The Reading and Writing Processes

Do these situations sound familiar? While reading, you suddenly realize you have read the same sentences several times without gaining any meaning from them. While writing, you stare at the single sentence you have written, unable to think of anything else to write. When you find yourself stuck, step back and look at the processes of reading and writing.

Reading

The reading you do in school requires you to think critically about information and ideas. In order to get the most from a text, prepare your mind for the task before you read, use effective strategies while you read, and take time to process the information after you read.

- Before Reading  Get your mind in gear by considering your purpose for reading a particular piece of writing and by thinking about what you already know about the topic. Preview the text by skimming a bit and considering headings, graphics, and other features. Use this information to predict what the text will discuss and how challenging it will be to read.

- While Reading  As you read, figure out the writer’s main idea about the topic. Notice how the text is organized (by cause and effect or in order of importance, for example) to help you find support for that point. Connect the ideas to your own experiences when you can. If you get confused, slow down, re-read, or jot ideas in a graphic organizer.

- After Reading  Confirm and extend your understanding of the text. Draw conclusions about the writer’s point of view, and evaluate how well the writer communicated the message. Use ideas in the text to create a piece of art, to read more on a related topic, or to solve a problem.

Writing

A perfect text seldom springs fully formed from your mind; instead, you must plan your text before you write and work to improve it after drafting.
- Before Writing First, choose a topic and a form of writing, such as a poem or an editorial. Decide who your readers will be and what you want the text to accomplish. Develop ideas based on your knowledge and on research. Organize the ideas, and jot down your main point.

- While Writing Grab attention and provide background information in an introduction. Elaborate your ideas to support your point, and organize them clearly. Then, wrap things up with a conclusion.

- After Writing To improve a draft, evaluate how clearly you expressed your ideas. Ask a peer to suggest areas that need work. Then, revise. Proofread to correct mistakes. Share your finished work with others, and reflect on what you learned.

You may have noticed that the reading and writing processes involve similar strategies. The chart below summarizes these similarities.

The Reading and Writing Processes

Reading
- Determine your purpose for reading.
- Consider what you already know about the topic.
- Preview the text to make predictions about what it will include.
- Figure out the writer’s main ideas.
- Look for support for the main ideas.
- Notice how the ideas in the text are organized.
- Evaluate the text to decide how accurate it is and its overall quality.
- Relate what you have read to the world around you by creating something, reading further, or applying ideas.
- Reflect on what you have read.

Writing
- Identify your writing purpose and your audience.
- Draw upon what you know about the topic, and do research to find out more.
- Make notes or an outline to plan what the text will include.
- Express your main ideas clearly.
- Support them with details, facts, examples, or anecdotes.
- Follow prewriting notes or an outline to organize your text so readers can easily follow your ideas.
- Evaluate and revise your text. Use peer editors’ comments to help improve your work.
- Relate your writing to the world around you by publishing it.
- Reflect on what you have written.

The Reading and Writing Workshops in this book provide valuable practice for strategies that will help you effectively use these related processes.
Thinking About Reading and Writing

Reading and writing can be a breeze when you race through a gripping mystery novel or dash off an e-mail to a friend. Why, then, can these skills seem difficult when you read a chapter from a science textbook or write a report for social studies?

Practice the Process

Each year, the kinds of things you read and write become more challenging. To master these challenges, you need to keep growing as a reader and as a writer. This growth does not happen all at once. Instead, it is a process, or series of steps. Reading and writing are processes, too. To help you grow as a reader and a writer, this chapter will show you some thinking skills and strategies to use

- before you read or write,
- while you are reading or writing, and
- after you read or write.

TIP

To take a closer look at how you read and write, try using a learning log. A learning log can simply be a spiral notebook. In this notebook you can make notes about what you have read, explore ideas and connections you have found in a reading selection, and list new words you have learned. You can also make notes that will help you write, including prewriting notes and reflections on pieces you have written.

YOUR TURN

- Write down one thing you have read in the past week. It can be anything from a cereal box to a billboard to a Web page. Why did you read it? Did you find it easy or hard to read? What ideas and feelings did it give you?
- Now, write down one thing you have written in the past week—a diary entry, an ad to sell your old bike, or a note to a friend. Where did you get the idea for what you wrote? Why did you write, and who read (or will read) your writing? How did it feel to turn your idea into a piece of writing?
You are reading an article explaining how to create 3-D images on the computer. What is going on in your mind as your eyes go over the words on the page? Even though neither of you is speaking out loud, you and the writer are having a dialogue, or discussion between two people. To understand the writer’s message, use the thinking strategies in the following chart before, while, and after you read.

Strategies Used in the Reading Process

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Before You Read: Prereading</th>
<th></th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>▪ Preview the text and make predictions about what it contains.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>▪ Build background knowledge for what you will read by thinking about what you already know about the topic.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>▪ Determine your purpose for reading by asking questions.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>▪ Focus your mind on what you are about to do.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>While You Read: Reading</th>
<th></th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>▪ Adjust your reading rate based on your purpose for reading, how difficult the text is, and what you already know about the subject.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>▪ Look for patterns of organization to find the most important ideas.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>▪ Revise your predictions about the text.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>▪ Ask yourself questions about the text, and use fix-it strategies when you become confused.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>▪ Make connections between what you are reading and what you already know.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>After You Read: Exploring and Extending Your Reading</th>
<th></th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>▪ Decide whether you achieved your purpose for reading.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>▪ Confirm your understanding of the text’s meaning.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>▪ Draw conclusions and form generalizations based on the text.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>▪ Extend and use the ideas you encountered while reading.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Athletes and dancers know how important it is to warm up before beginning their activities. Warming up is important for readers, too. Try these warm-up exercises before you read. They will help you improve your reading performance.

- Preview the text. Looking over the material before you begin reading helps you know what to expect. Read the title, and quickly read, or skim, the chapter titles, the headings and subheadings, and terms in bold or italics. Look at the pictures and graphics (charts, maps, and so on). Skim a paragraph or two to see if the material seems easy or challenging. Determine the writer’s purpose and audience.

- Make predictions. A prediction is a guess about what lies ahead based on what you already know. What do you think the writer’s main idea, or message, will be? How will ideas be organized? As you read, you will find out whether your predictions were right. If any were incorrect, you can adjust them.

- Build background knowledge. You spot a newspaper article about young people’s allowances. In a flash, you connect the article to your own experience: You would like an increase in your allowance. What you already know about a topic, whether it comes from your own experience or from other things you have read, seen, or heard, is your prior knowledge. It is the base you use to build background knowledge about a topic.

- Determine your purpose for reading. Knowing why you are reading helps you decide how quickly to read and what to focus on. For example, when you read a short story just for fun, you read quickly. If you plan to write a report on the story, you will read more slowly, paying attention to how the writer puts the story elements together. Before you begin reading, make sure you know your purpose.

- Focus your mind. From time to time, you will need to read things that do not spark your interest. When that happens, think of the text as a workout. Use it to sharpen your skills for reading things you do enjoy.
Making Sense

As you read, you interpret, or make sense of, what the writer is saying. These strategies will help you.

- Adjust your reading rate. Pay attention to how quickly you are reading. If you find yourself racing through a text you are reading for information, slow down. If you already know something about the subject of a reading, you may be able to read a bit faster than if the subject is unfamiliar to you.

- Look for patterns of organization. Suppose you notice that an article about gorillas has a cause-and-effect order. You can then figure out that the main idea has something to do with causes and effects, and the supporting details will probably tell about causes or effects. Other patterns you might see include comparison-contrast, problem-solution, chronological (time), and spatial (location).

- Revise your predictions. As you read, you will begin to see whether your predictions were correct. Say that you predicted that an article would try to persuade you that paper bags are better for the environment than plastic ones. You might find as you read that this prediction was wrong because the article merely explains advantages and disadvantages of each type of bag. Based on this new information, you could predict that the author would tell readers to decide for themselves which type of bag was better.

- Ask yourself questions. As you read, make comments, raise questions, and notice what puzzles you. If you find part of the text confusing, try one or more of these fix-it strategies: slow down and re-read the confusing part; read it aloud; put the ideas in the text into your own words; or jot down notes about the important points in the text in a notebook or learning log, or on sticky notes.

- Make connections. You will remember the ideas in a text if you connect them to what you already know. For example, if you read a story about a child who loves horses, think about the time when you petted a horse at the rodeo. That connection gives your mind a place to store the ideas you read in the story.
Way, way out in the middle of Antarctica, six snowmobiles are driving in a row. The people on the snowmobiles are driving very slowly, moving their heads back and forth, as though searching for a lost mitten. But no one has lost a mitten. The six people are scientists. They’re looking for shooting stars—shooting stars that have fallen to Earth.

The scientific name for a shooting star is a meteor. A meteor is a piece of rock that’s been hurtling through space for thousands of years; when the rock hits our atmosphere, it burns and breaks into pieces. Most of these pieces are no bigger than a walnut. Once they fall to Earth, they’re called meteorites.

The empty white ice fields of Antarctica are a good place to look for rocks that have fallen from space. If you’re walking along in the middle of Antarctica and you come upon a rock lying on the ice, you can be pretty sure that rock has fallen from space because the interior of Antarctica has no rocks of its own, just ice and snow.

Most meteorites come from the asteroid belt, a region between Mars and Jupiter that’s full of asteroids, big chunks of cosmic rubble left over from the planet-building phase of our solar system. A much smaller number of meteorites come not from the asteroid belt, but from planets. Rocks from Mars have been found on Earth. So have rocks from the Moon. The rocks probably got blasted off the surface of Mars or the Moon and out into space when another body smashed into them.

Scientists study meteorites because these rocks can tell us things about the places they came from. Rocks from the asteroid belt offer clues to what was going on during the formation of our solar system. Rocks from Mars hold hints about what the planet is made of, its history, and whether anything might ever have lived there.

Mary Roach, “Meteorite Hunters,” Muse
Exploring and Extending

The reading process does not stop when you reach “The End.” For a while, the writer’s ideas echo in your mind. Spend some time exploring and extending those ideas.

- Decide whether you achieved your purpose for reading. If you read for information, did you find out what you wanted to know? If you read to be entertained, were you? Could you have read more carefully or chosen a text that fit your purpose better?

- Confirm your understanding. Make sure you understood what the author said. You might discuss your ideas about the text with others who have read it. Try to sum up the author’s message in your own words. Using a graphic organizer, map out the important points in the text to help you remember them.

- Draw conclusions and form generalizations. Both conclusions and generalizations require you to connect what is on the page with your own knowledge and experience. Drawing conclusions can help you understand a text better. If you read about a place where people are adjusting cameras and reading from scripts, you might conclude that the place is a movie set because you have seen similar scenes before. Forming generalizations can help you understand the world better. You might generalize from the same text and other experiences that moviemaking is hard work.

- Extend and use the ideas you encountered while reading. Try one of these activities.
  1. Be creative. You might write a new ending to a story, illustrate a poem, or add music to a set of directions.
  2. Read on. If you enjoyed the topic, find out more about it in books and magazines or on the Web. If you liked the writer’s style, read more of his or her works.
  3. Link it with life. What you read can help you solve a problem or make a decision. For example, after reading about ways to study better, you might try them yourself.

You have seen the reader’s important part in the reader-writer dialogue. Now you will look at the part the writer plays.
Writing as a Process

Last night you wrote a story in just half an hour. When your friends read it, though, they had trouble following the plot. Chances are, you did not give yourself enough time. Writing is a process made up of many steps, and each step takes time. The chart below shows the steps of the writing process.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Strategies Used in the Writing Process</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Prewriting</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>• Choose a form for your writing and a topic.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>• Identify your purpose and audience.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>• Draft a sentence that expresses your main idea.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>• Gather information about the topic.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>• Begin to organize the information.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Writing a Draft</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>• Draft an introduction that gets your reader’s attention and states your main idea.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>• Provide background information.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>• Follow a plan for putting your ideas in order.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>• State your supporting points and elaborate on them.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>• Wrap things up with a conclusion.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Revising</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>• Evaluate your draft.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>• Revise the draft to improve its content, organization, and style.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Publishing</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>• Proofread the draft to find and correct spelling, punctuation, and grammar mistakes.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>• Share your finished writing with readers.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>• Reflect on your writing experience.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Unlike the steps on an escalator, these steps can go both ways. For example, when you evaluate your draft, you may realize that it is short on details. While you are finding more details, you are back in the prewriting stage. When you add those details to your paper, you return to the drafting stage.

Computers have made it easier than ever to revisit these steps. You can now move, insert, or delete sections of text without having to rewrite an entire piece.
Getting Ready to Write

Before you begin writing, allow yourself plenty of thinking time for each of these prewriting steps.

- Choose a form. Sometimes your teacher will assign the form—for example, a report, or a presentation, or a review. When the choice is up to you, you may choose any form, from a journal entry to an editorial to a set of instructions.

- Choose a topic. To find a topic you will enjoy, try freewriting, brainstorming, or clustering. Then, narrow your topic. Some topics, such as “the solar system,” have too many parts to cover in a short paper. Zero in on just one part, such as “the first moon landing.”

- Identify your purpose and audience. First, decide why you are writing. Do you want to give information, convince readers to share your opinion, entertain people, or express yourself? Once you know your purpose, think about who will read your writing. What does this audience probably already know about the topic? What will you need to explain?

- Draft a sentence that expresses your main idea. Most informative or persuasive papers, even short ones, have one main idea. Like an umbrella, this main idea covers all of the information in the paper. Having a main idea statement, or thesis statement, before you begin writing can help keep you on track.

- Gather information about the topic. For pieces about yourself, you can re-read your diary or talk to your friends and relatives. For other topics, you can read newspapers, books, magazines, and Web sites. You can observe sensory details such as sights and sounds, or you can interview people. As you find information, take notes so you will have solid ideas for your writing.

- Begin to organize the information. Information is easier for readers to understand when it is arranged in a logical order. As you organize your ideas, consider what your readers will need to know first, second, and so on. To help you keep your ideas in order as you write, you may want to make a graphic organizer or an informal outline. Your teacher may also ask you to make a formal outline to guide you in writing some papers.
Making a Start

Now you are ready to begin shaping your ideas into sentences. Do not worry about spelling and grammar at this stage. A draft is like a sketch: No one expects it to be as good as the finished work. You will have plenty of time to improve your writing later.

As you draft your paper, keep your audience in mind. Here are some ways to help your readers follow your ideas.

- Draft an introduction. Think of your introduction as a hook set to catch your readers’ interest. Bait the hook with an attention-getting question, a surprising quote, an amazing fact, or an unusual image. Then, make sure your readers know what they will find in your paper by including your main idea statement. This sentence should tell readers not only what your topic is, but also the main point you will make about the topic.

- Provide background information. Give your readers the background information they will need in order to understand your ideas. You may need to define unfamiliar terms, identify people and places, or provide a bit of history about your topic.

- Follow a plan or order. Keep related ideas and details together. Put each separate idea in its own paragraph. You will also need to think about the overall pattern of your paper. In a story, for example, putting events in chronological (time) order helps readers understand which event happened first, next, and so on. You will learn about other patterns later in this book.

- State your supporting points and elaborate on them. Elaborate means “go into detail.” Details help readers understand and accept your main idea. For example, suppose your main idea is “Students at our school should wear uniforms.” Show your readers how you arrived at that idea by sharing the facts and examples you have collected.

- Wrap things up. Do not just stop writing when you run out of ideas. Leave your readers with a clear sense that you have taken them where your introduction suggested you would. In your conclusion, you might restate your main idea in different words or add a final comment about why that idea is important.

Copyright © by Holt, Rinehart and Winston. All rights reserved.

Writing as a Process 11
Revising

Going Back Over Your Draft

Editing your draft involves three steps: evaluating, revising, and proofreading. Most writers wait to do the last part of editing, proofreading, until they revise their compositions.

- Evaluate your draft. Evaluating means “judging”—deciding what works and what does not work. Re-read your draft at least twice. First, look at the big picture. Make sure the content and organization of your paper are as clear as possible for your readers. Then, look at your individual sentences.

- Revise the draft to improve its content and organization. Here are five ways to revise the content and organization of your writing:
  1. Add. Thoroughly explore your topic by adding sentences or even whole paragraphs of related information or explanations. Add specific words using a thesaurus. Add clue words (then, later, because) to help readers follow your thinking.
  2. Delete. Take out words or ideas that are not related to your main idea. Cut wordy sentences down to size by getting rid of words or phrases that are repeated and long phrases that do not add to the meaning of your sentences.
  3. Replace. Replace any weak support with stronger support.
  4. Rearrange. Move words, sentences, and paragraphs around. Try to find the order that will be clearest to your readers.
  5. Elaborate. Make your ideas clear to readers by supporting them with facts, examples, sensory details, or quotations.

- Revise to improve style. Consider these two points:
  1. Word Choice. Make sure your words communicate your ideas well. Choose precise words rather than vague ones, and avoid using slang or jargon that your readers might not know.
  2. Sentences. Make sure that each sentence is easy to understand and holds your readers’ attention. Mix short and long sentences, and begin your sentences in a variety of ways. Also, try to use different sentence structures, mixing simple, compound, and complex sentences. Combine short, choppy sentences into longer, smoother ones.

T I P Peer evaluation, or having a classmate evaluate your paper, can help you revise your writing. Start by asking your peer evaluator a few questions about your paper. For example, you might ask, “Which is my strongest reason?” Listen to your evaluator’s comments, and use the suggestions that will improve your writing.

When you read a classmate’s work, consider how clear and interesting the paper is. Make specific comments such as, “Now I see how CDs work,” rather than general comments such as, “That was good.” Each Writing Workshop in this book includes specific questions for peer review as well as guidelines for peer and self-evaluation.
You have created a brand-new, one-of-a-kind piece of writing. Now all you have to do is tidy it up and send it out into the world.

- Proofread the draft. To your readers, your work is you, so polish before you publish. Carefully find and correct every mistake in spelling, capitalization, punctuation, grammar, and usage. Have another person proofread as well. A person less familiar with your writing than you are will be less likely to miss errors.

Use the following guidelines to edit your final draft. Mark your edits using the proofreading symbols on page 767.

Guidelines for Proofreading

1. Is every sentence a complete sentence, not a fragment or run-on? (See pages 262 and 265.)
2. Does every sentence begin with a capital letter and end with the correct punctuation mark? (See pages 537 and 561.)
3. Do singular subjects have singular verbs? Do all plural subjects have plural verbs? (See page 422.)
4. Are verb forms and tenses used correctly? (See pages 445 and 458.)
5. Are the forms of personal pronouns used correctly? (See page 475.)
6. Are all words spelled correctly? (See page 613.)

- Share your finished writing with others. Share your writing with the audience you had in mind as you wrote. You might post it on a bulletin board or on the Web, or you might read it into a tape recorder and send the tape to a friend or family member.

- Reflect on your writing experience. When you finish a piece, take a few minutes to think about what you learned in writing it. Also, decide whether you want to add that piece of writing to your portfolio, a collection of pieces that shows what you have accomplished as a writer. Answer the following questions about a finished piece.
• What was the easiest part of writing this piece? What was the hardest part?
• What do you think is the best thing about this piece?
• What skills did you use well in this piece of writing?

Then, think about your entire portfolio so far. Answer these questions in a learning log or on a page inside your portfolio.
• What writing skills have you improved on since you started your portfolio? What skills still need improvement?
• Which piece in your portfolio do you consider your best? What makes it so good?
• What new types of writing would you like to try? What goals can you set for future pieces of writing?

You have probably noticed that the reading and writing processes are similar. The chart below summarizes those similarities.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Reading Process</th>
<th>Writing Process</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Before</td>
<td>Before</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>• You think about what you already know about the topic.</td>
<td>• You think about what you already know about the topic. You may do some research to find out more.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>• You determine your purpose for reading.</td>
<td>• You identify your purpose and audience.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>• You scan the text to make predictions about what the text will include.</td>
<td>• You make notes or an outline to plan what the text will include.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>During</td>
<td>During</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>• As you read, you may take notes on important ideas and details.</td>
<td>• As you write, you follow your prewriting notes or outline.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>• You notice how the writer has organized the text. You look for clue words that help you find the writer's main idea and supporting details.</td>
<td>• You organize your writing and use clue words so that readers can easily follow your main idea and supporting details.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>After</td>
<td>After</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>• You evaluate how well you met your purpose for reading.</td>
<td>• You evaluate and revise the text to make sure you achieve your purpose for writing.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>• You connect what you have read with the real world and to your own experiences.</td>
<td>• You connect your writing with the real world by publishing your ideas.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>• You reflect on what you have read.</td>
<td>• You reflect on what you have written.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Choices

Choose one of the following activities to complete.

► VIEWING AND REPRESENTING
1. Small-Screen Sightings
As you watch television over a few days, take notes on when you see people reading and writing. For example, who is shown reading or writing? What, when, and where do they read or write, and why? Discuss with others how TV represents readers and writers. In a paragraph, explain why you agree or disagree with these representations.

► CAREERS
2. In Your Dreams
Pick a career that interests you—anything from astronaut to zookeeper. Find out how people in that career use reading and writing. What kinds of things do they read and write? Who writes what they read, and who reads what they write? Present an oral report on your findings.

► COLLABORATIVE WRITING
3. Learning Through Teaching
With a small group, explore the reading and writing processes by writing a skit about one or both processes. First, decide who your audience will be (the other members of your own class? a younger class?). Then, split up the tasks: gathering information; writing, revising, and editing drafts; and directing and performing the skit.

► CREATIVE WRITING
4. The Choice Is Yours
Write about the reading process in one of the following ways.

► Use expressive writing in a journal entry about why reading is important.

► Write persuasively—either write an editorial sharing your opinion on the importance of reading or write a review of something you have read recently in which you note how you used the reading process.

► Use expository writing to create a report or presentation on the reading process, or write a set of instructions for using the process.
Do you wonder what it is like to fly over the ocean alone in a small plane? Would you like to know what it is like to live in a different country? You can learn about these experiences by reading autobiographical incidents. An autobiographical incident is a true story about a specific event in a writer’s life. Not only do you learn about the event, but you also learn why the experience is important to the writer. Because writers share, or express, their thoughts and feelings, an autobiographical incident is an example of expressive writing.

You also share autobiographical incidents. When you talk with your grandmother about your track meet, for example, you are telling a story about yourself. Writing an autobiographical incident is a great way to express what you think and feel.

Sharing Experiences

List the topics of three memorable experiences that you would not mind sharing. Then, discuss the following questions with a partner.

- Why are these experiences memorable?
- What did you learn about yourself from these experiences?
If you want to bring about a change, you have to take action. Many people throughout the history of the United States have dared to do just that. These people stood up for what they believed, and their actions led to positive changes in U.S. society. Rosa Parks is one of those people. On December 1, 1955, in Montgomery, Alabama, Rosa Parks challenged a law that said African Americans must sit in a separate section from whites on public buses. Read about the incident in the excerpt from her autobiography on the next page.

Preparing to Read

Making Inferences: Forming Generalizations  A generalization is a statement that applies to many individuals or experiences, not just a specific person or experience. As you read the following excerpt, think about what you could say about Rosa Parks’s experience that would also be true for others who have experienced discrimination.

Chronological Order  Rosa Parks tells her story in chronological order. She starts with the first event and ends with the last. As you read, pay attention to the order, or sequence, of events. How does chronological order help you understand the story?
When I got off from work that evening of December 1, I went to Court Square as usual to catch the Cleveland Avenue bus home. I didn’t look to see who was driving when I got on, and by the time I recognized him, I had already paid my fare. It was the same driver who had put me off the bus back in 1943, twelve years earlier. He was still tall and heavy, with red, rough-looking skin. And he was still mean-looking. I didn’t know if he had been on that route before—they switched the drivers around sometimes. I do know that most of the time if I saw him on a bus, I wouldn’t get on it.

I saw a vacant seat in the middle section of the bus and took it. I didn’t even question why there was a vacant seat even though there were quite a few people standing in the back. If I had thought about it at all, I would probably have figured maybe someone saw me get on and did not take the seat but left it vacant for me. There was a man sitting next to the window and two women across the aisle.

The next stop was the Empire Theater, and some whites got on. They filled up the white seats, and one man was left standing. The driver looked back and noticed the man standing. Then he looked back at us. He said,
“Let me have those front seats,” because they were the front seats of the black section. Didn’t anybody move. We just sat right where we were, the four of us. Then he spoke a second time: “Y’all better make it light on yourselves and let me have those seats.”

The man in the window seat next to me stood up, and I moved to let him pass by me, and then I looked across the aisle and saw that the two women were also standing. I moved over to the window seat. I could not see how standing up was going to “make it light” for me. The more we gave in and complied, the worse they treated us.

I thought back to the time when I used to sit up all night and didn’t sleep, and my grandfather would have his gun right by the fireplace, or if he had his one-horse wagon going anywhere, he always had his gun in the back of the wagon. People always say that I didn’t give up my seat because I was tired, but that isn’t true. I was not tired physically, or no more tired than I usually was at the end of a working day. I was not old, although some people have an image of me as being old then. I was forty-two. No, the only tired I was, was tired of giving in.

The driver of the bus saw me still sitting there, and he asked was I going to stand up. I said, “No.” He said, “Well, I’m going to have you arrested.” Then I said, “You may do that.” These were the only words we said to each other. I didn’t even know his name, which was James Blake, until we were in court together. He got out of the bus and stayed outside for a few minutes, waiting for the police.

As I sat there, I tried not to think about what might happen. I knew that anything was possible. I could be manhandled or beaten. I could be arrested. People have asked me if it occurred to me then that I could be the test case the NAACP had been looking for. I did not think about that at all. In fact if I had let myself think too deeply about what might happen to me, I might have gotten off the bus. But I chose to remain.

2. black section: the back of a public bus, where African Americans were allowed to sit.

3. NAACP: National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, an organization that fights for the equal treatment of African Americans and other minority groups.
Making Inferences: Forming Generalizations

Read Between the Lines  An author will not always give you every detail of a story. Sometimes you will need to make educated guesses about what is happening. Educated guesses are called inferences. To make inferences, combine clues that the author provides with what you already know about the subject.

Example: What you read: The little boy fell on the floor kicking and screaming while his mother held the football.

+ What you know: My mother took my toys away when I was in trouble, and I would get very mad.

Inference: The little boy misbehaved, so his mother took the football away from him.

One type of inference is a generalization. A generalization is a statement that applies to many different situations or people even though it is based on specific situations or people.

Example: What you read: Emma and Miguel do their math homework. Emma and Miguel make A’s in math.

+ What you know: I do my homework in science, and I make good grades.

Generalization: Doing your homework usually leads to good grades.

Notice that the generalization above doesn’t apply just to Emma and Miguel or to math homework. It is a general statement that is true for many different people and school subjects.

Read the paragraph on the next page. Then, form a generalization by using personal knowledge as well as information in the paragraph. Use the steps that follow the paragraph if you need help.
In 1848, Elizabeth Cady Stanton and Lucretia Mott organized the first women’s rights convention. Through their efforts and the persistence of women after them, women eventually gained the right to own property and to vote. In the 1960s, Cesar Chavez helped migrant workers by forming a union, the United Farm Workers. He began strikes and boycotts that won union members better wages and working conditions. Ed Roberts began the movement for the rights of the disabled when he started a program to help disabled students in the 1960s. Other people joined the cause, and eventually Congress passed the Americans with Disabilities Act in 1990. This act made it illegal to discriminate against people with mental or physical disabilities.

Faulty Generalization:
Doing your homework always leads to good grades.

Be careful not to make faulty generalizations. If you can find an exception to your generalization, then it is faulty. Faulty generalizations tend to include words like all, none, never, always, and every.

Faulty Generalization:
Doing your homework always leads to good grades.

Reference Note
For more on generalizations, see page 705 in the Quick Reference Handbook.

STEP 1 Read the entire passage. Look for similarities and connections between the details in the passage.

STEP 2 Connect the details in the passage to something you already know.

STEP 3 Form a generalization that combines what you read with what you know.

STEP 4 Check your answer. Make sure your generalization □ is not faulty (look for a faulty generalization clue word)
  □ is reasonable, based on the information in the passage.

Stanton and Mott helped women. Chavez helped migrant workers. Roberts helped disabled people. They all made a difference.

My parents organized a petition to keep a park from becoming a parking lot. The mayor agreed.

People can often make a difference when they stand up for what they believe.

I say often, not always. My generalization is reasonable because all the details I read were about people who did something and made a difference.
Forming Generalizations

Re-read the reading selection on pages 19–20. Using the steps in the Thinking It Through on page 22, form a generalization about what sometimes happens when people take a stand against something they believe is unfair. Be prepared to support your generalization with information from the reading selection and from your own knowledge.

Chronological Order

It Goes Like This  Like a fictional story, an autobiographical incident has a beginning, middle, and end. The writer uses chronological (or time) order to tell which event happened first, second, third, and so on. If the events were not written in chronological order, you might have a hard time picturing the story in your mind. Read the following autobiographical incident. Which event happened first? second? third?

---

While visiting our grandmother, my sister and I decided we would have a picnic lunch. We packed a bag and walked to the field behind my grandmother’s house.

We chose a nice, shady spot under a big tree. Tamara had started to spread out the blanket when all of a sudden she began to scream and fling her arms wildly. Before I could ask her what was wrong, I was screaming, too. We both ran to the house.

My grandmother heard the noise and came out to see what was wrong. She found that Tamara and I had been stung several times. We definitely upset a family of yellow jackets when we laid our blanket on top of their nest.

Flowcharts are graphic organizers that can help you see the events of an autobiographical incident in the order in which they occurred. In the flowchart on the next page, notice that only major events of the incident above are listed. Details are left out.
To tell the difference between a major event and a supporting detail, look for action. For instance, what is more important: that the picnic spot was nice and shady, or that the narrator and her sister screamed and ran to the house? The main event in that paragraph is the action of the narrator and her sister.

YOUR TURN 3 Charting Chronological Order

Copy the following flowchart onto your paper. Then, read the list of events and details taken from Rosa Parks: My Story below. Decide which sentences are supporting details and which are major events. Place the major events in the flowchart. When you are done, re-read the reading selection on pages 19–20 to see if you listed the major events in the correct order.

White passengers got on the bus, but one white man did not have a seat.

Rosa refused to move.

The bus driver told the African American passengers to move.

The bus driver’s name was James Blake.

Rosa waited for the police.

Rosa got on the bus after work to go home.

The bus driver was tall, heavy, and had a red face.
Context Clues

As you read an autobiographical incident, you may discover that the author uses unfamiliar words to tell about his or her experience. One way to determine the meaning of an unfamiliar word is to use context clues. A word's context is made up of the words and sentences that surround it. Try using context clues to understand the underlined word in this passage taken from Rosa Parks’s autobiography.

I wasn’t frightened at the jail. I was more resigned than anything else. I don’t recall being real angry, not enough to have an argument. I was just prepared to accept whatever I had to face. I asked again if I could make a telephone call. I was ignored.

Rosa Parks, Rosa Parks: My Story

Using Context Clues

STEP 1 Look at the context of the unfamiliar word. See if the words and sentences around it provide clues to the word’s meaning.

STEP 2 Use the context clues to make a guess at the unfamiliar word’s meaning.

STEP 3 Check your definition by inserting it in the passage in place of the unfamiliar word.

The passage says that Rosa was not frightened or angry. It also says she was “prepared to accept” anything.

Since Rosa was not frightened or angry, and she could accept anything, I think resigned means “prepared to accept whatever happens.”

“I wasn’t frightened at the jail. I was more prepared to accept whatever happened than anything else.” That makes sense.

Using context clues, figure out the meanings of these words. The words are underlined in Rosa Parks: My Story.

1. recognized (page 19)
2. vacant (page 19)
3. complied (page 20)
4. manhandled (page 20)
5. occurred (page 20)
When you take a reading test, you may be asked to make an inference. Read the passage below and the question following it. How would you answer the question?

Citizens in Montgomery organized a bus boycott to protest the arrest of Rosa Parks. Leaflets were distributed encouraging African Americans not to ride the bus. Not using public transportation was very difficult for families without cars, so other means of transportation were made available. Black-owned cab companies helped those without cars by charging cheap fares. In addition, car owners and local churches formed car pools.

You can tell from the passage that during the Montgomery bus boycott

A. most African Americans stayed home
B. all African Americans refused to ride the bus
C. many African Americans supported one another
D. all African Americans used taxis to get around

Making Inferences

“You can tell” tells me I will make an educated guess, or an inference.

Answer A—The passage does not mention African Americans staying home.
Answer B—Right away I see a faulty generalization clue word—all. I don’t know if all African Americans refused to ride the bus.
Answer C—I can find specific information to support this choice.
Answer D—Yes, they did use taxis, but they also carpooled. D also has a faulty generalization word—all.

I think answer C is the best answer. I can support it with information from the passage.
Writing About a Life Experience

On the first day of school, you are given your first assignment—Tell the class one thing you did this summer. “This is easy,” you think. “I’ll talk about my rafting trip.” You begin by telling when and where you went, and who was with you. Then, you describe the trip, particularly the dangerous parts. As you share your experience, your teacher and classmates learn something about you. You discover something about yourself, too. It is obvious that you like rafting, but your story also reveals that you like action.

You can discover more about yourself through expressive writing. In this workshop you will have an opportunity to share your thoughts and feelings about a single experience from your life by writing an autobiographical incident. You will use details that tell the reader what happened and how you felt about the incident.

Choose an Experience

Who? Me? What is the one subject you know the best? Why, you are, of course. You have probably had many experiences that you can write about. The first step in writing an autobiographical incident is choosing one particular experience. If you need help coming up with one, consider these suggestions.

- Think about an experience that defines an emotion. When were you most happy, scared, surprised, sad, or angry?
- Brainstorm with your friends and family members. Ask them to recall a memorable experience that involves you.
- Look at your journals and at letters or pictures you have saved.
- Draw a road map of your life like the one to the left. Start with your birth and list all the important events that have happened to you up to now, such as your first day of kindergarten, the day your little sister was born, and the time your baseball team won the city championship.

You Be the Judge Once you have a list of experiences, you want to choose the one that will make the best autobiographical incident to share with an audience. The best experience is one that is meaningful, or important, to you. Ask yourself the questions below to decide which experience is most meaningful.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Question</th>
<th>Example</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Do I remember the experience well?</td>
<td>If you cannot remember all the details, you will not be able to provide a complete picture of the experience. For instance, family members may have told you about your first step, but do you remember all the details?</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Why is this experience important to me?</td>
<td>The reader should know how you felt about this experience or what you learned from it. For example, you might say that forgetting your lines in the school play was your most embarrassing moment.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Am I willing to share this experience with others?</td>
<td>You should feel comfortable letting other people read about your experience. For example, you might not want to share your first crush with the whole class.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

YOUR TURN

Choosing an Experience

Make a list of your experiences. Then, evaluate each experience by answering the questions in the chart above. Finally, choose an experience and complete the following sentences.

I am going to write about ____.

This experience is meaningful to me because ____.
Think About Purpose and Audience

FYI . . . You are telling a story to a group of people when someone interrupts to ask, “How old were you?” Before you can speak, your best friend answers, “Third grade, right?” You agree and continue, only to be stopped again with another question. Again, your best friend answers. Why does your best friend understand the story when everyone else does not?

Before you begin writing your autobiographical incident, think about your purpose and audience. Your purpose is to express your thoughts and feelings by sharing an experience with an audience. Because you may not know exactly who your audience is, you should write as if your audience knows nothing about you. In order for your audience to understand your incident fully, you will need to provide background information, facts that set up the story. The four W’s—What? When? Who? Where?—will help you think about the information your audience needs.

- What: What is the incident? What happened?
- When: When did this event happen? How old were you?
- Who: Besides you, who was involved?
- Where: Where did this event take place? What was this place like?

What? slipped during a dance recital
When? an October night when I was seven years old
Who? me, my parents, my dance teacher, my classmates, and their friends and families
Where? on an auditorium stage that had very bright lights

Thinking About Your Audience

Ask yourself What? When? Who? Where? to help you think of background information you should give your audience. Write your answers on a sheet of paper or in a learning log.

Tip

Part of your style—how you say things—is your voice—the sound of your writing. Most good writing sounds like speech. You can develop your voice by choosing words that sound like you yet fit your audience and purpose.

Describe the voice in each sentence below:

1. I was so embarrassed! I wanted to crawl under the stage.
2. I doubt that I had ever been as embarrassed as I was at that moment.
Recall Descriptive Details

You Had to Be There  You ask a friend about the movie he saw the other night. “Oh, it was great! First, the bad guy terrorizes the city. In the end, though, the good guy wins.” It doesn’t sound so great to you. Why not? Your friend left out the details.

Details will allow your readers to experience an incident just as if they were there. Two types of details that you should include in your essay are action details and sensory details.

- Action details tell what events occurred and what people said.

  After waiting thirty minutes, I finally made it through the ticket line. I raced to the roller coaster only to find another long line.

  “Will I ever get to have fun?” I moaned to my friend.

- Sensory details describe what you see, hear, taste, feel, and smell.

  The coaster went click, click, click as it slowly went uphill. Sweat trickled down my neck as we reached the top.

To re-create your memory, picture the incident in your mind. In a chart like the one below, record the details that you “see.”

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Action Details</th>
<th>Sensory Details</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Beginning: lined up backstage, then walked onto stage. My dance teacher said,</td>
<td>black leotard and tights, gold sequined belt</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>“Break a leg!”</td>
<td>flowery smell of hair spray</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Middle: doing a routine with wooden boxes, was supposed to put one foot on</td>
<td>heard audience laughing</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>the box next to me, missed and slipped—everyone else was on their box except</td>
<td>felt hot, face turned red</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>me</td>
<td>dance teacher had said if we made a mistake</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>to keep smiling</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>End: curtain dropped, I cried</td>
<td>sobbing, salty tears</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Recalling Details

Create a detail chart like the one above. List action details that happened at the beginning, middle, and end of your incident. Then, list sensory details to go with each action detail.
My mom was not happy. Tony and Najla stared at me with open mouths. I hit the ball. It went crashing into the living room window. Tony, Najla, and I were playing baseball in the street. Najla pitched the ball. “I’m in trouble now,” I said.

Wait a minute. What just happened? The mother was angry before the ball broke the window? The narrator is in trouble for playing in the street or because the ball crashed into the living room? This story is confusing.

In order to help their readers understand an incident, writers usually tell events in chronological order. Using Tony, Najla, and I were playing baseball in the street. Najla pitched the ball to me. I hit the ball, and it went crashing into the living room window. Tony and Najla stared at me with open mouths. “I’m in trouble now,” I said. My mom was not happy.

MINI-LESSON

CRITICAL THINKING

Arranging Ideas

chronological order means telling the events of a story in the order that they happened, starting with the first event, going to the second, then the third, and so on. Chronological order helps the reader follow the action of the incident. You can see that a story written chronologically is much easier to understand than one that is not.

TIP

To arrange events in chronological order, you can create a numbered list, draw a flowchart, or make a timeline. Choose one of these methods when you write your answer.

Reference Note

For more on flowcharts, see page 23. For more on time lines, see page 96.
Introduction
- Attention-grabbing opening
- Background information

Body
- Beginning of incident (action details and sensory details)
- Middle of incident (action details and sensory details)
- End of incident (action details and sensory details)

Conclusion
- Reason this incident is important to you

---

Directions and Explanations

Start your paper with an interesting opening. You might ask a question or give a hint about why this incident is important to you. Or, like the writer of the model to the right, you might set the scene. Provide background information by telling your reader what the incident is, who was involved, where the incident took place, and when it happened.

- Write the events in chronological order.
- Write about the beginning of your incident in the first paragraph of the body, the middle of the incident in the second paragraph, and the end of the incident in the third paragraph.
- Describe each part of the incident using action details and sensory details.

---

Drafting Your Autobiographical Incident

Now it is your turn to write an autobiographical incident. As you write, refer to the framework above and the Writer’s Model on the next page.
A Night to Remember

It was a cool October evening. Excitement and family members filled the auditorium. I was only seven years old, but I was the center of attention. Finally, after weeks of preparation, I would show off all my hard work in a dance recital. Everything would be perfect—so I thought.

I waited backstage all dressed up in my black leotard and tights with a gold sequined belt. My hair was pulled back in a French braid, and a strong flowery smell of hair spray hung around me. In a booming voice, the master of ceremonies announced that my class was next. As I pranced proudly onto the stage and into the hot, bright stage lights, my dance teacher whispered, “Break a leg!”

My dance class was doing a routine with boxes two feet by two feet, made of wood. During part of the routine, the entire class was standing in a line on top of our boxes facing the audience. All I had to do in the next move was put one foot on the box next to mine and keep my other foot on my box. It really was an easy move. I was concentrating so much on maintaining the huge smile I had plastered on my face and keeping my head up that I did not look where I was going. I missed my partner’s box altogether and slipped. There I was standing on the stage floor when my classmates were on top of their boxes. I could hear giggles coming from the audience, and I felt the heat rush to my face. I remembered my dance teacher had told my class during rehearsal, “If you make a mistake, keep smiling so the audience will not notice.” I did my best to follow her advice as I continued with the routine.
When the curtain dropped, so did my hopes for the evening. I sobbed loudly, tasting the salt from the tears that streamed down my face. I ran backstage, but no one could console me. I just wanted to be left alone.

Recently I realized I had been a star that night. I was embarrassed, but I fought the urge to run off the stage. Instead, I finished the routine with a smile on my face. Now when friends and family laugh about the time I slipped during a dance recital, I can laugh too.
In the following paper, Anthony C. Rodrigues, a middle school student from Cumberland, Rhode Island, writes about what he learned from a soccer game. Anthony suggests that writers should make “an organizational chart” of action and sensory details to re-create the experience.

In the Net

It was two o’clock on a Sunday afternoon, and I was on my way to my championship soccer game. As I rode up to the field and entered the parking lot, I wondered if this game was going to be like the other years when our team made it to the semifinals but then lost in the championship game. I looked at the field and I remembered seeing the pine trees in the background, but it was difficult to concentrate on their beauty because I was so nervous.

One by one the players arrived and the coach told us to begin our warm-up drills and to take shots on our goaltender. I wondered if during the game I was going to shoot as well as I had in warm-ups.

Finally, it was time. I was in the starting lineup, playing halfback. The whistle blew and the game had officially started. In the first half our team played exceptionally well, but at half time the score was 0–0, and we were all exhausted and cold. In the beginning of the second half we scored a goal. The crowd went up with a roar, and the players were running down the field yelling and screaming. I started to believe that maybe we would win. The second half went on and on. We maintained our 1–0 lead.

We went on to win the game 1–0. I was so excited that I had won my first championship game in all of my six years playing soccer. I learned that anything is possible if I put my mind and soul into it.
Evaluating and Revising Content, Organization, and Style

Take Two When you are ready to evaluate your essay or a classmate’s, you should read the essay twice. In the first reading, look at the essay’s content and organization, using the guidelines below. In the second reading, focus on the sentences, using the Focus on Word Choice on page 38.

First Reading: Content and Organization Use the chart below to evaluate and revise your autobiographical incident to make sure it is easy to understand.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Evaluation Questions</th>
<th>Tips</th>
<th>Revision Techniques</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>1. Does the introduction grab the reader’s attention?</td>
<td>Underline the question or hint that makes the beginning interesting.</td>
<td>If needed, add a question or a hint about the incident’s importance.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2. Does the introduction include enough background information to help the reader understand this incident?</td>
<td>Circle information about what the incident is, who was involved, where the incident took place, and when it happened.</td>
<td>If necessary, add sentences that provide background information for the reader.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3. Are the action details in chronological order?</td>
<td>Put a number by each action detail and check that the numbers match the order in which the action happened.</td>
<td>If necessary, rearrange action details so that they are in chronological order.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4. Do sensory details help the reader experience the incident?</td>
<td>Use a colored marker to highlight the sensory details.</td>
<td>Elaborate on each action detail as needed by adding sensory details that describe what was seen, heard, tasted, felt, or smelled.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5. Does the conclusion tell why the incident is important to the writer?</td>
<td>Put a check mark next to the passage that explains why the event is important.</td>
<td>If needed, add thoughts or feelings that will relate the importance of the incident.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
ONE WRITER’S REVISIONS  This revision is an early draft of the autobiographical incident on page 33.

There I was standing on the stage floor when my classmates were on top of their boxes. I missed my partner’s box altogether and slipped. I could hear giggles coming from the audience, I remembered my dance teacher had told my class during rehearsal, “If you make a mistake, keep smiling so the audience will not notice.”

Responding to the Revision Process

1. Why do you think the writer moved a sentence?
2. Why do you think the writer added information to the paragraph above?

Second Reading: Style  You have revised your essay so that it is well organized and complete. Now, you will check that you have written your autobiographical incident using the best possible sentences. One way to improve your sentences is to use exact verbs. Exact verbs make your writing better because they accurately express a specific action. Look at the following guidelines to see if you need more exact verbs in your essay.

Style Guidelines

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Evaluation Question</th>
<th>Tip</th>
<th>Revision Technique</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Does the autobiographical incident include verbs that accurately describe specific actions?</td>
<td>Put an X through ordinary verbs that are not very descriptive.</td>
<td>Replace the dull verbs with more descriptive ones.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

PEER REVIEW

As you look at your peer’s autobiographical incident, ask yourself:

- Could the writer add dialogue to elaborate on an event? If so, where?
- What do I think of the writer’s experience? Do I know why it is important to the writer?
Exact Verbs

One of your purposes when you are writing an autobiographical incident is to help your readers see the action. Exact verbs can help you accomplish your goal. Exact verbs make your writing style more vivid and precise. Look at the following examples. Notice how exact verbs paint a more specific picture of an event in your mind—they make the action come alive.

Dull Verbs

Jesse ate his dinner.
Natalie said, “I’m leaving!”
Brian went to the store.

Exact Verbs

Jesse gobbled down his dinner.
Natalie screamed, “I’m leaving!”
Brian raced to the store.

COMPUTER TIP

You can use the thesaurus function in a word-processing program to replace dull verbs with exact verbs. Highlight the verb you want to replace, and the thesaurus will list other verbs with the same or similar meanings. From the list, you can choose the exact verb that accurately describes the action.

ONE WRITER’S REVISIONS

As I walked proudly onto the stage and into the hot, bright stage lights, my dance teacher said, “Break a leg!”

Responding to the Revision Process

How did replacing dull verbs with exact verbs improve the sentence above?

YOUR TURN

Evaluating and Revising Your Autobiographical Incident

- First, evaluate and revise the content and organization of your paper, using the guidelines on page 36.
- Next, use the Focus on Word Choice above to see if you need to replace dull verbs in your paper with exact verbs.
- If a peer evaluated your paper, think carefully about your peer’s comments as you revise.
As you write your autobiographical incident, you will use nouns, words that name people, places, things, and ideas. There are two kinds of nouns: common and proper. A common noun names any one of a group of persons, places, things, or ideas. A proper noun names a particular person, place, thing, or idea, and begins with a capital letter. Here are some examples of common and proper nouns.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Common Nouns</th>
<th>Proper Nouns</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>city</td>
<td>Boston</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>religion</td>
<td>Judaism</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>basketball player</td>
<td>Michael Jordan</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>teacher</td>
<td>Mr. Williams</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Notice that the title Mr. is capitalized in the example above. Capitalize a title that comes immediately before the person’s name.

Example:
Washington, D.C., was named after President George Washington.

Most titles are not capitalized when they are not immediately followed by a name.

Example:
Washington, D.C., was named after President George Washington.

Errors in your final draft will be distracting to your readers. If you have another person proofread your narrative, you will be less likely to overlook mistakes.

Capitalize the proper nouns in the following sentences.

Example:
1. My vacation to visit aunt sue in england was the best.
2. Washington, D.C., was named after President George Washington.
Publish Your Essay

Extra, Extra Read All About It  You are finally ready to share your experience with others. After all, that is the purpose of writing an autobiographical incident. How do you go about getting an audience to read your essay?

- One audience could be an older you. Create a scrapbook of your life with the first entry being your autobiographical incident. It will be fun to look back on these memories later in life.

- Make an illustrated book of all the autobiographical incidents from your class. Place the book in your school library for other students to read.

- Create a “Me” poster you could share with your class. Include your autobiographical incident along with pictures and mementos that tell your hobbies, likes and dislikes, and plans for the future.

Reflect on Your Essay

Building Your Portfolio  Your essay is finally written and published. Now, take the time to think about what you wrote and how you wrote. Reflecting on work that you have completed will make you a better writer in the future.

- What did you find difficult when writing about yourself? What did you find easy?

- Think back on all the steps you took before you actually began writing your autobiographical incident. Which of these steps would you use again when writing another paper?

Proofreading, Publishing, and Reflecting on Your Essay

- Correct grammar, usage, and mechanics errors. Pay particular attention to the capitalization of proper nouns.

- Publish your essay using one of the suggestions above.

- Answer the Reflect on Your Essay questions above. Write your responses in a learning log, or include them in your portfolio.
Writing Description for Tests

In an essay test, you may be given a question that asks you to describe a person, place, or thing. Your description should include action details and sensory details. Read the following descriptive writing prompt. How would you answer this type of essay question?

Think about your friends. Choose one and write a letter to your teacher in which you describe your friend. In your letter, describe in detail what your friend looks like and how your friend acts.

TIP Handwriting is important when answering an essay question. Your teacher or another test grader will not be able to read your answer if your handwriting is not legible, or easy to read. To make sure your answer is legible, use your best handwriting. You can print or write in cursive. Choose the style that will be easier for others to read.

THINKING IT THROUGH

Writing a Description

STEP 1 Read the prompt to see what it is asking you to do. What is your topic? Who is your audience?

STEP 2 List action and sensory details that describe your subject. To picture the details, close your eyes and imagine the subject right in front of you.

STEP 3 Decide how you will organize your details. Then, write your description.

STEP 4 Read your description, checking for details that allow your reader to see your subject clearly.

The prompt is asking me to write a letter describing a friend. I will describe how my friend Reggie looks and acts. The audience is my teacher.

Action details: makes good grades, does nice things (shared his sandwich), plays baseball

Sensory details: has curly, short, black hair and brown eyes, is tall (5 feet 3 inches) and thin (about 95 pounds), has a squeaky voice, smells like apples because he always uses apple shampoo

First paragraph: I will tell what Reggie looks like.

Second paragraph: I will tell how he acts.

I will check to see that I have a really good description of what Reggie looks like and how he acts.
Writing a Narrative Poem

Just as there are different types of stories—funny, sad, scary—there are different ways to present them to an audience. One way to present a story is by writing a narrative poem. A narrative poem has characters and a beginning, middle, and end. When you wrote your autobiographical incident, you wrote a prose narrative. Now you have a chance to be a poet by writing a narrative poem.

Start with the Basics  It is not difficult to create a poem once you understand how poems are written. Poets say things in unusual ways. They often use very few words, so they have to select their words very carefully. Poets use sounds and figurative language to express their thoughts and feelings and to paint a picture of people, places, things, and actions.

The following list will provide you with the definitions and examples of the most common poetic elements.

Alliteration is the repetition of consonant sounds, especially sounds at the beginning of words.

Sara certainly saw Sam sail to Sardinia.
Bobby built rubber baby buggy bumpers.

Figurative Language is descriptive language that is not meant to be taken literally. Figurative language is used to express an idea by making a comparison that will give readers a clearer picture of the idea. For example, saying a noise is loud is not as clear as comparing the noise to eighty bowlers all making strikes at the same time. Three types of figurative language are personification, simile, and metaphor.

- Personification is describing something that is not human, such as an animal or object, as if it were human by giving it human qualities.

  The joyful sparrow chirped hello.

  Each morning the alarm clock screams at me to get out of bed.

- Simile compares two different things using the word like or as.

  Like a statue, I sat motionless.

  The leaves fell as quietly as a whisper.

- Metaphor compares two different things by saying one is the other.

  He is a bottomless pit, eating everything in sight.

  When she first wakes up in the morning, her hair is a tangled bird’s nest.

Seeing Is Believing  Read the narrative poem on the next page. What event is the poet relating? What are his thoughts and feelings? What other examples of alliteration or figurative language can you find?
Foul Shot
by Edwin A. Hoey

With two 60’s stuck on the scoreboard
And two seconds hanging on the clock,
The solemn boy in the center of eyes,
Squeezed by silence,
Seeks out the line with his feet,
Soothes his hands along his uniform,
Gently drums the ball against the floor,
Then measures the waiting net,
Raises the ball on his right hand,
Balances it with his left,
Calms it with fingertips,
Breathes,
Crouches,
Waits,
And then through a stretching of stillness,
Nudges it upward.
The ball
Slides up and out,
Lands,
Leans,
Wobbles,
Wavers,
Hesitates,
Exasperates,
Plays it coy
Until every face begs with unsounding screams—
And then

Right before ROAR-UP,
Dives down and through.
Got the Idea? How did the author of “Foul Shot” fit a story into a poem? As you can see, the author based his poem on a specific incident. The poem describes, in order, the events that happened during a free-throw shot. The poet did not take five pages to describe the incident, nor did he just list the events by saying, “The boy bounced the ball a few times, threw it, and it went into the basket.” Instead, he selected his words carefully and used alliteration and figurative language. The poet’s words put you there in the gym. You can see the action clearly and feel the crowd’s hopes and the boy’s nervousness.

The Ball Is in Your Court Now that you have read an example, try writing your own narrative poem by following the steps below.

1. Brainstorm an incident to write about that you don’t mind sharing with others. The incident could be the title of your poem.
2. In the first stanza (group of lines), describe where the character is and how he or she feels. You can write about yourself or a fictional, or made-up, character.
3. In the second stanza, describe what the character is doing and what he or she is thinking. Remember, each line does not have to be a complete sentence. You can write a phrase or one word on a line.
4. In the last stanza of your poem, tell how the incident ends.

Making It Better Once you have written the basic events that make up your narrative poem, you can revise your poem. You want to make sure you have used the best words to relate your ideas and feelings. Use the following suggestions to add poetic sounds and descriptions to your poem. Remember, a poem does not have to rhyme unless you want it to. There are other poetic elements you can use. Look for places where you can

- make several words that are near each other all begin with the same sound
- give human qualities to a feeling, animal, or object
- compare two unlike things using like or as
- compare two unlike things by saying one is the other

Writing and Revising a Narrative Poem Write a narrative poem using the steps above. Then, revise your poem by adding as many of the poetic elements on page 42 as you can. Make a clean copy of your narrative poem and share it with a friend or give a dramatic presentation of your poem to your class.
Telling a Story

The art of storytelling has been around for a very long time. Before people could write, they told stories. Early storytellers would explain things in nature, teach lessons, and retell historical events. The oral tradition continued as these stories were passed from one generation to the next.

People still enjoy listening to a good story. In order to make a story entertaining, storytellers plan and practice before sharing a story with an audience. You can use the following guidelines as you prepare to tell a story.

Plan Your Story

To keep your audience’s attention, plan to give them what they want—action. Choose an incident that has more “doing” than “describing.” Your story will be more interesting if it keeps moving with action details.

You should also plan to tell your story in chronological order. You want your audience to be eager to find out what will happen next. Build suspense by saving the outcome until the very last moment. Jotting down the events on note cards will help you. Use three note cards, one each for the beginning, middle, and end of your story.

Your audience will also want background information. What will the audience need to know to understand your story? Answer this question before you begin practicing.

Practice Your Story

Before you tell your story in front of an audience, you will need to practice what you have planned. You will also need to practice making your story entertaining. How do you do that? It’s simple.
Speak Out  Your voice is the most important tool when telling a story, so use it. Practice speaking loudly enough for the people in the back row to hear; talk slowly and clearly enough for your audience to understand you. Also, practice changing the levels of your voice to change the mood. For instance, whispering adds suspense, and yelling suddenly can show surprise. You can even change your voice entirely. Try using different voices so the audience will know when different characters are speaking.

Show and Tell  Words alone cannot express a story fully. Facial expressions and gestures are important as well. Don’t tell everything; practice showing your actions. If you were telling a story about falling off your mountain bike, you might fall to the floor, grab your knee, and grimace as if in pain. You can include sensory details in your story by using gestures, too. For example, covering your ears shows that you heard a loud noise.

Practice Makes Perfect  Practice telling your story in front of a friend and let your friend make suggestions on how you can improve your presentation. Make sure that you tell your story to your friend the same way you would tell it to a real audience. Keep the events in order, include background information, and use your voice and gestures.

Share Your Story

As you share your story, maintain eye contact with your audience. By looking at your audience, you can tell what they need. If the faces in your audience look puzzled, give background information or a more detailed explanation. If your audience is distracted or, worse, falling asleep, wake them up by performing an action or speaking in a different voice. The more lively you are, the more your audience will enjoy your story. Have fun. Telling a story should be an enjoyable experience for the audience and for you.

Reference Note

Language, especially sayings or names for things, reflects different regions and cultures. For example, do you say you, y’all, or you guys when talking to a group? If possible, include in your story the specific words and phrases that a character from a different culture or part of the country might say.

For more on adjusting volume, rate, pitch (your voice’s highs and lows), and tone (or mood), see page 722. For more on oral interpretation, see page 725.

TIP

For more on adjusting volume, rate, pitch (your voice’s highs and lows), and tone (or mood), see page 722. For more on oral interpretation, see page 725.

YOUR TURN 11  Telling a Story

Follow the guidelines above to share a story and make connections with your classmates. As you tell your story and listen to your classmates’ stories, do you notice similar experiences?
1 Choices

Choose one of the following activities to complete.

➤ CAREERS
1. When I Grow Up  Read an autobiography or biography about a person who has a career that interests you. When you are finished, write a journal entry telling one thing that surprised you about the person and the career.

➤ SPEECH
2. Telling Tales  All cultures have stories that have been passed on from one generation to the next. These stories, called folk tales, come from the oral tradition. Even though folk tales reflect the particular culture that created them, folk tales from different cultures have common features, such as magic and talking animals. Read and compare two folk tales from different cultures, and present your findings to your class in a speech.

➤ DRAMA
3. Another Life  With a few other classmates, present a dramatic interpretation of a play based on the life of a real person. For example, The Miracle Worker is about Helen Keller. You can find plays in the drama section of your school or local library.

➤ WRITING
4. Larger Than Life  Write a tall tale, a story full of exaggerations, by taking a real incident and describing it with larger-than-life details. For instance, you could write about the time you went fishing. The fish you caught weighed two pounds and did not put up much of a fight. In your tall tale, however, the fish weighed twenty pounds, and it took you and a friend to drag it into the boat!

➤ TECHNOLOGY
5. You’ve Got Mail  If you have access to e-mail, send an e-mail message to a friend describing an event that has just occurred in your life. Make sure you give background information so your friend will understand what happened.
You and your classmates are riding the bus to school when suddenly the bus stalls. The bus driver tries to start the bus, but is unsuccessful. A trip that normally takes thirty minutes has turned into a two-hour ordeal. This event has made a big impression on you, but you probably will not see it reported on tonight’s newscast or in tomorrow’s newspaper. What makes some events worth reporting in the news and others not? Newsworthy events are not just recent events. They must also affect many people or simply grab people’s attention.

Looking at the News

Find an example of a news story. You can watch the news on television, listen to the news on the radio, or find a news article in a newspaper or magazine. Then, answer the following questions about the story you found.

- What event is the news story about?
- Who would want to know about this event?
- Why do you think this event made the news?
Reading a Newspaper Article

Can an orphaned baby whale survive without its parents? Students in California are asking the same question. They have been logging onto the Internet to check the status of the baby whale ever since she was returned to the ocean. What started as a history project focusing on current events has turned into something more. Find out what students have learned from this project by reading the news article on the next page.

Preparing to Read

Main Idea  The main idea is the most important point a writer wants to make. Sometimes the main idea is stated. This means it will be written in a sentence or two. Other times the main idea is implied, or suggested. In that case, you will have to look for clues to figure out the writer’s most important point. As you read the following article, see if you can figure out the main idea.

Inverted Pyramid Structure  A news event is made up of many details that answer the 5W-How? questions.

- Who was involved?
- What happened?
- When did the event take place?
- Where did the event occur?
- Why did the event happen?
- How did the event happen?

News writers organize these details in an inverted pyramid (upside-down triangle) structure that begins with the most important details and ends with the least important details. Why do you think news articles are organized this way?
Read the following news article. In a notebook, write the answers to the numbered active-reading questions in the shaded boxes. The underlined words will be discussed in the Vocabulary Mini-Lesson on page 56.

FROM LOS ANGELES TIMES; ORANGE COUNTY EDITION

Whale Watch: Kids Use Internet to Track Progress of Newly Freed J. J.

BY LISA RICHARDSON

MISSION VIEJO—Marine experts from Sea World are using the latest radio transmission technology to monitor J. J., the newly freed gray whale.

Ten sixth-graders at Barcelona Hills Elementary School in Mission Viejo are doing the same thing, using the Internet.

Since the fifteen-month-old whale was orphaned last year, the group has followed her arrival at Sea World, how she has adapted to her handlers and, most recently, her return to the ocean and ride to freedom Tuesday.

The group has amassed an encyclopedic amount of whale knowledge over the months, and students can spout whale family classifications, whale dietary habits, and whale growth patterns with ease.

The group, students of history teacher Kaye Denison, spent most of Thursday morning on the Internet, checking reports on the whale’s progress.

Having followed J. J. for so long, the eleven- and twelve-year-olds have put some thought into why—beyond scientific reasons—saving her life and studying her is important.

They have concluded that even if animals and mammals don’t love human beings, it’s natural for humans to love them.

At their school, the kids care for frogs, snakes, a chameleon, a skunk, an iguana, fish, and water turtles. They are sure the animals are indifferent toward them, but it doesn’t stop them from liking the creatures.

“I heard on the news that you’re not lonely and your life is not so stressful with animals in it, and I think it’s true,” said Sean Kingsmill, twelve.

“I mean, people are lonely,” A. J. Young said.

1. What have the sixth-graders been doing for several months?
2. How are the students keeping track of J. J.’s progress?
“For example, wouldn't you be lonely if you didn't live at all with anybody, and wouldn't you want a dog or something?”

Learning about the whale has been fun. They know that J. J. weighs more than 17,000 pounds, is 29 feet long, and gains 2 pounds every hour. Killer whales are natural enemies of gray whales, and while adults eat plankton, J. J. existed mostly on a mixture of milk, powdered fish, and warm cream passed through a tube into her stomach.

“It’s important to save her because they come from an extinct [endangered] species, and it’s good since they’re coming back up,” said Danielle Howannesian, eleven. “Besides, babies are always cute.”

1. plankton: microscopic animals and plants.

It is largely affection for the baby whale that keeps them interested in her plight.

They sympathized with J. J.’s orphanhood and her efforts to learn survival skills. When she was released, the group felt bad for the whale’s disappointed handlers, who said J. J. did not make her typical sound of gratitude before swimming away. But they believe J. J. will miss her handlers after awhile. . . .

For now the group relies on updates posted to the Sea World Web site . . ., but by next Friday, the satellite tracking system should begin receiving transmissions directly from J. J., and the students will have access to more current information.

But the class doesn’t spend all its time on J. J. For another project in Denison’s class, the children had to pretend they were Hollywood location scouts and, using computers, map important sites in ancient Egypt. The project was coupled with lessons on chemical warfare in neighboring Iraq and political tension in the region.

“My class is actually an ancient history class, but because we’re really involved in current events, we tie in whatever is happening in the world,” Denison said.

Members of the “Barcelona Hills J. J. Fan Club”—what one student dubbed the group—say they will follow the whale’s progress until they are sure she is safe or has joined a pod of whales.

“We’ve been with it this long,” said Lindsay Murray, twelve. “We have to make sure that she’s going to be OK.”

1. plankton: microscopic animals and plants.

3. Do you think the information in the second paragraph above should appear earlier in the article? Why or why not?

4. According to the first paragraph above, why does this project interest students?

5. Is the information in the two paragraphs at the top of this column necessary to understand the class’s “J. J.” project? Why or why not?
Main Idea

Behind the Wheel  What do a bicycle wheel and a news article have in common? You may have noticed that the spokes on a bicycle wheel lead directly to the hub, which is the central point of the wheel. News articles also have a central point, or main idea. All the details lead the reader to the main idea, which can be stated or implied. A stated main idea is one that is written out in a sentence or two.

Example:
Brian Caspar’s quick thinking saved his friend’s life.

An implied main idea, or suggested main idea, is not found in a specific sentence. The reader must look at how the supporting details are related to figure out the implied main idea.

Example:
Brian Caspar found his friend lying unconscious on the floor. After calling 911, Brian began CPR before paramedics arrived. His friend is now in stable condition.

All the details in the example above support the main idea: Brian thought quickly and saved his friend’s life.

Read the news article below. Can you identify the main idea? Use the Thinking It Through steps on the next page if you need help.

To make room for a new playground, Urban Demolition, Inc., used dynamite to demolish the old Paramount Theater on Elm Avenue last Wednesday.

The demolition took approximately nine seconds from start to finish. Dust hovered over Elm Avenue and the surrounding areas for several hours.

Urban Demolition crews estimate that it will take a week for them to clear the rubble.
Inverted Pyramid Structure

Why Save the Best for Last? After dinner, you can have dessert. After you clean your room, you can see your friends. Have you ever asked yourself, “Why do I have to wait for all the good stuff?” You don’t have to wait when you read a news article.

News articles are arranged in an inverted pyramid structure. An inverted pyramid is an upside-down triangle. The wide part of the triangle holds the lead. The lead, which can be more than one paragraph long, is the beginning of a news article. It summarizes the most important information about an event by answering the 5W-How? questions: Who? What? When? Where? Why? and How? Readers who are in a hurry can understand the event by reading just the lead.

