ca. 1984) A procedure in which mature eggs are implanted in a woman’s fallopian tubes and fertilized with semen. — Abbreviated GIFT. — Also termed gamete intrafallopian-tube transfer. Cf. ZYGOTE INTRAFALLOPIAN TRANSFER; ARTIFICIAL INSEMINATION; IN VITRO FERTILIZATION.

Ganancial (go-nə-nə-shəl), adj. (1843) Of, relating to, or consisting of community property < a spouse’s ganancial rights. > See COMMUNITY PROPERTY.

“The Spanish (more correctly, the Castilian) form of community property, called the ‘ganancial’ system, is found today in nine states of the United States, the Spanish-American republics of Central and South America, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico and the Philippine Republic.” Robert L. Menell & Thomas M. Boykoff, Community Property in a Nutshell 10 (2d ed. 1988).

G & A. abbr. See general administrative expense under EXPENSE.

gang. (15c) A group of persons who go about together or act in concert, esp. for antisocial or criminal purposes. • Many gangs have common identifying signs and symbols, such as hand signals and distinctive colors. — Also termed street gang.

gangland. (ca. 1912) The world of criminal gangs and organized crime.

Gangster. A member of a criminal gang or an organized-crime syndicate.

Ganser’s syndrome (gahn-zər or gan-sər). (1968) An abnormality characterized by the giving of irrelevant and nonsensical answers to questions. • Prisoners have been known to feign this syndrome in an attempt to obtain leniency.

gantlet (gawnt-lit). [fr. Swedish gata “lane” + lopp “course”] (15c) Hist. A former military punishment in which the offender was stripped to the waist and forced to run between two rows of soldiers who gave him lashes as he passed. 2. A series of severe troubles or difficulties; an ordeal. — Also spelled gauntlet; (archaically) gantlope.

gaal delivery. See JAIL DELIVERY.
garantor. See jailer.

garantia. See jailer.

garandia. See jailer.

gap. See gap period.

gap creditor. See creditor.

gap. See gap period.

gap-filler. (15c) A rule that supplies a contractual term that the parties failed to include in the contract. For example, if the contract does not contain a sales price, UCC § 2-305(1) establishes the price as being a reasonable one at the time of delivery. Cf. default rule.

"Contracts often have gaps in them, intentional or inadvertent. Gaps arise, too, out of the 'battle of the forms' under sections 2-204 and 2-207. Some gaps are more or less complete, others only partial. Article 2 of the Code includes numerous gap filler provisions which taken together constitute a kind of standardized statutory contract." J. White & Robert S. Summers, Uniform Commercial Code § 3-4 (4th ed. 1995).

gap financing. See financing.

gap period. (1978) Bankruptcy. The duration of time between the filing of an involuntary bankruptcy petition and the entry of the order for relief. — Often shortened to gap. [Cases: Bankruptcy C≈ 2281.]

gap report. (1984) In the making of federal court rules, a report that explains any changes made by an advisory committee in the language of a proposed amendment to a procedural rule after its publication for comment. Before advisory committees began issuing gap reports in the late 1980s, there were complaints that the public record did not show why changes were made after the public-comment period. The five advisory committees — for appellate, bankruptcy, civil, criminal, and evidence rules — therefore began filing the reports to fill in the "gaps" in the record. Although the phrase is sometimes written in capital letters (GAP report), it is not an acronym.

gap theory. Insurance. The principle that a tortfeasor will be considered underinsured if his or her liability-insurance coverage — although legally adequate — is less than the injured party's underinsured-motorist coverage. This principle allows an injured party to invoke underinsured-motorist coverage. Cf. excess theory. [Cases: Insurance C≈ 2787.] garageman's lien. See mechanic's lien under lien.

garauntor (gar- on-tor). [Law French] Hist. A warrantor of land. A garanteon was obligated to defend the title and seisin of the alienee. If the alienee was evicted, the garanteon had to provide the alienee with other land of equal value.

Garcia hearing (gahr-see-a). (1981) Criminal procedure. A hearing held to ensure that a defendant who is one of two or more defendants represented by the same attorney understands (1) the risk of a conflict of interest inherent in this type of representation, and (2) that he or she is entitled to the services of an attorney who does not represent anyone else in the defendant's case.

United States v. Garcia, 517 F.2d 272 (5th Cir. 1975). See conflict of interest (2). [Cases: Criminal Law C≈ 1790.]

gard (ga-hrd). [Law French] Hist. 1. Wardship or custody of a person. 2. A precinct (or ward) of a city. Also spelled garde; gardia.

garde (ga-hrd). [French] 1. Civil law. A relationship that gives rise to a person's liability when an injury is caused by a thing, whether animate or inanimate, that is considered by law to be that person's responsibility or to be in that person's custody. 2. See gard.

gardein (ga-hr-deen). [Law French] Hist. A guardian or keeper. Also spelled gardian; gardien; gardeyn.

gardia (ga-hr-dee-a). GARD.

Garmon doctrine. See Garmon preemption under preemption.

Garmon preemption. See preemption.

garnish, n. (16c) Hist. Money exacted from a new owner by other owners or as a jailer's fee. This practice was banned in England in 1815.

garnish, vb. [Old French garnir "to warn" "to prepare"] (16c) 1. Hist. To notify or warn (a person) of certain debts that must be paid before the person is entitled to receive property as an heir. 2. To subject (property) to garnishment; to attach (property held by a third party) in order to satisfy a debt. 3. To notify (a person, bank, etc.) that a garnishment proceeding has been undertaken and that the one receiving notice may be liable as stakeholder or custodian of the defendant's property. Also termed garnishee; (in senses 2 & 3) factorize. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure C≈ 601; Garnishment C≈ 1.] — garnishable, adj.

garnishee (gahr-ni-shee), n. (17c) A person or institution (such as a bank) that is indebted to or is bailee for another whose property has been subjected to garnishment. Also termed garnishee-defendant (as opposed to the "principal defendant," i.e., the primary debtor). [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure C≈ 601; Garnishment C≈ 13–24.] garnishee (gahr-ni-shee), vb. See garnish.

garnisher. (16c) A creditor who initiates a garnishment action to reach the debtor's property that is thought to be held or owed by a third party (the garnishee). — Also spelled garnishor. [Cases: Garnishment C=11.]

garnishment, n. (16c) 1. A judicial proceeding in which a creditor (or potential creditor) asks the court to order a third party who is indebted to or is bailee for the debtor to turn over to the creditor any of the debtor's property (such as wages or bank accounts) held by that third party. • A plaintiff initiates a garnishment action as a means of either prejudgment seizure or postjudgment collection. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure C=601; Garnishment C=64, 118.]

"Garnishment is an inquisitorial proceeding, affording a harsh and extraordinary remedy. It is an anomaly, a statutory invention sui generis, with no affinity to any action known to the common law... It is a method of seizure: but it is not a 'levy' in the usual acceptance of that term. It is a proceeding by which a diligent creditor may legally obtain preference over other creditors; and it is in the nature of a creditor's bill, or a sequestration of the effects of a debtor in the hands of his debtor." 38 C.J.S. Garnishment § 3, at 248–50 (2003).

wrongful garnishment. (1896) 1. An improper or tortious garnishment. [Cases: Garnishment C=122, 248.] 2. A cause of action against a garnisher for improperly or tortiously filing a garnishment proceeding. [Cases: Garnishment C=248–251.]

2. The judicial order by which such a turnover is effected. Cf. ATTACHMENT (1); SEQUESTRATION (1).

garnishment lien. See LIEN.

garnishor. See GARNISHER.

Garrity statement (gar-a-tee). (1967) A public employee's oral or written report (as of an incident) obtained under a threat of termination of employment. • A public employee usu. makes a Garrity statement in the course of an internal investigation (as by a police department). Because a Garrity statement is coerced, the statement and any evidence obtained as a result of it cannot be used in a later criminal prosecution against the public employee. The statement and evidence may be used only to evaluate the employee's performance. Garrity v. New Jersey, 385 U.S. 493, 87 S.Ct. 616 (1967).

garsunne. [Old English] A fine; an amercement.

gas-balancing agreement. Oil & gas. A contract among owners of the production of a gas well to balance production if one owner sells more of the gas stream than the other owners do.

"Gas balancing agreements address the problem of imbalances in production from a gas well or field. Co-owners frequently sell their share of production to different purchasers... Even when co-owners sell to the same purchaser, their contracts are likely to be signed at different times and to have different price and take provisions. Thus, imbalances are inevitable." John S. Lowe, Oil and Gas Law in a Nutshell 385 (3d ed. 1995).

gas chamber. (ca. 1945) A small, sealed room in which a capital punishment is carried out by strapping the prisoner into a chair and releasing poisonous fumes.

gas contract. Oil & gas. An agreement for the sale of natural gas. [Cases: Gas C=14.1(3).]

gas sold. Oil & gas. Natural gas that is actually sold but not necessarily all that a well produces. • The term is used in natural-gas leases.

gastonette. (1988) A dilatory "dance" in which each of the two responsible parties waits until the other party acts — so that the delay seems interminable; esp., a standoff occurring when two courts simultaneously hear related claims arising from the same bases and delay acting while each court waits for the other to act first. • The term was coined by Judge Jon O. Newman in In re McLean Industries, Inc., 857 F.2d 88, 90 (2d Cir. 1988), on the model of "After you, my dear Alphonse." "No, after you, Gaston.

gas used. Oil & gas. Natural gas that is consumed while a well is in operation but that is not necessarily sold.

gaunder (gaj-ar). (15c) A surveying officer who examines containers of liquids to give them a mark of allowance, as containing the lawful measure.

gauntlet. See GANTLET.

gavel (gav-el). (bef. 12c) 1. Hist. A tribute, toll, or custom paid to a superior. 2. Hist. An annual payment of rent or revenue, esp. payment in kind, such as gavel-corn, gavel-malt, or oat-gavel. — Sometimes spelled gabel. 3. A mallet used by a presiding officer, often a judge, to bring a meeting or court to order.

gavelbred (gav-el-bred). Hist. Rent payable in bread, corn, or some other provision; rent payable in kind.

gavel (gav-el). (14c) Hist. A writ used in Kent and London to recover rent from land held in gavelkind. See cessavit gavelgeld (gav-al-geld). Hist. 1. Property that yields a profit or a toll. 2. The tribute or toll itself.

gavelherte (gav-al-hert). Hist. A service of plowing performed by a customary tenant.

gaveling man (gav-al-ing man or man). Hist. See GAVELMAN.

gavelkind (gav-al-kind). (14c) Hist. 1. A species of socage tenure arising in land that has descended equally to the decedent's sons. • It was widespread before 1066, when it was mainly superseded by primogeniture. This property-division technique was then largely limited to Kent. The person holding land in this manner enjoyed several advantages not available under the common law: the land could be disposed of by will, did not escheat for felony other than treason or for want of heirs, and was alienable by an heir at age 15. Gavelkind was abolished in 1925. Although the etymology of this term was much debated in the 19th century, the explanation given in the first quotation below appears to be the true one. 2. Land that yields gavel service.

"Gavelfol, or gavel, was a word of frequent use before the Norman Conquest, and signified not only a tribute, tax, or custom, but also rent in general; and... under this term were comprehended all socage services whatsoever which lay in render or reasance, the word being often compounded with and applied to the particulars wherein the payment or performance of the service consisted; as corn-gavel, or gavel-corn, was a corn-rent, and gavel-earth was a service of 'earring' or ploughing. The tenant from whom such services were due was called a gavelman and 'gavel-kind' being taken as a compound of this word 'gavel' and 'gekynde,' which is nature, kind, quality (usually appearing under the form 'gablungc' in the most ancient records), the proper significations of the term will be land of the kind or nature which yielded rent, or 'censual land,' which may be compared to rent-service land as distinguished from knight-service land, which being held by free military service yielded no 'cens' or rent in money, provision, or works: so that the lands held by the old English tenure are known in Kent as gavelkind which in other parts of the country are distinguished by the name of socage. Charles L. Elton & Herbert J.H. Mackay, Robinson on Gavelkind S-6 (5th ed. 1897).

"The term 'gavel-kind' has by the modern usage acquired [a] significiation more confined as to the properties contained under it, whereas extensive in point of place since at this day it is generally used to denote the partibility of the land, exclusive of all other customary qualities; nor is the word 'gavelkind' in common parlance confined to Kentish lands, but is equally and indifferently applied to all partible lands wherever they lie." Id. at 9.

"Archbishop Hubert Walter, who presided in the king's court... obtained from King John a charter empowering him and his successors to convert into military fees the tenements that were holden of their church in gavelkind. The archbishop's main object may have been to get money in the form of rents and quitrents, instead of provender and boonworks, 'gavel-corn' and 'gavel-swine,' 'gavel-erth' and 'gavel-nip.'..." 2 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward 1273 (2d ed. 1899).

gavelman (gav-al-man). Hist. A tenant who is liable for money rent in addition to a customary service to the lord. • A gavelman was formerly a villein who had been released from villenage in consideration of money rent. — Also termed gaveling man.

gavelmed (gav-al-meed). Hist. A tenant's customary service of mowing the lord's meadowland or grass for hay. — Also spelled gavelmead.

gavelrep (gav-al-reep). Hist. A tenant's duty to reap the lord's fields at the lord's command; bedrip. — Also spelled gavelrip.

gavel through. Parliamentary law. To put (a question) to a vote before any member can obtain the floor. • The practice of "gaveling through" a motion is improper under parliamentary law.

"It should be noted that, under legitimate parliamentary procedure, there is no such thing as 'gaveling through' a measure. The right of members to debate or introduce secondary motions cannot be cut off by the chair's attempting to put a question to vote so quickly that no member can get the floor, even when the chair first states the question or when he believes debate is ended. Debate is not closed by the presiding officer's rising to put the question." Henry M. Robert, Robert's Rules of Order Newly Revised § 43, at 374 (10th ed. 2000).

gavelwerk (gav-ol-wark). Hist. Customary service, either by the tenant's own hands or with the aid of the tenant's carts or carriages.

general maritime law. The body of U.S. legal precedents and doctrines developed through caselaw in maritime and admiralty litigation. General maritime law is a branch of federal common law. It is distinguished from statutory law. Cf. MARITIME LAW; LAW OF THE SEA. [Cases: Admiralty C-1.5.]

'The general maritime law is characterized by the expansive and dominant role played by federal courts in fashioning and applying its precepts to new situations. Large areas of maritime tort law have not been touched by legislation, these are left to the federal courts to define and fill. In areas preempted by legislation, federal courts may not establish principles in derogation of the congressional mandate. However, in the framework of admiralty jurisdiction, federal courts may still play an active role in interpreting statutes, filling gaps, and coordinating legislation with the general maritime law." general principle of law. 1. A principle widely recognized by peoples whose legal order has attained a certain level of sophistication. 2. Int'l law. A principle that gives rise to international legal obligations.

"[T]he adjective 'general' does not refer to several or many orders [i.e., legal systems] as do the general principles of national law, but indicates principles which are applied generally in all cases of the same kind which arise in international law (e.g. the principle of nonintervention)." Hermann Mosler, "General Principles of Law," in 2 Encyclopedia of Public International Law 512, 512 (1995).

3. A principle recognized in all kinds of legal relations, regardless of the legal system to which it belongs (state law, federal law, international law, etc.). — Also termed general legal principle.

General Welfare Clause. (1898) U.S. Const. art. 1, § 8, cl. 1, which empowers Congress to levy taxes and pay debts in order to provide for the country's general welfare. • The Supreme Court has broadly interpreted this clause to allow Congress to create, for example, the social-security system. — Also termed Welfare Clause. [Cases: United States <= 22.]

general words. (18c) Semantically broad expression; esp., language used in deeds to convey not only the specific property described in the conveyance but also all easements, privileges, and appurtenances that may belong to the property. [Cases: Deeds <= 117.]

generation. (14c) 1. A single degree or stage in the succession of persons in natural descent. 2. The average time span between the birth of parents and the birth of their children.

generation-skipping tax. See tax.

generation-skipping transfer. (1979) Wills & trusts. A conveyance of assets to a "skip person," that is, a person more than one generation removed from the transferor. • For example, a conveyance either directly or in trust from a grandparent to a grandchild is a generation-skipping transfer subject to a generation-skipping transfer tax. IRC (26 USCA) §§ 2601–2663. See generation-skipping transfer tax under tax; generation-skipping trust under trust; skip person.

generation-skipping transfer tax. See tax.

generation-skipping trust. See trust.

generic, adj. (1846) Trademarks. 1. Common or descriptive, and thus not eligible for trademark protection; nonproprietary . [Cases: Trademarks <= 1034.] 2. Not having a trademark or brand name <generic drugs>.

genericality. See genericness.

generic burglary. See burglary.

generic claim. See patent claim.

generic drug. See drug.

generic-drug law. (1977) A statute that allows pharmacists to substitute a generic drug for a brand-name drug under specified conditions. • Most states have enacted generic-drug laws to ensure that less-expensive generic drugs are available to consumers.

genericide (ja-ner-a-stid). Trademarks. The loss or cancellation of a trademark that no longer distinguishes the owner's product from others' products. • Genericide occurs when a trademark becomes such a household name that the consuming public begins to think of the mark not as a brand name but as a synonym for the product itself. Examples of trademarks that have been "killed" by genericide include aspirin and escalator. [Cases: Trademarks <= 1166.]

genericism (ja-ner-a-siz-am). See genericness.

generic name. (1872) Trademarks. A term that describes something generally without designating the thing's source or creator, such as the word car or sink. • A generic name cannot be protected as a trademark for the thing it denotes; e.g., Apple can be a trademark for computers but not for apples. — Also termed generic term; generic mark; common descriptive name. [Cases: Trademarks <= 1034.]

genericness, n. (20c) The state or condition of being generic as affirmative defense of genericness in a trademark suit. — Also termed genericality; genericism.

generic swap. See plain-vanilla swap under interest-rate swap. generic term. See generic name.

genetic father. See biological father under father.