The rest of the news article provides readers with more information about the event. The details are presented in order from most important to least important. Why? If an article is longer than the amount of space the news editor has set aside for it, some of the information will need to be cut. Cutting is easy when the least important details are at the end of the article. The news editor can start at the end and cut details until the article fits its assigned space. An inverted pyramid structure saves time for both the reader and the news editor.

Cut to Fit  Edie, a newspaper editor, has room for a four-paragraph article, but the following article has five paragraphs. Notice how Edie rearranged the details so that the important ones are at the beginning, then cut the unimportant details so the article now has only four paragraphs.

Malcolm Scott, CEO of Happy Faces Corporation, announced plans today to build a new amusement park west of downtown.

“I can’t wait for the park to open,” said eleven year old Hector Garza. “I will be the first one in line.”

“We want to give people, especially kids, a fun and exciting place to visit,” said Scott.

The park will be a good source of entertainment, say city officials. It will also create jobs and bring additional money to the community from tourists.

Construction for the new amusement park will begin in September and should be completed by the end of April. The grand opening is scheduled for the beginning of May.

Answers to who, what, and where

“Malcolm Scott, CEO of Happy Faces Corporation, announced plans today to build a new amusement park west of downtown.”

Answers to why

“We want to give people, especially kids, a fun and exciting place to visit.”

Answers to how and when “Construction for the new amusement park will begin in September and should be completed by the end of April.”

TIP  How does an editor decide which details are less important than others? You already know that the most important details answer the 5W-How? questions about the topic. Among the details that follow the lead, those judged more important than others might be ones that

- are more recent
- concern more readers
- are more attention-grabbing

Your Turn 3  Editing a News Article

Make a copy of the news article on pages 51–52. In a group, re-read it with news editors’ eyes.

- After reading, discuss whether the answers to the 5W-How? questions are in the lead. If they are not, rearrange the paragraphs so that the answers are at the beginning.

- Then, cut the least important details in the article so it will fit in a space for a fifteen-paragraph article. You will need to cut four paragraphs. Use the second Tip in the margin above to decide which details are less important.
When you read the newspaper, do you ever get confused by a word you have known for years? When that happens, you have probably stumbled upon a multiple-meaning word, a word with more than one meaning.

A multiple-meaning word can have two or more very different definitions.

Examples:
- Marcus filed the papers. (to put in place)
- Marcus filed the papers. (to move in a line)
- A multiple-meaning word can be used as more than one part of speech.

Examples:
- If you know the answer, raise your hand. (part of the body—noun)
- Can you hand me the hammer, please? (to give by hand—verb)

The following steps can help you find the correct meaning of a multiple-meaning word. The example below is from the reading selection.

Example:

“Members of the ‘Barcelona Hills J. J. Fan Club’—what one student dubbed the group . . .”

STEP 1 Look at how the word is used in the passage. What do the words and sentences around it tell you?

I think dubbed means “you record over the original,” but that definition doesn’t make sense here.

The sentence says that one student dubbed the class the “Barcelona Hills J. J. Fan Club.” It sounds like dubbed means “to name.”

“Members of the Barcelona Hills J. J. Fan Club—what one student named the group . . .” That makes sense to me.

STEP 2 Check your definition in the original sentence. Ask yourself, “Does this definition make sense?”

Use the steps above to define the following multiple-meaning words. The words are underlined for you in the reading selection.

1. marine
   (page 51)
2. spout
   (page 51)
3. concluded
   (page 51)
4. scouts
   (page 52)
5. pod
   (page 52)
Answering Main Idea Questions

Just as a lead will tell you the most important points of a news article, a main idea will tell you the central point of a reading passage. When you take a reading test, you may be asked to identify the main idea of a reading selection. Read the following passage and question. How would you answer the question?

Gray whales exhibit a number of interesting behaviors. They often show their flukes, or tails, when they dive. A diving whale is said to be sounding. Gray whales can also leap out of the water and fall back, creating a big splash. This type of behavior is called breaching. Spyhopping occurs when a whale peeks its head vertically out of the water, possibly to see above the surface. You can see the behaviors of gray whales off the west coast of the United States from late fall until early spring.

What is the main idea of this passage?

A. Whale watching is a fun activity.
B. Whales can leap out of the water.
C. Spyhopping allows whales to see above the surface.
D. Gray whales display many interesting behaviors.

---

Identifying the Main Idea

1. STEP 1 Decide what the question asks.
   - I need to find the main idea.
2. STEP 2 Look at what all the details have in common. The details should point to the main idea. Hint: Pay attention to the first and last sentences. Sometimes you may find a sentence that states the main idea.
   - All of the details describe the behaviors of gray whales. The first sentence tells me that gray whales have different behaviors, and the last sentence tells me where and when I can see them.
3. STEP 3 State the main idea in your own words. Then, look for an answer that closely matches your own. Rule out answers that are obviously wrong.
   - Gray whales exhibit three different behaviors. Answer choice D says something like that.
4. STEP 4 Check to make sure that the details in the paragraph or passage support your answer.
   - The different behaviors of gray whales are sounding, breaching, and spyhopping. Those details support my answer.
Writing a Newspaper Article

The headlines read “Mayor Honors Sixth-Grade Student,” “Wind Rips Roof off Middle School,” and “Girl Saves Brother from Shark Attack.” Interesting events occur every day everywhere—even where you live. Would you like to be the one to tell the story? You can, by writing a news article.

News articles are a form of expository, or informative, writing. They provide readers with information about events that have happened recently. In this Writing Workshop you will write a newspaper article. Your article will explain an interesting event of your choice.

Choose and Evaluate an Event

Look and Listen
Interesting events will not just fall into your lap. To find one, you may need to do a little digging. You won’t be digging with a shovel, though. Instead, you will use your eyes and ears. Here are some suggestions you can use to find an event that has already happened.

- Talk to presidents and sponsors of clubs at your school about events that have happened recently.
- Ask members of local organizations, such as the PTA or city council, about recent decisions they have made.
- Make a list of recent events you have observed firsthand.
Is It Worth It? Would you spend all your time gathering, organizing, writing, revising, and publishing information about an event if no one is going to find your article interesting? Of course not. Make your time and the readers’ time worthwhile by writing about an event that is newsworthy. An event is newsworthy if it has at least one of the following characteristics.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Newsworthy Characteristic</th>
<th>Example</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>makes a difference in people’s lives</td>
<td>World leaders announce plans to help nations’ starving people.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>is current</td>
<td>A hurricane slams into the East Coast.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>involves people who are famous or in power</td>
<td>A famous singer gives a free concert.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>touches people’s emotions</td>
<td>Students organize a fund-raiser to help an animal shelter buy supplies.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

An article’s newsworthiness also depends on the purpose of the newspaper. For example, school or community newspapers generally focus on local events. However, city and national newspapers focus on a range of events, from local to worldwide.

Choosing and Evaluating an Event

- Make a list of events that have happened recently in your school or community.
- Then, evaluate each event on your list by looking for newsworthy characteristics. (Assume you are writing for a community or school newspaper.)
- Choose the event with the greatest number of newsworthy characteristics as the subject of your news article.
Identify Your Audience

Who Wants to Know? The school board meeting is over. Your teacher wants to know if the school board approved a pay raise for teachers, but you want to know what the board decided about school uniforms.

Different events interest different people. The people who will be interested in the event you have chosen are your audience. To figure out the audience for your news article, ask yourself, “Who will be interested in this event, and why?”

Here is how a student identified his news article’s audience.

Event: I am writing about the principal approving a longer passing period between classes at my school.

Audience: I think teachers and students will be interested because this event happened at school, and the longer passing period will affect them.

Identifying Your Audience

In your notebook, complete the sentences below to identify the audience for your news article.

Event: I am writing about ____.

Audience: I think ____ will be interested because ____.

Gather Details

Just as you want all the facts of your friend’s encounter with a sports star, your audience will want all the facts of the newsworthy event. Answers to the 5W-How? questions will provide your readers with the facts, or details, of the event. The following chart shows specific questions you should try to answer as you gather the details for your news article.
Who? Who was involved in the event? (Names are important, but also try to get other details about the people involved, such as titles, ages, or professions.)

What? What was the event?

When? When did the event occur? (Get the time and date of the event.)

Where? Where did the event take place? (Find out the address or location.)

Why? Why did the event happen?

How? How did the event happen? (List the smaller events that made up the event.)

The 5W-How? questions will give your audience the basic information about the event, but some readers will want to know even more. To help your audience fully understand the event, find the answers to these questions as well.

- What are the effects of the event?
- How do people feel about the event?

TIP A news article’s voice is objective, or factual. When you write a news article, use words that simply state the facts. For instance, instead of writing about a “cute cocker spaniel,” stick to the facts and write about a “one-year-old cocker spaniel.” The dog’s age is a fact because it can be proven. “Cute,” on the other hand, is a matter of opinion.

Get to the Source You know what information you need, but how do you go about getting the answers to your questions? Gather details for your news article by interviewing people who witnessed the event or played a part in it. Even if you observed the event firsthand, you should still talk to other people.

As you interview, take notes about what people say, but also record a few direct quotations. In other words, write down what people say word-for-word instead of summarizing. Readers find direct quotations interesting because they have more force than a summary. You can see the power of a direct quotation in the example on the next page.

TIP In an interview, avoid asking questions with yes or no answers. Instead, ask questions that will give you more information, such as, “What do you think about the longer passing period?”
Summary: Neil Armstrong was the first man to walk on the moon. Armstrong felt his first step was an exciting moment not only for him but for the rest of the world as well.

Direct Quotation: Neil Armstrong was the first man to walk on the moon. As he made his first step he said, “That’s one small step for [a] man, one giant leap for mankind.”

The following example shows the notes one student took as he interviewed people. Notice that he includes details that answer the 5W-How? questions, information about the effects of the event, and people’s reactions to it. The student also recorded direct quotations that support some of the details.

Who? Principal Reyes

What? He approved a longer passing period between classes.

When? He announced it at today’s pep rally.

Where? Main Street Middle School

Why? Principal Reyes agreed that students needed more time to go to their lockers and the restroom between classes.

How? Morgan Sykes passed a petition around last Wed. and Thurs. It was given to Principal Reyes on Fri.—134 people signed it.

What are the effects of the event? Starts Oct. 7. Classes—5 minutes shorter except 7th period. Passing period—5 minutes longer. School is still over at 3:00 P.M.

How do people feel about the event?

Negative reaction: Toby Washington, 7th grade: “I like my classes. I don’t want them to be five minutes shorter. Those five minutes give me a chance to start my homework.”

Positive reaction: Paul Brook, 6th-grade history teacher: “I’m so happy that instruction will not be interrupted by students leaving class to go to the restroom or their lockers.”

Positive reaction: Joanna Tran, 6th grade: “The extra time will help me clear my head after one class and gear up for the next.”
Organize and Evaluate Details

Go Ahead, Spoil Them! Your readers not only want information about an event, they want to read the most important information first. Give your readers what they want by organizing the details you have gathered in an inverted pyramid structure. In an inverted pyramid structure, the most important details appear at the beginning of a news article, and the least important details appear at the end. The inverted pyramid structure of a news article looks like this:

To arrange your details in an inverted pyramid structure, start by identifying the details that will go in the lead. The lead is the beginning of an article, and it provides the answers to the 5W-How? questions. If your audience reads only the lead, they will still have an idea of what happened.

Once you know which details go in the lead, evaluate the remaining details, and arrange them in descending, or decreasing, order of importance. How do you organize details from most important to least important? Look at your details about the effects of the event and people’s reactions to it. Think about your audience and ask yourself the questions on the following page.
Which details would give my audience a better understanding of the event? The answer to this question will point to the most important details, the ones that will follow the lead.

What additional information is likely to interest my whole audience? You have identified information for the lead and other important details of the event. Look over your remaining notes. What other information is likely to interest all your readers? This information, though less important than the lead, is important enough for the middle of the article.

What information might interest just a few members of my audience? Your audience may contain a group with a special interest in certain details. The “least important” details may still be of interest to this group. These types of details go at the end of the article.

This is how the student writing about the passing period change arranged the details for his news article.

Lead: answers to the 5W-How? questions

Most important details:
—information about when the passing period starts and the effect on class time, passing period time, and school hours

Less important details:
—information about how students feel about the longer passing period
—positive quotation from Joanna Tran and negative quotation from Toby Washington

Least important details:
—information about teachers appreciating the extra time as much as the students do and positive quotation from Paul Brook

Organizing and Evaluating Details

Organize your details in an inverted pyramid structure. First, place the answers to the 5W-How? questions in the lead. Then, arrange the remaining details from most important to least important by asking yourself the questions that appear at the top of this page.
Have you ever set a series of dominoes upright in a row? When the first domino in line tips over, it causes the next one to fall, which causes the next one to fall, and so on. Analyzing a cause-and-effect chain is like watching a chain of dominoes, because it involves looking at how one thing leads to another.

Below is an example of a cause-and-effect chain. Can you see how each cause leads to an effect, which then causes another effect, and so on?

Your news article will explain the causes and the effects of an event. As you write, make sure that the relationships between the causes and effects are clear. If you leave out a portion of the cause-and-effect chain, your audience may not fully understand the event. For example, suppose your little brothers are happily playing together in the living room. You leave to get a snack. When you come back, one brother is crying, and the other brother is yelling. What happened? You missed what caused your brothers to fight. Causes and effects need to be connected clearly in order for them to make sense.

Create five cause-and-effect chains. The following causes will be the first step in each chain. Use your imagination and experience to complete the chains. Each chain should have at least three steps.

1. A river overflows due to heavy rain.
2. A tornado is seen near town.
3. Sixth-grade students take snacks to a local nursing home.
4. Ms. Martinez, a science teacher, wins the Teacher of the Year award.
5. Greg Goldstein sings off-key during the choir’s concert.
Writing

News Article

Framework

Lead
- Attention-grabbing opening
- Answers to the 5W-How? questions

Body
- Most important details
- Less important details
- Least important details

Directions and Explanations

Capture your audience’s attention by beginning your article with an unusual or interesting detail.

Detail
Several animals escaped from Pete’s Pets on Friday.

Unusual Detail
Charlie the chimpanzee led several of his animal friends on a daring escape from Pete’s Pets on Friday.

Then, write a sentence that answers, at least, “Who did what?” Finally, give the remaining answers to the 5W-How? questions.

Keep in mind your lead may be one to three short paragraphs, depending on the amount of information you gathered.

- Organize the remaining details in an inverted pyramid structure. Refer to your responses to Your Turn 7 for the order of these details. Be sure the remaining details include information about the effects of the event and people’s reactions to it.
- Group the details in short paragraphs.
- Place direct quotations after the details they support.

YOUR TURN 8 Writing Your News Article

Now it is your turn to write a news article. As you write,
- keep your audience in mind
- order your details so that the most important ones come first and the least important ones come last
- refer to the framework above and to the Writer’s Model on the next page
Principal Approves Longer Passing Period

A major change has taken place at Main Street Middle School: The period between each class is now five minutes longer. Principal Alan Reyes approved the longer passing period. His decision was announced at today’s pep rally in Loftus Gymnasium.

Eighth-grader Morgan Sykes started the petition that led to the longer passing period. She passed the petition to other students last Wednesday and Thursday. When Principal Reyes received it last Friday, 134 students had signed it.

Principal Reyes agreed that students need extra time between classes. With a longer passing period, students will not have to leave class to go to their lockers or the restroom.

The longer passing period will go into effect on Monday, October 7. From now on, each class except seventh period will be five minutes shorter, and the passing periods will be five minutes longer. School will still be over at 3:00 P.M.

Most students are happy about the change, and they are already making plans for the extended passing time. Sixth-grader Joanna Tran said, “The extra time will help me clear my head after one class and gear up for the next.”

At least one student disapproved of the new passing period. “I like my classes. I don’t want them to be five minutes shorter,” said seventh-grader Toby Washington. “Those five minutes give me a chance to start my homework.”

Most teachers will enjoy the extra time as much as the students will. “I’m so happy that instruction will not be interrupted by students leaving class to go to the restroom or their lockers,” said sixth-grade history teacher Paul Brook.
Mr. Sagers Moves to Cyprus High

Maybe you have heard the rumor about Principal Sagers leaving Olympus Junior High School. Well, it is true. Mr. Sagers was promoted to be the principal of Cyprus High.

The new principal of Olympus Junior High (OJH) will be Linda Mariotti. She has been the assistant principal at Bonneville and at Granite High, a coordinator at the Jones Center, and a language specialist. We will meet her next September.

When we asked Principal Sagers what he would miss the most about OJH, he answered that he would miss the attitude of the community. “Everyone seems to have high expectations of learning,” he said.

Some of Principal Sagers’s greatest accomplishments have been in the area of technology. He said, “We’ve achieved a lot [in the area of technology] in the last two years. We’ve also tried to create a positive climate and beautify the school.” If Principal Sagers were not leaving, he would continue increasing literacy. “The goal was to identify all students not reading on their grade level. We’re using technology as a vehicle to enhance instruction,” he said.

It is hard to go to a new school for everyone, but Principal Sagers said, “The first year at a new high school [for a principal] is extremely difficult. It’s always hard to start over as a new leader.”
Evaluate and Revise Content, Organization, and Style

Check and Check Again  As you look over a peer’s article or your own, you should do at least two readings. First, focus on the article’s content and organization. The guidelines below will help you edit your article. Then, in your second reading, go back and look for ways to make sentences stronger by using the Focus on Sentences on page 71.

First Reading: Content and Organization  Use the chart below to look for ways to improve the content and organization of your news article. Respond to questions in the left-hand column. If you need help answering the questions, use the tips in the middle column. If necessary, make the changes suggested in the right-hand column.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Evaluation Questions</th>
<th>Tips</th>
<th>Revision Techniques</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Does the lead answer the 5W-How? questions?</td>
<td>Circle the answers to the questions who, what, when, where, why, and how.</td>
<td>If needed, add answers to the 5W-How? questions at the beginning of the news article.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Are details in the body given in order from most important to least important?</td>
<td>Put a star next to the details that help the reader better understand the event. Put a check next to the details that are not as important and could be cut.</td>
<td>If necessary, rearrange the details so those with a star next to them directly follow the lead and those with a check are at the end of the article.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Does the body include details that explain the effects of the event and people’s reactions to it?</td>
<td>Underline the details that explain the effects. Put a box around the details that show people’s reactions.</td>
<td>Add details that explain the effects and people’s reactions if these details are missing.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Does the article include quotations that support the details of the article?</td>
<td>Highlight each quotation. Draw an arrow to the detail each quotation supports.</td>
<td>If needed, elaborate the details by adding quotations.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Try using a reference source when you revise the content and organization of your article and edit it for style. Reference sources such as the dictionary, a thesaurus, and Part 3 of this book can help you improve your article.
The longer passing period will go into effect on Monday, October 7. From now on, each class except seventh period will be five minutes shorter, and the passing periods will be five minutes longer. School will still be over at 3:00 P.M.

Principal Reyes agreed that students need extra time between classes. With a longer passing period, students will not have to leave class to go to their lockers or the restroom.

Responding to the Revision Process
1. Why do you think the writer changed the order of the two paragraphs?
2. How did adding a sentence improve the writing?

Second Reading: Style
Now that you have revised the content and organization of your news article, you can edit the individual sentences. You can improve your sentence style by using a variety of sentences—short sentences and long sentences. An article with too many short, choppy sentences or too many long, complex sentences will be difficult to read. To give your article a variety of sentence lengths, use the following guidelines.

Style Guidelines

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Evaluation Question</th>
<th>Tip</th>
<th>Revision Technique</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Does the news article have a variety of sentences—both short and long?</td>
<td>Draw a wavy line under short sentences.</td>
<td>Combine some of the short sentences by using and, but, or or. (Keep some short sentences for variety.)</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Varying Sentences

A news article presents the facts simply and quickly. That does not mean, however, that all its sentences will be short. A series of short sentences can bore the audience. To vary your sentences, use and, but, or or to combine two short sentences.

All Short Sentences: An ice storm surprised downtown workers last night. Road crews responded. They were not prepared for the severity of the storm. The storm continued until 10:00 P.M. Roads remained icy. Workers found they had two options. They could risk driving. They could stay in their offices.

A Variety of Sentences: An ice storm surprised downtown workers last night. Road crews responded, but they were not prepared for the severity of the storm. The storm continued until 10:00 P.M., and roads remained icy. Workers found they had two options. They could risk driving, or they could stay in their offices.

ONE WRITER’S REVISIONS

School will still be over at 3:00 P.M.

Most students are happy about the change. They are already making plans for the extended passing time.

Responding to the Revision Process

How did combining the sentences improve the writing?

Evaluating and Revising Your News Article

Evaluate and revise the content and organization of your news article, using the guidelines on page 69. Then, use the Focus on Sentences above. If your class did peer evaluations, consider your peer’s comments as you revise.
Proofread Your News Article

Upon Close Inspection . . . Mistakes in a news article will distract readers from the facts. Have another person proofread your article to find mistakes you might have missed.

Correcting Run-on Sentences

Sometimes when you write, your pencil cannot keep up with your thoughts. When this happens, you may write run-on sentences. A run-on sentence is really two or more sentences that are written as one.

Mick loves old movies he also loves to read.

One way to correct a run-on sentence is to divide the sentence into separate sentences.

Mick loves old movies. He also loves to read.

You can also turn a run-on sentence into a compound sentence by adding a comma and and, but, or or.

Mick loves old movies, but he also loves to read.

Example:

1. I like the longer passing period my friend does not.

   1. I like the longer passing period. My friend does not.

      I like the longer passing period, but my friend does not.

1. The passing period will be five minutes longer school will still be over at 3:00.

2. Morgan Sykes talked at the pep rally she received a standing ovation.

3. The students signed the petition asking for a longer passing period the principal agreed with them.

4. Students can use the extra time to go to their lockers they might use the time to go to the restroom.

5. Students will not miss important information by leaving class to go to their lockers or the restroom.

For more information and practice on correcting run-on sentences, see page 265.

Correct the run-on sentences to the right. First, divide the run-on sentence into separate sentences. Then, rewrite the run-on sentence as a compound sentence by adding a comma and and, but, or or. If a sentence is correctly punctuated and is not a run-on, write C on your paper.
Publish Your News Article

Spread the News  Before you publish your article, you will need to write a headline. A headline is an attention-grabbing title for a news article. A good headline will summarize the event in a short sentence that contains an action verb. Action verbs are important because they tell the reader specifically what happened. Look at the examples below.

Examples:
Sixth-Graders Adopt Terence the Tarantula
Teachers Ban Homework Next Week

After writing a headline for your article, publish it using one of the following ideas.
- With your classmates, publish your articles together in a newspaper and distribute it to your class.
- Record your article on videotape and show it to your class as part of a news segment. See pages 79–82 for more information.
- Submit your article to your school or community newspaper.

Reflect on Your News Article

Building Your Portfolio  Now, take time to reflect on what you have done. Answer these questions.
- How is a lead for a news article like other introductions for other types of writing? How is it different?
- Would you use interviewing to gather information for other types of writing? Why or why not?

YOUR TURN 10  Proofreading, Publishing, and Reflecting on Your News Article

- Correct spelling and punctuation mistakes. Make sure your article does not contain run-on sentences.
- Write a headline for your article and publish your article using one of the suggestions above.
- Answer the questions from Reflect on Your News Article above. Record your responses in a learning log, or include them in your portfolio.
Writing a Newspaper’s Advice Column

You have a problem, and you are unsure how to solve it. Of course, you could turn to a friend or relative for help. Would you consider writing to the newspaper? Newspapers feature a special kind of problem-solution writing called an advice column. Newspaper advice columns provide information on how to solve all sorts of problems, from personal and financial to car and home repair. They are designed to be entertaining as well as informative.

What Is Your Problem? Advice columns consist of two parts—the readers’ problems and the columnist’s answers. Newspapers publish these letters and responses to offer help not only to the person writing the letter but also to other readers who may have a similar problem. Maybe you can identify with this reader’s problem below:

Help Is on the Way What is the solution? An advice columnist does more than just provide the reader with an answer. In a response, you can usually find these items.

- a restatement of the problem The first thing an advice columnist does is restate the reader’s problem. By restating the problem, the columnist lets the reader know that he or she understands what is wrong.
- a solution The next part of the response is the advice. Columnists give readers advice that they can actually use. The advice columnist will offer a solution that the reader can carry out to make the situation better.
- an example The final part of the response is an example that shows that the recommended solution really works. The advice columnist may give a personal example or one from someone else who tried the same solution. Readers are more likely to try the advice if they read that the solution has already worked in another situation.

Read the response Pat the Problem Solver wrote to Falsely Accused on the next page. The elements listed above are labeled for you.

Dear Pat the Problem Solver,

My little brother always gets me in trouble by starting arguments. Then, when my mom comes to see what we are arguing about, he blames me for starting it. I try to explain my side of the story, but it’s my word against his. What can I do to keep from being accused of a crime I have not committed?

Falsely Accused
Dear Falsely Accused,

Brothers and sisters often start arguments and then try to pass the blame to someone else. There are two ways you can handle this type of situation. One way is to avoid arguing. When your brother wants to start a fight, walk away and ignore him. However, if you simply cannot hold your tongue, the second way is to discuss (not argue about) the issue in front of your parents. This will keep your little brother (and you) in line. When my little sister wanted to argue, I would ignore her or tell her we should ask our parents what they thought. Suddenly, she would drop the issue. My sister no longer had the fun of seeing me mad or in trouble. Good luck!

Pat

Writing a Newspaper's Advice Column

Pretend you are an advice columnist. Choose one of the following letters. Then, use the guidelines on page 74 to write a response. To publish your response, consider producing a newspaper in which you include an advice column or presenting your response in an oral presentation.

My father is coach of the soccer team. He made someone else goalie even though he knew that I wanted the position and that I am a good goalie. He said he didn’t choose me because he didn’t want to show favoritism. Can you help?

A Fan of Fairness

I just moved to a small school where everyone else has known each other since kindergarten. It has been really hard to make friends, and my shyness doesn’t help. Do you have any suggestions?

New Kid in Town
Produce a Newspaper

You and your classmates have written a variety of news articles that would interest others, so why not publish them in your own newspaper? Working with a small group, you can follow the guidelines below to produce a newspaper.

Make a Plan

Use What You Have To fill the pages of your newspaper, you can use the articles you and your group members wrote in the Writing Workshop. First, gather the articles together. Then, put the ones about school events in one stack and ones about community events in another stack.

Hand Out Assignments Your newspaper should include school articles and community articles. If you need more of one type of article, brainstorm a list of story ideas and choose a “reporter” to investigate and write an article.

In addition to school and community news, you will also need two editorials and an editorial cartoon. Editorials are articles that try to persuade readers to think or act a certain way. For instance, you may want to persuade others that your community needs to create bike lanes on busy streets. In the editorial, you would clearly state your opinion and support it with evidence—facts and examples. At the end of the editorial, you would ask your readers to take some action, such as signing a petition or changing a habit. You can also express your opinion in an editorial cartoon. Drawing a cyclist riding on top of cars because no room is available on the street would show that bike lanes are needed.
The Name Game  Before you put your paper together, you should decide on an original name for your newspaper. The name should be related to your school or community and appeal to readers. For example, if your school’s mascot is an alligator, you could call your newspaper the Gator Gazette.

Put It Together

To put your newspaper together, use the instructions in Designing Your Writing below.

Designing Your Writing

Newspaper Layout  If your newspaper is clearly organized and appeals to the eye, people will be eager to read it. Your newspaper will consist of four pages. Each page will represent a section.

- Page 1—The front page will have a flag, the title of the newspaper and the date of publication, across the top. It will also include the most newsworthy school article and the most newsworthy community article.

- Page 2—School news section

- Page 3—Community news section

- Page 4—Editorial section

Follow these steps to design the layout of your newspaper.

1. First, draw what each newspaper page will look like on an 8½” × 11” piece of paper. Use ××× to represent headlines, ≠ to indicate articles written in columns, and ☺ to stand for pictures or graphics. As you design the layout, keep in mind the following guidelines.

2. Articles in a newspaper should fill a square or rectangular block. Blocks help readers know where an article begins and ends. Look at the examples to the right.

3. Generally, headlines should not be placed side by side. Headlines attract readers to the article because they are written or typed in a larger size than the articles. If two headlines are next to one another, readers will have difficulty separating them. Look at the difference in the examples to the right.

4. Each page should have one image. Your group can paste or scan actual photographs onto the pages. If you do not have photographs, you can draw pictures. Make sure that the picture or photograph is related to the topic of the article.

TIP  You can add more pages to your newspaper by including other sections, such as sports, movie reviews, and classified ads.
Here is an example of one group’s drawing of their newspaper’s layout.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Front page</th>
<th>School news</th>
<th>Community news</th>
<th>Editorials</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Flag</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

- After you have decided on the placement of the articles, you can begin to make the pages of the newspaper. Tape two 8 1/2” × 11” pieces of paper together like a book. Fold the taped paper in half to make four pages. Set your newspaper pages aside.

- On separate pieces of paper, write or type the articles in columns that are two or three inches wide. On an 8 1/2” × 11” piece of paper, you can fit three 2-inch columns or two 3-inch columns. You also need to write or type the flag and headlines, and draw or print the images.

- Finally, glue the flag, the articles, the headlines, and the pictures onto the pages of the newspaper.

TIP If a news article is too long to fit within the block you have assigned to it, you can cut the article from the bottom. The least important details are at the end because you arranged them in an inverted pyramid structure.

Producing a Newspaper

In a group, use the following steps to produce a newspaper.

- First, decide whether the articles you wrote in the Writing Workshop are school news or community news.

- Next, assign some reporters to write editorials and others to draw editorial cartoons. If you need more school or community articles, assign reporters to write them, too.

- Then, use the guidelines in Designing Your Writing on pages 77–78 to design the layout of your newspaper.

- Finally, when your newspaper is complete, place it in your school’s library so other students can read it.
Producing a TV News Segment

Watching a news segment on TV can affect you differently than simply reading a newspaper article or listening to a news story on the radio. The visual images that you see on TV can make you feel as if you are witnessing an event firsthand. In this section you and a few classmates will work together to produce a short news segment (around three minutes) that will help others experience the excitement of a news event.

Select Your Story

Look over the articles you and your group members wrote for the Writing Workshop. Which one is most newsworthy? Which news article has the greatest potential for interesting visuals? Identify the news article that is both newsworthy and has visual interest, and use it as the story for your news segment.

Choose Your Part

In your group, decide who will play each of the following roles.

- Producer  The producer coordinates the production and is a link between the camera person and the anchor and reporter. The producer signals the camera person to start and stop taping and points to the anchor or reporter to begin talking. He or she also keeps the cue cards ready for the anchor and reporter to use if they need help with their lines.
- Camera Person  The camera person is responsible for operating the video camera and taping the news segment.
Anchor The anchor introduces the news story and the reporter. The anchor almost always sits behind a desk in the studio. Your group can create a studio by setting up a table or desk and chair in front of a solid-color background.

Reporter The reporter presents the details of the event, usually from the scene where the event occurred. If your group cannot get to the scene, the reporter can sit in the studio. Sometimes the reporter sits beside the anchor. Other times the reporter is located in a different part of the studio. The reporter may also interview people who witnessed or were involved in the event.

Prepare the Script

A script tells what will be said and shown in the news segment. It consists of two parts, audio and video. The audio part includes the music and words that people will hear in your news segment. The video part shows what people will see as they watch your news segment. Look at the example below.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th></th>
<th></th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Shot of the studio with anchor behind desk</td>
<td>Begin music</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>(Begin taping when music starts.)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Move in to a close-up shot of anchor</td>
<td>Fade music</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>(Put camera on pause.)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Close-up shot of anchor</td>
<td>Anchor: Good evening. I’m Fatima Rahman. Tonight we bring</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>you a story about the decision of Main Street Middle</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>School’s Principal Reyes to extend the passing period.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>We go now to our reporter on the scene, Kyle Lucas.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Kyle . . .</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Close-up shot of reporter outside principal’s office</td>
<td>Reporter: Thank you, Fatima. I’m here at Main Street</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>(Begin taping when reporter speaks.)</td>
<td>Middle School where today Principal Reyes announced . .</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Your group is now ready to write its own script. To turn the news article you have chosen into a script for the news segment, fold a piece of paper in half to create two columns. Label one column Video and the other Audio. Then, follow the steps below.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Writing a Script</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Step 1 Write the anchor’s dialogue. In your article’s lead, find the answer to the question “Who did what?” The answer will be what the anchor says to introduce the news story. The anchor will also introduce the reporter.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Step 2 Write the reporter’s dialogue. The reporter will tell the remaining information in the lead and the body of the news article. The reporter will also interview the real people involved in the event or classmates playing the parts. This way, the quotes that are in the article will also be in the news segment.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Step 3 Write the camera shots. Next to the dialogue, write the directions for the camera person. The camera person will need to know what images to shoot and when to start and stop taping.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Step 4 Make cue cards. Transfer the dialogue to large pieces of poster board. Write in big letters so the anchor and reporter can use the cards for reference.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Step 5 Decide on hand signals. The producer will give hand signals to tell the rest of the group when to start and stop. That way, the producer’s voice will not be heard on the videotape.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Practice Your Performance

Practice does make perfect, so you should have several practice sessions before filming your news segment. Time your practices so your group can be sure the segment will not run more than the time your teacher allows.

All for One and One for All Each group member should practice his or her role.

- The producer should be familiar with the script so that he or she knows when to use hand signals. He or she should also keep the cue cards ready and in order during taping so the anchor and reporter can use them.
The camera person should practice using the video recorder. He or she should know how to start, stop, pause, and focus the camera. The camera person should also practice moving in for close-ups and pulling back for long shots.

The anchor and reporter should be familiar with their lines so that they depend on cue cards as little as possible. Unless they are interviewing someone, they should practice looking directly into the camera when speaking. The anchor and reporter should speak slowly, clearly, and loudly enough for the microphone to pick up their voices.

All Together, Now  Once your group has practiced a few times and feels confident, do one practice run with the camera. As you watch the video, look for errors your group can avoid the next time you tape. For instance, if the camera person notes problems with shaking or blurring, he or she can try to avoid those same mistakes by holding the camera more steady and focusing more carefully. The anchor and reporter can listen for misreadings or quiet voices. The producer can make sure the transitions between shots are smooth.

Record and Evaluate Your News Segment

Now that you have practiced, make a final tape. Follow the instructions in your script to create your news segment.

When taping is complete, evaluate your news segment. How does it look? With your group, watch the video and ask yourselves the following questions about language, medium, and presentation.

- Language: Are the details of the event told clearly and completely?
- Medium: Do the sounds and images used enhance the written story?
- Presentation: Do the anchor and reporter speak clearly and look directly into the camera? Are camera shots steady and focused?

TIP Good news segments flow smoothly from beginning to end. If you notice long shots of the anchor or reporter without audio, you should retape those parts to improve the flow of your segment.

TIP Anchors and reporters should dress appropriately. Anchors usually dress professionally, and reporters dress for the scene. For instance, a reporter on location at city hall may wear a suit, but a reporter at a football game may wear jeans.

YOUR TURN 13 Producing a TV News Segment

Follow the guidelines beginning on page 79 to produce a TV news segment. When you finish, share it with your classmates.
CAREERS

1. Behind the News There are many careers in the field of journalism, such as newspaper reporter, TV reporter, newspaper editor, TV anchor, and TV producer. Research one of these careers to find out the education and training required and the average salary a person in that position would make. You may call your local TV station or newspaper, contact a university, or use the Internet to find information. Use what you learn to write a report.

WRITING

3. What’s the Story? Turn your newspaper article into a short story. Your story should include everything that your article does—the details of the newsworthy event and the people involved. However, your purpose will be to entertain rather than to inform. Use plenty of descriptive language and action verbs to make the reader feel as if he or she actually witnessed the event.

CROSSING THE CURRICULUM: ART

2. Express Yourself Editorial cartoons use pictures and symbols to express opinions about different events. You can create an editorial cartoon about a current situation in your school or community. The cartoon should show the event and your opinion about it. Limit the words in your cartoon to the title and, if necessary, brief dialogue between characters.

CROSSING THE CURRICULUM: SCIENCE

4. Tell Me Why Write a brief article that answers a frequently asked why question about science. Begin the article with a question, such as “Why do people get the hiccups?” or “Why do leaves change colors and fall in autumn?” Then, do enough research to answer the question. Ask your science teacher to help you find the most up-to-date material. Submit your article to a class or school newspaper.
Here is a riddle for you: How are you and a computer alike? Computers follow a set of instructions to perform a function, and so do you. Think about it. In math class, for instance, your teacher tells you how to turn an improper fraction into a mixed number. This evening, you may heat up a frozen dinner by following the instructions on the box. The instructions you listen to, view, and read are all designed to teach you to complete a process.

Once you know how a process is done, you can share that information by giving instructions. Whether you share instructions orally, in writing, or through a demonstration, your goal is still the same: to teach others what you know.

Examining a Process

Find an example of instructions for how to do or how to make something. Share your example with a partner and discuss the following questions.

- Do the instructions tell you how to do something or how to make something? What process do they explain?
- Do you think you could follow the instructions? Why or why not?
Reading a “How-to” Article

Holidays are a special time for families and friends to gather together and celebrate. Holidays are also a great time to do fun activities. Maybe you have made a card for Valentine’s Day, planned a picnic for the Fourth of July, or planted a tree for Earth Day. You will read about one of these activities on the following pages. You will also read about a holiday activity that children take part in halfway around the world. Every May fifth, Japanese children make windsocks called koinobori (koi•nō•bô•ri) to hang outside their homes to celebrate Children’s Day. The instructions for making koinobori appear in “Making a Flying Fish” on page 89.

Preparing to Read

Making Predictions  A prediction is a guess you make about what will happen next. As you read instructions, you may predict what you will do with the supplies that are listed, what the outcome of a step will be, or what the final product will look like. Predictions give you a purpose for reading. You can find out whether your prediction is right by reading further and finding out what happens.

Forming Mental Images  Writers of “how-to” articles use specific language to name and describe the parts and the activities involved in a process. As you read the “how-to” article on page 89, look for words and phrases that create a picture in your mind of the steps for making a windsock.
Making Predictions

I Wonder What Will Happen  As you enter your math class, you see that you have a substitute teacher. You go to your seat, get out your review, and begin studying for the test you are about to take. After the bell rings, the substitute announces that the test has been canceled for today. Your friend will have the same substitute teacher later that day, so you go to tell her that her test will be canceled, too. How do you think she will react to the news that the test has been canceled? What if you find out your friend spent four hours studying last night? Now, what do you think her reaction will be? Has your prediction changed?

In life, you are constantly making predictions and adjusting them. For instance, your mind may follow this pattern:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>1. what you know</th>
<th>There is no math test today.</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>2. your prediction</td>
<td>My friend will be happy.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3. new information</td>
<td>My friend studied for four hours.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4. adjusted prediction</td>
<td>My friend will not be happy.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Your mind also makes predictions when you read. The flowchart below shows what your mind is doing as you make a prediction.

Your mind . . .

takes what you already know about the subject

As you read on, your mind . . .

checks to see that your prediction is right

or corrects your prediction using new information
Try making a prediction now. The following paragraph is from a set of “how-to” instructions for an Earth Day activity. Read the list of materials and steps. Think about what you already know about the subject. Then, make a prediction about what you think the next step will be. If you need help, use the steps in the Thinking It Through below the instructions.

To plant a tree, you should gather the following materials: tree, shovel, mulch, and a watering can. First, dig a hole twice as deep as the tree’s container. The hole should also be twice as wide as the container. Second, remove the container and place the tree in the hole. Then, using the same soil you removed, fill the hole. When the hole is completely filled, apply a two-inch layer of mulch around the base of the tree.

---

Making Predictions

STEP 1 Read a part of the passage. Ask yourself, “What is the passage explaining or telling?”

The passage is telling me how to plant a tree.

STEP 2 Consider the information you have just read. Ask yourself these questions:

- “Does the information remind me of anything?”
- “What do I already know about this information?”

The information reminds me of the time when I helped my mom plant a tree in our backyard. I already know about the materials because we used the same materials.

STEP 3 Use what you already know, plus clues from the passage, to make a guess about what will happen next.

I have already been told to plant the tree, but I haven’t been told to use the watering can yet. I think the next step will tell me to water the tree.
Japanese boys and girls have their own special day each year on May 5. It is called Children’s Day and is a national holiday. This is a time for families to celebrate having children by telling stories, feasting, going on picnics, or visiting grandparents. . . .

A special feature of Children’s Day is the koinobori (koi•nō´bô•ri) that families display in their yards—one for each child in the family. A tall pole is placed in the garden. . . . Fish made of cloth or strong paper are attached to the pole. Each fish has a hoop in its mouth to catch the wind. The largest fish is for the oldest child, and the smallest is for the youngest.

These fish represent a kind of carp known as a strong fighter.

These carp battle their way upstream against strong currents. When the koinobori dance in the wind, they remind the children of carp leaping up a waterfall. This is supposed to inspire children to be equally brave and strong.

You can make your own koinobori and fly it from a pole or hang it from your window on May 5. In that way, you can share Children’s Day with the boys and girls of Japan.

You need an 18- by 30-inch piece of lightweight cloth (cotton, rayon, or nylon), felt-tip markers, a needle and thread, scissors, a narrow plastic headband, and string.

First, choose a piece of cloth with a bright, colorful pattern or decorate it yourself with felt-tip markers. Fold the fabric in half lengthwise, with the bright side on the inside. Sew a seam ½ inch from the long (30-inch) edge, making a sleeve.

On one end of the sleeve, make a 1-inch-wide hem by turning the right side of the fabric over the wrong side. Then, sew the hem, leaving three 1-inch-wide openings about 5 inches apart.

Make cuts 5 inches deep and 1 inch apart all around the unhemmed end of the sleeve to form a fringe. This is the fish’s tail.

Next, turn the sleeve right side out. With a felt-tip marker, add eyes near the hemmed (head) end (away from the fringed tail).

Thread the narrow plastic headband into the hem through one of the openings. Continue threading it until the open part of the headband is hidden.

Then, tie a 12-inch-long piece of string to the headband at each of the three openings. Tie the loose ends of the strings together.

Finally, hang your windsock from the strings on a tree limb, a clothes pole, or the eaves of your house. On windy days, it will dance like a carp swimming upstream against a waterfall!

2. Make a prediction about what you might do with the needle and thread based on this paragraph.

3. What do you predict the “sleeve” will be used for?

4. How do you know how long the fringe will be?

5. What word lets you know this is the last step?
Forming Mental Images

It’s All in Your Head  Pictures in your first books probably helped you understand the words. Even though the books you read today may lack pictures, you can create your own mental images—pictures in your mind—using the words on a page.

Most writers of “how-to” instructions know that they should use specific language to describe a process. As a reader, you can use these specific words and phrases to come up with a mental image.

The chart below gives examples of different kinds of specific language. As you read, think about how these examples help a reader visualize, or create a mental picture of, a process.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Specific Language</th>
<th>Examples</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Numbers</td>
<td>12 x 15 inches, 3 pieces, 450 degrees</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Descriptive Words</td>
<td>small circle, large piece of fabric, hollow pipe</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Exact Verbs</td>
<td>fold, turn, hang, sprinkle, twist</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Comparisons</td>
<td>sew cloth like a sleeve, fold like a hot dog bun</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Transitions</td>
<td>after, first, next, finally; above, below, behind, into</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Drawing the instructions you read will help you understand a process better. Drawing can make it easier to picture a process. What do you picture when you read, “Turn the poster over and shake gently to remove any excess glitter”? Is it something like this?

You Turn 2  Forming a Mental Image

Find examples of specific language in the selection on pages 89–90. Choose one example and draw a picture of what you see in your mind. Share your drawing with a classmate who drew the same example and discuss the similarities and differences.
Mini-Lesson: Vocabulary

Compound Words

As you read a “how-to” article, you may find words that are unfamiliar to you. Some of these unfamiliar words may be compound words. Compound words are formed by putting together two or more words to make a new word. A compound word might be written as one word, as separate words, or as a hyphenated word.

Examples:
- roadrunner
- free fall
- ice-skating
- hand-me-down

Discovering the Meanings of Compound Words

Here is one example of a compound word from “Making a Flying Fish”:

> You need an 18- by 30-inch piece of lightweight cloth.

STEP 1 Break the compound word down into its parts.

- Lightweight breaks down to light and weight.

STEP 2 Define each of the parts.

- The word light means “not very heavy.”
- Weight means “how much something weighs.”

STEP 3 Use the definitions of the parts to come up with a full definition.

- Lightweight must mean “not weighing very much.”

STEP 4 Check that your definition makes sense by inserting the definition for the compound word into the sentence.

- “You need an 18- by 30-inch piece of not weighing very much cloth.” The definition makes sense to me.

Practice

Define the meanings of the following compound words by using the steps in the Thinking It Through above. The words are underlined in “Making a Flying Fish.”

1. felt-tip (page 90)
2. headband (page 90)
3. windsock (page 90)
4. upstream (page 90)
5. waterfall (page 90)
Making Predictions

Some reading tests may ask you to make predictions. Read the following passage and question. How would you answer the question?

Several Mexican holidays are celebrated in the United States. One is Cinco de Mayo. Cinco de Mayo is a national holiday in Mexico. On May 5, 1862, a small group of Mexican patriots defeated an invasion by the French army in Puebla, Mexico. Today, Cinco de Mayo is recognized as a celebration of not only that victory but also of Mexican culture.

Based on the information in this paragraph, what might the next paragraph be about?

A. how the French invaded Mexico
B. other Mexican victories
C. how Cinco de Mayo is celebrated
D. French holidays

I think the correct answer is C.
“Mm, mmm. No one makes a smoothie as well as you do!” Everyone knows how to make something, whether it is a simple product such as a delicious fruit smoothie or a more complicated one such as a two-level tree-house. Whether the process is easy or difficult, making things takes knowledge and talent. What special skills do you have?

In this workshop you will have an opportunity to share your knowledge with others by writing a “how-to” paper. You will use specific details and transitional words, words that connect one idea to another, to give exact instructions for making a product.

Prewriting

Choose a Topic

I Know, I Know
Follow the rule successful writers live by: Write about what you know. Brainstorm a list of products that you have successfully made before. Consider the following questions.

- Look around your house. What have you built or made?
- What school projects have you made in the past?
- What is your favorite recipe to make?

How Do I Decide?
Once you have listed several products, you will need to evaluate them to choose the best one to write about. The chart on the next page shows how one student decided on one of three topics by asking questions about each topic.
After evaluating each of his topics, the student whose chart appears above chose the topic that had the most yes answers. His “how-to” paper will tell others how to make a snowman decoration.

Think About Purpose and Audience

Show Some Consideration Your friend teaches you a great magic trick. You amaze your little brother with the trick, and he begs you to teach it to him. After you explain it twice, your brother is still confused. Obviously, you need to explain the trick to him in a different way.

Your purpose for writing instructions is to teach someone how to make something. That person could be a teacher, a friend, or even a young child. Before you begin to write, you should consider what information your audience will need. To do that, use the steps in the Thinking It Through below.

TIP Not only do you have a speaking voice, you also have a writing voice. Your writing voice shows the attitude you have about a topic. Since you are writing instructions, use a clear, straightforward voice. To do that, leave out information that may distract the reader from the steps you are trying to explain. Get right to the point and focus on the instructions.

---

Consider the Audience

- STEP 1 Identify your audience. My audience will be fourth-graders.
- STEP 2 What words should you define so your audience can understand the process? The snowman decoration has a muffler. Fourth-graders may not know that a muffler is a scarf.
- STEP 3 Ask yourself, “What steps caused me trouble?” How can you make those steps clearer? I had a problem keeping the sequin eyes in place. I used straight pins to hold them until the glue dried.
Choosing a Topic and Thinking About Your Audience

Brainstorm a list of products that you have made. Then, make a chart like the one on page 95 and evaluate each product as a possible topic for your “how-to” paper. Choose the product that has the most “yes” answers in the chart.

Once you have a topic, choose an audience. Then, think about the information your audience will need by completing the steps in the Thinking It Through on page 95.

Plan Your Instructions

As Easy as 1, 2, 3

Imagine the frustration of trying to build a model car if the instructions described painting the model before the car was even put together. Putting steps in the correct order makes the process easier to understand. Most “how-to” papers are written in chronological order, or time order.

One way to think of the steps in chronological order is to imagine yourself making the product. As you perform each step, write it on a timeline, recording the progression, or order, of the process. Then, look over your steps and add anything you left out.

Steps to make a snowman decoration:

1. assemble face and let dry
2. make middle and let dry
3. make stand
4. put snowman together
5. make muffler

Next, brainstorm the materials you need to make the product. Think carefully about everything you need. If you forget to list a material, your reader will not be able to make the product.

Planning Your Instructions

Write the steps for making your product in chronological order on a time line. Then, list the needed materials.
Elaboration: Using Specific Language

Suppose a friend gave you the following recipe for making Zesty Bagels. Could you follow the directions?

Zesty Bagels

Step 1: Gather materials—pan, bagels, sauce, olives, mushrooms, cheese.
Step 2: Place bagels on pan and pour sauce.
Step 3: Put on toppings.
Step 4: Bake.

As you read the steps, you probably asked yourself many questions. How many bagels do I need? What are the measurements for the toppings? How long do I bake the bagels and at what temperature? The recipe leaves you guessing because your friend’s directions are not specific.

To help a reader understand a process, you should write your instructions using specific language. For example you can give numbers to tell how much or how many, such as “six plain bagels.” You can also describe supplies using descriptive words, such as “finely chopped mush-

V Sprinkle black olives, mushrooms, and cheese evenly over the sauce.

Notice how specific language eliminates all guesswork in the recipe below.

Zesty Bagels

Step 1: Gather these materials: a cookie sheet, 6 plain bagels cut in half, 18-ounce jar of spaghetti sauce, ¼ cup chopped black olives, 6 finely chopped mushrooms, and 1 cup grated Parmesan cheese.
Step 2: Place bagel halves on cookie sheet. Evenly spread 1 tablespoon of spaghetti sauce over the face of each bagel.
Step 3: Sprinkle black olives, mushrooms, and cheese evenly over the sauce.
Step 4: Bake in oven at 350 degrees for 15-20 minutes. When done, remove from oven and cool.

Directions for Preparing a Can of Soup

Step 1: Gather supplies.
Step 2: Heat soup.
Step 3: Serve.
“How-to” Paper

Framework

Introduction
- Attention-grabbing opening
- Identification of product
- Reason(s) for making the product

Body
- List of materials
- Step 1 (with specific language)
- Step 2 (with specific language)
- Step 3 (with specific language) and so on

Conclusion
- Restatement of reason(s) and/or
- Suggestions for using or displaying the product

Directions and Explanations

Grab your reader’s attention quickly with an interesting introduction. For example, you could ask questions to get your reader involved in your paper. Also, clearly state reasons why your reader will want to learn to make the product you will explain.

In the first body paragraph, list the materials your reader needs to make the product. One way to list the materials is to put them in the order in which your readers will use them. Another way is to group similar types of materials together. Then, write the steps in the correct chronological order. As you write, you should
- place each step in a separate paragraph
- elaborate on each step with specific language. Specific language includes numbers, exact verbs, comparisons, transitions, and descriptive words. (See mini-lesson on page 97.) Transitions are especially useful because they create coherence. That is, they show how all the ideas connect.

Restate the reasons for making the product. You can also suggest ways to use or display the product.

Drafting Your “How-to” Paper

Now it is your turn to draft a “how-to” paper. As you write, refer to the framework above and the Writer’s Model on the next page.
A Snowman of Style

Are you at home with nothing to do? Are you eager to do something fun? If so, you can make a snowman. It is easy and fun, and you can make one without snow.

Picture a plump snowman with bright shiny eyes, a muffler, and a black hat. You can make the same winter wonder with these materials, which you can find at many hobby and craft stores:

- a 5-inch, a 4-inch, and a 3-inch foam ball
- two 12-inch black pipe cleaners
- one 1-inch orange pipe cleaner
- a 2-inch piece of black yarn
- three medium-size buttons
- two medium-size sequins
- a 1- × 15-inch piece of bright cloth
- an 8½- × 11-inch piece of black paper
- a 2-inch black pompom
- two straight pins
- scissors
- white glue

The first step is making the snowman’s face and hat. The orange pipe cleaner will be the nose. Push the pipe cleaner into the center of the smallest foam ball until it sticks out about ½ inch. Next, make the mouth using the black yarn. Happy snowmen wear smiles. Confused snowmen have mouths like a series of mountain peaks. Choose an emotion for your snowman, and glue the black yarn down to match the feeling you are trying to create. To make the eyes, glue down the two sequins. Use the straight pins to pin the eyes in place while they dry.
Snowmen often wear hats. You can make one by cutting a 3-inch circle of black paper. Pin the circle to the top of the snowman’s head. Glue the black pompom to the center of the paper, and set the head aside to dry.

Next, you will make the snowman’s middle using the 4-inch foam ball. Cut one of the black pipe cleaners in half to make the arms. Shape each pipe cleaner like a tree branch or jagged line. Then, push each arm in place on the sides of the ball. The three black buttons will make the snowman’s shirt. Glue them down the front of the ball. Set the middle aside to dry.

While you are waiting for the face and middle to dry, you can make a stand to keep your snowman from falling over. Cut a 1- × 5-inch piece of black paper. Form it into a ring by gluing the ends together.

When everything is dry, you are ready to put the snowman’s body together. Take your last black pipe cleaner and cut four 2-inch pieces. Push two of the pipe cleaners in the top of the 4-inch foam ball 1 inch apart. Push the other two pipe cleaners in the bottom of the 4-inch ball 1 inch apart. Make sure you use two pipe cleaners because they will keep the snowman from wobbling. Then, push the snowman’s head on top of the pipe cleaners to attach it to the 4-inch ball. Push the 5-inch ball on the bottom pipe cleaners to finish making the snowman’s body.

The final step is making a muffler for your snowman. A muffler is a long fringed scarf that wraps around the neck. The strip of cloth will make the muffler. Create fringe by making cuts into each end of the fabric. Once that is done, tie the muffler around the snowman’s neck.

You can make a variety of snow people by changing the style of the hat and clothing. Make a snow woman or snow child. Give your snow person a job. Doctors wear stethoscopes around their necks, and movie stars wear sunglasses. No matter what type of snowman you choose to create, making one is easy and fun.
Illustrating Steps in a Process  When you are writing a “how-to” paper, consider using pictures to help readers understand what you are writing about. You can show readers how to complete individual steps by drawing pictures of the materials and using arrows or lines to show the action that will take place. You can also provide an illustration of the final product so that readers will know what their product should look like. To illustrate your “how-to” paper, you can print or scan images using a computer, cut out pictures from magazines, or even draw graphics by hand. Below is an illustration drawn by the writer of the Writer’s Model to help readers understand one step in his “how-to” paper.
A Student’s Model

It is important to have detailed knowledge and enthusiasm about the product you are explaining in your “how-to” paper. Stephanie Thompson wrote the following paper as a middle school student in St. Peters, Missouri. In it, she shares her knowledge and enthusiasm as she provides the instructions for growing ivy.

Make It Grow

Have you ever tried growing ivy from a clipping? It is not as hard to do as it might seem. To get started, the following supplies are needed: an existing ivy plant, a fence or trellis for the ivy to climb, a pan about two inches deep, water, and sunlight.

First, cut about seven or eight leaves from the ivy plant. Make sure that you cut above where the leaf joins the stem, and cut at the same angle as the leaf grows. Then, fill the pan with water and place each leaf in the water. Let the leaves soak until they form roots that are about three to four inches long.

When the roots reach the desired length, it is time to find the best location for the ivy to grow. Although ivy is a hardy plant, it does need some care when it is grown from a clipping. Look for a place where there is plenty of sunlight, good drainage, and where no animals can damage it. Make sure that there is a fence or trellis in the location for the ivy to climb.

Next, hook the ivy leaves on to the fence or trellis so that the roots are almost touching the ground. As they receive sunlight and moisture from the dew, the roots will grow into the ground and the leaves will continue to sprout upward. In no time the ivy will be covering the fence or trellis, and you can start all over again!
Evaluate and Revise Content, Organization, and Style

Two Is Better Than One When revising your paper or a peer’s, you should read the rough draft twice. First, look at the content and organization, using the guidelines below. The second time you read, concentrate on the sentences, using the Focus on Sentences on page 105.

First Reading: Content and Organization Use the chart below on your first reading. It will help you evaluate a “how-to” paper and revise its content and organization.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Evaluation Questions</th>
<th>Tips</th>
<th>Revision Techniques</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>1 Does the introduction give a reason for making the product?</td>
<td>Put brackets around the reason.</td>
<td>If needed, add a reason for making the product.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2 Does the body list all the materials needed to make the product?</td>
<td>Circle all the supplies needed to make the product.</td>
<td>Add any supplies that have been left out.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3 Are the steps of the process in the correct chronological order? Is each step in a separate paragraph?</td>
<td>Write a number next to each step in the margin of the paper.</td>
<td>If needed, rearrange the steps so they are in the correct order and so that each step is in its own paragraph, as needed.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4 Is each step described with specific language?</td>
<td>Underline numbers, descriptions, comparisons, verbs, and transitions.</td>
<td>If necessary, elaborate on the steps by adding specific details.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5 Does the conclusion restate the reason for making the product and/or give suggestions on how to use the product?</td>
<td>Put a star beside the sentence that restates the reason. Draw a wavy line under the suggestions for using the product.</td>
<td>If needed, add a restatement of the reason for making the product. Add some suggestions for how to use the product.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Copyright © by Holt, Rinehart and Winston. All rights reserved.
Next, you will make the snowman’s middle using the 4-inch foam ball. Cut one of the black pipe cleaners in half to make the arms. Then, push each arm in place on the sides of the ball. The three black buttons will make the snowman’s shirt. Glue them down the front of the ball. Set the middle aside to dry. While you are waiting for the face and middle to dry, you can make a stand to keep your snowman from falling over. Cut a 1- × 5-inch piece of black paper. Form it into a ring by gluing the ends together.

Responding to the Revision Process
1. How does adding a sentence improve this part of the instructions?
2. How does breaking the one paragraph into two paragraphs make the instructions clearer?

Second Reading: Style  You have improved the content and organization of your paper. Now you will concentrate on the style of your sentences. One way to improve your style is to use transitional words, such as first, next, and finally. Transitional words connect one idea to another. The following guidelines will help you.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Evaluation Question</th>
<th>Tip</th>
<th>Revision Technique</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Do transitional words connect one step to another, creating coherence?</td>
<td>Highlight each transitional word.</td>
<td>Add transitional words to paragraphs that need them.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Transitional Words

A reader should be able to follow your ideas as easily as a driver follows road signs. Adding transitional words between your thoughts will steer the reader in the right direction. Notice how the underlined transitional words make this paragraph easy to read and understand.

To make a tie-dyed shirt, first you will need to wrap rubber bands around several parts of a T-shirt. Next, fill a tub or sink with dye. Then, dunk the shirt into the dye. Rinse the shirt with water and hang to dry. Finally, take off the rubber bands when the shirt is completely dry.

ONE WRITER’S REVISIONS

The orange pipe cleaner will be the nose. Push the pipe cleaner into the center of the smallest foam ball until it sticks out about ½ inch. You will make the mouth using the black yarn.

Responding to the Revision Process

How did adding a transitional word make this part of the instructions clearer?

Evaluating and Revising Your “How-to” Paper

First, improve content and organization using the guidelines on page 103. Then, use the Focus on Sentences above to add transitional words to your paper. If a peer evaluated your paper, consider his or her suggestions as you revise.
Proofread Your Paper

Clear the Path  Reading a paper full of errors is like running an obstacle course: Progress is often slow. If you and a peer proofread your paper, you are more likely to catch distracting mistakes.

Grammar Link

Using Commas in a Series

When you write a “how-to” paper, you may list materials or give directions in a series. A series consists of three or more items written one after the other.

Use commas to separate three or more items in a series.

Incorrect  Get out a pen, and paper.
Correct  Get out a pen, a ruler, and paper.

To make the meaning of a sentence clear, use a comma before the and or or in a series.

Unclear  Lori’s favorite sandwiches are turkey, ham and cheese. [Does Lori have two or three favorite sandwiches?]
Clear  Lori’s favorite sandwiches are turkey, ham, and cheese.

Do not use commas if all of the items are joined by and or or.

Incorrect  You can throw, or roll, or bounce the ball.
Correct  You can throw or roll or bounce the ball.

Some of the sentences below need commas. Refer to the rules to the left to decide when to use commas. If a sentence needs commas, rewrite the sentence, adding commas where they are needed. If a sentence is correct, write C.

Example:

1. Your snow woman could have long hair a lace collar and earrings.
Correct  Your snow woman could have long hair, a lace collar, and earrings.

2. Glue the eyes hold them with a pin and allow them to dry.

3. My snowman has green eyes a red scarf and blue buttons.

4. Miguel gave his snow teen a headset a T-shirt and a book bag.

5. A snow baby has a bib cap or bow.

For more information and practice on commas, see page 566.
Publish Your Paper

Tell Them How It Is Done  Since you are the expert, you can share your instructions with others. How do you get your paper to your audience? Use the following suggestions to get people to read your “how-to” paper.

- If you wrote your “how-to” paper for a younger audience, make copies of your instructions and give them to an elementary teacher. If your audience is your classmates, ask your teacher if you can demonstrate how to make your product in class.
- Gather all the “how-to” papers in your class and organize them into categories such as recipes, crafts, and decorations. Compile a “how-to” book and place it in your school’s library.

Reflect on Your Paper

Building Your Portfolio  Now that you are finished writing and publishing, take a moment and reflect on your “how-to” paper. Remember your purpose for writing, and think about how your paper will achieve that purpose. Reflecting on a paper you have already completed will help make your next one better.

- Which step in your paper is the easiest to follow? What makes this step clear and easy to understand?
- You created a time line to list your steps in order. In what other types of writing would a time line be useful?
- Take time to examine all the papers in your portfolio. What is one goal you would like to work toward to improve your writing?

Proofreading, Publishing, and Reflecting on Your Paper

- Correct any grammar, usage, and mechanics errors. Pay attention to spelling and punctuation, particularly the use of commas in a series.
- Publish your paper so others can use your instructions.
- Answer the questions from Reflect on Your Paper above. Record your responses in a learning log, or include them in your portfolio.

COMPUTER TIP

If you have access to a word processor, use its spellchecker feature when you edit your paper to catch and correct misspelled words. However, a spellchecker cannot check homonyms such as its (showing possession) and it’s (it is).
Mini-Lesson

TEST TAKING

Writing Instructions

Sometimes an essay test may ask you to write instructions, such as how to do or how to make something. Read the prompt to the right. How would you respond to this prompt on a test?

A new student in your school needs to find the cafeteria. Write the directions for walking from your classroom to the cafeteria.

---

Writing Instructions for Tests

- STEP 1 Read the prompt. Find out
  - what it is asking you to explain
  - who your audience is

- STEP 2 List the materials, if any, you would need to complete the process. Provide definitions of key terms, if necessary.

- STEP 3 Create a time line to list the steps of the process in order.

- STEP 4 Write your instructions in paragraphs. Remember to use specific language.

- STEP 5 Review your instructions, checking to make sure that
  - you listed any materials needed
  - your steps are in order
  - you have not left out any steps
  - you have included specific language

---

The prompt is asking me to explain how to get from my classroom to the cafeteria. A new student will be reading my instructions.

The new student will not need any materials to learn the way to the cafeteria. There are no terms to define.

I will give specific locations and use directions, such as right and left.

---

Sometimes an essay test may ask you to write instructions, such as how to do or how to make something. Read the prompt to the right. How would you respond to this prompt on a test?

A new student in your school needs to find the cafeteria. Write the directions for walking from your classroom to the cafeteria.

---

I don’t need materials, and my steps are in order. I can add a specific detail to step 3, though. The first left will come after a water fountain. I also need to explain where the student will find the double doors in Step 4.
Connections to Life

Writing a Descriptive Paragraph

You are reading instructions for building a basketball backboard. Does having a picture of the backboard in your mind make understanding the instructions easier? It certainly does. You know what the final product looks like, so you already have an idea of what you need to do to make it.

Here’s an opportunity for you to help the readers of your “how-to” paper. You will write a descriptive paragraph about the product they will make. The written description will help your audience create a mental picture, making the instructions easier to follow.

Do You See What I See? To describe something another person has not seen, you can use descriptive words and phrases to paint a picture in that person’s mind. What kinds of descriptive words and phrases help someone picture an object? The following chart provides some examples for you.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Descriptive Words and Phrases</th>
<th>Definitions</th>
<th>Examples</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Sensory Details</td>
<td>Details that express what you experience through your five senses—What you hear, see, taste, touch, and smell</td>
<td>sight—blue, tall, leaning hearing—pops, hisses, whispers taste—sweet, salty, sour touch—hot, soft, rough smell—smoky, fresh, spicy</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Location Words</td>
<td>Words that describe where something is located</td>
<td>across from near</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Figurative Language</td>
<td>Simile—Language that compares two unlike things using like or as</td>
<td>The wire is rigid and curled like corkscrew pasta. The eyes are as shiny as emeralds.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Metaphor—Language that compares two unlike things saying one is the other</td>
<td>The string is a lifeline keeping the two parts together.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
First Things First  To write a descriptive paragraph, you first need to decide what spatial order you are going to use to organize your description. Spatial order organizes the details according to their location. You might describe a product from right to left, from top to bottom, or from far away to close up. Choosing an order first will help you be organized as you observe and list all the important details about your product.