-genetic fingerprinting. See dna identification.

-genetic-marker test. A medical method of testing tissue samples used in paternity and illegitimacy cases to determine whether a particular man could be the father of a child. • This test represents a medical advance over blood-grouping tests. It analyzes DNA and is much more precise in assessing the probability of paternity. — Abbr. GMT. See paternity test. Cf. blood-grouping test; human leukocyte antigen test. [Cases: Children Out-of-Wedlock C=45, 58.]

genetic mother. See biological mother under mother.

-genetic parent. See biological parent under parent.

Geneva Conventions of 1949 (ja-nee-vuh). Four international agreements dealing with the protection of wounded members of the armed forces, the treatment of prisoners of war, and the protection of civilians during international armed conflicts. • Common Article 3 of the Conventions proclaims certain minimum standards of treatment that are applicable to noninternational armed conflicts. The humanitarian-law protection established in these four agreements was amplified in 1977 by the two Protocols Additional to the Geneva Conventions. In common parlance, people refer to the Geneva Convention as if there were just one agreement. Cf. laws of war. [Cases: Treaties C=8.]

Geneva Phonograms Convention. A 1971 treaty requiring signatories to protect phonorecord producers against piracy and the importation of pirated copies, by copyright protection, unfair-competition law, or criminal sanctions. • The treaty was drafted by representatives from WIPO and UNESCO to correct weaknesses in the Rome Convention. — Also termed Convention for the Protection of Producers of Phonograms Against Unauthorized Duplication of Their Phonograms; Phonograms Convention.

genocide (jen-oh-zid). (ca. 1944) Int'l law. An international crime involving acts causing serious physical and mental harm with the intent to destroy, partially or entirely, a national, ethnic, racial, or religious group. • The widely ratified Genocide Convention of 1948 defines the crime. The International Criminal Court has jurisdiction to try those accused of genocide. Many nations also have criminal laws providing punishment for individuals convicted of genocide. Cf. ethnic cleansing. [Cases: Aliens, Immigration, and Citizenship C=763.]

The ... draft Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide was adopted by the General Assembly on December 9, 1948 and unanimously recommended for adherence to the members of the United Nations. It came into force in October, 1950 . . . . The term ‘genocide’ was first proposed by Dr. Lemkin in the course of the war and incorporated on his suggestion into the indictment of the Major German War Criminals. The [U.N. General Assembly Resolution on Genocide of December 11, 1946, and the Convention of 1948, are also the result of a remarkable one-man campaign.” Georg Schwarzenberger, Power Politics: A Study of International Society 634 (2nd ed. 1951).
genuine issue of material fact. (1938) Civil procedure. In the law of summary judgments, a triable, substantial, or real question of fact supported by substantial evidence.
- An issue of this kind precludes entry of summary judgment. [Cases: Federal Civil Procedure ¬¬ 2470, 2470.1; Judgment ¬¬ 181(2), 185(6)]

genus (jee-nas or jen-as). (16c) A general class comprising several species or divisions. In legal usage, the terms genus and (sometimes) species invoke the taxonomic classification of life forms in biological science. For example, patent law is a species within the genus of intellectual property; burglary is a species within the genus of crime. In the law of sales, genus referred to fungibles, while species referred to specific, individual items. Cf. species (2).

genus claim. See generic claim under patent claim.

genus nunquam perit (jee-nas n3n kwam per-it). [Latin] Hist. The class never perishes. The phrase appeared in reference to a quantity of contracted-for goods of a certain class (rather than a single item), the destruction of which did not discharge the seller’s obligation.

geodetic-survey system (jee-od-3t-ik). (1990) A federally created land-description method consisting of nationwide marks (or benches) made at longitude and latitude points. The geodetic-survey system integrates most of the real property in the United States into one unified form of measurement.

geographically descriptive trademark. See trademark.

geographic market. See market.

geographic name. See name.

geography of crime. See environmental criminology under criminology.

Georgia-Pacific analysis. Patents. A 15-factor test for setting a reasonable royalty in infringement suits. Among other factors, the test considers what a prudent licensee would have paid while still being able to earn a profit. Georgia-Pacific Corp. v. U.S. Plywood Corp., 318 F. Supp. 1116 (S.D.N.Y. 1970). [Cases: Patents ¬¬ 319(1).]

German (jar-man), adj. (14c) Having the same parents or grandparents; closely related.

brother-German. See brother.

cousin-German. See cousin (1).

germane (jar-may-n), adj. (14c) Relevant; pertinent (the case/law cited in the brief was not germane to the legal issue pending before the court). Under parliamentary law, debate and amendments are in order only if they are germane to the motion under consideration.

germanus (jar-may-nas). [Latin] Roman law. 1. adj. Having the same father and mother. See frater germanus under frater. 2. n. A whole brother; a child of both of one’s own parents.

gerrymandering (jer-3man-d3r-ing or ger-ee-3r-) (1812) 1. The practice of dividing a geographical area into electoral districts, often of highly irregular shape, to give one political party an unfair advantage by diluting the opposition’s voting strength. When Massachusetts Governor Elbridge Gerry ran for reelection in 1812, members of his political party, the Anti-Federalists, altered the state’s voting districts to benefit the party. One newly created district resembled a salamander, inspiring a critic to coin the word gerrymander by combining the governor’s name, Gerry, with the ending of salamander. Gerry was not reelected governor, but was elected as James Madison’s vice president. Also termed political gerrymandering. [Cases: Constitutional Law ¬¬ 3285, 365(8); Elections ¬¬ 12(6).] 2. The practice of dividing any geographical or jurisdictional area into political units (such as school districts) to give some group a special advantage. Also termed jurisdictional gerrymandering. Cf. reapportionment. [Cases: Schools ¬¬ 32.] ‒ gerrymander, vb.

delineational gerrymandering. Gerrymandering by varying the districts’ shape. There are three kinds of delineational gerrymandering: cracking (or fracturing), packing, and stacking. See cracking; packing; stacking (2).

institutional gerrymandering. Gerrymandering by means of varying the number of representatives per district.

gersum (gar-sam). [Hist.] 1. Money paid for a thing; specif., compensation paid by a tenant to a superior on entering a holding. 2. A penalty or amercement paid for an offense. Also spelled gersumme; gersuma; gersume; grassum. 3. gressume.

gersumarius (jar-sly-mair-ee-as). Hist. Fineable; liable to be fined at the discretion of a feudal superior. A villein who gave his daughter in marriage was gersumarius — he was liable to pay a fine to the lord.

Geschmacksmuster. Patents. [German] See design patent under patent.

Gestalt factors. The criteria that a court uses in a minimum-contacts analysis to determine the reasonableness of subjecting a nonresident to personal jurisdiction. These fairness criteria include (1) the defendant’s burden of making a personal appearance, (2) the forum state’s interest in adjudicating the dispute, (3) the plaintiff’s interest in obtaining convenient and effective relief, (4) the judicial system’s interest in arriving at the most effective resolution of the controversy, and (5) the common interests of all sovereigns in promoting substantive social policies. These factors were articulated by the United States Supreme Court in Burger King Corp. v. Rudzewicz, 471 U.S. 462, 478, 105 S.Ct. 2174, 2185 (1985), but the Court has never used the term Gestalt factors; it was coined in Donatelli v. National Hockey League, 893 F.2d 459, 465 (1st Cir.) gestu et fama. See secret detainee under detainee.

ghosting. The assumption of the identity of a deceased person to conceal one's true identity. Cf. identity theft.

gibbet (jib-it), n. (13c) Hist. A post with one arm extending from the top, from which criminals are either executed by hanging or suspended after death as a warning to other potential offenders; a type of gallows.

double gibbet. A gibbet with two arms extending from its top so that it resembles a capital "T."

Gibbet law. See Halifax law.

GIC. See guaranteed investment contract under investment contract.

GIFT. abbr. GANMETE INTRAPALLOPIAN TRANSFER.

gift, n. (12c) 1. The voluntary transfer of property to another without compensation. [Cases: Gifts (181)] 2. A thing so transferred. — gift, vb.

absolute gift. See inter vivos gift.

anatomical gift. (1971) A testamentary donation of a bodily organ or organs, esp. for transplant or for medical research. • The procedures for making an anatomical gift are set forth in the Uniform Anatomical Gift Act, which has been adopted in every state. [Cases: Dead Bodies (181)] antenuptial gift. See prenuptial gift.

charitable gift. An inter vivos or testamentary donation to a nonprofit organization for the relief of poverty, the advancement of education, the advancement of religion, the promotion of health, governmental, or municipal purposes, and other purposes the accomplishment of which is beneficial to the community. Restatement (Second) of Trusts § 368 (1959). • When the beneficiary is a religious organization or the gift is intended for a religious purpose, it is sometimes also termed a pious gift. [Cases: Charities (181-17)] class gift. (1949) A gift to a group of persons, uncertain in number at the time of the gift but to be ascertained at a future time, who are all to take in definite proportions, the share of each being dependent on the ultimate number in the group.

The typical class gift is to "children," "issue," "heirs," "brothers and sisters," "nieces and nephews," "grandchildren." A class gift is one in which the donor intends that the number of donees, from the time of the delivery of the instrument of gift in the case of an inter vivos gift, or from the time of the execution of the will in the case of the testamentary gift, is subject to fluctuation by way of increase or decrease, or by way of increase only, or by way of decrease only, depending on the circumstances of the gift. Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 136 (2d ed. 1984).

completed gift. (1952) A gift that is no longer in the donor's possession and control. • Only a completed gift is taxable under the gift tax.

gift causa mortis (kaw zo mor-tis), (18c) A gift made in contemplation of the donor's imminent death. • The three essentials are that (1) the gift must be made with a view to the donor's present illness or peril, (2) the donor must actually die from that illness or peril, without ever recovering, and (3) there must be a delivery. Even though causa mortis is the more usual word order in modern law, the correct Latin phrasing is mortis causa — hence gift mortis causa. • Also termed donatio causa mortis; donatio mortis causa; gift in contemplation of death; transfer in contemplation of death. See contemplation of death. [Cases: Gifts (181-53–68).]
"Gifts causa mortis" are conditional, like legacies: and it is essential to them that the donor make them in his last illness, or in contemplation and expectation of death; and with reference to their effect after his death, they are good, notwithstanding a previous will: and if he recovers, the gift becomes void." 2 James Kent, Commentaries on American Law *444 (George Comstock ed., 11th ed. 1866).

A 'gift causa mortis' . . . is testamentary, and it is similar to testamentary disposition in the respect that there remains with the donor the power to revoke the gift until his death. In some respects, a gift causa mortis may be said to resemble a contract, for mutual consent and the concurrent will of both parties are necessary to the validity of the transfer." 38A C.J.S. Gifts § 85, at 276-77 (1936).

Gift in contemplation of death. See gift causa mortis.

Gift inter vivos. See inter vivos gift.

Gift in trust. (18c) A gift of legal title to property to someone who will act as trustee for the benefit of a beneficiary.

Gift over. (18c) A property gift (esp. by will) that takes effect after the expiration of a preceding estate in the property (such as a life estate or fee simple determinable) <to Sarah for life, with gift over to Don in fee>. [Cases: Wills <614(2, 3).]

Gift splitting. See split gift.

Gratuitous gift. A gift made without consideration, as most gifts are. • Strictly speaking, the term looks redundant, but it answers to the donum gratuitum of Roman law.

Inter vivos gift (in-tar vi-vohs or veey-vohs). (1848) A gift of personal property made during the donor's lifetime and delivered to the donee with the intention of irrevocably surrendering control over the property. • Also termed gift inter vivos; lifetime gift; absolute gift. [Cases: Gifts <1-33.]

Lifetime gift. See inter vivos gift.

Oneros gift (ohn-a-ryes or on-n-a-ryes). A gift made subject to certain conditions imposed on the recipient.

Pious gift. See charitable gift.

Prenuptial gift (pre-nup-shal). (1921) A gift of property from one spouse to another before marriage. • In community-property states, prenuptial gifts are often made to preserve the property's classification as separate property. • Also termed antenuptial gift. [Cases: Husband and Wife <250.]

Split gift. (1957) Tax. A gift that is made by one spouse to a third person and that, for gift-tax purposes, both spouses treat as being made one-half by each spouse; a gift in which the spouses combine their annual gift-tax exclusions. • A split gift, for example, is eligible for two annual exclusions of $10,000 each, or a total of $20,000 for one gift. — Also termed gift-splitting; gift-splitting election. See annual exclusion under exclusion (1). [Cases: Internal Revenue <4206.10.]

Substitute gift. (1922) A testamentary gift to one person in place of another who is unable to take under the will for some reason. • Also termed substitutional gift.

Taxable gift. (1922) A gift that, after adjusting for the annual exclusion and applicable deductions, is subject to the federal unified transfer tax. IRC (26 USC.A) § 2503. [Cases: Internal Revenue <4203.10, 4206.10.]

Testamentary gift (tes-ta-men-ta-ree or -tree). (18c) A gift made in a will.

Vested gift. (1820) An absolute gift, being neither conditional nor contingent, though its use or enjoyment might not occur until sometime in the future.

Gift deed. See deed.

Gift enterprise. (1858) 1. A scheme for the distribution of items by chance among those who have purchased shares in the scheme. [Cases: Lotteries <3.] 2. A merchant's scheme to increase sales without lowering prices by giving buyers tickets that carry a chance to win a prize. • Gift enterprises are regulated by state law. See lottery.

Gifting circle. See gifting club.

Gifting club. A type of pyramid scheme or Ponzi scheme in which recruits make "gifts" of money to other club members with the expectation that future recruits will make "gifts" to the present recruits. • Many gifting clubs limit membership to women. Club leaders usually try to evade income-tax laws by claiming that the money paid in by a recruit is a tax-free "gift" to a club member and warning new recruits not to expect "gifts" in the future. Some states forbid gifting clubs as illegal pyramid schemes. Other states hold that the clubs are illegal lotteries. • Also termed gifting circle; sisterhood; birthday club. See Ponzi scheme. [Cases: Antitrust and Trade Regulation <231.]

Gift inter vivos. See inter vivos gift under GIFT.

Gift in trust. See GIFT.

Gift over. See GIFT.

Gift splitting. See split gift under GIFT.

Gift-splitting election. See split gift under GIFT.

Gild hall. See guild hall (1).

G1 loan. See veteran's loan under loan.

Giliour (gt-lor). [Law French] Hist. A guiler, a person who cheats or deceives. • Giliour referred to a person who sold false goods, such as a person who sold pewter as silver. gilt-edged, adj. (Of a security) having the highest rating for safety of investment; exceptionally safe as an investment.

Ginnie Mae (jin-ee may). See GOVERNMENT NATIONAL MORTGAGE ASSOCIATION.

GIPSA. abbr. GRAIN INSPECTION, PACKERS, AND STOCK-YARD ADMINISTRATION.

girth (garth). [Old English] (13c) 1. A measure of length, equal to a yard. • This term, which was used in Saxon and early English law, was taken from the circumference of a man's body. 2. The area surrounding a church. 3. A place of sanctuary. 4. A band or strap that encircles the body of an animal to fasten something (usu. a saddle) to its back.

gisement (jis- or jiz-mant). [Law French] (16c) Archaic. See AGISTMENT.

giser (ji-sar), vb. [Law French] Hist. (Of an action) to lie; to be capable of being brought as a suit in court. • This verb, in its inflected form gist, appeared in such phrases as ou assise ne gist point ("when an assise does not lie"), action bien gist ("the action well lies"), and gist en le bouche ("it lies in the mouth"), and cest action gist ("this action lies").

gisetaker (jis- or jiz-tay-kar). Archaic. See AGISTER.

gist (jist). (18c) 1. The ground or essence (of a legal action) <the gist of the crime>. 2. The main point <she gave the defendant the death penalty> <the jury gave compelling testimony before the jury>. • This noun derives from the Law French verb giser "to lie." See GISER.

 gist-of-the-action doctrine. The principle that a plaintiff who brings a tort claim arising from a contractual relationship must show that the contract and any contractual claim are collateral to the tort claim. • The doctrine prevents plaintiffs from recasting contract claims as tort claims. This term is most common in Pennsylvania but also appears in New Jersey, Delaware, the Virgin Islands, and elsewhere. [Cases: Action C-\(\Rightarrow\) 27(1).]

give, vb. (13c) 1. To voluntarily transfer (property) to another without compensation <Jack gave his daughter a car on her birthday>. 2. To confer by a formal act <the First Amendment gives all citizens the right to free speech>. 3. To present for another to consider <the witness gave compelling testimony before the jury>. 4. (Of a jury) to impose or award by verdict <the jury gave the defendant the death penalty> <the jury gave the plaintiff $1,000 in damages>.

give bail, vb. To post security for one's appearance in court <the court ordered the accused to give bail in the amount of $10,000>. — Also termed post bail.

give color, vb. Hist. To admit, either expressly or impliedly by silence, that an opponent's allegations appear to be meritorious. • In common-law pleading, a defendant's plea of confession and avoidance had to give color to the plaintiff's allegations in the complaint or the plea would be fatally defective. See COLOR (2).

give, devise, and bequeath, vb. (17c) To transfer property by will <I give, devise, and bequeath all the rest, residue, and remainder of my estate to my beloved daughter Sarah>. • This wording has long been criticized as redundant. In modern usage, give ordinarily suffices. See BEQUEST.

given name. See personal name under NAME.

give way, vb. Maritime law. (Of a vessel) to deviate from a course, or to slow down, in accordance with navigation rules, so that a second vessel may pass without altering its course. [Cases: Collision C-\(\Rightarrow\) 29, 37.]

 giving in payment. Civil law. The act of discharging a debt by giving something to the creditor (with the creditor's consent) other than what was originally called for. La. Civ. Code art. 2655. • The phrase is a translation of the French dation en paiement and derives from the Roman datio in solutum. See DATION EN PAIEMENT. Cf. ACCORD AND SATISFACTION.

gladius (gray-dee-as), n. [Latin "sword"] Roman law. The emblem of the emperor's power, esp. the power to punish criminals. See IUS GLADIUS.

glaive (glayv). (14c) Hist. A sword, lance, or horseman's staff. • The glaive was one of the weapons allowed in a trial by combat.

glamour stock. See growth stock under STOCK.

glass ceiling. (1984) An actual or supposed upper limit of professional advancement, esp. for women, as a result of discriminatory practices. [Cases: Civil Rights C-\(\Rightarrow\) 1164.]