For instance, if you choose to describe your product from the left to the right, you will look at the left side of the product and list the details. Then, you will observe the middle of the product, and then the right side, writing down details as you go. You should describe what the product looks like, but you should also consider other sensory details. Does your product make a sound? How does it taste or smell? What does it feel like? Make sure you use location words to tell where the sensory details are located.

To help organize your details in the spatial order that you chose, list them in a chart as you observe your product. The chart below shows a top-to-bottom order for describing a foam snowman.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Spatial Order</th>
<th>Sensory Details and Location Words</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Top</td>
<td>small foam ball, black hat on top, fluffy pompom in the center, green sequin eyes, orange nose, black yarn mouth that smiles</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Middle</td>
<td>medium foam ball; soft, blue muffler around his neck; three black buttons down the front; black arms stick out</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bottom</td>
<td>large foam ball, black stand made out of paper</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Ready, Set, Write  Once you have your information in a chart, you are ready to write a descriptive paragraph. All you have to do is follow the order that you chose and write complete sentences using the details that you listed.

When you are finished with your first draft, elaborate on your description by adding figurative language. To add figurative language, look at the details to see what comparisons you can make. In the chart above, for instance, the snowman has a mouth that smiles. To whom can a smiling snowman be compared? The snowman smiles like a child with a new toy. The snowman also has green eyes... made of sequins. Can you compare his eyes to anything?

Now Picture This The following is an example of a descriptive paragraph that could be included with the Writer’s Model on pages 99–100. You can see how the writer uses sensory details, figurative language, location words, and spatial order to describe the snowman decoration. Do you see how adding description will help readers make the snowman?

My snowman is not a typical snowman made of snow. He does not have to be kept outdoors, and he will not melt. Instead, my snowman is a decoration made of three foam balls, 3 inches, 4 inches, and 5 inches in diameter. He can be placed anywhere and enjoyed anytime. The smallest foam ball is my snowman’s head. On top of the head sits a black hat with a fluffy, black pompom in the center. The snowman’s eyes are green, sparkling sequins, and his nose is bright orange. The black yarn of his mouth is made to smile like a child with a new toy. The middle foam ball makes his body. He is dressed with a soft, blue muffler around his neck and three shiny black buttons down his front. His arms are also black, and they stick out from his body like branches of a tree. The largest foam ball is on the bottom, and it sits in a circular stand made of black paper. The stand is an anchor keeping the snowman in place.

Writing and Revising a Descriptive Paragraph

Write a descriptive paragraph using the suggestions above. Remember to

- use spatial order to organize your paragraph
- describe the product with sensory details and location words
- revise your paragraph by adding figurative language

When you have finished writing and revising, make a final draft and include it with your “how-to” instructions.
You and your friend are neck and neck as you swim to the side of the pool. You both turn at the same time, but you come out ahead. Why? You know how to do a flip turn. You hold on to the lead and declare a victory as you touch the other side.

“Where did you learn to do that?” your friend asks.

You confess, “I learned how from TV.”

Instructions come in many forms. Not only can you read a how-to paper, you can also learn how to do or make something from charts and graphics, computer software, and “how-to” videos or TV shows. To follow instructions in these forms, you will need to work on your viewing and listening skills.

Charts and Graphics

Charts and graphics provide you with the same information as a “how-to” paper. Both tell the materials, the instructions, and the order in which you should do the instructions. However, charts and graphics do not rely only on words. They show the steps in a process by using pictures, symbols, and labels.

One type of chart is a flowchart. Look at the flowchart on the next page. The steps are easy to follow because arrows direct you from one step to another. Labels, such as Step 1, Step 2, and Step 3, also help you see the order of the steps, and the instructions are brief and to the point.

Now, look at the graphic below. This type of graphic is called a diagram. The diagram shows how to fold a blanket like a sleeping bag. As on the flowchart, the steps are labeled, but pictures and symbols give the instructions. These features make it easy to understand what the diagram is demonstrating.

How to Make a Friend

Step 1: Introduce yourself to someone new by smiling, giving your name, and asking the new person his or her name.

Step 2: Begin a conversation. You might offer help or make a friendly joke.

Step 3: Plan to talk or meet again. You could ask for the new person’s phone number or an e-mail address, or name a date and time for your next meeting.

Now, look at the graphic below. This type of graphic is called a diagram. The diagram shows how to fold a blanket like a sleeping bag. As on the flowchart, the steps are labeled, but pictures and symbols give the instructions. These features make it easy to understand what the diagram is demonstrating.

Understanding Charts and Graphics

Answer the following questions about the flowchart and diagram above.

- What material do you need to make the sleeping bag? How is the material presented?
- How are the instructions presented in the flowchart and the graphic? Do words, pictures, or symbols tell you what to do?
- What order is used in the flowchart and the graph (chronological? spatial?)? How is that order shown in each?
You may find that you go to the same item in a help menu again and again. How can you remember the steps in a process so that you don’t have to keep returning to the menu? Summarizing the instructions in a flowchart can help you remember them. To do that, read each step and write down only the important words and details. Use arrows to show the sequence of steps. A flowchart for the instructions in the help box above might look like this:
Focus on Viewing and Listening

TV and Video

There are “how-to” programs and videos about a variety of topics, but popular ones include cooking, exercise, and home repair. “How-to” programs and videos are very helpful—not only do you hear the directions, you also see the steps.

When you watch “how-to” instructions on TV or on video, you are doing two things at once. First, you are listening to and viewing the information. At the same time, you are trying to understand how to do the steps in the process. If you are watching a TV program, you cannot ask questions. If you are watching a video, you might hit “pause” or “rewind,” but having control over the VCR is not always possible. However, you can get a better understanding of the steps of a process if you take notes. The

Summarizing Instruction

Create a flowchart that summarizes the steps in the following help box.

![Help Box Image]

YOUR TURN

Inserting symbols

Symbols and special characters in non-ANSI fonts, such as the Symbol font, are "protected" when you insert them by using the Symbol dialog box. A protected character is the same as a regular character except that you cannot change the font.

To insert symbols with the Symbol command:

1. Position the insertion point where you want to insert the symbol.
2. From the Insert menu, choose Symbol.
3. In the Font box, type or select the font that contains the symbol you want to insert.
4. Double-click the symbol character you want. Word inserts the character in the point size of the text that precedes the insertion point. If you cannot find the symbol you're looking for, try selecting another font in the Font box.
5. To insert another symbol, position the insertion point in the document, and then repeat step 4.
6. When you finish inserting symbols, choose the Close button.

Screen shot reprinted by permission from Microsoft Corporation.
following chart gives useful suggestions for taking quick and complete notes while viewing “how-to” instructions.

TIP The guidelines below can apply to viewing any informative video. Always watch for important facts, on-screen graphics, and ideas emphasized through repetition or dramatic phrasing. In addition, always take a minute after viewing to record important points and to think about the video producer’s purpose.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Note-Taking Guidelines</th>
<th>Tip</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Prepare to listen.</td>
<td>Think about your purpose for listening, and prepare to focus on the message by eliminating distractions.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Listen to each step.</td>
<td>Clue words such as the transitions first, second, then, and finally will let you know when a step begins and ends.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Create an outline of the steps.</td>
<td>Organize your notes by numbering steps as they are presented.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Take notes on each step.</td>
<td>Do not try to write every word. Instead, make a note of each major idea and its support. Listen for words and phrases that are repeated. Watch for on-screen graphics.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Listen for a conclusion.</td>
<td>Major points may be repeated.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Check your notes.</td>
<td>Make any necessary additions or corrections. Summarize the information while it is still fresh in your mind. If possible, discuss the message with others who viewed it. Compare your different perceptions of the message, and add to your notes any points you may have missed.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

YOUR TURN

Taking Notes to Learn

- Watch a “how-to” program on TV or find a “how-to” video at a video rental store or at your local library.
- Use the note-taking guidelines above to take notes.
- After viewing the video, take five minutes to complete the following sentence starters:
  - The producers created this video to ____.
  - The most important facts or ideas were ____.
Select one of the following activities to complete.

CROSSING THE CURRICULUM: SCIENCE

1. How Did That Happen?
   Use your science book to find information on how something occurs, such as how fish breathe underwater or how taste buds work. Create a flowchart or graphic that shows the steps of the process. You can use drawings, magazine cutouts, or computer art to illustrate the steps.

CROSSING THE CURRICULUM: SPEECH

2. You Be the Teacher
   Choose a product and learn how to make it by listening to someone or by watching a “how-to” program. Then, demonstrate how to make it for your class. Select something entertaining, unique, or appealing to others your age.

   Give clear, precise directions as you show classmates how to make the product. Use visuals to help your audience understand the process.

CAREERS

3. Do You Have What It Takes?
   Choose a career that interests you. Find out what sort of training, education, and skills you would need to pursue that career by looking in books in the library, using informational Web sites, or interviewing people who are in that career field. Write a letter to a friend explaining how to enter the profession you choose.

WRITING

4. Games People Play
   Invent a game. Your game could be a board game, an athletic game, a card game, or any other type of game. Write the instructions for playing your game. First, state the goal of the game. Is the goal to advance to the center of the board, put a ball through a basket, or get rid of all of your cards? Next, write all the steps required for playing the game. Finally, provide the instructions and materials needed to play the game for a group of your classmates.
Baked potato or salad? Art or band? You make choices every day. Sometimes those choices are easy, such as deciding on a baked potato for lunch. Other choices require more thought, such as choosing an elective in school. How do you make these important decisions? One way is to compare and contrast the two choices: You can look at how the two things are alike and how they are different. Once you understand the similarities and differences, you are ready to make a decision.

Comparing and contrasting is useful in other ways, too. Comparison-and-contrast structure may be used to define something unfamiliar by comparing it to something well known. For instance, did you know that the English sport rugby is like American football? Comparing and contrasting two subjects is a great way to share useful or interesting information with others.

Your Turn | Practicing Comparing and Contrasting

Answer the following questions, and then discuss them with a few classmates. Share your group’s findings with the class.

- How are fifth grade and sixth grade different?
- How are fifth grade and sixth grade alike?
Comparing and Contrasting

Chapter 4

Reading Workshop

Reading a Comparison-Contrast Essay

The two men faced each other down, ready for the big fight. One was the clear favorite; the other was a rookie. Who would win? The event had all the drama of a boxing match, but this was a debate. The following comparison-contrast essay shows how television made the presidential debate between John F. Kennedy and Richard M. Nixon different from previous ones. The debate was not just a war of words. Other elements made one candidate more successful than the other. Read on to see if you can identify those winning elements.

Preparing to Read

Points of Comparison  Not every similarity and difference between two subjects is important, so an author must choose the most important areas to compare and contrast. These areas are called the author’s points of comparison.

Comparison-Contrast Structure  The structure, or organization, of a comparison-contrast essay can help a reader see the similarities and differences more clearly. A writer may give all the information about one subject and then all the information about the other subject, or the writer may shift back and forth between the subjects. As you read Edward Wakin’s essay on the next page, try to follow the organization he uses.
The Presidential Debates

BY EDWARD WAKIN

A trim, tanned presidential candidate dressed smartly in dark suit, dark tie, and blue shirt stood at the podium on the left in the Chicago studio of WBBM–TV. He looked vigorous, confident, and businesslike.

His opponent at the other podium wore a light suit, pale tie, and a shirt with a collar that was too big for him. He looked tired, nervous, and in need of a shave.

Both faced the pitiless eye of TV cameras carrying the first televised presidential debate. For one hour of prime time on all three networks, 75 million Americans watched on the evening of September 26, 1960.

The candidate on the left side, Democrat John F. Kennedy, looked nothing like the underdog he was supposed to be. An unproved junior senator from Massachusetts, he faced the highly experienced Republican candidate, Richard M. Nixon.

Kennedy needed national exposure. Nixon was seasoned and already nationally known. Twice elected vice president, Nixon had prepared himself for eight years to take over from President Dwight D. Eisenhower.

TV critic Robert Lewis Shayon described the televised debate as if it were a boxing match: “The atmosphere was clearly that of a prizefight: the referee (producer) instructing the champ and the challenger (the candidates), the seconds (advisors) milling around, and the ‘come out fighting’ handshake.”

The rules of the match called for an eight-minute opening statement by Kennedy followed by eight minutes from Nixon. Then a panel of four reporters would ask questions.

Kennedy won.

He won on style and image—two key ingredients for success on TV. Nixon challenged and rebutted what Kennedy said as if he were out to win debating points. He addressed Kennedy rather than the TV viewers.

On the other hand, as the celebrated chronicler of presidential campaigns Theodore H. White noted, Kennedy “was addressing himself to the audience that was the nation.”

Kennedy came across as assured, energetic, dynamic. The camera was his friend.

Nixon came across as uncomfortable and ill at ease.

Nixon lost not on what he said, but on how he appeared. TV viewers saw Nixon as a gray man against the studio’s gray backdrop. They saw Nixon forcing nervous smiles and perspiring under the studio lights. He “looked terrible,” historian David Culbert stated.

At one point, the camera showed Nixon wiping perspiration from his brow and upper lip as he listened to Kennedy. When the camera was on Kennedy listening, he looked attentive, alert, and self-assured.

Neither candidate said anything that was memorable or headline making. The importance of style and image became obvious when audience reactions to the televised and radio versions were compared. Those who heard the debate on radio thought Nixon had won!

But what counted was the televised debate. Half the country had watched it. White had a clear verdict: “In 1960 television had won the nation away from sound to images, and that was that.”

1. rebutted: provided opposing arguments in a debate.
2. chronicler: person who records historical events.
Points of Comparison

The Same, Only Different?  Your two closest friends are probably both alike and different. To help someone understand these two friends, however, you wouldn’t discuss every similarity and difference. Is it really important to know that one friend has a blue bike helmet while the other has a white bike helmet? You would focus on more important areas, such as personality and hobbies. These main areas would be your points of comparison.

A writer does not always announce points of comparison directly. A reader can usually figure out what they are, though, by looking at the details the writer provides.

Look back at the first two paragraphs of “The Nixon-Kennedy Presidential Debates” on page 121. Can you identify the first point of comparison? If you have trouble, look at the chart below.

First Thoughts on Your Reading

1. Name one thing about Kennedy and Nixon that the author compares.
2. Was the article’s organization easy to follow? Why or why not?

---

Identifying Points of Comparison

STEP 1 Does the first paragraph talk about one subject or both? Write down the topic of the paragraph.

The first paragraph is about what Kennedy wore and how he looked confident.

STEP 2 Read the next paragraph and write down what it is about.

This paragraph is about what Nixon wore and how he looked tired and nervous.

STEP 3 Identify the author’s first point of comparison. Repeat the process until you have identified all points of comparison.

The author talks about the candidates’ overall appearance. This is the first point of comparison.

---

TIP Sometimes you can identify the point of comparison by reading one paragraph. If an author provides information about both subjects in one paragraph, you can skip Step 2.
Comparison-Contrast Structure

A Question of Style  Everything has a style. Sports cars have a specific look. You dress in a certain way. Even a comparison-contrast piece has a particular appearance. Not all comparison-contrast writings look just alike, though, because they can be organized in different ways. Two common patterns of organization for comparison-contrast writing are the block style and the point-by-point style. You can identify the structure of a comparison-contrast piece by looking at the points of comparison.

Block Style  A comparison-contrast piece organized in the block style discusses all the points of comparison for the first subject and then all the points of comparison for the second subject. Suppose you are reading a comparison-contrast article about going to the movies versus renting a video. The points of comparison are cost and choice of movies. Here is how a writer using the block style would organize the article.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Subject 1: going to the movies</th>
<th>cost</th>
<th>choice of movies</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Subject 2: renting a video</td>
<td>cost</td>
<td>choice of movies</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

In block style, the writer would first discuss going to the movies. The writer would tell about the ticket prices and the choices of movies available. Then, the writer would discuss renting a video. You would read about how much a video costs and what choices you have when renting a video.
Point-by-Point Style A comparison-contrast piece organized in the point-by-point style goes back and forth between two subjects. It explains how the two subjects are alike and different for one point of comparison. Then, it explains how they are alike and different for the next point of comparison, and so on. The example below shows how the movies-versus-video comparison would be organized in point-by-point style.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Point of Comparison 1: cost</th>
<th>going to the movies</th>
<th>renting a video</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Point of Comparison 2: choice of movies</td>
<td>going to the movies</td>
<td>renting a video</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

In point-by-point style, the writer would discuss cost first. You would read about how much going to the movies costs in comparison to renting a video. Then, you would read about the choice of movies you have when you go to the movies, followed by a discussion of the choice of movies available at a video store.

TIP Did you notice how the point-by-point style always discussed movies first and videos second? This predictable order makes it easy for a reader to understand and follow the points of comparison.

? Look back at the block style organization on the previous page. What is predictable about the order in the block style?

YOUR TURN 3 Identifying Comparison-Contrast Structure

Use your list of points of comparison from Your Turn 2 to identify the organization of the reading selection. Overall, does the article tend to use the block style or the point-by-point style? Support your answer with examples from the essay. Hint: Do all the details about Kennedy come before the details about Nixon (block style), or do the details switch back and forth between Kennedy and Nixon (point-by-point style)?
A comparison-contrast piece may contain unfamiliar words. Knowing the meanings of common prefixes and suffixes may help you figure out these words’ meanings. A prefix is a word part added before the root. A suffix is a word part added after a root. The root is the main part of the word. The charts below provide you with the definitions of common prefixes and suffixes.

Prefixes and Suffixes

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Prefix</th>
<th>Definition</th>
<th>Example</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>un–</td>
<td>not</td>
<td>uneven</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>re–</td>
<td>again</td>
<td>rerun</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>pre–</td>
<td>before</td>
<td>preview</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>semi–</td>
<td>half</td>
<td>semifinals</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Suffix</th>
<th>Definition</th>
<th>Example</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>–ous</td>
<td>characterized by</td>
<td>victorious</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>–ion</td>
<td>act or condition of</td>
<td>inspection</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>–ic</td>
<td>nature of</td>
<td>angelic</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>–less</td>
<td>without</td>
<td>careless</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

THINKING IT THROUGH

Using Prefixes and Suffixes

Here is an example based on the word uncomfortable from page 122.

► STEP 1 Separate any prefixes or suffixes from the word’s root. Define the root. Un– is a prefix and –able is a suffix. Comfort is the root. It means “free from worry.”

► STEP 2 Add the prefix or suffix to the root, and define the word. If you have another prefix or suffix, add it and define the word. I’ll add –able. Comfortable means “able to be free from worry.” I’ll add un–. Uncomfortable means “not able to be free from worry.”

► STEP 3 Check your definition by placing it in the original sentence. “Nixon came across as not able to be free from worry and ill at ease.” That works.

PRACTICE

Using the steps above, figure out the meanings for the following words underlined in “The Nixon-Kennedy Presidential Debates.”

1. vigorous (page 121)
2. pitiless (page 121)
3. unproved (page 121)
4. dynamic (page 122)
5. reactions (page 122)
Recognizing Supporting Details

Maybe you have had this experience: Your friend tells you, “I met this person the other day who reminds me so much of you.” Your first question would probably be “How are we alike?” You want supporting details that show how this other person is like you. A reading test may ask you to identify supporting details that show how two subjects are alike or different. Suppose the following passage and the question below it were in a reading test. How would you answer the question?

Sonja and Maria sometimes seem like the same person. First, they look alike, since each has shiny black hair and big brown eyes. They also have the same interest in collecting stamps from all over the world. They have similar families, too. Sonja has four brothers and Maria has three brothers. Although they complain about their brothers sometimes, each is proud to be the only sister.

What is similar about Sonja and Maria’s appearance?
A. They like to wear the same clothes.
B. They both have dark hair and brown eyes.
C. They both have beautiful curly hair.
D. They both are the only sister.

This question asks about the girls’ appearance.

The passage doesn’t use the word “appearance,” but it talks about what the girls look like.

The sentence about their “shiny black hair and big brown eyes” holds the answer.

Choice D talks about their families. That leaves choices A, B, and C. Clothes are not mentioned, so choice A is not right, and choice C does not match the information in the passage. Choice B is the correct answer.
You and your best friend wear the same brand of tennis shoes, save your allowances, and spend too much time on the phone. You seem exactly alike, but are you really? You keep your room neat and organized, while your friend’s room is always messy. You love Mexican food, but your friend prefers Thai food. You and your friend share many similarities, but you also have differences. Whenever you recognize that two things are both alike and different, you are comparing and contrasting.

You can understand many things by comparing and contrasting two subjects. In letters, reports, journal entries, and tests, you will find many occasions to write about how two subjects are alike and different. This workshop will prepare you.

Choose and Narrow Two Subjects

Apples and Oranges? Maybe you have heard this statement: “That’s like comparing apples and oranges!” This expression means that you should only compare things that are alike, such as a red apple with a green one. If you think about it, though, comparing apples and oranges makes sense. They are similar enough to be compared, yet different enough to contrast with each other. When you choose two subjects for your comparison-contrast essay, make sure they have basic similarities as well as differences.

You should also choose two subjects you know well. For example, you probably know apples and oranges well enough to give specific details about their similarities and differences. What other subjects do you know well? Brainstorm about these categories:

- two TV shows
- two people, such as relatives, friends, or movie or sport stars
- two holidays
- two sports
- two musical groups

Set Your Limits The two subjects you choose should be narrow enough for you to write about in an essay. For instance, you could compare apples and oranges in a short essay, but to compare fruits and vegetables, you would need to write a book. Use the steps in the following Thinking It Through to figure out if you need to narrow your subjects.

Thinking It Through

Narrowing Your Subjects

STEP 1 Write down a possible subject you know well.

| big pets and small pets |

STEP 2 Ask yourself, “Can I break down my subjects into smaller or more specific groups?”

| These subjects seem too big. Maybe I should focus on pets I have actually had, like dogs, cats, fish, hamsters, and hermit crabs. |

STEP 3 Choose two specific groups that could be discussed in an essay. These are your narrowed subjects.

| Since I have a dog and a hamster as pets, I can talk about those in a short essay. They will be my two subjects. |
Choosing and Narrowing Subjects

Make a list of possible subjects to compare and contrast. Consider the following questions to help you choose two subjects you can write about in your essay.

- Are the subjects alike enough to make a comparison?
- Do I know enough about the subjects to provide details?
- Are the subjects narrow enough to discuss in an essay? (Use the Thinking It Through steps on page 129.)

Consider Purpose and Audience

A Reason for Everything

Comparing apples and oranges might make sense, except for just one thing: Who cares about them? Most people already know how apples and oranges are alike and different. In other words, there is no strong purpose or audience for the essay. To determine a specific purpose and audience, first ask yourself the reason for comparing and contrasting the two subjects. Then, ask yourself who would be able to use the information.

Subjects: dogs and hamsters

Purpose: What is the reason for comparing and contrasting dogs and hamsters?

✔ to help people choose a family pet
✔ to help students from other countries understand two American pets

Audience: Who would be able to use this information?

✔ students and families who want a pet
✔ students from other countries who do not have dogs or hamsters as pets

The student whose chart is shown above chose to help other students and families decide on a family pet. Because her essay will help readers choose a pet, the student will need to provide more information about caring for these pets. Once you have identified your purpose and audience, you can decide what background information or definitions to include in your essay.
Considering Purpose and Audience

Determine your specific purpose and audience for the subjects you have chosen. Create a chart like the one on page 130. Then, think about the background information and definitions your audience will need. Use the following questions to guide you.

- What is the reason for comparing and contrasting the two subjects you have chosen?
- Who would be able to use this information?
- What background information will I need to provide?
- What words will I need to define?

Think of Points of Comparison

Generally Speaking  How are your two subjects alike? How are they different? As you answer these questions, begin to notice the larger areas in which you find both similarities and differences. These areas will be the points of comparison that will help you organize your essay.

Choosing Points of Comparison

Here is how to choose the points of comparison for your comparison-contrast essay.

STEP 1 Think about the subjects of your comparison-contrast essay. What points do they share?

When I think of dogs and hamsters, I think about how they look and act, what they need to survive, how they relate to people, and how long they live.

STEP 2 Choose two or three of these points of comparison for your essay. Select the ones that you know well so you can provide specific details.

Because I take care of both pets, I can give lots of details about what they need. I also know how they relate to people.
Choosing Your Points of Comparison

Decide on the points of comparison you will use by following the steps in the Thinking It Through on page 131.

Gather Support and Organize Information

A Leg to Stand On  Strong bones support your body just as details support a good essay. How do you get details that will provide the support your ideas need? Start by listing as many details as possible for each point of comparison. Just be sure each detail relates directly to your point of comparison. If it does not, it will weaken, not support, your point.

Getting Organized  A Venn diagram can help you organize your details. To make a Venn diagram, draw two overlapping circles like the ones in the student’s example below. In the example, the points of comparison are listed to the left of the circles. Each circle represents one of the subjects. The overlapping section includes the details that the subjects have in common. The sections that do not overlap include the details that make each subject different.

TIP  Since you are writing to inform, you want to be sure your details are accurate. If you are unsure about a detail, use reference materials and other resources. Look up and verify your information in books, in magazines, or on the Internet. You can also verify information by asking teachers or friends who are experts on the subjects you have chosen.

Exposition: Comparing and Contrasting

Copyright © by Holt, Rinehart and Winston. All rights reserved.
Develop a Main Idea Statement

My Point Is . . . Have you ever had a conversation with someone who gives you an endless list of details? The entire time that person is talking, you are thinking, “What is the point of all this?” In an essay, you can get to the point by writing a main idea statement, or thesis. This statement is similar to a topic sentence for a paragraph except that it summarizes the main idea of the entire essay. The main idea statement for your comparison-contrast essay will tell readers the subjects you are comparing and contrasting, the purpose of your essay, and your points of comparison. You can write a main idea statement in one or two sentences. See how one student wrote a main idea statement in the example below.

Subjects: dogs and hamsters
Purpose: helping students and families decide on a family pet
Points of comparison: how dogs and hamsters relate to people and what dogs and hamsters need
Main idea statement: Dogs and hamsters both make good family pets, but they are different in the way they relate to people and in their needs.

Writing a Main Idea Statement

Think about the subjects, purpose, and points of comparison for your comparison-contrast essay. Then, write a main idea statement to communicate these ideas.
Arranging Details

What Goes Where? You will organize your essay using the block style, which presents all the information about one subject and then all the information about the other subject. Here is how the student using the block style would arrange the points of comparison for dogs and hamsters.

Subject 1: Dogs
- how they relate to people
- what they need

Subject 2: Hamsters
- how they relate to people
- what they need

As you can see, the block style presents the points of comparison in the same order for both subjects. For each subject, how the pet relates to people is discussed first, and what the pet needs is discussed second. Follow the same structure in your essay.

TIP For short comparison-contrast essays, the block style is a good way to group similar ideas together. The arrangement of ideas based on similarities is called logical order. However, there are other ways to achieve logical order. The chart on page 125 shows the point-by-point style. Still another type of structure is the modified block style. In this style, all the similarities for the points of comparison are discussed. Then all the differences for the points of comparison are discussed. The modified block style looks like this:

Similarities of rugby and football:
- rules
- equipment

Differences between rugby and football:
- rules
- equipment

YOUR TURN 9 Arranging Details

Arrange the points of comparison for your comparison-contrast essay as in the student example above. Check to see that the points of comparison are in the same order for each subject.
When you write a comparison-contrast essay, it is important that your details provide logical support for the points of comparison. A feature of logical support is relevance. Relevant details are related to the point they support. Examine the Venn diagram to the right. Can you identify any details that do not support the point of comparison “appearance”? The details that do not support the point of comparison “appearance” would be either listed with a different point of comparison or removed from the essay.

Look at the example below and evaluate the details for each point of comparison. Decide whether any detail does not belong with the point of comparison where it is listed.
Comparison-Contrast Essay

Framework

Introduction
- Attention-grabbing opener
- Main idea statement

Body
- Subject #1
  - Point of comparison #1 (with logical support)
  - Point of comparison #2 (with logical support)
- Subject #2
  - Point of comparison #1 (with logical support)
  - Point of comparison #2 (with logical support)

Conclusion
- Summary of body paragraphs

Directions and Explanations

Pull your reader in right away with an interesting beginning. You could begin with a mysterious statement which you go on to explain, as the writer of the model to the right did. You could also begin with a funny story or a question. Then, include your main idea statement so that the reader understands exactly what you are comparing and contrasting.

Here you will point out how the two subjects are alike and different for at least two points of comparison.

- Present your first subject by discussing both points of comparison in the first body paragraph.
- When you present your second subject in the next paragraph, discuss the points of comparison in the same order.

To help you discuss the similarities and differences, use transitional words. Transitional words that show similarities are also, like, in addition, and another. Transitional words that point out the differences are on the other hand, but, however, and unlike.

Briefly sum up the result of the comparison. Relate your summary to the main idea you included in the first paragraph.

Drafting Your Essay

Write a comparison-contrast essay. As you write, refer to the framework above and the Writer's Model on the next page.
Puppy Love or Hamster Heaven?

Your friends have one, maybe even two or three. The neighbors have one. Does it seem that everyone has one but you? No, it is not the latest video game, but something much more fun—a family pet. Dogs and hamsters both make good family pets, but they are different in the way they relate to people and in their needs.

Dogs and hamsters are both fun to hold and pet, but they relate to people in different ways. For instance, dogs enjoy human contact. They love to play fetch, chase, and tug-of-war with their owners. Dogs like to be petted, and most dogs will roll over to have their bellies rubbed. Dogs are also affectionate and love licking their owners’ faces. However, dogs need lots of care, too. They need fresh food and water every day, and they need regular exercise. They also need someone to take care of them when their owners go out of town.

Hamsters are very different from dogs. Having contact with people is not important to them. They like to sleep when people want to play. Unlike dogs, hamsters do not like being petted. Many will hide when their owners want to pick them up. Hamsters are also very independent. They like to spend their time exploring. Hamsters may be low on affection, but they need less daily care than dogs do. They need food and water just as dogs do, but an owner usually fills up the food and water dishes only once a week. Hamsters need exercise too, but they get their exercise by running on wheels in their cages. If their owners go out of town, hamsters can be left alone.

Dogs and hamsters both make good pets. Dogs provide plenty of affection, but they are also high maintenance. Hamsters are definitely low maintenance, but they are also less cuddly. The choice is yours.
A Student’s Model

When you write a comparison-contrast essay, make sure you have a purpose for writing. Matthew Hester, a middle school student from Laurel Hill, Florida, wants to help his audience make a decision. He compares two types of collections that may interest beginner collectors.

A Collection Question

Collecting is very popular today. Collectors have their own magazines, television shows, and Internet sites. If you are thinking about starting a collection, I suggest considering trading cards or airplane models. They are both good investments and fun, but they differ in storage and use.

Collecting trading cards is an enjoyable hobby. They are easy to store and transport in bags, boxes, or notebooks. Trading cards with friends is a super way to spend an afternoon. Cards also provide adventure and challenge as you seek that one card essential to completing your set.

Model collecting differs from card collecting in several ways. Model airplanes require more storage space than cards do and are more difficult to transport due to their larger size. However, models do allow for more realistic play. The zooming and swooshing of miniature airplanes give the feeling of being in the center of the action.

Trading cards and model airplanes both make good collections due to their current and possible future value. This makes them a wise investment for your allowance dollars. Trading cards are excellent choices if you have limited storage space and enjoy a challenge. Model airplanes are better if your storage space is unlimited and you enjoy live-action play. If you have trouble deciding, join me in collecting both. Either way, start your collection today!
Evaluate and Revise Content, Organization, and Style

Double Vision  Look twice when you evaluate a peer’s paper or your own. On the first reading, concentrate on content and organization, using the guidelines below. The second time you read the essay, pay attention to the sentences, using the Focus on Sentences on page 141.

First Reading: Content and Organization  Use this chart to evaluate and revise your essay so the ideas are clear.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Evaluation Questions</th>
<th>Tips</th>
<th>Revision Techniques</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>1 Does the introduction state the main idea?</td>
<td>Underline the main idea statement.</td>
<td>Add a main idea statement if one is missing.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2 Does the first body paragraph discuss the first subject with at least two points of comparison?</td>
<td>Put a star next to each point of comparison.</td>
<td>If there is no clear point of comparison, add one or revise an existing one.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3 Does the second body paragraph discuss the second subject using the same points of comparison in the same order?</td>
<td>Draw a wavy line under each point of comparison.</td>
<td>If the same points of comparison are not used, add one or revise an existing one. Rearrange the points of comparison if they are not in the same order.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4 Do relevant details logically support each point of comparison for both subjects?</td>
<td>Put a check mark next to the supporting details for each point of comparison. Underline any details that do not support the point of comparison.</td>
<td>If needed, elaborate on a point of comparison by adding details. Delete details that do not directly support the point of comparison.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5 Does the conclusion summarize the body paragraphs and refer to the main idea?</td>
<td>With a colored marker, highlight the summary.</td>
<td>If needed, add a brief summary that is related to the main idea.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
ONE WRITER’S REVISIONS  This revision is an early draft of the essay on page 137.

Hamsters are very different from dogs. Having contact with people is not important to them. They like to sleep when people want to play. I have to go to bed by 10:30. Unlike dogs, hamsters do not like being petted. Many will hide when their owners want to pick them up. Hamsters are also very independent. They like to spend their time exploring.

Responding to the Revision Process

1. Why do you think the writer deleted a sentence in the paragraph above?
2. Why do you think the writer added a sentence to the paragraph?

Second Reading: Style  During your first reading, you looked at what you said in your essay and how you organized your ideas. Now, focus on how your essay sounds. Good writing has an easy rhythm that is not choppy. To achieve an easy rhythm, writers use a variety of sentences in their essays. They avoid long series of short sentences by combining two short sentences into one sentence. Use the following guidelines to evaluate the rhythm of your writing.

Style Guidelines

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Evaluation Question</th>
<th>Tip</th>
<th>Revision Technique</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Are sentences combined so that they are not choppy?</td>
<td>Underline any short sentence that repeats several words or a phrase from the sentence before or after it.</td>
<td>Combine sentences by cutting repeated words and inserting necessary words or phrases.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Combining Sentences

Good writers use some short sentences. Too many short sentences are a problem. Many short sentences in a row bore readers. The ideas in the previous three sentences are important for writers to know, but you might have found it difficult to pay attention to them. Their choppy sound and their repeated words and phrases probably bothered you. Combining short, choppy sentences can be as easy as moving a word or phrase from one sentence to another.

Choppy Sentences
The car was black. The car was hot.

Combined Sentence
The black car was hot.

Choppy Sentences
Jamal played disc golf. He played in the afternoon.

Combined Sentence
Jamal played disc golf in the afternoon.

ONE WRITER’S REVISIONS

They love to play fetch and tug-of-war with their owners.

Dogs also like to play chase.

Responding to the Revision Process

How does combining the two sentences improve the writing?

YOUR TURN

Evaluating and Revising Your Comparison-Contrast Essay

First, evaluate and revise the content and organization of your essay, using the guidelines on page 139. Then, use the Focus on Sentences above to see if you need to combine any choppy sentences. Finally, if a peer evaluated your paper, think carefully about his or her comments as you revise.

COMPUTER TIP

If you have access to a computer, speed up the revision process by using the cut-and-paste feature. You can rearrange the details in your comparison-contrast essay by cutting words and sentences and then pasting them in a new location. Cutting and pasting saves you the trouble of typing the information twice.

Go to the Chapter Menu for an interactive activity.
Proofread Your Essay

Look Out  Two sets of eyes are better than one when trying to find mistakes. After you proofread your essay, see if you can catch more mistakes by enlisting the help of another proofreader.

---

Grammar Link

Using Comparatives Correctly

In a comparison-contrast essay, you have to make comparisons. When you make comparisons between two subjects, you use the comparative form of adjectives and adverbs. To write comparatives correctly, follow the guidelines.

The comparative form of one-syllable modifiers is usually made by adding –er.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Modifier</th>
<th>Comparative Form</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>fast</td>
<td>faster</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Some two-syllable modifiers form the comparative by using more.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Modifier</th>
<th>Comparative Form</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>nervous</td>
<td>more nervous</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Modifiers with three or more syllables use more to form the comparative.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Modifier</th>
<th>Comparative Form</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>successful</td>
<td>more successful</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Be sure not to use –er together with more. That combination is never correct.

Incorrect  Mandy always arrives more earlier than Liza.

Correct  Mandy always arrives earlier than Liza.

Practice

Complete each of the following sentences with the correct form of the given modifier.

Example:

1. quickly: Sam finished his test more quickly than Liam.

1. more quickly

1. lovable: I think dogs are more than hamsters are.

2. small: Hamsters are smaller than dogs.

3. playful: Hamsters are more playful at night than during the day.

4. frequently: Dogs have to be fed more frequently than hamsters.

5. easy: Do you think hamsters are more to take care of than dogs?

For more information and practice on comparatives, see page 497.
Publish Your Essay

Experience to the Rescue  Your experience with the two subjects you wrote about in your comparison-contrast essay can provide information that people need and want. What is the best way to reach the audience who will benefit from your experience?

- Does the topic of your comparison-contrast essay relate to a school subject? Did you compare two sports? two artists? two countries? Make copies of your essay and share them with teachers. They might use your essay in their classes.
- Display your essays and those of your classmates on a wall in your school. Invite teachers, parents, and other students to view the “Authors’ Wall.”

Creating a Bar Graph  A quick and visual way to show your readers the similarities and differences between two subjects is to provide a bar graph. Each point of comparison can be a separate graph. Some word-processing programs allow you to create graphs, or you can draw one by hand. Either way, make sure you use colors and provide a legend, or explanation of what each color represents. Colors will help your reader identify each subject in your graph. Below, see how the writer of the Writer’s Model used a bar graph that includes a legend to compare the needs of hamsters and dogs.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Days per week</th>
<th>Needs</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>7</td>
<td>Fill food bowl</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6</td>
<td>Fill water bowl</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5</td>
<td>Exercise</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4</td>
<td>Attention when owner is gone</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Dogs: Fill food bowl, Fill water bowl, Exercise, Attention when owner is gone
Hamsters: Fill food bowl, Fill water bowl, Exercise, Attention when owner is gone

By looking at the bar graph to the left, readers can tell which pet needs more daily care.
Do you know which pet has more needs?
Reflect on Your Essay

Building Your Portfolio  Take time to reflect both on the process of comparing and contrasting two subjects and on the process of writing your essay. Thinking about how you wrote this assignment will help you when you write your next paper.

- Do you think the two subjects you wrote about are more similar or more different? Why?
- Before you wrote your essay, you arranged your ideas in a certain order. Did you find that helpful? Why or why not?
- Think about the reason why you compared the two subjects you chose. How does your essay achieve that purpose?

YOUR TURN 12  Proofreading, Publishing, and Reflecting on Your Essay

- Correct grammar, usage, and mechanics errors.
- Publish your essay by following one of the suggestions on the previous page.
- Answer the questions from Reflect on Your Essay above. Record your responses in a learning log, or include them in your portfolio.
Writing a Classification Essay

A common question on essay tests is one that asks you to classify the similarities and differences between two subjects or the good and bad points about one subject. You must quickly determine how to generate ideas. A T-chart can help. Suppose the prompt to the right appeared on a writing test. How would you approach it?

Think about your language arts class and your science class. They are alike in some ways and different in other ways. Write a composition in which you explain how your language arts and science classes are alike and how they are different.

Writing a Classification Essay

▶ STEP 1 Identify what the prompt is asking you to do.

It asks me to explain how my language arts and science classes are alike and different.

▶ STEP 2 Think of at least two points of comparison. Then, create a T-chart and fill it in with supporting details.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Similarities</th>
<th>Differences</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>What I learn</td>
<td>information about people and events</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>What I do</td>
<td>homework</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>write papers</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>read</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

▶ STEP 3 Plan how you will develop your essay.

I’ll use block style. I’ll talk all about language arts in the first body paragraph and science in the second body paragraph.

▶ STEP 4 Write your essay. Make sure to elaborate on the supporting details from your T-chart with facts, examples, and explanations.
Comparing Documentaries

Is truth stranger than fiction? Many filmmakers and writers would answer with a booming “Yes!” Filmmakers who want to show that truth is interesting will make a documentary. A documentary is a non-fiction film that creatively portrays an actual event, person, place, thing, or issue.

Filmmakers have the same reasons for producing documentaries as writers have for writing essays, articles, stories, or poems. Their purposes are to inform, to entertain, to persuade, and to express themselves. Like many writers, filmmakers may also have the purpose of making money. Every documentary will have at least one of these purposes. In fact, a documentary, like a written work, may have several purposes.

Two of a Kind? For this assignment, you will compare the purposes of two documentaries on the same topic. To do that, ask yourself the questions to the right.

- Does the filmmaker provide facts and explanations about a topic? If so, the purpose may be to inform.
- Does the filmmaker focus on a famous person, a funny event, or an attention-grabbing topic? Does the documentary contain flashy graphics, an appealing soundtrack, and eye-catching camerawork? If so, the purpose may be to entertain.
- Does the filmmaker appeal to viewers’ emotions and try to get the viewers to think a certain way? If so, the purpose may be to persuade.
- Does the filmmaker explore a topic using a first-person narrator who reveals his or her inner thoughts about the topic? If so, the purpose may be to express.
- Does the filmmaker focus on a popular topic? If so, the purpose may be to make money. The larger the audience a documentary attracts, the more ads the network can sell.

YOUR TURN

Comparing Documentaries

View two documentaries on the same topic. As you watch, take notes on how information is presented in each, using the questions above as a guide. Then, write a paragraph or two comparing the two documentaries. Discuss how the documentaries’ purposes are similar, and how they are different.
Comparing Ideas in Photographs

When you look at a photograph of yourself, what do you see? You see yourself, right? The picture shows the color of your eyes and hair, the shape of your nose and mouth, and the style of clothing you wear. Actually, while the person in the picture certainly seems to look like you, it is not the real you.

Photographs vs. Reality

Many people believe that photographs truly represent reality, but they do not. In truth, photographs, like all illustrations, only resemble an actual person, place, thing, or event. What you see in a photograph is not the same as what you see in real life because photographs have the following unique characteristics.

- Photographs are two-dimensional and flat. If you took a picture of the palm of your hand, could you turn the picture over and see the top of your hand? No. The photograph shows only one side. In real life, you can view all sides.

- Photographs are easily reproduced and distributed. It is easy to make copies of your birthday party pictures and send them to relatives and friends. Although it might be fun, it would be impossible to reproduce the real party over and over again.

- Photographs contain a single point of view. When you look at a head-on photograph of a baseball player hitting a baseball, you are looking at the action from the photographer’s point of view. You do not see what the hitter sees. Photographers use the element of point of view to show how an image looks from a specific position.
Photographs Provide Information

Even though looking at a photograph is not the same as actually seeing the real thing, photographs are helpful because they provide information in an easily accessible way. For example, if you want to know what a Tasmanian devil looks like, you could visit the nearest zoo, fly to Tasmania, or look at a photograph. The easiest choice, of course, would be to look at a photograph.

Photographs are also a powerful partner to the written and spoken word. In a newspaper, for instance, you might read about an erupting volcano. Not until you look at the picture that accompanies the article would you fully understand the massive destruction the volcano caused. Because photographs are so powerful and easy to reproduce, they are a popular form of media. Look in any magazine, newspaper, or textbook and you will find many photographs. You should be aware, however, that the information photographs provide can be changed by adjusting the camera angle, by cropping the photograph, and by using captions.

Up, Down, Sideways A photographer can change the appearance of a person, place, thing, or event by changing the camera angle. Look at the examples below. In the picture on the left, the photographer stood on a ladder and shot the picture looking down. Do you see how the boy looks small and rather fragile? Now, look at the picture on the right taken of the same boy from a low angle. From this point of view, the boy looks big and powerful, even a little intimidating.
What’s Missing? Photographs can be cropped, or cut, so background details do not distract the viewer from the main subject. However, cropping can change the meaning of a picture, as you can see below. In the picture on the left you see a spaceship hovering in the sky. In the picture on the right, though, you see what was cut from the first picture. Aliens are not landing; a girl is holding the spaceship by a string.

!Spaceman !Girl

More Than Words Some photographs have captions, which are like titles. A caption provides viewers with a summary of what is shown in a picture. Captions can be neutral, giving only facts, or they can show a positive or negative attitude toward the subject. Look at the pictures and captions below and on the next page. You can see that the images are the same, but the captions show two very different attitudes toward grizzly bears.

Enjoying the spring weather, a mother bear and her young relax by the riverside.
Here is the same picture with a different caption. Notice how the caption changes what you “see” in the photo.

Rangers warn park visitors not to approach mother grizzly bears. They will fiercely protect their cubs.

Comparing Ideas in Photographs

- Look at the photograph on the left below, while covering up the photo next to it. How do you feel about the subject? Write a caption for the photograph that summarizes what you see and expresses your feelings.

- Next, look at the photograph on the right. How do you feel about the subject now? Write a caption for the photograph that summarizes what you see and expresses your feelings.

- Finally, write a paragraph in which you compare the two photographs. Explain how the differences in the way each photo is presented may have affected the captions you wrote.
CHAPTER 4

Choices

Choose one of the following activities to complete.

► CAREERS
1. Tool Time  Comparing and contrasting two subjects is a favorite tool of journalists, consumer advocates, scientists, sports commentators, and campaign managers for politicians. Find examples of how comparing and contrasting is used in these fields or in other fields. Then, write a report that describes examples of how people in their fields make comparisons.

► CROSSING THE CURRICULUM: ART
2. An Eye for Detail  Sharpen your powers of observation by creating two illustrations in which several details have been changed from one to the other. For instance, if you drew two illustrations of a pizza with many toppings, the second would be slightly different from the first because you added, removed, or changed the toppings. Once your two illustrations are drawn, ask a partner to circle the items that are different.

► CREATIVE WRITING
3. It’s Like This  Compose a humorous poem about a person, place, thing, or idea using similes. A simile is a comparison of two unlike things using like or as. For example, you could write a simile poem about happiness that begins, “Happiness is like a day without homework.” In the rest of the poem, you would explain in a funny way the ways in which these two things are alike.

► CROSSING THE CURRICULUM: MUSIC
4. The Beat Goes On  Does your favorite musician or band follow the same formula from one CD to the next? Find specific examples that show how the musician or band has changed or stayed the same over time. You might focus on lyrics, style, vocals, or other areas. Give a multimedia presentation, using audio or audio-visual clips to demonstrate your points.
You stand staring at the rows of bookshelves in your school library. You need to choose a book to read, but how can you? With so many books to choose from, it sometimes seems impossible to settle on just one.

One way to choose a book is to read a book review. A book review tells what a book is about and the reviewer’s opinion of the book. You can find book reviews in many newspapers and magazines. Some sites on the World Wide Web are devoted entirely to book reviews.

Book reviewers help readers sort through the many choices they have when deciding what to read. Reviewers base their ideas about books on careful reading and on knowledge of what makes a book good. You can be a book reviewer, too. You can use your skills as a reader to judge a book. Then, by sharing your ideas, you will help others decide if a book might be good to read.

Your Turn

Reviewing a Book

With a partner, think of a book that you liked and give two reasons why you liked it. Then, think of a book you disliked and give two reasons why you disliked it. Discuss your reasons.
Reading a Book Review

“Hilarious,” “humorous,” and “sarcastic” are words a reviewer uses in the review of the book Catherine, Called Birdy. Does this description make you interested in knowing more about the book? Read the following book review to see more of the reviewer’s ideas about the book. Will it be a “thumbs up” or “thumbs down” review?

Preparing to Read

Elements of a Novel A novel does not just happen. A writer must put certain parts, or elements, into a book. Plot, character, setting, and a problem—a novel must have these elements, just as a baseball team needs a pitcher, a catcher, infielders, and outfielders. Reviewers focus on the elements of a novel when they read novels and when they write reviews about them. Notice which elements are mentioned in the review of Catherine, Called Birdy by Karen Cushman.

Point of View We all have an attitude sometimes. Book reviewers specialize in having an attitude, and they will let you know what it is. The attitude of the reviewer (or of any writer) toward his or her topic is sometimes called the point of view. A book review will often end with a statement telling you whether the reviewer recommends reading the book. Long before you reach the end of a review, though, you will know how the reviewer feels. The reviewer’s point of view will come across in the words he or she uses to talk about the book. What is the point of view of the reviewer of Catherine, Called Birdy?
Read the following book review. In a notebook or on a separate sheet of paper, jot down answers to the numbered active-reading questions in the shaded boxes. The underlined words will be discussed in the Vocabulary Mini-Lesson on page 159.

from Great Books for Girls

Catherine, Called Birdy

Reviewed by Kathleen Odean

Catherine, daughter of a small-time nobleman in medieval England, is hilarious. In a diary format she records her daily life, the outrages she suffers as a girl, and her often humorous assessment of things. She longs to be outside frolicking instead of inside sewing, and she chafes at her lessons in ladylike behavior. Birdy is the sort of girl who organizes a spitting contest and starts a mud fight. She makes a list of all the things girls cannot do, such as go on a crusade, be a horse trainer, laugh out loud, and “marry whom they will.” She battles with her father, who wants to marry her off to the highest bidder, no matter how repulsive. Many of her best sarcastic remarks are reserved for him, and she irritates him whenever possible. She has a lively sense of humor and a palpable love of life. Few fictional characters are so vivid and funny—do not miss this one.

1. Who or what is the focus of the reviewer’s comments?

2. What does the reviewer think about the book?

3. Does this review make you want to read the book? Why or why not?

1. crusade: In the eleventh, twelfth, and thirteenth centuries, Christian nations repeatedly sent armies to the Holy Land, the region that is now made up of parts of Israel, Jordan, and Egypt. These armies repeatedly tried but failed to win back the Holy Land from the Muslims. These missions were called crusades.
Elements of a Novel

A Recipe for Greatness  When you cook, you must have certain ingredients for a dish to turn out well. A spaghetti dinner, for example, needs pasta and a good sauce.

Good stories and novels have several ingredients, or elements. A book reviewer will tell you about the elements of a particular novel. The reviewer will also let you know if he or she thinks the novelist got the recipe right. The chart below defines some elements of stories and novels and provides examples from a fairy tale you may know.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Elements of Stories and Novels</th>
<th>Examples from “Snow-White”</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>The plot is a series of related events that make up a story. The events revolve around a central problem, or conflict, which must be resolved before the story ends.</td>
<td>A jealous queen wants to kill her beautiful step-daughter, Snow-White. Snow-White hides in the forest. She lives in a cottage with seven dwarfs. The queen tricks Snow-White into eating a poisoned apple that makes her appear dead. Snow-White is rescued by a prince.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The main character is the central person in the story.</td>
<td>Snow-White is the main character.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The setting is the time and place of a story.</td>
<td>The story is set a long time ago in a forest.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Identifying Elements of a Novel in a Book Review

Re-read the review of Catherine, Called Birdy on page 155. Find the elements of the novel by answering the following questions.

- Plot: What does the reviewer tell you about what happens?
- Character: Who is the main character? What is she like?
- Setting: Where and when do the events take place?
Point of View

Grade “A” Quality  A book reviewer’s job is to evaluate, or judge the quality of, a novel. A reviewer’s point of view often comes through in the way he or she discusses the elements of the novel. Positive or negative words reveal the reviewer’s attitude toward the book.

Read the following review of the fairy tale “Snow-White.” Look for the reviewer’s point of view by noting which elements the reviewer mentions and whether he or she uses positive or negative words. If you need help, the Thinking It Through that follows the review will guide you.

The character of Snow-White is unbelievably good and beautiful, but she is also much too trusting. Her beauty keeps the hunter and wild animals from harming her and provides her a charming home in the forest. However, her beauty does not hide her helplessness. She knows that the queen is trying to kill her, yet she continues to talk to strange women who come to the dwarfs’ house. Three times she accepts deadly gifts from the disguised evil queen. Three times she survives. Anyone else would probably not be so lucky. Her character leaves the reader wondering how she manages to live happily ever after.

Thinking It Through

Identifying Point of View

STEP 1 You can make a chart like the one on the next page to analyze a book review. In the middle column, note positive or negative words and phrases the reviewer uses to discuss each element. You may write none if the reviewer does not discuss a certain element.

STEP 2 Based on the negative or positive words that the reviewer uses, decide what his or her point of view is. Write the point of view in the right-hand column of the chart. If the element is not discussed, you may leave the space blank.
Element | Positive or Negative Words and Phrases | Reviewer’s Point of View
--- | --- | ---
Plot | none describing plot |
Main Character | positive: good, beautiful, lucky negative: unbelievably, much too trusting, helplessness | Snow-White is beautiful, but that does not make her a great character.
Main Character | positive: charming negative: none | There is not enough information to tell.

STEP 3 Put it all together. Look at the positive and negative words and phrases and decide what the reviewer thinks.

The reviewer does not think “Snow-White” is a good story because the main character is too helpless and unbelievably lucky.

YOUR TURN 3 Identifying a Reviewer’s Point of View

Re-read the review of Catherine, Called Birdy on page 155. Then, use the Thinking It Through steps to identify the reviewer’s point of view. Be prepared to explain why you think the reviewer takes the point of view you have identified.
Wordbusting Strategy (CSSD)

A reviewer may use very specific words to communicate exactly what he or she thinks of a book. Often, the word good is just not good enough.

When you come across an unfamiliar word in a book review, you can use a four-part strategy called Wordbusting. The letters CSSD can help you remember the steps of the strategy. Use only as many steps as it takes to understand the word.

- Context: Use clues from the words and sentences around the word.
- Structure: Look for familiar roots, prefixes, or suffixes.
- Sound: Say the word aloud. It may sound like a word you know.
- Dictionary: Look up the word.

Using the Wordbusting Strategy

Here is an example of Wordbusting, using the word outrages from the review of Catherine, Called Birdy.

Context: “In a diary format she records her daily life, the outrages she suffers as a girl, and her often humorous assessment of things.”

In the sentence, outrages are something she suffers. Suffers tells me that outrages are bad.

Structure: out + rage + s

Rage means “anger,” so the word must have something to do with getting mad.

Sound: out′ rā′ j′ iz

It sounds like out and rage, I think an outrage must be something that makes you mad.

Dictionary: Outrages are acts that hurt someone or disregard a person’s feelings.

My definition is pretty close.

Practice

Use the Wordbusting strategy to figure out the meanings of the words to the right. The words are underlined in the review of Catherine, Called Birdy on page 155, so you can see the context of each word. After each definition, list the steps of CSSD that you used for that word.

1. assessment
2. frolicking
3. chafes
4. repulsive
5. palpable
Answering Questions About Unfamiliar Vocabulary

Reading tests may ask you to identify the meanings of new words. The words may be technical or specialized terms that you normally do not use. To figure out their meanings, you must find clues in the reading passage. Look at the reading passage below and the test question that follows it. Then, use the Thinking It Through steps to figure out the answer.

In the Middle Ages, books and other documents had to be copied by hand. Professional writers, called scribes, copied documents onto a kind of paper made from sheepskin. Often, many scribes sat together in a scriptorium, writing with ink and quill pens made from feathers. Scribes left wide margins on pages so that artists could draw colorful illustrations. When the handmade pages were complete, they were sewn together into a book.

You can tell from the passage that a scriptorium is

A. a person who copies documents
B. a pen made from feathers
C. a room where scribes work
D. a book made from sheepskin

The passage is about how scribes copied documents in the Middle Ages.

The passage tells me that scribes sat in a scriptorium. I can tell from the words “sat” and “in” that a scriptorium is a building or room.

A is wrong. The people who copied are scribes.
B does not match my answer.
C matches my answer. This is correct.
D is wrong. The scribes would not sit in a book.
Writing a Book Review

You have just taken a journey. Maybe you went back in time or visited a foreign land. Perhaps you fought dragons, danced with royalty, and conquered evil. How did you do these wonderful things? You read a book, of course.

You think that all your friends should visit the world in the book you have just read. You can show your friends this world by writing a book review. In this workshop you will write a book review about a young adult novel. You will summarize the book and tell whether you think it is worth reading.

Select a Novel

Plucky Heroines in the City

For this review, you will read a young adult novel. Think of the types of characters or settings you like to read about in novels. Then, look for a book with the type of character or setting that interests you most. To find a book, you might

- browse in bookstores—in person or online
- ask friends for recommendations
- go to the HRW Web site
- ask a librarian or media specialist for suggestions
- read some book reviews
- look for a new book by one of your favorite authors
Preview of Coming Attractions  Once you have found several possible choices for your book review, preview each one to make your final decision. One student previewed Tuck Everlasting by Natalie Babbitt by following the steps in the Thinking it Through below.

THINKING IT THROUGH

Previewing a Novel

► STEP 1 Look at the cover. Is there something that makes you interested in the book?

The front cover has a mysterious pair of eyes on it. The back cover has a quotation that makes me curious about the book.

► STEP 2 Read the book jacket summary. What does the summary tell you?

The story is about a young girl who is kidnapped by a family who drank from a spring that lets them live forever.

► STEP 3 Skim some pages. Do you like the way the characters are shown? Do you see any interesting action taking place?

There are lots of examples of dialogue, and I like to hear the characters talking. Somebody escapes from jail.

► STEP 4 Consider what you have found. Does the book look interesting? Do you want to know more about the characters?

Yes, I want to know more about these characters. I think that this is a good choice for me.

Read Your Novel

KEY CONCEPT

As you read the book you have chosen, remember that you will be writing about it later. Keep nearby a sheet of paper divided into three columns. Label the columns plot, setting, and main character. Fill in the columns by answering the questions at the top of the next page as you read. Include page numbers next to important notes. The page numbers will help you if you need to go back and re-read some sections of the novel.

TIP As you read, keep in mind the deadline for your review. Set aside time to read each day and set goals for how many pages you will read.
Think About Purpose and Audience

The Big Picture  You have read your book and are ready to tell people what you think. Before you begin, think about

- the purpose of your book review
- the people who will be reading it (your audience)

Your purpose for writing a book review will be closely linked to your audience and to their purpose for reading the review. Here are some questions and possible responses to help you think about your audience and their purpose.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Who is the audience for my book review?</th>
<th>Why might these people read my book review?</th>
<th>What types of information might interest my audience?</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>classmates</td>
<td>to decide whether to read a book</td>
<td>What is the book about?</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>community librarian</td>
<td>to decide whether to get a book for the library</td>
<td>What type of book is it? (mystery, fantasy, western, general fiction, and so on)</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>parents</td>
<td>to decide if a book is right for younger readers</td>
<td>How easy (or difficult) is it to read?</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>gift shoppers</td>
<td>to decide whether to buy a book as a gift</td>
<td>How much does it cost?</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Selecting and Reading a Novel

Brainstorm a list of the types of novels you like to read. Follow the Thinking It Through steps on page 162 to preview a few novels and choose one that you think you will enjoy. Then, read your book and take notes in a three-column chart based on your answers to the questions above. Save your notes for later.

YOUR TURN 4  Selecting and Reading a Novel

Brainstorm a list of the types of novels you like to read. Follow the Thinking It Through steps on page 162 to preview a few novels and choose one that you think you will enjoy. Then, read your book and take notes in a three-column chart based on your answers to the questions above. Save your notes for later.

TIP  Keep notes on your reaction to the book. Record your opinions, any quotations that you like, and questions you have about the book. As you read, jot down notes about anything that jumps out at you.
The audience for the review of Tuck Everlasting will be the student’s classmates. Their purpose for reading will be to decide whether to read the book themselves. This audience will probably want to know what the book is about, but not how it ends. They might also be interested in knowing how easy or difficult the book is to read.

YOUR TURN 5 Thinking About Purpose and Audience

Use the chart at the bottom of page 163 to help you consider your audience and their purpose for reading your review.

---

Gather and Organize Details

You Get the Idea If you want people to read the book you have chosen, you need to say more about it than “It’s good.” You need to give them a summary of the book. A summary of a piece of writing includes only the key ideas of the piece. When you summarize a novel, you will briefly retell the important events. The notes that you took while you read your novel and the instructions on page 166 will help you write your summary.

There Is More to the Story If a story were plot alone, it would not be much fun to read. Readers will be more interested in plot events if they know something about the people and places involved. When you write a summary, include a description of the characters and the setting. The chart below contains examples from Tuck Everlasting.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Character</th>
<th>Who is the main character?</th>
<th>The main character is Winnie. She is a spoiled only child who is bored and tired of being told what to do.</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>What is he or she like?</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Setting</th>
<th>Where and when does the story take place?</th>
<th>The novel is set in 1880 in the village of Treegap.</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>

| Plot      | What problem does the main character face? | Winnie has to decide if she should keep the Tucks’ secret—the fountain the Tucks drink from that gives them eternal life. She decides to help them. Helping them makes her brave. |

|           | How does he or she deal with the problem? |                                                                 |

---
CRITICAL THINKING

Identifying the Elements of a Plot

Once upon a Time  Most fairy tales begin with “Once upon a time . . .” and end with “. . . happily ever after.” The plot in between is usually easy to follow. Novels, on the other hand, usually have a more complicated plot. However, they, too, follow a plot pattern.

- Most stories begin with a basic situation in which you learn about the characters and the setting.
- The main character usually runs into a conflict, or problem, early in the story.

- This problem sets in motion a series of events, or complications, that make up the action of the story.
- All of these events build to a high point, the climax. The climax is the most exciting moment in the plot.
- Following the climax is the resolution, or outcome. In this part of the story, we see how everything works out for the main character.

A plot line helps you figure out all the important steps of a plot. Below is an example of a plot line for Tuck Everlasting.

---

PrACTICE

Create a plot line for the novel that you read.

(Hint: As you decide which events are the most important, think about what sticks out in your mind. What are the events that any reader would need to know for the story to make sense?)
Order! Order! You may want to begin your summary with details about character and setting. Then you can start summarizing the plot. Follow chronological order, telling what happens in the beginning and middle of the novel but do not tell how the novel ends, unless your audience is a group (such as librarians) who would prefer to know. When you write your summary, use transitions like first, next, and last to link the details of the plot together.

Gathering and Organizing Details

Record details from your reading notes about plot, main character, and setting in a chart like the one on page 164. Put a number next to each detail in your chart to show the order in which you will present the details when you write your summary.

Designing Your Writing

Highlighting a Quotation Book reviews sometimes highlight a quotation from the book. The stand-alone quotation sparks the reader's curiosity. To include a quotation, follow these guidelines.

- Select a quotation by thinking about what the main character says or does at an important moment in the book.
- Set the quotation apart from the rest of your book review by placing it directly below your title and indenting it on both sides. List the title and author of the book beneath the quotation, indented on the left side. Here is an example.

A Review of Natalie Babbitt’s Tuck Everlasting

She would try very hard not to think of it, but sometimes, as now, it would be forced upon her. She raged against it, helpless and insulted, and blurted at last, “I don’t want to die.”

_Tuck Everlasting_, by Natalie Babbitt

If you could live forever just by drinking water, would you do it? The Tuck family unknowingly does just that in Natalie Babbitt’s fantasy novel _Tuck Everlasting_. . . .
Preparing Your Evaluation

Four Stars ★★★★★ After you have prepared notes for your book’s summary, you should think about your evaluation. The evaluation is the last part of a book review. In an evaluation, you
- tell readers why you like or dislike the book
- include a recommendation to read or not to read the book

It is important to know whether or not you would recommend the book. After all, you want your point of view, or attitude, about the book to come across throughout your review. Also, remember who your audience is when you make your recommendation. For example, you might think a book is too easy to read, but if your audience is younger readers, the reading level might be just right for them.

Here are two example evaluations based on Tuck Everlasting.

The question of whether Winnie would drink from the spring remained open through the whole book. I could tell she might go either way, so the suspense was great. I enjoyed watching Winnie discover a world beyond her sheltered life. I would recommend Tuck Everlasting to readers who wonder what it might be like to live forever and who like suspense and fantasy.

Winnie’s conflict over whether she would tell the Tucks’ secret ended early in the book. From then on, I knew exactly how the book would end, and I found too many parts of the story unbelievable. I thought Winnie was weak and boring. She liked rules and order too much, and she hated getting dirty. I would not recommend the book except to big fans of fantasy.

Preventing Your Evaluation

Write an evaluation of the young adult novel you read for your book review. State clearly why you like or dislike the book and whether you think others should read the book or not.
Framework

Introduction
- Attention grabber
- Statement of author and title

Body
- Summary
  - Details about setting
  - Details about main character
  - Details about plot

Conclusion
- Evaluation
  - Reason
  - Recommendation

Directions and Explanations
Get your readers’ attention by introducing the topic of the book in an interesting way. You may use a quotation, dialogue, a question, a metaphor or simile, or a slice of action to get your readers’ attention. Be sure to identify the author and title. You might also tell readers what type of book it is: mystery, fantasy, historical fiction, and so on.

A plot summary should follow chronological, or time, order. Start with the beginning events, followed by the middle events, but do not reveal the novel’s ending unless you think your audience would prefer to know it.

Use transition words to give your paper coherence. In a coherent composition, one idea flows logically to the next. For more on transitions, see page 287.

Write your evaluation. Give readers at least one reason why you like or dislike the book. Finally, make a recommendation to your readers: Should they read the book or not?

YOUR TURN 8 Drafting Your Book Review
Now it is your turn to draft a book review. As you write,
- keep your audience in mind
- refer to the framework above and the Writer’s Model on the next page
A Review of
Natalie Babbitt’s Tuck Everlasting

If you could live forever just by drinking water, would you do it? The Tuck family unknowingly does just that in Natalie Babbitt’s fantasy novel Tuck Everlasting. Living forever is complicated, though, especially when other people discover the secret.