Glass–Steagall Act. A federal statute that protects bank depositors by restricting the securities-related business of commercial banks, specif. by prohibiting banks from owning brokerage firms or engaging in the brokerage business. 12 USCA § 378. — Also termed Banking Act of 1933.

glebae ascriptitii. See ADSCRIPTI GLEBAE.

glebe (gleeb). [fr. Latin gleba "clod of earth"] (15c) 1. Roman law. The soil of an inheritance; an agrarian estate. • Servi addicti glebae ("slaves bound to the land") were serfs attached to and passing with the estate. 2. Eccles. law. Land possessed as part of the endowment or revenue of a church or ecclesiastical benefice.

"Diocesan glebe land forms the largest section of ecclesiastical conveyancing work by virtue of the large number of glebe properties which are held in each diocese. Such land is governed primarily by the Endowments and Glebe Measure 1976 ... , which in technical terms defines 'glebe land' as 'land vested in the incumbent of a benefice (when the benefice is full) as part of the endowments of the benefice other than parsonage land'; and 'diocesan glebe land' as glebe land acquired by a diocesan board of finance under any provision of this Measure and any other land acquired by such a board, being land which by virtue of, or of any enactment amended by, a provision of this Measure is to be held as part of the diocesan glebe land of the diocese." — David Rees, ECCLESIASTICAL CONVEYANCING 8 (1989).

global fund. See MUTUAL FUND.
Globe election. Labor law. The procedure by which a group of employees is given the opportunity to decide whether to be represented as a distinct group or to be represented as a part of a larger, existing unit. Globe Machine & Stamping Co. 3 NLRB 294 (1937). — Also termed self-determination election.

glos (glos), n. [Latin] Roman law. One’s husband’s sister.

gloss, n. (16c) 1. A note inserted between the lines or in the margin of a text to explain a difficult or obscure word in the text. <This edition of Shakespeare’s works is bolstered by many glosses on Elizabethan English.> 2. A collection of explanations; a glossary (the hornbook’s copious gloss). 3. (usu. pl.) A pronunciation about meaning; an interpretation (the statutory language needs no gloss).

glossators (gloS-sa-tar). (15c) (usu. cap.) A group of Italian jurisconsults who, from the 11th to the 13th centuries, were primarily responsible for the revival of the study of Roman law. • They originally worked by glossing (that is, explaining in the margin) difficult or unclear passages, and gradually their writings blossomed into full-blown commentaries and discussions. See postglossators. — glossatorial, adj.

Gloucester, Statute of (glos-tar). Hist. A statute that allowed a successful plaintiff to recover costs in addition to damages. • The statute was enacted in Gloucester, 6 Edw. 1, ch. 1 (1278).

glove silver. Hist. Money given as an incentive or reward to a court officer, esp. money given by a sheriff to an assize official when no prisoners were left by the assize for execution. • The name derives from the practice of giving money to servants, ostensibly to buy gloves with.

GM1. abbr. guity but mentally ill.

GMT. abbr. genetic-marker test.

GNMA. abbr. government national mortgage association.

GNP. abbr. government national product.

go bail, vb. Archaic. To act as a surety on a bail bond.

Godbote. See bote (2).

God-gild. Hist. Money paid or something offered for the service of God; esp., a payment of money or a gift (for example, land) to a church. See *frankalmoins.

godparent. (1865) Eccles. law. A person, usu. a close family friend or relative, who accepts a parent’s invitation to assume part of the responsibility for the religious education of a newly baptized child. • Often, too, there is an understanding that the godparent would help support and rear the child if the parents were to die or become incapacitated. The spiritual parent-child relationship creates a canonical impediment to marriage. — Also termed (more specifically) godmother; godfather; (in eccles. law) sponsor.

God’s penny. Hist. Earnest money; a small sum paid on the striking of a bargain. — Also termed denarius Dei, earnest-penny; god penny. See arra.

“it is among the merchants that the giving of earnest first... becomes a form which binds both buyer and seller in a contract of sale. To all appearances this change was not accomplished without the intermediation of a religious idea. All over western Europe the earnest becomes known as the God’s penny or Holy Ghost’s penny (denarius Dei).” 2 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I (2d ed. 1899).

go forward, vb. (1964) To commence or carry on with the presentation of a case in court (after the lunch recess, the judge instructed the plaintiff to go forward with its case).

go hence without day. (18c) (Of a defendant to a lawsuit) to be finished with legal proceedings without any further settings on the court’s calendar. • Thus, a defendant who “goes hence without day” succeeds in getting a case finally resolved, usu. by dismissal. The phrase derives from the Law French phrase aller sans jour, and over time defendants came to use it to request that the case against them be dismissed without the necessity of a day in court. — Sometimes shortened to go without day; without day. See *sine die.

going-and-coming rule. (1927) 1. The principle that torts committed by an employee while commuting to or from work are generally outside the scope of employment. [Cases: Labor and Employment C-3045.] 2. The principle that denies workers’-compensation benefits to an employee injured while commuting to or from work. Cf. commercial-traveler rule. [Cases: Workers’ Compensation C-719-757.]

going concern. (1881) A commercial enterprise actively engaging in business with the expectation of indefinite continuance. — Also termed going business.

going-concern value. See value (2).

going price, n. (18c) The prevailing or current market value of something. See fair market value under value (2).

going private. The process of changing a public corporation into a close corporation by terminating the corporation’s status with the SEC as a publicly held corporation and by having its outstanding publicly held shares acquired by a single shareholder or a small group. [Cases: Securities Regulation C-60.23.]

going-private transaction. See *freezeout.

going public. The process of a company’s selling stock to the investing public for the first time (after filing a registration statement under applicable securities laws), thereby becoming a public corporation. [Cases: Securities Regulation C-11.10-11.14.]

going through the bar. Hist. A daily process in which the court would ask all barristers present whether they had motions to present. • This practice, which ended in 1873, was conducted according to seniority, except for the last day of a term, when the junior barristers were asked first.
going to the country. Hist. The act of requesting a jury trial. • A defendant was said to be "going to the country" by concluding a pleading with the phrase "and of this he puts himself upon the country." Similarly, a plaintiff would conclude a pleading with the phrase "and this the plaintiff prays may be enquired of by the country." — Also termed go to the country. Cf. CONCLUSION TO THE COUNTRY.

going value. See going-concern value under VALUE (2).

going witness. See WITNESS.

gold bond. See BOND (3).

gold certificate. Hist. A banknote issued by the United States Treasury from 1863 to 1934 and redeemable in gold. • When the United States abandoned the gold standard in 1933, Congress declared ownership of gold certificates illegal even though the Treasury continued to issue them until mid-1934. The certificates were legalized again in 1964, but they can no longer be redeemed for gold. They now have the same status as Federal Reserve notes, which are not redeemable for precious metal. Cf. FEDERAL RESERVE NOTE; SILVER CERTIFICATE. [Cases: United States (3-34).

gold clause. A provision calling for payment in gold. • Gold clauses, which are now void, were once used in contracts, bonds, and mortgages.

golden handcuffs. Remuneration set at such a high level that the employee earning it cannot leave the firm or company and receive commensurate pay elsewhere. • As a result, the employee often stays in the position even if it is otherwise unrewarding or unpleasant.

golden handshake. Corporations. A generous compensation package offered to an employee, usu. as an inducement to retire or upon dismissal.

golden parachute. (1981) Corporations. An employment-contract provision that grants an upper-level executive lucrative severance benefits — including long-term salary guarantees or bonuses — if control of the company changes hands (as by a merger). Cf. TIN PARACHUTE. [Cases: Corporations (3-308(3)].

"Key executives may be provided with significant employment-contract clauses that are triggered only by a change in the firm’s control through a sale, merger, acquisition, or takeover. These contract clauses are commonly termed golden parachutes, and they generally provide that if control over the employer’s business occurs and the new management terminates the executive, additional compensation will be received. . . . Golden parachutes are useful in providing long-term incentives for executives to enter industries in which takeover chances are above average. Generally, golden parachutes do not violate public policy.

golden rule. The principle that, in construing written instruments, a court should adhere to the grammatical and ordinary sense of the words unless that adherence would lead to some manifest absurdity; esp., in statutory construction, the principle that if a statute’s literal meaning would lead to an absurd or unjust result, or even to an inconsistency within the statute itself, the statute should be interpreted in a way that avoids such a result or inconsistency. — Also termed Baron Parke’s rule. Cf. ABSURDITY; MISCHIEF RULE; PLAIN-MEANING RULE; EQUITY-OF-THE-STATUTE RULE. [Cases: Statutes (181(2), 189.]

"[The ‘golden’ rule . . . allows for a departure from the literal rule when the application of the statutory words in the ordinary sense would be repugnant to or inconsistent with some other provision in the statute or even when it would lead to what the court considers to be an absurdity. The usual consequence of applying the golden rule is that words which are in the statute are ignored or words which are not there are read in. The scope of the golden rule is debatable, particularly so far as the meaning of an ‘absurdity’ is concerned." Rupert Cross, Statutory Interpretation 41 (1976).

golden-rule argument. A jury argument in which a lawyer asks the jurors to reach a verdict by imagining themselves or someone they care about in the place of the injured plaintiff or victim. • Because golden-rule arguments ask the jurors to become advocates for the plaintiff or victim and to ignore their obligation to exercise calm and reasonable judgment, these arguments are widely condemned and are considered improper in most states. [Cases: Trial (125(1)].

goldsmiths’ notes. Hist. Bankers’ cash notes; promissory notes given by bankers to customers as acknowledgments of the receipt of money. • This term derives from the London banking business, which originally was transacted by goldsmiths.

gold standard. (19c) A monetary system in which currency is convertible into its legal equivalent in gold or gold coin. • The United States adopted the gold standard in 1900 and abandoned it in 1934. Cf. PAPER STANDARD.

good, adj. (bef. 12c) 1. Sound or reliable . 2. Valid, effectual, and enforceable; sufficient under the law <good title>.

good, n. See GOODS.

good and lawful fence. See LAWFUL FENCE.

good and merchantable abstract of title. See ABSTRACT OF TITLE.

good and valuable consideration. See valuable consideration under CONSIDERATION (1).

good and workmanlike. (18c) (Of a product or service) characterized by quality craftsmanship; constructed or performed in a skillful way or method <the house was built in a good and workmanlike manner>.

good behavior. (16c) 1. A standard by which judges are considered fit to continue their tenure, consisting in the avoidance of criminal behavior. [Cases: Judges (7-7].

2. Orderly conduct, which in the context of penal law allows a prisoner to reduce the time spent in prison. Cf. GOOD TIME UNDER TIME. [Cases: Prisons (243].

good cause. See CAUSE (2).

good consideration. See CONSIDERATION (1).

good faith, n. (18c) A state of mind consisting in (1) honesty in belief or purpose, (2) faithfulness to one's duty or obligation, (3) observance of reasonable commercial standards of fair dealing in a given trade or business, or (4) absence of intent to defraud or to seek unconscionable advantage. — Also termed bona fides. Cf. BAD FAITH. — good-faith, adj.

“The phrase ‘good faith’ is used in a variety of contexts, and its meaning varies somewhat with the context. Good faith performance or enforcement of a contract emphasizes faithfulness to an agreed common purpose and consistency with the justified expectations of the other party; it excludes a variety of types of conduct characterized as involving ‘bad faith’ because they violate community standards of decency, fairness or reasonableness. The appropriate remedy for a breach of the duty of good faith also varies with the circumstances.’ Restatement (Second) of Contracts § 205 cmt. a (1979).

“[G]ood faith is an elusive idea, taking on different meanings and emphases as we move from one context to another—whether the particular context is supplied by the type of legal system (e.g., common law, civilian, or hybrid), the type of contract (e.g., commercial or consumer), or the nature of the subject matter of the contract (e.g., insurance, employment, sale of goods, financial services, and so on).” Roger Brownsword et al., “Good Faith in Contract,” in Good Faith in Contract: Concept and Context 1, 3 (Roger Brownsword ed., 1999).

good-faith bargaining. Labor law. Negotiations between an employer and a representative of employees, usu. a union, in which both parties meet and confer at reasonable times with open minds and with a view to reaching an agreement. • The National Labor Relations Act requires good-faith bargaining, and failure to bargain in good faith is considered an unfair labor practice. 29 USCA §§ 151-169. See UNFAIR LABOR PRACTICE. [Cases: Labor and Employment ☞ 1114.]

good-faith exception. (1980) Criminal procedure. An exception to the exclusionary rule whereby evidence obtained under a warrant later found to be invalid (esp. because it is not supported by probable cause) is nonetheless admissible if the police reasonably relied on the notion that the warrant was valid. • The Supreme Court adopted the good-faith exception in United States v. Leon, 468 U.S. 897, 104 S.Ct. 3405 (1984). [Cases: Criminal Law ☞ 394.4(6)].

good-faith improver. A person who makes improvements to real property while actually and reasonably believing himself or herself to be the owner or lawful occupant. • The improver may be entitled to recover the value of the improvements from the true owner or to remove them. See IMPROVEMENT. [Cases: Improvements ☞ 4(2)].

good-faith margin. See MARGIN.

good-faith purchaser. See bona fide purchaser under PURCHASER (1).

good-guy clause. See good-guy guaranty under GUARANTY.

good health. Insurance. A state of reasonable healthiness; a state of health free from serious disease. • Good health, a phrase often appearing in life-insurance policies, does not mean perfect health. — Also termed sound health. [Cases: Insurance ☞ 1758, 3003(8)].

“As used in policies of insurance, there is no material difference between the terms ‘sound health’ and ‘good health,’ and generally it appears that the two terms are considered to be synonymous. Such expressions are comparative terms, and the rule followed generally is that the term ‘good health’ or ‘sound health,’ when used in an insurance contract, means that the applicant has no grave, important, or serious disease, and is free from any ailment that seriously affects the general soundness or healthfulness of his system.” 43 Am. Jur. 2d Insurance § 1061, at 1069 (1982).

good jury. See special jury under JURY.

good moral character, n. (18c) 1. A pattern of behavior that is consistent with the community's current ethical standards and that shows an absence of deceit or morally reprehensible conduct. • An alien seeking to be naturalized must show good moral character in the five years preceding the petition for naturalization. [Cases: Aliens, Immigration, and Citizenship ☞ 703.]

2. A pattern of behavior conforming to a profession's ethical standards and showing an absence of moral turpitude. • Good moral character is usu. a requirement of persons applying to practice a profession such as law or medicine. [Cases: Licenses ☞ 20.]

good offices. Int’l law. The involvement of one or more countries or an international organization in a dispute between other countries with the aim of contributing to its settlement or at least easing relations between the disputing countries.

good of the order. Parliamentary law. A time scheduled, usu. late in a meeting, for informal announcements, comments, and suggestions that do not seek the meeting's immediate action. — Also termed general good and welfare; open forum; open microphone.

Goodright. Hist. A name sometimes used as a fictitious plaintiff in an ejectment action. • "John Doe" was used more frequently. — Also termed Goodtitle. Cf. JOHN DOE.

goods. (bef. 12c) 1. Tangible or movable personal property other than money; esp., articles of trade or items of merchandise <goods and services>. • The sale of goods is governed by Article 2 of the UCC. [Cases: Sales ☞ 10.]. 2. Things that have value, whether tangible or not <the importance of social goods varies from society to society>.

“Goods' means all things (including specially manufactured goods) which are movable at the time of identification to the contract for sale other than the money in which the price is to be paid, investment securities, (Article 8), and things in action. 'Goods' also includes the unborn young of animals and growing crops and other identified things attached to realty as described in the section on goods to be severed from realty (Section 2-107).” UCC § 2-105(1).

bulky goods. Goods that are obviously difficult to move because of their nature, their number, or their location.

capital goods. Goods (such as equipment and machinery) used for the production of other goods or services. — Also termed industrial goods.
consumer goods. Goods bought or used primarily for personal, family, or household purposes, and not for resale or for producing other goods. UCC § 9-102(23). [Cases: Secured Transactions ☑ 15.]
customers' goods. Insurance. Goods belonging to the customers of a casualty-insurance policyholder; goods held by a policyholder as a bailee.
distressed goods. Goods sold at unusually low prices or at a loss. durable goods. Consumer goods that are designed to be used repeatedly over a long period, such as automobiles or refrigerators. — Also termed durables; hard goods.
fungible goods (fun-ja-bal). Goods that are interchangeable with one another; goods that, by nature or trade usage, are the equivalent of any other like unit, such as coffee or grain. UCC § 1-201(b)(18).
future goods. Goods that will come into being, such as those yet to be manufactured; goods that are not both existing and identified. • A purported present sale of future goods or any interest in them operates as a contract to sell. UCC § 2-105(2).
gray-market goods. See parallel imports. hard goods. See durable goods.
household goods. Goods that are used in connection with a home. • This term usu. arises when a warehouiser claims a lien on what he or she asserts are "household" goods. According to the UCC, a warehouiser may claim a lien on a depositor's furniture, furnishings, and personal effects that are used in a dwelling. UCC § 7-209(d). industrial goods. See capital goods.
mobile goods. Goods that are normally used in more than one jurisdiction (such as shipping containers and road-construction machinery) and that are held by the debtor as equipment or leased by the debtor to others. • Under previous drafts of the Uniform Commercial Code, the procedure for perfecting a security interest in mobile goods was generally defined by the law of the state where the debtor is located. The current UCC does not distinguish mobile goods. See ordinary goods. UCC § 9-103(3). nonconforming goods. Goods that fail to meet contractual specifications, allowing the buyer to reject the tender of the goods or to revoke their acceptance. UCC §§ 2-601, 2-608. See perfect-tender rule. [Cases: Sales ☑ 119, 166(1).]
ordinary goods. Goods that are anything other than mobile goods, minerals, or goods covered by a certificate of title. UCC § 9-103(1)(a). • The current UCC does not distinguish between ordinary and mobile goods. [Cases: Secured Transactions ☑ 14.]
prize goods. Goods captured at sea during wartime.
soft goods. Consumer goods (such as clothing) that are not durable goods.