Winnie, a lonely, sheltered, and spoiled only child, lives in a house at the edge of a village called Treegap. One hot August day in 1880, she discovers the Tuck family and the magic spring that lets them live forever. The Tucks are kindhearted, but they do not want anyone to know their secret. To keep Winnie from telling what she has seen, the Tucks kidnap her and take her to their home. There, Mr. Tuck explains why no one else should know about the spring. He feels that living forever is a lonely and empty experience. No one has ever talked to Winnie about such important things before. Winnie begins to see the world a bit differently and becomes friends with the Tucks. The next day, however, an evil stranger threatens to tell the secret. Mrs. Tuck gets upset and accidentally kills the man when he tries to take Winnie away. The Treegap constable takes Mrs. Tuck to jail. Next, Winnie bravely helps rescue Mrs. Tuck from jail. Winnie courageously struggles with some tough decisions. For starters, she must decide whether to keep the Tucks’ secret. She also faces the opportunity to drink from the spring and live forever with the Tucks.

Tuck Everlasting is excellent. It is full of suspense as Winnie makes choices, takes risks, and learns about life. Although it is a fantasy book, it contains some truths about life. I recommend it to anyone who has ever dreamed about living forever or has had to make a tough choice.
A Review of
_Out of the Storm_ by Patricia Willis

When single mother Vera lost her job in Garnet Creek, the family had to move to a new town. Patricia Willis, author of _Out of the Storm_, wrote this story from the viewpoint of Mandy, Vera’s twelve-year-old daughter.

Mom and nine-year-old Ira adjusted to the new setting quickly, but Mandy resented everything about their new location. She held on to a dream that she and her deceased father had, and that dream prevented her from accepting her new life. She resented living with grumpy Aunt Bess and detested having to tend the sheep.

Mandy lived with her unhappiness and pitied herself until several incidents happened that made her realize that she was not the only kid who did not have a perfect life. She also found that others had dreams and perhaps by forgetting herself and helping someone else, she might find real happiness.

I think if a reader is looking for a book that tells of a family’s struggle to live, _Out of the Storm_ by Patricia Willis would be a good choice. I really liked this book because it showed characters learning to tough out bad situations. I also like the book’s motto, “Sometimes it takes something Bad to make you see the Good.”
Evaluate and Revise Content, Organization, and Style

A Second Look
Once you have written a first draft, you need to think about how to improve it. Do this by taking a break from your review and then reading the draft twice. In the first reading, focus on your ideas. Do they make sense? Are they in the right order? The guidelines below will help you decide. In the second reading, look at your words and sentences. The Focus on Word Choice on page 173 will help you.

First Reading: Content and Organization
Use the following chart to evaluate and revise your book review.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Evaluation Questions</th>
<th>Tips</th>
<th>Revision Techniques</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>1. Does the introduction grab the reader’s attention and give the book’s author and title?</td>
<td>Put a check mark next to any interesting statements. Underline the title and author of the book.</td>
<td>Add a quotation, question, or interesting statement to the introduction. Add the book’s title and author if necessary.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2. Does the summary include information about the book’s setting and main character?</td>
<td>Highlight the book’s setting. Draw a wavy line under information about the main character.</td>
<td>Elaborate with details about the book’s setting and main character.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3. Does the summary retell the book’s major plot events? Does it give details that would interest readers?</td>
<td>Put a star next to each major plot event. Underline any information that would appeal to the review’s audience.</td>
<td>Delete unimportant plot events and information. Add any important plot events missing from the summary.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4. Does the summary show how the major events are connected?</td>
<td>Draw a box around each word that shows how the events are related.</td>
<td>Add transition words or rearrange events to make their order clearer.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5. Does the conclusion include a clear evaluation with at least one reason? Does it include a recommendation?</td>
<td>Underline the evaluation. Draw two lines under the reason or reasons given for it. Circle the recommendation.</td>
<td>Add reasons to the evaluation, if necessary. Add a recommendation, if necessary.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

COMPUTER TIP
If you are writing your review using a computer, you can use several word-processing features to help you revise. As you use the Self-Evaluation chart below, use the underlining feature for Tips 1, 3, and 5. For Tip 2, highlight or color the text on your screen.
ONE WRITER’S REVISIONS  This revision is an early draft of the book review on page 169.

Winnie lives in a house at the edge of a village called Treegap. One hot August day in 1880, she discovers the Tuck family and the magic spring that lets them live forever. She had been following a frog into the forest. The Tucks are kindhearted, but they do not want anyone to know their secret. To keep Winnie from telling what she has seen, the Tucks kidnap her and take her to their home.

Responding to the Revision Process
1. Why do you think the writer elaborated by adding words to the first sentence?
2. Why do you think the writer deleted a sentence from the paragraph above?
3. Why do you think the writer added the last sentence?

If you are evaluating a peer’s book review, ask yourself these questions:
- Do I understand what the book is about?
- Do I know what the writer thinks of the book?
- Does the book review make me want to read the book? Why or why not?

Second Reading: Style  Now that you have looked at the big picture, it is time to focus on your sentences. There are many ways to edit sentences. One way is to eliminate clichés. Clichés are expressions that have been used so often they have lost their original meaning. When you hear or read a cliché, you probably do not even bother to picture the image in your mind. As a writer, the last thing you want is to have your readers ignore your ideas. The following guidelines will help you make your writing clear and original.

Style Guidelines

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Evaluation Question</th>
<th>Tip</th>
<th>Revision Technique</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Does the review contain any overused phrases?</td>
<td>Circle every word or phrase that you think is a cliché.</td>
<td>Replace each cliché with your original words.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Clichés

When you are writing about a book you have read, you may want to use certain familiar expressions. However, clichés will weaken the punch of your writing. Here are some examples of clichés. See if you can think of others.

It is raining cats and dogs. She is as busy as a bee.

Replacing clichés with more original wording will make your meaning clearer and your writing more interesting.

The rain is pummeling the ground.
She zips around from 7:00 A.M. until 7:00 P.M. each day.

ONE WRITER’S REVISIONS

There, Mr. Tuck explains why no one else should know about the spring. He feels that living forever is a lonely and empty experience.

Responding to the Revision Process

How did replacing the cliché “bowl of cherries” with another phrase improve the sentence above?

YOUR TURN Evaluating and Revising Your Book Review

- First, evaluate and revise the content and organization of your review by using the guidelines on page 171.
- Next, replace any clichés in your writing. Use the guidelines on page 172 and the Focus on Word Choice above to help you.
- If a peer read your paper, think carefully about his or her comments before you revise.
Proofread Your Book Review

Getting It Right  Now you need to proofread, or edit, your book review. If you have too many errors in your book review, your readers may not take your recommendation seriously. To make sure you catch every error, also have a classmate proofread your review.

Using Appositives

An appositive is a noun or pronoun that identifies or describes another noun or pronoun. An appositive phrase includes an appositive and its modifiers. Appositive phrases often answer the question Who? or What?

Appositive: My Spanish teacher, Ms. Alvarez, was born in Cuba. [Ms. Alvarez identifies who the Spanish teacher is.]

Appositive Phrase: I am interested in geology, the study of the earth and rocks. [The study of the earth and rocks explains what geology is.]

Appositives that are not essential to the sentence are set off with commas.

Our new gym teacher, Mr. Samson, trained as a gymnast. [The name Mr. Samson is extra information. Commas must be used to set it off.]

Commas are not needed if the appositive is essential to the meaning of the sentence.

My brother Abdul wants to be a gymnast. [The speaker has more than one brother.]

PRACTICE

Copy the sentences below on your own paper. Underline the appositive in each sentence, and insert commas where needed.

Example:

1. Last week I read Tuck Everlasting a novel about living forever.

   1. Last week I read Tuck Everlasting, a novel about living forever.

   1. The novel a fantasy for young adults is set a long time ago in a small village.

   2. The main character Winnie Foster learns many things in the book.

   3. Angus Tuck head of the Tuck family talks to Winnie about the loneliness of living forever.

   5. The Tucks’ son Jesse wants Winnie to drink from the spring. (They have two sons.)

For more information and practice on punctuating appositives, see page 570.
Publish Your Book Review

Read All About It  Finally, your book review is finished. Your goal was to write a review that would inform others about a book. How will you get your audience to read your review? Here are some suggestions.

- Find a Web site or online bookstore that asks for reader reviews of young adult literature, and send in your review.
- Create a reading suggestion bulletin board in your classroom. Post a copy of your book review there. If you have access to a school Web site, help create a Web page for all the book reviews written by your classmates.
- Deliver your book review as an oral response to the novel. Summarize the book for your listeners, and then explain your evaluation. Be sure to provide clear reasons why you like or dislike the book.

Reflect on Your Book Review

Building Your Portfolio  Take time to think about your book review now that it is finished. What did you learn from it? Good writers are always learning from their writing. You can, too, by answering the following questions.

- What did you find easy or difficult about writing a summary?
- When else could you use summary writing?
- Which evaluation guideline (page 171) was most helpful in evaluating and revising your book review? Why?

YOUR TURN 10  Proofreading, Publishing, and Reflecting on Your Book Review

- Correct any punctuation, spelling, or grammar errors in your book review. Look closely at any appositives you used.
- Publish your book review so that others can read it.
- Answer the questions from Reflect on Your Book Review above. Record your responses in a learning log, or include them in your portfolio.
Writing a Short Story

Like a novel, a short story has characters, a setting, and a conflict. Because short stories are usually only a few pages long, they deal with just a few characters, a single setting, and a simple plot. As a result, short stories often seem more focused than novels. The challenge in writing a short story is getting the focus just right. Here is an opportunity to write your own short story.

Read All About It Read the beginning of the story “Ta-Na-E-Ka.” Notice how the writer introduces the main character, setting, and conflict.

As my birthday drew closer, I had awful nightmares about it. I was reaching the age at which all Kaw Indians had to participate in Ta-Na-E-Ka. Well, not all Kaws. Many of the younger families on the reservation were beginning to give up the old customs. But my grandfather, Amos Deer Leg, was devoted to tradition. He still wore handmade beaded moccasins instead of shoes and kept his iron-gray hair in tight braids. He could speak English, but he spoke it only with white men. With his family he used a Sioux dialect. . . .

Eleven was a magic word among the Kaws. It was the time of Ta-Na-E-Ka, the “flowering of adulthood.” It was the age, my grandfather informed us hundreds of times, “when a boy could prove himself to be a warrior and a girl took the first steps to womanhood.”

“I don’t want to be a warrior,” my cousin Roger Deer Leg confided to me. “I’m going to become an accountant.”

“None of the other tribes make girls go through the endurance ritual,” I complained to my mother.

Mary Whitebird, “Ta-Na-E-Ka”

Plot a Course Every project needs a plan. Here is a plan to help you write your story.

1. Brainstorm characters, settings, and conflicts. Make a chart like the one below to generate ideas. For each column, think of all the possibilities you can imagine. One example is given.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Main Character</th>
<th>Setting</th>
<th>Conflict</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Hector, an 11-year-old detective</td>
<td>a shopping mall</td>
<td>A storm knocks out all the electricity.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
2. Choose a main character, a setting, and a conflict. To create a story beginning, select one idea from each column in your chart. You can mix and match, choosing the character, setting, and conflict that give you the most interesting ideas.

3. Generate details about character and setting. To come up with details, answer the following questions.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Main Character</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>What does he or she like to do?</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>How old is the character?</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>What does he or she look like?</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Setting</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Where does the story take place?</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>When does the story take place?</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>What sensory details will help the reader imagine the setting?</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

4. Map out the plot of your story. Think of details for your plot, using the questions that follow. You may want to use a plot line like the one shown on page 165.

Questions:
- What events happen because of the conflict?
- How can you create suspense, keeping the reader wondering what will happen next?
- What happens first, second, or later?
- What event will be the climax?
- How will the conflict be settled?

Getting Started Once you map out your plot, start writing. If you need help getting started, look again at the first paragraphs of “Ta-Na-E-Ka.” You may find it easier to begin in the middle of your story, and then write the beginning and the ending. Finally, remember that a good story has suspense, dialogue, description, and sensory details, and that its resolution ties up loose ends.

Writing a Short Story

Write a draft of a short story by following the steps you have just read. Exchange your draft with a partner. Read your partner’s draft and look for the story elements of character, setting, and plot. Are any missing? Share your ideas with your partner. Then, revise your story as necessary.

After you have written the story, consider preparing a dramatic interpretation of it to present to your class. (For information on dramatic interpretation, see page 725 in the Quick Reference Handbook.)
Poets play with words to give their readers new ways of looking at the world. In just a few words, a poem can express a wealth of meanings. Many poems rely partly on the sounds of words to convey meaning. You can recognize and appreciate a poem’s sound effects when you understand some of the special techniques poets use. In this section, you will choose a poem and write an essay analyzing its sound effects.

Sound Effect Check  Poets often choose and arrange words to create sound effects. They may try to imitate a specific sound (such as the wind’s howling or a bee’s buzzing) or to create a mood (such as excitement or joy). Sound effects may provide a clue to a poem’s meaning. Three kinds of sound effects are rhyme, rhythm, and repetition.

Rhyme is the repetition of vowel sounds and all sounds following them.

shelf and elf  comb and gnome

Rhyme is used to emphasize ideas, organize the poem, and entertain the reader.

Rhythm is a musical quality created by the repetition of stressed (´) and unstressed (˘) syllables in a line or by the repetition of certain sounds.

You may notice the rhythm of words when you talk. Poets sometimes empha-

Repetition is the effect of repeating a word, phrase, or line throughout a poem. Repetition creates rhythm, helps organize a poem, and emphasizes feelings or ideas. Notice the repetition in the following poem.

How doth the little crocodile
Improve his shining tail,
And pour the waters of the Nile
On every golden scale!

Lewis Carroll,
“How Doth the Little Crocodile”

Last night I dreamed of chickens,
there were chickens everywhere,
they were standing on my stomach,
they were nesting in my hair,
they were pecking at my pillow,
they were hopping on my head,
they were ruffling up their feathers
as they raced about my bed.

Jack Prelutsky,
“Last Night I Dreamed of Chickens”

Jump In Read the poem on the next page. What sound effects can you
First Impressions  In order to analyze a poem’s sound effects, you need to hear them. Read the poem aloud, and jot down your impressions or feelings about it. The following questions can help you identify your response to any poem. Sample responses to “Windy Nights” are provided.

- What did you think about when you read the poem? I thought about a windy night and the kinds of sounds that the wind makes.
- Do you like the poem? Why or why not? Yes, I like the way it repeats words.

A Closer Look  Now it is time to read the poem again. This time, listen more closely to its sound effects. Think about the following questions as you re-read the poem. Find examples in the poem to answer the questions. (Note the line numbers where you find your examples. You will need to use those examples for support in your essay.)

- Does the poem use rhyme?
- Does the poem have rhythm?
- Does the poem use repetition?
- What do the sound effects add to the poem? Would the poem be as effective without the sound effects?

What’s the Plan?  By now, you have a lot of information about the poem. You know what you think about it and the sound effects it uses. The next step is to organize your ideas before you draft your essay. Use the notes that you have taken on the poem, and put your ideas in a graphic organizer like the one below.
For Example  Below is an analysis of the sound effects in “Windy Nights.” Notice that the writer mentions the three kinds of sound effects in the poem and provides examples with their line numbers.

“Windy Nights” by Robert Louis Stevenson is a poem about the noises of a windy night. The poet talks about a man riding a horse, but he is really talking about the wind. The sound effects in the poem help me hear and feel a windy night.

The poem uses rhyme, rhythm, and repetition. The rhyming words are in a regular pattern. For example, the words at the ends of every other line rhyme (“set” and “wet” in lines 1 and 3). Then, there are two rhymes in the last two lines of each stanza (“out” and “about” in lines 5 and 6). This reminds me of the way the wind keeps coming back over and over. The rhythm of the poem also reminds me of the wind. Words like “whenever” (lines 1, 2, and 7) and “gallop” (lines 6, 10, 11, and 12) have the rhythm of a galloping horse. The repetition of these words makes the idea of the wind seem even stronger. The repetition of the word “by” in the last four lines makes me think of a night when the wind will not stop.

I like the poem “Windy Nights.” At first, I did not know why the poet talks about a man riding. Then, the repetition of the word “gallop” made me realize that the rider is the wind. I like the way the sound of the poem makes the meaning come alive.

Writing About a Poem’s Sound Effects

- Find a poem you like that contains sound effects. (Ask your teacher or librarian to help you find poems.)
- Jot down your response to the poem. How do the sound effects help express the poem’s meaning?
- Use the questions and the graphic organizer on page 179 to prepare a short essay that analyzes the sound effects in the poem.
- Revise your essay and check your final copy for spelling, punctuation, and grammar errors. will wait until the movie comes out.” So many books are made into films that you might be tempted to stop reading and only see movies. What would you lose if you did that? Books, movies, and television all tell stories, but they tell them in different ways.

Read the Book and Watch the Show

Use Your Critical Eye  For this workshop you will work with a partner to compare the main characters in books and movies or TV shows of the same type or genre. Genre (zhä’n’rē) is a French word meaning “type” or “class.” Works of the same genre share certain characteristics. For example, the main character in detective novels, films, and TV shows is often a private investigator who has one faithful friend but who tends to make other people angry. The investigator also shows great determination, especially if he or she gets injured while trying to solve the mystery.

Other genres include fantasy/science fiction, westerns, animal stories, war/spy stories, sports stories, and historical fiction. Can you think of an example for each of these genres?

Be Choosy  With your partner, select a genre. From that genre, each of you should select a book that you have read before. Then, you should each watch a different film or TV show from the same genre. The following chart will give you some ideas.
Possible Book and Movie/TV Combinations by Genre

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Genre</th>
<th>Books</th>
<th>Movies/TV Shows</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>
| Science Fiction Stories | Fantastic Voyage by Isaac Asimov
The Time Machine by H. G. Wells | The Day the Earth Stood Still
Star Trek |
| Animal Stories   | Call of the Wild by Jack London
The Yearling by Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings | Wild America
Fly Away Home |
| War Stories      | Number the Stars by Lois Lowry
Zlata’s Diary by Zlata Filipovic | The Diary of Anne Frank
Empire of the Sun |
| Sports Stories   | Hoops by Walter Dean Myers
The Contender by Robert Lipsyte | Brian’s Song
Wild Hearts Can’t Be Broken |
| Mysteries        | I Am the Cheese by Robert Cormier
The A.I. Gang: Operation Sherlock by Bruce Coville | Fairy Tale: A True Story
From the Mixed-Up Files of Mrs. Basil E. Frankweiler |
| Westerns         | Jimmy Spoon and the Pony Express by Kristiana Gregory
The Long Chance by Max Brand | Shane
Gunsmoke |

---

TIP Rent the video or check it out from the library. If you do not see a combination that you like in the chart above, talk to a librarian or your teacher to get suggestions.

---

Reading at the Movies Books, TV, and films have their own media languages—special ways of making meaning. The boldface terms below give you some of the language you will need to talk about the effects of these media.

How to Be a Character To create a believable character, a writer uses characterization. Characterization is the process of showing a character’s personality. The writer can directly tell you what a character is like by using description. Writers can also indirectly show you what a character is like. When a writer uses narration (telling the events of a story) to tell us what a character is doing, for example, we get ideas about that character’s personality. Another way that writers give us indirect information about character is through dialogue.

Like novelists, filmmakers and TV writers use narration and dialogue. Films and TV, though, have some additional techniques for showing character.
Facial expression and body movement: Close-ups of actors’ faces help reveal characters’ feelings. A character may show confidence or fear by the way she walks. A nervous character might constantly wiggle a foot or play with a pen while he is talking.

Sound: Music can be used to say something about characters. For example, the appearance of a threatening character may be accompanied by scary music. A filmmaker may also use different types of music to reflect a character’s changing moods.

Tools of the Trade The Venn diagram below reviews some of the tools available to writers, TV show producers, and filmmakers. As you read the book and watch the TV show or movie you have chosen, think about how these tools are used to create character as well as other elements, such as setting and conflict.

---

Compare the Book and Movie or TV Show

What’s the Difference? After you have read your book and watched your movie or TV show, you will compare the main characters in your two examples. The following charts compare the main characters in two fairy tales: a print version of “Sleeping Beauty” and a TV movie version of Cinderella. Make similar charts for the book and film or TV show you chose.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Story: “Sleeping Beauty” by Charles Perrault</th>
<th>Main Character and Description</th>
<th>Techniques Used to Create Element</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>The princess: She is lovely, sweet tempered, and clever. She sings and dances. She doesn’t do much in the story, but everyone loves her.</td>
<td>Description: The princess is described to us. Narration: The narrator explains what happens to the princess, who does not take any action. Dialogue: There are only a few lines of dialogue, and they don’t tell us much.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Once you have completed your chart, get together with your partner to make a generalization about the main character in the genre you chose. Here is how you and your partner might make a generalization about the main character in a particular genre.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>What you learned (about main character in that genre)</th>
<th>+ What you already know</th>
<th>Generalization</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>

Working with a partner, the student whose charts are shown above made the following generalization about the main character in a fairy tale.

The main character in a fairy tale is often a girl who is sweet and beautiful and loves to sing.

This generalization can be supported by information in the chart, plus what the student’s partner discovered, plus what both students know from hearing other fairy tales.

Comparing Media and Making Generalizations

Choose a book and a movie or TV show from the same genre. Follow the steps on pages 181–184 to make a chart comparing the main characters in the book and the movie or TV show. Then, working with a partner, make a generalization about the main characters in that genre. Support your generalization with evidence from your partner’s and your own charts.
CHAPTER 5

Choices

Choose one of the following activities to complete.

► CAREERS
1. Everybody’s a Critic
   Report on a movie or book for a television review show. Have a partner review the same book or movie with you. Each of you will decide whether you like it. Then present the book or movie reviews to the rest of the class. Discuss why you and your partner do or do not agree.

► TECHNOLOGY
4. Virtual Critic
   Collaborate with a group to create a database of reports on educational computer games. As a group, decide which elements you want to evaluate or rank (sound effects, difficulty level, graphics, the goal of the game, and so on). Then, create forms for evaluating the games. Each member should then choose a game, play it, and complete the form. Once you have all the information, the group will create a database record about each of those games.

► WRITING
2. That’s What I Think
   Share your thoughts about a novel by writing e-mails or letters to a pen pal. Discuss the main character, setting, and plot, as well as your reactions. Discuss your pen pal’s book, too. Write at least two letters or e-mails each.

► CONNECTING CULTURES
3. It’s a Small World
   The German “Aschenputtel,” the Chinese “Yeh-Shen,” and the English “Cinderella” are different versions of the same story. Read them, or read several versions of another story. Create charts comparing the stories’ characters, settings, and plot events.

► CREATIVE WRITING
5. All Together Now
   Collaborate in writing a short story with a group of classmates. Each person in the group should write a paragraph. Discuss and revise the paragraphs as a group. Read your final version to the class, and discuss your experience of working as a group.
You just heard the greatest CD of all time. You want to know everything about the group—Where are they from? How do they get ideas for songs? What other recordings have they made? Finding answers to these questions requires research.

From sixth-graders to research scientists, people need to find and share information with others. One way for people to share this information is by writing a research report. Research reports are based on reliable sources—experts, informative books or articles, videotapes, or Internet sources. A research report writer pulls together information from different sources and presents it along with his or her own thoughts on a subject.

Seeking Information

With a few classmates, make a list of some subjects you have researched in the past, such as a hobby or sport, something in nature, or an interesting person. Then, discuss these questions:

- What sources did your group use to find information?
- Which sources were easy to use? Why? Which sources were difficult to use? Why?
What is a gold rush? Who were the original Forty-Niners? Why is California known as “the Golden State”? You will find the answers to these questions and more as you read “The California Gold Rush,” the informative article on the next page.

Preparing to Read

Making Inferences: Drawing Conclusions

An inference is an idea a reader forms, based in part on what he or she has read, seen, or experienced. One type of inference is a conclusion. Readers draw conclusions by putting together the pieces of information a writer presents and adding their own knowledge to that information. For example, details such as an eye patch, a wooden leg, and a parrot perched on a person’s shoulder are clues that can lead readers to conclude that the person being described is a pirate. As you read the following article, try to draw conclusions about the gold rush in California.

Author’s Purpose

An author’s purpose is the reason the author writes a piece. In the following article, Kathy Wilmore answers questions like these about the California gold rush: Who was involved? What did they do? Why? How did it start? How did it turn out? The fact that the article answers such questions gives you a clue about why the author wrote it.
Read the following selection. In a notebook, jot down answers to the numbered active-reading questions in the shaded boxes. Underlined words will be used in the Vocabulary Mini-Lesson on page 196.

from Junior Scholastic

THE CALIFORNIA

GOLD RUSH

BY KATHY WILMORE

California. Build it, Sutter told him, and you can run the place for me. Sutter was looking to make a tidy profit; Marshall was just hoping to make a living. But on January 24, 1848, Marshall was momentarily distracted from his work. A glint of light caught his eye—and sleepy California was never the same again.

“To See the Elephant”

In January 1848, California had a population of only 15,000 people. By the time December 1849 came around, the population was up to 100,000 and climbing. Why such a boom? Blame it on that glint that caught James Marshall’s eye.

One cold and rainy day soon after, Marshall arrived at Sutter’s house with “some important and interesting news.” Sutter studied the stuff that Marshall had brought and

---

1. Why do you think the author tells you so much about James Marshall?

2. Why do you think the author tells you so much about James Marshall? **

3. After, Marshall arrived at Sutter’s house with “some important and interesting news.” Sutter studied the stuff that Marshall had brought and realized it was gold. He was not happy.

“I told [my employees] that I would consider it as a great favor if they would keep this discovery secret only for six weeks, so I could finish [building] my large flour mill at Brighton. . . . [I]nstead of feeling happy and contented, I was very unhappy, and could not see that it would benefit me much, and I was perfectly right in thinking so.”

Sutter’s employees promised not to tell, but word leaked out . . .

By 1849, the gold rush was on. People poured into California from all points of the compass. They arrived by ship or overland trails, crossing North America by wagon train, riding horses or mules, and even on foot.

These hopeful thousands, the first large wave of whom arrived in 1849, were known as Forty-Niners. Many had sold everything they owned to pay their way to California.

Ask a Forty-Niner why, and he or she was likely to reply, “I am going to see the elephant”—that is, to find something wonderful and rare.

“George, I tell you this mining among the mountains is a dog’s life. . . . [T]his climate in the mines requires a constitution like iron. Often for weeks during the rainy season it is damp, cold, and sunless, and the labor of getting gold is of the most laborious kind. Exposure causes sickness to a great extent for, in most of the mines, tents are all the habitation [home] miners have.”

Making a Go of It

Thousands of Forty-Niners made the trek to California with the idea

---

2. From a letter from California by William Swain, January 6 & 16, 1850. of striking it rich, then returning home to spend their wealth. But for every Forty-Niner whose labor paid off handsomely, countless others had to find other ways of making a living.

Among those were thousands of Chinese. Word of “Gold Mountain”—the Chinese name for California—lit new hope among poverty-stricken peasants in China. In 1849, only 54 Chinese lived in California; by 1852, the number had risen to 14,000.

Chinese miners faced the resentment of many white Forty-Niners who saw them as unfair competition. . . . Looking for less risky ways of earning a living, many Chinese turned to service work: cooking meals, toting heavy loads, and washing clothes. Miners happily plunked down money for such services.

The Chinese were not the only Forty-Niners to make a go of things at something other than mining. One of the biggest success stories was that of a Bavarian immigrant named Levi Strauss. Strauss, a tailor, hoped to make his fortune by making and selling tents. But he found that another item he made was more popular: the heavy-duty work pants that became known as those “wonderful pants of Levi’s.” His blue jeans business prospered, and Strauss became one of the wealthiest men in California.

From Fortune to Misfortune
What of Sutter and Marshall, the men who started it all?

Sutter’s workers all quit and poured their efforts into finding gold. When the first Forty-Niners arrived, they overran Sutter’s land, wrecked his mills and farmlands, and even killed his cattle for food. . . .

Marshall’s hope of earning a living by running the mill was destroyed when the workers quit and it was wrecked by treasure seekers. He became a drifter, then a poor farmer.

The Golden State
For California, however, the gold rush brought long-lasting benefits. California had become U.S. territory as a result of the treaty ending the Mexican War. That was signed on February 2, 1848—just eight days after Marshall spied that first glint of gold. California became the thirty-first state on September 9, 1850. In that short time, it grew from a place of scattered settlements to one of bustling seaports and boomtowns. Whether or not they ever had the thrill of “seeing the elephant,” thousands of restless Forty-Niners found a place to call home.
Making Inferences: Drawing Conclusions

Add It Up  Suppose you are watching a mystery on TV in which a character sneaks into a room, then races from the room carrying a small box. Another character enters the room and screams, “My jewelry has been stolen!” What happened? In order to understand the story, you will need to draw a conclusion.

A conclusion is a judgment a reader makes about a text based on details the author provides and on what the reader already knows about the subject. Here is an example.

What you read: The Maximizer, the most powerful superhero, has captured the evil Dr. Z. Suddenly, Dr. Z throws a glowing liquid at the Maximizer, who collapses.

What you know: In other comic books, the superhero usually has one big weakness, which his or her enemy discovers at some point.

Conclusion: Dr. Z has discovered the Maximizer’s weakness. The glowing liquid makes the Maximizer helpless.

Read the following paragraph and try to draw a conclusion based on the details in it. If you have trouble reaching a conclusion, use the Thinking It Through steps on the next page.

In 1901, the first cars were being mass-produced in the United States. They were popular and sold well. In that same year, a huge oil field was discovered at Spindletop, near Beaumont, Texas. Within three months, the population of Beaumont had grown from nine thousand to fifty thousand.
THINKING IT THROUGH

Drawing Conclusions

STEP 1 Identify the topic of the passage and look for the details about it.

Topic: cars and oil
Details: Cars were mass-produced, and a huge oil field was discovered in the same year. The town where oil was discovered grew.

STEP 2 Think about what you already know about the topic. How can you connect the details to your own knowledge or experiences?

I know cars use oil and gasoline. I also know people rush to places where big discoveries are made—the way the Forty-Niners rushed to California—because they hope to get rich.

STEP 3 Connect your knowledge or experiences you recalled from Step 2 with the details you identified in Step 1 to draw a conclusion about the subject.

Conclusion: People knew cars would need oil, so many people rushed to the place where it was discovered, hoping to get rich.

---

YOUR TURN

Use the Thinking It Through steps above to draw conclusions about the following parts of “The California Gold Rush.” Read each passage listed and draw a conclusion by answering the question that follows each item on the list. Be prepared to support your conclusions with details from the reading selection.

- Paragraphs 3 and 4: Why did Sutter react as he did to the discovery of gold?
- Paragraph 15: What did the gold rush have to do with one businessman’s making a fortune from the sale of work pants?
- The section titled “From Fortune to Misfortune”: Was the gold rush lucky for Sutter? Why?
Author’s Purpose

What’s the Point? When you read a comic book, you usually are reading to be entertained. The creator of that comic book most likely wrote it for exactly that purpose. Sometimes, though, writers use the comic-book form in order to express themselves—to tell about something meaningful that happened to them or to share their own feelings about something they think is important. Whether they write comic books or research reports, writers write for a purpose, or reason. Being aware of an author’s purpose can help you set your own purpose for reading.

The following chart explains the four main purposes for writing. In the right-hand column, it gives clues that you can look for in a piece of writing to figure out an author’s purpose.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Purpose</th>
<th>Explanation</th>
<th>Clues</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>
| to inform                            | Informative writing teaches something. It answers Who? What? Where? When? Why? and How? questions. It can explain the way bats navigate, how a firefighter made a daring rescue, or how to play a game. | • dates
• names of real people and places
• facts, maps, and charts
• helpful headings
• quotations from real people |
| to express a belief or feeling       | Expressive writing shares a writer’s beliefs or feelings about something. Poems and personal essays are examples of expressive writing. | • words about feelings
• use of I
• value words like best, worst, great |
| to be creative or entertain          | Creative writing tells a story, uses drama or humor, or plays with language. Examples include novels, short stories, poems, and plays. | • a story with a beginning, middle, and end
• dialogue
• rhyme
• humor
• suspense |
| to influence or persuade             | Persuasive writing tries to convince the reader to share the writer’s opinion or to take some action. Examples include editorials, persuasive essays, reviews, and advertisements. | • opinions supported by reasons, facts, or examples
• words like should, must, have to
• value words like best, worst, great |
Can you figure out the author’s purpose in the following passage? You can if you look for clues from the chart on page 194.

Although history tells about the taming of the American West, an important part of that story is often left out. History books should emphasize the contributions of Chinese immigrants. Chinese workers provided much of the labor for early railroads and took jobs that others considered too dangerous. They suffered from low pay, unfair laws, and frequent attacks by other groups. These people who helped to build the modern West should be honored.

Here is how one student identified clues in this paragraph to figure out the author’s purpose.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Clues</th>
<th>What They Tell Me About Purpose</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>The paragraph includes facts about Chinese workers in the West.</td>
<td>The purpose could be to inform. These facts also seem to back up an opinion, though, so I think the purpose is probably to persuade.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The word should is used twice.</td>
<td>The purpose is definitely to persuade.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

YOUR TURN 3 Identifying the Author’s Purpose

- List the clues you find and identify the purposes they point to, as in the above example.
- Finally, look over your list of the clues and purposes you have found in the article, and choose the purpose that you have listed most often.
Word Roots

An informative article on a subject you know little about may contain unfamiliar words. You can often figure out the meaning of a word if you recognize its root. A root is the main part of a word. For example, the words personality and impersonal have the same root—person. Word roots like person can stand alone, but some roots cannot. The chart to the right gives examples of such roots. These roots need word parts called prefixes and suffixes to become words. A prefix is a word part that may be added to the beginning of a root to change the root’s meaning. A suffix may be added to the end of a root. (For more on prefixes and suffixes, see page 126.)

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Word Root</th>
<th>Meaning</th>
<th>Examples</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>–civi–</td>
<td>relating to</td>
<td>uncivilized</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>townspeople</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>–migr–</td>
<td>to move</td>
<td>migrate</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>–popul–</td>
<td>people</td>
<td>unpopular</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Using Word Roots

Here is an example based on a word from the reading selection.

► STEP 1 Peel off the prefixes and suffixes to identify the unfamiliar word’s root.

The word is population. I can peel off the suffix -ation. That leaves popul-. I know popul- means “people.” The words around population tell me how many people lived in California. Population must mean “the number of people.”

“In January 1848, California had a number of only 15,000 people.” That makes sense to me.

► STEP 2 Use what you know about the root and the word’s context to come up with a definition for the unfamiliar word.

► STEP 3 Replace your definition in the original sentence to see if it makes sense.

Practice

Use the steps above to define the following words. They are underlined for you in the reading selection. For help with meanings of prefixes and suffixes, see pages 715–716.

1. momentarily (page 189)
2. civilization (page 190)
3. laborious (page 190)
4. immigrant (page 191)
5. settlements (page 191)
Answering Questions About Tables

Informative texts, including passages found on reading tests, often list factual information in table form. A table, which may have one or many columns, organizes facts into categories to help a reader quickly find information. The categories are usually listed as column headings. To read a table, read the column headings, and then look at the information in each column. When looking at information in the form of dates, notice the amount of time between dates.

The table to the right contains information about important discoveries in history. Study the information, and answer the question below the table.

According to the information in the chart, for how many centuries did people know about bacteria without knowing how to kill bacteria?

A. 20  B. 4  C. 2  D. 16

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Century</th>
<th>Discovery</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>16th</td>
<td>the fact that Earth circles the sun</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>the existence of bacteria</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>17th</td>
<td>the power of gravity</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>19th</td>
<td>how to generate electrical current</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>the existence of electrons</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>20th</td>
<td>bacteria-killing antibiotics</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>the structure of DNA</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

I need to find when bacteria were discovered and when something that kills bacteria was discovered.

The chart says bacteria were discovered in the 16th century and antibiotics were discovered in the 20th century.

I need to figure out how long it was between these discoveries. If I count—16, 17, 18, 19, 20—I get five centuries.

Five centuries is not a choice. A and D are the centuries when the discoveries were made. Because 20 – 16 = 4, only four centuries passed between the discoveries. My choice is B.
Have you heard about a snake that grows to be thirty feet long? Did you know that some gladiators in ancient Rome were women? When you find out an unusual fact, the first thing you want to do is tell someone else about it. Writers of research reports feel exactly the same way. They dig into subjects they are curious about, and then, through writing, they share what they have learned. In this workshop you will have the opportunity to exercise your curiosity about a topic that interests you and tell others about what you discover.

Choose and Narrow a Subject

What Grabs You?  How did the Grand Canyon get there? Why do chipmunks hibernate? Asking questions like these can help you choose an interesting subject for your research report. Here are more strategies to help you brainstorm subjects.

- Take a survey of your classmates’ hobbies (in-line skating, coin collecting, building model boats . . .)
- Make an “I wonder” log (I wonder why cats purr . . ., how helicopters fly . . ., who discovered electricity . . .)
- Browse a television guide or magazine or newspaper for interesting subjects (people in the news, medical marvels, strange animals, space technology . . .)
Pin It Down  Once you have listed several possible subjects, you can choose the most interesting one. You will need to focus on a part of the subject small enough to cover in one report. For example, suppose that volcanoes fascinate you. Can you imagine the amount of research it would take to cover everything there is to know about volcanoes? To make it easier on yourself, you need to narrow that subject down to a focused topic. Your focused topic might be an active volcano in Hawaii. Here are more examples of narrowing a broad subject to a focused topic:

- animals
  - birds
    - green jay
- astronomy
  - solar system
  - asteroids
- Olympics
  - footraces
  - marathon

Here is how one writer narrowed a subject to a focused topic.

I like animals, but “animals” is too much to write about in a research report. I need to narrow this subject.

I want to write about an animal that most people have never heard of.

In an article about a wild animal ranch, I read about guanacos. I had never heard of a guanaco, and I doubt many other people have either.

KEY CONCEPT

Choosing and Narrowing a Subject

Brainstorm some subjects that interest you, and choose one you want to research. Then, use an upside-down triangle to find a focused topic. Record your thoughts as you narrow your topic.
Think About Purpose, Audience, and Voice

The Why of It  Your purpose is your reason for writing. You have two purposes for writing a research report: to discover information for yourself, and to share what you learn with others.

The Who of It  The audience for your report will be people who share your interest in the topic but do not already know a great deal about it. In most cases, that audience will include your classmates and teacher. You need to think about your audience before you begin doing your research. Ask yourself the questions in the left-hand column of the chart below. One student’s responses appear in the right-hand column.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Question</th>
<th>Response</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>1. What does my audience already know about my topic?</td>
<td>They probably know nothing more about the guanaco than I do.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2. What does my audience need to know?</td>
<td>what it is, where it lives, what it looks like, what it does</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3. What kind of information would my audience find interesting?</td>
<td>any unusual or surprising facts that I discover</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

The How of It  The sound of your writing is your voice. When your purpose is to inform, you should select a voice that sounds knowledgeable and interesting. Express your ideas in a clear, direct way, without using slang or clichés.

Confusing and slangy  I bet you never heard of a humpless camel-like thing.

Clear and interesting  Visitors to the Andes Mountains may spot a creature resembling a tiny camel without a hump.

Thinking About Purpose, Audience, and Voice

Your purpose is to discover information and share it with others. Answer the questions in the chart above to consider how you might communicate what you learn with your readers.
Ask Questions

The K-W-L Method When you think about your topic, you are probably full of questions such as: What does it look like? Where does it come from? What does it do? Research begins with questions like these. Of course, there are some things you already know about your topic.

You can use a K-W-L chart to list what you already know about a topic, what you want to know about it, and what you learned about it through research. Look at how one student organized his ideas about the topic of guanacos. As he finds answers to his questions, he will list them in the right-hand column.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>What I Know</th>
<th>What I Want to Know</th>
<th>What I Learned</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>A guanaco is part of the camel family.</td>
<td>What does a guanaco look like?</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>It lives in South America.</td>
<td>What do guanacos do?</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Do humans and guanacos get along?</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

TIP You might discover new questions once you begin doing research. Add them to your chart only if they really fit your topic. As one student researched his topic, he came up with and evaluated these questions:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Where do other members of the camel family live?</th>
<th>Other camels are not part of my topic. I won’t add this question.</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Why are there fewer guanacos now than there used to be?</td>
<td>This fits my topic. I’ll add it to my K-W-L chart.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

YOUR TURN Asking Questions

Create a K-W-L chart like the one above on your own paper. In the left column, list everything that you already know about your topic. In the middle column, list the questions you have about your topic. Leave the right column of your chart blank. You will fill it out as you do your research.

TIP Another way to organize what you already know about a topic and what you would like to know is to create a cluster diagram. For more on clustering, see page 763 in the Quick Reference Handbook.
Find Sources

Who Has the Answers? You now have a focused topic and a list of questions about it. What do you do next? Research! The best place to start your research is in the library, but that is just the beginning. You will look in several places to find answers to your questions. Some of the resources you can use include:

- books
- encyclopedias
- magazine and newspaper articles
- interviews and guest speakers
- the Internet and CD-ROMs
- television programs and videos

Keep in mind that information does not always have to come from print sources. You can also find answers to your questions by watching a documentary; listening to an informative program on the radio; or reading charts, maps, and other graphics.

You will not find all of the information you need in a single source. You should plan to use at least three different kinds of sources. For example, you could find information on your topic in a book, in a magazine article, and on the Internet (a resource for information on all topics). Using a variety of sources will help you find complete answers to your research questions. If you have trouble finding sources relevant, or related, to your topic, go to the media center or ask your school’s media specialist for help.

Make a List of Sources

Who Said That? When everyone talks at once, it is hard to remember who said what. You may have the same problem when you do research. When you find information about your topic in several different places, you may not remember where you found a particular fact. You will need to keep track of where you find the answers to your questions. Make a numbered list of all of the sources you find that might be helpful in your research. In your list, include information about each source. The chart on the next page tells you what information you need for each type of source you might use. The listings in the chart follow the style of the Modern Language Association (MLA).
Information on Sources

Books: Author. Title. City where book was published: Name of Publisher, copyright year.

Magazine and Newspaper Articles: Author (if known). “Title of Article.” Name of Magazine or Newspaper Date article was published: page numbers.

Encyclopedia Articles: Author (if known). “Title of Article.” Encyclopedia Name. Edition number (if known) and year published.

Television or Radio Programs: “Title of Episode.” Title of Program. Name of host (if known). Network. Station Call Letters, City. Date of broadcast.

Movie or Video Recordings: Title. Name of Director or Producer (if known). Format (videocassette or videodisc). Name of Distributor, year.

Internet Sources: Author. “Title.” Name of Web site. Date of electronic publication. Name of Sponsoring Institution. Date you accessed information <Internet address>.

Note: Some sites may not list all of the above information. Include what the site does list and skip the items it does not list.

Other Electronic Sources: Author (if known). “Title.” Title of Database or CD-ROM. Medium (CD-ROM or Database). Copyright date.

---

TIP Why should you keep track of your sources?

- You may need to find a source again if you come up with another interesting question later in your research.
- Your readers may want to go to your sources to learn more about your topic.
- Your teacher may expect you to include a list of sources to show the research you did.
The World Wide Web contains enormous amounts of information. One way you can find what you need is to use a search engine. A search engine is a Web site that allows you to hunt for information. By typing a keyword—a word related to your topic—into the search engine, you will get a list of possible sites.

Another way to find information from a search engine is to use a directory. A directory lists categories of information. Each category is divided into smaller and smaller subcategories that you can follow until you find a site that relates to your topic.

Below is a path a student took through categories and subcategories in a directory. The main menu, where he began his search, is on the left. The highlighted choice shows the category the student chose. His choice leads to the next list of subcategories and finally to a list of sites with information about guanacos and other mammals.

TIP Remember, not all Web sites are equal. For your research report, choose sources such as universities, government sites, and major newspapers and broadcast networks. When you get a list of sites, look first at those that have URLs (addresses) ending in .org (nonprofit organizations), .edu (educational institutions), and .gov (U.S. government agencies). (For more on evaluating Web sites, see page 703.)

Search the Internet two different ways for Web sites on the topic of your research report. In your first search, type a keyword into a search engine. In your second search, go through the categories and subcategories in a directory. Which search proved to be more successful? Compare your results with those of your classmates.
Finding and Listing Sources

Find at least five sources you might use for researching your focused topic. Follow the instructions on page 203 to list important information about these sources. Give each source a number to help you identify sources when you take notes later. For now, do not worry about the order of items in your list. You will alphabetize your source list later (by author’s last name or by title, if no author is given).

Take Notes

Getting the Facts Once you have identified sources, begin looking for answers to your research questions. Remember, you are looking for answers to the questions in your K-W-L chart. Your questions will guide your research process. Record each answer you find, along with information about where you found it. The guidelines below will help you take notes.

- Use a separate note card or a sheet of paper for each new note.
- At the top of each note card, write the question that the notes on the card answer.
- Write the number of the source at the top of each note, so you will always be able to tell exactly where you found the information.
- Summarize information explained in a long passage. Even with shorter passages, paraphrase, or write the ideas in your own words. If you copy exact words from a source, put them in quotation marks.
- If the information is from a printed book or article, put the page number at the end of your note.

Source number
Question
Notes in your own words
Page number

3
What is a guanaco?
- member of the camel family
- small and South American

page 127

COMPUTER TIP
Write down the address of any Web site you come across that looks helpful, even if you are not using it right away. You will be able to find the site again quickly by calling up the exact address.

Go to the Chapter Menu for an interactive activity.

KEY CONCEPT
Source number
Question
Notes in your own words
Page number

3
What is a guanaco?
- member of the camel family
- small and South American

page 127

TIP While you research, keep your K-W-L chart handy. In the “What I Learned“ column, write in the authors or titles of the sources where you found your answers. This will help you focus on using a variety of sources. It will also help you see quickly which of your questions still need answers.

Reference Note
For more on paraphrasing and summarizing, see pages 706 and 709 in the Quick Reference Handbook.
Mini-Lesson Writing

Paraphrasing

Paraphrasing means putting information from a source into your own words. Copying an author’s words and presenting them as your own is plagiarizing. Plagiarizing is the same as stealing another writer’s work. If you want to use a writer’s exact words, put them in quotation marks and identify the source.

The passages below show the difference between paraphrasing and plagiarizing. The paraphrase on the left tells the ideas of the source passage in different words. The plagiarized passage on the right copies long strings of words which are printed in boldface.

Source Passage: Guanacos, South American members of the camel family, lack the familiar humps of Asian and African camels. Slim and long-legged, guanacos move quickly and gracefully over the rugged terrain of their native Andes Mountains.

Paraphrase: Although it is part of the camel family, the South American guanaco does not have a hump like its cousins in Asia and Africa do. It is slim, has long legs, and can run fast in its habitat, the Andes Mountains.

Plagiarism: As members of the camel family, guanacos lack the familiar humps of Asian and African camels. They are able to move quickly and gracefully over rugged terrain. They live in the Andes Mountains.

Practice

Read each source passage below, then the passage to its right. Tell whether the passage paraphrases or plagiarizes the source. Explain your answer in a sentence or two.

Source Passage

1. Manifest Destiny was the belief in the nineteenth century that the United States would eventually stretch across the entire continent, from the Atlantic Ocean to the Pacific Ocean.

2. The first settlers from the United States reached northeastern Texas in 1815, encouraged by the Mexican government, which controlled the territory at that time.

Paraphrase or Plagiarism?

1. People believed in the nineteenth century that the United States would eventually reach from the Atlantic Ocean to the Pacific Ocean. This belief was called Manifest Destiny.

2. The government of Mexico encouraged people from the United States to move to its territory of Texas. The first settlers moved to the northeast part of the state in 1815.
YOUR TURN 8

Researching Your Topic and Taking Notes

Using the sources you found earlier, locate answers for your research questions. Take notes from each source, being careful to put the information in your own words. Note the source of each piece of information you find by putting its source number on your note card.

---

Organize Your Information

Getting It Together  A pile of notes will be about as useful to your readers as a box full of bicycle parts. Both need to be put together in a logical way to be of any use. Once you have gathered information from your sources, you will need to organize those ideas into categories. The questions you wrote on the top of your note cards will help you. Group together note cards that answer the same question. Each group of cards will become a paragraph in your report. If you find some note cards that do not seem to belong to any group, set them aside for now.

---

Outline Your Report

Planning It Out  An outline is a plan for your report. It shows how you are grouping the information you have gathered and the order in which you will present the information in your report. One type of outline you can make is an informal outline. An informal outline lists a report’s major subtopics, or categories of information related to your topic. It also lists the specific facts that make up each subtopic.

To identify the subtopics for your informal outline, first change the questions from your K-W-L chart into headings. A heading is a phrase that covers all the items listed below it. For example, the question “Where do guanacos live?” could be turned into the heading “Where guanacos live.” As you turn your questions into headings, write each heading on a piece of paper, leaving several lines after it blank. Then, under each heading, write facts from your note cards or jot down a few words that will remind you what to include when you write your report.

---

Reference Note

For more on outlines, both informal and formal, see page 765 in the Quick Reference Handbook.
The partial informal outline below shows the information the student writing about guanacos will use in his research report.

Body:

Where guanacos live
- Andes Mountains of South America

how guanacos handle their habitat
- protected reserves

What guanacos look like
- similarities to camels—legs, hoofs, neck, lips
- differences—ears, no hump, height, fur color

What guanacos do
- spit cud accurately
- run fast and early in life
- swim across streams and between islands

How guanacos get along with people
- carrying loads
- wool used for coats and robes
- hunted for meat

Reference Note

For help in making graphic organizers like conceptual maps and time lines, see pages 765 and 766 in the Quick Reference Handbook.

TIP

Instead of an informal outline, you might create a conceptual map to organize your information. At the top of a conceptual map is a circle containing the topic. Extending out from the topic circle are circles containing subtopics. Circles containing facts and other information connect to the subtopics that they explain. Another useful tool for organizing information from various sources is a time line. You can use a time line to show the time order of events in history.

Organizing Your Notes and Creating an Informal Outline

Group your notes based on the questions they answer. Then, create an informal outline by following these steps:

- Turn questions into headings.
- List your headings on a sheet of paper, leaving several blank lines after each.
- Write notes under each heading telling which information you will include from your note cards. You do not need to use complete sentences.
Writing a Main Idea Statement

Tell It Like It Is  To make sure your readers remember the major points you make about your topic, include a main idea statement in your introduction. A main idea statement, or thesis, tells readers the topic of a piece of writing and the main points the writer will make about the topic. Here is how you can develop a main idea statement for your report.

THINKING IT THROUGH

Writing a Main Idea Statement

STEP 1 Identify the major points in your outline.

- strange looking, unusual talents, useful to humans, threatened by hunting

STEP 2 Combine the major points in a single sentence.

- Guanacos are strange-looking animals with unusual talents, and they are useful to humans but threatened by hunting.

STEP 3 If your step 2 sentence is long, condense the ideas into a more compact main idea statement.

- Guanacos are unusual animals that are useful to humans but threatened by hunting.

YOUR TURN

Writing a Main Idea Statement

Use the Thinking It Through steps above to develop a clear and compact main idea statement for your research report.
Research Report

Framework

Introduction
- Attention-getting beginning
- Main idea statement

Body
- Heading 1 facts
- Heading 2 facts
  and so on

Conclusion
- Restatement of main idea

List of Sources
- Alphabetized by author

Directions and Explanations

One way to grab your readers’ attention is to begin with a colorful description of something related to your topic. Your main idea statement should clearly identify your topic and the major points in your report.

The headings in your informal outline represent subtopics. Each subtopic will be covered in its own paragraph. Support each subtopic with facts and explanations from your research, and elaborate on your support by explaining each fact or example.

In addition to restating your main idea, your conclusion may be a good place to share information that did not fit in the body of your report. The Writer’s Model, for example, tells what is being done to solve the problem discussed in the report.

A list of sources is also called a Works Cited list or bibliography. List only the sources you actually used for your report. See the chart on page 203 for how to list different kinds of sources.

Drafting Your Report

Write the first draft of your report. Use the framework above and the following Writer’s Model to guide you.
The South American Guanaco

Visitors to the Andes Mountains may spot a creature resembling a tiny camel without a hump. This animal is the guanaco, a South American member of the camel family. Guanacos are unusual animals that are useful to humans but threatened by hunting. For thousands of years guanacos have grazed on tough grasses in the high plains and hills of the Andes Mountains. They can be found from southern Peru to the tip of South America. Their blood can handle the thin mountain air. Steep, rocky paths are no problem for guanacos because they are nimble like mountain goats and have thick, padded soles that protect their feet. Their only wild enemy is the mountain lion, but people have hunted the guanaco so much that the species is in danger. Some herds live in protected reserves in Argentina and Chile.

Like other camels, the guanaco has long legs, two-toed hoofs, a long neck, and floppy lips. It can survive without water for long periods of time, just like a desert camel. The guanaco looks different from the humped camel. It has pointed ears and a slender body, and it stands less than four feet high. In some ways it looks more like a deer or an antelope than a camel. It is reddish brown with a dark gray head and a pale belly.

The guanaco has some strange talents. Like other kinds of camels, the guanaco helps its stomach digest grass by chewing it up again after it has been in the stomach for a while. This rechewed grass, or cud, comes in handy when another animal bothers the guanaco. It can accurately hit whatever is annoying it with smelly green spit, with no warning at all. The guanaco can also run fast and swim well. Almost as soon as they are born, guanacos can race to safety if their mothers spot danger. Adult guanacos can run as fast as thirty-five miles an hour. Guanacos swim almost as well as they run. They easily cross cold, fast-running mountain streams. Believe it or not, they even swim in the ocean. They have been seen swimming from island to island off the coast of Chile in the Pacific Ocean.

Guanacos are helpful to people and are in trouble because of them. People use guanacos to carry loads on the prairies and in the mountains of South America. Their wool is also used for making coats. Newborn guanacos are often killed so that their silky wool can be made into beautiful robes called capas. The number of guanacos has also been reduced by hunters, who kill them for their meat.

To help the guanaco survive the threat of people hunting it for meat and hides, this unusual little camel will need to be protected. Some South American countries are already taking steps that may help guanacos to be plentiful again.

List of Sources

Billiards

Billiard games are played on a rectangular table. This table has rubber cushions around its inside upper edge and is covered with a felt cloth. A billiard table has six holes, called pockets, where the balls go. Many billiard games require fifteen numbered balls. Balls one through eight are all solid colors, and balls nine through fifteen are white with a colored stripe. Also, for some billiard games, a white cue ball is used. A player uses a cue stick, which is made of wood, to hit the white cue ball into a numbered ball. The goal is to get the numbered ball into a pocket.

The game of billiards has been around since the 1400s. It was developed in Europe from the game croquet, which is played on the lawn with mallets and balls. When croquet was moved indoors, people began playing it on a table that was made green to resemble grass. By the 1600s, the game of billiards had become so popular that Shakespeare mentioned it in the play Antony and Cleopatra.

No one knows when billiards came to the United States, but from an early date the game was popular. American woodworkers were producing billiard tables by the 1700s, and George Washington was said to have won a game in 1748. In 1850, Michael Phelan wrote the first American book on the game.

List of Sources

Evaluate and Revise Content, Organization, and Style

Double Duty To make the information in your research report as clear as possible for your readers, you will need to read it at least twice. First, evaluate the content and organization, using the guidelines below. Then, check your writing style using the guidelines on page 215.

First Reading: Content and Organization Use the following chart to evaluate the content and organization of your report. The tips in the middle column will help you decide how to answer the questions in the left column. If you answer no to any question, use the Revision Technique to improve that part of your writing.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Evaluation Questions</th>
<th>Tips</th>
<th>Revision Techniques</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Does the introduction contain a main idea statement that identifies the topic and major points of the report?</td>
<td>Highlight the main idea statement.</td>
<td>Add a main idea statement or revise the main idea statement to give complete information about the topic, if needed.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Does each paragraph in the body explain only one part of the topic?</td>
<td>Label each body paragraph with the type of information it provides about the topic.</td>
<td>Rearrange ideas so each paragraph covers only one part of the topic, or delete ideas that do not belong.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Does each paragraph contain facts that give clear information about the topic?</td>
<td>Put a check mark above each fact that explains the topic.</td>
<td>Add facts to any paragraph with fewer than two check marks.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Does the conclusion restate the report’s main idea?</td>
<td>Circle the sentence that puts the main idea statement in different words.</td>
<td>If needed, add a sentence that states the main idea in another way.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Does the report include information from at least three sources?</td>
<td>Number the items on the list of sources.</td>
<td>Elaborate on the ideas in your report by using information from another source as needed.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Second Reading: Style  When sharing information with others, you should communicate your ideas as clearly as possible. One way to do this is to use precise nouns in your writing. Precise nouns name a person, place, thing, or idea in a specific way. Look for places in your writing where you can be more precise by changing a vague noun to one that is more specific.

ONE WRITER’S REVISIONS These are revisions of an early draft of the research report on pages 211–212.

The guanaco can also run fast and swim well. Almost as soon as they are born, guanacos can race to safety if their mothers spot danger. Adult guanacos can run as fast as thirty-five miles an hour. This is another way that they are like antelopes and deer. Guanacos swim almost as well as they run. They easily cross cold, fast-running mountain streams. Believe it or not, they even swim in the ocean. They have been seen swimming from island to island off the coast of Chile in the Pacific Ocean.

Responding to the Revision Process

1. How did deleting a sentence improve the passage above?
2. Why was it important for the writer to add the final sentence?

PEER REVIEW

When you are reviewing another student’s report, ask yourself these questions:

- Does this report explain information clearly enough for me to tell someone else about this topic?
- What part of this report caught my interest the most? Why?

Style Guidelines

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Evaluation Question</th>
<th>Tip</th>
<th>Revision Technique</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Does the report use specific words to name people, places, things, and ideas?</td>
<td>Put a star above each specific noun.</td>
<td>If possible, replace vague nouns with more precise ones. (You may find more specific words in your notes.)</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Using Precise Nouns

When you read the word flower, what image comes to mind? You might picture a daisy, while another reader might think of a buttercup or a daffodil. Flower is a vague noun because it lets the reader choose what to picture. When you write, give your readers the right picture by using precise nouns such as honey-suckle or violet. Precise nouns name people, places, things, or ideas in a specific way. Look at the sentences below. Which one tells you exactly what the writer had in mind?

Vague  The author Luis Valdez created a program for people.

Precise  The author Luis Valdez created a theater company for farm workers.

Replace vague nouns in your writing with more precise ones that will get your picture across. Precise nouns will help your readers learn about your topic.

TIP  If you have trouble coming up with a precise noun, look up the vague noun in a thesaurus. Among the synonyms for the vague noun, you will often find more specific ones that you might use to revise your writing.

ONE WRITER’S REVISIONS

For thousands of years, the animals have grazed on tough plants in the high plains and hills of the mountains.

Responding to the Revision Process

How do you think the changes the writer made improve the sentence above?

YOUR TURN 12  Evaluating and Revising Content, Organization, and Style

Review the first draft of your report. Then, improve your report by using the Content and Organization Guidelines on page 214, the Focus on Word Choice above, and peer comments.
Proofread Your Report

Polish It You want your readers to focus on learning about your topic, not on finding errors. Look over your report carefully and correct any mistakes. Use the following Grammar Link to make sure your sources are written correctly.

---

Capitalizing and Punctuating Titles

Sources of information for research reports are listed in a certain way. You may see the title of a source listed inside quotation marks, written in italics, or underlined. Some words are capitalized, and others are not. Here are three rules about how to write titles.

Titles of major works should be underlined or typed in italics. Major works include books, encyclopedias, magazines, newspapers, databases, Web sites, movies, and television series. Underline these titles when you type or hand-write your report. If you are using a computer, you can use the italics function.

Put titles of short works inside quotation marks. These include chapters of books; articles from encyclopedias, magazines, and newspapers; individual pages from Web sites; and titles of single episodes in a TV series.

Capitalize the important words in a title. The only words you will not capitalize in a title are articles (a, an, the), conjunctions (and, but, or), and prepositions with fewer than five letters (to, for, with, in, and so on). However, capitalize the first and last words of a title, no matter what they are.

Practice

Rewrite the following titles. Capitalize each correctly and place it inside quotation marks or underline it.

Example:
1. Newspaper article: students stop disaster on playground
   1. “Students Stop Disaster on Playground”
2. Magazine article: with a song in his heart
3. Book: the giant guide to the internet
4. Movie: freebie and the bean
5. Whole Web site: the science of lightning
6. Episode in a TV program: the perfect pearl

For more information and practice on punctuating titles, see pages 588 and 595.
Publish Your Report

Share the Wealth  Now you can share what you have learned with an audience. Here are some ideas:

- With other students who wrote on similar topics, create and illustrate a book of research reports. This book might be kept in the classroom for independent reading or placed in the library for all students to enjoy.
- Make a display that includes your report and helpful illustrations. Place it in a hallway display case or the library, or share it with other classes.
- Try adapting your report into a children’s book. Retell the most interesting facts and details in language children can understand. Work with a partner to illustrate your book.

Reflect on Your Report

Building Your Portfolio  Take some time to think about how you researched your topic and wrote your report. Did you achieve your purpose? What would you do differently next time? Consider these questions:

- Where in your report do you think you did the best job of clearly answering a research question? Why do you think this was the best part?
- What kinds of information sources were useful? Would you use these types of sources for a future report?

YOUR TURN

Proofreading, Publishing, and Reflecting on Your Report

- Correct any errors in spelling, punctuation, and sentence structure. Be particularly careful about writing titles of sources correctly.
- Publish your report for an audience of interested readers. You might use one of the suggestions above.
- Answer the Reflect on Your Report questions above. Record your responses in a learning log, or include them in your portfolio.
Writing an Informative Essay

In a research report you explain what you have learned about a topic. Some writing tests, though, will ask you to explain something about yourself. You may be asked to explain something that is important or enjoyable to you. Because these essays clarify, or make clear, your relationship to a topic, they are sometimes called clarification essays.

You can organize your ideas for a clarification essay just as you organized the information in your research report by using an informal outline. You will also elaborate on your ideas by using explanations. Read the following prompt, and think about how you would respond.

Everyone has a place that is important to him or her. It may be a place with special memories or a place that makes a person feel comfortable. Choose a place that is important to you, and write an essay about it. Explain three things that make this place special or tell three reasons why the place is special to you.

---

Responding to an Informative Prompt

- STEP 1 Read the prompt to see what you must do. Identify the topic, audience, and format.

- STEP 2 Choose a topic for your answer.

- STEP 3 Brainstorm ideas about your connection to the topic.

- STEP 4 Write your essay. In each body paragraph, elaborate on your connection to the topic.

I’m going to write an essay that tells three reasons why a place is special to me. A specific audience was not named so I’ll write to my teacher:

My grandfather’s workshop is special to me.

Things that make his workshop special:

1. good smells—oil, wood, sawdust
2. the furniture Grandpa makes
3. the jewelry box I made for Mom

1. smells—linseed oil & turpentine, fresh-cut pine, nose-tickling sawdust
2. furniture—high chair in progress, repairing Grandma’s rocker, refinishing dresser
3. jewelry box—carved top, smooth finish
Creating Visuals to Share Information

Showing Them
Think back to the time when you were first learning to read. Remember how the books had pictures? You used the pictures to figure out what was being said. Visuals help readers and listeners of all ages understand the topic better. In this section you will learn how you can boost your audience’s understanding by creating or finding a visual to include in your report.

The most obvious kind of visual is a photograph or drawing. The writer of the research report on guanacos, for example, found this photograph in a book. He photocopied it and included it in his report.

Make a Choice
Before you create a visual, you must first decide two things: what information you are going to show and how you are going to show it. To decide what information to show, read your report and find anything your audience may need help understanding. Then, decide how you can put that information in a visual. The chart on the next page gives you some examples.

Get the Picture
Once you have made your decision about what kind of visual will be most helpful for your audience, you will need to create or find it. You might use one of the following ideas.

- Draw it freehand.
- Trace it, using tracing paper or a projector.
- Photocopy it if you have access to a copier.
- Cut it out of a magazine or newspaper if you have permission.
- Create it in a computer program.
- Download it from an Internet source if you have permission to do so.

When you create your own graphic, use color carefully. In general, use no more than three colors in a graph, chart, or timeline. Color attracts attention, but too many colors distract the reader and make information hard to find. A map, however, may need more than three colors to contrast all adjoining states and countries.

TIP
If you will use your visual in a multimedia presentation, have a friend hold your visual at the front of the room while you look at it from the back of the room. Make sure the visual is easy to read and understand even from across the room. Do some lines need to be bolder? Do some words need to be bigger? Would color help?
Type of Information and Examples | Best Visual to Use and Example
---|---
a series of events or a schedule | time line
Examples:
- series of events in a historical period
- schedule for a bus route
Jan. 24, 1848 | Gold discovered at Sutter’s Mill
Feb. 2, 1848 | California becomes a U.S. territory
1849 | Miners rush to California
Sept. 9, 1850 | California becomes 31st U.S. state statistics: facts that involve numbers | chart such as a pie chart

Examples:
- the percentage of people who ride bicycles
- number of votes received by each student council candidate

an area’s physical features, political divisions, or other geography-related topics | map
Examples:
- The mountains, valleys, lakes, and rivers of Utah
- The location of one of Canada’s provinces—Prince Edward Island

YOUR TURN 14 Using Visuals

Use these steps to create a visual for your research report.