Good Samaritan action. 1. A deed performed gratuitously by a person to help another who is in peril. — Also termed Good Samaritan act. See Good Samaritan doctrine; Good Samaritan law. 2. A lawsuit brought by a person or group for the benefit of all or part of a community.

Good Samaritan doctrine (sa-mar-i-jan). (1952) Torts. The principle that a person who is injured while attempting to aid another in imminent danger, and who then sues the one whose negligence created the danger, will not be charged with contributory negligence unless the rescue attempt is an unreasonable one or the rescuer acts unreasonably in performing the attempted rescue. Cf. emergency doctrine; rescue doctrine; lost-chance doctrine. [Cases: Negligence ☑ 510(3).]
good-samaritan law. (1965) A statute that exempts from liability a person (such as an off-duty physician) who voluntarily renders aid to another in imminent danger but negligently causes injury while rendering the aid. • Some form of good-samaritan legislation has been enacted in all 50 states and in the District of Columbia. — Also written Good Samaritan law. — Also termed good-samaritan statute. Cf. Good Samaritan doctrine. [Cases: Health ☑ 769; Negligence ☑ 284.]

"The so-called 'Good Samaritan Statutes', ... do not require aid to be given. They merely encourage doctors to stop and give aid to strangers in emergency situations by providing that no physician who in good faith renders such aid shall be liable in civil damages as a result of acts or omissions in rendering such aid. Some states have enacted statutes that require a person who is able to do so with no danger or peril to himself to come to the aid of another who is exposed to grave physical harm." Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 661 (3d ed. 1982).
goods and chattels (chat-alz), n. (16c) Loosely, personal property of any kind; occasionally, tangible personal property only. — Also termed goods and effects; goods and merchandise.
good-soldier defense. An excuse theory based on the assertion that a defendant was following orders, esp. of a military or corporate superior. • The term is a derisive label rather than a valid defense. Following an order does not relieve a defendant of responsibility for wrongful acts unless there are circumstances that would amount to coercion.
good time. See time.
good-time law. A statute allowing a prisoner's sentence to be reduced by a stated number of days for each month or year of good behavior while incarcerated. — Also termed good-time statute.
good title. See title (2). goodwill. (bef. 12c) A business's reputation, patronage, and other intangible assets that are considered when appraising the business, esp. for purchase; the ability to earn income in excess of the income that would be expected from the business viewed as a mere collection of assets. • Because an established business's trademark or servicemark is a symbol of goodwill, trademark infringement is a form of theft of goodwill. By the same token, when a trademark is assigned, the goodwill that it carries is also assigned. — Also written good will. — Also termed enterprise goodwill; commercial goodwill; practice goodwill; economic goodwill. Cf. going-concern value under value (2). [Cases: Good Will C:1, 2.]

"[Goodwill] is only another name for reputation, credit, honesty, fair name, reliability." Harry O. Nims, The Law of Unfair Competition and Trade-Marks 36 (1929).

"Good will is to be distinguished from that element of value referred to variously as going-concern value, going value, or going business. Although some courts have stated that the difference is merely technical and that it is unimportant to attempt to separate these intangibles, it is generally held that going-concern value is that which inheres in a plant of an established business." 38 Am. Jur. 2d Good Will § 2, at 913 (1968).

individual goodwill. See personal goodwill.

personal goodwill. Goodwill attributable to an individual’s skills, knowledge, efforts, training, or reputation in making a business successful. — Also termed rules determining how a state or organization is regulated. 2. The sovereign power in a nation or state. 3. An organization through which a body of people exercises political authority; the machinery by which sovereign power is expressed <the Canadian government>. • In this sense, the term refers collectively to the political organs of a country regardless of their function or level, and regardless of the subject matter they deal with. Cf.

nation; state.

central government. See federal government (1).

defacto government (di fak-toh). 1. A government that has taken over the regular government and exercises sovereignty over a nation. 2. An independent government established and exercised by a group of a country’s inhabitants who have separated themselves from the parent state. — Also termed government de fııacto.

dejure government. A functioning government that is legally established. — Also termed government de jure.

defederal government. 1. A national government that exercises some degree of control over smaller political units that have surrendered some degree of power in exchange for the right to participate in national political matters. — Also termed (in federal states) central government. 2. The U.S. government. — Also termed national government. [Cases: United States C:1.] government de factıı. See de facto government. government de jure. See de jure government.

local government. The government of a particular locality, such as a city, county, or parish; a governing body at a lower level than the state government. • The term includes a school district, fire district, transportation authority, and any other special-purpose district or authority. — Also termed municipal government. [Cases: Municipal Corporations C:6.] mixed government. A government containing a blend of forms, as in democracy and monarchy. municipal government. See local government.
national government. 1. See national government.
2. See federal government (2). proprietary government. Hist. A government granted by the Crown to an individual, in the nature of a feudatory principality, with powers of legislation formerly belonging to the owner of a county palatine.

Cf. county palatine.

provisional government. A government temporarily established to govern until a permanent one is organized to replace it.

republican government. A government in the republic-ian form; specif., a government by representatives chosen by the people. [Cases: States C:4.3.] state government. The government of a state of the United States. [Cases: States C:1.]

4. The executive branch of the U.S. government. 5. The prosecutors in a given criminal case <the government has objected to the introduction of that evidence>. 6.
An academic course devoted to the study of government; political science <Bridges is enrolled in Government 101>. government agency. See agency (3). government-agency defense. Torts. An affirmative defense that immunizes a contractor from liability upon proof that the contractor acted on the government’s behalf as an agent or as a government officer. governmental trust. See trust.

governmental unit. A subdivision, agency, department, county, parish, municipality, or other unit of the government of a country or a state. • The term includes an organization with a separate corporate existence only if the organization can legally issue debt obligations on which interest is exempt from income taxation under national law. UCC § 9-102(a)(45). [Cases: Municipal Corporations ⤷ 6.] government-agency security. See government security under security.

government agent. See agent (2).

governmental act. See governmental function.

governmental activity. See governmental function.

governmental enterprise. See enterprise.

governmental function. (1817) Torts. A government agency's conduct that is expressly or impliedly mandated or authorized by constitution, statute, or other law and that is carried out for the benefit of the general public. • Generally, a governmental entity is immune from tort liability for governmental acts. — Also termed governmental act; governmental activity. See public-function test. Cf. proprietary function. [Cases: Municipal Corporations ⤷ 724.]

"Activities of police or firefighters, though tortious, are usually considered governmental in the sense that they involve the kind of power expected of the government, even if its exercise in the specific case is wrongful. The city is immune as to such activities for this reason. On the other hand, if the city operates a local electric or water company for which fees are charged, this looks very much like private enterprise and is usually considered proprietary. . . . The difficult distinction between governmental and proprietary functions is even more troubling where the city's conduct combines both kinds of function at once. For example, operation of a sanitary sewer may be deemed governmental, but operation of a storm sewer may be deemed proprietary." Prosser and Keeton on the Law of Torts § 131, at 1053–54 (W. Page Keeton ed., 5th ed. 1984.)

governmental-function theory. (1936) Constitutional law. A principle by which private conduct is characterized as state action, esp. for due-process and equal-protection purposes, when a private party is exercising a public function. • Under this theory, for example, a political party (which is a private entity) cannot exclude voters from primary elections on the basis of race. — Also termed public-function rationale. [Cases: Civil Rights ⤷ 1326(4, 7); Constitutional Law ⤷ 213(4), 254(4).] governmental immunity. See sovereign immunity under immunity (2).

governmental instrumentality. (1854) A constitutionally or legislatively created agency that is immune from certain kinds of liability, as for taxes or punitive damages. [Cases: United States ⤷ 53.]

grab law. (1884) The various means of debt collection involving remedies outside the scope of federal bankruptcy law, such as attachment and garnishment; aggressive collection practices. [Cases: Attachment 1; Garnishment 1-1.]

grace period. (1945) 1. A period of extra time allowed for taking some required action (such as making payment) without incurring the usual penalty for being late. • Insurance policies typically provide for a grace period of 30 days beyond the premium's due date, during which the premium may be paid without the policy being canceled. And Article 9 of the UCC provides for a 10-day grace period, after the collateral is received, during which a purchase-money security interest must be perfected to have priority over any conflicting security interests. — Also termed days of grace; grace days. 2. Patents. The one-year interval allowed by the U.S. Patent Act between the time an invention is used in public, sold, offered for sale, or disclosed in a publication and the time the inventor applies for a patent. • Most countries follow the doctrine of absolute priority and do not allow a grace period. — Sometimes shortened to grace. Cf. STATUTORY BAR; absolute novelty under novelty.

gradatim (gra-day-tam), adv. (16c) [Latin] Roman law. Gradually; by successive degrees of relationship. • Gradatim refers to the step-by-step admission of successors when there is no heir next in line. See GRADUS.

grade, n. Criminal law. An incremental step in the scale of punishments for offenses, based on a particular offense's seriousness <several grades of murder>. See DEGREE (2).

graded offense. See OFFENSE (1).

grading. The fixing of a criminal offense at a level of seriousness, such as first degree, second degree, or third degree (in reference to a felony), or Class A, Class B, or Class C (in reference to a misdemeanor). See DEGREE OF CRIME. [Cases: Criminal Law 28.

gradual method. An intestate-inheritance scheme that gives priority to relatives who are nearest in degree of consanguinity. • This method dates back to the English Statute of Distributions (1670). Cf. PARENTELIC METHOD; UNIVERSAL INHERITANCE RULE.

gradus (gray-das), n. [Latin "step"] 1. Roman law. A step or degree in the familial relationship. • The term identified a position in the order of succession under a will. 2. Hist. A degree, rank, or grade; specif., the rank of a master-in-chancery or a serjeant-at-law.

graffer (graf-<r). (15c) Hist. A notary or scrivener. — Also termed graffarius.

graffium (graf-<rn). Hist. A register or cartulary of deeds and other documents establishing title to property, esp. real property. — Also spelled grafiun.

grafio (gray-fee-oh). [Law Latin] Hist. 1. A baron; a viscount. • A grafio was inferior to a count. 2. A fiscal judge, responsible for collecting taxes and fines. • The term was chiefly used among early European nations.
graff, n. (14c) 1. The act of using a position of trust to gain money or property dishonestly; esp., a public official's fraudulent acquisition of public funds. 2. Money or property gained illegally or unfairly.

Graham factors. (1966) Patents. A three-part test for determining obviousness under § 103 of the Patent Act of 1952, looking at (1) the scope and content of the prior art, (2) the differences between the prior art and the patent claims, and (3) the level of ordinary skill in the pertinent art. Graham v. John Deere Co. of Kansas City, 383 U.S. 1, 86 S.Ct. 684 (1966). See nonobviousness.

Grain Inspection, Packers, and Stockyards Administration. An agency in the U.S. Department of Agriculture responsible for helping to market meat, cereals, and related agricultural products, and for promoting fair trade practices. — Abbr. GIPSA.

granage. (16c) Hist. A duty consisting of one-twentieth of the salt imported by an alien into London.

grand, adj. (17c) Of or relating to a crime involving the theft of money or property valued more than a statutory established amount, and therefore considered more serious than those involving a lesser amount <grand theft>. See grand larceny under larceny. Cf. petty. [Cases: Larceny ⊕ 23.]

grand assize. See assize (5).

grand cape. See cape magnum under cape.

grand coutumier de pays et duché de Normandie (gron koo-t[yl]oo-myay do pay ay do-shay do nor-man-dee). [French] Hist. A collection of the common or customary laws of the Duchy of Normandy. 1. The code was probably compiled in the 13th century, and it still remains the law of Jersey, except to the extent that it has been modified by later legislation and judicial decisions. See <attome de haro>.

Grand Day. English law. 1. Hist. One of four holy days on which the courts were not in session. 2. Each of the four court terms had a Grand Day. The four Grand Days were Candlemas Day (February 2), Ascension Day (March 25), St. John the Baptist Day (June 24), and All Saints' Day (November 1). The Inns of Court and of Chancery ceremoniously observed each Grand Day. 2. A day in each term on which the Benchers of the Inns of Court host ceremonial dinners in their halls. See bencher. Cf. term (6).

grandfather, vb. (1953) To cover (a person) with the benefits of a grandfather clause <the statute sets the drinking age at 21 but grandfathers those who are 18 or older on the statute's effective date>.

grandfather clause. (1900) Hist. A clause in the constitution of some Southern states exempting from suffrage restrictions the descendants of men who could vote before the Civil War. 1. The U.S. Supreme Court held that a clause of this kind in the Oklahoma Constitution violated the 15th Amendment. Guinn v. United States, 238 U.S. 347, 35 S.Ct. 926 (1915). 2. A provision that creates an exemption from the law's effect for something that existed before the law's effective date; specif., a statutory or regulatory clause that exempts a class of persons or transactions because of circumstances existing before the new rule or regulation takes effect. [Cases: Statutes ⊕ 228.] 3. In a government contract, a provision that immunizes the contractor against any changes in federal law that would otherwise adversely affect the contract. 4. For example, the government may promise to cover any increased costs that arise from a change in the law, even though the contractor would bear them for any other reason.

grand jury. (15c) A body of (usu. 16 to 23) people who are chosen to sit permanently for at least a month — and sometimes a year — and who, in ex parte proceedings, decide whether to issue indictments. See Fed. R. Crim. P. 6. 1. If the grand jury decides that evidence is strong enough to hold a suspect for trial, it returns a bill of indictment (a true bill) charging the suspect with a specific crime. 2. Also termed accusing jury; presenting jury, jury of indictment. Cf. petite jury under jury. [Cases: Grand Jury ⊕ 21.]

> "The grand jury serves — or may serve — two distinct functions. One is a screening function; the grand jury evaluates evidence supporting possible charges and returns an indictment only in those cases in which the evidence amounts to at least probable cause. The other is an investigatory function; the grand jury sometimes develops information that is of value in determining whether grounds for a charge exist and — perhaps incidentally — in proving that charge at the defendant's later criminal trial.” Frank W. Miller et al., Cases and Materials on Criminal Justice Administration 546 (3d ed. 1986).

investigative grand jury. (1960) A grand jury whose primary function is to examine possible crimes and develop evidence not currently available to the prosecution. Also termed investigatory grand jury.

runaway grand jury. (1959) A grand jury that acts essentially in opposition to the prosecution, as by calling its own witnesses, perversely failing to return an indictment that the prosecution has requested, or returning an indictment that the prosecution did not request.

screening grand jury. (1990) A grand jury whose primary function is to decide whether to issue an indictment. special grand jury. (1854) A grand jury specially summoned, usu. when the regular grand jury either has already been discharged or has not been drawn; a grand jury with limited authority. — Also termed additional grand jury; extraordinary grand jury. [Cases: Grand Jury 4:17-10.]

Grand Jury Clause. (1949) The clause of the Fifth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution requiring an indictment by a grand jury before a person can be tried for serious offenses. [Cases: Grand Jury 4:17-2.]

grandparent rights. A grandfather's or grandmother's rights in seeking visitation with a grandchild. By statute in most states, in certain circumstances a grandparent may seek court-ordered visitation with a grandchild. Typically these circumstances include the death of the grandparents' child (the child's parent) and the divorce of the child's parents. But the United States Supreme Court has held that the primary, constitutionally protected right of decision-making regarding association with a child lies with the child's parents. As a general rule, if the parent is a fit and proper guardian and objects to visitation, the parent's will prevails. Troxel v. Granville, 530 U.S. 57, 120 S.Ct. 2054 (2000). [Cases: Child Custody 4:283.] grandparent visitation. See visitation.

Grand Remonstrance (ri-mon-strants). Hist. A protest document issued by the House of Commons in 1641, setting forth numerous political grievances against Charles I. The document demanded three primary remedial measures: (1) improvements in the administration of justice, (2) appointment of trustworthy ministers, and (3) enforcement of the laws against Roman Catholics. It was the first major split between the Royalist and Parliamentary parties, and it led Charles to seek the arrest of the five members who pushed the document through the Commons.

grand serjeanty. See serjeanty.

Grand Survey. See grand inquest (2) under inquest.

grange (graynj). (14c) 1. Hist. A farm furnished with all the necessities for husbandry, such as a barn, granary, and stables; esp., an outlying farm that belonged to a religious establishment or a feudal lord. 2. (cap.) A social, educational, and political organization, formally called the National Grange of the Patrons of Husbandry, that informs its members about agriculture-related legislation and proposals, and represents farm interests in lobbying government. The Grange was formed in 1867 and soon became the foundation of the Granger Movement, a 19th-century political force that protested economic abuses that increased farmers' costs while forcing down prices for agricultural products. Movement followers (called Grangers) controlled several Midwest state legislatures and passed Granger laws that set maximum rates for railroads, warehouses, and grain elevators. Railroads and other interested parties challenged the constitutionality of these laws in what have become known as the Granger Cases.

Granger Cases (graynj-ar). Six U.S. Supreme Court decisions holding that the police power of the states enabled them, through legislation, to regulate fees charged by common carriers, warehouses, and grain elevators.

- The cases, decided in 1876, arose out of grangers' (i.e., farmers') frustration with the inflated prices they were paying to store and transport their agricultural products. When several state legislatures passed laws regulating those prices, the affected businesses sued to have the laws overturned on grounds that they violated the Commerce Clause and the Due Process Clause of the 14th Amendment. The Court rejected these claims, holding that the activities involved affected the public interest and were therefore subject to the government's regulatory authority. See Grange (2).