- Decide what information to show and the best visual to use.
- Create or find your visual, making sure it is large and clear.
- List the source if you have copied, cut out, or downloaded the visual. For a reminder about how to list sources, see page 203.
Giving and Evaluating a Research Presentation

Researchers sometimes present their findings in a formal presentation or speech. A research presentation tells an audience the important points a researcher has discovered. Here is your chance to share your research findings through oral presentations and to discover what your classmates learned.

Giving a Research Presentation

Even the most interesting report can sound dull if a speaker reads it word for word. A good speaker looks at the audience while presenting information. To make this possible, speakers use note cards to remind themselves of the points they want to make. They also practice their speeches until they are comfortable with what they are saying. To turn your research report into a research presentation, follow these guidelines.

- Look back at the informal outline you created for your research report. Each heading in your outline can be a separate note card.
- On each note card, neatly write words or phrases from your notes, outline, or report that will help you remember the points you want to share with your audience. Write major ideas only (including key evidence and examples), but plan to elaborate or clarify your ideas as you speak.
Number the note cards in the order that you will present them.

Practice your speech out loud. Because the occasion for giving your speech is fairly formal, use standard English and avoid using slang or clichés. Consider your volume and rate, speaking loudly and slowly. Everyone in your audience—including people at the back of the room—should be able to understand you.

If you use a visual, practice holding it up or pointing to it.

Practice making eye contact by having a friend listen to you or by looking at yourself in a mirror.

YOUR TURN 15

Giving an Oral Research Presentation

Follow the guidelines on page 222 and above to present the information in your research report to your class.

Evaluating a Research Presentation

Why are some speeches more interesting than others? Speakers grab the audience’s interest with what they say and how they say it. The what is the content, or the ideas a speaker presents. The how is the speaker’s delivery. Delivery includes how the speaker talks, uses gestures, and makes eye contact with the audience. When you evaluate a presentation, you will look at the content of the speech and the speaker’s delivery.

Get the Message

To evaluate the content of a research presentation, you will need to consider how clear and organized the speaker’s information is. Here is how one student evaluated the content of a classmate’s speech.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Content</th>
<th>Comments</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Can you understand the main ideas in the speaker’s verbal message?</td>
<td>He says guanacos are unusual animals that are in trouble.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Can you identify support for the speaker’s main ideas?</td>
<td>He describes what guanacos look like and what they do. He also talks about how they are being hunted.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Does the speaker seem to understand the topic well?</td>
<td>He really knows about guanacos. I wish he would explain how they swim. Overall content: great</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Special Delivery  A speaker who mumbles or says “um” frequently draws attention to his or her delivery. When you listen to a speech, you may only notice a speaker’s delivery if there are problems such as these. When a speaker’s delivery is good, you can focus on the content of the speech. To identify good delivery, answer these questions as you listen.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Delivery</th>
<th>Comments</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>▪ Does the speaker talk loudly and clearly enough?</td>
<td>▪ He was easy to understand except when he turned to point at the map.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>▪ Does the speaker look at the audience?</td>
<td>▪ He is mostly looking at his notes.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>▪ Do the speaker’s nonverbal signals (gestures or voice) emphasize</td>
<td>▪ He emphasizes things with his voice, but not with gestures.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>important ideas in the verbal message?</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>▪ If visuals are used, are they helpful?</td>
<td>▪ The map and picture both help me understand the topic better. Overall</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>delivery: good</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

TIP  Many speakers use technology to incorporate visuals into their presentations. They might use a VCR, a monitor, an overhead projector, or presentation software to present and enhance their ideas. To evaluate whether a presenter has used technology effectively, think about whether the technology helps the presenter achieve his or her purpose—to inform. Does the technology contribute to the presentation, or does it distract from the presenter’s ideas?

Put It All Together  As you listen to a speech, use charts like the one on page 223 and the one above to make notes about content and delivery. Considering both the content and the delivery of a presentation takes concentration, so try to limit your distractions. You may want to sit closer to the speaker and put away everything except your evaluation charts and a pen or pencil.

Reference Note  For more on eliminating barriers to effective listening, see page 727 in the Quick Reference Handbook.

YOUR TURN 16  Evaluating an Oral Presentation  Evaluate a research presentation by one or more of your classmates. Create charts like those on page 223 and this page to evaluate both the content and delivery of the speech.
Choose one of the following activities to complete.

CAREERS

1. Expert Guidance  When you see someone doing an exciting job on television, you might wonder how you might someday get that job. Choose a career that interests you. Then, ask classmates or adults you know to refer you to someone with that job. Interview this person, and ask what education and training are needed to get into that career. Present your findings by creating a career guide with other students who choose this activity.

2. My Kind of Tune  Do you enjoy hip-hop, country, or some other kind of music? Research the important elements of a particular style of music, and choose a recording of that style of music. Then, write a review that evaluates how well the recording uses the elements of its musical style. Give a multimedia presentation in which you share your review and play the recording.

CROSSING THE CURRICULUM: PHYSICAL EDUCATION

3. Hall of Fame  Make a trading card for a famous athlete of the past. Include a picture of the athlete, important dates, records, and other interesting facts you uncover in your research. You might consider choosing one of these athletes: Jim Thorpe, Jackie Joyner-Kersee, Sonja Henie, or Satchel Paige.

CREATIVE WRITING

4. A Fresh Angle  Try one of the following ideas to share information about your research topic: Write an entertaining letter about your topic to someone you think might be interested in it, or write a short story that uses the information you learned researching your topic. You could also write a poem about your topic, describing or explaining it in a creative way. Share your writing with others by mailing it, reading it aloud, or posting it on a bulletin board.
“Please! Please!” This may be how young children attempt to get their way, but by now you probably know that whining and repetition are not effective when you are older. You are more likely to get what you want through the art of persuasion—convincing others by giving reasons that make sense. Whether you are trying to persuade others or others are trying to persuade you, good reasons make all the difference.

Persuasion comes in many forms. A spoken request from a friend is usually casual and unplanned. The kind of persuasion you read or write is more carefully structured. It includes an opinion and specific reasons to support the opinion. The kind of persuasion you view, including TV ads and billboards, adds pictures and even jingles that appeal to your emotions as well as to your mind.

Discovering Persuasion

In a small group, discuss the following questions.
- What makes a spoken request convincing? a TV ad? a billboard?
- Is one of these types of persuasion usually more persuasive than the others? Which one? Why?
You finish your lunch, and then you throw away the wrapper and bag. You pry a new computer game out of layers of plastic and cardboard, tossing the packaging away before you play the game. You even drag your broken desk chair out to the curb to be picked up on trash day. Think about the amount of stuff you throw away every day, and multiply that amount by 300 million, the estimated population of the United States. That is a lot of garbage! The author of the following essay will try to persuade you to change your ways. Will you be convinced?

Preparing to Read

Fact and Opinion Strong opinions often inspire people to write persuasive essays. To be effective, though, a writer must support opinions with facts, or statements that can be proved true. As you read the following essay, watch out for statements of opinion, which cannot be proved.

Reasons and Evidence In the courtroom dramas you see in movies and on TV, do jurors accept a lawyer’s argument without question? Of course not. Even TV lawyers provide reasons and evidence to convince juries of their cases. Writers have the same duty to their readers. They must support their opinions with enough reasons and evidence to persuade their readers. See if William Dudley, the writer of the following essay, has done a convincing job.
Read the following essay. In a notebook, jot down answers to the numbered active-reading questions in the shaded boxes. Underlined words will be used in the Vocabulary Mini-Lesson on page 235.

from The Environment: Distinguishing Between Fact and Opinion

The U.S. Has a Garbage Crisis

BY WILLIAM DUDLEY

1. America is a “throwaway” society. Each year Americans throw away 16 billion disposable diapers, 1.6 billion pens, and 220 million tires. For the sake of convenience, we tend to throw these and other used goods away rather than repair or recycle them. The average American household generates 350 bags, or 4,550 gallons, of garbage per year. This comes out to a total of 160 million tons of garbage a year. We have to change our throwaway lifestyle before we are buried in it.

2. We are running out of places to put all the garbage we produce. About 80 percent of it is now buried in landfills. There are 6,000 landfills currently operating, but many of them are becoming full. The Environmental Protection Agency estimates that one-half of the remaining landfills will run out of space and close within the next five to ten years.

3. Can we simply build new landfills to replace the old ones? The answer is no. For one thing, we are running out of space. We cannot afford to use up land that is needed for farms, parks, and homes.

4. In addition, many landfills contain toxic chemicals that can leak into and pollute underground water supplies. In New York City, over seventy-five wells had to be closed because of such toxic waste poisoning.

5. One suggested alternative to landfills is to burn the trash. In some states, large incinerators are used to burn garbage, and the heat that is generated is used to produce electricity. But this solution has drawbacks. Burning trash pollutes the air with dioxin and mercury, which are highly poisonous. Furthermore, burning does not completely solve the landfill problem. Leftover ash produced by burning is often highly toxic, and it still has to be buried somewhere.

6 The only real solution to the garbage crisis is for Americans to reduce the amount of trash they throw away. There are two methods of doing this. One is recycling—reusing garbage. Bottles can be washed and reused. Aluminum cans can be melted down and remade. Currently in the U.S., only 11 percent of solid waste is used again as something else. . . .

7 We must also reduce the amount of garbage we produce in the first place. We should use less plastic, which is hard to recycle and does not decompose in landfills. Much garbage is useless packaging. Consumers should buy foods and goods that use less packaging. We also should buy reusable products rather than things that are used once and thrown away. . . .

8 A woman in California was asked about garbage. She replied, “Why do we need to change anything? I put my garbage out on the sidewalk and they take it away.” Attitudes like hers must be changed. We have to face the inevitable question posed by Ed Repa, manager of the solid waste disposal program at the National Solid Waste Management Association: “How do you throw something away when there is no ‘away’?”
Fact and Opinion

Is That a Fact? Maybe you have seen a TV show in which a detective asks witnesses for “just the facts.” Facts, not opinions, will help the detective solve the case. Facts also help writers persuade readers because facts are statements that can be proved true. Facts may include numbers, dates, or measurements.

Opinions, on the other hand, are impossible to prove. An opinion is a person’s judgment. Phrases such as “I believe,” “I feel,” or “I think” indicate an opinion. Telling readers what should be done is another sure clue that an opinion is being expressed. Judgment words such as best, worst, greatest, and prettiest may be clues that a statement is an opinion. The following pairs of statements show the difference between facts and opinions.

Fact The city council passed the proposal five to one.
Opinion I think the city council made a smart decision.

Fact Our school buses were made in 1995.
Opinion The school board should buy newer buses.

Fact Jefferson was the third president.
Opinion Jefferson was the country’s best president.

Try identifying facts and opinions in the paragraph below. If you have trouble, follow the steps on the next page.

The city should encourage people to ride bicycles for short trips. Bicycles do not pollute. Taking several short car trips can create more pollution than a longer drive. If people tried bicycling for these short trips, they would enjoy it. Cyclists travel at slower speeds, which allows them to take in nature’s sights and sounds. I think an ad campaign could convince people to stop depending on cars for all of their transportation.
Reasons and Evidence

Building a Case

Have you ever tried to build a human pyramid? The base of the pyramid needs to have more people, and stronger people, than the top does. Look at the following diagram of a persuasive essay. Notice how it looks like a pyramid.

```
Writer's opinion
  /\   /\   /\  \\
Reason #1 /   \\
  \   /  \  \\
Evidence for reason

Reason #2

Evidence for reason

Reason #3

Evidence for reason
```

STEP 1 Read the paragraph. Look for clues, such as should, good, bad, or I believe, that signal an opinion.

Sentences with opinion clues: “The city should encourage people to ride bicycles for short trips.” “If people tried bicycling for these short trips, they would enjoy it.” “I think an ad campaign could convince people to stop depending on cars for all of their transportation.”

STEP 2 Read the paragraph again to identify facts. Look for numbers, measurements, or things that can be proved.

Sentences with fact clues: “Bicycles do not pollute.” “Taking several short car trips can create more pollution than a longer drive.” “Cyclists travel at slower speeds. . . .”

TIP

Quiz a classmate by writing five sentences on your paper from the essay. Then, have your partner identify each sentence as either a fact or an opinion. Your partner should also explain his or her answers.

YOUR TURN

Identifying Fact and Opinion

Re-read the essay on pages 229–230, and look for fact and opinion clues. Identify three sentences that contain facts and three sentences that contain opinions, and explain how you can tell.
The opinion in a persuasive essay is like the person at the top of a human pyramid. The reasons are like the people in the middle row who support the person on top. The evidence in a persuasive essay is like the group of people who form the base of a human pyramid. Persuasive writing must have support to be strong, just as a human pyramid needs strong supporters.

Reasons
A reason explains why the writer holds a particular opinion. In a persuasive essay the writer will usually write one or two paragraphs explaining each reason. For example, in the paragraph on page 231, the writer who wanted the city to encourage bike riding gave the reason that it would help reduce air pollution.

Evidence
Just saying that bicycling reduces air pollution is not convincing. The city council or mayor would need evidence before believing the reason. Evidence is the support for a reason, the specific facts and examples that illustrate the reason. You already know that a fact is a statement that can be proved true. An example is an event or illustration that shows one specific instance of a reason. Here is evidence a writer used to support a reason in an essay about creating more community bike trails. Would this reason be as convincing without the evidence?

Reason: Many people enjoy bike riding.

Fact: 80% of the students at my school own bicycles.

Example: When I ride my bike in my neighborhood, I always see lots of other people riding bikes, too.

TIP
Using reasons and evidence to support an opinion is called making a logical appeal. A logical appeal persuades because it makes sense. There are two other ways persuasive writers appeal to readers. While logical appeals try to persuade your head, emotional appeals try to persuade your heart. Humane Society ads showing adorable puppies and kittens up for adoption are examples of emotional appeals. Finally, ethical appeals try to persuade you by making the presenter seem trustworthy. One example of an ethical appeal would be a public service announcement featuring a respected celebrity speaking sincerely about a serious issue.

See if you can spot the reasons and evidence in the paragraph on the next page. The graphic organizer below it will help you check your answers.
People should donate supplies to the Helping Hands Community Assistance Program now. The supplies of clothing, shoes, and blankets are very low. There are only four coats, six blankets, and one pair of shoes now available. The director says that they need enough clothing for twenty adults and ten children. Also, winter is coming soon. Winter always brings a higher demand for warm clothing. Last winter some families left empty-handed because supplies were gone.

The writer of the paragraph above used reasons and evidence to be as persuasive as possible. Here is a graphic organizer showing how she built her case. Notice how the graphic organizer is shaped like a pyramid. The reasons and evidence hold up the opinion.

TIP

The sentence that identifies the issue and the writer's opinion on the issue is called the opinion statement.

The opinion statement:

People should donate supplies to the Helping Hands Community Assistance Program now.

Reasons:

- supplies are low
- winter is coming soon

Evidence (facts and examples):

- 4 coats, 6 blankets, 1 pair shoes
- need clothing for 20 adults, 10 children
- higher demand for clothing
- last winter some families got nothing

YOUR TURN

Re-read “The U.S. Has a Garbage Crisis” on pages 229–230. Then, create a graphic organizer like the one above. Fill in your boxes with the writer’s opinion, his reasons for that opinion, and the evidence that supports each of his reasons. (Hint: You will find this information in paragraphs 1–5 of the reading selection.)
Dictionary and Thesaurus

Persuasive writing asks you to take a side on an issue. To make an intelligent decision, you need to be sure you understand all of the words you read. You can use reference books to find an unfamiliar word’s meaning. Here are two examples.

- Dictionary In a dictionary you will find the word’s definition, its pronunciation, its part of speech, examples of how it is used, and its history.

- Thesaurus In a thesaurus you will find other words that are synonyms of the unfamiliar word. Synonyms are words that have almost the same meaning, such as happy and glad.

Dictionaries can sometimes be confusing when they list several definitions for one word. To find the right definition of a word, use the following steps.

Choosing the Right Definition

Here is an example based on the word convenience from the reading selection on page 229.

STEP 1 Look up the word in a dictionary. Read the entire definition.

Convenience means: 1. personal comfort 2. a favorable condition

STEP 2 Use each of the meanings in the context of the reading selection. Decide which meaning makes the most sense in the sentence.

“For the sake of personal comfort we tend to throw things away.” That sounds good.

“For the sake of a favorable condition we tend to throw things away.” That sounds strange. I think the first definition is correct in this context.

PRACTICE

Look up the words to the right in a dictionary. Use the steps above if the word has more than one definition. Write the correct definition of the word. Then, look the word up in a thesaurus and find a synonym that is familiar to you. Write that word next to the definition.

1. generates (page 229)
2. toxic (page 229)
3. incinerators (page 229)
4. decompose (page 230)
5. disposal (page 230)
When you take a reading test, you may be asked to identify statements of fact or opinion. Suppose the following paragraph and question were in a reading test. How would you approach them?

New equipment should be purchased for Esperanza Park. The existing playground equipment is old and dangerous. Three children have received serious cuts from the jagged metal edges of the swing set. The equipment is seventeen years old and cannot be repaired. The city should make Esperanza Park a fun, safe place to play for children and families in the city.

Which of the following is an OPINION expressed in this passage?
A. Children have gotten hurt on the playground.
B. The playground equipment should be repaired.
C. The playground equipment contains jagged metal edges.
D. Esperanza Park should be made safer for children.

The question asks me to find an opinion in the passage. An opinion is a statement that makes a judgment and can’t be proved.

Choice A says “children have gotten hurt.” This is a fact because you could ask parents whether their children have been hurt. C says the equipment has “jagged metal edges.” This could be proved by looking at the equipment.

The remaining choices are B and D. Choice B is an opinion because it uses the word should, but the passage says the equipment “cannot be repaired.” Choice D also uses the word should, so it is an opinion, too. The last sentence of the passage says this in different words. I’ll choose D.
When you were younger, did you write letters to ask someone for a special toy? Maybe you wanted a certain doll or a new bicycle, so you described the toy and explained why you wanted it. Were you later thrilled to discover that your wish had been granted?

Now that you are older, you may know that letters can achieve results more important than toys. Here is your opportunity to use the power of persuasive writing to make a difference in the world around you. This workshop will teach you how to write a persuasive letter that will help make a positive change in your school, neighborhood, or town. The thrill of making a difference can be even more satisfying than receiving a new toy!

Choose an Issue

Dare to Care Given a choice between soup or sandwiches for lunch, you might answer, “I don’t care.” For you, the kind of food is not an issue. In persuasive writing, though, issues are important. An issue is a topic with at least two sides about which people disagree. In a persuasive letter the writer tries to make the reader agree with his or her opinion on an issue. Persuasive letters also may ask readers to take action on an issue.
Take Your Pick  The issue you choose should be one that is important to you. If you do not feel strongly about an issue, how can you convince your readers to care about it? Ask yourself what issues most affect your world. Completing the following sentence starters will help you identify issues that matter to you.

- My school would be a better place if ____.
- I become upset when I see ____.

Little by Little  You should also choose an issue that is small enough for one person or group to have an effect. For example, one student chose the issue of littering. Although she also felt strongly about the issue of homelessness, she felt that by taking on a smaller issue, she would be better able to make a difference. She also knew that an anti-littering campaign for her soccer league would be an issue she could tackle in a letter.

Write Your Opinion Statement

Take a Stand  If you have chosen an issue that is important to you, you probably already know what your opinion on it is. You simply need to put that opinion into words. An opinion statement should clearly state what the issue is and where the writer stands on it. Here is how the writer who chose the issue of recycling came up with her opinion statement.

- issue: litter at soccer games
  + how I feel about it: soccer fields should be kept free of litter
  - opinion statement: We need to start an anti-littering campaign to keep the soccer fields clean.

Choosing an Issue and Writing an Opinion Statement

- Brainstorm issues that might make your community or the world a better place. Choose an issue that is both important to you and small enough to tackle in a letter. Write down your opinion about the issue. Then, put the issue and your opinion together into a single clear sentence—your opinion statement.
Consider Audience and Purpose

Dear Sir or Madam . . . You would not ask the President of the United States to shorten the school day. Yes, the President can do many things, but your request is likely to get lost in the shuffle of national issues. Because your purpose is to persuade your reader, it is important to write to someone who cares about the issue and can do something about it. Contacting the right audience to consider your request is an important part of your letter’s effectiveness. Identify local people who have the power to do what you want. Your audience may be one person or a group of people. Notice how one student used the following questions to help identify her specific audience.

| What part of your community does the issue involve? | Starting an anti-littering campaign at the soccer fields would involve my soccer league. |
| What is the specific name of the person or group you need to contact? | My league handbook says the president of the Eastside Soccer League is Jake Matsuo. |
| What do you know about this person or these people? (How old are they? What interests or concerns them? Why might they disagree with you, or object to your opinion?) | I know he’s an adult, and he is interested in soccer. I think he is interested in keeping things running smoothly and in keeping fees low for players. He might object to my opinion if he thinks an anti-littering campaign would be time-consuming or expensive. |

TIP In writing, voice reflects your tone and attitude. To persuade readers, you need to use a believable voice. In other words, you should sound as if you know what you are talking about and you take the issue seriously. You should also appeal to your audience by making it clear that you understand and care about their interests.

YOUR TURN

Considering Audience and Purpose

Your purpose is to persuade someone who has the power to grant your request. Use the questions above to figure out who that person or group of people is and think about what you know about them.
Suppose that you want to organize a tutoring program at your school. Older students would tutor younger students for one hour after school. Using the Thinking It Through steps above, identify a possible objection each of the audiences to the right might have. Then, list reasons that would address each audience’s objection. Explain each reason.

1. the school principal
2. parents
3. students who would serve as tutors
Develop Reasons and Evidence

Answering the Big Question  Understanding your audience’s interests will help you to answer their main question—“Why should I care?” Your audience will want to know the reasons why they should accept your opinion. You can begin developing solid reasons by asking why your opinion makes sense.

Your opinion needs more support than reasons alone, though. Evidence must support each reason for the reasons to be believable. Facts, which can be proved true, and examples, which illustrate a point, can provide support for reasons. See how the following reason is supported by a fact and an example.

Reason: Volunteers help people.

Fact: Since 1961, Peace Corps volunteers have helped people in 134 countries around the world.

Example: My older sister volunteers by helping two fourth-graders with their math homework.

In the chart below, a student lists several reasons to begin an anti-littering campaign. In the middle column, the student gives facts and examples to support each of her reasons. In the right-hand column, she decides whether each reason and its supporting evidence will appeal to her audience.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Reasons</th>
<th>Supporting Evidence</th>
<th>Appealing to Audience?</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>An anti-littering campaign will make people aware of the trash problem.</td>
<td>My parents had to pick up trash left by others. That made them be more careful not to litter.</td>
<td>Yes. Most people want to enjoy the games and not worry about litter.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>An anti-littering program will earn money.</td>
<td>By recycling, we can earn 32 cents for each pound of cans. This money can help pay for clinics to train new coaches.</td>
<td>Yes. If we pay for clinics with recycling money, the league won’t have to raise fees to cover these things.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Participating in an anti-littering program helps players earn badges in Scouts.</td>
<td>I can earn 2 badges. Several players I know participate in Scouts.</td>
<td>No. This will help a few of us, but not the president of the soccer league.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Go to the Chapter Menu for an interactive activity.
From the chart on the previous page, you can tell that this student realized that the last reason might not appeal to her audience. The president of a soccer league is probably more interested in soccer than in scouting. The student thought about possible objections the president might have to the project. Then, she came up with a reason that would take his objection into account. See her revision in the chart below.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>New Reason</th>
<th>Supporting Evidence</th>
<th>Appealing to Audience?</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>This project will not take very much time or effort.</td>
<td>Teams will make posters and rotate collecting the recycling containers. Parents and players do all the work.</td>
<td>Yes. He won’t have to find people to do the work. This reason will also show that picking up trash and recycling is not too much trouble, which I think might be his objection.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

TIP It is not enough just to give evidence. You also need to explain why your evidence is convincing. In the chart on page 241, the student explained in the Supporting Evidence column the meaning of each piece of evidence. (“This money can help pay for clinics to train new coaches.”) This kind of explanation is called elaboration.

Developing Reasons and Evidence
- Create a chart like the one on page 241, listing reasons and evidence to support your opinion. (Use the library to find facts to support your reasons.) Use the right-hand column to decide whether each reason will appeal to your audience.
- Replace any reasons that will not appeal to most of your audience. You should have at least two good reasons, each supported by facts or examples.

Choose and Focus a Call to Action

911 Means Action! When you dial 911, the operator knows instantly that you are asking for help. In a way, your persuasive letter is also a 911 call because it includes a call to action. A call to action tells readers how they can respond to your ideas. To get your readers to take action, your call to action must be both reasonable and specific.
A reasonable request is financially possible and within the audience’s power. There is no point in asking a local audience to spend billions of dollars to end all wars or to house all homeless people. Instead, your call to action should focus on smaller actions. Suggesting that your audience sign a petition or volunteer a few hours of time is not too much to ask.

A specific request is clear and tells exactly what you want readers to do about an issue. How can a reader tell whether “Please do more for our children” is a call for more sidewalks or for a new playground? The specific call to action, “Start a tutoring program for elementary students,” would be more effective.

Writing a Call to Action

Here is how to write a reasonable and specific call to action.

STEP 1 Decide exactly what action you want to take place.

I want to see trash picked up and recycled at our soccer games.

STEP 2 State the call to action in concrete terms so there is no confusion about what you are asking.

Maybe my call to action is too vague. I can ask the league to get recycling containers and put them at the soccer fields.

“Please buy and place recycling bins for aluminum cans at the soccer fields. Then, ask teams to participate in the anti-littering campaign.”

Choosing and Focusing a Call to Action

Decide what you want to ask your readers to do about the issue you have chosen. Then, use the steps above to write a call to action that is reasonable, clear, and specific. Be direct, but remember a call to action is a request. Therefore, be polite, too.
Writing

Persuasive Letter

Framework

Introduction
- Attention-grabbing opening
- Opinion statement

Body
- Reason #1
  - Evidence supporting reason #1
- Reason #2
  - Evidence supporting reason #2
  - and so on

Conclusion
- Summary of reasons
- Call to action

Directions and Explanations

Grab your readers’ interest right away with an interesting beginning. For example, you could begin your letter with an anecdote (a brief story), or a question. Next, include a clear opinion statement that tells your audience exactly what you think about the issue you have chosen.

- Support your opinion with at least two good reasons. Write a paragraph for each reason. You can arrange your body paragraphs in order of importance, starting with the most important reason, or in climactic order, ending with the most important reason.
- Support each of your reasons with at least one specific fact or example each.
- Elaborate support by explaining the meaning of each fact or example or by summing up your point.

Remind your audience why this issue is important by summarizing your reasons in a single sentence. Next, tell your audience what they should do about the issue with a reasonable and specific call to action.

Drafting Your Persuasive Letter

Now, it is your chance to write a first draft of a persuasive letter. As you write, refer to the framework above and the Writer’s Model on the next page.
Dear Mr. Matsuo:

My soccer team won its game last Saturday. I was happy and excited until I started walking toward the parking lot. I passed cups and candy wrappers left in the stands and six trash cans overflowing with aluminum cans. Seeing all the trash that people did not throw away and the cans that could be recycled bothered me. With your help, we can improve the Eastside Soccer League. We need to start an anti-littering campaign to keep the soccer fields clean.

An anti-littering campaign would help people become aware of the trash problem. Since I talked to my family about the problem, they have noticed how bad the trash is, too. After last Saturday’s game, they made sure they picked up their trash so that they were not contributing to the problem. Letting people know there is a problem is the first step to solving it.

If we make recycling part of the plan, the anti-littering campaign can earn money. By recycling aluminum cans, the Eastside Soccer League can earn 32 cents per pound. Since there are twelve trash cans at the soccer fields that each can hold about two pounds of cans, and there are fifteen games in the season, we could earn as much as $115.20. This money could be used to pay for clinics to train new coaches. That way, more people could get involved in the league because training would be available.

Finally, this project will take little time and effort. This can be a project for the parents and the players. Each team will make posters encouraging people to be responsible for their trash. Also, the two teams playing the last game on a field will pick up trash left in the stands and empty the two recycling containers on their field. Once all twelve containers are emptied, one parent can drive the cans to the recycling center. This work will take just a few minutes of time. Since the teams already rotate playing times, no one team will be stuck with this chore every week.
Elaboration

An anti-littering campaign will help people become aware of the trash problem and earn money for the league without becoming a time-consuming or expensive project. Please buy and place recycling bins for aluminum cans at the soccer fields. Then, ask teams to participate in the anti-littering campaign.

Sincerely,

LaVonne Barton

Reference Note

For more on business letters, see page 758 in the Quick Reference Handbook.

TIP

If you have access to a computer, show your reader that you are serious about your issue by typing your letter. If you do not have access to a computer, write your letter using your best cursive or printing.
My name is Tyler Duckworth, and I am a sixth-grade student at Liberty Middle School in Morganton, North Carolina. I think the first thing you should do, Mr. President, is take specific action to protect our environment. As an avid reader of books about science, I am concerned about the natural wonders of our nation and of the world being preserved both for my generation and for future generations.

First of all, the pollution of our earth seems to be on the increase; factories, cars, and people continue to pollute. Statistics show that acid rain is on the increase, and the hole in the ozone layer is widening at an alarming rate. I feel action must be taken now, before it is too late. . . .

Also, the land in the rain forests is essential to our survival. Each year, more and more land in the rain forests is destroyed. If man continues to destroy the rain forests, the species present in them and the plant life present in them can never be replaced. The action taken must be firm and bound by law.

I believe that you, Mr. President, care about our country. You have stated in many speeches that I have listened to and in many articles that I have read that you care about our environment. It is essential that you, as our leader, do what is necessary to preserve the earth for future generations.

In my dad’s office, he has a quote that reads, “We do not inherit the earth from our ancestors; we borrow it from our children.” That, too, is my belief as a twelve-year-old citizen of the greatest country in the world. Mr. President, I ask you to please act now to save our country and our world.

Concern for the global, rather than local, environment prompted sixth-grader Tyler Duckworth to write a letter to the President of the United States.

Opinion statement

Reason #1: Increasing pollution
Evidence (facts)

Reason #2: Losing rain forests
Evidence (facts)

Reason #3: President’s record
Evidence (facts)

Call to action
Evaluate and Revise Content, Organization, and Style

Twice Is Nice  Double the persuasive power of your letter by giving it at least two readings. In the first reading, focus on the content and organization of your first draft. The guidelines below can help. In the second reading, look at the individual sentences using the Focus on Sentences on page 250.

First Reading: Content and Organization  When you edit your letter, you evaluate what you have written and revise it to make it better. Use the following guidelines to make your letter more persuasive. First, answer the questions in the left-hand column. If you need help answering the questions, use the tips in the middle column. Then, use the revision techniques in the right-hand column to make necessary changes.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Evaluation Questions</th>
<th>Tips</th>
<th>Revision Techniques</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>1 Does the introduction have a clear opinion statement?</td>
<td>Underline the opinion statement.</td>
<td>Add an opinion statement, or revise a sentence to state your opinion clearly.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2 Does the letter give at least two reasons to support the opinion?</td>
<td>Put stars next to the reasons that support the opinion.</td>
<td>If necessary, add reasons that support the opinion.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3 Does at least one piece of evidence support each of the reasons?</td>
<td>Circle evidence that supports each reason. Draw a line to the reason each piece of evidence supports.</td>
<td>If necessary, add facts or examples to support each reason. Rearrange evidence so it is close to the reason it supports.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4 Does the letter explain each fact and example?</td>
<td>Put a check mark next to each explanation.</td>
<td>Elaborate by adding explanations for each fact and example.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5 Does the conclusion include a specific and reasonable call to action?</td>
<td>Draw a wavy line under the call to action.</td>
<td>Add a call to action, or revise the call to action to make it more specific and reasonable.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

COMPUTER TIP  Use a computer to help you revise the content of your paper. You can find many reference materials on CD-ROM, and you can use the Internet as a resource. For example, if you need additional support for a reason, you can look up facts on reliable Web sites or on a CD-ROM version of an encyclopedia.
ONE WRITER’S REVISIONS  This revision is an early draft of the letter on page 245.

With your help, we can improve the Eastside Soccer League. An anti-littering campaign would help.

An anti-littering campaign would help people become aware of the trash problem. Since I talked to my family about the problem, they have noticed how bad the trash is, too. After last Saturday’s game, they made sure they picked up their trash so that they were not contributing to the problem. Letting people know there is a problem is the first step to solving it.

Responding to the Revision Process

1. Why did the writer revise the sentence at the end of the first paragraph?
2. Why did the writer add a sentence to the end of the second paragraph?

Second Reading: Style  You have taken a look at the big picture of your letter. In your second reading, you will look at the pieces of that picture by focusing on the sentences. One way to improve your writing is to make stringy sentences more compact. The following guidelines and the Focus on Sentences on the next page will help you evaluate your sentences.

Evaluation Question

Does the writer avoid long sentences made up of strings of ideas connected by and, but, or so?

Tip

Highlight long sentences that use and, but, or so to join two or more complete thoughts—ideas that can stand alone.

Revision Technique

Break a long sentence with two or more complete thoughts into two shorter sentences.

Copyright © by Holt, Rinehart and Winston. All rights reserved.
Eliminating Stringy Sentences

When your purpose is to persuade, your style should also be persuasive. Avoid using stringy sentences. Reading long, stringy sentences is like listening to a person who goes on and on. They bore readers, and a bored reader is an unconvinced reader. To eliminate stringy sentences, follow these steps.

- First, find the conjunctions and, but, or so in a very long sentence. Put a slash mark before each conjunction.
- Then, see if each part has a subject and a verb. If each part of the sentence has both a subject and a verb and expresses a complete thought, then it can stand alone.
- Revise a stringy sentence by breaking it into two or more separate sentences. Each complete thought may have its own sentence.

ONE WRITER’S REVISIONS

My soccer team won its game last Saturday, so I was happy and excited until I started walking toward the parking lot and I passed cups and candy wrappers left in the stands and six trash cans overflowing with aluminum cans.

Responding to the Revision Process

How did breaking the sentence above into three sentences improve it?

Evaluating and Revising Your Persuasive Letter

Use the guidelines on page 248 and page 249 to evaluate and revise the content, organization, and style of your letter. If a peer read your letter, consider his or her comments as you revise.
Proofread Your Letter

Edit for Oomph  Careless mistakes decrease the persuasive power of your letter. Proofread your letter for mistakes in grammar, spelling, and punctuation.

Punctuating Possessives Correctly

The possessive form of a noun or pronoun shows ownership. Using possessives helps writers make their points more concisely. Read the example below.

the playground equipment at our school
our school’s playground equipment

Here are four rules to remember about possessives.

To form the possessive case of a singular noun, add an apostrophe and an s.

girl’s sweatshirt  car’s bumper

To form the possessive case of a plural noun ending in s, add only the apostrophe.

books’ pages  stores’ signs

Do not use an apostrophe to make a noun plural. If you are not sure when to use an apostrophe, ask yourself, “Does the noun possess what follows?” If you answer yes, you need an apostrophe.

Do not use an apostrophe with possessive personal pronouns. These pronouns include its, yours, theirs, his, hers, and ours.

The dog missed its owner.

PRACTICE

Write the following sentences on your own paper, adding apostrophes where they are needed. If a sentence is correct, write C next to the sentence on your paper.

Example:
1. In visitors eyes, our towns trash is its biggest problem.
   1. In visitors’ eyes, our town’s trash is its biggest problem.

   1. Recycling helps meet the citys goals as outlined in its long-range plan.
   2. Other towns have recycling programs.
   3. Theirs are successful. Ours still needs the councils approval.
   4. The countys landfill is quickly filling up from the four towns trash.
   5. Voters signatures filled page after page of one groups petition.

For more information and practice on possessives, see page 598.
Publish Your Letter

Post It!  Publishing a persuasive letter is simple. It requires an envelope, a correct address, and a stamp. Just mail it to the person or the individual people in your target audience. Here are two other ways to reach your readers.

- Even if you will not be mailing your letter, but handing it to someone you know well, use a business envelope to show that you mean business.
- If you have access to e-mail, you can send the letter electronically. Make sure you carefully type the message to avoid introducing mistakes. Be sure to confirm your readers’ addresses before sending your letter.

Reflect on Your Letter

Building Your Portfolio  The best way to judge your letter’s effectiveness is to see what response you get. You may have to wait a while. Factors you may not know about may lead to a “No,” a vague response such as “We will consider your request,” or no response at all. However, you can judge your letter in the context of your entire portfolio by answering the following questions.

- What are my strengths as a writer? What did I do well in this piece and in other pieces in my portfolio? Which piece was my best or favorite? Why?
- What writing skills do I need to work on? If I had the chance, what would I do differently in this piece or in other pieces in my portfolio? Why?
- What are my goals as a writer now? What kinds of writing does my portfolio seem to be missing? What would I like to try next?

Your Turn 10 Proofreading, Publishing, and Reflecting on Your Persuasive Letter

- Correct mistakes in punctuation, spelling, capitalization, and grammar. Pay particular attention to possessives.
- Publish your letter to your target audience.
- Answer the Reflect on Your Letter questions above. Record your responses in a learning log, or include them in your portfolio.
Answering Questions That Ask You to Persuade

Some writing tests ask you to choose and support an opinion on an issue. Your response may be a persuasive letter or essay. If the following prompt were on a test, how would you approach it?

The city council has a limited budget for a new park. It is trying to decide between spending money for large shade trees or for an in-line skating path. Decide how you think the money should be spent. Then, write a letter convincing the city council to vote in favor of your decision. Give three reasons for your opinion.

---

Writing a Persuasive Essay

► STEP 1 Identify the task the prompt is asking you to do.

The prompt asks me to decide how the council should spend the money. I have to write a letter stating my opinion and give three reasons to support it.

► STEP 2 Decide on your opinion.

I like in-line skating, but I think trees are more important.

► STEP 3 Develop three reasons to support your opinion.

1. More people will enjoy trees.
2. Trees give shade, which makes the park more comfortable.
3. Trees take time to grow, so we need to plant them now. A skating path can be added any time.

► STEP 4 Develop evidence (facts and examples) to support your reasons.

1. All people appreciate trees. I only know people my age who skate.
2. Summer temperatures are in the 90s. Shade will keep the playground and picnic tables cool even in hot weather.
3. We planted a tree when I was six, and it is still not as tall as our house.

► STEP 5 Write your essay. Include your opinion in the introduction, make each reason a paragraph—with support—and give a call to action in your conclusion.

► STEP 6 Edit (evaluate, revise, proofread) your essay.
Writing a Humorous Advertisement

Is all persuasive writing serious? Not at all. Many people, in fact, find humor more persuasive than logic. Advertisers often rely on humor to persuade their audiences to buy their products. Humorous advertisements usually include these elements: a specific product being sold; a reason for buying the product, and funny sounds or visuals. Here is an example of a humorous print ad. Can you identify the elements?

Must be the Grow Strong Vitamins you gave her...

Grow Strong Vitamins give your children the boost they need to grow strong bones and healthy bodies. Who knows what your child could do with Grow Strong Vitamins? Try them and see!
A Little Imagination  To come up with an idea for a humorous ad, begin by identifying a product you would like to advertise. Next, think of a brand name for your product. Brainstorm a list of reasons why people should buy your product. Then, choose a humorous way to get one of those reasons across to an audience. Consider these techniques.

- Exaggeration  Exaggerate one of the claims of your product. This is the technique the ad on page 254 uses, exaggerating how strong and healthy children who use Grow Strong Vitamins become.

- Irony  To create humor, say or show the opposite of what readers expect. You might show a family riding in a car. The dad says, “How much longer?” Then, the mom says, “Are we there yet?” The slogan would read, “Kids aren’t the only ones who look forward to the fun at Giggles Amusement Park.”

- Silliness  Use silly sounds, voices, words, or visuals, or create a silly character to pitch your product. Talking animals, aliens, and cartoon characters are all used to sell products. For example, a cartoon version of a computer virus might complain about an antivirus software that keeps killing him off.

Sell It  Once you have a good idea of what will be in your ad, you can produce it. Create one of these types of ads.

- Radio Ad  You can turn your idea into a radio ad if the humor is in the words and sounds you include. To do this, you will need to write a script, create sound effects, and record the ad.

- Print Ad  If the words and pictures are the funny parts of your idea, you can create a print ad like the one on page 254. You may create your ad by cutting and arranging pictures and words, or you might try creating it on a computer with copyright-free pictures.

- Television Ad  If both sounds and visuals are important in your ad, turn your idea into a television commercial. You should write a script for the ad and find a good location to shoot, as well as any costumes or props that are important for your idea. Cast classmates to act in your ad if you wish, and videotape it using your school’s video equipment.

(For information about speaking, see page 719. For information about graphics, see page 687. For information about video production, see page 79.)

Your Turn  Writing a Humorous Advertisement

Using the guidelines above, develop an idea for a humorous advertisement. Then, produce the ad as a radio ad, print ad, or television ad, and share it with your class.
Evaluating a Persuasive Speech

If you think you lack experience in evaluating persuasive speeches, think again. If you read magazines, watch TV commercials, or notice billboards, you are highly qualified. Any time you laugh at a clever advertisement or roll your eyes at a weak one, you are evaluating persuasion.

Listen with a Purpose

All persuasive messages, including advertisements, are created for the purpose of convincing people to do something or to believe something. When you listen to an ad or a persuasive speech, you may want to get information. However, your main purpose for listening will probably be to see whether you agree with the speaker’s opinion. To do that, you must evaluate the speaker’s message. Here are the elements to evaluate in a persuasive speech.

- Content is driven by the speaker’s purpose. Since the speaker’s purpose is to persuade, you can expect the content to include opinions, reasons, and evidence.
- Delivery refers to how the speaker delivers the message.
- Believability refers to whether or not you can believe the speaker.

Not all persuasive messages try to convince through solid evidence. Many persuasive speakers (and advertisers) also draw from a grab bag of persuasive techniques. Persuasive techniques rely on

Reference Note

For more on evaluating a speech, see page 730 in the Quick Reference Handbook. emotional impact to “sell” an idea or product. Here are four of the most common persuasive techniques.

- Bandwagon  A speaker may use this method to make you feel that everyone else is doing something, so you should do it, too. The statement “Everyone agrees that recycling is important” is an example of the bandwagon approach.

- Testimonial  A speaker may try to persuade you with an example from his or her own experience, or a testimonial. For example, the speaker might say, “Volunteering at our local animal shelter has been a great experience for me.”

- “Plain Folks”  This method is used to make people feel that the speaker understands them. A speaker may try to show that he or she shares the concerns of the audience members. “Like you, I’m concerned about the cost of school supplies. Getting the supplies we need can be difficult when prices keep going up.”

- Emotional Appeals  This technique uses the audience’s own emotions to get them on the speaker’s side. An emotional appeal might tap into listeners’ concern for others by telling sad stories about young refugees. Other appeals might spur the audience’s school spirit or their anger about animal cruelty.

Develop Criteria

Use the elements of a persuasive speech to develop criteria for evaluation. Criteria are standards you use to judge something. To develop criteria for a persuasive speech, first identify and interpret (or understand) these separate items of each element.

- Content  Consider the verbal elements: major ideas and supporting reasons and evidence, facts and opinions, persuasive techniques.

- Delivery  Consider the nonverbal elements: posture, gestures, eye contact, voice, facial expressions.

- Believability  Consider the speaker’s perspective, or attitude. For example, believable speakers are considerate of their audiences. They think about what their audiences will find persuasive. In contrast, speakers who try to force their opinions on their audiences without considering their audiences’ views will be less believable.

Ask yourself what each item above would be like in a successful speech. The Thinking It Through steps on the next page can help.
Developing Criteria

STEP 1 Choose one item of a persuasive speech to evaluate, and ask yourself, “What should this be like in a persuasive speech?”

What should eye contact be like in a persuasive speech?

STEP 2 Brainstorm an answer to your question.

A speaker should try to look at various audience members, not just one or two people. This will make the speaker seem more honest and believable.

STEP 3 Turn your answer into a statement that says what a speaker should do when giving a persuasive speech. Then, develop criteria for the rest of the items listed on page 257.

A speaker should make eye contact with the audience often.

Evaluate a Speech

Once you have a list of criteria, you are ready to evaluate a persuasive speech. You may want to make a chart with your criteria in one column and space for notes in another. As you listen, remember your purpose. Do you agree with the speaker’s opinion? To convince, speakers should support opinions with facts. Be sure you distinguish between facts and the speaker’s opinions.

Evaluating a Persuasive Speech

- Follow the steps in the Thinking It Through above to develop criteria for evaluating a speech. Make sure your criteria cover content, delivery, and believability items.
- Listen to a persuasive speech and make notes about how the speaker does or does not meet each of your criteria. Does the speaker convince through evidence or “sell” through emotion? Afterward, rewrite any illegible notes, and add explanations for any short or confusing notes.
- Write a brief evaluation of the speech using the information in your notes. If other students evaluate the same speech, compare your impressions in a small group. Was the speaker effective? Why or why not?
Choose one of the following activities to complete.

EDITORIAL CARTOONS
1. The Politics of Art An editorial cartoon is a humorous drawing that tries to persuade readers to believe something. Editorial cartoons are usually located on the opinion page of the newspaper. Find an editorial cartoon and analyze it. Answer questions such as these: What is the artist trying to convince readers to believe? How does the drawing help the cartoonist make his or her persuasive point? Were you persuaded by the cartoon? Why or why not? Create a bulletin board display that includes the cartoon and a one-paragraph analysis.

CROSSING THE CURRICULUM: SOCIAL STUDIES
3. On the Go What place would you propose to visit as a class field trip? In a small group, create a petition with specific educational reasons for your selection. Your petition should begin with a short letter explaining where you want to go and why. The letter should be followed by a form with spaces for students to sign their names and list their grade level.

SPEAKING
4. Talk Them into It Make a persuasive speech to your class, either on the issue you chose for your letter or on another issue that is important to you. Make sure your opinion and call to action are clear. Support your opinion with reasons and evidence, and organize them in a way that will make sense to your listeners.
Writing Clear Sentences

Your goal in writing should always be to communicate clearly with your reader. A clear sentence gives your reader just enough information. It does not leave out any important pieces, and it does not run together or string together too many ideas at once. Clear sentences make it easier for your reader to understand what you are saying. You can learn how to spot three enemies of clear writing: sentence fragments, run-on sentences, and stringy sentences.

Sentence Fragments

What kind of sentence could you write about this picture? You might write something like this:

- The high jumper flips backwards over the bar.
- Look at how high the bar is!
- How does she know where to jump?

These groups of words say different things, but they have something in common. Each is a complete sentence. A complete sentence is a group of words that expresses a complete thought.
A part of each thought is expressed by the verb: flips, look, is, does know, jump. Another part is expressed by the subject: high jumper, you, she. [The you is understood in the second sentence even though it is not expressed: (You) Look at how high the bar is!]

A sentence fragment is a part of a sentence that is punctuated as if it were a complete sentence. A fragment is confusing because it does not express a complete thought. The following word groups are the example sentences—with some important words left out. Notice how unclear the word groups are when written as fragments.

Flips backwards over the bar. [The subject is missing. Who or what flips?]

At how high the bar is. [The verb and the understood subject are missing. What about how high the bar is?]

Where to jump. [This word group has a subject and a verb, but it does not express a complete thought. What about where to jump?]

Use this simple three-part test to help you decide whether a word group is a sentence fragment or a complete sentence.

1. Does the group of words have a subject?
2. Does the word group have a verb?
3. Does the word group express a complete thought?

You know the word group is a complete sentence if you answer “yes” to all three questions above. If you answer “no” to a question, the word group is a sentence fragment.

Exercise 1 Recognizing Fragments

Decide which of the following word groups are sentence fragments and which are complete sentences. Write S for a complete sentence; write F for a fragment.

1. We visited the pet shop in the mall.
2. A bright-eyed hamster chewing on pieces of carrot.
4. Has pouches inside each fat cheek.
5. The pouches are for carrying food.
6. Newspaper in lots of little shreds.
7. Making his cage quite comfortable.
8. He is plump and has white and tan fur.
9. A diet of mostly fruit, vegetables, and grain.
10. If you decide to raise hamsters.

Exercise 2 Revising Fragments

Some of the following word groups are sentence fragments. First, identify the fragments. Then, revise each fragment by (1) adding a subject, (2) adding a verb, or (3) attaching the fragment to a complete sentence. You may also need to change the punctuation and capitalization in your revised sentence. If a word group below is already a complete sentence, write S on your paper.

EXAMPLE

1. It a stormy Wednesday night.
   1. It was a stormy Wednesday night.

1. Was watching TV alone.
2. A movie about aliens invading from space.
3. Suddenly, the lights went out on the whole block.
4. Because the batteries in the flashlight were dead.
5. A strange noise in the backyard.
6. After our dog started to bark.
7. Crept slowly to the door and looked out.
8. Two small, glowing eyes in the dark.
9. When I saw it was just the cat from next door.
10. Maybe I should stop watching scary movies.
Run-on Sentences

A run-on sentence is actually two or more sentences run together without proper punctuation as if they were one sentence. It is often hard to tell where one idea in a run-on ends and the next one begins.

Like sentence fragments, run-on sentences usually appear in your writing because you are in a hurry to get your thoughts down on paper. This mistake happens when you leave out the correct end punctuation (period, question mark, or exclamation point) or when you use a comma to separate the sentences.

There is more than one way to revise a run-on sentence. You can break the run-on into two complete sentences, or you can link the two ideas with a comma and a coordinating conjunction such as and, but, or or.

RUN-ON  In 1962 John Glenn became the first American to orbit Earth, he made his second space flight on the space shuttle Discovery in 1998, when he was 77 years old.

CORRECT  In 1962 John Glenn became the first American to orbit Earth. He made his second space flight on the space shuttle Discovery in 1998, when he was 77 years old. [The sentence has been broken into two complete sentences.]

or

In 1962 John Glenn became the first American to orbit Earth, and he made his second space flight on the space shuttle Discovery in 1998, when he was 77 years old. [Two complete ideas have been linked by a comma plus and.]

NOTE  A comma alone is not enough to link two complete ideas in a sentence. If you use just a comma between two complete ideas, you create a run-on sentence.

RUN-ON  Sally Ride was the first American woman in space, she was a member of a shuttle crew.

CORRECT  Sally Ride was the first American woman in space. She was a member of a shuttle crew.

Reference Note

For more information about and practice using commas with coordinating conjunctions, see page 568.
Exercise 3 Identifying and Revising Run-on Sentences

Decide which of the following groups of words are run-ons. Revise each run-on by (1) making it into two separate sentences, or (2) using a comma and a coordinating conjunction. You may have to change the punctuation and capitalization, too. If the group of words is already correct, write C.

1. People constantly search for faster ways to communicate, the Internet is one tool that helps people share information quickly.
2. The earliest form of the Internet was designed over thirty years ago, and it was created to be used by the military.
3. The Internet has changed a great deal since then now it can be used by almost anyone who uses a computer.
4. The first e-mail program was invented in 1972, e-mail is a way to send messages from one computer to another.
5. Twenty years later, scientists in Switzerland created the World Wide Web, and Internet quickly became a household word.
6. The scientists planned to use the Web to share research with scientists in other parts of the world the new invention soon interested businesses and government organizations.
7. The programs that make the Internet and the World Wide Web work are very complicated they are not hard to use.
8. Many schools and libraries have computers that are connected to the Internet and the World Wide Web.
10. Many sites on the World Wide Web focus on school subjects, news, and hobbies, these sites can be useful sources of information.

Stringy Sentences

For variety, you will sometimes want to join sentences and sentence parts with and. If you string many ideas together with and, though, you create a stringy sentence. Stringy sentences ramble on and on. They do not give the reader a chance to pause between ideas.
STRINGY  The ostrich is the largest living bird, and it stands nearly eight feet tall, and it weighs over three hundred pounds when it is fully grown, and this speedy bird can run up to forty miles an hour!

BETTER  The ostrich is the largest living bird. It stands nearly eight feet tall, and it weighs over three hundred pounds when it is fully grown. This speedy bird can run up to forty miles an hour!

In the revised version, only two ideas are linked by and. These ideas can be combined into one sentence because they are closely related. Notice that a comma is used before the word and. The comma is also necessary to show a slight pause between the two complete ideas.

Exercise 4 Identifying and Revising Stringy Sentences

Some of the following sentences are stringy. Revise each stringy sentence by breaking it into two or more sentences. If an item is already correct, write C.

1. Thomas and José were playing softball at school, and
   Thomas hit the ball very hard, and then he saw it roll under the steps of the library.
2. Thomas peered under the dark steps to recover his ball, and when he reached for it, he saw a giant raccoon, and Thomas wasn’t sure what to do next!
3. José told Thomas that raccoons are fierce fighters, and then José warned him not to anger the raccoon, and by this time, other softball players had gathered to offer advice.
4. Thomas finally rolled the ball out from under the steps with a baseball bat. The raccoon stayed completely still, and it hissed and looked fiercely at the group. Then Thomas saw why the raccoon was behaving so strangely.
5. Five baby raccoons were hiding behind the mother, and they were too small to protect themselves, and the mother raccoon was trying to frighten the softball players away!
Revising Sentence Fragments, Run-on Sentences, and Stringy Sentences

Decide which of the following word groups are fragments, run-ons, or stringy sentences. Then, revise each of these word groups to make it clear and complete. Remember to add correct capitalization and punctuation. If a word group is already clear and complete, write \textit{C} for \textit{correct}.

1. Not all animals see the world in the same way humans see the world.
2. See only light and dark shapes.
3. Squids and octopuses have very advanced eyes they see almost as well as humans.
4. The jeweled squid lives deep underwater in the Indian Ocean, it has white, blue, and red lights around its eyes to help it see in the dark water.
5. Several other sea creatures have their own “headlights,” and these lights are sometimes produced by helpful bacteria, and the fish store the bacteria in special skin pouches.
6. Some owls can catch mice in total darkness by hearing alone others can find a mouse by the light of one candle placed nearly a quarter of a mile away from the mouse.
7. Grazing animals must have a wide field of vision so that they will know when an enemy is coming.
8. Rabbits and deer eyes on the sides of their heads.
9. Mammals that hunt other animals for food must be able to judge distance well, therefore their eyes are usually located toward the front of their faces.
10. Most apes do not hunt other animals for food, but their eyes are in much the same position as human eyes, and apes also see the same range of colors humans see.
Combining Sentences

Good writers usually use some short sentences, but they don’t use them all the time. An entire paragraph of short sentences makes writing sound choppy. For example, notice how dull and choppy the following paragraph sounds.

Quicksand is really just sand. The sand is wet. The sand is loose. You can sink in quicksand. It will not actually suck you down. You might get caught in quicksand. You can lie on your back. You can float. Then you can roll or wriggle. Your movements must be slow. You can get to solid ground this way.

Now, see how the writer has revised the paragraph by combining some of the short sentences. Notice how sentence combining has helped to eliminate some repeated words and ideas. The result is a smoother paragraph that has much more variety.

Quicksand is really just wet, loose sand. You can sink in quicksand, but it will not actually suck you down. If you are caught in quicksand, you can lie on your back and float. Then you can slowly roll or wriggle to solid ground.

You can combine sentences in several different ways. Sometimes you can insert a word or a group of words from one sentence into another sentence. Other times you can combine two related sentences by using a connecting word.

Inserting Words

One way to combine two sentences is to pull a key word from one sentence and insert it into the other sentence. Sometimes you can just add the key word to the first sentence and drop the rest of the second sentence. Other times you will need to change the form of the key word before you can insert it.
Combining Sentences by Inserting Words

Each of the following items contains two sentences. Combine the two sentences by taking the italicized key word from the second sentence and inserting it into the first sentence. The directions in parentheses will tell you how to change the form of the key word if you need to do so.

Example

1. Chief Joseph was a Nez Perce Indian chief who fought for his people. He was a brave fighter.

   (Add –ly.)

   1. Chief Joseph was a Nez Perce Indian chief who fought bravely for his people.

1. The name Joseph was given to his father by missionaries. The missionaries were Christian.
2. His name, Hin-mah-too-yah-lat-ket, means “thunder rolling down the mountains.” That is his Nez Perce name.
3. Chief Joseph fought the United States Army to defend his people’s homeland. The fighting was fierce.

   (Add –ly.)

4. When he realized he could not win, he led the Nez Perce band more than one thousand miles. The band was in retreat.

   (Add –ing.)

5. Chief Joseph’s surrender speech is famous. The speech is moving.

---

Exercise 5

Combining Sentences by Inserting Words

1. Chief Joseph was a Nez Perce Indian chief who fought for his people. He was a brave fighter.

   (Add –ly.)

1. Chief Joseph was a Nez Perce Indian chief who fought bravely for his people.

---

Using the Same Form

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Original</th>
<th>Combined</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., was a civil rights leader. He was an American.</td>
<td>Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., was an American civil rights leader.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Changing the Form

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Original</th>
<th>Combined</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>He was famous for his brilliant speeches. His fame was international.</td>
<td>He was internationally famous for his brilliant speeches.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Inserting Groups of Words

Often, you can combine two related sentences by taking an entire group of words from one sentence and adding it to the other sentence. When the group of words is inserted, it adds detail to the information in the first sentence.

ORIGINAL  The first known baseball game was played in 1846. It was played in Hoboken, New Jersey.

COMBINED  The first known baseball game was played in 1846 in Hoboken, New Jersey.

ORIGINAL  The game ended with a score of 23–1. It was played by the New York Baseball Club and the Knickerbockers.

COMBINED  Played by the New York Baseball Club and the Knickerbockers, the game ended with a score of 23–1.

ORIGINAL  The players were all amateurs. They were in the first organized baseball league.

COMBINED  The players in the first organized baseball league were all amateurs.

Sometimes you will need to put commas around the group of words you are inserting. Ask yourself whether the group of words renames or identifies a noun or pronoun in the sentence. If it does, it is an appositive phrase and generally needs a comma or commas to set off the word group from the rest of the sentence.

ORIGINAL  The All-American Girls Professional Baseball League had ten teams at its 1948 peak. The league was the subject of a 1992 movie.

COMBINED  The All-American Girls Professional Baseball League, the subject of a 1992 movie, had ten teams at its 1948 peak.

ORIGINAL  Baseball is a sport that is popular with people of all ages. It is played in countries around the world.

COMBINED  Baseball, a sport that is popular with people of all ages, is played in countries around the world.

---

TIPS & TRICKS

If you move a phrase from one sentence to the beginning of the other sentence, you may need to add a comma after the introductory phrase.

Reference Note

For more information about and practice using commas with appositive phrases, see page 570.
After you combine two sentences, be sure to read your new sentence carefully. Then, ask yourself the following questions:

- Is my new sentence clear?
- Does it make sense?
- Does it sound better than the two shorter sentences?

If you answer “no” to any of the above questions, try to combine the sentences in a different way. Then, ask yourself the questions again.

Exercise 6 Combining Sentences by Inserting Word Groups

Combine each pair of sentences by taking the underlined word group from the second sentence and inserting it into the first sentence. Be sure to add commas if they are needed.

EXAMPLE 1. Jorge read Storm Chaser: Into the Eye of a Hurricane for his science report. Jorge is a boy in my class.

1. Jorge, a boy in my class, read Storm Chaser: Into the Eye of a Hurricane for his science report.

1. Storm Chaser is an exciting book. It is by Keith Elliot Greenberg.

2. The book is a true story about a pilot named Brian Taggart, who flies a P-3 airplane. He flies the airplane directly into dangerous storms.

3. Taggart works for the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration. He is trained in the study of weather.

4. Scientists aboard his P-3 collect information about hurricanes. The scientists collect this information using computers and other machines.

5. Pilots like Brian help weather forecasters predict where and when a storm will hit land. These pilots are called “hurricane hunters.”

Using Connecting Words

Another way you can combine sentences is by using connecting words called conjunctions. Conjunctions allow you to join closely related sentences and sentence parts.
Joining Subjects and Verbs

Sometimes two sentences are so closely related that they have the same subjects or verbs. If two sentences have the same subject, you can combine them by making a compound verb. If the sentences have the same verb, you can combine them by making a compound subject.

The conjunction you use is important. It tells your reader how the two subjects or verbs are related to one another.

- Use *and to join similar ideas.

  ORIGINAL The Sun Dance is an American Indian tradition. The Spirit Dance is an American Indian tradition.

  COMBINED The Sun Dance and the Spirit Dance are American Indian traditions. [compound subject]

- Use *but to join contrasting ideas.

  ORIGINAL Mike will cook the main course. Mike will buy the dessert.

  COMBINED Mike will cook the main course but buy the dessert. [compound verb]

- Use *or to show a choice between ideas.

  ORIGINAL Sara Tallchief may be elected president of the student council. Frances O’Connor may be elected president of the student council.

  COMBINED Sara Tallchief or Frances O’Connor may be elected president of the student council. [compound subject]

Exercise 7 Combining Sentences by Joining Subjects and Verbs

Use and, but, or or to combine each of the following pairs of sentences. If the sentences have the same verb, make one sentence with a compound subject. If the sentences have the same subject, make one sentence with a compound verb. The hints in parentheses will help you.

EXAMPLE 1. The climbing perch is a fish that can walk. The mudskipper is a fish that can walk. (Join with and.)

   1. The climbing perch and the mudskipper are fish that can walk.
1. Climbing fish have side fins that work much like feet. Mudskippers have side fins that work much like feet. (Join with and.)

2. Mudskippers walk on mud flats. Mudskippers even climb trees. (Join with and.)

3. Walking catfish are native to the East Indies. They have been seen in Florida. (Join with but.)

4. You might find walking catfish in warm, muddy water. You might find climbing perch in warm, muddy water. (Join with or.)

5. Mudskippers can hop more than a yard at a time. Mudskippers can catch insects as the insects fly. (Join with and.)

Joining Sentences

Sometimes you may want to combine two related sentences that express equally important ideas. You can connect the two sentences by using a comma and and, but, or or. The result is a compound sentence.

ORIGINAL

A group of frogs is called an army. A group of turtles is called a bale.

COMBINED

A group of frogs is called an army, and a group of turtles is called a bale.

Other times you may want to combine two sentences that are related in a special way. One sentence helps explain the other sentence by telling who, what, where, when, why, or how.
A good way to combine these sentences is to add a connecting word that shows the special relationship. In this kind of sentence combining, you create a complex sentence.

ORIGINAL  The drawbridge was pulled up. The enemy knights could not get into the castle.

COMBINED  When the drawbridge was pulled up, the enemy knights could not get into the castle.

ORIGINAL  Their leader had not counted on the princess. The princess knew how to operate the drawbridge.

COMBINED  Their leader had not counted on the princess, who knew how to operate the drawbridge.

Some connecting words that you can use to create complex sentences are given below. The word that you choose will depend on what you want your sentence to say.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>after</th>
<th>although</th>
<th>before</th>
<th>so that</th>
<th>when</th>
<th>who</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>because</td>
<td>if</td>
<td>since</td>
<td>that</td>
<td>whether</td>
<td>whom</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>how</td>
<td></td>
<td>that</td>
<td>which</td>
<td>whose</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td>while</td>
<td>why</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Exercise 8  Combining Complete Sentences

Following are five pairs of short, choppy sentences that need improving. Make each pair into one sentence by using the connecting word given in parentheses. Be sure to change the capitalization and the punctuation where necessary.

EXAMPLE  1. Planets move quickly. Stars move slowly. (but)
   1. Planets move quickly, but stars move slowly.

1. I would like to learn more about stars. They are interesting and beautiful. (because)
2. Planets do not give off light of their own. Stars do. (but)
3. Some stars are fainter than our sun. Some are many times brighter. (and)
4. Our sun will change. The change will be slow. (but)
5. We must continue to study the stars and planets. We will understand how we fit into our vast universe. (so that)
Revising a Paragraph by Combining Sentences

The following paragraph sounds choppy because it has too many short sentences. Use the methods you have learned in this section to combine some of the sentences. After you have revised the paragraph, read the choppy version and the new version aloud. You will notice how much better the paragraph sounds after you have revised it.

EXAMPLE Ancient cities provide information. The information is about how people lived.

Ancient cities provide information about how people lived.

Some of the world’s oldest cities have been found in Sumer. Sumer is the land between the Tigris and the Euphrates rivers. These early cities began as villages. The villages were made of farms. Eventually, Sumerian merchants began to trade with their neighbors in the mountains. The Sumerians sold the mountain people grains. The mountain people sold the Sumerians lumber, stone, and copper. Over five thousand years ago, Sumerians invented a system of writing. They invented their writing system to keep track of their trading. We know much about how ancient Sumerians lived. They left us many written records.

Writing Clear Sentences

The following paragraph is hard to read because it contains some sentence fragments and run-on sentences as well as choppy and stringy sentences. Identify two fragments, one run-on, and two stringy sentences. Then, revise those sentences using the methods you have learned. Also, combine sentences in at least two other places.
Sumo wrestling is an unusual sport, not only because of the unique and impressive appearance of the athletes. On average weigh 330 pounds and dress in traditional loincloths. Sumo is based in myth. It is also based in ritual. There is a myth that the Japanese people gained control of Japan when a god won a sumo match with another leader. From a rival group. The earliest sumo matches, dating back over 1500 years, were rituals performed to ensure a good harvest, and sumo later became a way to entertain royalty, and Japan then entered a time of military rule, and sumo wrestlers were used in fighting. When peace returned, sumo became entertainment again, it came to be known as the national sport of Japan. The ritual elements of early sumo remain today. At tournaments, each day opens with a colorful and exciting ritual performed by the wrestlers. The ritual is called dohyo-iri. Dohyo-iri means “entering the ring.” In this ceremony the wrestlers enter the ring, and then the highest ranked wrestler comes into the ring, and he claps and stomps on the ground in a very formal way, and when he is finished other highly ranked wrestlers repeat the clapping and stomping. The ceremony symbolically drives evil spirits away. The world got to see this ceremony when it was part of the 1998 Winter Olympics opening ceremony in Nagano, Japan.
What Is a Paragraph?

A paragraph is a group of related sentences. Often a paragraph is part of a longer piece of writing. For example, in a paper about a visit to a wildlife park, one paragraph might focus on the apes and monkeys. Other paragraphs in the paper could each focus on another type of animal. In this way, the paragraphs would give readers a clear idea of what they might experience at the wildlife park.

Why Use Paragraphs?

Has a friend ever sent you a letter made up of one enormous paragraph? Did you find it hard to follow his or her ideas? Breaking a long piece of writing into paragraphs is more than just a way to give your reader’s eyes a rest. Breaking writing into paragraphs is like providing a map for your reader. Paragraphs guide your reader through a piece of writing by showing where one idea (or setting, or speaker) ends and the next begins. Paragraphs also make it easier for your reader to understand the main point of a piece of writing.
What Are the Parts of a Paragraph?

Paragraphs are not all alike, but many of them have the same parts. Most paragraphs have a main idea, a topic sentence, and supporting sentences. In some paragraphs a clincher sentence ends the paragraph and ties the details together.

The Main Idea and Topic Sentence

All of the sentences in a paragraph usually point to a single main idea. This main idea is the main point, or central message, of the paragraph. Sometimes an author states the main idea in a topic sentence. When a paragraph has a topic sentence, it is often the first or second sentence of the paragraph. Sometimes, though, the topic sentence comes in the middle or at the end of the paragraph. In the following paragraph, the topic sentence comes at the end. Notice that all of the other sentences in this paragraph support, or point to, the main idea stated in the topic sentence.

He thought he had failed in his life’s work. Others agreed with him. He died poor and bitterly disliked. To us today, this rejection seems strange. He had helped to free five South American countries from Spanish rule. He had won major victories on the battlefield. He was anything but a failure. Over time, people began to accept the truth. Monuments were built to honor him. People started to celebrate his birthday. Today, Simón Bolívar is regarded as one of Latin America’s greatest heroes.

TIPS & TRICKS

Some paragraphs, such as those in narrative writing, will have a main idea without including a topic sentence. When reading a paragraph without a topic sentence, the reader must find the main idea by paying attention to the supporting details. A main idea that is not directly stated in a topic sentence is called an implied main idea. In your own writing, especially writing you do for school or on tests, you should generally tell readers the main idea of every paragraph with a topic sentence.

Exercise 1 Identifying Main Ideas and Topic Sentences

How good are you at identifying main ideas and topic sentences? Each of the following paragraphs has one main idea. Read each paragraph, and try to identify its main idea. If the
A paragraph has a topic sentence, tell what it is. If there is no topic sentence, state the main idea in your own words.

1. Unlike domestic cattle today, the wild buffalo on the plains were very hardy animals. They lived and thrived when other animals, especially cattle, might have died. When winter blizzards hit the plains and prairies, the buffalo did not drift with the storm like cattle. Instead, they faced into the storm, either standing still waiting for the storm to pass or slowly heading into it. In this way the storm passed faster for the buffalo than it did for cattle, who would drift with the storm and frequently die from the elements.

   David A. Dary, The Buffalo Book

2. It was a warm tropical evening in Puerto Rico. Roberto Clemente was playing with a group of boys on a muddy field in Barrio San Antón. It was nothing at all like the great stadium in San Juan. There were bumps and puddles, and the outfield was full of trees. The bat in Roberto’s hand was a thick stick cut from the branch of a guava tree. The bases were old coffee sacks. The ball was a tightly-knotted bunch of rags.

   Paul Robert Walker, Pride of Puerto Rico

3. Comets, asteroids, and meteors are the speed demons of the solar system. The average comet moves at 129,603 miles per hour; an asteroid’s average speed is 39,603 miles per hour. Using radar, astronomers have clocked one meteor whizzing along at 164,250 miles per hour.

   Time-Life Books, Forces of Nature
Supporting Sentences

Supporting sentences have details that support, explain, or prove the main idea. Supporting sentences may be facts, examples, or other kinds of details such as sensory details.

- Facts are statements that can be tested and proved true. They can be checked in reference books or through firsthand observations. They often include statistics, or information based on numbers.

- Examples are specific instances of an idea. T-shirts and sunglasses are examples of things you wear.

- Sensory details are details that you see, hear, taste, touch, or smell. They make descriptions come alive for the reader.

In the following paragraph, notice that the writer uses a sensory detail and three facts. The supporting sentences explain the main idea that is stated in the first sentence.

Your bones resist breaks in two ways. Not only are they as strong as steel, but they also have the ability to stretch like a rubber band. Bone is made of hard mineral crystals. These crystals give bone enough strength to withstand thousands of pounds of weight without breaking. Also in bone is a stretchy material, called fiber, which prevents bone from easily snapping when bent.

Exercise 2 Collecting Supporting Details

Perhaps you collect details about the life of your favorite movie actor or TV star. In the same way, you can gather details about your main idea for a paragraph. Choose one of the main ideas on the following page. Then, make a list of three or four details that support it. Try to use at least one fact, one example, and one sensory detail.
EXAMPLE
1. Main Idea: Stamp collecting is a useful hobby.
   1. Details: (1) Stamps can be educational.
      (2) One stamp series shows drawings of twenty different insects.
      (3) The drawings are brightly colored.

1. Skateboarding (or another sport) requires skill.
2. My room is always messy (or neat).
3. I cannot stand snakes (or spiders, worms, or storms).

The Clincher Sentence
Once you have written a topic sentence and supporting sentences that reinforce your main idea, you may want to give your paragraph a strong finish. One way to do this is to make the concluding (last) sentence of your paragraph a clincher sentence. A clincher sentence ties together the information in your supporting sentences and reminds your reader of the importance of your main idea. Notice how the last sentence of the following paragraph ties the whole paragraph together.

The shark’s survival, which goes back 400 million years, is threatened by only one serious predator—humans. Commercial and sport fishers take more than one million sharks a year from the Gulf of Mexico alone. Each year fewer than seventy-five shark attacks on people are reported, most of which are not deadly. Clearly, we are much more dangerous to sharks than they are to us.

“Introduction to Sharks,” Ocean of Know Web site

Not every paragraph needs a clincher sentence. However, clincher sentences are often a good way to make your main idea stick in the reader’s mind.

Exercise 3 Developing a Clincher Sentence
Write a clincher sentence for each of the following short paragraphs. Remember that a clincher sentence wraps up the information in a paragraph without just repeating it.
What Makes a Good Paragraph?

Coherence

A good paragraph needs more than a clear main idea and supporting details, facts, or examples. It also needs to have coherence. Coherence occurs when the details in a paragraph are arranged and connected in a way that makes sense to the reader. You can create coherence by following two steps. First, arrange your ideas in an order that helps your reader understand them. Then, connect your ideas with transitional words and phrases (like first and then in this paragraph), which will be discussed starting on page 287.

Organizing Ideas

To help get your ideas across clearly, arrange the information in your paragraphs in a sensible way. Here are two useful ways to order information.

- Spatial order presents details according to their location.
- Chronological order presents details in the order in which they happen.
Spatial Order  If you were describing the inside of a house, you probably would not include a description of the couch in a paragraph about the bathroom. You would not describe the kitchen sink in a paragraph about the bedroom, either. If you did, your reader would be confused about what can be found where.

Spatial order organizes details according to their location. When you describe something—a room or a sports arena, for example—you often use spatial order to give details as your eyes move from left to right or right to left. You might also arrange details from far away to close up or from close up to far away. Notice how the writer of the following paragraph uses spatial order to describe the view of Niagara Falls from above.

> ... At altitude you see it all at once. You see Lake Ontario on one side, Lake Erie on the other, and linking them the thirty-four-mile Niagara River. Then, coming down lower, you see the falls themselves—where the river, along a front almost a mile wide, plunges over a 167-foot cliff and flows off through a deep, narrow gorge seven miles long... . . .

Wolfgang Langewiesche, “The Spectacle of Niagara”
Exercise 4  Using Spatial Order to Develop Paragraphs

How would you describe a pond or creek, a city street, or the contents of a fish tank? Work in a group with one or two other students. Choose one of the subjects below, and list the details that describe it. Then, arrange the details in spatial order.

1. a grocery store
2. a bicycle
3. a park or building near your school
4. a painting or photograph you have seen
5. a local park or playing field

Chronological Order  What happens after Dorothy is blown by a tornado to the land of Oz? How do you build a model ship in a bottle? What causes a solar eclipse? When you answer these questions, you explain how the event or action happens over time. To explain how something happens, you use chronological, or time, order.

Chronological order helps you tell a story (what happens to Dorothy in the land of Oz) or explain a process (how to build a model ship in a bottle).

- Using chronological order to tell a story  Some stories are true, and some are made-up. The following paragraph is from a book of fiction.

Strangely, when Ramona’s heart was heavy, so were her feet. She trudged to the school bus, plodded through the halls at school, and clumped home from the bus after school. The house felt lonely when she let herself in, so she turned on the television set for company. She sat on the couch and stared at one of the senseless soap operas Mrs. Kemp watched. They were all about rich people—none of them looking like Howie’s Uncle Hobart—who accused other people of doing something terrible; Ramona didn’t understand exactly what, but it all was boring, boring, boring.

Beverly Cleary, Ramona Forever
Paragraphs that tell a story do not always have a main idea. However, as you see in the paragraph on the previous page, the events in the paragraph do follow one another. This makes the paragraph easy to understand.

• Using chronological order to explain a process  When your friend explains how to make a certain meal, he or she is explaining a process. The instructions for that process will be in step-by-step (chronological) order.

  Notice how the writer of the following paragraph uses chronological order. He explains, step by step, how to get ready to make a simple movie using clear film and markers.

  After you have assembled your materials you will need a place to work. A desk or drawing table that is well lighted is best. Tape down a sheet of white construction paper on top of the desk. Next, unwind some of the film from the reel and tape it down to the construction paper with clear tape.

  Stephen Mooser, Lights! Camera! Scream!

There are two other ways to organize ideas in paragraphs. One way is in order of importance. When you use order of importance, you arrange details from most important to least important or from least important to most important. For instance, if you were writing a paragraph about your summer vacation, you could begin with the least exciting detail and save the most exciting detail for the end of the paragraph. The other way to organize ideas is in logical order. When you use logical order, you arrange ideas into groups. For example, if you were writing about frogs, you could discuss their diet at the beginning of the paragraph and their life cycle at the end.

Exercise 5  Using Chronological Order to Develop Paragraphs

Telling a story can be fun. Explaining a process can be easy. In this exercise you will develop these skills.
1. Write a group story. Work as a whole class or in smaller groups. Begin with one of the following “starters” or with one of your own. Then, take turns adding a sentence to the story. Be sure the events of the story are in chronological order.

   a. Late one night, a Texas rancher named Ellison looked out across his pastures. He was amazed to see big, strange lights bouncing playfully across the land.

   b. Monika was exploring a cave last weekend when she discovered a small pile of very old bones. At first the bones were a mystery.

2. Choose one of the following processes. Then, list three or more steps needed to complete the process. List the steps in chronological order.

   a. how to introduce yourself to someone
   b. how to make a paper airplane
   c. how to prepare a healthful lunch

Words That Connect Ideas

Carefully arranged ideas help make a paragraph coherent. Sometimes it is easy to tell how ideas are related. In a story, for example, one event usually follows another. This order helps you understand what happens in the story.

Sometimes, though, the reader needs help to see how ideas are arranged. Special words help show how ideas are related. These words are called transitional words and phrases. They are connectors that tie one idea to another, one sentence to another, or one paragraph to another. The following chart lists some common transitional words and phrases.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Showing Similarities</th>
<th>also</th>
<th>another</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>in addition</td>
<td>too</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>and</td>
<td>like</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Showing Differences</th>
<th>although</th>
<th>however</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>but</td>
<td>instead</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Showing Causes and Effects</th>
<th>as a result</th>
<th>since</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>because</td>
<td>so</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

(continued)
The following paragraph is about Babe Didrikson Zaharias, a great athlete. In 1932, she was the entire winning track “team” for an insurance company in Dallas, Texas. Notice how the underlined transitional words connect the ideas.

Even as the teams entered the stadium, the loudspeakers were calling them for the parade onto the field. When the Illinois Women’s Athletic Club was called, twenty-two athletes marched forward. A second club fielded fifteen girls, another twelve. All in all there were more than 200 female athletes on the field. Then they called the team of the Employers’ Casualty Insurance Company of Dallas, Texas . . . . One lonely girl marched bravely down the field. The crowd roared.

Harry Gersh, Women Who Made America Great

If you have trouble connecting ideas with transitional words, your paragraph may lack unity. A paragraph has unity when all of its sentences work together to support the main idea. For example, a paragraph about your pet turtle might describe the markings on its shell, but not what your pet cat looks like. The information about your cat is not related to your main idea.
Exercise 6 Identifying Transitions

The transition words in the following paragraphs show how one idea is related to another. Identify the transitions in each of the paragraphs. Use the chart on pages 287–288 to help you.

1. Building an igloo calls for skill and experience. First, the builder locates a site in firmly packed snow. Next, while standing in the outlined igloo, the builder cuts the snow into blocks of different sizes. Large blocks are used for the bottom layer, and thinner blocks are used for the walls. After the blocks are cut, the builder trims the top edge of each block to help the walls slope inward. Finally, the blocks are stacked to create a dome.

2. A polar bear’s fur looks white at a glance, but a closer look reveals a different color. Each hair is a transparent tube. When the hairs are clear, the bear appears to be white. However, tiny green plants called algae can grow inside the hairs. As a result, the bear looks green.

Elaboration

A good paragraph elaborates (explains or illustrates) the supporting facts and details so that the reader has a clear picture of the main idea. To elaborate, illustrate your main idea by using more than one detail, fact, or example.

The following paragraph has a main idea and supporting details, but the writer has not elaborated on the idea.

The Great Pyramid at Giza, Egypt, is one of the Seven Wonders of the Ancient World. The pyramid is one of the most famous structures in the world. Built about 4,500 years ago as the tomb of King Khufu, the Great Pyramid is also one of the largest monuments to a single person.
Now, read the revised paragraph. Notice how the writer has elaborated on the main idea and details by including more information.

The Great Pyramid at Giza, Egypt, is one of the Seven Wonders of the Ancient World. The pyramid is one of the most famous structures in the world. In fact, it is visited by more than a million tourists each year. Many millions more recognize its familiar shape from postcards and photographs. Built about 4,500 years ago as the tomb of King Khufu, the Great Pyramid is also one of the largest monuments to a single person. At 450 feet, it is almost one and one-half times as tall as the Statue of Liberty and nearly three times taller than the Arc de Triomphe in Paris.

Exercise 7 Elaborating Details
The paragraph on the next page does not have enough elaboration. Add details, facts, or examples to improve the paragraph.
Most of us do not think about the importance of electricity until the power goes out. Many everyday activities require electricity. After sundown, our reliance on electric power increases. Can you imagine how different life must have been before we had electricity and appliances?

What Are the Types of Paragraphs?

There are four different types of paragraphs.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Types of Paragraphs</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Narrative</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>used to tell a story or recount an event</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Descriptive</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>used to describe a person, animal, scene, or object</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Expository</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>used to provide information, including facts, instructions, and definitions</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Persuasive</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>used to share opinions and convince others to agree with those opinions and sometimes take action</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Which type of paragraph you write depends on your purpose for writing. If you want to entertain your readers or express yourself, you may write narrative or descriptive paragraphs. If you want to inform your readers about something or explain something, you may write expository or narrative paragraphs. If your purpose is to influence or persuade your readers to agree with your opinion about an issue, you will probably write persuasive paragraphs.

Different types of paragraphs can be written about the same subject. Notice that each of the following paragraphs is about volunteer activities, but each represents a different type of paragraph.

TIPS & TRICKS

When elaborating, look closely at each supporting sentence. Ask yourself whether you can add any information to explain or illustrate what you say in each sentence.
Narrative Paragraphs

Narrative paragraphs tell a story or describe an event or sequence of events. In narrative paragraphs, details are usually arranged in chronological order. Short stories are examples of narrative writing. However, narrative writing is also found in newspaper articles and in history books—anywhere that a writer wants to recount events from beginning to end.

Joseph J. Gebhardt started reading for the blind around 1967. For years he had been playing guitar with a local band . . . and had bought a reel-to-reel recorder with the idea of immortalizing them. One night he heard an ad seeking readers for the blind and decided he’d had enough of being drowned out by . . . trombones. For a while he read Science magazine, but later he concentrated on Smithsonian, which he’s been reading ever since.

“Reading for the Blind,” Smithsonian

Descriptive Paragraphs

Descriptive paragraphs create a mental picture of a person, animal, scene, or object by describing the details. The following paragraph uses spatial order to describe the plan for a monument to be built in honor of volunteers.

Atop the monument will be a bald eagle with its thirty-foot wings outstretched, as if ready to take flight. At the base of the monument will be a nine-foot-tall, black granite monolith dedicated to all volunteers who have died during a volunteer activity. . . . Extending outward from the monument will be The Walls of Tribute. These walls, along with other Walls of Tribute located throughout the complex, will contain the names of volunteers who have given one thousand hours or five years of volunteer service.

“Side View of Complex,” Friends of Volunteers Web site
Expository Paragraphs

Expository paragraphs are used to explain subjects or ideas. Expository paragraphs can list facts or explain a process. Some expository paragraphs, like the one below, follow a cause-and-effect pattern. This paragraph explains the effects (or results) of a massive, volunteer cleanup.

In 1997, approximately 175,000 volunteers picked up at least three million pounds of garbage along the coasts of the United States. As a result, both people and sea animals can enjoy cleaner and safer environments. Glass bottles, lumber, and syringes are less of a threat to barefooted beachgoers. Fewer seabirds, fish, and crabs will die entangled in plastic can holders, fishing nets, and fishing line. People put trash in the oceans, but by volunteering their time to help clean up after themselves, people are also the solution to the problem.

Persuasive Paragraphs

Persuasive paragraphs express an opinion about an issue. An issue is a topic about which people might disagree. A writer uses supporting details, or reasons, in a persuasive paragraph to convince readers to agree with his or her opinion. Sometimes, the writer of a persuasive paragraph encourages readers to take action on a particular issue.

... Your community is really one of your best friends. It's only natural that you give something back as a way to say thanks. That could include raising money for a local charity, volunteering to clean (continued)
Identifying Types of Paragraphs

In a group with two or three students, look for examples of each of the four types of paragraphs: narrative, descriptive, expository, and persuasive. To find your paragraphs, look in magazines, newspapers, or books, or on Web sites. As a group, answer the following questions for each paragraph.

1. Which type of paragraph would you say this is? Why?
2. What was the writer’s purpose for writing each paragraph—to entertain, express, inform, or influence? Was the writer successful in achieving his or her purpose? Why or why not?

How Are Paragraphs Used in Longer Pieces of Writing?

Paragraphs can exist by themselves, or they can be grouped together as a longer piece of writing. To make a longer piece of writing complete from beginning to end, there are two types of paragraphs you should add to the body, or main part, of a piece. These are introductory paragraphs and concluding paragraphs.

An introductory paragraph is like an introduction between two people. It gives your ideas a chance to say “hello” to the reader. An introductory paragraph is a way to get the reader interested in—and ready for—your ideas.

At the opposite end of a longer piece of writing is the concluding paragraph. It says “goodbye” to the reader, leaving him or her with a clear idea of what your piece was about.

“Volunteering—it’s So Easy, a Kid Can Do It,”
GirlZone Web site

Reference Note
For more on identifying author’s purpose, see page 194.

Reference Note
For more on writing introductory and concluding paragraphs, see pages 755 and 756 in the Quick Reference Handbook.
Dividing a Longer Piece of Writing into Paragraphs

When you write a paper or article, you should divide it into paragraphs. There are two main reasons you should do this:

• to give your reader’s eyes a rest,
• to give your reader a chance to pause, and
• to show a change.

Writing nonstop without paragraph breaks is much like talking nonstop without taking a breath. If you talk without changing your tone of voice or without pausing now and then, people listening to you will have a hard time following what you are saying. Changes and breaks are as important to good writing as they are to clear speech.

To help make your reader aware of each idea in your composition, start a new paragraph when one of the following occurs:

• you need to express a new or different main idea
• you explain a different part of your subject or another step in the process
• you provide a different reason to support your opinion
• the time or location changes
• a different person or character speaks

Exercise 9 Dividing a Piece into Paragraphs

The following selection needs to be divided into separate paragraphs. Decide where to begin new paragraphs by watching for any of the changes noted above.

Some jobs are dangerous, and some jobs are a little scary. For a biospeleologist (bī’ō·spe’·le·ä’·jist)—a scientist who studies life underground—a day on the job can be both. The bugs and salamanders a biospeleologist collects may not be dangerous, but getting to them is. (continued)
Sometimes, these scientists lower themselves thousands of feet into rocky caverns that have never seen the light of day. Other times, they crawl through cold underground streams that are only inches from the rock top above them. Either way, these scientists are searching for blind scorpions; small, jumping bugs called springtails; and other creatures that live in total darkness. This job is not for people afraid of the dark or of bugs. It is a job, though, for people with a sense of adventure and an interest in finding out just how the world under our feet really works.

Review A  Writing a Narrative Paragraph

Narration can be used to tell true stories or made-up stories. Write a narrative paragraph in which you use chronological (time) order to organize the details. Before writing your paragraph, review the order of your details to make sure the order makes sense. Here are some ideas to get you started.

- Tell how you learned to do a new activity such as riding a bike, swimming, or using a computer.
- Retell a children’s story you remember.

Review B  Writing a Descriptive Paragraph

Write a descriptive paragraph. Remember to use details to give the reader a sense of how your subject looks, smells, feels, sounds, and tastes. Use spatial order to arrange your details. Here are some ideas for a topic.

- Describe a person or place that is important to you.
- Describe your favorite food.
Review C Writing an Expository Paragraph

You will probably use expository writing more often than narrative, descriptive, or persuasive writing. You will use it to answer test questions or to give instructions. Write an expository paragraph to explain what you know about a subject. Remember to support your main idea by using details, facts, and examples. Here are a few ideas for subjects.

- Explain how to do something simple, such as making a sandwich.
- Explain why you enjoy your favorite hobby or activity.

Review D Writing a Persuasive Paragraph

Simply asking for something does not always get you what you want. To be persuasive, sometimes you have to write about what you want. Write a persuasive paragraph. Remember to give your reader reasons to believe your ideas. Here are some ideas for topics.

- Share your opinion about a school or community issue. For example, you might propose a recycling center for paper and cans at your school, or you might suggest that your community build a new public pool.
- Ask a local business to contribute to a fund-raiser for your school club.
A. Identifying Sentences

If a word group is a sentence, add a capital letter at the beginning and punctuate the sentence with an appropriate end mark. If a word group is not a sentence, write sentence fragment.

EXAMPLES

1. followed the trail on the map
   1. sentence fragment

2. the López twins come from Nuevo Laredo, Mexico
   2. The López twins come from Nuevo Laredo, Mexico.

1. we read the postcards from our Asian pen pals
2. our school has a homework hot line
3. definitely mailed the invitations yesterday
4. Will you practice guitar before dinner
5. going to the Washington Monument

B. Identifying Simple Subjects and Simple Predicates

Identify the simple subject and the simple predicate in each of the following sentences.
EXAMPLES
1. Last year my family traveled to Mecca, Saudi Arabia.
   1. family—simple subject; traveled—simple predicate
2. The crowded corner market is having a sale.
   2. market—simple subject; is having—simple predicate
6. My grandmother plays mah-jongg with my friends and me every Saturday.
7. The farmers have plowed the fields and will plant potatoes.
8. At night you can rent roller skates for half price at the rink near my house.
10. On Saturday, Amy, Theo, and I walked through Chinatown and took pictures.
11. Many students in our class have volunteered for the charity softball game.
12. Where did you put Isabella’s fuzzy, green wool sweater?
13. Island of the Blue Dolphins by Scott O’Dell is one of my favorite books.
14. Beyond the large rocks at the far end of the beach is a small cave.
15. During the last week of vacation, my brother, sister and I hiked through the rain forest.

C. Punctuating and Classifying Sentences by Purpose
For each of the following sentences, add the appropriate end mark. Then, classify each sentence as declarative, interrogative, imperative, or exclamatory.

EXAMPLES
1. Have you read this poem by José Garcia Villa
   1. Have you read this poem by José Garcia Villa?—interrogative
2. We sampled a Cuban dish at the international fair.
   2. We sampled a Cuban dish at the international fair.—declarative
16. Please answer the phone
17. What a good time we had
18. Has anyone seen the cat
19. They sat on a bench and played checkers
20. Whose book is this
21. Hang that jacket in the hall closet
22. How we laughed
23. Water is composed of oxygen and hydrogen
24. Call this number in case of an emergency
25. Did you say to turn left here

Sentence or Sentence Fragment?

10a. A sentence is a word group that contains a subject and a verb and that expresses a complete thought.

A sentence begins with a capital letter and ends with a period, a question mark, or an exclamation point.

EXAMPLES

- Octavio Paz won a Nobel Prize in literature. [The subject is Octavio Paz, and the verb is won.]
- Stop. [The understood subject is you, and the verb is Stop.]
- Do you collect coins? [The subject is you, and the verb is Do collect.]
- I actually rode on an elephant! [The subject is I, and the verb is rode.]

A sentence fragment is a word group that looks like a sentence but either does not contain both a subject and a verb or does not express a complete thought.

EXAMPLES

- SENTENCE Visited an old Spanish mission in San Diego. [The subject is missing. Who visited the mission?]
- SENTENCE My family visited an old Spanish mission in San Diego.
- SENTENCE Alonzo's sisters and brothers. [The verb is missing. What did Alonzo's sisters and brothers do?]
- SENTENCE Alonzo's sisters and brothers planned a surprise party for his birthday.
As I walked to school yesterday. [This thought is not complete. What happened as I walked to school yesterday?]

As I walked to school yesterday, I saw Mr. Saunders walking his dog.

A word group that has a subject and a verb and that expresses a complete thought is called an independent clause. An independent clause can stand alone as a sentence. A word group that has a subject and a verb but does not express a complete thought (such as As I walked to school yesterday) is called a subordinate clause.

Identifying Sentences

Identify each of the following word groups as a sentence or a sentence fragment. If a word group is a sentence, rewrite the sentence, using a capital letter at the beginning and adding an end mark.

EXAMPLE

1. my aunt and uncle raise shar-pei dogs

1. sentence—My aunt and uncle raise shar-pei dogs.

1. my aunt, my uncle, and my cousins at their house in the country last weekend
2. after dinner, Aunt Marie told me about the history of the shar-pei breed
3. bred these dogs in China
4. just look at all that loose, wrinkled skin
5. protected them from injury during a fight
6. gentle and a lot of fun with children
7. playing catch with Queenie
8. the little balls of fur were Queenie’s new puppies
9. have you ever seen such a sight as these puppies
10. what a good time we had

Exercise 1

In speech, people often use sentence fragments. Such fragments usually are not confusing because the context and the speaker’s tone of voice and expressions help to complete the meaning. Professional writers, too, may use sentence fragments to create specific effects in their writing. However, in your writing at school, you should use complete sentences.

For more about independent and subordinate clauses, see page 387.

For more information on revising sentence fragments, see page 264.
Identifying and Revising Sentences and Sentence Fragments

Some of the following word groups are sentences, and others are sentence fragments. If a word group is a sentence, write sentence. If a word group is not a sentence, add words to make the word group a sentence.

EXAMPLE

1. A common custom worldwide.
   1. Weddings are a common custom worldwide.

1. Having been introduced to the guest of honor.
2. Hold your horses there, young fellow.
3. Dancing in the air around the garden.
4. It will be on your right.
5. Just how does a fire extinguisher work?
6. One of the only examples of this type of Aztec art in this area.
7. Three pennies, a quarter, a bus token, and four acorns.
8. He called Sunday night.
9. An instrument popular in Africa, the kalimba.
10. How we laughed at that movie!

Writing Complete Sentences

Some of the following word groups are sentences. If a word group is a sentence, rewrite it, adding a capital letter and end punctuation. If a word group is not a sentence, rewrite it, adding a subject or a verb, a capital letter, and end punctuation to make it a sentence.

EXAMPLE

1. wrote a play
   1. Our language arts class wrote a play.

1. sent us a postcard from the Philippines
2. it was cold at the skating rink
3. helped me with my science project
4. a surfer on a huge wave
5. was hungry at lunchtime
6. it is too late for a game of checkers
7. is that the American Falls or the Horseshoe Falls
8. the Cuban family next door
9. what time is your mom picking us up
10. the governor of my state
Subject and Predicate

Sentences consist of two basic parts: subjects and predicates.

The Subject

10b. The subject tells whom or what the sentence is about.

EXAMPLES  Lois Lenski wrote Strawberry Girl.

The tooth with a point is called a canine.

To find the subject, ask yourself who or what is doing something or about whom or what something is being said.

EXAMPLES  My best friend sits next to me in science class.

[Who sits? My best friend sits.]

Science class is very interesting this year. [What is interesting? Science class is.]

The Position of the Subject

The subject may come at the beginning, in the middle, or even at the end of a sentence.

EXAMPLES  After school, Theresa went to band practice.

Under our house was a tiny kitten.

Exercise 3  Identifying Subjects

Identify the subject in each of these sentences.

EXAMPLE  1. The final score was tied.

1. The final score

1. Many games use rackets or paddles.
2. Tennis can be an exhausting sport.
3. Badminton rackets don’t weigh very much.
4. Table-tennis paddles are covered with rubber.
5. Racquetball uses special rackets.
6. In Florida, citrus trees grow an important crop.
7. After three to five years, fruit grows on the new trees.
8. Does Florida grow all of the citrus fruit in the nation?
9. California also grows oranges and other citrus fruit.
10. From Texas comes the Star Ruby grapefruit.
Complete Subject and Simple Subject

The complete subject consists of all the words needed to tell whom or what the sentence is about. The simple subject is part of the complete subject.

10c. The simple subject is the main word or word group that tells whom or what the sentence is about.

EXAMPLES

The Korean market is closed today.

complete subject  The Korean market

simple subject  market

A brightly colored blue jay sat on the windowsill.

complete subject  A brightly colored blue jay

simple subject  blue jay

Sometimes the same word or words make up both the simple subject and the complete subject.

EXAMPLES

In the canyon, we saw hawks. [We is both the complete subject and the simple subject.]

Little Rascal is the story of a boy and his pet raccoon. [*The title Little Rascal is both the complete subject and the simple subject.*]

NOTE

In this book, the term subject generally refers to the simple subject unless otherwise indicated.

Exercise 4 Identifying Complete Subjects and Simple Subjects

Identify the complete subject of each of the following sentences. Then, underline the simple subject.

EXAMPLE

1. From the chimney came a thick cloud of smoke.

* 1. a thick cloud of smoke

1. Several tents were set up in the park.
2. Have you heard the new CD by Gloria Estefan?
4. Above the fort, the flag was still flying.
5. Beyond those distant mountains lies an ancient American Indian village.
6. Those newspaper reporters have been interviewing the mayor all morning.
7. On the shelf was a beautiful blue bowl.
8. According to folklore, Pecos Bill made the Grand Canyon.
9. The blue candles burned all night long.
10. In the drawer were some chopsticks.

The Predicate

10d. The predicate of a sentence tells something about the subject.

EXAMPLES

Lois Lenski wrote Strawberry Girl.

The tooth with a point is called a canine.

Exercise 5 Identifying Predicates

Identify the predicate in each of the following sentences.

EXAMPLE

1. Many people would like to have a robot.
   1. would like to have a robot

1. Robots are machines with “brains.”
2. The robot’s brain is a computer.
3. Not all robots look like humans.
4. Some robots look like toy cars.
5. One robot explored some of the surface of Mars.
6. Many companies use robots.
7. Cars of the future may be guided by robots.
8. Some household jobs can be done by robots.
9. A robot could clean your room.
10. You might like to have a robot to help with your daily chores.

The Position of the Predicate

The predicate usually comes after the subject. Sometimes, however, part or all of the predicate comes before the subject.

EXAMPLES

Quickly we learned the layout of the small Hopi village.

At the entrance to the science fair were maps of the exhibits.
Exercise 6 Identifying Predicates

Write each of the following sentences. Then, underline the predicate.

EXAMPLE

1. At noon we went to a Mexican restaurant.
   1. At noon we went to a Mexican restaurant.

1. Our family likes different kinds of food.
2. Last night Dad prepared spaghetti and a salad for supper.
3. Sometimes Mom makes chow mein.
4. With chow mein she serves egg rolls.
5. At the Greek bakery we buy fresh pita bread.
6. Tomorrow Erica will make German potato salad.
7. Lately, tacos have become my favorite food.
8. Carefully, I spoon grated lettuce and cheese into a tortilla.
9. After that come the other ingredients.
10. In the United States, people enjoy a wide variety of foods.

Exercise 7 Writing Predicates

Make a sentence out of each of the following words or word groups by adding a predicate to fill the blank or blanks.

EXAMPLE

1. ____ everyone ____
   1. With a shout of joy, everyone took a paddle and began to row.

   or

   As the waves crashed against the raft, everyone grabbed for the sides.

1. Foamy white water ____.
2. The hot summer air ____.
3. A strong current ____.
4. ____ the eyes of every person on board ____.
5. The lightweight paddles ____.
6. ____ dangerous rocks and swirls ____.
7. Quick action by everyone ____.
8. A sleek, blue rubber raft ____.
9. The man in the white helmet and blue life jacket ____.
10. ____ the people in this photograph ____.
Complete Predicate and Simple Predicate

The complete predicate consists of a verb and all the words that describe the verb and complete its meaning.

10e. The simple predicate, or verb, is the main word or word group in the complete predicate.

EXAMPLES
- The nurse lifted the patient carefully.
  - complete predicate: lifted the patient carefully
  - simple predicate (verb): lifted
- I saw a picture of a Siberian tiger.
  - complete predicate: saw a picture of a Siberian tiger
  - simple predicate (verb): saw

Exercise 8 Identifying Complete Predicates and Verbs

Identify the complete predicate of each of the following sentences. Then, underline the verb.

EXAMPLE
1. For several reasons, space travel fascinates me.
   1. For several reasons fascinates me

1. My class traveled by train to Houston, Texas.
2. In Houston my classmates and I visited the Lyndon B. Johnson Space Center.
3. The center displays moon rocks.
4. At the center, astronauts train for their flights.
5. In one room we saw several unusual computers.
6. On the way home, we stopped at the Astrodome for a tour.
7. The stadium covers nine-and-a-half acres of land.
8. Several teams play there.
9. Every year the Astrodome attracts thousands of tourists.
10. Actually, I had more fun at the space center.

The simple predicate may be a single verb or a verb phrase (a verb with one or more helping verbs).

EXAMPLES
- Yoshi went to Japan last summer.
  - [single verb]
- The park is located near a lake.
  - [verb phrase]
- We should have planned a picnic.
  - [verb phrase]
The words not and never and the contraction –n’t are not verbs. They are never part of a verb or verb phrase.

Example Kendra shouldn’t have added another hot pepper to the sauce.

Exercise 9 Identifying Complete Predicates and Verbs

Identify the complete predicate in each of the following sentences. Then, underline the verb.

Example 1. The Liberty Bell was made in England.
   1. was made in England

1. I am writing a report on the Liberty Bell.
2. The Pennsylvania Assembly ordered the Liberty Bell.
3. Thomas Lester had made the bell in London.
4. In 1752, the bell was cracked by its own clapper.
5. American patriots hid the bell from the British army.
6. The bell was not brought back to Philadelphia until 1778.
7. The Liberty Bell cracked again in 1835.
8. This bell has been rung on many historic occasions.
9. The bell is exhibited in the Liberty Bell Pavilion.
10. We will be seeing it on our field trip to Philadelphia.

Finding the Subject

Sometimes it may be difficult to find the subject of a sentence. In such cases, find the verb first. Then, ask yourself Who? or What? before the verb.

Examples Next semester you may take art or music. [The verb is may take. Who may take? You may take. You is the subject of the sentence.]

Can your sister drive us to the park? [The verb is Can drive. Who can drive? Sister can drive. Sister is the subject of the sentence.]

Please read the first chapter. [The verb is read. Who should read? You should read. You is the understood subject of the sentence.]
Compound Subject and Compound Verb

Compound Subject

10f. A compound subject consists of two or more subjects that are joined by a conjunction and that have the same verb.

The parts of a compound subject are most often connected by and or or.

EXAMPLES

- Minneapolis and St. Paul are called the “Twin Cities.” [The two parts of the compound subject have the same verb, are called.]
- Will Mrs. Jones or Ms. Lopez chaperone our field trip? [The two parts of the compound subject have the same verb, Will chaperone.]
- Flutes, clarinets, and oboes are all woodwind instruments. [The three parts of the compound subject have the same verb, are.]

Exercise 10 Identifying Compound Subjects

Identify the compound subjects in each of the following sentences.

EXAMPLE

1. October and June are my favorite months.
   1. October, June

1. Wild ducks and geese migrate south each year.
2. Stars and planets form a galaxy.
3. Someday dolphins and people may be able to communicate with each other.
4. Baseball and soccer are the two most popular sports at my sister’s school.
5. Eggs and flour are two ingredients in pancakes.
6. Every year bugs and rabbits raid our vegetable garden.
7. Pizza or ravioli will be served.
8. At a party, balloons or horns make the best noisemakers.
10. In the Tower of London are famous jewels and crowns.
Compound Verb

10g. A compound verb consists of two or more verbs that are joined by a conjunction and that have the same subject.

A connecting word such as and or but is used to join the parts of a compound verb.

EXAMPLES

- Ben overslept but caught his bus anyway.
- Conchita hums, sings, or listens to the radio all day.
- My father bought a Chinese wok and cooked vegetables in it.

Exercise 11 Identifying Compound Verbs

Identify the compound verbs in the following sentences.

EXAMPLE

1. I have proofread my paper and made a final copy.
   1. have proofread, made

2. Julie received good grades and made the honor roll.
3. Every week, our band practices together and writes songs.
4. Before supper I usually set the table or peel the vegetables.
5. Floyd asked for a watch but received a bike instead.
6. We gathered firewood and headed back to camp.
7. Last week everyone gave a speech or recited a poem.
8. The referee will call a rain delay or postpone the game.
9. I remembered the bread but forgot the milk.
10. The Greek restaurant has closed but will reopen soon.

Exercise 12 Writing Compound Subjects and Compound Verbs

Make sentences by adding compound subjects or compound verbs to fill in the blanks in the following word groups.

EXAMPLES

1. ____ are coming to the party.
   1. Fran and Terry are coming to the party.

2. At the mall, we ____.
   2. At the mall, we ate lunch and went to a movie.

1. ____ are beginning a stamp collection.
2. ____ were my favorite teachers last year.
3. The creature from outer space ____.
4. At the end of the play, the cast ____.
5. Last week ____ were interviewed on a talk show.
6. In the garage are ____.
7. During the storm, we ____.
8. At the front door were ____.
9. After school, my friends ____.
10. He ____ before the birthday party.

Review B  Identifying Subjects and Verbs

Identify the subjects and verbs in each of the following sentences.

EXAMPLE

1. In the history of African American music are many unforgettable names.
   1. names—subject; are—verb

1. You may recognize the man in the picture on this page.
2. Most people immediately think of his deep, raspy voice.
3. Ray Charles is called the father of soul music.
4. He lost his sight at the age of seven and became an orphan at fifteen.
5. However, misfortune and trouble did not stop Ray Charles.
6. His musical genius turned his troubles into songs.
7. Today, the songs of Ray Charles are heard all over the world.
8. Do his songs contain different musical styles?
9. Gospel, jazz, blues, and even pop are all part of his sound.
10. His special style and powerful performances have drawn fans to Ray Charles for nearly fifty years.

A sentence may have both a compound subject and a compound verb.

EXAMPLES

- Zina and I bought corn and fed the ducks.

- Carrots and celery are crunchy and satisfy your appetite.
Sometimes a sentence will contain more than one subject and verb, but neither the subject nor verb will be compound.

EXAMPLES

I like apples, but my sister prefers oranges.
[compound sentence]

In San Antonio, we toured the Alamo, while our friends visited the Riverwalk.
[complex sentence]

David wipes the table, and Cindy dries the dishes that Dad has washed.
[compound-complex sentence]

Exercise 13 Identifying Compound Subjects and Compound Verbs

Identify the compound subject and the compound verb in each of the following sentences.

EXAMPLE 1. Tina and Julia washed the dog and dried it.
   1. Tina, Julia—subject; washed, dried—verb

1. Alice and Reiko sang and played the piano.
2. Either Dwayne or I will find the coach and ask his advice.
3. Patrick and she read the same biography of Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., and reported on it.
4. Roses and lilacs look pretty and smell good.
5. The dentist or her assistant cleans and polishes my teeth.
6. In many traditional Japanese homes, doors or partitions are framed in wood, left open in the middle, and then covered with rice paper.
7. Larry and she washed the dishes but did not dry them.
8. The lamb and its mother had leapt the fence but were still inside the yard.
9. Fish, rays, turtles, and dolphins live in the Gulf of Mexico and often swim near the shore.
10. Did Uncle Ted or his children call or visit you on their way through town?
Review C  Identifying Subjects and Predicates

Identify the complete subject and the complete predicate in each of the following sentences. Then, underline the simple subject and the verb.

EXAMPLE
1. Reports and legends of huge apelike creatures fascinate many people.
   1. subject—Reports and legends of huge apelike creatures; predicate—fascinate many people

1. These creatures are known as Yeti in the Himalayas and as Rakshas in Katmandu.
2. American Indians of the Northwest call them Mammoth.
3. Sasquatch and Bigfoot are other common names for these mysterious creatures.
4. Since 1818, they have been seen and described by people in the United States and Canada.
5. According to most accounts, Bigfoot adults are very strong and large and smell very bad.
6. Their huge footprints have been measured and cast in plaster by eager searchers.
7. However, these reports and bits of evidence generally do not convince scientists.
8. Not one live Bigfoot has ever been captured by either scientists or the general public.
9. As a result, the Bigfoot is simply a fantasy to most people.
10. Still, in pockets of deep wilderness across the country might live whole families of these shy creatures.

Review D  Writing Sentences

Tell whether each of the following sentence parts can be used as a subject or a predicate. Then, use each sentence part in a sentence. Begin each sentence with a capital letter, and end it with the correct mark of punctuation. Use a variety of subjects and verbs in your sentences.

EXAMPLE
1. will drive us home
   1. predicate—Will your mother drive us home?

   1. my favorite book
   2. watched a good mystery
3. the flying saucer
4. the oldest house in town
5. prepares delicious Korean food
6. growled and bared its teeth
7. the shiny red car and the bicycle
8. caught a huge fish
9. can borrow your skates
10. the best tacos and enchiladas in town

Kinds of Sentences

Sentences may be classified according to purpose.

10h. A declarative sentence makes a statement and ends with a period.

EXAMPLES
- Our media center has several computers.
- Patrick Henry lived in Virginia.

10i. An imperative sentence gives a command or makes a request. Most imperative sentences end with a period. A strong command ends with an exclamation point.

EXAMPLES
- Please pass the potatoes. [request]
- Sit down. [command]
- Stop shouting! [strong command]

The subject of a command or a request is always you, even if the word you never appears in the sentence. In such cases, you is called the understood subject.

EXAMPLES
- [You] Please pass the potatoes.
- [You] Stop shouting!

10j. An interrogative sentence asks a question and ends with a question mark.

EXAMPLES
- Did the Apollo 13 spacecraft reach the moon?
- How old are you?
10k. An exclamatory sentence shows excitement or expresses strong feeling and ends with an exclamation point.

EXAMPLES

- What a difficult assignment that was!
- I got her autograph!

Exercise 14 Classifying Sentences by Purpose

Write each of the following sentences, and add an appropriate end mark. Identify the sentence as declarative, interrogative, imperative, or exclamatory.

EXAMPLE

1. What a funny show that was
   1. What a funny show that was!—exclamatory

1. Please help me find my umbrella.  1. imp.
2. How happy I am!  2. exc.
3. Have you and your sister been to the new video store on Congress Avenue?  3. int.
4. Go east for three blocks, and look for a yellow mailbox next to a red door.  4. imp.
5. My father and I are cleaning the attic together later this afternoon.  5. dec.
6. What a delicious salad this is!  6. exc.
7. During our last summer vacation, we toured the garment district in New York City.  7. dec.
9. My surprise visit last month pleased both my grandmother and Aunt Gabriela.  9. dec.
10. When is your next piano lesson?  10. int.

Review E Classifying Sentences by Purpose

For each of the sentences on the following page, add an appropriate end mark. Then, identify each sentence as declarative, imperative, interrogative, or exclamatory.

EXAMPLE

1. Have you ever seen the Grand Canyon
   1. Have you ever seen the Grand Canyon?—interrogative

STYLE TIP

Be careful not to overuse exclamation points in your writing. Save them for sentences that really do show strong emotion. When used too much, exclamation points lose their effect.

OVERUSED

For her birthday, Katy's parents threw her a bowling party! About twenty friends and family members attended, and we all had a great time! I had two strikes in one game!

IMPROVED

For her birthday, Katy's parents threw her a bowling party. About twenty friends and family members attended, and we all had a great time. I had two strikes in one game!
1. We enjoyed our vacation in the Southwest
2. Dad took these photographs when our family visited the Grand Canyon
3. Our guide spoke both Spanish and English
4. How pretty the sunset is
5. Don’t stand so close to the edge
6. Did you buy any turquoise-and-silver jewelry
7. It was quite chilly at night
8. What a great movie we saw about the canyon
9. Did you take the short hike or the long one
10. Look at us riding on mules in this canyon

STYLE TIP

In any kind of writing, correct end punctuation is important. However, it is especially important in written conversations. The punctuation helps a reader know how a speaker says something. A sentence can mean very different things when its end punctuation is changed. Try reading the following sentences aloud to hear the difference.

DECLARATIVE

He's my hero.

INTERROGATIVE

He’s my hero?

EXCLAMATORY

He’s my hero!
A. Identifying Sentences

For each of the following word groups that is a sentence, add a capital letter at the beginning and punctuate the sentence with an appropriate end mark. If a group is not a sentence, write sentence fragment.

1. burned brightly throughout the night
2. he studies computer programming after school
3. the band sounds so wonderful tonight
4. whenever the mountains are covered with fog
5. over the past two thousand years
6. be seated
7. behind us barked the dogs
8. just as I neared the castle’s drawbridge
9. should we sand the wood now
10. the artist carving the totem pole

B. Identifying the Complete Subject and the Complete Predicate

Write each of the following sentences. Then, underline the complete subject once and the complete predicate twice.

11. Black Beauty is a story about a horse.
12. Sometimes bats fly into our chimney.
13. A wonderful smell of baking bread came from the kitchen and filled the house.
14. The chief will speak to you now.
15. Milk and cheese can help you develop strong bones.
16. Two eagles and a hawk live near our house.
17. Adele peeled and ate the orange.
18. Several knights guarded the castle and drove off the dragon.
19. Under the lettuce was my tomato.
20. Will Ahmad and Nadim set the table before lunch?
C. Identifying Simple Subjects and Simple Predicates

For each of the following sentences, write the simple subject and the simple predicate.

21. The winner is Mr. Otis Kwan!
22. Suddenly, the clock stopped.
23. Many cactuses have grown in the garden.
24. Have you ever eaten yakitori?
25. Yancy and Rollo will meet us at the shopping mall.
26. When did they reach the summit of Mount Fairweather?
27. Yellow, orange, and red have always been my favorite colors.
28. Prince and Princess jumped the fence and barked at my brother’s friend.
29. The sports banquet will be held on April 4.
30. We bought milk and bread but forgot the eggs.

D. Punctuating and Classifying Sentences by Purpose

Write each sentence, adding an appropriate end mark. Then, classify each sentence as declarative, imperative, interrogative, or exclamatory.

31. Listen to them
32. What music they make
33. My name is Lucy
34. Tell me more about your trip to Romania
35. How long has Marlon played the zither
36. I will ask her to come over for dinner
37. Who is the star of the film
38. Stop it now
39. I’m so happy to see you
40. Which pair of shoes did you decide to buy
Writing Application

Using Sentence Variety

Sentences Classified by Purpose  As a special project, your social studies class is creating a comic book. Each class member will contribute a comic strip about a particular historical event or historical person. In your comic strip, include at least one of each of the four kinds of sentences—declarative, imperative, interrogative, and exclamatory.

Prewriting  First, jot down some ideas for the characters and story line of your comic strip. You may want to look through your social studies book for ideas. Then, plan the frames of your comic strip. Think about how you could include the four types of sentences in your characters’ dialogue. For example, what request or command could a character make?

Writing  Use your prewriting notes to help you make a draft of your comic strip. Use word balloons to add the dialogue to the pictures. As you write, you may decide to add details. Keep in mind that you will be able to add details in the pictures that go with the words.

Revising  Ask a friend to read your cartoon. Are your characters’ conversations clear? Can your friend follow the story line? If not, you may need to add, revise, or rearrange sentences.

Publishing  Check your comic strip for errors in grammar, spelling, and punctuation. Make sure that you have used all four kinds of sentences and that you have used periods, question marks, and exclamation points correctly for each kind of sentence. You and your classmates may want to photocopy all the comic strips and gather them in a folder for each member of the class.
CHAPTER

11

Parts of Speech Overview
Noun, Pronoun, Adjective

Diagnostic Preview

Identifying Nouns, Pronouns, and Adjectives

Identify each of the italicized words in the following sentences as a noun, a pronoun, or an adjective.

EXAMPLE

1. Her older brother has an important test today.
   1. brother—noun; important—adjective

1. The Romans built a huge system of roads, some of which are still used.
2. Last summer we visited Alaska, which is our largest state.
3. Which of the projects does that illustrate?
4. The Hawaiian dancers wore colorful costumes.
5. The bubbling volcano, inactive for years, is now a popular tourist attraction.
6. The campers enjoyed themselves as they watched the sun set behind the mountains.
7. “That notebook is mine,” Angela said.
8. They made a touchdown just before the final whistle.
10. The pen with the blue ink is hers.
The Noun

11a. A noun is a word or word group that is used to name a person, place, thing, or idea.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Persons</th>
<th>parents, Scott, teacher, Ms. Theresa Vargas, sister, linebackers, baby sitter</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Places</td>
<td>White House, states, Nairobi, school</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Things</td>
<td>rocket, desks, ocean, hamster, computer, Newbery Medal, Golden Gate Bridge</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ideas</td>
<td>danger, freedom, kindness, fears, dream</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Notice that some nouns are made up of more than one word. A compound noun is a single noun made up of two or more words used together. The compound noun may be written as one word, as a hyphenated word, or as two or more words.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>One Word</th>
<th>daydream, Iceland</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Hyphenated Word</td>
<td>self-esteem, sister-in-law</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Two Words</td>
<td>Rita Rodriguez, family room</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Exercise 1  Identifying Nouns

Identify the nouns in the following sentences.

EXAMPLE
1. Clara Barton was the founder of the American Red Cross.

   1. Clara Barton, founder, American Red Cross

1. Clara Barton was born in Massachusetts.
2. She was educated in a rural school and grew up with a love of books.
3. She began her career as a teacher.
4. During the Civil War, however, she distributed medicine and other supplies.
5. Later she helped find soldiers who were missing in action.
6. She organized the American Red Cross and was its president for many years.
7. She raised money for the Red Cross and worked with victims of floods and other disasters.
8. Her kindness touched the lives of countless men, women and children.
9. Her life has been an inspiration to many people who have followed in her footsteps.
10. What a remarkable career and legacy she left the people of the world!

Proper Nouns and Common Nouns
A proper noun names a particular person, place, thing, or idea and begins with a capital letter. A common noun names any one of a group of persons, places, things, or ideas. It is usually not capitalized.

Common Nouns
- woman
- teacher
- city
- country
- continent
- monument
- team
- book
- holiday
- religion
- language

Proper Nouns
- Aunt Josie
- Jaime Escalante
- Los Angeles
- Germany
- Asia
- Lincoln Memorial
- Karr Cougars
- Barrio Boy
- Chinese New Year
- Judaism
- Swahili

Exercise 2 Identifying Common and Proper Nouns
Identify the nouns in the following sentences, and label them common or proper.

EXAMPLE
1. The people of Japan celebrate many holidays.
   1. people—common; Japan—proper; holidays—common
1. The picture below is of the Snow Festival in Sapporo.
2. Many groups work together to build these giant sculptures of snow.
3. Do you recognize any of the statues or buildings?
4. Is that the Statue of Liberty made out of snow?

5. In the historic city of Kyoto each June, you can see a parade of spears.
6. A popular fair in Tokyo offers pickled radishes.
7. Many villages are colorfully decorated for the Feast of the Lanterns.
8. Toshiro said that his town enjoys the Star Festival every summer.
9. Several flowers, among them the iris and the lily, have their own special days.
10. The birthday of Buddha is observed in April.

Exercise 3 Substituting Proper Nouns for Common Nouns

In the sentences on the next page, substitute a proper noun for each italicized common noun. You may need to change or leave out some other words in each sentence. You may also make up proper names to use.
EXAMPLE 1. The principal awarded the student the prize for the best creative essay.
   1. Ms. Chen awarded Paula Perez the prize for the best creative essay.

1. The student is from a city.
2. Usually, my uncle looks through the newspaper after we finish dinner.
3. The child watched a movie.
4. A teacher asked a student to talk about growing up in Mexico.
5. My cousin read that book.
6. Surrounded by newspaper reporters, the mayor stood outside the building.
7. Does the girl go to this school?
8. That singer wrote the song.
9. My neighbor bought her husband a new car for his birthday last Saturday.
10. When he was a college student, the coach played for that team.
11. The painting is in a museum.
12. The officer directed us to the bridge.
13. My relatives, who are originally from a town, now live in a city.
14. The librarian asked my classmate to return the book as soon as possible.
15. That newspaper is published daily; this magazine is published weekly.
16. Ted read a poem for the teacher.
17. That state borders the ocean.
18. The owner of that store visited a country during a month.
19. A man flew to a city one day.
20. Last week the president talked about the history of our nation.

Exercise 4 Using Proper Nouns
Developers are planning to build a new shopping mall in your neighborhood. They are trying to find out what kinds of stores and other attractions the community would like at the mall. The developers have prepared the following survey.
Answer each question with a complete sentence. Underline each proper noun that you use.

EXAMPLE

1. When would you be most likely to go to the mall?
   1. I would be most likely to visit the mall on Saturdays, especially in August and November.

New Mall Questionnaire

1. What stores would you most like to see at the mall?
2. What would you be most likely to buy at the mall?
3. What types of movies would you prefer to see at the mall theater?
4. What restaurants would you like to have in the mall’s food court?
5. Would you go to the mall arcade? If so, what games would you play?
6. What brands of clothes do you prefer?
7. Would you purchase books or magazines at the mall? If so, what books or magazines interest you?
8. To what clubs, organizations, or associations do you belong?
9. What special or seasonal events would attract you to the mall?
10. At what nearby malls do you sometimes shop?

Review A Identifying and Classifying Nouns

Identify the nouns in the following sentences, and label them common or proper.

EXAMPLE

1. In 1989, President George Bush gave General Colin Powell a big job.
   1. 1989—common; President George Bush—proper; General Colin Powell—proper; job—common
1. He appointed Powell leader of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.
2. Powell became one of the top military officers in the United States.
3. In the photo here, he is shown talking with soldiers during the Persian Gulf War.
4. Do you think the troops were excited to meet the general?
5. Powell grew up in the Bronx, a neighborhood in New York City.
6. His parents came to the United States from Jamaica.
7. Powell graduated from the City College of New York.
8. There he joined the Reserve Officers’ Training Corps.
9. Did you know that Powell was awarded the Purple Heart during the Vietnam War?
10. In his speeches, he often encourages students to graduate from high school.

The Pronoun

11b. A pronoun is a word that is used in place of one or more nouns or pronouns.

In each of the following examples, an arrow is drawn from a pronoun to the noun or nouns it stands for in the sentence.

EXAMPLES

When Cindy Davis came to the bus stop, she was wearing a cast.

The trees and bushes are dry; they should be watered.

This stable is large. It has stalls for thirty horses.

The word or word group that a pronoun stands for is called its antecedent.

EXAMPLES

My aunt sold her car. [Aunt is the antecedent of her.]

Anthony, call your mother. [Anthony is the antecedent of your.]
Sometimes the antecedent is not stated because the reader can understand the meaning of the sentence without it.

EXAMPLES

Call your mother. [The antecedent of your is clearly the person to whom the sentence is directed.]

They beat us fair and square. [The antecedent of They is clearly the team that the speaker played against. The antecedent of us is clearly the team of which the speaker is a member.]

---

Exercise 5  Substituting Pronouns for Nouns

In each of the following sentences, replace the repeated nouns with pronouns.

EXAMPLE

1. Viviana set up Viviana’s game on the table.

   1. Viviana set up her game on the table.

1. The passengers on the departing ocean liner waved to the passengers’ friends on shore.
2. The test was so long that I almost didn’t finish the test.
3. Rachel’s neighbors asked Rachel to baby-sit.
4. Carlos said that Carlos had already cleaned Carlos’s room.
5. The directions were long, but the directions were clear.
6. Mom was born in Nigeria, and Mom speaks French, English, Spanish, and Italian.
7. Ask those police officers if the police officers know the way to Alhambra Avenue.
8. The twins saved the twins’ money; now, that new bicycle built for two is the twins’.
9. Did Warren’s aunt fix some tacos for Warren?
10. Our whole family spent the weekend at home, but our whole family had the best time ever.

---

Personal Pronouns

A personal pronoun refers to the one speaking (first person), the one spoken to (second person), or the one spoken about (third person). Personal pronouns have both singular and plural forms.

EXAMPLE

I am sure he told you about their plans.
HELP

Do not confuse the possessive pronoun its with the contraction it’s. The pronoun its means “belonging to it.” The contraction it’s means “it is” or “it has.” The apostrophe shows that letters have been left out.

Some other possessive pronouns that are often confused with contractions are their, meaning “belonging to them,” (confused with they’re, meaning “they are”) and your, meaning “belonging to you” (confused with you’re, meaning “you are”).

Reference Note

For more information about words that are often confused, see page 625.

---

Personal Pronouns

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th></th>
<th>Singular</th>
<th>Plural</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>First person</td>
<td>I, me, my, mine</td>
<td>we, us, our, ours</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Second person</td>
<td>you, your, yours</td>
<td>you, your, yours</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Third person</td>
<td>he, him, his, she, her, hers, it, its</td>
<td>they, them, their, theirs</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

The possessive pronouns—my, mine, our, ours, your, yours, her, hers, his, its, their, and theirs—are personal pronouns that are used to show ownership or possession.

EXAMPLES Nina stored her suitcase under her bed.

Is that paper yours or mine?

NOTE Some teachers prefer to call some possessive forms of pronouns (such as my, your, and our) adjectives. Follow your teacher’s instructions regarding possessive forms.

Reflexive and Intensive Pronouns

A reflexive pronoun refers to the subject and is necessary to the basic meaning of the sentence. An intensive pronoun emphasizes its antecedent and is unnecessary to the basic meaning of the sentence.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th></th>
<th>Reflexive and Intensive Pronouns</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>First person</td>
<td>myself, ourselves</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Second person</td>
<td>yourself, yourselves</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Third person</td>
<td>himself, herself, itself, themselves</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

REFLEXIVE

We enjoyed ourselves at the party.

She bought herself a new set of Spanish lesson tapes.

INTENSIVE

David himself bought a sandwich.

The award will be presented by the principal herself.
Exercise 6 Identifying Pronouns

Identify all of the pronouns in each of the following sentences.

EXAMPLE

1. I lent her my camera.
   1. I, her, my

1. The dentist asked me several questions before examining my teeth.
2. Dad asked the mechanics working on his car to call him about his bill.
3. Our cousins have decided they will visit Peru.
4. She asked herself where she could have put her book.
5. He washed the mats thoroughly and put them out in the sun to dry.
6. Here is a postcard from Egypt for you and me.
7. We helped ourselves to tacos and refried beans.
8. You gave us your support when we needed it.
9. He had to do his social studies homework before playing soccer with us.
10. I found the weak battery and replaced it myself.

Exercise 7 Identifying Types of Pronouns

In each of the following sentences, identify the italicized pronoun as personal, reflexive, or intensive.

EXAMPLE

1. Eric gave her a flower.
   1. personal

1. Darren himself did not know where the gifts were hidden.
2. Did Teri offer them directions to the community center?
3. Elena is a very good actress, and she always learns her lines very quickly.
4. Kara treated herself to a short nap after a long day.
5. Although it fell from the top branches of the elm tree, the chipmunk was not injured.
6. Have you told Dennis about the new sports complex?
7. Tracy and Ed carried the aquarium to the car themselves.
8. Brian and Erin just arrived home, so they have not started their homework assignment yet.
9. Rosalia congratulated herself on meeting her goal.
10. The dog made itself dizzy by chasing its own tail.
Demonstrative Pronouns

A demonstrative pronoun points out a specific person, place, thing, or idea.

Examples
- What is that?
- This is the uniform once worn by Satchel Paige.
- These are the shoes he used to wear.
- Are those really his autographs?

Note
- This, that, these, and those can also be used as adjectives. When these words are used to modify a noun or pronoun, they are called demonstrative adjectives.

Pronoun
- This is a delicious papaya. [This refers to papaya.]

Adjective
- This papaya is delicious. [This modifies papaya.]

Pronoun
- That is the stamp my cousin sent from Sweden. [That refers to stamp.]

Adjective
- That stamp was the first in my collection. [That modifies stamp.]

Indefinite Pronouns

An indefinite pronoun refers to a person, a place, a thing, or an idea that may or may not be specifically named.

Common Indefinite Pronouns

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>all</th>
<th>each</th>
<th>more</th>
<th>one</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>any</td>
<td>either</td>
<td>much</td>
<td>other</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>anybody</td>
<td>everybody</td>
<td>neither</td>
<td>several</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>anyone</td>
<td>everyone</td>
<td>nobody</td>
<td>some</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>anything</td>
<td>few</td>
<td>none</td>
<td>somebody</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>both</td>
<td>many</td>
<td>no one</td>
<td>something</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
EXAMPLES  Everyone in the class was invited to the party.
None of the boys knew much about camping.

NOTE  Most words that can be used as indefinite pronouns can also be used as adjectives.

PRONOUN   Some are bored by this movie.
ADJECTIVE  Some people are bored by this movie.

Exercise 8  Identifying Pronouns
Identify the italicized pronoun in each of the following sentences as indefinite or demonstrative.

EXAMPLE  1. Someone has been sitting in my chair.
          1. indefinite

1. Are you asking anyone to the dance this weekend?
2. This is my jacket; that one must be yours.
3. Something is different about your hair.
4. That was the funniest thing I have ever seen a kitten do!
5. This is good, but Chrissy’s report is better.
6. The armadillo paused at the puddle and drank some of the water.
7. Are those the socks you are wearing with those shoes?
8. We have to choose between these and the ones we looked at yesterday.
9. Linda did more sit-ups than several who tried before her.
10. Nobody knows the answer to that.

Review B  Identifying Pronouns
Identify the pronoun or pronouns in each of the following sentences.

EXAMPLE  1. Everyone in my class likes going on field trips.
          1. Everyone; my

1. Last week, we really enjoyed ourselves at the National Museum of African Art.
2. It has been part of the Smithsonian Institution in Washington, D.C., since 1979.
3. In 1987, the museum’s collection was moved to its present underground facility.

4. Our teacher, Ms. Martinez, told us about the museum before we went there.

5. She said the entrance is made of pink granite.

6. I was surprised by the six domes on top.

7. Everyone had at least one question to ask our museum guide.

8. We enjoyed hearing her lively explanations of the artwork.

9. This is a photograph of one of my favorite objects at the museum.

10. Do you like it?

Interrogative Pronouns

An interrogative pronoun introduces a question.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Interrogative Pronouns</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>what</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>which</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>who</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>whom</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>whose</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

EXAMPLES

What is the first event in the contest?

Who is going to represent our team?

To whom is the e-mail addressed?

Which of the books are you reading?

Whose is the car in the driveway?
Relative Pronouns

A relative pronoun introduces a subordinate clause.

EXAMPLES

Harry S. Truman, who became president when Franklin D. Roosevelt died, surprised many people with his victory over Thomas Dewey in 1948.

Robins are among the birds that migrate south for the winter.

Exercise 9 Identifying Relative and Interrogative Pronouns

Identify the italicized pronouns in each of the following sentences as relative or interrogative.

EXAMPLE

1. Which of those snow sculptures do you think will win the prize?
   1. interrogative

1. The only student that could complete the obstacle course was Sophia.
2. What was the name of the volcano that erupted in Washington?
3. What was causing that sound outside your room at night?
4. “Who left all of those markers on the floor yesterday?” asked Ms. Jackson.
5. Lilacs, which are known throughout the world for their fragrant flowers, grow best in northern climates.
6. The new teacher, whom we have not yet met, will start Monday.
7. Which of you remembers the name of the author of “The Celebrated Jumping Frog of Calaveras County”?
8. Whose turn is it to take out the trash?
9. The light bulb, which had been flickering for a few days, finally burned out.
10. To whom did you lend your textbook?
The Adjective

11c. An adjective is a word that is used to modify a noun or a pronoun.