Granger Movement. See Grange (2).

grant, n. (13c) 1. An agreement that creates a right or interest in favor of a person or that effects a transfer of a right or interest from one person to another. Examples include leases, easements, charges, patents, franchises, powers, and licenses. 2. The formal transfer of real property. [Cases: Deeds 4:3.]

The Court rejected these claims, holding that the activities involved affected the public interest and were therefore subject to the government's regulatory authority. See Grange (2).

- A community grant may set out specific, communal uses for the property, such as for grazing animals or maintaining a playground. Cf. private grant. [Cases: Public Lands 4:223(4).]

escheat grant. A government's grant of escheated land to a new owner. — Also termed escheat patent. [Cases: Escheat 4:8(1).]

imperfect grant. 1. A grant that requires the grantor to do something before the title passes to another. Cf. perfect grant. 2. A grant that does not convey all rights and complete title against both private persons and government, so that the granting person or political authority may later disavow the grant. See Paschal v. Perex, 7 Tex. 366 (1851).

inclusive grant. A deed or grant that describes the boundaries of the land conveyed and excepts certain parcels within those boundaries from the conveyance, usu. because those parcels of land are owned or claimed by others. — Also termed inclusive deed.

office grant. A grant made by a legal officer because the owner is either unwilling or unable to execute a deed to pass title, as in the case of a tax deed. See tax deed under Deed.

perfect grant. A grant for which the grantor has done everything required to pass a complete title, and the grantee has done everything required to receive and enjoy the property in fee. Cf. imperfect grant (1).

private grant. A grant of real property made to an individual for his or her private use, including the right to sell it. • Private grants made by a government are often found in the chains of title for land outside the original 13 states, esp. in former Spanish and Mexican possessions. Cf. community grant.

5. SUBSIDY (1).

grant, vb. (13c) 1. To give or confer (something), with or without compensation <the parents granted the car to their daughter on her 16th birthday>.
2. To formally transfer (real property) by deed or other writing <the Lewisons granted the townhouse to the Bufords>.
3. To permit or agree to <the press secretary granted the reporter access to the Oval Office>.
4. To approve, warrant, or order (a request, motion, etc.) <the court granted the continuance>.
5. Int'l law. See SUBSIDY (3).

grant to uses. Hist. A conveyance of legal title to real property to one person for the benefit of another. • If, for example, A conveyed land to B and his heirs to the use of C and his heirs, B — the feoffee to uses — acquired seisin in and had possession of the land and was considered the legal owner. C — the cestui que use — was considered the equitable owner of the land and was entitled to the land's rents, profits, and benefits. Because the cestui que use did not have seisin in the land, he was not subject to feudal payments. From the 13th century forward, the grant to uses was an increasingly popular mode of conveyance. See cestui que use; statute of uses; use (4).

grass hearth. Hist. A tenant's customary service, consisting of the tenant's bringing his plow to the lord's land and plowing it for one day.

grassum (gras-um). [Law Latin] 1. Scots law. A single lease payment made in addition to the periodic payments due under an agreement; a payment in addition to the rent paid by a tenant to the landlord.
Pl. grassums.

"Grassum; an anticipation of rent in a gross or lump sum . . . . in questions with singular successors there is no limitation of the power to take grassums, only the rent must not be thereby diminished so as to be altogether elusory. In regard, however, to lands under entail, the heir in possession must administer the estate secundum bonum et aequum, taking no more of the annually accruing rents and profits than he leaves to descend to his successors. Hence, grassums, as being, in effect, anticipations of the future rents, to the prejudice of succeeding heirs, are held to be struck at by the prohibition against alienation." William Bell, Bell's Dictionary and Digest of the Laws of Scotland 492 (George Watson ed., 7th ed. 1890).

2. GRESSUM. 3. GERSUM (1). 4. GERSUM (2).

GRAT. abbr. GRANTOR-RETAINED ANNUITY TRUST.

gratia mandatarii (gray-shee-uh man-da-tair-ee). [Latin] Hist. For the sake of the mandatary. • The phrase appeared in reference to the irrevocability of a mandate given solely for the mandatary's benefit.

"Gratia mandatarii . . . . In the general case, a mandate, being for the benefit of the mandant, may be recalled by him at pleasure. Mandates, however, which are granted solely for the sake (or advantage) of the mandatary, such as the mandate contained in the registration clause of a deed, whereby the granter gives authority for its registration, are not revocable." John Trayner, Trayner's Latin Maxims 237 (4th ed. 1894).

Great Lakes rule. Maritime law. The statutory provision that an admiralty litigant is entitled to a jury trial in a contract or tort action if the lawsuit arises from the operation of a commercial vessel on the Great Lakes or the navigable waters connecting them. See 28 USCA § 1873. [Cases: Admiralty C-113.] "The most important distinction between the law and admiralty 'sides' of federal court is that trial by jury is guaranteed for law claims through the Seventh Amendment, but where the case is maintained as an admiralty claim the litigant has neither constitutional nor statutory right to a jury trial. The one exception is the 'Great Lakes Rule' . . ." Frank L. Maraist & Thomas C. Calligan Jr., Admiralty in a Nutshell 358 (4th ed. 2001).
Great Law, The. Hist. The first code of laws enacted in Pennsylvania. The Great Law was passed in 1682 by an assembly that had been called by William Penn.

guarantee clause. (1887) 1. A provision in a contract, deed, or mortgage by which one person promises to pay the obligation of another. [Cases: Guaranty C=>33, 36.] 2. (cap.) U.S. Const. art. IV, § 4, under which the federal government ensures for the states both a republican form of government and protection from invasion or internal insurrection. • The U.S. Supreme Court has consistently treated claims under the Guarantee Clause as nonjusticiable political questions. See Pacific States Tel. & Tel. Co. v. Oregon, 223 U.S. 115, 82 S.Ct. 224 (1912).

guaranteed annual wage plan. Labor law. A wage-payment method in which the employer agrees either to pay employees a predetermined minimum sum each year or to provide a minimum number of hours of employment each year. • A wide variety of guaranteed annual wage plans are used. For example, an employer may agree to pay employees wages for each week in the year, even though work may not be available at certain times of the year. The purpose of such a plan is to provide a stable labor force year-round.

A warranty that the title to a piece of real property is vested in a particular person, given by a title company or abstract company, and based on a title searcher’s opinion of the status of the property’s title. The guarantee is usu. backed by insurance to cover damages resulting from the title searcher’s oversight or negligence in finding recorded legal instruments. Cf. title insurance under insurance. [Cases: Abstracts of Title C=>1; Covenants C=>46.]

guarantee stock. See stock.

guarantee treaty. See treaty (1).

guarantor. (19c) One who makes a guaranty or gives security for a debt. • While a surety’s liability begins with that of the principal, a guarantor’s liability does not begin until the principal debtor is in default. Cf. surety (1). [Cases: Guaranty C=>29, 33, 44.]

"A guarantor either guarantees payment or collection, depending on the words used. ‘Payment guaranteed’ or equivalent words added to a signature mean the signer will pay the instrument if it is not paid when due without a need for the holder to resort to another party. ‘Collection guaranteed’ means resort must first be had to others." Fred H. Miller & Alvin C. Harrell, The Law of Modern Payment Systems § 5.02, at 195 (2003).

guarantor of collectibility. (1881) One who guarantees a debtor’s solvency and is under a duty to pay only if the creditor is unable to collect from the principal debtor after exhausting all legal remedies, including demand, suit, judgment, and any supplementary proceedings. [Cases: Guaranty C=>33, 45, 77(2).]

guarantor of payment. (1814) One who guarantees payment of a negotiable instrument when it is due without the holder first seeking payment from another party. • A guarantor of payment is liable only if “payment guaranteed” or equivalent words are added to the guarantor’s indorsement. [Cases: Guaranty C=>35, 45, 77.]

guarantor trust. See trust.

guaranty (gar-on-tee), n. (16c) 1. A promise to answer for the payment of some debt, or the performance of some duty, in case of the failure of another who is liable in the first instance. • The term is most common in finance and banking contexts. While a warranty relates to things (not persons), is not collateral, and need not be in writing, a guaranty is an undertaking that a person will pay or do some act, is collateral to the duty of the primary obligor, and must be in writing. On the spelling of guaranty vs. guarantee, see the quotation at guarantee (2). — Also termed guaranty contract. [Cases: Guaranty C=>1.]

"Both guaranty and warranty are undertakings by one party to another to indemnify the party assured against some possible default or defect. But a guaranty relates to the future, as a collateral promise designed to protect the promisee from loss in case another fails to perform his duty. A warranty relates to the present or past, and is an independent promise designed to protect the promisee from loss in the event that the facts warranted are not as the promisor states them to be when the contract is made. A warranty is broken as soon as it is made if the facts are not as represented, and is enforceable though oral; whereas a guaranty is not breached until a future default occurs, and is unenforceable unless in writing." Laurence P. Simpson, Handbook on the Law of Suretyship 23 (1950).

“A transaction of guaranty involves at least three parties: a promisor, a creditor (the person to whom the promise is made), and a debtor — although at the time the promise is made, the person denominated the ‘creditor’ need not have extended the credit to the person denominated as the ‘debtor.’ The usual guaranty situation arises when the promisor makes a promise to the creditor either as to the solvency of the debtor or as to the payment of the debt.” 38 Am. Jur. 2d Guaranty § 1, at 996 (1968).

absolute guaranty. (18c) 1. An unqualified promise that the principal will pay or perform. [Cases: Guaranty C=>42(1).] 2. A guarantor’s contractual promise to perform some act for the creditor — such as paying money or delivering property — if the principal debtor defaults.

conditional guaranty. (1813) A guaranty that requires the performance of some condition by the creditor before the guarantor will become liable. [Cases: Guaranty ☛ 42.]

contingent guaranty. (1843) A guaranty in which the guarantor will not be liable unless a specified event occurs.

continuing guaranty. (1817) A guaranty that governs a course of dealing for an indefinite time or by a succession of credits. — Also termed open guaranty. [Cases: Guaranty ☛ 38.]

cross-stream guaranty. A guaranty made by a company for the obligation of another company when both are owned by the same parent company or individual.

downstream guaranty. 1. A parent corporation’s guaranty of a subsidiary’s obligations. 2. A guaranty made for a company by a guarantor who is also a partner, member, or stockholder of the company.

general guaranty. (17c) 1. A guaranty addressed to no specific person, so that anyone who acts on it can enforce it. 2. A guaranty for the principal’s default on obligations that the principal undertakes with anyone.

good-guy guaranty. A limited guaranty by a third-person that leased property or collateral will be kept in good condition and returned to the lessee or lender if a default occurs. • Good-guy guaranties are most commonly associated with real-property leases. — Also written good-guy guarantee. — Also termed good-guy clause. [Cases: Guaranty ☛ 36(8).]

guaranty of collection. (1843) A guaranty that is conditioned on the creditor’s having first exhausted legal remedies against the principal debtor before suing the guarantor. See guarantor of collectibility under GUARANTOR.

guaranty of payment. (1811) A guaranty that is not conditioned on the creditor’s exhausting legal remedies against the principal debtor before suing the guarantor. See guarantor of payment under GUARANTOR.

irrevocable guaranty (i-rēv-ə-kā-bal). (1898) A guaranty that cannot be terminated unless the other parties consent. [Cases: Guaranty ☛ 24.]

limited guaranty. (1831) An agreement to answer for a debt arising from a single transaction. — Also termed noncontinuing guaranty. [Cases: Guaranty ☛ 38(1).]

open guaranty. See continuing guaranty revocable guaranty. (1936) A guaranty that the guarantor may terminate without any other party’s consent. [Cases: Guaranty ☛ 24.]

special guaranty. (18c) 1. A guaranty addressed to a particular person or group of persons, who are the only ones who can enforce it. [Cases: Guaranty ☛ 29, 32.] 2. A guaranty that names a definite person as obligee and that can be accepted only by the person named.

specific guaranty. (18c) A guaranty of a single debt or obligation.

upstream guaranty. A guaranty made by a corporate subsidiary for the parent corporation’s obligations.

guardage. Hist. 1. WARDSHIP. 2. GUARDIANSHIP.

guardhouse lawyer. See JAILHOUSE LAWYER.

guardian. n. (15c) 1. One who has the legal authority and duty to care for another’s person or property, esp. because of the other’s infancy, incapacity, or disability. • A guardian may be appointed either for all purposes or for a specific purpose. — Abbr. gdn. — Also termed custodian. See CONSERVATOR. Cf. WARD (1). [Cases: Guardian and Ward ☛ 1; Mental Health ☛ 101.]

chancery guardian (chan-sor-e). A guardian appointed by a court of chancery to manage both the person and the estate of the ward. [Cases: Guardian and Ward ☛ 10, 17, 36.]

domestic guardian. A guardian appointed in the state in which the ward is domiciled.

foreign guardian. A guardian appointed by a court in a state other than the one in which the ward is domiciled. • A foreign guardian cares for the ward’s property that is located in the state of appointment. [Cases: Guardian and Ward ☛ 166; Mental Health ☛ 194.]

general guardian. A guardian who has general care and control of the ward’s person and estate. [Cases: Guardian and Ward ☛ 29, 36; Mental Health ☛ 484.]

guardian ad litem (ad lt-em or -tam). (18c) A guardian, usu. a lawyer, appointed by the court to appear in a lawsuit on behalf of an incompetent or minor party. — Abbr. GAL. — Also termed special advocate; special guardian; law guardian. Cf. next friend; attorney ad litem under ATTORNEY. [Cases: Infants ☛ 76, 205; Mental Health ☛ 485.]

"[It is necessary to determine whether the lawyer has been appointed as a guardian ad litem (GAL) charged with representing the child’s best interests, or as an advocate, serving as counsel to the child . . . . From the distinction between guardian and advocate flow a series of important consequences, including such matters as whether the attorney may file motions and examine witnesses, whether the attorney may file a report with the court, and whether the attorney may testify. Moreover, in most jurisdictions a GAL has an absolute quasi-judicial immunity for lawsuits for negligence . . . Although a non-lawyer cannot serve as counsel to the child, such an individual might be a GAL or 'special advocate' in some states. Courts have struggled to clarify these roles, and define how children's representatives may participate in different types of proceedings.

guardian by custom. Hist. A person who, under local custom, had the right to act as a minor's guardian.

guardian by election. A guardian chosen by a ward who would otherwise be without one. [Cases: Guardian and Ward ¶ 19.]

guardian by estoppel. See quasi-guardian.

guardian by nature. Hist. The parental guardian of an heir apparent who has not yet reached the age of 21. • Although the common law recognized the father as a guardian by nature and the mother as one only after the father's death, most states have given both parents equal rights of guardianship over their children (see, e.g., N.Y. Dom. Rel. Law § 81). — Also termed natural guardian. [Cases: Guardian and Ward ¶ 4.]

guardian by nurture. Hist. The parental guardian of a child who is not the heir apparent, lasting until the child reaches the age of 14. — Also termed guardian for nurture.

'There are also guardians for nurture, which are, of course, the father or mother, till the infant attains the age of fourteen years and, in default of father or mother, the ordinary usually assigns some discreet persons to take care of the infant's personal estate, and to provide for his maintenance and education.' 1 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 449 (1765).

guardian by statute. See statutory guardian.

guardian de son tort (da sawn: [or son] tor[t]). See quasi-guardian.

guardian for nurture. See guardian by nurture.

guardian in chivalry. Hist. A guardian who, by virtue of knight's service, had custody of the body and lands of a male heir under 21 or a female heir under 14.

• This type of guardian had no accountability for profits.

guardian in socage. New York law. A guardian for a child who has acquired lands by descent. • A guardian is usu. a relative who could not possibly inherit from the child. This type of guardianship applies to both the person and the property of the child and, historically, lasted only until the child was 14, when the child was allowed to select a guardian; now it lasts until the child reaches age 18 or is emancipated.

guardian of property. See guardian of the estate.

guardian of the estate. A guardian responsible for taking care of the property of someone who is incapable of caring for his or her own property because of infancy, incapacity, or disability. — Also termed guardian of property. [Cases: Guardian and Ward ¶ 1, 36; Mental Health ¶ 211, 216.]

guardian of the person. A guardian responsible for taking care of someone who is incapable of caring for himself or herself because of infancy, incapacity, or disability. [Cases: Guardian and Ward ¶ 1, 29; Mental Health ¶ 101.]

law guardian. See guardian ad litem.

natural guardian. 1. Hist. The eldest son's father, until the son turned 21. 2. In the absence of statute, the father of a legitimate child until the child reaches the age of 21. • A father of illegitimate children may be appointed as their guardian upon the mother's death. 3. Most commonly and by statute, either the father or the mother of a minor child — each bearing the title simultaneously. • If one parent dies, the other is the natural guardian. See guardian by nature. [Cases: Guardian and Ward ¶ 7.] partial guardian. A guardian whose rights, duties, and powers are strictly limited to those specified in a court order.

quasi-guardian. A guardian who assumes that role without any authority. • Such a person may be made to account as guardian. — Also termed guardian by estoppel; guardian de son tort. [Cases: Guardian and Ward ¶ 7.]

special guardian. (17c) 1. A guardian who has special or limited powers over the ward's person or estate.

• Examples are guardians who have custody of the estate but not of the person, those who have custody of the person but not of the estate, and guardians ad litem. — Also termed (in civil law) curator ad hoc. See curator (2). 2. See guardian ad litem. [Cases: Mental Health ¶ 495.]

standby guardian. A parent-designated guardian who is appointed to assume responsibility for a child at a future date if the child's parent becomes incapable of caring for the child but who does not divest the parent of custodial rights. • Several states have enacted statutes providing for a standby guardian in the case of a terminally ill single parent. A standby guardian assumes responsibility for a child during periods of the parent's incapacity and upon the parent's death. [Cases: Guardian and Ward ¶ 10.]

statutory guardian. A guardian appointed by a court having special statutory jurisdiction. — Also termed guardian by statute.

successor guardian. An alternate guardian named in a parent's will against the possibility that the first nominee cannot or will not serve as guardian. [Cases: Guardian and Ward ¶ 27; Mental Health ¶ 178.]

testamentary guardian. A guardian nominated by a parent's will for the person and property of a child until the child reaches the age of majority.

2. Hist. A mesne lord who was entitled to treat an infant heir's lands for all practical purposes as the lord's own, enjoying fully their use and whatever profits they yielded. • At the end of the guardianship, when the heir reached majority, no accounting was owed by the mesne lord.

guardian of the poor. Hist. A person in charge of the relief and maintenance of the poor in a parish.
Guardians of the poor administered poor-relief funds raised under the Poor Relief Act of 1601. • The function is now performed by local authorities.

guardian of the spiritualities. Eccles. law. A person who exercises the spiritual and ecclesiastical jurisdiction of a diocese during a vacancy in the see or the absence of the bishop.

guardian of the temporalities. Eccles. law. The person to whom custody of the secular possessions of a vacant see or abbey is committed by the Crown. • Temporalities (secular possessions) are the land, revenue, and tenements that archbishops and bishops have had annexed to their sees.

guardianship. (15c) 1. The fiduciary relationship between a guardian and a ward or other incapacitated person, whereby the guardian assumes the power to make decisions about the ward’s person or property. • A guardianship is almost always an involuntary procedure imposed by the state on the ward. Cf. conservatorship; interdiction. [Cases: Guardian and Ward $\supseteq$ 1; Mental Health $\supseteq$ 101.] 2. The duties and responsibilities of a guardian. — Also termed guardage.

ancillary guardianship. A subservient and subsidiary guardianship in a state other than that in which guardianship is originally granted. [Cases: Guardian and Ward $\supseteq$ 166–172; Mental Health $\supseteq$ 194.1.]

guardianship of the estate. A guardianship in which the guardian can make decisions only about matters regarding the ward’s assets and property. [Cases: Guardian and Ward $\supseteq$ 33; Mental Health $\supseteq$ 211.]

guardianship of the person. A guardianship in which the guardian is authorized to make all significant decisions affecting the ward’s well-being, including the ward’s physical custody, education, health, activities, personal relationships, and general welfare. [Cases: Guardian and Ward $\supseteq$ 29; Mental Health $\supseteq$ 101.]

plenary guardianship. A guardianship in which the guardian can make decisions about both the ward’s estate and the ward’s person. [Cases: Mental Health $\supseteq$ 101.]

standby guardianship. A guardianship in which a parent designates a guardian to assume responsibility for a child at a future date, if the child’s parent becomes incapable of caring for the child, but without divesting the parent of custodial rights.

gubernator navis (g[y]oo-bar-nay-tar nay-vis). [Latin “ship helmsman”] Roman law. The pilot or steersman of a ship. • The gubernator navis could be sued for damages if he negligently caused a collision.

guerrilla warfare. See warfare.

guest. (13c) 1. A person who is entertained or to whom hospitality is extended. 2. A person who pays for services at an establishment, esp. a hotel or restaurant. [Cases: Innkeepers $\supseteq$ 8.] 3. A nonpaying passenger in a motor vehicle. [Cases: Automobiles $\supseteq$ 181(2).] business guest. (1942) Torts. See business visitor (i).

social guest. Torts. A guest who is invited to enter or remain on another person’s property primarily for private entertainment as opposed to entertainment open to the general public. See licensee (2). [Cases: Negligence $\supseteq$ 1041.]

guest statute. (1914) A law that bars a nonpaying passenger in a noncommercial vehicle from suing the host-driver for damages resulting from the driver’s ordinary negligence. • Though once common, guest statutes remain in force in only a few states. — Also termed automobile-guest statute. Cf. family-purpose rule. [Cases: Automobiles $\supseteq$ 181.]

guidage. Hist. 1. A toll or fee for guiding a traveler through strange or dangerous territory. 2. The act of guiding a traveler through strange or dangerous territory.

guild. (14c) 1. A group of persons sharing a common vocation who unite to regulate the affairs of their trade in order to protect and promote their common vocation; specif., a voluntary society or fraternity of persons employed in the same trade or craft, formed for the mutual benefit and protection of its members, who pay a fee (a geld or gild) for its general expenses. — Also termed (in senses 1 and 2) trade guild. 2. Hist. A company or corporation.

guildhall. (14c) Hist. 1. The meeting place of a guild. — Also spelled gildhall. 2. The chief hall of a city, used for holding court and the meetings of the municipal corporation.

guild rent. See rent (i).

guilt. n. (bef. 12c) The fact or state of having committed a wrong, esp. a crime <the state’s burden was to prove guilt beyond a reasonable doubt>. Cf. innocence.

guiltless. adj. (14c) 1. Free from guilt; not having committed a wrong <guiltless of the crime>. 2. Having the quality or appearance of innocence <even though she confessed, the defendant looked guiltless>.

guilty, adj. (bef. 12c) 1. Having committed a crime; responsible for a crime <guilty of armed robbery>. [Cases: Criminal Law $\supseteq$ 273.] 2. Responsible for a civil wrong, such as a tort or breach of contract <guilty of fraudulent misrepresentation>. • guiltily, adv.

guilty, n. 1. A plea of a criminal defendant who does not contest the charges. 2. A jury verdict convicting the defendant of the crime charged.

guilty but mentally ill. (1977) A form of verdict in a criminal case whereby the jury rejects the defendant’s insanity defense but still recommends psychiatric treatment because the defendant is mentally ill. — Abbr. GBMI; GMI. — Also termed guilty but insane; guilty of the act, but so insane as not to be responsible. See insanity defense. [Cases: Criminal Law $\supseteq$ 286.10.]
guilty mind. See MENS REA. guilty plea. See PLEA (1). guilty verdict. See VERDICT. gun-control law. (1968) A statute or ordinance that regulates the sale, possession, or use of firearms. Gun-control laws vary widely among the states, and many cities have gun-control ordinances. Federal law restricts and regulates the illegal sale, possession, and use of firearms. 18 USCA §§ 921-930. See BRADY ACT. [Cases: Weapons (3).] Gun-Free Schools Act. A federal law designed to eliminate weapons in schools. 20 USCA § 7151. The Gun-Free Schools Act provides that each state receiving federal funds for elementary and secondary schools must require school districts to expel for one year any student found to have brought a weapon to school. The Act does, however, provide for a case-by-case modification of the expulsion requirement. [Cases: Schools (177).]
gun-jumping. Slang. The act of unlawfully soliciting the public’s purchase of securities before the SEC approves a registration statement; the making of offers after the filing of a registration statement, but before its effective date, when such offers violate the Securities Act. — Also termed conditioning the market. See REGISTRATION STATEMENT.
gwalstuw (gwawl-stoh). [fr. Old English gwæl “gallows” + stow “place”] Hist. A place where criminals were executed.
gynecocracy (gr-nə-kok-rə-see also jin-ə or jə-nə-). (17c) Government by a woman or by women. — Also spelled Gynaecocracy. gyve (jɪv). (14c) (usu. pl.) Hist. A shackle for the leg.
Habeas corpus (hay-bee-as kor-pus). [Law Latin "that you have the body"] (18c) A writ employed to bring a person before a court for trial from one county to the county where the person allegedly committed the offense. Cf. extradition.

Habeas corpus ad faciendum et recipiendum (hay-bee-as kor-pas ad fay-shee-en-dam et ri-sip-ee-en-dam). [Law Latin "that you have the body to make amends"] In England, a writ used to bring a prisoner against whom a judgment has been entered to some superior court so that the plaintiff can proceed to execute that judgment.

Habeas corpus ad subsequendum (hay-bee-as kor-pas ad sub-si-jis ee-en-dam). [Law Latin "that you have the body to submit to"] A writ directed to someone detaining another person and commanding that the detainee be brought to court. — Usu. shortened to habeas corpus. [Cases: Habeas Corpus C-201.]

Habeas corpus ad testificandum (hay-bee-as kor-pas ad tes-ti-fi-kan-dam). [Law Latin "that you have the body to testify"] A writ used in civil and criminal cases to bring a prisoner to court to testify. [Cases: Witnesses C-18.]

Habeas corpus cum causa. See habeas corpus ad faciendum et recipiendum.

Habeas Corpus Act. 1. One of the four great charters of English liberty (31 Car. 2, 1679), securing to English subjects speedy relief from all unlawful imprisonments. • The other three great charters are Magna Carta, the Petition of Right (3 Car. 1, 1628), and the Bill of Rights (1 Wm. & M. 1689). The Habeas Corpus Act does not apply in Scotland; the corresponding statute is the Criminal Procedure Act of 1701, ch. 6. 2. A statute deriving ultimately from the English statute and enacted in the United States as a constitutional guarantee of personal liberty. [Cases: Habeas Corpus C-201–913.]

Habendum clause (ha-ben-dam). (1829) 1. The part of an instrument, such as a deed or will, that defines the extent of the interest being granted and any conditions affecting the grant. • The introductory words to the clause are ordinarily to have and to hold. — Also termed to-have-and-to-hold clause. [Cases: Deeds C-120.] 2. Oil & gas. The provision in an oil-and-gas lease defining how long the interest granted to the lessee will extend. • Modern oil-and-gas leases typically provide a primary term — a fixed number of years during which the lessee has no obligation to develop the premises — and a secondary term (for “so long thereafter as oil and gas produced”) once development takes place. Most jurisdictions require production of paying quantities to keep the lease in effect. • Often shortened to habendum. — Also termed term clause. [Cases: Mines and Minerals C 73.5.]

“This part of the deed was originally used to determine the interest granted, or to lessen, enlarge, explain or qualify the premises. But it cannot perform the office of divesting the estate already vested by the deed; for it is void if it be repugnant to the estate granted. It has degenerated into a mere useless form; and the premises now contain the specification of the estate granted, and the deed becomes effectual without any habendum. If, however, the premises should be merely descriptive, and no estate mentioned, then the habendum becomes efficient to declare the intention; and it will rebut any implication arising from the silence of the premises.” 4 James Kent, Commentaries on American Law *468 (George Comstock ed., 11th ed. 1866).

habendum et tenendum (ha-ben-dam et ta-ten-dam). [Law Latin] Hist. To have and to hold. • This formal phrase appeared in land deeds and defined the estate or interest being transferred. See HABENDUM CLAUSE; TENENDUM; TO HAVE AND TO HOLD.

habeere (ha-beer-ee), vb. [Latin “to have”] Roman law. To have (the right to) something. • This term was sometimes distinguished from tenere (to hold) and possidere (to possess), with habeere referring to the right, tenere to the fact, and possidere to both.

“Habeere’ has two meanings: for we say that the owner of a thing ‘has’ it and also that a nonowner who holds the thing ‘has’ it. Lastly, we use the word in relation to property deposited with us.” Digest of Justinian 45.1.38.9 (Ulpian, Ad Sabinum 49).

habeere facias possessionem (ha-beer-ee fay-shee-ahs po-zes[h]-ee-oh-nam), n. [Law Latin “that you cause to have possession”] Hist. A writ giving a successful ejectment-action plaintiff the possession of the recovered land. • If the sheriff delivered more than the person was entitled to, a writ of rehabeere facias seisinam could compel the sheriff to return the excess. • Often shortened to habeere facias or hab. fa.

habeere facias seisinam (ha-beer-ee fay-shee-ahs see-zee-nam), n. [Law Latin “that you cause to have seisin”] Hist. A writ of execution commanding the sheriff to give the applicant seisin of the recovered land. • This writ was the proper process for giving seisin of a freehold, as distinguished from giving only a chattel interest in land. See seisin.

habeere facias visum (ha-beer-ee fay-shee-ah vs-sam or -zam), n. [Law Latin “that you cause to have a view”] Hist. A writ allowing a litigant to inspect the lands in controversy.

habeere licere (ha-beer-ee li-seer-ee), vb. [Latin “to allow to have”] Roman law. To stipulate to a purchaser’s right to possess and enjoy property undisturbed. • The term denoted a seller’s duty to indemnify the purchaser if the purchaser was evicted. An evicted purchaser could raise an action on the stipulation or, under Justinian, an actio ex empto against the seller.

habilis causa transferendi domini (hab-a-lis kaw-zo trans-fa-ren-di do-min-ee-i). [Law Latin] Hist. An adequate title for transferring the property. • The phrase appeared in reference to the grantor’s power and intention to convey the property; the title had to be sufficient to support the conveyance of property. — Also spelled habilis causa transferendi domini.

Hand formula. (1972) A balancing test for determining whether conduct has created an unreasonable risk of harm, first formulated by Judge Learned Hand in United States v. Carroll Towing Co., 159 F.2d 169 (2d Cir. 1947). • Under this test, an actor is negligent if the burden of taking adequate precautions against the harm is outweighed by the probable gravity of the harm multiplied by the probability that the harm will occur. [Cases: Negligence C 215.

"The legal standard applicable to most unintentional tort cases is that of negligence, defined by Judge Learned Hand as follows: the defendant is guilty of negligence if the loss caused by the accident, multiplied by the probability of the accident's occurring, exceeds the burden of the precautions that the defendant might have taken to avert it. This is an economic test. . . . Although the Hand formula is of relatively recent origin, the method that it encapsulates has been the basic one used to determine negligence ever since negligence was first adopted as the standard to govern accident cases." Richard A. Posner, Economic Analysis of Law § 6.2, at 122–23 (2d ed. 1977).

hazardous substance. (1882) 1. A toxic pollutant; an imminently dangerous chemical or mixture. [Cases: Environmental Law 413] 2. See hazardous waste under WASTE.

hazardous waste. See WASTE.

hazard pay. (1956) Special compensation for work done under unpleasant or unsafe conditions.

hazing, n. (1850) The practice of physically or emotionally abusing newcomers to an organization as a means of initiation. • In the early 19th century, hazing referred to beating. Hazing was a well-established custom in fraternities at Ivy League universities by the mid-19th century. (One college magazine referred to “the absurd and barbarous custom of hazing, which has long prevailed in the college.” 1 Harvard Mag. 413 (1860).) The first death from hazing was reported at Yale in 1892 (N.Y. Daily News, June 28, 1892). In the late 20th century, many colleges and universities banned hazing and many states passed antihazing statutes establishing criminal penalties. See ANTIHAZING STATUTE.

hazing statute. See ANTIHAZING STATUTE.
head-and-master rule. Hist. The doctrine that the husband alone is authorized to manage community property. • Some courts have held that the rule is unconstitutional gender-based discrimination. • Also termed lord-and-master rule. Cf. equal-management rule.

headnote. (1855) A case summary that appears before the printed judicial opinion in a law report, addresses a point of law, and usu. includes the relevant facts bearing on that point of law. • Also termed syllabus; synopsis; reporter's syllabus. Cf. syllabus.

headnote lawyer. See lawyer.

head of family. A person who supports one or more people related by birth, adoption, or marriage and with whom those persons maintain their permanent domicile. • The phrase head of family appears most commonly in homestead law. For a person to have the status of head of family, there must, of necessity, be at least two people in the family. • Also termed head of a family. Cf. HEAD OF HOUSEHOLD. [Cases: Homestead 18.]

head of household. (1847) 1. The primary income-providing within a family. 2. For income-tax purposes, an unmarried or separated person (other than a surviving spouse) who provides a home for dependents for more than one-half of the taxable year. • A head of household is taxed at a lower rate than a single person who is not head of a household. Cf. head of family; householder. [Cases: Internal Revenue 3549.]

headright. (1930) In American Indian law, a tribemember's right to a pro rata portion of income from a tribal trust fund set up under the Allotment Act of 1906. • This type of trust fund is funded largely by mineral royalties arising from land held or once held by the tribemember's tribe. [Cases: Indians 141(2), 192.]

headright certificate. Hist. A certificate issued under authority of a Republic of Texas law of 1839 providing that a person was entitled to a grant of 640 acres if the person (1) had immigrated to the Republic between 1 October 1837 and 1 January 1840, (2) was a head of household, and (3) actually resided within the Republic with his or her family. • The grant was to be held under the certificate for three years and then conveyed by absolute deed to the settler.

head shop. A retail establishment that sells items intended for use with illegal drugs.

head-silver. See common fine under fine (4).

head-start injunction. See injunction.

headstream. The source of a river.

good health. See good health.

public health. (17c) 1. The health of the community at large. 2. The healthful or sanitary condition of the general body of people or the community en masse; esp., the methods of maintaining the health of the community, as by preventive medicine and organized care for the sick. • Many cities have a "public health department" or other agency responsible for maintaining the public health; federal laws dealing with health are administered by the Department of Health and Human Services. [Cases: Health 350.] sound health. See sound health.

healthcare-insurance receivable. An interest in or claim under an insurance policy, being a right to payment of a monetary obligation for healthcare goods or services provided. UCC § 9-104(c).

healthcare lien. See lien.

healthcare proxy. See advance directive (1).

health insurance. See insurance.

health-insurance order. Family law. An order requiring a parent either to obtain health insurance for a child or to add a child to an existing health insurance policy. • Health-insurance orders often include dental insurance. [Cases: Child Support 158.]

Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act. A 1996 federal law that provides additional health-insurance protections to employees by limiting the effect of preexisting conditions on an employee's ability to obtain insurance; permitting an employee to enroll a new dependent acquired by birth, adoption, or marriage; making it easier for people to maintain insurance coverage while changing jobs; and helping businesses employing fewer than 50 workers to obtain group insurance plans. • The Act is codified in various sections of 18 USCA, 26 USCA, 29 USCA, and 42 USCA. — Abbr. HIPAA. [Cases: Health 196, 257; Insurance 1518, 2460; Labor and Employment 424.]

health law. (18c) A statute, ordinance, or code that prescribes sanitary standards and regulations for the purpose of promoting and preserving the community's health. [Cases: Health 351, 355.] health-maintenance organization. (1973) A group of participating healthcare providers that furnish medical services to enrolled members of a group health-insurance plan. — Abbr. HMO. Cf. managed-care organization; preferred-provider organization. [Cases: Health 294; Insurance 1252.]

health officer. A government official charged with executing and enforcing health laws. • The powers of a health officer (such as the Surgeon General) are regulated by law. [Cases: Health 361.]

hearing. (13c) 1. A judicial session, usu. open to the public, held for the purpose of deciding issues of fact or of law, sometimes with witnesses testifying. The court held a hearing on the admissibility of DNA evidence in the murder case 2. Administrative law. Any setting in which an affected person presents arguments to a decision-maker. A hearing on zoning variations. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure 469.] 3. In legislative practice, any proceeding in which legislators or their designees receive testimony about legislation that might be enacted. The shooting victim spoke at the Senate's hearing on gun control. See preliminary hearing. [Cases: States 34. 4. Equity practice. A trial. 5. English law. Oral argument.

adjudication hearing. (1947) 1. Administrative law. An agency proceeding in which a person's rights and duties are decided after notice and an opportunity to be heard. See procedural due process under due process. Cf. disposition hearing. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure 469.] 2. In child-abuse and neglect proceedings, the trial stage at which the court hears the state's allegations and evidence and decides whether the state has the right to intervene on behalf of the child. [Cases: Infants 203. 3. A juvenile's pleading true to the charges against him, a hearing at which the court hears evidence of the charges and makes a finding of whether the charges are true or not true. Also termed adjudicatory hearing; adjudicatory proceeding.

certification hearing. See transfer hearing.

certification hearing. See certification hearing.

certainty hearing. A hearing in which at least one of the parties has objections regarding one or more matters before the court.

continued-custody hearing. See shelter hearing.

custody hearing. (1935) Family law. A judicial examination of the facts relating to child custody, typically in a divorce or separation proceeding. • Child-neglect and dependency matters are also often dealt with in custody hearings. — Also termed custody proceeding. [Cases: Child Custody 500; Infants 203.]

Daubert hearing. See Daubert hearing.

dependency hearing. See shelter hearing.

detention hearing. (1959) 1. Criminal law. A hearing to determine whether an accused should be released pending trial. See pretrial detention under detention. 2. Family law. A hearing held by a juvenile court to determine whether a juvenile accused of delinquent conduct should be detained, continued in confinement, or released pending an adjudicatory hearing. Cf. adjudication hearing; disposition hearing. [Cases: Infants 192, 203. 3. See shelter hearing.

discharge hearing. See discharge hearing.

dispositional hearing. See disposition hearing.

disposition hearing. (1960) Family law. 1. In child-abuse and neglect proceedings, after an adjudication hearing at which the state proves its allegations, a hearing at which the court hears evidence and enters orders for the child's care, custody, and control. • Typically, the judge determines a plan for services aimed at reunitifying or rehabilitating the family. 2. In a juvenile delinquency case, after an adjudication hearing at which the state proves its case against the juvenile or after a juvenile's pleading true to the charges against him, a hearing at which the court determines what sanctions, if any, will be imposed on the juvenile. • At a disposition hearing, the court balances the best interests of the child against the need to sanction the child for his or her actions. If the juvenile is adjudicated a delinquent, the probation staff prepares a social history of the youth and his family and recommends a disposition. After reviewing the social history and various recommendations, the court enters a disposition. Among the possible juvenile sanctions are a warning, probation, restitution, counseling, or placement in a juvenile-detention facility. Probation is the most common sanction. — Also termed dispositional hearing. Cf. adjudication hearing. 3. See permanency hearing. [Cases: Infants C–203.]

evidentiary hearing. (1952) 1. A hearing at which evidence is presented, as opposed to a hearing at which only legal argument is presented. 2. See administrative proceeding.

exclusionary hearing. (1963) A pretrial hearing conducted to review and determine the admissibility of alleged illegally obtained evidence. [Cases: Criminal Law C–394.6.]

fair hearing. (1831) A judicial or administrative hearing conducted in accordance with due process. [Cases: Constitutional Law C–3881, 4027.]

Fatico hearing. See fatico hearing.

fitness hearing. See transfer hearing.

Franks hearing. See franks hearing.

full adversary hearing. See adjudication hearing.

full hearing. (17c) 1. A hearing at which the parties are allowed notice of each other’s claims and are given ample opportunity to present their positions with evidence and argument. 2. See administrative proceeding.

Garcia hearing. See garcia hearing.

hearing de novo (dee or di noh-voh). (18c) 1. A reviewing court’s decision of a matter anew, giving no deference to a lower court’s findings. [Cases: Appeal and Error C–892; Criminal Law C–1139; Federal Courts C–776.] 2. A new hearing of a matter, conducted as if the original hearing had not taken place.

independent-source hearing. Criminal procedure. A hearing to determine whether evidence was obtained illegally, and if so, whether the evidence is admissible. See independent-source rule. [Cases: Criminal Law C–339.11(2).]

Jackson–Denno hearing. See jackson–denno hearing.

Mapp hearing. See mapp hearing.

neglect hearing. (1952) Family law. A judicial hearing involving alleged child abuse or some other situation in which a child has not been properly cared for by a parent or person legally responsible for the child’s care. • At issue is the civil culpability of the parent or responsible party and the possible loss of children into foster care or — in extreme cases — the termination of parental rights. [Cases: Infants C–203.]

omnibus hearing. (1969) Criminal procedure. A hearing designed to bring judicial oversight to a criminal case at an early stage to make certain that the case is being handled expeditiously and properly. • At an omnibus hearing, the court is primarily interested in ensuring that discovery is being conducted properly, that any necessary evidentiary hearings have been scheduled, and that all issues ripe for decision have been decided.

permanency hearing. (1832) Family law. Under the Adoption and Safe Families Act, a judicial proceeding to determine the future, permanent status of a child in foster care. • Under the Act, the term permanency hearing replaces the term disposition hearing. The permanency hearing must occur within 12 months of a child’s being placed in foster care. The purpose of the hearing is to determine the final direction of the case, whether that means going forward with termination proceedings or continuing plans for family reunification. — Also termed permanency-planning hearing. [Cases: Infants C–203.] preliminary hearing. See preliminary hearing.

preliminary protective hearing. See shelter hearing.

presentence hearing. See presentence hearing.

pretrial hearing. See pretrial conference.

probable-cause hearing. See shelter hearing.

public hearing. (18c) A hearing that, within reasonable limits, is open to anyone who wishes to observe. • Such a hearing is often characterized by the right to appear and present evidence in a case before an impartial tribunal. [Cases: Administrative Law and Procedure C–473.]

reaffirmation hearing. See reaffirmation hearing.

review hearing. Family law. After a finding of child abuse or neglect, a hearing to assess the progress in the case plan. See case plan. [Cases: Infants C–203, 231.]

revocation hearing. (1928) Criminal procedure. A hearing held to determine whether a parolee should be returned to prison for violating the terms of parole. [Cases: Pardon and Parole C–85.]

sentencing hearing. See presentence hearing.

shelter hearing. Family law. A hearing shortly after the state’s removal of a child for suspected abuse or neglect. • The hearing, generally held within 24 to 72 hours after the removal, is for the purpose of determining whether the state has adequate cause to maintain the children in protective care. — Also termed shelter-care hearing; continued-custody hearing; preliminary protective hearing; probable-cause hearing; detention hearing; dependency hearing. [Cases: Infants C–192, 203.]

suppression hearing. (1955) Criminal procedure. A pretrial hearing in which a criminal defendant seeks to prevent the introduction of evidence alleged to have been seized illegally. [Cases: Criminal Law C–394.6.]

termination-of-parental-rights hearing. Family law. A trial or court proceeding, usu. initiated by a state agency, that seeks to sever the legal ties between a parent and child, usu. so that the child can be adopted.

transfer hearing. (1968) Criminal procedure. In a juvenile-court case, a hearing to determine whether the case should be transferred to adult criminal court so that the juvenile may be tried as an adult. Every state, as well as the District of Columbia, has a transfer statute. The United States Supreme Court defined the due-process requirements for transfer hearings in Kent v. United States, 383 U.S. 541, 86 S.Ct. 1045 (1966). — Also termed certification hearing; waiver hearing; fitness hearing. See transfer statute; mandatory waiver; statutory exclusion. [Cases: Infants ☺=68.7.] trial-type hearing. See administrative proceeding.

uncontested hearing. A hearing in which either (1) the parties are in agreement as to all matters before the court, or (2) one of the parties has failed to appear despite notice.

unfair hearing. (1915) A hearing that is not conducted in accordance with due process, as when the defendant is denied the opportunity to prepare or consult with counsel. [Cases: Constitutional Law ☺=3879, 3886.]

Waive hearing. See waive hearing.

waiver hearing. See transfer hearing.

hearing examiner. See administrative-law judge.

hearing officer. 1. administrative-law judge. 2. See judicial officer (3) under officer (1).

hearsay. (16c) 1. Traditionally, testimony that is given by a witness who relates not what he or she knows personally, but what others have said, and that is therefore dependent on the credibility of someone other than the witness. • Such testimony is generally inadmissible under the rules of evidence. 2. In federal law, a statement (either a verbal assertion or nonverbal assertive conduct), other than one made by the declarant while testifying at the trial or hearing, offered in evidence to prove the truth of the matter asserted. Fed. R. Evid. 801(c). — Also termed hearsay evidence; secondhand evidence. Cf. original evidence under evidence. [Cases: Criminal Law ☺=419; Evidence ☺=314–324.]

double hearsay. (1921) A hearsay statement that contains further hearsay statements within it, none of which is admissible unless exceptions to the rule against hearsay can be applied to each level <the double hearsay was the report’s statement that Amy had heard Joe admit running the red light>. Fed. R. Evid. 805. — Also termed multiple hearsay; hearsay within hearsay. [Cases: Criminal Law ☺=419(13); Evidence ☺=314–324.]

hearsay exception. Any of several deviations from the hearsay rule, allowing the admission of otherwise inadmissible statements because the circumstances surrounding the statements provide a basis for considering the statements reliable. [Cases: Criminal Law ☺=419(1.10); Evidence ☺=314.]

tender-years hearsay exception. A hearsay exception for an out-of-court statement by a child ten years of age or younger, usu. describing an act of physical or sexual abuse, when the child is unavailable to testify and the court determines that the time, content, and circumstances of the statement make it reliable. [Cases: Infants ☺=20.]

hearsay rule. (1896) The rule that no assertion offered as testimony can be received unless it is or has been open to test by cross-examination or an opportunity for cross-examination, except as provided otherwise by the rules of evidence, by court rules, or by statute. • The chief reasons for the rule are that out-of-court statements amounting to hearsay are not made under oath and are not subject to cross-examination. Fed. R. Evid. 802. Rule 803 provides 23 explicit exceptions to the hearsay rule, regardless of whether the out-of-court declarant is available to testify, and Rule 804 provides five more exceptions for situations in which the declarant is unavailable to testify. [Cases: Criminal Law ☺=419; Evidence ☺=314–324.]

"[The great hearsay rule ... is a fundamental rule of safety, but one overenforced and abused, — the spoiled child of the family, — proudest scion of our jury-trial rules of evidence, but so petted and indulged that it has become a nuisance and an obstruction to speedy and efficient trials." John H. Wigmore, A Students' Textbook of the Law of Evidence 238 (1935).

hearsay within hearsay. See double hearsay under hearsay.

hearthbalm statute. A state law that abolishes the rights of action for monetary damages as solace for the emotional trauma occasioned by a loss of love and relationship. • The abolished rights of action include alienation of affections, breach of promise to marry, criminal conversation, and seduction of a person over the legal age of consent. Many states today have enacted heartbalm statutes primarily because of the highly speculative nature of the injury and the potential for abusive prosecution, as well as the difficulties of determining the cause of a loss. The terminology in this field is somewhat confusing, since a heartbalm statute abolishes lawsuits that were known as heartbalm suits; some scholars therefore call the abolitionary statutes anti-heartbalm statutes. But the prevailing term is heartbalm statute. — Also written heart-balm statute. — Also termed heart-balm act; anti-heartbalm statute; anti-heartbalm act. [Cases: Breach of Marriage Promise ☺=14; Husband and Wife ☺=323, 341; Seduction ☺=3.]

"Under the English common law, a broken engagement might be followed by a lawsuit for breach of promise to marry. ... [T]he action came to look more like a tort action, in which damages might be given for the injury to the plaintiff's feelings, health and reputation and for expenses such as costs incurred in preparing for a wedding. Widespread criticism of the suit for breach of promise to marry (as well as related tort actions including seduction and alienation of affections) led to the passage of 'heart balm' statutes hearth money. Hist. 1. A tax of two shillings levied on every fireplace in England (14 Car. 2, ch. 10). • This extremely unpopular tax was enacted in 1662 during the reign of Charles II and abolished in 1688. 2. Peter Pence. — Also termed chimney money.

heat of passion. (bef. 12c) Rage, terror, or furious hatred suddenly aroused by some immediate provocation, circumstance that would reduce a murder charge to manslaughter. — Also termed sudden heat; sudden passion; hot blood; sudden heat of passion; furor brevis. Cf. COLD BLOOD; COOL BLOOD. [Cases: Homicide C· 666.]

"To constitute the heat of passion included in this requirement it is not necessary for the passion to be so extreme that the slayer does not know what he is doing at the time; but it must be so extreme that for the moment his action is being directed by passion rather than by reason." Rollin M. Perkins & Ronald N. Boyce, Criminal Law 99 (3d ed. 1982).

heavy work. See work (1).

hedagium (ha-day-je-am), n. [Law Latin] Hist. A toll or custom due at a wharf for landing goods. • The Crown exempted particular persons and societies from this toll.

hedge, vb. (17c) To use two compensating or offsetting transactions to ensure a position of breaking even; esp., to make advance arrangements to safeguard oneself from loss on an investment, speculation, or bet, as when a buyer of commodities insures against unfavorable price changes by buying in advance at a fixed rate for later delivery. [Cases: Commodity Futures Trading Regulation C· 10.] — hedging, n.

hedgebote. See haybote.

hedebote. See herebote.

hedegene (he-jem-ə-niz-am), n. [Law Latin] 1. The quality of being thoughtless and inconsiderate; esp., conduct involving the disregard of others' rights or safety. • Heedlessness is often construed to involve the same degree of fault as recklessness. See recklessness. — heedless, adj.

hegemonism (hi-jem-ə-nism), n. 1. A philosophical position advocating hegemony. 2. All forms of political extension by means of hegemony.

hegemony (hi-jem-ə-ne), n. (16c) 1. Influence, authority, or supremacy over others <the hegemony of capitalism>. 2. The striving for leadership or predominant authority of one state of a confederacy or union over the others; political domination <the former Soviet Union's hegemony over Eastern Europe>. — hegemonic (hej-ə-mon-ik), adj.

heightened scrutiny. See intermediate scrutiny.

heinous (hay-nəs), adj. (14c) (Of a crime or its perpetrator) shockingly atrocious or odious. [Cases: Sentencing and Punishment C· 82, 1684.] — heinousness, n.

heir (air). (13c) 1. A person who, under the laws of intestacy, is entitled to receive an intestate decedent's property. • Also termed legal heir; heir at law; lawful heir; heir general; legitimate heir. Cf. Descent and Distribution C· 20–43; Wills C· 505.] "Laymen — and sometimes first-year law students taking exams — wrongly assume that one who receives real property by will is an heir. Technically, the word 'heir' is reserved for one who receives real property by action of the laws of intestacy, which operate today only in the absence of a valid will." Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests i n.32 (2d ed. 1984).

2. Loosely (in common-law jurisdictions), a person who inherits real or personal property, whether by will or by intestate succession. [Cases: Descent and Distribution C· 20–43; Wills C· 505.] 3. Popularly, a person who has inherited or is in line to inherit great wealth. 4. Civil law. A person who succeeds to the rights and occupies the place of, or is entitled to succeed to the estate of, a decedent, whether by an act of the decedent or by operation of law. • The term heir under the civil law has a more expansive meaning than under the common law.

afterborn heir. (18c) One born after the death of an intestate from whom the heir is entitled to inherit. See afterborn child under child. [Cases: Descent and Distribution C· 7.] apparent heir. See heir apparent.

beneficiary heir (ben-ə-fish ee-er-ee). Civil law. An heir who accepts an inheritance but whose liability for estate debts is limited to the value of the inheritance. • Also termed heir beneficiary. See benefit of inventory. Cf. unconditional heir. [Cases: Descent and Distribution C· 119(2).]

bodily heir. See heir of the body.

coheir (koh-er). One of two or more persons to whom an inheritance descends. [Cases: Descent and Distribution C· 69, 72, 81, 82.]

collateral heir. (17c) One who is neither a direct descendant nor an ancestor of the decedent, but whose kinship is through a collateral line, such as a brother, sister, uncle, aunt, nephew, niece, or cousin. Cf. lineal heir. [Cases: Descent and Distribution C· 32, 37.]
heir

expectant heir. (17c) An heir who has a reversionary or future interest in property, or a chance of succeeding to it. — Also termed heir expectant. See reversion (1); remainder (1). Cf. prospective heir. [Cases: Descent and Distribution C≈68.]

"The reader should be aware that one never has an 'heir' until one is dead; one merely has an 'heir expectant' .... Thus, to say that an heir 'owns' anything is conceptually difficult. But ... some unborn heirs may be entitled to the protection of the courts, and thus be said to have estates." Thomas F. Bergin & Paul G. Haskell, Preface to Estates in Land and Future Interests 26 n.13 (2d ed. 1984).

fideicommissary heir (f-di-de-I kom-i-sair-ee). Roman civil law. A beneficiary of property who succeeds the direct (original) heir. See fideicommissum.

fiduciary heir. Roman civil law. An heir who takes property as a trustee on behalf of a person who is not eligible to receive the property immediately. See fideicommissum.

forced heir. Civil law. (1813) A person whom the testator or donor cannot disinherit because the law reserves part of the estate for that person. • In Louisiana, only descendants are forced heirs. I.a. Civ. Code art. 1493. See legitime. [Cases: Descent and Distribution C≈23.]

heir apparent. (14c) An heir who is certain to inherit unless he or she dies first or is excluded by a valid will. — Also termed apparent heir. Cf. heir presumptive. [Cases: Descent and Distribution C≈68.]