To modify a word means to describe the word or to make its meaning more definite. An adjective modifies a noun or pronoun by telling what kind, which one, how many, or how much.

Adjectives usually come before the words they modify. Sometimes, however, an adjective comes after the word it modifies.

EXAMPLES

- The dog is gentle. [The predicate adjective gentle modifies dog.]
- The sea, blue and sparkling, stretched out before us invitingly. [The adjectives blue and sparkling modify the noun sea.]

NOTE

The adjectives a, an, and the are called articles.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>What Kind?</th>
<th>Which One or Ones?</th>
<th>How Many or How Much?</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>gentle</td>
<td>dog</td>
<td>sixth grade</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Irish</td>
<td>town</td>
<td>these books</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>scary</td>
<td>movie</td>
<td>other people</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>purple</td>
<td>shoes</td>
<td>any CD</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Reference Note

For information on using a and an, see page 520.
6. Suddenly, several stars came out.
7. I watched until the entire sky glowed with bright stars.
8. I was lonely and happy at the same time.
9. I finally became sleepy and longed for my warm bed.
10. Soon I went indoors and fell into a deep sleep.

Exercise 11 Identifying Adjectives and the Words They Modify

Identify the adjectives and the words they modify in the following sentences. Do not include a, an, or the.

EXAMPLE
1. It costs five dollars to go to that movie.
   1. five—dollars; that—movie

1. I have a free ticket for the last game.
2. We ate spicy crawfish, and they were delicious.
3. The new neighbor is helpful and nice.
4. The bear, angry and hungry, surprised the campers.
5. Many students compete in the regional events.
6. Will country musicians play at the county fair?
7. Despite the long delay, we remained cheerful.
8. A shiny coin stared up at me from the icy sidewalk.
9. Take one booklet and pass the rest to the next row.
10. A few colorful birds perched in the tall, green trees on the bank of the river.

Exercise 12 Writing Adjectives for a Story

The following story is about a cave exploration. Copy the sentences, adding an appropriate adjective for each blank. Underline the adjectives you add.

EXAMPLE
1. Exploring caves is on days.
   1. Exploring caves is fun on hot days.

1. Have you ever been in a cave like the one shown at right?
2. Would you say it looks and ?
3. My father and I explored this cave once.
4. It was but , too.
5. We found some rock formations.
6. We also heard sounds.
7. My father took some ____ photographs.
8. We looked up and saw ____ bats flying above our heads.
9. After exploring for about ____ hours, we were ready to see the sky again.
10. Spelunking, as cave exploring is called, can be a very ____ experience, if you have a ____ guide.

Proper Adjectives
A proper adjective is formed from a proper noun and begins with a capital letter.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Proper Nouns</th>
<th>Proper Adjectives</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Japan</td>
<td>Japanese</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Easter</td>
<td>Easter Sunday</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Queen Victoria</td>
<td>Victorian drama</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sioux</td>
<td>Sioux customs</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Exercise 13 Identifying Adjectives
Identify all of the adjectives in the following sentences. Then, underline each proper adjective. Do not include the articles a, an, or the.

EXAMPLE
1. The Navajo weaver made a blanket on a wooden loom.
   1. Navajo, wooden

1. Music can express sad or happy feelings.
2. The quartet sang several Irish songs.
3. The gold watch with the fancy chain was made by a famous Swiss watchmaker.
4. She is a Balinese dancer.
5. On vacation, Mom enjoys long, quiet breakfasts.
6. Many Australian people are of British origin.
7. The Egyptian mummies are on display on the first floor.
8. We are proud of Joshua.
9. The movie is based on a popular Russian novel.
10. In Canadian football, a team has twelve players on the field at one time.
Exercise 14  Writing Proper Adjectives

Change the following proper nouns into proper adjectives. Then, use each proper adjective in a sentence.

EXAMPLE  1. France
   1. French—We bought French bread at the bakery.

1. England  6. Thanksgiving
2. Inca  7. Shakespeare
3. Hinduism  8. Korea

Demonstrative Adjectives

This, that, these, and those can be used both as adjectives and as pronouns. When they modify nouns or pronouns, they are called demonstrative adjectives. When they are used alone, they are called demonstrative pronouns.

ADJECTIVE  What are these skates doing in the living room?
PRONOUN  What are these doing in the living room?

ADJECTIVE  I prefer that brand of frozen yogurt.
PRONOUN  I prefer that.

Exercise 15  Identifying Demonstrative Pronouns and Demonstrative Adjectives

In each of the following sentences, identify the italicized word as a demonstrative pronoun or a demonstrative adjective.

EXAMPLE  1. Who gave you those beautiful flowers?
   1. demonstrative adjective

1. That is the strangest hot-air balloon I have ever seen!
2. Will those squirrels find enough to eat during the winter?
3. My dog, Manda, has been chewing on this piece of rawhide for three weeks.
4. These are the only shoes I can find that will fit you.
5. According to the guidebook, those are the largest trees in North America.
6. Is that your final offer?
7. The geese always return to these same lakes.
8. What do you plan to do with that lump of clay?
9. I’m afraid she’s gone too far this time.
10. Can this be the same person I knew back in third grade?

Review C  Identifying Adjectives

Identify the adjectives in the following sentences. Do not include a, an, or the.

EXAMPLE

1. I enjoy visiting the large railroad museum in our city.

1. large, railroad

1. Museums can be interesting.
2. Large cities have different kinds of museums.
3. Some museums display sculpture and paintings.
4. These museums may focus on one special kind of art.
5. For example, they might specialize in Chinese art or Mexican art.
6. Other museums feature birds, sea creatures, dinosaurs, and other animals.
7. A curator holds an important job in a museum.
8. A curator needs to know many facts about a particular display.
9. Some valuable objects must be displayed in a stable environment.
10. Some people prefer displays of modern art, while others enjoy exhibits of folk art.

Review D  Identifying Nouns, Pronouns, and Adjectives

Identify all of the nouns, pronouns, and adjectives in each of the following sentences. Do not include a, an, or the.

EXAMPLE

1. I think models make a great hobby.

1. I—pronoun; models—noun; great—adjective; hobby—noun

1. Do you have a favorite hobby?
2. Models are enjoyable and educational.
3. They require little space.
4. I keep mine on a bookshelf my dad and I built ourselves.
5. Models are packaged in kits.
6. My favorite models are historic ships and antique planes.
7. On my last birthday, my parents gave me two model kits of biplanes.
8. They came with directions in several languages.
9. Many of the tiny parts are designed for an exact fit.
10. Do you think the bright decals add a realistic look?

Review E Identifying Nouns, Pronouns, and Adjectives

Identify all of the nouns, pronouns, and adjectives in each of the following sentences. Do not include a, an, or the.

EXAMPLE

1. Pueblos are practical housing for people in hot, dry regions.
   1. Pueblos—noun; practical—adjective; housing—noun; people—noun; hot—adjective; dry—adjective; regions—noun

1. The brown building in the photograph below contains several individual homes.
2. Pueblo is a Spanish word for a structure like this and for a town.
3. This building is located at the Taos Pueblo in New Mexico.
4. Can you tell how pueblos are made?
5. They are built of adobe.
6. People make adobe by mixing mud with grass or straw.
7. They shape the mixture into bricks and let them bake in the sun.
8. Buildings made with this material stay cool during the summer months.
9. Anyone on a visit to the Southwest can find other pueblos like this one.
10. Old pueblos built by the Hopi and the Zuni fascinate me.

Review F Writing Sentences Using Nouns, Pronouns, and Adjectives

Write ten original sentences using the parts of speech given below. In each sentence, underline the word that is the listed part of speech.

EXAMPLE 1. an adjective that comes after the word it describes
   1. Our guide was very helpful.

1. a proper noun
2. a possessive pronoun
3. an adjective that tells how many
4. a reflexive pronoun
5. a proper adjective
6. an article
7. a third-person pronoun
8. a demonstrative adjective
9. an indefinite pronoun
10. a noun that names an idea
Identifying Verbs, Adverbs, Prepositions, Conjunctions, and Interjections

Identify each of the italicized words or word groups in the following sentences as a verb, an adverb, a preposition, a conjunction, or an interjection.

EXAMPLE 1. A tornado is a terrible and violent storm.
   1. is—verb; and—conjunction

   1. The tornado struck our neighborhood without warning.
   2. We do not have a basement in our house.
   3. I grabbed my dog Muffin and ran into the bathroom, the safest room in the house.
   4. Muffin and I were tightly wedged between the sink and the bathtub.
   5. Either the house was shaking or I was, and the air became very cold.
   6. Suddenly, a siren went off.
7. A tornado had been sighted right in the area.
8. Then everything suddenly grew calm—it seemed almost too calm.
9. I was ready for the worst, but the tornado did not touch my house or any other home in the area.
10. Well, I was frightened, but I was not hurt.

The Verb

12a. A verb is a word that expresses action or a state of being.

EXAMPLES  We went to Boston last April.

Is a firefly a kind of beetle?

Every complete sentence has a verb. The verb says something about the subject.

In this book, verbs are classified in three ways — (1) as main or helping verbs, (2) as action or linking verbs, and (3) as transitive or intransitive verbs.

Main Verbs and Helping Verbs

In many sentences, a single word is all that is needed to express the action or the state of being.

EXAMPLES  The dog barked all night.

Brett throws the ball a long way.

Mr. Rivera is the new English teacher.

In other sentences, the verb consists of a main verb and one or more helping verbs.

A helping verb (also called an auxiliary verb) helps the main verb to express action or a state of being.

EXAMPLES  can speak will learn

should have been fed
Together, the main verb and its helping verb or verbs are called a verb phrase.

EXAMPLES
- Many students can speak Spanish.
- I will be learning all the state capitals tonight.
- The dog should have been fed by now.

Commonly Used Helping Verbs

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>am</th>
<th>being</th>
<th>do</th>
<th>have</th>
<th>must</th>
<th>were</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>are</td>
<td>can</td>
<td>does</td>
<td>is</td>
<td>shall</td>
<td>will</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>be</td>
<td>could</td>
<td>had</td>
<td>may</td>
<td>should</td>
<td>would</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>been</td>
<td>did</td>
<td>has</td>
<td>might</td>
<td>was</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

NOTE
Some words can be used as both helping verbs and main verbs.

HELPING VERB I do wash the dishes.

MAIN VERB I will do the dishes.

Sometimes a verb phrase is interrupted by another part of speech.

EXAMPLES
- Suzanne should not call so late at night. [*The verb phrase should call is interrupted by the adverb not.]
- The scientists didn’t think the asteroid would hit the earth. [*The verb phrase did think is interrupted by –*n’t, the contraction for not.]
- Did you watch Shania Twain’s new video? [*The verb phrase Did watch is interrupted by the subject you.]

Exercise 1: Identifying Verb Phrases and Helping Verbs

Identify the verb phrase in each of the following sentences. Then, underline the helping verb or verbs.

EXAMPLE
1. We are going to Arizona this summer.
   1. are going

1. The Petrified Forest has long attracted many tourists.
2. Its spectacular beauty has captured their imaginations.
3. Visitors can see the Painted Desert at the same time.
4. The colors of the desert do not remain the same for long.
5. Specimens of petrified wood are exhibited at the tourist information center.
6. Have you ever seen a piece of petrified wood?
7. A guide will gladly explain the process of petrification.
8. Visitors can purchase the fossilized wood as a souvenir.
9. Tours of the Petrified Forest are not recommended for amateur hikers.
10. Hikes must be arranged with park rangers.

Exercise 2 Using Verb Phrases in Original Sentences

Use each of the following word groups as the subject of a sentence with a verb phrase. Make some of your sentences questions. Underline each helping verb and the main verb in each sentence.

EXAMPLE 1. your neighbor's dog

1. Can your neighbor's dog do tricks?

1. my bicycle
2. the astronauts
3. a tiny kitten
4. the hard assignment
5. a famous singer
6. some strange footprints
7. my grandmother
8. the subway
9. a funny costume
10. the refreshments
11. the Los Angeles Dodgers
12. his favorite movie
13. the bird watchers’ club
14. the new computer chip
15. Queen Elizabeth
16. her school picture
17. today’s newspaper
18. a slice of bread
19. the pencil sharpener
20. my calendar

Review A Identifying Verbs

Identify the verbs in each of the following sentences. Be sure to include helping verbs.

EXAMPLE 1. Fairy tales are sometimes called folk tales.

1. are called

1. Long ago, many people could not read.
2. Instead, they would memorize stories.
3. Then they would tell the stories to their family members and friends.
4. In this way, the people, or folk, passed the tales on from generation to generation.
5. Finally, some people wrote the collected stories.
6. Two German brothers, Jakob and Wilhelm Grimm, published a famous collection of German folk tales.
7. The brothers had heard many of the tales from their older relatives.
8. Their collection of stories became extremely popular all over the world.
9. “Sleeping Beauty,” “Cinderella,” and “Rumpelstiltskin” were all preserved by the brothers Grimm.
10. In your library, you can probably find these tales and many others, too.

Action Verbs

An action verb expresses either physical or mental activity.

PHYSICAL ACTIVITY I have used a computer in math class.

Please cook dinner, Jerome.

MENTAL ACTIVITY Fran understands the science assignment better than anyone else does.

The magician is thinking of a number.

Exercise 3 Identifying Action Verbs

Identify the action verb in each of the following sentences.

EXAMPLE 1. The Maricopa people live in Arizona.

1. live

1. The Maricopa make unusual pottery.
2. For this pottery they use two kinds of clay.
3. One kind of clay forms the bowl or platter itself.
4. The other kind of clay colors the pottery.
5. First, the potters mold the clay by hand.
6. Then, they shape it into beautiful bowls and vases.
7. With the second type of clay, the potters create designs.
8. They often etch designs on the pottery with a toothpick.
9. Each family of potters has its own special designs.
10. These designs preserve Maricopa traditions from generation to generation.

Linking Verbs

A linking verb connects, or links, the subject to a word or word group that identifies or describes the subject.

EXAMPLES

Sandra Cisneros is a writer. [The verb is connects writer with the subject Sandra Cisneros.]

The firefighters had appeared victorious. [The verb phrase had appeared connects victorious with the subject firefighters.]

The new superintendent was she. [The verb was connects she with the subject superintendent.]

Some verbs may be either action verbs or linking verbs, depending on how they are used.

ACTION

They sounded the bell for a fire drill.

LINKING

Mom sounded happy about her new job. [The verb sounded links happy with the subject Mom.]
The judge will look at my science project.

Ann will look funny in her gorilla costume. [The verb phrase will look links funny with the subject Ann.]

Identifying Linking Verbs

EXAMPLE

1. Peanut soup made from fresh roasted peanuts tastes good.
   1. tastes

1. Peanuts remain an important crop around the world.
2. The peanut, which is high in protein, is native to South America.
3. Peanuts grow ripe underground.
4. The seeds are the edible part of the plant.
5. The peanut has become an important ingredient in more than three hundred common products, such as wood stains, shampoo, printer’s ink, and soap.
6. Of course, roasting peanuts smell wonderful.
7. Peanut butter was the invention of a St. Louis doctor in 1890.
8. Before then, thanks to George Washington Carver, the peanut had become one of the major crops of the South.
9. Carver, a scientist who experimented with peanuts and other plants, had been a slave.
10. It may seem strange, but Carver once prepared an entire dinner out of peanuts.

Identifying Action Verbs and Linking Verbs

EXAMPLES

1. One of the most successful business leaders in the United States is John Johnson.
   1. is — linking verb

2. Johnson publishes many popular magazines.
   2. publishes — action verb

Remember to include helping verbs in your answers to Exercise 5.
1. The photograph at right shows John Johnson as a success.
2. Johnson’s life has not always been easy.
3. The small Arkansas town of his childhood had no high school.
4. Therefore, Johnson’s mother moved to Chicago.
5. In Chicago, Johnson attended high school with classmates Redd Foxx and Nat “King” Cole.
6. During the Great Depression of the 1930s, Johnson’s family grew very poor.
7. However, Johnson studied hard.
8. He became an honor student, the class president, and the editor of the high school newspaper.
9. Johnson started his first magazine with a loan.
10. Now he is the owner of a group of companies worth $200 million per year.

Transitive and Intransitive Verbs

A transitive verb is a verb that expresses an action directed toward a person, place, thing, or idea. With transitive verbs, the action passes from the doer—the subject—to the receiver of the action. Words that receive the action of a transitive verb are called objects.

EXAMPLES  Tamisha entertained the child. [The object child receives the action of the verb entertained.]
Felipe visited San Juan. [The object San Juan receives the action of the verb visited.]

An intransitive verb tells something about the subject or expresses action without the action passing to a receiver, or object.

EXAMPLES  The children smiled.
The horses galloped across the prairie.
I am here.
Not everything that follows a verb is an object. Many words or word groups that come after the verb give more information without receiving the action of the verb.

EXAMPLES

- Tameka writes poetry. [The object poetry receives the action of the transitive verb writes.]
- Tameka writes daily. [The word daily tells when she performs the action of the intransitive verb writes, but daily does not receive the action and is not an object.]
- Tameka writes in the morning. [The word group in the morning tells when she performs the action of the verb writes, but in the morning does not receive the action and is not an object.]

Some action verbs may be either transitive or intransitive, depending on how they are used in a sentence.

EXAMPLES

- My cousin Julio plays baseball on a Caribbean League team. [transitive]
- My cousin Julio plays every week. [intransitive]
- Kanani studies Chinese each day after school. [transitive]
- Kanani studies hard. [intransitive]

NOTE Linking verbs are intransitive.

EXAMPLES

- This soup tastes too salty. [The linking verb tastes does not express any action for an object to receive. When used as a linking verb, tastes is intransitive.]
- Does the box seem heavier than it should be? [The linking verb Does seem does not express any action for an object to receive. Does seem is intransitive.]

Exercise 6 Identifying Transitive and Intransitive Verbs

For each of the following sentences, identify the italicized verb as transitive or intransitive.
EXAMPLE
1. Computers affect our lives every day.
   1. transitive

1. Computers make calculations incredibly quickly.
2. They perform many tasks that people often find boring and difficult.
3. Many businesses benefit from these machines.
4. Home computers work in similar ways.
5. They do word processing, a very useful operation for writers.
6. They also run programs for thousands of challenging games.
7. Handy pocket computers fit easily into a purse, bag, or backpack.
8. My mother bought a tiny computer not much larger than a credit card.
9. The information in its memory appears on the screen at the touch of a button.
10. Addresses, phone numbers, notes, and other information on the screen help my mother with her work.

Exercise 7 Using Transitive and Intransitive Verbs

Write an appropriate verb for each of the following sentences. Then, identify the verb as transitive or intransitive.

EXAMPLE
1. He ____ my older brother’s best friend.
   1. is—intransitive
   or knows—transitive

1. Aunt Teresa ____ us about some of the traditions of the Cherokee.
2. Our experiment with plants and photosynthesis ____.
3. Billy and I ____ green beans and carrots.
4. By noon, the hot sun ____ the ice.
5. Everything ____ fine to me.
6. In the twilight, a shrimp boat ____ into the bay.
7. ____ these hurdles, Jason.
8. ____ Bogotá the capital of Colombia?
9. Wow! What a crazy tie that ____!
10. Several African nations ____ elections this year.
Review B  Identifying Verbs

Identify the verb in each of the following sentences. Be sure to include helping verbs. Then, tell whether the verb is used as an action or linking verb. Then, tell whether it is transitive or intransitive.

EXAMPLE 1. Can you form the letters of the sign language alphabet?

1. Can form—action, transitive

1. The alphabet chart at left is helpful.
2. Perhaps you and a friend could practice together.
3. At first, it may be a challenge.
4. Many people communicate with these letters as well as thousands of other signs.
5. Many people use forms of sign language.
6. For example, referees, coaches, and football players sometimes give signals in sign language.
7. Some stroke victims must learn sign language during their recovery period.
8. Scientists have taught very simple signs to gorillas and chimpanzees.
9. These animals have been talking to people and to each other in sign language.
10. In the picture below, the gorilla on the left and the woman are having a conversation in sign language.
The Adverb

12b. An adverb is a word that modifies a verb, an adjective, or another adverb.

Just as an adjective makes the meaning of a noun or a pronoun more definite, an adverb makes the meaning of a verb, an adjective, or another adverb more definite.

EXAMPLES

Reporters quickly gather the news. [The adverb quickly modifies the verb gather.]

The route is too long. [The adverb too modifies the adjective long.]

Our newspaper carrier delivers the paper very early. [The adverb very modifies another adverb, early. The adverb early modifies the verb delivers.]

Adverbs answer the following questions:

- Where?
- How often?
- To what extent?
- When? or
- How?
- How long? or
- How much?

EXAMPLES

Please put the package there. [There modifies the verb put and tells where.]

I will call you later. [Later modifies the verb phrase will call and tells when.]

Softly, I shut my door. [Softly modifies the verb shut and tells how.]

Alannah always reads science fiction novels. [Always modifies the verb reads and tells how often.]

Would you please briefly explain what you mean? [Briefly modifies the verb phrase Would explain and tells how long.]

An owl hooted very late last night. [The adverb very modifies the adverb late and tells to what extent.]

The lemonade was too sour. [Too modifies the adjective sour and tells how much.]
Parts of Speech Overview

Chapter 12

GRAMMAR

The Position of Adverbs

Adverbs may come before, after, or between the words they modify.

EXAMPLES

- Quietly, she will tiptoe from the stage. [Quietly comes before will tiptoe, the verb phrase it modifies.]
- She will quietly tiptoe from the stage. [Quietly comes between will and tiptoe, the verb phrase it modifies.]
- She will tiptoe quietly from the stage. [Quietly comes after will tiptoe, the verb phrase it modifies.]

Exercise 8 Identifying Adverbs

Identify the adverb in each of the following sentences. Then, give the word or words each adverb modifies.

EXAMPLE

1. Williamsburg is a very interesting place.
   1. very—interesting

1. Visitors to Williamsburg can truly imagine what life must have been like in the 1700s.
2. As you can see in the photo on the opposite page, Williamsburg was carefully built to resemble a small town of the past.
3. On one street a wigmaker slowly makes old-fashioned powdered wigs.
4. Nearby, a silversmith designs beautiful candlesticks, platters, and jewelry.

Words Often Used as Adverbs

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Category</th>
<th>Examples</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Where?</td>
<td>here, there, away, up, outside</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>When?</td>
<td>now, then, later, soon, ago</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>How?</td>
<td>clearly, easily, quietly, slowly</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>How often? or How long?</td>
<td>never, always, often, seldom frequently, usually, forever</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>To what extent? or How much?</td>
<td>very, hardly, almost, so, really most, nearly, quite, less, only</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
5. Down the block the bookbinder skillfully crafts book covers out of leather.
6. His neighbor, the blacksmith, is certainly important because he makes shoes for horses.
7. In colonial times people could seldom afford new shoes for themselves.
8. Nowadays, many curious tourists visit the bootmaker’s shop.
9. Another very popular craftsman makes lovely musical instruments.
10. Williamsburg definitely gives tourists the feeling that they have visited the past.

Exercise 9 Identifying Adverbs and the Words They Modify

Each of the following sentences contains at least one adverb. Identify each adverb. Then, give the word each adverb modifies. Be prepared to tell whether the word modified is a verb, an adjective, or an adverb.

EXAMPLE 1. If you look closely at a world map, you can quite easily find Brazil.

1. closely—look; quite—easily; easily—can find

1. The nation of Brazil actually covers almost half of the continent of South America.
2. A large portion of the Amazon rain forest grows there.
3. Many people have become more active in the preservation of the rain forest.
4. The loss of the rain forest may seriously affect the planet’s climate.
5. Very early in the sixteenth century, Brazil was colonized by the Portuguese.
6. The country later became an independent republic.
7. Brazilians often say Bom dia, which means “good day” in Portuguese.
8. In Brazil, sports fans can almost always find a soccer game in progress.
9. Brasília, the capital of Brazil, is an extremely modern city.
10. My aunt travels frequently, but she hasn’t been to Brasilia.

HELP In the example sentence in Exercise 9, look is a verb, easily is an adverb, and can find is a verb.
Exercise 10 Writing Appropriate Adverbs

Write the following sentences. Then, fill in each blank with an appropriate adverb. Use a different adverb in each sentence.

EXAMPLE 1. I learned some Spanish words.
1. Quickly, I learned some Spanish words.

1. I ___ watch TV after school.
2. You will ___ bait a hook yourself.
3. My little sister crept down the stairs ___.
4. Do you think that you can ___ find the answer to the math problem?
5. She is ___ eager for lunch.
6. In the evening, the African drums beat ___.
7. People in the highest balcony could ___ hear the speakers onstage.
8. Does thunder ___ follow lightning?
9. Would you dim the light ___ for me?
10. The sky over Honolulu was ___ clear that I could see for miles.

The Preposition

12c. A preposition is a word that shows the relationship between a noun or a pronoun and another word in the sentence.

EXAMPLES Your math book is underneath your coat, Allen. [The preposition underneath shows the relationship of coat to book.]

The one behind us honked his horn. [The preposition behind shows the relationship of us to one.]

Notice how changing the preposition in the following sentences changes the relationship between hit and net.

I hit the ball over the net.
I hit the ball into the net.
I hit the ball under the net.
I hit the ball against the net.
I hit the ball across the net.

TIPS & TRICKS

Many prepositions can be remembered as “anywhere a cat can go.”

EXAMPLES
- up the tree
- behind the sofa
- under the bed
- through the door
The Preposition

Some prepositions are made up of more than one word. These are called compound prepositions.

Commonly Used Prepositions

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>aboard</th>
<th>between</th>
<th>past</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>about</td>
<td>beyond</td>
<td>since</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>above</td>
<td>by</td>
<td>through</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>across</td>
<td>down</td>
<td>throughout</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>after</td>
<td>during</td>
<td>till</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>against</td>
<td>except</td>
<td>to</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>along</td>
<td>for</td>
<td>toward</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>among</td>
<td>from</td>
<td>under</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>around</td>
<td>in</td>
<td>underneath</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>at</td>
<td>into</td>
<td>until</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>before</td>
<td>like</td>
<td>up</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>behind</td>
<td>of</td>
<td>upon</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>below</td>
<td>off</td>
<td>with</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>beneath</td>
<td>on</td>
<td>within</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>beside</td>
<td>over</td>
<td>without</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Some Compound Prepositions

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>according to</th>
<th>in addition to</th>
<th>next to</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>aside from</td>
<td>in place of</td>
<td>on account of</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>because of</td>
<td>in spite of</td>
<td>out of</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

The Prepositional Phrase

A preposition always has at least one noun or pronoun as an object. This noun or pronoun is called the object of the preposition. The preposition, its object, and any modifiers of the object make up a prepositional phrase. Generally, the object of the preposition follows the preposition.

EXAMPLES The pile of dry leaves had grown much larger. [The preposition of relates its object, leaves, to pile. The adjective dry modifies leaves.]
He poured sauce over the pizza. [The preposition over relates its object, pizza, to poured. The article the modifies pizza.]

A preposition may have more than one object.

EXAMPLES This flea collar is for cats and dogs. [The preposition for has the two objects cats and dogs.]

My big sister had to decide between the University of Wisconsin and Carroll College. [The preposition between has the two objects the University of Wisconsin and Carroll College.]

Exercise 11 Identifying Prepositions and Their Objects

Identify the prepositional phrase in each of the following sentences. Underline the preposition, and circle its object.

EXAMPLE 1. Otters are related to weasels and minks.

1. to weasels and minks

1. Yesterday afternoon, we planted a sapling behind the garage.
2. I bought a pattern for a sari.
3. They live near the airport.
4. For his birthday, my brother wants a guitar.
5. The pictures won’t be developed until Friday or Monday.
6. I received a letter from my aunt and uncle.
7. The largest of all falcons is the arctic falcon.
8. What are the answers to the third and fourth questions?
9. There are many uses for peanuts.
10. I think that you might need a graphing calculator for that problem.

Exercise 12 Using Prepositions

Using the treasure map on the next page, give an appropriate preposition for each of the following sentences. Be sure to use a variety of prepositions.

EXAMPLE 1. Can you find the X _____ this map?

1. on

1. Our rowboat rests _____ Mournful Beach.
2. Follow the path _____ the treasure.
3. Notice that Skull Rock lies __ the cliff.
4. A sandy path leads __ the stone ruins.
5. Did you jump __ the fallen tree along the cliff?
6. Don’t slip __ the path up Lookout Hill!
7. Walk __ the river.
8. Go __ the waterfall!
9. You need not walk __ the woods.
10. The treasure is __ the open field and the gnarled oak tree.

Preposition or Adverb?

Some words may be used as both prepositions and adverbs. Remember that a preposition always has at least one noun or pronoun as an object. An adverb never does. If you can’t tell whether a word is used as an adverb or a preposition, look for an object.

PREPOSITION  Clouds gathered above us. [*Us is the object of the preposition above.]

ADVERB  Clouds gathered above. [no object]
PREPOSITION   Meet me outside the gym tomorrow morning.
   [Gym is the object of the preposition outside.]

ADVERB   Meet me outside tomorrow morning.  [no object]

Exercise 13  Identifying Adverbs and Prepositions

Identify the italicized word in each of the following sentences as either an adverb or a preposition.

EXAMPLE 1. Above us, wispy clouds filled the sky.
   1. preposition

1. Before it rains, bring your bike in.
2. Had you ever seen an authentic Chinese New Year Parade before?
3. Bright red and green lights sparkled down the street.
4. Smoke from the campfire quickly disappeared in the heavy fog.
5. Andy turned the log over and found fat, squirming worms.
6. A submarine surfaced next to an aircraft carrier.
7. Will we read a poem by Nikki Giovanni next?
8. Turn that stereo down right now!
9. Millicent, did you remember to send a thank-you note to Mr. Bernstein?
10. What kind of dog is that?

The Conjunction

12d. A conjunction is a word that joins words or groups of words.

A coordinating conjunction joins words or word groups that are used in the same way.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Coordinating Conjunctions</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>and</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

CONJUNCTIONS  beans and rice  movies or television

JOINING WORDS  sad but true  Egypt, Italy, and Spain

Tips & Tricks

You can remember the coordinating conjunctions as FANBOYS:

- For
- And
- Nor
- But
- Or
- Yet
- So
CONJUNCTIONS go for a walk or read a book
JOINING PHRASES after breakfast but before lunch cooking dinner and fixing breakfast

CONJUNCTIONS I wanted to call, but it was late.
JOINING CLAUSES The deer ran, for they smelled smoke.
We knocked on the door, and they answered.

NOTE The word for can be used either as a conjunction or as a preposition.

CONJUNCTION The zebra turned toward the watering hole, for it was getting thirsty. [For joins the two sentences.]
PREPOSITION The zebra lay down in the shade for a nap. [For shows the relationship between the object nap and the verb lay.]

Correlative conjunctions are pairs of conjunctions that join words or word groups that are used in the same way.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Correlative Conjunctions</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>both . . . . . . . . and</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>not only . . but also</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>either . . . . . . or</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>whether . . or</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>neither . . . . nor</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

EXAMPLES Both Michael Jordan and David Robinson planned to play in the charity softball game. [two nouns]
Chris turned neither to the west nor to the east. [two prepositional phrases]
Not only did Babe Didrikson Zaharias set world records in track and field, but she also won more than fifty golf tournaments. [two independent clauses]

Exercise 14 Identifying Conjunctions
Identify the conjunction in each of the following sentences.
EXAMPLE 1. Lena or I will pitch at batting practice.
1. or
1. Julio and Roger joined the soccer team.
2. Whether it rains or not, we will be there.
3. Many Chinese plays include dancing and acrobatics.
4. The squirrels are burying nuts, for the long, cold winter will be here soon.
5. Did Nancy finish her final book report, or is she still working on it?
6. Not only strong but also graceful, the eagle is a beautiful bird.
7. He is not here, nor has he called.
8. The Boys Choir of Harlem will be singing tonight, so we bought tickets.
9. I already addressed the envelope but have not taken it to the post office yet.
10. I have enough money for either popcorn or juice.

The Interjection

12e. An interjection is a word that expresses emotion.

An interjection has no grammatical relation to the rest of the sentence.

Often, an interjection is followed by an exclamation point.

EXAMPLES

aha! I knew you were hiding there.

Oops! I punched in the wrong numbers.

Is that a wasp? Ouch!

Sometimes an interjection is set off by a comma or a pair of commas.

EXAMPLES Well, what do you think?

The fish weighed, oh, about three pounds.

It’s time to go, alas.

Common Interjections

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>aha</th>
<th>hey</th>
<th>ouch</th>
<th>whew</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>alas</td>
<td>hooray</td>
<td>ow</td>
<td>wow</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>aw</td>
<td>oh</td>
<td>ugh</td>
<td>yikes</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>goodness</td>
<td>oops</td>
<td>well</td>
<td>yippee</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Exercise 15 Writing Interjections

Have you ever heard the expression “an accident waiting to happen”? How many accidents are waiting to happen in the picture below? Write appropriate interjections to complete the following sentences that the people in the picture might say.

EXAMPLE 1. _____, Vince, have you seen my other roller skate anywhere?

1. Oh, Vince, have you seen my other roller skate anywhere?

1. _____! I almost sat on the cat.
2. _____! Watch out for that book!
3. _____! Something on the stove is burning.
4. _____, Lila! Be careful with that milk!
5. _____, we will have to get a new cord for our lamp.
6. Something smells bad, _____.
7. Down the stairs comes Dad with, _____, the biggest present I’ve ever seen!
8. At last the party is over, _____.
9. _____! Look out for the roller skate.
10. The party was, _____, interesting to say the least.
Determining Parts of Speech

12f. The way a word is used in a sentence determines what part of speech it is.

Remember that you cannot tell what part of speech a word is until you know how it is used in a particular sentence. The same word may be used as different parts of speech.

VERB Do you like guacamole?

PREPOSITION That looks like guacamole.

ADVERB The cat climbed up.

PREPOSITION The cat climbed up the tree.

NOUN We threw pennies into the wishing well.

ADJECTIVE Janice isn’t feeling well.

ADVERB Did you do well on the test?

INTERJECTION Well, what did he say?

Review C  Identifying Parts of Speech

Identify the italicized word or words in each of the following sentences as a noun, a pronoun, an adjective, a verb, an adverb, a preposition, a conjunction, or an interjection.

EXAMPLE  1. Some scientists study bones.

1. study—verb

1. The fans lined up outside the stadium.
2. She always drives to work.
3. Those plants grow best in sandy soil.
4. Either Rhea or Susan bought paper cups for the party.
5. Their parents own a card store.
6. N. Scott Momaday has written several books, but I have read only one of them.
7. Oops! I dropped my backpack.
8. We play outdoors every day until dinner time.
9. This videotape looks new.
10. You don’t sound too happy.
A. Identifying Verb Phrases and Helping Verbs
Identify the verb phrase in each of the following sentences. Then, underline each helping verb.

1. Tolbert could not see his brother in the fog.
2. Does Nguyen know the words to the song?
3. Dana might come to the party after all.
4. You should have brought your friend home for our special Chinese dinner last night.
5. Will you join the dance?

B. Identifying Action and Linking Verbs
Identify the verb in each of the following sentences as an action verb or a linking verb.

6. Ivan will be a superb guitar player someday.
7. Our dog Tadger brought an old bone home yesterday.
8. The whole-wheat bread smelled delicious.
9. Jacqui smelled the exhaust of the huge truck in the next lane of the freeway.
10. Will you look for me in the parade tomorrow?

C. Identifying Transitive and Intransitive Verbs
For each of the following sentences, identify the italicized verb as transitive or intransitive.

11. Francisco opened the door to the cellar.
12. Even the judge seemed uncertain about the answer.
13. The piano player performs twice each night.
14. We performed the play three times that weekend.
15. We dine every night at seven.
D. Identifying Adverbs and the Words They Modify

Identify the adverb or adverbs in each of the following sentences. Then, give the word each adverb modifies.

16. Mr. Chavez never watches television, but he listens to the radio often.
17. Carefully open the dryer, and check to see whether the clothes are too wet.
18. Did you awake very early?
19. Our old cat creeps gingerly from room to room.
20. Recently, I received an extremely interesting letter from my pen pal in Italy.

E. Identifying Prepositions and Their Objects

Identify the prepositional phrase in each of the following sentences. Underline the preposition once and its object twice.

21. Tanya’s pet hamster likes sleeping behind the computer.
22. Has your house ever lost power during a thunderstorm?
23. Some animals hunt only between dusk and dawn.
24. Bring me the largest head of lettuce, please.
25. According to my father, my uncle was a carpenter.

F. Identifying Verbs, Adverbs, Prepositions, Conjunctions, and Interjections

Identify each italicized word or word group in the following sentences as a verb, an adverb, a preposition, a conjunction, or an interjection.

26. I always have fun at a water park.
27. You can slide as fast as a sled down the huge water slide.
28. Wow! What a truly exciting ride that is!
29. Some parks rent inner tubes inexpensively.
30. You may become tired, but you won’t be bored.
G. Determining Parts of Speech

Identify the italicized word in each of the following sentences as a verb, an adjective, an adverb, a preposition, or an interjection.

31. Well, I suppose you know what you are doing.
32. Ms. Jefferson will not be back in school until she is well.
33. When I sat down on the couch, my sister moved over.
34. The bowls are in the cupboard over the sink.
35. Did you test the batteries before you installed them?

Writing Application

Using Verbs in a List

Helping Verbs and Linking Verbs  You and your classmates have decided to list some goals for the coming year. The theme for your lists is “How I Can Make the World a Better Place.” Write a list of ten or more goals or resolutions for yourself. Make each of your resolutions a complete sentence. In your list, use the verb form be at least two times as a helping verb and three times as a linking verb.

Prewriting  First, think of some realistic goals you can set for yourself. List as many goals as you can.

Writing  From your list, choose the resolutions that seem the most important and the most manageable. Write each of them as a complete sentence.

Revising  Read through your list. Are your resolutions clear and specific? Will you really be able to keep them? If not, revise or replace some of the resolutions.

Publishing  Be sure that you’ve used a form of the verb be as a helping verb twice and as a linking verb three times. Make sure that all of your sentences are complete. Identify each helping verb and linking verb. Do a final check for errors in grammar, spelling, and punctuation. You and your classmates may want to have everyone in the class submit one or two of their favorite resolutions and compile a list of resolutions for the entire class. Post the list on the bulletin board.
A. Identifying Adjective Phrases and Adverb Phrases

Identify the prepositional phrase in each of the following sentences, and tell whether the phrase is used as an adjective phrase or an adverb phrase. Then, give the word or words that the phrase modifies.

EXAMPLE
1. This newspaper article on weather patterns is interesting.
   1. on weather patterns; adjective phrase—article

1. The hikers are ready for a break.
2. Yesterday we rode our bikes through the park.
3. That store has something for everyone.
4. The Reverend Jesse Jackson spoke at the convention.
5. Most children like books with colorful pictures.
6. Students from both South America and North America attended the meet.
7. I wear heavy wool socks under my hiking boots.
8. Joel and Tina are participating in the Special Olympics.
9. The door to the secret room is locked.
10. According to the map, Tony’s farm is just ahead.

B. Identifying Independent Clauses and Subordinate Clauses

For each of the following items, identify the italicized word group as either an independent clause or a subordinate clause.

EXAMPLE
1. Marco got the tables ready while Nestor set up the chairs.
   1. subordinate clause

11. When school is out, these halls seem quite lonely.
12. As far as I can tell, the red piece goes right here, and the green piece goes under there.
13. If you exercise regularly, your endurance will increase.
14. Just before the train sped across the road, the bell rang, and the gate went down.
15. Geronimo, who was a leader of the Apache, died in the early part of the twentieth century.

C. Identifying Types of Sentences

Identify each of the following sentences as simple, compound, complex, or compound-complex.

EXAMPLE
1. Mom is late, but she will be here soon.
   1. compound

16. Jaleel learned several African folk tales and recited them.
17. Raccoons and opossums steal our garbage as the dogs bark at them from inside the house.
18. The school bus stopped suddenly, but no one was hurt.
19. The dance committee has chosen a Hawaiian theme, so the volunteers will decorate the gym with flowers and greenery while Todd finds the right music.
20. Luis Gonzalez stepped up to the plate, and the crowd roared enthusiastically.
The Phrase

13a. A phrase is a group of related words that is used as a single part of speech and that does not contain both a verb and its subject.

EXAMPLES could have been looking [no subject] in the backyard [no subject or verb]

NOTE If a word group has both a subject and a verb, it is called a clause.

EXAMPLES The coyote howled. [Coyote is the subject of the verb howled.]
when the Peytons left [Peytons is the subject of the verb left.]

Phrases cannot stand alone as sentences. They must be used with other words to make a complete sentence.

PHRASE in the box
SENTENCE We put the tapes in the box.

Exercise 1 Identifying Phrases and Sentences
Identify each of the following word groups as a phrase or not a phrase.

EXAMPLE 1. some people enjoy skiing
1. not a phrase

1. ski lifts are used for Alpine skiing
2. down the snowy hills
3. slalom skiers race through gates
4. during the race
5. before the other skiers
6. skiers love the Colorado slopes
7. with tiny snowflakes on my face
8. for a hot cup of soup
9. we sat beside the cozy fire
10. maybe I can go again next year

Reference Note
For more about clauses, see page 387.
Prepositional Phrases

13b. A prepositional phrase includes a preposition, the object of the preposition, and any modifiers of that object.

Prepositions show the relationship of a noun or pronoun to another word in the sentence. The noun or pronoun that follows a preposition is called the object of the preposition. A preposition, its object, and any modifiers of the object are all part of the prepositional phrase.

EXAMPLES

- The man from Singapore was giving a speech. [The preposition from shows the relationship between the object Singapore and the noun man.]

- The tree in front of the window blocks our view. [The compound preposition in front of shows the relationship between the object window and the noun tree. The modifies window.]

- Please hand me the book on the long, green table. [The preposition on shows the relationship between the object table and the noun book. The adjectives the, long, and green modify table.]

A preposition may have more than one object.

EXAMPLES

- Aaron showed his arrowhead collection to Tranh and her. [The preposition to has two objects.]

- The dinner of baked chicken, salad, and two vegetables also came with dessert. [The preposition of has three objects.]

Exercise 2 Identifying Prepositional Phrases and Their Objects

For each of the following sentences, identify the prepositional phrase and circle the object or objects of the preposition.

EXAMPLE

1. Dinosaurs and other giant reptiles roamed across the earth sixty-five million years ago.

1. across the earth

1. Although some of the dinosaurs were enormous, others were quite small.
2. The drawing on this page includes a triceratops, thirty feet long, and a saltopus, not quite three feet long.
3. Many dinosaurs fed on plants and vegetables.
4. Dinosaurs with sharp teeth ate flesh.
5. Can you imagine seeing this flying reptile, the pterodactyl, above you?
6. It once lived in Europe and Africa.
7. Until a few years ago, scientists believed that all dinosaurs were coldblooded.
8. According to recent studies, however, some dinosaurs may have been warmblooded.
9. Many scientists say that birds and crocodiles may be related to dinosaurs.
10. Some people in science even claim that birds are living dinosaurs.

Exercise 3 Identifying Prepositional Phrases and Their Objects

Identify the prepositional phrase in each of the following sentences. Underline each preposition, and circle its object or objects.

EXAMPLE 1. The package was for my brother and me.
   1. for my (brother) and (me)

1. The Sahara is a huge desert that lies south of the Mediterranean.
2. We waited until lunchtime.
3. The house across the street has green shutters.
4. Do not make repairs on the brakes yourself.
5. Maura said that the word lasso comes from a Spanish word that means “snare.”
6. May I sit between you and him?
7. The woman in the blue uniform is my aunt.
8. The Cherokee Phoenix was the first newspaper printed in an American Indian language.
9. He is saving money for a stereo and a guitar.
10. The messenger slipped the note under the door.

Exercise 4
Writing Appropriate Prepositional Phrases

Write the following sentences, filling in each blank with an appropriate prepositional phrase.

EXAMPLE
1. We saw Jason ____.
   1. We saw Jason at the mall.

1. My favorite comedian will appear ____.
2. That bus always arrives ____.
3. The fans ____ cheered every score.
4. The children tumbled ____.
5. The light ____ is broken.
6. Our car waited ____.
7. ____ sat a bald eagle.
8. A rich vein of gold ran ____.
9. ____ dashed a frightened squirrel.
10. His grandmother told us a story ____.

Adjective Phrases

13c. A prepositional phrase that modifies a noun or pronoun is called an adjective phrase.

In other words, an adjective phrase is a prepositional phrase that is used as an adjective.

ADJECTIVE
icy chunks fell from the skyscraper.

ADJECTIVE PHRASE
Chunks of ice fell from the skyscraper.
Adjective phrases answer the same questions that single-word adjectives answer.

Examples

Mr. Arnaud ordered a dinner of boiled crawfish.
[The adjective phrase modifies the noun dinner. The phrase answers the question What kind?]

The one with the big pockets costs a little more.
[The adjective phrase modifies the pronoun one. The phrase answers the question Which one?]

There was enough room for only three people.
[The adjective phrase modifies the noun room. The phrase answers the question How much?]

Notice in these examples that an adjective phrase generally follows the word it modifies.

Exercise 5  Identifying Adjective Phrases

Identify the adjective phrase in each of the following sentences. Then, give the word that the phrase modifies.

Example

1. Diego Rivera was a famous painter from Mexico.
   1. from Mexico—painter

1. People throughout the world enjoy Rivera’s art.
2. One photograph on the next page shows an indoor mural that he painted.
3. Rivera often painted the walls of buildings.
4. His murals are beautiful examples of popular twentieth-century art.
5. Rivera’s artworks often include symbols of Mexican culture.
6. His work with other Mexican artists was also very important.
7. Rivera was a major influence on the mural artist Juan O’Gorman.
8. O’Gorman’s mural on the left beautifies a university library.
9. O’Gorman does not paint his murals; instead, he uses tiny pieces of colored tile.
10. The complicated pattern upon the library walls fascinates everyone who sees it.

More than one adjective phrase may modify the same noun or pronoun.

EXAMPLE  That painting of sunflowers by van Gogh is famous. [The two adjective phrases, of sunflowers and by van Gogh, both answer the question Which painting?]

An adjective phrase may also modify the object of another adjective phrase.

EXAMPLE  A number of the paintings by that artist are landscapes. [The adjective phrase of the paintings answers the question What kind of number? The adjective phrase by that artist answers the question Which paintings?]
Exercise 6  Identifying Adjective Phrases
Identify each adjective phrase in the following sentences. Then, give the noun or pronoun the phrase modifies.

EXAMPLE  1. This book about birds of North America has won many awards for photography.
   1. about birds—book; of North America—birds; for photography—awards

1. It explains the importance of flight in the survival of the bird population.
2. The key to successful flight is the structure of the feather.
3. As you can see, the shaft and the vane are the two main parts of a feather.
4. The area inside the quill of a feather is hollow.
5. Barbs on the shaft form a feather’s vane.
6. The curves in the vane and the notches of the feather permit easy, quick movement.
7. The wings of airplanes resemble birds’ wings.
8. Feathers on the wings and tails of birds often are quite showy.
9. Fast-flying birds like swifts usually have pointed wings.
10. Have you ever seen any of the birds that have these kinds of feathers?

Exercise 7  Writing Adjective Phrases
Fill in the blank in each of the following sentences with an appropriate adjective phrase.

EXAMPLE  1. That storm ____ might be dangerous.
   1. That storm from the east might be dangerous.
1. The shelf ____ is too high to reach.
2. I certainly hope that my gorilla costume wins a prize ____.
3. The girl ____ is one of my best friends.
4. The argument ____ really wasn’t very important.
5. My favorite birthday present was the one ____.
6. Give your ticket to the man ____.
7. Did you see a bear on your trip ____?
8. Put the groceries ____ away, please.
9. My sister is the girl ____.
10. As I looked around the house, I noticed that an African design decorated the wall ____.

Adverb Phrases

13d. A prepositional phrase that is used to modify a verb, an adjective, or an adverb is called an adverb phrase.

In other words, an adverb phrase is a prepositional phrase that is used as an adverb.

ADVERB  We walk there every Saturday.

ADVERB PHRASE  We walk along the lake every Saturday.

Adverb phrases answer the same questions that single-word adverbs answer.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>When?</th>
<th>Where?</th>
<th>Why?</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>How?</td>
<td>How often?</td>
<td>How long?</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

EXAMPLES  The statue stands next to a large oak tree. [The adverb phrase modifies the verb stands and answers the question Where?]

Ready by dawn, the travelers set out early to reach the capital. [The adverb phrase modifies the adjective Ready and answers the question When?]

Are these jeans long enough for you? [The adverb phrase modifies the adverb enough and answers the question How?]
Adverb phrases may appear anywhere in a sentence. They may come before or after the words they modify. Also, other words may come between an adverb phrase and the word or words it modifies.

EXAMPLES
- After swimming lessons, Aunt Helen drove us home.
- Dad has been afraid of snakes since he was a boy.
- We rode our bikes over the bridge.

Exercise 8 Identifying Adverb Phrases

Identify the adverb phrase used in each of the following sentences. Then, write the word or words the phrase modifies.

EXAMPLE 1. My hamster disappeared for three days.

1. for three days—disappeared

1. That mirror hung in the front hall.
2. The cat is afraid of thunderstorms.
3. The normally graceful acrobat plunged into the net but did not hurt herself.
4. Jimmy Smits will speak at our school.
5. Mom discovered several field mice in the cellar.
6. With great courage, Rosa Parks disobeyed the bus driver.
7. She jogs around the reservoir every morning.
8. For a beginner, he plays well.
9. Soon, my shoes were full of sand.
10. We have planted several new varieties of day lilies along the fence.

As with adjective phrases, more than one adverb phrase can modify the same word.

EXAMPLE Cesar Chavez worked with the United Farm Workers for many years. [Both adverb phrases, with the United Farm Workers and for many years, modify the verb worked.]
An adverb phrase may be followed by an adjective phrase that modifies the object of the preposition in the adverb phrase.

EXAMPLE Yesterday we went to an exhibit of rare coins. [The adverb phrase to an exhibit modifies the verb went. The adjective phrase of rare coins modifies exhibit, the object of the preposition in the adverb phrase.]

Exercise 9 Identifying Adverb Phrases

Identify the adverb phrase used in each of the following sentences. After each phrase, give the word or words the phrase modifies.

EXAMPLES

1. On Passover evening, we prepare a Seder, which is a Jewish holiday meal and ceremony.
   1. On Passover evening—prepare
   2. from their masters—freed

1. On Passover, many of our relatives visit our home.
2. We always invite them for the Seder.
3. Our whole family helps with the preparations.
4. Soon, everything is ready for this special meal.
5. In this photograph you can see how beautiful our holiday table is.
6. Holding all the special Passover foods, the Seder plate is displayed in the center of the table.
7. On the plate is a roasted egg representing new life.
8. Horseradish, which represents slavery’s bitterness, is placed near the egg.
9. The other carefully arranged foods are also used during the Passover feast.
10. Throughout the entire meal, everyone enjoys a variety of delicious foods.
Exercise 10
Writing Sentences with Adverb Phrases
Write ten sentences using the following word groups as adverb phrases. Underline each phrase. Then, draw an arrow from the phrase to the word or words it modifies.

EXAMPLE
1. for the airport
   1. My grandparents left for the airport.

   1. down the hall
   2. by them
   3. in the mall
   4. under the car
   5. onto the diving board
   6. over our heads
   7. by a Navajo woman
   8. through the sky
   9. at five o’clock sharp
   10. from Egypt

Review A
Identifying Adjective and Adverb Phrases
Each of the following sentences contains a prepositional phrase. Identify each phrase, and label it adjective phrase or adverb phrase.

EXAMPLES
   1. in the 1960 Olympic games—adverb phrase

   2. Rudolph overcame many obstacles in her life.
   2. in her life—adjective phrase

1. Wilma Rudolph did not have the childhood you might expect of a future Olympic athlete.
2. She and her twenty-one sisters and brothers were raised in a needy family.
3. Rudolph suffered from polio and scarlet fever when she was four years old.
4. Illnesses like these were often deadly.
5. For many years afterward, Rudolph used a leg brace when she walked.
6. Still, she never lost sight of her dreams.
7. She battled the odds against her.
8. With her family’s help, she exercised hard every day.
9. All of her hard work made her strong.
10. Years later, she gained fame as a world-class athlete.
Review B Identifying Adjective and Adverb Phrases

Each of the following sentences contains at least one prepositional phrase. Identify each prepositional phrase, and label each one adjective phrase or adverb phrase.

EXAMPLES

1. In China, farmers are considered the backbone of the country.

   1. In China—adverb phrase; of the country—adjective phrase

2. With over one billion people to feed, China asks much from its farmers.

   2. With over one billion people to feed—adjective phrase; from its farmers—adverb phrase

1. Many of the Chinese people are farmers.
2. They generally work their farms by hand.
3. Chinese farmers usually use hand tools instead of large machines.
4. Farmland throughout China is carefully prepared, planted, and weeded.
5. Farmers also harvest their crops with great care.
6. In the hills, the Chinese make flat terraces.
7. As you can see, water from high terraces can flow to lower terraces.
8. Farmers build ridges around the terraces so that the terraces can be flooded during the growing season.
9. In flat areas, water is pumped out of the ground.
10. Another Chinese method of irrigation is shown in the lower picture.
Review C Using Prepositional Phrases in Sentences

Use each of the following prepositional phrases in a sentence. Then, underline the word or word group that the prepositional phrase modifies.

EXAMPLE

1. across the street

   1. They live across the street.

   or

   The store across the street is open.

1. among the papers
2. over the fence
3. for your sister
4. toward him
5. about the schedule
6. before class
7. along the wall
8. through the door
9. under the table
10. in the evening
11. across the narrow bridge
12. near you and Anna Maria
13. aboard the sailboat
14. to the Grand Canyon
15. beneath the handmade quilt
16. according to the scientist
17. beyond the farthest planet
18. next to the blue helmet
19. upon the highest tree branch
20. from my brother and me

Review D Writing Sentences with Adjective Phrases and Adverb Phrases

Use each of the following phrases in two separate sentences. In the first sentence, use the phrase as an adjective. In the second sentence, use the phrase as an adverb.

EXAMPLE

1. in Indiana

   1. The people in Indiana are called “Hoosiers.”

   We once lived in Indiana.
The Clause

13e. A clause is a word group that contains a verb and its subject and that is used as a sentence or as part of a sentence.

Every clause contains a subject and a verb. However, not all clauses express complete thoughts. Clauses that express complete thoughts are called independent clauses. Clauses that do not express complete thoughts are called subordinate clauses.

Independent Clauses

13f. An independent (or main) clause expresses a complete thought and can stand by itself as a sentence.

EXAMPLES

S       V
Gertie practices soccer every day.

S       V
She has improved a great deal.

S       V
Her team won yesterday’s game.

When an independent clause stands alone, it is called a sentence. Usually, the term independent clause is used only when such a clause is joined with another clause.

SENTENCE   He worked on the jigsaw puzzle.
INDEPENDENT CLAUSE   After Kevin had fed the cats, he worked on the jigsaw puzzle.
Subordinate Clauses

13g. A subordinate (or dependent) clause does not express a complete thought and cannot stand by itself as a complete sentence.

\[ S \ \text{V} \]

EXAMPLES

- if you finish on time
- which we found on the sidewalk

Subordinate means “lesser in rank or importance.” A subordinate clause must be joined with at least one independent clause to make a sentence and express a complete thought.

SUBORDINATE CLAUSES

- that Dad cooked for us
- if you set realistic goals
- before the sun sets

SENTENCES

- We all enjoyed the dinner that Dad cooked for us.
- If you set realistic goals, you are more likely to succeed.
- Before the sun sets, I need to mow the lawn.

Notice the words that begin the subordinate clauses: that, if, and before. The chart below lists some other words that can signal the beginning of a subordinate clause.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Words Often Used to Begin Subordinate Clauses</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>after</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>although</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>as</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>as if</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>as long as</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>as much as</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>as though</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Exercise 11 Identifying Independent and Subordinate Clauses

For each of the following items, identify the italicized word group as either an independent clause or a subordinate clause.

EXAMPLES 1. I’ll do the experiment if you will record the results.
   1. subordinate clause
   2. Ignacio, who is an artist, painted the banner.
   2. independent clause

1. While Dad was sleeping, we decorated the house for his birthday party.
2. Just as Terri came in the door, the phone rang.
3. Somalis, who traditionally raise and export livestock, are nomadic.
4. Before you accept the invitation, ask your mother.
5. Do you know when the train should arrive?
6. Although he was better at social studies, he loved art.
7. Two uniformed soldiers guarded the entrance where an iron gate stood.
8. When the snows melt, these streams will fill and rush down to the valley.
9. That art paper that you are using really soaks up ink.
10. Toni Morrison, whose parents were once sharecroppers, won the Pulitzer Prize.

Adjective Clauses

13h. An adjective clause is a subordinate clause that modifies a noun or pronoun.

Like an adjective or an adjective phrase, an adjective clause may modify a noun or a pronoun. Unlike an adjective phrase, an adjective clause contains both a subject and verb.

ADJECTIVE a white cat

ADJECTIVE PHRASE a cat with white fur [With white fur does not have a subject and verb.]

ADJECTIVE CLAUSE a cat that has white fur [That has white fur has a subject, that, and a verb, has.]
An adjective clause usually follows the noun or pronoun it modifies and tells Which one? or What kind?

EXAMPLES
The runner who came in second was Tina. [The adjective clause modifies the noun runner and answers the question Which one?]

I would like a dog that I could take for long walks. [The adjective clause modifies the noun dog and answers the question What kind?]

Exercise 12 Identifying Adjective Clauses
Identify each adjective clause in the following sentences.

EXAMPLE

1. Her coat was lined with fleece that kept her warm.
   1. that kept her warm

1. Jordan, whose aunt once rode on the space shuttle, is visiting her this summer.
2. Grandfather gave me that arrowhead, which has been in our family for generations.
3. The doctor looked at the notes that the nurse had written.
4. What was the name of the man who helped us?
5. Panama hats, which are prized far and wide, are woven of jipijapa leaves.
6. We could not have done it without Harry, whose skill saved the day.
7. Have you heard of Sister Juana Ines de la Cruz, the Mexican nun who championed women’s rights in 1691?
8. Argentina’s pampas, where fine herds of cattle graze, offer ranchers rich and vast grasslands.
9. Since ancient times, Asian ginger has been prized for the tang that it gives many dishes.
10. Ric, whom Doris calls “The Prince,” is always a good sport.

Exercise 13 Using Adjective Clauses in Sentences
Write ten sentences using the following word groups as adjective clauses.

EXAMPLE

1. where I grew up
   1. This is the street where I grew up.
1. which had been imported from Japan
2. who is always on time
3. that live in this ecosystem
4. where the roses grow
5. whose short stories appear in your text
6. whom you talked about yesterday
7. that was having a sale
8. which may or may not be true
9. for whom our school is named
10. whose hard work made this event possible

Adverb Clauses

13i. An adverb clause is a subordinate clause that modifies a verb, an adjective, or an adverb.

Like an adverb or an adverb phrase, an adverb clause may modify a verb, an adjective, or another adverb. Unlike an adverb phrase, an adverb clause contains a subject and verb.

ADVERB
Shyly, the toddler hid behind her mother.

ADVERB PHRASE
With a shy smile, the toddler hid behind her mother. [With a shy smile does not have a subject and verb.]

ADVERB CLAUSE
Since the toddler was shy, she hid behind her mother. [Since the toddler was shy has a subject, toddler, and a verb, was.]

EXAMPLES
After he had moved the books, Marvin dusted the shelves. [The adverb clause tells when Marvin dusted the shelves.]

Then he put the books back where they belonged. [The adverb clause tells where he put the books.]

He cleaned his room because it was very messy. [The adverb clause tells why he cleaned his room.]

---

HELP

Introductory adverb clauses are usually set off by commas.

EXAMPLES

After we built the campfire, we roasted hot dogs.

Although the song is good, it is not one of their best.

Reference Note

For more information on using commas to set off introductory elements, see page 572.
Identifying Adverb Clauses

Identify each adverb clause in the following sentences.

EXAMPLE

1. Call when you can.
   1. when you can

1. Tiny wildflowers sprang up wherever they could.
2. Unless you want to sink, do not pull that large plug at the bottom of the boat.
3. Wind blew softly across the sand dunes while the caravan made its way home.
4. As soon as the cows come in, they must be fed.
5. To our surprise, when we entered the woods, a dozen armadillos were foraging right in front of us.
6. Although the piano had not been used for some time, it was still in tune.
7. Unless the shipment arrives today, the order will not be ready on time.
8. Because the airplane had been painted yellow, it was easily seen from the ground.
9. I’m not going if you’re not going.
10. I had never heard anyone sing as he did.

Writing Sentences with Adverb Clauses

Write twenty sentences using the following word groups as adverb clauses.

EXAMPLE

1. as soon as he can
   1. He will be here as soon as he can.

1. when I save enough money
2. if things go according to the schedule
3. since we have lived here
4. after the assembly was over
5. before school starts
6. although we couldn’t speak Japanese
7. than she is
8. because they were going to the rink
9. until the sun set
10. while the lions are drinking from the river

STYLE TIP

In most cases, deciding where to place an adverb clause is a matter of style, not correctness.

As he leapt across the gorge, Rex glanced back at his alien pursuers.

Rex glanced back at his alien pursuers as he leapt across the gorge.

Which sentence might you use in a science fiction story? The sentence to choose would be the one that looks and sounds better in the context—the rest of the paragraph to which the sentence belongs.
11. as long as the band plays
12. whenever the train arrives at the station
13. unless the dog is on a leash
14. wherever you see grasshoppers
15. although the trail was steep
16. when Alexa won the marathon
17. so that we could use the computer
18. while the storm was raging
19. than you are
20. as though they had run ten miles

Review E Identifying Clauses

For each of the following sentences, identify the italicized clause as an independent clause or a subordinate clause. Then, identify each subordinate clause as an adjective clause or an adverb clause.

EXAMPLE 1. Those Japanese sandals that you are wearing are zoris.
   1. subordinate clause—adjective clause

1. Camels stamped and bellowed in annoyance when packs were put on them.
2. Aloe plants, which originated in Africa, are now widely available in the United States.
3. As far as scientists can tell, there is no connection between these two events.
4. If you adjust the blinds, you won’t have that glare on your monitor.
5. The castanets, which were quite old, had been Melanie’s grandmother’s.
6. You were always singing when you were little.
7. Three Indian elephants patiently towed the logs that had just been cut.
8. Stay with us as long as you want.
9. Southeast Asia depends heavily on the seasonal rain that the monsoons bring.
10. The Forbidden City, where China’s emperors lived, is enclosed by walls.
Review F  Writing Sentences with Clauses and Prepositional Phrases

Use each of the following phrases and clauses in a sentence. Then, underline the word that the phrase or clause modifies.

EXAMPLE
1. under the flat rock
   1. Under the flat rock lived many odd insects.
      or
      The insects under the flat rock wriggled.

1. with a cowboy hat
2. who told us about computers
3. under the surface
4. since the club meets in the afternoon
5. for yourself
6. through the puddles
7. over the treetops
8. before we ate dinner
9. that grow along the fence
10. toward us

---

Sentence Structure

Simple Sentences

13j. A simple sentence has one independent clause and no subordinate clauses.

A simple sentence may have a compound subject, a compound verb, or both. Although a compound subject has two or more parts, it is still considered a single subject. In the same way, a compound verb or verb phrase is considered one verb.

EXAMPLES

My mother belongs to the Friends of the Library.

[single subject and single verb]

Argentina and Chile are in South America.

[compound subject]
Compound Sentences

13k. A compound sentence consists of two or more independent clauses, usually joined by a comma and a connecting word.

In a compound sentence, a coordinating conjunction (and, but, for, nor, or, so, or yet) generally connects the simple sentences. A comma usually comes before the conjunction in a compound sentence.

EXAMPLES

- I forgot my lunch, but Dad ran to the bus with it.
- She likes sweets, yet she seldom buys them.

Notice in the second example above that, usually, a sentence is compound if the subject is repeated.

Sometimes the independent clauses in a compound sentence are joined by a semicolon.

EXAMPLES

- The blue one is mine; it has my initials on it.
- The spider is not an insect; it is an arachnid.

Exercise 16 Identifying Simple Sentences and Compound Sentences

Identify each of the following sentences as simple or compound.

EXAMPLE

1. That story by Lensey Namioka is good, and you should read it.
   1. compound

1. My dad and I like tacos, and we’re making them for dinner.
2. Some trees and shrubs live thousands of years.
3. It rained, but we marched in the parade anyway.
4. Mr. Edwards will lead the singing, for Ms. Cruz is ill.
5. My aunts, uncles, and cousins from Costa Rica visited us last summer.
6. I had worked hard all morning, and I still had not finished the job by lunchtime.
7. Abe peeled and chopped all of the onions and dumped them into a huge pot.
8. All ravens are crows, but not all crows are ravens.
9. Chippewa and Ojibwa are two names for the same American Indian people.
10. I liked this movie best; it was more exciting than the others.

Review  G Identifying Simple Sentences and Compound Sentences

Identify each of the following sentences as simple or compound.

EXAMPLE

1. Have you or Sandy ever seen the movie The Bridge on the River Kwai?
   1. simple

1. My stepbrother is only eight years old, and he is fascinated by bridges.
2. We buy postcards with pictures of bridges, for he likes to collect them.
3. He has several cards of stone bridges.
4. Stone bridges are strong but are costly to build.
5. Many bridges are quite beautiful.
6. The Central American rope bridge shown here is one kind of suspension bridge.
7. The modern bridge on the previous page is another kind of suspension bridge.
8. Suspension bridges may look dangerous, yet most are safe.
9. Bridges must be inspected regularly.
10. My stepbrother collects postcards of bridges, and I collect postcards of towers.