"Heirs apparent are such, whose right of inheritance is indefeasible, provided they outlive the ancestor; as the eldest son or his issue, who must by the course of the common law be heirs to the father whenever he happens to die." Z William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Laws of England 208 (1766).

heir beneficiary. See beneficiary heir.

heir by adoption. A person who has been adopted by (and thus has become an heir to) the deceased. • By statute in most jurisdictions, an adopted child has the same right of succession to intestate property as a biological child unless the deceased clearly expresses a contrary intention. Jurisdictions differ on whether an adopted child may also inherit from his or her biological parents or family. The clear majority view, however, is that upon adoption, a complete severance of rights and obligations occurs and the child forfeits inheritance from all biological relatives.

heir by custom. Hist. In England, a person whose right of inheritance depends on a particular and local custom, such as gavelkind and borough English. See gavelkind; borough English.

heir by devise. (1842) One to whom lands are given by will.

heir conventional. Civil law. One who takes a succession because of a contract or settlement entitling him or her to it.

heir expectant. See expectant heir.

heir in tail. See heir special.

heir male. Hist. The nearest male blood-relation of a decedent.

heir of the blood. (16c) An heir who succeeds to an estate because of consanguinity with the decedent, in either the ascending or descending line.

heir of the body. Archaic. A lineal descendant of the decedent, excluding a surviving spouse, adopted children, and collateral relations. • The term of art heirs of the body was formerly used to create a fee tail (A conveys Blackacre to B and the heirs of his body). — Also termed bodily heir. [Cases: Descent and Distribution C≈17, 21.]

heir presumptive. (17c) An heir who will inherit if the potential intestate dies immediately, but who may be excluded if another, more closely related heir is born. — Also termed presumptive heir. Cf. heir apparent. [Cases: Descent and Distribution C≈68.]

heirs and assigns. (16c) A term of art formerly required to create a fee simple (A conveys Blackacre to B and his heirs and assigns).

heir special. Hist. An heir who receives property according to the nature of the estate held in fee tail. • Heirs special were said to receive property per formam doni ("by the form of the gift"). — Also termed heir in tail. [Cases: Descent and Distribution C≈29.]

instituted heir. See testamentary heir.

irregular heir. Hist. Louisiana law. A person or entity who has a statutory right to take property from an estate in default of the testamentary or legal heirs. [Cases: Descent and Distribution C≈74.]

joint heir. (16c) 1. A coheir. 2. A person who is or will be an heir to both of two designated persons at the death of the survivor of them, the word joint being here applied to the ancestors rather than the heirs.

known heir. (16c) An heir who is present to claim an inheritance, the extent of which depends on there being no closer relative.

laughing heir. (1943) Slang. An heir distant enough to feel no grief when a relative dies and leaves an inheritance (generally viewed as a windfall) to the heir.

lineal heir. (16c) A person who is either an ancestor or a descendant of the decedent, such as a parent or a child. Cf. collateral heir. [Cases: Descent and Distribution C≈20.]

natural heir. (16c) An heir by consanguinity as distinguished from an heir by adoption or a statutory heir (such as a person's spouse). [Cases: Descent and Distribution C≈47(2).]

presumptive heir. See heir presumptive.

pretermitted heir (pre-tar-mit-id). (1841) A child or spouse who has been omitted from a will, as when a testator makes a will naming his or her two children and then, sometime later, has two more children who are not mentioned in the will. — Also termed (more specific) pretermitted child; pretermitted spouse. See Pretermitted-heir statute. [Cases: Descent and Distribution C:20-47.]

Prospective heir. (1855) An heir who may inherit but may be excluded; an heir apparent or an heir presumptive. Cf. expectant heir. [Cases: Descent and Distribution C:20-68.]

Right heir. 1. Hist. The preferred heir to an estate tail, as distinguished from a general heir. • An estate tail would pass to a general heir only on the failure of the preferred heir and his line. 2. (HEIR).

Testamentary heir (tes-ta-men-tee-ree or -tree). Civil law. A person who is appointed as an heir in the decedent’s will. — Also termed instituted heir.

Unconditional heir. Civil law. A person who chooses — expressly or tacitly — to inherit without any reservation or without making an inventory. Cf. beneficiary heir.

Heirloom. (15c) 1. An item of personal property that by local custom, contrary to the usual legal rule, descends to the heir along with the inheritance, instead of passing to the executor or administrator of the last owner. • Traditional examples are an ancestor’s coat of arms, family portraits, title deeds, and keys. Blackstone gave a false etymology that many have copied: “The termination, loom, is of Saxon origin; in which language it signifies a limb or member; so that an heirloom is nothing else, but a limb or member of the inheritance.” 2 William Blackstone, Commentaries on the Law of England 427 (1766). In fact, loom derives from Old English geloma “utensil,” and loom meant “implement, tool.” 2. Populyarly, a treasured possession of great sentimental value passed down through generations within a family.

“Heirlooms, strictly so called, are now very seldom to be met with. They may be defined to be such personal chattels as go, by force of a special custom, to the heir, along with the inheritance, and not to the executor or administrator of the last owner. The owner of an heirloom cannot by his will bequeath the heirloom, if he leave the land to descend to his heir; for in such a case the force of custom will prevail over the bequest, which, not coming into operation until after the decease of the owner, is too late to supersede the custom. . . . In popular language the term ‘heirloom’ is generally applied to plate, pictures or articles of property which have been assigned by deed of settlement or bequeathed by will to trustees, in trust to permit the same to be used and enjoyed by the persons for the time being in possession, under the settlement or will, of the mansion-house in which the articles may be placed.” Joshua Williams, Principles of the Law of Personal Property 13-14 (11th ed. 1881).

Heir portioner. See portioner.

Heirship. (13c) 1. The quality or condition of being an heir. 2. The relation between an ancestor and an heir. [Cases: Descent and Distribution C:20-41.]

Hell-or-high-water clause. (1980) A clause in a personal-property lease requiring the lessee to continue to make full rent payments to the lessor even if the thing leased is unsuitable, defective, or destroyed. [Cases: Bailment C:20.]

Hell-or-high-water rule. (1960) 1. The principle that a personal-property lessee must pay the full rent due, regardless of any claim against the lessor, unless the lessee proves unequal bargaining power or unconscionability. [Cases: Bailment C:20.] 2. Insurance. The principle that an insured's automobile-liability policy will cover the insured while using a vehicle owned by another if the insured uses the vehicle in a manner within the scope of the permission granted. [Cases: Insurance C:2662.]

Henceforth, adv. (16c) From now on <the newly enacted rule will apply henceforth>.

Henfare. Hist. A fine for flight from an accusation of murder.

Henricus Vetus (hen-nbs vee-tas). [Law Latin] Henry the Old (or Elder). • This term was used in early English charters to distinguish King Henry I from later kings of the same name.

Heordpenny (hord-pen-ee), n. See peter-pence.

Hepburn Act. A 1906 federal statute that amended the Interstate Commerce Act to (1) increase the (now defunct) Interstate Commerce Commission's jurisdiction to include pipelines, (2) prohibit free passes except to employees, (3) prohibit common carriers from transporting any products (except timber) in which they had an interest, and (4) require joint tariffs and a uniform system of accounts. [Cases: Carriers C:25, 32(1); Commerce C:85.2.]

Heptarchy (hep-tahr-kee). 1. A government by seven rulers. 2. A nation divided into seven governments, specif. the seven Anglo-Saxon kingdoms of Kent, Sussex, Essex, Wessex, East Anglia, Mercia, and Northumbria existing before the Norman Conquest.

Herald, n. (13c) 1. In England and Scotland, one of several officers responsible for keeping genealogical lists and tables, adjusting armorial bearings, and regulating the ceremonies at royal coronations and funerals. • There are six in England and three in Scotland. 2. Hist. A messenger who announces royal or state proclamations, and who carries diplomatic messages (esp. pronouncements of war, peace, or truce) between kings or countries.

Heralds' College. A royal corporation responsible in England for granting and recording armorial insignia and genealogies, and for dealing with matters of precedence. • The College was founded by Richard III in 1484, is governed by the Earl Marshal, and consists of three kings of arms, six heralds, and four pursuivants. The heralds' books, based on family-lineage inquiries made throughout England, are considered good evidence of pedigrees. The heralds' office is still allowed to make grants of arms and to grant name changes. — Also termed College of Arms.

herbage (have-bij). (15c) In England, an easement or liberty of pasturage on another's land.

herdwerch (hard-wdrk), n. [Law Latin fr. Old English here “army” “proclamation”] Hist. 1. A proclamation summoning the army into the field. 2. A mulct or fine for not joining that army when summoned. 3. A tax or tribute for the support of that army.

corporal hereditament (kor-por-ee-al). A tangible item of property, such as a building, or a fixture. [Cases: Fixtures C-1; Property C-4].

incorporal hereditament (in-kor-por-ee-al). An intangible right in land, such as an easement. • The various types of common law were advowsons, annuities, commons, dignities, franchises, offices, pensions, rents, tithes, and ways.

“There are two quite distinct classes of incorporeal hereditaments: 1. Those which may ripen into corporeal hereditaments. Thus a grant to A for life with remainder to B in fee simple gave B an incorporeal hereditament which becomes corporeal after A's death. 2. Those which can never become corporeal hereditaments but are merely rights over the land of another, e.g., rentcharges.” Robert E. Megarry & M. F. Thompson, A Manual of the Law of Real Property 361 (6th ed. 1993).

hereditary, adj. (15c) Of or relating to inheritance; that descends from an ancestor to an heir.

hereditary succession. See intestate succession under succession (2).

hereditas (ha-red-i-tas), n. [Latin]. 1. Roman law. An inheritance by universal succession to a decedent. • This succession applied whether the decedent died testate or intestate, and whether in trust (ex fideicommissio) for another or not. The comparable right under Praetorian law was bonorum possessio, possession of property that could be the basis of a right to succeed. 2. Hist. An estate transmissible by descent; an inheritance. — Also spelled hereditas.

hereditas damnosa (ha-red-i-tas dam noh-sah). A burdensome inheritance; an inheritance whose debts exceed its assets.

hereditas jacens (ha-red-i-tas jay-senz). [Latin iaco “to lie”] 1. Property belonging to an estate before an heir accepts it. • This term had a similar meaning at common law. See abeyance (2).

“Hereditas jacens is the term applied to an inheritance which has not yet vested, an inheritance, that is to say, which has been 'delata' to a heres extraneus (i.e., voluntary), but has not yet been acquired by him.” Rudolph Sohm, The Institutes: A Textbook of the History and System of Roman Private Law 512 (James Crawford Ledlie transl., 3d ed. 1907).

2. Hist. A decedent’s estate that has no heir or legatee to take it; an escheated estate. — Also termed caducea. See escheat. 3. Hist. An inheritance without legal owner and thus open to the first occupant.

hereditas legitima (ha-red-i-tas lo-jit-i-ma). A succession or inheritance devolving by operation of law rather than by will. See intestacy.

hereditas luctuosa (ha-red-i-tas lok-choo-oh-sah). A sad or mournful inheritance; one that disturbs the natural order of mortality (turbato ordine mortalitatis), as that of a parent inheriting a child's estate. • This term is more literary than legal. — Also termed tristis successio.

hereditas testamentaria (ha-red-i-tas tes-ta-men-tair-ee-a). Testamentary inheritance; succession to an estate under a decedent's will.

heredity. (l6c) 1. Archaic. Intestate succession; the taking of an inheritance by common-law succession. 2. The genetic transmission of characteristics from a parent to a child; the biological law by which characteristics of a living being tend to repeat themselves in the being's descendants.

herein, heres (h<)-ree-deez ek-stray-nee-i:ls). [Latin "extraneous heir"] An heir who has received, by conveyance, an ancestor's estate during the ancestor's lifetime. • An archdeacon. — Also spelled erenach.

heres natus (nay-tas). [Latin "heir by birth"] An heir by reason of birth; an heir at law or by intestacy. Cf. heres factus.

heres necessarius (nes-a-sair-ee-as). [Latin "necessary heir"] Roman law. A slave freed on the testator's death and thus compelled to accept the inheritance.

heres suus (s[y]oo-as). [Latin "one's own heir"] 1. A decedent's proper or natural heir; a lineal descendant of the deceased. 2. Roman law. A free person who was subject to the testator's power (potestas) but who could exercise full legal rights upon the testator's death.

heres suus et necessarius (s[y]oo-as et nes-a-sair-ee-as). [Latin "one's own and necessary heir"] A free person subject to the decedent's potestas. • These heirs were called necessarius because they became heirs by law, not by the decedent's choice. But since this was also true of slaves, when named heirs in a will, the former class was designated suus et necessarius by way of distinction, the word suus denoting that the necessity arose from the relationship to the decedent.

ultimus heres (al-ti-mas). The last or remote heir; the lord.

heresy (her-<)-see), n. (l3c) 1. Opinion or doctrine contrary to (usu. Roman Catholic) church dogma. 2. Hist. In England, an offense against religion, consisting in totally denying Christianity, but in publicly denying some of its essential doctrines; an opinion on divine subjects devised solely by human reason, openly taught, and obstinately maintained. • This offense is now subject only to ecclesiastical correction and is no longer punishable by the secular law. — heretical, adj.

herezeld. Hist. In a feudal system, a vassal's best animal (esp. the best horse, ox, or cow), given in tribute to the superior upon the vassal's death. — Also spelled herield; hereld.

herield. See HEREZELD.

heriots (her-i-at), n. [fr. Old English here “army” + geatwa “trappings”] Hist. A customary tribute of goods and chattels, payable to the lord of the fee on the tenant's death. • Heriot derives from an earlier feudal service consisting of military equipment returned to the lord on the tenant's death; over time it came to refer only to the chattel payment due at the tenant's death.

"We are told that the ancient heriot (heregeatu, military apparel) had at one time consisted of the horses and arms lent by the lord to his man which on the man's death were returned to the lord. . . . Turning to manorial surveys, we find it among the commonest of customs that when a tenant in villeinage dies, the lord shall have the best beast; sometimes a similar due is taken from the goods of the dead freeholder, and it is to these customary dues that the name 'heriot' permanently attaches itself." 1 Frederick Pollock & Frederic W. Maitland, The History of English Law Before the Time of Edward I 312, 317 (2d ed. 1898).

heriots. See heriots.

heriots. A heriot due by custom. • This term is used primarily to distinguish a heriots service from an ordinary heriots.

Hilary Rules. (19c) Hist. A collection of English pleading rules designed to ease the strict pleading requirements of the special-pleading system, esp. by limiting the scope of the general issue in the formed actions and by forcing the defendant to set up affirmatively all matters other than a denial of the breach of duty or of the wrongful act. • Promulgated in England in the 1834 Hilary Term, these rules followed an 1828 initiative to examine procedural laws and other subjects and to report to Parliament changes that might be enacted. The rules had the unintended effect of extending the reach of strict-pleading requirements into new areas of law. Widespread dissatisfaction with the Hilary Rules led to the liberalization of the pleading system under the 1873–1875 Judicature Acts. — Formerly also termed New Rules.

"The failure of the Hilary Rules ... lay in their insistence on special pleading as it was understood late in the eighteenth century. That parties should plead precisely, and clarify as far as possible the issue between them, is one thing; that their endeavours to do so should be judged by the extremely artificial standards of the old system, was quite another." Theodore F.T. Plucknett, A Concise History of the Common Law 416 (5th ed. 1956).

Hilary sittings. In England, a term of court beginning on January 11 of each year and ending on the Wednesday before Easter. • The Hilary sittings were known as Hilary term until 1875. Cf. Easter sittings; Michaelmas sittings; Trinity sittings.

Hilton doctrine. Civil procedure. The rule that in a dispute between parties to an oil-and-gas lease, royalty owners who would lose their rights if the defendant's lease were terminated are regarded as indispensable parties to a proceeding challenging the lease. Hilton v. Atlantic Refining Co., 327 F.2d 217 (5th Cir. 1964). [Cases: Mines and Minerals (78.7).]

"The plaintiff was injured while a passenger on the cruise ship The Himalaya. She sued the master and the boatswain for their negligence because the carrier was contractually exempt from all liability. Because the contract did not have a 'Himalaya clause,' she succeeded. The carrier, having indemnified its employees, ultimately paid the damages. It thus lost its contractual exemption indirectly." Michael J. Sturley, International Uniform Law in National Courts, 27 Va. J. Int'l L. 725, 760 n.101 (1987).

homage (hom-ij). (14c) In feudal times, a ceremony that a new tenant performed for the lord to acknowledge the tenure. • This was the most honorable service that a free tenant might do for a lord. In the ceremony, kneeling before the lord, the tenant placed his hands between the lord's hands while saying, "I become your man from this day forward, of life and limb and earthly honor, and to you will be faithful and loyal, and bear you faith, for the tenements that I claim to hold of you, saving the faith that I owe unto our sovereign lord the king, so help me God." "Homage is an oath of fidelity, acknowledging himself to be the lord's man: wherein the tenant must be ungirt, uncov·ered, kneel upon both knees, and hold both his hands together between the lord's hands sitting before him. This is to be done only to the lord himself." Sir Henry Finch, Law, or a Discourse Thereof (1759).

homage ancestral (hom-ij an ses-tral). [Law French] A type of homage in which a tenant and the tenant's ancestors have held immemorially of another by the service of homage. • This long-standing relationship bound the lord to warrant the title and to hold the tenant clear of all services to superior lords. — Also termed homagium ligium (aw-mahzh on-se-stral).