Complex Sentences

131. A complex sentence contains one independent clause and at least one subordinate clause.

Subordinate clauses usually begin with a word such as who, whose, which, that, after, as, if, since, and when. A subordinate clause can appear at the beginning, in the middle, or at the end of a complex sentence.

EXAMPLES Before Chen planted his garden, he made a sketch of the layout.

\[
\text{subject (S) } \rightarrow \text{made a sketch of the layout (V) } \rightarrow \text{Before Chen planted his garden (subordinate clause)}
\]

When bees collect pollen, they fertilize the plants that they visit.

\[
\text{subject (S) } \rightarrow \text{fertilize the plants (V) } \rightarrow \text{When bees collect pollen (subordinate clause)} \rightarrow \text{that they visit (subordinate clause)}
\]
Compound-Complex Sentences

13m. A sentence with two or more independent clauses and at least one subordinate clause is a compound-complex sentence.

EXAMPLE I picked up the branches that had fallen during the storm, and Rosa mowed the grass.

- independent clause: I picked up the branches
- independent clause: Rosa mowed the grass
- subordinate clause: that had fallen during the storm

Exercise 17 Classifying Sentences by Structure

Identify each of the following sentences as simple, compound, complex, or compound-complex.

EXAMPLE 1. It was raining, but the sun was shining when we looked out the window.

1. compound-complex

1. Cuba’s capital is Havana, and this beautiful city has been the center of Cuban culture since 1552.
2. The heavy branches of an oak tree hung over our table and shaded us from the sun.
3. When you are looking at a work by Monet, stand back at least fifteen or twenty feet.
4. As it happens, you’re right and I’m wrong.
5. Seashells filled Liz’s suitcase and spilled onto the floor.
6. According to our records, your next appointment isn’t until next month, but we do thank you for your call.
7. The Internet and other forms of electronic communication are shaping the world’s future.
8. Because opinions are still divided, further discussion will be necessary.
9. The clock’s minute hand is moving, but the second hand has stopped.
10. Between Asia and Africa lies a land bridge that is known as the Sinai Peninsula.
A. Identifying Adjective and Adverb Phrases

Identify the prepositional phrase in each of the following sentences, and tell whether the phrase is used as an adjective phrase or an adverb phrase. Then, give the word or words that the phrase modifies.

1. The crowd waved banners during the game.
2. That book about the Underground Railroad is interesting.
3. Have you seen the pictures of the Wongs’ new house?
4. The water in my glass was cold.
5. Uncle Eduardo carefully knocked the snow off his boots.
6. You should travel to Utah if you have never seen a beautiful desert.
7. Do you have the new CD by the Three Tenors?
8. The swings in the park are a bit rusty.
9. A clown handed balloons to the children.
10. The mail carrier left a package on the front porch.

B. Identifying Independent and Subordinate Clauses

For each of the following items, identify the italicized word group as either an independent clause or a subordinate clause.

11. Yamile and her family enjoyed their vacation in Indonesia, which is a country made up of thousands of islands.
12. Whenever he pressed the button, another buzzer sounded.
13. After Luis worked out on the weight machines and swam ten laps in the pool, he took a shower.
14. Bring an extra sweatshirt with you if you have one.
15. Martin enjoys speaking Japanese when he visits the Nakamuras.
16. Before you leave for school, do you always remember to brush your teeth?
17. Is Rena the one who went to New Zealand?
18. Did our grandmother ever tell you how she came to this country from Latvia?
19. Unless you don’t like getting wet and working outside all day, we could use your help at the Spanish club car wash on Saturday.

20. Mr. Boylan, whom we met several times at school events, is the author of a novel.

C. Identifying Clauses

For each of the following sentences, identify each italicized clause as an adjective clause or an adverb clause.

21. When you have a chance, send me an e-mail.

22. Anyone who knows Vita can tell you how smart she is.

23. When the Castillo family arrived at the ski lodge that evening, they went right to bed.

24. The theater company, which had come to town only that afternoon, put on a spectacular show.

25. Sherlock Holmes, whose creator was Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, is probably the most famous fictional detective in literature.

D. Identifying Types of Sentences

Identify each of the following sentences as simple, compound, complex, or compound-complex.

26. Sir Ernest Shackleton was an Antarctic explorer.

27. He wanted to be the first man to reach the South Pole, and in 1908, he led a party that came within ninety-seven miles of the pole.

28. In 1914, he led the British Imperial Trans-Antarctic Expedition to Antarctica.

29. Shackleton intended to cross Antarctica, which no one else had ever crossed before.

30. Before the expedition could land, Shackleton’s ship, the Endurance, was trapped in the ice of the Weddell Sea for ten months.

31. Finally, the ice crushed the ship, and Shackleton and his men were stranded on the ice for five more months.

32. The men escaped the ice in small boats, and they landed on Elephant Island, where they lived in a makeshift camp.
33. Shackleton and five other men sailed to South Georgia Island, where they sought help from Norwegian whalers.

34. Shackleton’s first attempts to return to Elephant Island did not succeed, but he finally rescued his crew on August 30, 1916.

35. Shackleton’s expedition failed to cross Antarctica, but he brought all of his men home safely.

---

Writing Application

Using Prepositional Phrases in a Story

Using Prepositional Phrases to Add Detail The Friends of Animals Society is having a contest for the best true-life pet story. The winner of the contest will have his or her story published in the local newspaper. Write a brief story to enter in the contest. In your story, tell about an unusual pet that you have heard about or known. Use at least five adjective phrases and five adverb phrases in your story.

Prewriting First, you will need to choose a pet about which to write. Then, jot down details about how the animal looks and how it acts. In your notes, focus on a specific time when the animal did something funny or amazing.

Writing Begin your draft with an attention-grabbing paragraph. Introduce and describe your main character. Be sure that you have included any human characters that play a part in the story. Also, describe the story’s setting—for example, your kitchen, your neighbor’s backyard, or the woods.

Revising Ask a friend to read your draft. Depending on what your friend tells you, you may need to add, cut, or rearrange details. Make sure you have used at least five adjective phrases and five adverb phrases.

Publishing Check your story carefully for errors in grammar, spelling, and punctuation. You and your classmates may want to collect your stories into a booklet. Along with your stories, you might include pictures or drawings of the pets you have written about.
Identifying Complements

Identify each complement in the following sentences as a direct object, an indirect object, a predicate nominative, or a predicate adjective.

EXAMPLE

1. Many forests are cold and snowy.
   1. cold—predicate adjective; snowy—predicate adjective

2. We made our parents a family tree for their anniversary.
3. The sun disappeared, and the wind suddenly grew cold.
4. The home of the former president is now a library and museum.
5. The newspaper published an article and an editorial about ex-Mayor Sharon Pratt Dixon.
6. My uncle gave my sister and brother ice skates.
7. After the long hike, all of the Scouts felt sore and sleepy.
8. Leaders of the Ojibwa people held a meeting last summer.
9. I wrote my name and address in my book.
10. Your dog certainly appears healthy to me.
11. Most stars in our galaxy are invisible to the human eye.
12. Did the workers capture an alligator in the sewer system?
13. Our trip on the Staten Island ferry became an adventure.
14. The air show featured balloons and parachutes.
15. The maples are becoming gold and red early this year.
16. My parents bought themselves several Celia Cruz CDs.
17. Aunt Kathleen gave Ricardo and me tickets for the show.
18. The two most popular sports at my school are football and volleyball.
19. The water in the pool looked clean and fresh.
20. My mother’s homemade Sabbath bread tastes delicious.

Recognizing Complements

14a. A complement is a word or word group that completes the meaning of a verb.

Every sentence has a subject and a verb. Sometimes the subject and the verb can express a complete thought all by themselves.

```
S   V
EXAMPLES  Adriana swam.
               The puppy was sleeping.
```

Often, however, a verb needs a complement to complete its meaning.

```
S   V
INCOMPLETE  My aunt found [what?]
C
COMPLETE  My aunt found a wallet.  [The noun wallet completes the meaning of the verb found.]
```

```
S   V
INCOMPLETE  Sarah bought [what?]
C
COMPLETE  Sarah bought herself a new jacket.  [The pronoun herself and the noun jacket complete the meaning of the verb bought.]
```

TIPS & TRICKS

You can remember the difference in spelling between complement (the grammar term) and compliment (an expression of affection or respect) by remembering that a complement completes a sentence.
INCOMPLETE The longcase clock was [what?]

COMPLETE The longcase clock was an antique. [The noun antique completes the meaning of the verb was.]

INCOMPLETE The elephant seemed [what?]

COMPLETE The elephant seemed tired. [The adjective tired completes the meaning of the verb seemed.]

An adverb is never a complement.

ADVERB The koala chews slowly. [The adverb slowly modifies the verb by telling how the koala chews.]

COMPLEMENT The koala chews eucalyptus leaves. [The noun leaves completes the meaning of the verb chews by telling what the koala chews.]

A complement is never a part of a prepositional phrase.

OBJECT OF Hannah is riding to her friend’s house. [The noun house is the object of the preposition to.]

PREPOSITION COMPLEMENT Hannah is riding her bicycle. [The noun bicycle completes the meaning of the verb phrase is riding by telling what Hannah is riding.]

Exercise 1 Writing Complements

Write an appropriate complement to complete each of the following sentences.

EXAMPLE 1. The class seemed ____ to go on the field trip.
   1. happy

1. Yesterday, Uncle Joe sent me a ____ in the mail.
2. Did you lend ____ your calculator?
3. After college, she became a ____ in Chicago.
4. This puppy looks ____ to me, Doctor.
5. Is your brother still a ____ in Montana?
6. The sky was ____ and ____ that winter night.
7. Give ____ a hand, please.
8. Was that ____ in the dinosaur costume?
9. My little brother ran into the house and showed us a ____.
10. Next on the program for the recital, the middle school chorus will sing ____.

Objects of Verbs

Direct objects and indirect objects complete the meaning of transitive verbs.

Direct Objects

The direct object is one type of complement. It completes the meaning of a transitive verb.

14b. A direct object is a noun, pronoun, or word group that tells who or what receives the action of the verb.

A direct object answers the question Whom? or What? after a transitive verb.

EXAMPLES My brother bought a model. [My brother bought what? Bought a model. The noun model receives the action of the verb bought.]

Jan called somebody for the assignment. [Jan called whom? Called somebody. The pronoun somebody receives the action of the verb called.]

Corey studied Mother Teresa in his history class. [Corey studied whom? Studied Mother Teresa. The compound noun Mother Teresa receives the action of the verb studied.]

A direct object may be a compound of two or more objects.

EXAMPLES Did the car have spoked wheels and a spoiler? [The compound direct object of the verb Did have is wheels and spoiler.]

She needed glue, paint, and decals for her model. [The compound direct object of the verb needed is glue, paint, and decals.]
A direct object can never follow a linking verb because a linking verb does not express action.

LINKING VERB Julia Morgan was an architect. [The verb was does not express action; therefore, architect is not a direct object.]

Exercise 2 Identifying Direct Objects

Identify each direct object in the following sentences. Remember that a direct object may be compound.

EXAMPLE

1. Do you enjoy books and movies about horses?
   1. books, movies

1. If so, then you probably know some stories by Marguerite Henry.
2. Her books about horses have thrilled readers for more than forty years.
3. Henry has written many popular books, such as Misty of Chincoteague and King of the Wind.
5. The book tells the adventures of the boy Agba and his beautiful Arabian horse.
6. Agba fed milk and honey to the newborn colt.
7. Sometimes the playful colt bit Agba’s fingers.
8. The head of the stables often mistreated Agba and the young colt.
9. Later, the boy and the horse left their home and traveled to England.
10. Read King of the Wind, and learn more about the adventures of Agba and his horse.

Indirect Objects

The indirect object is another type of complement. Like the direct object, the indirect object helps complete the meaning of a transitive verb. If a sentence has an indirect object, it must also have a direct object.

14c. An indirect object is a noun, pronoun, or word group that usually comes between the verb and the direct object. An indirect object tells to whom or to what or for whom or for what the action of the verb is done.

EXAMPLES

I gave that problem some thought. [The noun problem is the indirect object of the verb gave and answers the question “To what did I give some thought?”]

Dad bought himself some peanuts. [The pronoun himself is the indirect object of the verb bought and answers the question “For whom did Dad buy peanuts?”]

Luke sent David Robinson a fan letter. [The compound noun David Robinson is the indirect object of the verb sent and answers the question “To whom did Luke send a fan letter?”]
If the word to or for is used, the noun, pronoun, or word group following it is part of a prepositional phrase and cannot be an indirect object.

OBJECTS OF PREPOSITIONS
- The ship’s captain gave orders to the crew.
- Vinnie made some lasagna for us.

INDIRECT OBJECTS
- The ship’s captain gave the crew orders.
- Vinnie made us some lasagna.

Like a direct object, an indirect object can be compound.

EXAMPLES
- She gave Ed and me the list of summer activities. [Ed and me are indirect objects of the verb gave. They answer the question “To whom did she give the list?”]
- Did the peacock show you and your sister its tail feathers? [You and sister are indirect objects of the verb Did show. They answer the question “To whom did the peacock show its tail feathers?”]

Exercise 3 Identifying Direct and Indirect Objects

Identify the direct objects and indirect objects in the following sentences. Remember not to confuse objects of prepositions with direct objects and indirect objects.

EXAMPLE
1. Gabriel sent me a postcard from Ecuador.
   - 1. me—indirect object; postcard—direct object

1. In Ecuador, Gabriel visited many of his relatives.
2. His aunt Luz and uncle Rodrigo showed him the railroad in San Lorenzo.
3. They also visited the port in Esmeraldas.
4. Ecuador exports bananas and coffee.
5. Gabriel’s cousin showed him some other sights.
6. She told Gabriel stories about Ecuadoran heroes.
7. Gabriel and his relatives rode a train high into the Andes Mountains.
8. They took photos from the train.
9. Gabriel enjoyed his visit to Ecuador.
10. He brought us some unusual souvenirs.
Exercise 4  Writing Direct and Indirect Objects

Write an appropriate direct or indirect object to complete each of the following sentences.

EXAMPLE  1. This weekend we are painting the ____.
   1. kitchen

1. The President made a ____ on television last night.
2. Did your dad teach ____ those magic tricks?
3. Wow! The governor wrote ____ a letter!
4. Then Marianne asked ____ the question in all our minds.
5. A mechanic replaced the truck’s ____.
6. Save ____ a place at your table.
7. Are you still studying ____?
8. Okay, I’ll owe ____ two hours’ use of my skateboard.
9. Have you taken ____ for a walk?
10. Sam made ____ a table in shop class.

Review A  Identifying Direct and Indirect Objects

Identify the direct objects and indirect objects in the following sentences.

EXAMPLE  1. Have you ever given board games much thought?
   1. board games—indirect object; thought—direct object

1. For centuries, people have enjoyed games of strategy.
2. Interest in strategy games has given us chess and checkers.
3. My brother showed me a book about different kinds of board games.
4. Board games reflect many different interests and appeal to all kinds of people.
5. Some games teach players lessons useful in careers and sports.
6. Of course, word games can give people hours of fun.
7. During the more difficult word games, Mrs. Hampton sometimes helps Chen and me.
8. Do you like trivia games?
9. Sharon’s uncle bought Ronnie and her one of the new quiz games.
10. A popular television show inspired the game.
Subject Complements

14d. A subject complement is a word or word group that is in the predicate and that identifies or describes the subject.

A linking verb connects a subject complement to the subject.

EXAMPLES

- Mrs. Suarez is a helpful neighbor. [The subject complement neighbor identifies the subject Mrs. Suarez. The linking verb is connects Mrs. Suarez and neighbor.]

- The airport appears very busy. [The subject complement busy describes the subject airport. The linking verb appears connects airport and busy.]

- What smells so good? [The subject complement good describes the subject What. The linking verb smells connects What and good.]

- He was the one in the middle of the line, in fact. [The subject complement one identifies the subject He. The linking verb was connects He and one.]

- The author of that story is Anne McCaffrey. [The subject complement Anne McCaffrey identifies the subject author. The linking verb is connects author and Anne McCaffrey.]

Subject complements always complete the meaning of linking verbs, not action verbs.

Common Linking Verbs

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>appear</th>
<th>become</th>
<th>grow</th>
<th>remain</th>
<th>smell</th>
<th>stay</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>be</td>
<td>feel</td>
<td>look</td>
<td>seem</td>
<td>sound</td>
<td>taste</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

The two kinds of subject complements are the predicate nominative and the predicate adjective.

Predicate Nominatives

14e. A predicate nominative is a word or word group that is in the predicate and that identifies the subject or refers to it.
A predicate nominative may be a noun, a pronoun, or a word group that functions as a noun. A predicate nominative is connected to the subject by a linking verb.

EXAMPLES

Seaweed is algae, as I remember. [The noun algae is a predicate nominative following the linking verb is. Algæ identifies the subject Seaweed.]

Was the first runner-up really he? [The pronoun he is a predicate nominative completing the meaning of the linking verb Was. He identifies the subject runner-up.]

NOTE

Expressions such as It’s I and That was she may sound awkward even though they are correct. In informal situations, many people use It’s me and That was her. Such expressions may one day become acceptable in formal situations as well. For now, however, it is best to follow the rules of standard, formal English in all formal speaking and writing.

Be careful not to mistake a direct object for a predicate nominative. A predicate nominative always completes the meaning of a linking verb.

DIRECT OBJECT

My brother admired the acrobat. [Acrobat is the direct object of the action verb admired.]

PREDICATE NOMINATIVE

My brother became an acrobat. [Acrobat is the predicate nominative completing the meaning of the linking verb became.]

A predicate nominative may be compound.

EXAMPLES

Maya Angelou is a great poet and storyteller. [Poet and storyteller are predicate nominatives. They identify the subject Maya Angelou and complete the meaning of the linking verb is.]

Is the shark a fish or a mammal? [Fish and mammal are predicate nominatives. They refer to the subject shark and complete the meaning of the linking verb is.]

Yesterday was my birthday, Labor Day, and the first day of the week! [Birthday, Labor Day, and day are predicate nominatives. They identify the subject Yesterday and complete the meaning of the linking verb was.]
Exercise 5 Identifying Predicate Nominatives

Identify the predicate nominative in each of the following sentences.

EXAMPLES

1. Mount Rushmore is a national memorial.
   1. memorial

2. Is that bird a finch or a sparrow?
   2. finch, sparrow

3. San Juan is the capital of Puerto Rico.
4. Her mother will remain president of the P.T.A.
5. Athens, Greece, has long been a center of art and drama.
6. The platypus and the spiny anteater are mammals.
7. The object of Juan Ponce de León’s quest was the Fountain of Youth.
8. The peace pipe, or calumet, is a symbol of honor and power among American Indians.
9. Quebec is the largest province in Canada.
10. In 1959, Hawaii became our fiftieth state.
11. That bird must be an eagle.
12. The fourth planet from the sun is Mars.
13. Didn’t she eventually become a senator?
14. He remained an umpire for over thirty years.
15. You are not the only one in the room.
16. Hiawatha was a real person.
17. Aren’t you the oldest daughter in your family?
18. Could the problem with the engine be an empty gas tank?
19. Lucy Craft Laney was the founder of the Haines Normal and Industrial Institute.
20. For more information about Sadaharu Oh, Japan’s great baseball star, a good source is “Move Over for Oh-San” in Sports Illustrated.
21. Was the author Chaim Potok or Amy Tan?
22. Be an example for others.

Predicate Adjectives

14f. A predicate adjective is an adjective that is in the predicate and that describes the subject.
A predicate adjective is connected to the subject by a linking verb.

EXAMPLES
By 9:30 P.M., I was very tired. [The adjective tired describes the subject I.]
I believe that Jacob is Nigerian. [The adjective Nigerian describes the subject Jacob.]

Like a predicate nominative, a predicate adjective may be compound.

EXAMPLES
The blanket felt soft and fuzzy. [Both soft and fuzzy describe the subject blanket.]

The cave looked cold, damp, and uncomfortable. [Cold, damp, and uncomfortable all describe the subject cave.]

Exercise 6 Identifying Predicate Adjectives
Identify the predicate adjective in each of the following sentences.

EXAMPLES
1. The porpoise seemed friendly.
   1. friendly

2. Does that alligator look hungry?
   2. hungry

1. Everyone felt ready for the test.
2. Those fresh strawberries smell delicious.
3. The front tire looks flat to me.
4. Everyone appeared interested in the debate.
5. That scratch may become worse.
6. She is talented in music.
7. During the movie, I became restless and bored.
8. Van looks upset about his grades.
9. Queen Liliuokalani was quite popular with the Hawaiian people.
10. The computer program does not seem difficult to Dana.
11. After a two-hour nap, the baby was still sleepy.
12. These ants are quick and industrious.
13. Even in winter, pine trees stay green.
14. Remain calm in an emergency, and do not panic.
15. This machine has always been inexpensive but efficient.

Help
Some sentences in Exercise 6 have a compound predicate adjective.
16. A giraffe’s legs are very skinny.
17. The hikers were hot and thirsty after the long trek.
18. Isn’t that statue African?
19. Don’t be jealous of Tiger, the new kitten.
20. Is that myth Greek or Roman?

Review B  Identifying Subject Complements

Identify each subject complement in the following sentences, and label it a predicate nominative or a predicate adjective.

EXAMPLE

1. The character Jahdu is a magical trickster.
   1. trickster—predicate nominative

1. A trickster is a character who plays tricks on others.
2. Tricksters have been popular in many folk tales throughout the world.
3. Jahdu, however, is the creation of Virginia Hamilton.
4. Her collections of folk tales, such as The Dark Way and In the Beginning, are very enjoyable.
5. Jahdu may be her most unusual hero.
6. He certainly seems clever and playful.
7. Even Jahdu’s home, a forest on the Mountain of Paths, sounds mysterious.
8. Jahdu can stay invisible by using special dust.
9. He can become any object, from a boy to a taxicab.
10. Why are tricksters like Jahdu always such entertaining characters?

Review C  Identifying Complements

Identify each complement in the following sentences, and label it a direct object, an indirect object, a predicate nominative, or a predicate adjective.

EXAMPLE

1. One pet of President Theodore Roosevelt’s family was Algonquin, a pony.
   1. Algonquin—predicate nominative

1. Some presidents’ pets have become famous.
2. Someone may have shown you the book by President George Bush’s pet, Millie.
3. Millie, a spaniel, became an author.
4. With the help of Mrs. Bush, Millie told a great deal about her days at the White House.
5. President Richard Nixon’s best-known pet was Checkers, a cocker spaniel.
6. President Bill Clinton had both a cat named Socks and a dog named Buddy.
7. President William Howard Taft kept a pet cow.
8. Some presidential pets looked quite strange at the White House.
9. A pet mockingbird was a favorite companion of Thomas Jefferson.
10. Calvin Coolidge’s raccoon, Rebecca, appeared comfortable at the White House.

Review D  Identifying Complements

Identify each complement in the following sentences as a direct object, an indirect object, a predicate nominative, or a predicate adjective.

EXAMPLE

1. Have you ever seen a sari or a bindi?
   1. sari; bindi—direct object

1. Many women from India wear these items.
2. A sari is a traditional Indian garment of cotton or silk.
3. Women wrap the sari’s long, brightly printed cloth around their bodies.
4. As you can see, the softly draped sari is both graceful and charming.
5. Some women buy themselves cloth woven with golden threads for an elegant look.
6. As you might imagine, sari wearers can become quite chilled in the winter.
7. In cold climates, Indian women wear their beautiful, lightweight garments under sturdy winter coats.
8. Another traditional ornament for many Indian women is the colored dot in the middle of their foreheads.
9. The word for the dot is bindi.
10. The bindi gives the wearer a look of beauty and refinement.
Review E  Writing Sentences with Complements

Write a sentence using each of the following kinds of complements. Underline the complement or complements in each sentence. Use a variety of subjects and verbs in your sentences.

EXAMPLES
1. a compound predicate nominative
   1. My aunt is a swimmer and a jogger.
2. a direct object
   2. Lindsey tossed Sabra the softball.
3. a pronoun used as a predicate nominative
   3. The winner of the science fair is she.

1. a predicate adjective
2. an indirect object
3. a direct object
4. a predicate nominative
5. a compound predicate adjective
6. a compound predicate nominative
7. a compound direct object
8. a compound indirect object
9. a pronoun used as an indirect object
10. a pronoun used as a direct object
Chapter Review

A. Identifying Direct and Indirect Objects
Identify the direct objects and indirect objects in the following sentences.

1. James Baldwin wrote stories, novels, and essays.
2. Vita made her mother a scarf for her birthday.
3. He handed Amy and me an ad for the concert.
4. A park ranger told Mike the story of Forest Park.
5. Tropical forests give us many helpful plants.
6. Did she tell you about the bear?
7. The senator read the crowd a rousing speech.
8. The tourist gave the pigeons in Trafalgar Square some of his sandwich.
9. On the ferry to Ireland, Mr. McCourt told us the history of Dublin.
10. Bring me the wrench from the workbench, please.

B. Identifying Subject Complements
Identify the subject complements in the following sentences, and label each a predicate nominative or a predicate adjective.

11. Tuesday is the last day for soccer tryouts.
12. These peaches taste sweet and juicy.
13. Two common desert creatures are the lizard and the snake.
14. My cousin Tena has become an excellent weaver of Navajo blankets.
15. The soil in that pot feels dry to me.
16. The hero of the movie was a songwriter and a singer.
17. Why is Bill Gates so famous and so successful?
18. The three Brontë sisters were Charlotte, Emily, and Anne.
20. The movie is shallow, silly, and boring.
C. Identifying Complements

Identify the complements in the following sentences, and label each a direct object, an indirect object, a predicate nominative, or a predicate adjective.

21. Madrid is the capital of Spain.
22. Did you give me your new address?
23. These sketches of yours are wonderful!
24. Dr. Jonas Salk developed a vaccine to prevent polio.
25. Pam Adams is my best friend.
26. My father sent his mother and father two tickets to Mexico.
27. Your handwriting is neat and readable.
28. The longest play by Shakespeare is Hamlet.
29. Hugo handed his teacher the papers.
30. My father tossed the dog an old bone.
31. Whitney Houston is my favorite singer.
32. Thunder sometimes gives me a headache.
33. Are these toys safe for children?
34. My dad is buying my mother a bicycle.
35. Light reflectors for a bike are a good idea.
36. The wizard granted them three wishes.
37. Our trip to Villahermosa was short but exciting.
38. Angelo painted a beautiful picture of his mother.
39. Have you eaten lunch yet?
40. Miki is one of the best spellers in the class.

Writing Application

Using Complements in a Paragraph

Direct Objects and Indirect Objects  For National Hobby Month, students in your class are making posters about their hobbies. Each poster will include drawings or pictures and a written description of the hobby. Write a paragraph about your hobby to go on your poster. Use at least three direct objects and two indirect objects in your paragraph.
Prewriting  Choose a topic for your poster project. You could write about any collection, sport, craft, or activity that you enjoy in your free time. You could also write about a hobby that you are interested in starting. Freewrite about the hobby. Be sure to tell why you enjoy it or why you think you would enjoy it. If the hobby is new to you, find out more about it from another hobbyist or from the library.

Writing  Begin your paragraph with a main-idea sentence that clearly identifies the hobby or special interest. Check your prewriting notes often to find details you can use in describing the hobby.

Revising  Read your paragraph aloud. Does it give enough information about your hobby? Would someone unfamiliar with the hobby find it interesting? Add, cut, or rearrange details to make your paragraph easier to understand. Identify the transitive verbs in your paragraph. Have you used at least three direct objects and two indirect objects? You may need to revise some sentences.

Publishing  Read over your paragraph for spelling, grammar, and punctuation errors, and correct any you find. You and your classmates may want to make posters using your paragraphs and some pictures. Cut pictures out of magazines and brochures, or draw your own. Then, attach your writing and art to pieces of poster board and display the posters in the classroom.
A. Choosing Verbs That Agree in Number with Their Subjects

Find the subject of each of the following sentences. Then, choose the form of the verb in parentheses that agrees with the subject.

EXAMPLE   1. Janelle and Brad (are, is) in the drama club.

1. Janelle, Brad—are

1. Neither the passengers nor the pilot (was, were) injured.
2. There (are, is) two exciting new rides at the amusement park.
3. That book of Spanish folk tales (is, are) selling out.
4. (Here are, Here’s) some books about Hawaii.
5. Shel Silverstein and Ogden Nash (appeal, appeals) to both children and grown-ups.
6. Velma and her little sister (was, were) reading a story by Gyo Fujikawa.
7. (Was, Were) your parents happy with the results?
8. Why (doesn’t, don’t) she and Megan bring the lemonade with them to the picnic?
9. The dishes on that shelf (look, looks) clean.
10. Either the cats or the dog (has, have) upset the plants.
11. There (go, goes) two more deer!
12. I (am, is) crocheting an afghan.
13. Why (wasn’t, weren’t) you at the scout meeting yesterday?
14. Several paintings by that artist (are, is) now on exhibit at the mall.
15. They (doesn’t, don’t) know how to find their way to the family reunion.

B. Choosing Pronouns That Agree with Their Antecedents

For each of the following sentences, identify the pronoun that agrees with its antecedent.

EXAMPLES

1. Either Eileen or Barbara will bring (her, their) notes.
   1. her
   2. When Dennis and Aaron were younger, (he, they) rode the same bus to school.
      2. they

16. A student should proofread (his or her, their) work carefully before turning in the final copy.
17. Carlos and Andrew finally watched the videos (he, they) had borrowed.
18. Everyone on the girls’ volleyball team has picked up (her, their) equipment.
19. The cat had batted its toy under the sofa and couldn’t reach (it, them).
20. Jennifer or Sharon will leave early so that (she, they) can prepare the display.
21. Most of the trees in the park had lost (its, their) leaves.
22. If you aren’t going to finish those crossword puzzles, may I do (it, them)?
23. Each of the drawings was hung on the wall in (its, their) frame.
24. When Martin and Stephanie were not rehearsing onstage, (he or she, they) studied their lines in the hall.
25. Did one of the chickens lose (its, their) feathers?
Number

Number is the form a word takes to show whether the word is singular or plural.

15a. Words that refer to one person, place, thing, or idea are generally singular in number. Words that refer to more than one person, place, thing, or idea are generally plural in number.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Singular</th>
<th>tepee</th>
<th>I</th>
<th>baby</th>
<th>mouse</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Plural</td>
<td>tepees</td>
<td>we</td>
<td>babies</td>
<td>mice</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Exercise 1 Identifying Singular and Plural Words

Identify each of the following words as singular or plural.

EXAMPLE 1. activities
1. plural

1. peach
2. libraries
3. highway
4. knife
5. shelves
6. children
7. they
8. enchiladas
9. women
10. America
11. dirt
12. dress
13. someone
14. feet
15. fantasy
16. society
17. potatoes
18. people
19. several
20. fathers-in-law

Agreement of Subject and Verb

15b. A verb should agree in number with its subject.

A subject and verb agree when they have the same number.

(1) Singular subjects take singular verbs.

EXAMPLES The ocean roars in the distance. [The singular verb roars agrees with the singular subject ocean.]

She plays the violin well. [The singular verb plays agrees with the singular subject She.]
(2) Plural subjects take plural verbs.

EXAMPLES
Squirrels eat the seeds from the bird feeder. [The plural verb eat agrees with the plural subject Squirrels.]

They practice after school. [The plural verb practice agrees with the plural subject They.]

When a sentence contains a verb phrase, the first helping verb in the phrase agrees with the subject.

EXAMPLES
Latrice has been studying Arabic.
They have been studying Arabic.

Exercise 2
Identifying the Number of Subjects and Verbs

Identify each of the following subjects and verbs as either singular or plural.

EXAMPLE
1. flag waves
1. singular

1. socks match
2. lightning crackles
3. leaves rustle
4. mosquitoes buzz
5. Lyle baby-sits
6. bands march
7. Richelle knits
8. they listen
9. singer practices
10. horses whinny
11. crows fly
12. Shannon chooses
13. boat floats
14. we learn
15. leg aches
16. Roger guesses
17. poets write
18. cells divide
19. he knows
20. ice cube melts

Exercise 3
Changing the Number of Subjects and Verbs

All of the subjects and verbs in the following sentences agree in number. Rewrite each sentence, changing the subject and verb from singular to plural or from plural to singular.

EXAMPLE
1. Lions roar on the plains of Kenya.

1. A lion roars on the plains of Kenya.

1. Maps show the shape of a country.
2. What countries are highlighted on the map below?
3. Does an ocean form Kenya’s eastern border?
5. Mount Kenya’s peaks are covered with snow.
6. Wildlife parks have been created in Kenya.
7. In the picture below, rangers patrol a park to protect the animals.
8. They certainly have unusual transportation.
9. Many industries are located in Kenya’s capital, Nairobi.
10. Kenyan farmers grow such crops as wheat, corn, and rice.
Exercise 4 Choosing Verbs That Agree in Number with Their Subjects

For each of the following sentences, choose the form of the verb in parentheses that agrees with the subject.

EXAMPLE
1. The kitten (pounces, pounce) on the ball.
   1. pounces

1. Firefighters (risks, risk) their lives to save others.
2. The snowplow (clears, clear) the road quickly.
3. Some dancers (like, likes) reggae music best.
4. St. Augustine, Florida, (has, have) many old buildings.
5. Some students (chooses, choose) to play volleyball.
6. At the science fair, the winner always (receives, receive) a savings bond.
7. Strong winds (whistles, whistle) through the old house.
8. Each Saturday, club members (picks, pick) up the litter in the park.
9. The principal (makes, make) announcements over the loudspeaker each day.
10. Doctors (says, say) that listening to loud music can harm people’s hearing.

Problems in Agreement

Phrases Between Subject and Verb

15c. The number of a subject is not changed by a phrase following the subject.

EXAMPLES
These shades of blue are my favorite colors.

The ballerina with long black braids has been my sister’s ballet teacher for two years.

However, if the subject is the indefinite pronoun all, any, more, most, none, or some, its number may be determined by the object of a prepositional phrase that follows it.

EXAMPLES
Some of the oranges are gone. [Some refers to the plural noun oranges.]

Some of the fruit is gone. [Some refers to the singular noun fruit.]
As well as, along with, together with, and in addition to are compound prepositions. Phrases beginning with compound prepositions do not affect the number of a subject or verb.

EXAMPLE
Myra, along with her brothers, helps with household chores each evening. [The prepositional phrase along with her brothers does not affect the number of the subject Myra. Myra is singular and takes a singular verb, helps.]

Exercise 5 Choosing Verbs That Agree in Number with Their Subjects

In each of the following sentences, choose the form of the verb in parentheses that agrees with the subject.

EXAMPLE 1. Islands off the coast (has, have) a life of their own.
1. have

1. The second-largest island of the United States (is, are) located in the Gulf of Alaska.
2. The thirteen thousand people on Kodiak Island (is, are) mostly of Scandinavian, Russian, or Native Arctic descent.
3. The citizens of Kodiak (calls, call) Alaska the mainland.
4. Sacks of mail (is, are) flown there from the mainland.
5. Industries in the community, originally known as Kikhtak, (includes, include) farming, fishing, and mining.
6. One cannery on the island (cans, can) salmon eggs, or roe.
7. Many residents on the mainland (considers, consider) roe a delicacy.
8. Bears like this one (catch, catches) fresh salmon.
9. However, their search for leftovers often (create, creates) problems for Kodiak.
10. The officials of one town (has, have) had to put a special bear-proof fence around the garbage dump.
Indefinite Pronouns

Personal pronouns refer to specific people, places, things, or ideas. A pronoun that does not refer to a definite person, place, thing, or idea is called an indefinite pronoun.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Personal Pronouns</th>
<th>she</th>
<th>you</th>
<th>we</th>
<th>them</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Indefinite Pronouns</td>
<td>each</td>
<td>many</td>
<td>anyone</td>
<td>all</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

15d. The following indefinite pronouns are singular: anybody, anyone, anything, each, either, everybody, everyone, everything, neither, nobody, no one, nothing, one, somebody, someone, and something.

EXAMPLES

One of the stars is Gloria Estefan.

Each of the tourists was given a souvenir.

Does everybody in the restaurant like pita bread?

---

Exercise 6 Choosing Verbs That Agree in Number with Their Subjects

In the following sentences, choose the form of the verb in parentheses that agrees with the subject.

EXAMPLE

1. Neither of the teams (is, are) on the field.
   1. is

1. Nearly everybody in Ruby Lee’s family (enjoy, enjoys) tomato soup.
2. Neither of them (was, were) wearing a helmet.
3. Somebody in the class (speaks, speak) French.
4. Nobody in the first two rows (want, wants) to volunteer to be the magician’s assistant.
5. Each of these songs (is, are) by Natalie Imbruglia.
6. Someone in the crowd (is, are) waving a pennant, but I can’t tell whether it’s Nick.
7. Everyone in those exercise classes (has, have) lost weight.
8. One of the band members (play, plays) lead guitar and sings backup vocals.
9. No one (was, were) listening to the speaker.
10. (Do, Does) either of them know how?

---

TIPS & TRICKS

The words one, thing, and body are singular. The indefinite pronouns that contain these words are singular, too.

EXAMPLES

Was everyone there?

Somebody has answered.

Nothing works better.

HELP

Remember that the subject is never part of a prepositional phrase.
15e. The following indefinite pronouns are plural: both, few, many, several.

EXAMPLES

Both overflow occasionally.
Few of the guests are wearing formal clothes.
Many of the newer houses have built-in smoke detectors.
Several in the group say yes.

15f. The indefinite pronouns all, any, more, most, none, and some may be singular or plural, depending on their meaning in a sentence.

Often, the object of a preposition that follows the pronoun indicates whether the pronoun is singular or plural. If the object of the preposition is singular, the pronoun usually is singular. If the object is plural, the pronoun usually is plural.

EXAMPLES

All of the snow has melted. [All is singular because snow is singular. The helping verb has is singular to agree with All.]

All of the snowflakes have melted. [All is plural because snowflakes is plural. The helping verb have is plural to agree with All.]

Some of the birdseed is left in the feeder. [Some is singular because birdseed is singular. The helping verb is is singular to agree with Some.]

Some of the sunflower seeds are left in the feeder. [Some is plural because seeds is plural. The helping verb are is plural to agree with Some.]

Exercise 7  Choosing Verbs That Agree in Number with Their Subjects

Choose the correct form of the verb in parentheses in each of the following sentences.

EXAMPLE

1. Many of these puppies (needs, need) a good home.
   1. need

1. Most of the balloons (has, have) long strings.
2. All of the girls wearing purple uniforms (plays, play) on the softball team.
3. Both of the sneakers (gives, give) me blisters.
4. Most of these recipes (requires, require) ricotta cheese.
5. Some of the artists (paint, paints) landscapes.
6. Few of those songs (was, were) composed by Duke Ellington.
7. None of the apartments (has, have) been painted.
8. All of the jewels (is, are) in the safe.
9. Many in the crowd (waves, wave) signs.
10. All of the writing (is, are) upside down.

Compound Subjects

A compound subject is made up of two or more subjects that are connected by the conjunction and, or, or nor. These connected subjects share the same verb.

15g. Subjects joined by and generally take a plural verb.

EXAMPLES

Red and blue are the school’s colors.

New uniforms and instruments were ordered for the marching band.

Mr. Lewis, Mrs. Kirk, and Ms. Jefferson have applied for new jobs.

Exercise 8 Choosing Verbs That Agree in Number with Their Subjects

Identify the compound subject in each of the following sentences. Then, choose the form of the verb in parentheses that agrees with the compound subject.

EXAMPLE

1. Volcanoes and earthquakes (is, are) common in that area.

   1. Volcanoes, earthquakes—are

1. The blanket and the robe (has, have) Navajo designs.
2. Wind, hail, and freezing rain (is, are) predicted for Thursday.
3. A desk and a bookcase (were, was) moved into Ella’s room.
4. Savannas and velds (is, are) two kinds of grasslands found in Africa.
5. A delivery truck and a car with a trailer (were, was) stalled on the highway.
6. A raccoon and a possum (raid, raids) our vegetable garden every night.
7. Mandy and her aunt (goes, go) to the Chinese market every Saturday.
8. Eric and Jarvis (were, was) asked to introduce the speaker.
9. Mosquitoes and earwigs (has, have) invaded our backyard.
10. Ketchup, onions, and mustard (goes, go) well on many sandwiches.

15h. Singular subjects that are joined by or or nor take a singular verb.

EXAMPLES  A new marble statue or a fountain has been planned for the park.

On Mondays, either Manuel or Stephie baby-sits the children.

15i. Plural subjects joined by or or nor take a plural verb.

EXAMPLES  Either potatoes or beans are served with the baked chicken.

Tulips or pansies make a lovely border for a sidewalk.

15j. When a singular subject and a plural subject are joined by or or nor, the verb agrees with the subject nearer the verb.

EXAMPLES  Either the engineers or their boss has made this mistake. [The singular helping verb has agrees with the nearer subject, boss.]

Either the boss or the engineers have made this mistake. [The plural helping verb have agrees with the nearer subject, engineers.]

A soft blanket or some warm booties make a baby comfortable. [The plural helping verb make agrees with the nearer subject, booties.]

Some warm booties or a soft blanket makes a baby comfortable. [The singular verb makes agrees with the nearer subject, blanket.]
Using Correct Verbs with Compound Subjects Joined by Or or Nor

Read each of the following sentences aloud, stressing the words in italics.

1. A desert or a jungle is the setting for the play.
2. The table or the bookshelves need dusting first.
3. Neither the bus nor the train stops in our town.
4. Neither jokes nor funny stories make Gordon laugh.
5. Flowers or a colorful picture makes a room brighter and more cheerful.
6. Either the story or the poems are by Langston Hughes.
7. At this restaurant, rice or potatoes come with the tandoori chicken dinner.
8. Neither the Carolinas nor Illinois borders Texas.

Choosing Verbs That Agree in Number with Their Subjects

For each of the following sentences, choose the form of the verb in parentheses that agrees with the subject.

EXAMPLE
1. Tara and Chen (are, is) reading the same book.
   1. are

1. Many vegetables (grow, grows) quite large during Alaska’s long summer days.
2. His mother (teach, teaches) math.
3. All of the boats in the harbor (belong, belongs) to the village.
4. You and your cousins (are, is) invited to the party.
5. Either the wall clock or our wristwatches (tell, tells) the correct time.
6. The new magazines on the kitchen table (are, is) for the hospital waiting room.
7. My list of favorite singers (include, includes) Shania Twain and Brandy.
8. Both my big brother and my sister (deliver, delivers) the morning newspaper.
9. Neither pencils nor an eraser (are, is) permitted.
10. The clowns and jugglers (has, have) always been my favorite circus performers.

Style Tip

Compound subjects that have both singular and plural parts can sound awkward even though they are correct. Try to avoid such constructions by revising the sentence.

AWKWARD

Jewelry or flowers make a nice Mother’s Day gift.

REVISED

Jewelry makes a nice Mother’s Day gift, and flowers do, too.
Proofreading a Paragraph for Errors in Subject-Verb Agreement

Most sentences in the following paragraph contain a verb that does not agree in number with its subject. If a sentence is incorrect, give the correct verb form. If a sentence is already correct, write C.

EXAMPLE

[1] Holiday customs throughout the world is fun to study.

1. are

Subject After the Verb

15k. When the subject follows the verb, find the subject and make sure that the verb agrees with it.

The subject usually follows the verb in questions and in sentences that begin with there and here.

EXAMPLES

Are the birds in the nest?
Is the nest on a high branch?

There go the dragons.
There goes the dragon.

NOTE

The contractions there’s and here’s contain the verb is. These contractions are singular and should be used only with singular subjects.

EXAMPLES

There’s Uncle Max.
Here’s your allowance.
Exercise 9 Choosing Verbs That Agree in Number with Their Subjects

Identify the subject of each sentence. Then, choose the form of the verb in parentheses that agrees with the subject.

EXAMPLE 1. There (was, were) a baby rabbit hiding in the grass.
   1. rabbit—was

1. There (are, is) a new foreign-exchange student at my brother’s high school.
2. (Was, Were) the fans cheering for the other team?
3. (Has, Have) the Washingtons moved into their new home?
4. Here (stand, stands) one brave, young woman and her only son, Dale.
5. (Has, Have) the bees left the hive?
6. (There’s, There are) several correct answers to that tough question.
7. How long (has, have) the Huang family owned this tai chi studio?
8. (Here are, Here’s) the shells that we collected from Driftwood Beach.
9. (There’s, There are) a pint of fresh strawberries on the kitchen table.
10. There (were, was) Amy and Wanda in the doorway.

The Contractions Don’t and Doesn’t

15l. The word don’t is the contraction of do not. Use don’t with all plural subjects and with the pronouns I and you.

EXAMPLES I don’t have my keys. Dogs don’t meow.

   You don’t care. Don’t they know?
   We don’t agree. The boots don’t fit.

15m. The word doesn’t is the contraction of does not. Use doesn’t with all singular subjects except the pronouns I and you.

EXAMPLES He doesn’t know you. Don doesn’t like thunder.

   She doesn’t see it. Doesn’t the car run?
   It doesn’t work. A penguin doesn’t fly.
Oral Practice 2  Using Don’t and Doesn’t Correctly

Read each of the following sentences aloud, stressing the words in italics.

1. He doesn’t want us to give him a party.
2. Margo and Jim don’t have any money left.
3. Lynna doesn’t remember the punchline.
4. The bus doesn’t stop here.
5. They don’t believe that old story.
6. It doesn’t snow here in October.
7. You don’t sing the blues anymore.
8. That Zuni vase doesn’t look very old.

Exercise 10  Writing Don’t and Doesn’t with Subjects

Identify the subject in each of the following sentences. Then, choose the contraction, either don’t or doesn’t, that agrees with the subject.

EXAMPLE
1. Our cats _____ like catnip.
   1. cats—don’t

1. My parents _____ listen to rap music.
2. I _____ have much homework tonight.
3. Jerome _____ play the guitar as well as Angela does.
4. The pizza _____ have enough onions, mushrooms, green peppers, or cheese.
5. They _____ permit diving into the pool.
6. This bedroom _____ look very neat.
7. My ski boots _____ fit me this year.
8. Matthew enjoys playing lacrosse, but he _____ like to play soccer.
9. You _____ live on this street anymore.
10. It _____ seem possible that Leon grew an inch in one month.

Review C  Proofreading for Errors in Subject-Verb Agreement

Most of the following sentences contain a verb that does not agree in number with its subject. Correct each incorrect verb. If a sentence is already correct, write C.
EXAMPLE

1. Is the people in the picture worried?
   1. Are

   1. There is sharks swimming all around them.
   2. However, the people doesn’t seem to care.
   3. Has they lost their senses?
   4. No, there aren’t anything for them to worry about in this shark exhibit.
   5. There’s a transparent tunnel right through the shark pool.
   6. Everyone who visits the exhibit ride a moving walkway through the tunnel.
   7. The sharks don’t seem to mind the people.
   8. Actually, sharks in the wild doesn’t attack people very often.
   10. Caution and respect, therefore, is necessary in shark-inhabited waters.

Agreement of Pronoun and Antecedent

A pronoun usually refers to a noun or another pronoun called its antecedent. When you use a pronoun, make sure that it agrees with its antecedent.

15n. A pronoun should agree in gender with its antecedent.

Some singular personal pronouns have forms that indicate gender. Feminine pronouns refer to females. Masculine pronouns refer to males. Neuter pronouns refer to things (neither male nor female) and sometimes to animals.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Feminine</th>
<th>she</th>
<th>her</th>
<th>hers</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Masculine</td>
<td>he</td>
<td>him</td>
<td>his</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Neuter</td>
<td>it</td>
<td>it</td>
<td>its</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Reference Note

For more information on antecedents, see page 328.
EXAMPLES
Rosa said she lost her glasses.
Hank took his journal to the beach with him.
Manny chose that bike because of its color and styling.

The antecedent of a personal pronoun can be another kind of pronoun. In such cases, you can often look in a phrase that follows the antecedent to tell which personal pronoun to use.
EXAMPLE
One of those ladies left her scarf in the car.
Each of the boys brought his own softball mitt.

Some singular antecedents may be either masculine or feminine. In such cases, use both the masculine and feminine forms of the pronoun.
EXAMPLE
Nobody in the class finished his or her paper early.

NOTE
In informal speech and writing, people often use a plural pronoun to refer to a singular antecedent that may be either feminine or masculine.

INFORMAL
Every actor in the play had already memorized their lines.

Such usage is grammatically incorrect and should be avoided, especially in formal situations.

150. A pronoun should agree with its antecedent in number.

A pronoun that refers to a singular antecedent is singular in number. A pronoun that refers to a plural antecedent is plural in number.

EXAMPLES
Please put the lawn mower away after you have finished using it.
These tools will last longer if you take good care of them.

(1) Use a singular pronoun to refer to the indefinite pronouns anybody, anyone, anything, each, either, everybody, everyone, everything, neither, nobody, no one, nothing, one, somebody, someone, and something.
EXAMPLES Has one of the hamsters hurt its leg?

Someone left his or her jacket on the bus.

Everyone on the girls’ team has her own locker.

(2) Use a plural pronoun to refer to the indefinite pronouns both, few, many, and several.

EXAMPLES Both of the birds had hidden their nests well.

Several of the spiders continue to live under that log; it is where they hatched.

On a night like this, few of the travelers will reach their destinations on schedule.

(3) The indefinite pronouns all, any, more, most, none, and some may be singular or plural, depending on their meaning in a sentence.

EXAMPLES None of the cereal has lost its crunch. [None is singular because it refers to the singular noun cereal.]

None of the cereal flakes have lost their crunch. [None is plural because it refers to the plural noun flakes.]

(4) Use a singular pronoun to refer to two or more singular antecedents joined by or or nor.

EXAMPLES Either Miguel or Randall has his paintings on display.

Neither Karli nor Marta will lend you her book.

Using a pronoun to refer to antecedents of different numbers may create an unclear or awkward sentence.

UNCLEAR Neither the kittens nor their mother liked her new food. [Her agrees with the nearest antecedent, mother. However, it is unclear if the kittens disliked their own new food or if they disliked their mother’s new food.]

UNCLEAR Neither the kittens’ mother nor the kittens liked their new food. [Their agrees with the nearest antecedent, kittens. However, it is unclear if the mother disliked her own new food or if she disliked her kittens’ new food.]

AWKWARD Neither the kittens nor their mother liked their or her new food.

STYLE TIP Sentences with singular antecedents joined by or can sound awkward if the antecedents are of different genders. If a sentence sounds awkward, revise it to avoid the problem.

AWKWARD Mark or Sherrie will bring his or her flashlight.

REVISED Either Mark will bring his flashlight, or Sherrie will bring hers.
It is best to revise sentences to avoid unclear and awkward constructions like the ones on the previous page.

REVISED  Neither the kittens nor their mother liked the new food.

None of the cats liked their new food.

(5) Use a plural pronoun to refer to two or more antecedents joined by and.

EXAMPLES  When Tyrell and Davis get home, they will be surprised.

Have Chelsea and Susan tried on their new outfits?

Exercise 11 Proofreading for Pronoun-Antecedent Agreement

Most of the following sentences contain errors in pronoun-antecedent agreement. Identify the incorrect pronoun, and write the correct pronoun. If a sentence is already correct, write C.

EXAMPLE  1. Colby and everybody else brought his or her calculators.

   1. his or her—their

1. Neither Chile nor Argentina has given their consent to the project.
2. These knives are sharp; be careful with it!
3. Of course, Mrs. Chin and her daughters will give us her assistance.
4. Everyone needs to take their project home by Friday.
5. Many of the houses were decorated with ribbons on its doors for the holidays.
6. Neither Frank nor Paul has had their hair cut recently.
7. Every one of the dogs is required to have a numbered tag attached to their collar.
8. That song on the radio sounds familiar, but I can’t remember its title.
9. Roseanne and Kimberly, I believe, recently lost her glasses.
10. Have any of the horses escaped its corral?
Exercise 12  Proofreading for Pronoun-Antecedent Agreement

Most of the following sentences contain pronouns that do not agree with their antecedents. Identify each incorrect pronoun, and write the correct pronoun. If a sentence is already correct, write C.

EXAMPLE 1. On the first day, no one knew their partner.
   1. their—his or her

1. Somebody in the back row left their umbrella behind.
2. At last, all of the kittens were having their nap.
3. Several of the students had large scholarships given to him or her by local businesses.
4. Anybody in the sixth grade should know their mother’s maiden name.
5. Neither of the antique cars had their original paint job.
6. Did many of the apprentices later change his or her trade?
7. Yes, anyone can enter their pet in the contest.
8. Few of the boys know the procedure, but he will learn it quickly.
9. None of the girls brought their books.
10. Both of the packages had been opened, and it sat forgotten on the floor.

Exercise 13  Proofreading for Pronoun-Antecedent Agreement

Most of the following sentences contain a pronoun that does not agree in number or gender with its antecedent or antecedents. Identify each incorrect pronoun, and write the correct pronoun. If a sentence is already correct, write C.

EXAMPLE 1. Either Abe or Brian will give their speech first.
   1. their—his

1. Gold and silver gain worth from its rarity.
2. Ask Mr. Reed or Mr. Steinhauer if they will lend you a pen or a pencil.
3. The house at the corner and the house next door have flowers growing in front of it.
4. The birds and the butterflies have flown south to their winter homes.
5. Can even a princess or a queen have their every wish?
6. Pepper tastes good in a recipe, but not all by themselves.
7. A single red rose or a lily does not cost much, and it will look nice on the table.
8. Each of the grocery stores advertises their sales in the Sunday paper.
9. Neither Dan nor Bob likes onions on his sandwich.
10. More of the oranges have stickers on it than I thought.

Exercise 14 Proofreading for Pronoun-Antecedent Agreement

Most of the following sentences contain a pronoun that does not agree in number or gender with its antecedent or antecedents. Correct each incorrect pronoun. If a sentence is already correct, write C.

EXAMPLE 1. Delia and Dawn told me about her idea for a neighborhood show.
   1. their

   1. Both of my parents gave us his or her permission, so we used my front yard.
   2. The name of our play, which was actually a rock opera, was Strange Night, and I wrote it.
   3. Two trees lent us its trunks for a stage.
   4. Somebody bought popcorn with their allowance and sold it to the audience.
   5. Everyone in the neighborhood brought his or her own chair to the show.
   6. Either Matt or Freddy practiced his dance routine.
   7. Lisa and Tanya play guitar, so we asked her to be in our band.
   8. Joan wore a costume with pink flowers and bluebirds on it.
   9. Of course, a few dogs and one unhappy cat made its entrance at an improper moment.
   10. Tickets were only fifty cents, and we sold all of it before the show began.
A. Choosing Verbs That Agree in Number with Their Subjects

For each of the following sentences, identify the subject. Then, choose the form of the verb in parentheses that agrees with the subject.

1. The flowers in that garden (need, needs) water.
2. She and her cousin (play, plays) tennis every weekend except in the winter.
3. Either Paulette or Lily (attend, attends) all the local performances of the Alvin Ailey dancers.
4. There (was, were) several teachers at the game.
5. All of the corn (has, have) dried up.
6. (Was, Were) Liang and his sister born in Taiwan?
7. None of the trucks (has, have) arrived yet.
8. My best friend at school (doesn’t, don’t) live in our neighborhood.
9. (Was, Were) you heating some bean and cheese burritos in the microwave?
10. Here (come, comes) Elena and James.
11. Only one of my three dogs, my beagle Neptune, really (enjoy, enjoys) the beach.
12. Either the students or their teacher (has, have) decided on the color of the new bulletin board.
13. (Doesn’t, Don’t) that sweater belong to Ralph?
14. Neither the clerk nor the shoppers (was, were) aware of the fire down the street.
15. Where (was, were) you last night around supper time?
16. Several houses in our neighborhood (is, are) for sale.
17. My brother and I often (play, plays) checkers together.
18. Either he or she (is, are) next in line.
19. Marilu (don’t, doesn’t) know the name of the author.
20. There (was, were) no other people there besides us.
B. Changing the Number of Subjects and Verbs

All the subjects and verbs in the following sentences agree in number. Rewrite each sentence, changing the subject and verb from singular to plural or from plural to singular. You may have to add or delete a, an, or the.

21. Dogs bark in the middle of the night.
22. A bird sings in the distance.
23. Books have fallen off the shelf.
25. Cars move down the highway.
26. Do elephants eat grass?
27. The man has eaten lunch.
28. Many people are at the river today.
29. She has an unusual hobby.
30. Police officers protect the people.

C. Proofreading for Errors in Pronoun-Antecedent Agreement

Most of the following sentences contain a pronoun that does not agree in number or gender with its antecedent or antecedents. Write each incorrect pronoun. Then, write the pronoun that agrees with the antecedent. If a sentence is already correct, write C.

31. We had to call the parking lot attendant because two cars and one truck had its lights on.
32. Each of the ducks was tagged with an electronic device around their left leg.
33. Tim and Donny promised he would bring some snacks to the party.
34. Frances or Donna will sing her favorite number.
35. I can’t remember which one of my grandfathers spent their eighteenth and nineteenth years fighting in World War II.
36. Both my brother and my sister might lend me his or her favorite videos.
37. Somebody left the engine running in their car.
38. Did one of the applicants forget to sign his or her forms?
39. Most of the customers complained that his or her food was cold.
40. Neither of the robins had their winter plumage.

Writing Application

Using Agreement in Instructions

Subject-Verb Agreement  Your family is going on a weekend trip. A neighbor has agreed to look after your pets. Write a note giving your neighbor complete instructions for tending the animals. To avoid confusing your reader, make sure the subjects and verbs in your sentences agree.

Prewriting  Think about pets that you have had or that someone you know has had. If you have never cared for a pet, talk to someone who has. Take notes on caring for each pet.

Writing  Write a draft of your note. Explain the daily care of the pets step by step. The more specific your instructions are, the better. With your teacher’s permission, you may use informal, standard English if you are writing to someone you know well.

Revising  Read your note aloud. Can you follow each step of the instructions? Are all the steps in order? Have you included all the necessary information? If not, revise your note to make it clear and complete.

Publishing  After you have revised your note, check each sentence for subject-verb and pronoun-antecedent agreement. Take special care with any verb that is part of a contraction. Check your note for any other errors in grammar, punctuation, and spelling. Find or make pictures that illustrate each of your steps. With your teacher’s permission, mount the pictures on a storyboard and display the storyboard in your classroom.
Revising Incorrect Verb Forms in Sentences

Most of the following sentences contain an error in the use of verbs. If a verb form is incorrect, write the correct form. If the sentence is already correct, write C.

EXAMPLE
1. The last movie I seen was terrible.
   1. saw

1. My friends and I recently have set through several bad movies.
2. Has anyone ever wrote a letter to complain about how many bad movies there are?
3. Last Saturday our local theater run two bad movies!
4. My friends J. D. and Carolyn had went with me to the movie theater.
5. We had hoped that we would enjoy Out of the Swamp.
6. In the beginning of the movie, a huge swamp creature raised out of the muddy water.
7. It begun to crawl slowly toward a cow in a field.
8. The cow had been laying under a tree.
9. She never even seen the swamp monster.
10. I had sank back in my seat, expecting the monster to pounce.
11. Then the lights come back on.
12. What a disappointment—the film had broke!
13. It taked a long time before the machine came back on.
14. Some little children threwed popcorn up in the air.
15. Others drunk noisily through their straws.
16. I had sat my popcorn on the floor by my seat, and someone kicked it over.
17. Finally, the theater manager choosed another movie to show us, but it was only a silly cartoon about a penguin and a polar bear.
18. The penguin wore a fur coat it had stole from a sleeping polar bear.
19. The bear awoke, become angry, and chased the penguin all over the place.
20. Finally, the penguin gave back the coat and swum to Miami Beach to get warm.

Principal Parts of Verbs

The four basic forms of a verb are called the principal parts of the verb.

16a. The four principal parts of a verb are the base form, the present participle, the past, and the past participle.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Base Form</th>
<th>Present Participle</th>
<th>Past</th>
<th>Past Participle</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>start</td>
<td>[is] starting</td>
<td>started</td>
<td>[have] started</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>wear</td>
<td>[is] wearing</td>
<td>wore</td>
<td>[have] worn</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Type of Verb

Some people refer to the base form as the infinitive. Follow your teacher’s directions when labeling this form.

Reference Note

For more information about helping verbs, see page 347.
As you can see from their names, the principal parts of a verb are used to express time.

PRESENT TIME  She wears a blue uniform.
Ray has been wearing his baseball cap.

PAST TIME  Yesterday, we wore sweaters.
I had worn braces for three months.

FUTURE TIME  Jessica will wear her new dress at the party.
By next spring, Joey will have worn holes in those shoes.

A verb that forms its past and past participle by adding –d or –ed is called a regular verb. A verb that forms its past and past participle differently is called an irregular verb.

Regular Verbs

16b. A regular verb forms its past and past participle by adding –d or –ed to the base form.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Base Form</th>
<th>Present Participle</th>
<th>Past</th>
<th>Past Participle</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>wash</td>
<td>[is] washing</td>
<td>washed</td>
<td>[have] washed</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>hop</td>
<td>[is] hopping</td>
<td>hopped</td>
<td>[have] hopped</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>use</td>
<td>[is] using</td>
<td>used</td>
<td>[have] used</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Base Present Past Past Participle

NOTE Most regular verbs that end in –e drop the –e before adding –ing. Some regular verbs double the final consonant before adding –ing or –ed.

EXAMPLES  cause causing caused  drop dropping dropped

One common error in forming the past or past participle of a regular verb is to leave off the –d or –ed ending.

NONSTANDARD  Josh was suppose to meet us here.
STANDARD  Josh was supposed to meet us here.
Oral Practice 1 Using Regular Verbs
Read the following sentences aloud, stressing each italicized verb.

1. We are supposed to practice sit-ups this morning.
2. With the help of his guide dog, the man crossed the street.
3. Carlos and Rita have ordered soup and salad.
4. Her family had moved from Trinidad to Brooklyn.
5. Some American Indians used to use shells for money.
6. Many called shell money “wampum.”
7. Larry has saved most of his allowance for the past two months.
8. My grandmother worked at the computer store.

Exercise 1 Forming the Principal Parts of Regular Verbs
Write the four principal parts for each of the following verbs.

EXAMPLE
1. hope
   1. hope; [is] hoping; hoped; [have] hoped

   1. skate
   2. pick
   3. live
   4. move
   5. talk
   6. stun
   7. enjoy
   8. rob
   9. laugh
  10. love
  11. hop
  12. snow
  13. cook
  14. examine
  15. imagine
  16. question
  17. ask
  18. worry
  19. turn
  20. experiment

Exercise 2 Using the Principal Parts of Regular Verbs
Complete each of the following sentences with the correct form of the given italicized verb.

EXAMPLE
1. paint
   1. painted

   1. create

   1. create
2. learn What is the boy in this painting to do?
3. title Not surprisingly, Tanner this painting The Banjo Lesson.
4. live The artist, a native of Pittsburgh, from 1859 to 1937.
5. move At the age of thirty-two, Tanner to Paris to study and work.
6. visit Other African American artists Tanner in France.
7. admire For years, people have Tanner’s paintings.
8. plan Our teacher is to show us more of Tanner’s work.
9. want I have to see Tanner’s famous portrait of Booker T. Washington.

Irregular Verbs

16c. An irregular verb forms its past and past participle in some other way than by adding –d or –ed to the base form.

An irregular verb forms its past and past participle in one of the following ways:
- changing vowels

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Base Form</th>
<th>Past</th>
<th>Past Participle</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>win</td>
<td>won</td>
<td>[have] won</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>sing</td>
<td>sang</td>
<td>[have] sung</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>hold</td>
<td>held</td>
<td>[have] held</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
- changing consonants

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Base Form</th>
<th>Past</th>
<th>Past Participle</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>make</td>
<td>made</td>
<td>[have] made</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>lend</td>
<td>lent</td>
<td>[have] lent</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>hear</td>
<td>heard</td>
<td>[have] heard</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

- changing vowels and consonants

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Base Form</th>
<th>Past</th>
<th>Past Participle</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>catch</td>
<td>caught</td>
<td>[have] caught</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>draw</td>
<td>drew</td>
<td>[have] drawn</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>tear</td>
<td>tore</td>
<td>[have] torn</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

- making no change

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Base Form</th>
<th>Past</th>
<th>Past Participle</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>burst</td>
<td>burst</td>
<td>[have] burst</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>cut</td>
<td>cut</td>
<td>[have] cut</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>hurt</td>
<td>hurt</td>
<td>[have] hurt</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

NOTE If you are not sure about the principal parts of a verb, look up the verb in a current dictionary. Entries for irregular verbs list the principal parts of the verb.

Common Irregular Verbs

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Base Form</th>
<th>Present Participle</th>
<th>Past</th>
<th>Past Participle</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>become</td>
<td>[is] becoming</td>
<td>became</td>
<td>[have] become</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>begin</td>
<td>[is] beginning</td>
<td>began</td>
<td>[have] begun</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>blow</td>
<td>[is] blowing</td>
<td>blew</td>
<td>[have] blown</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>break</td>
<td>[is] breaking</td>
<td>broke</td>
<td>[have] broken</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Using Irregular Verbs

Read the following sentences aloud, stressing each italicized verb.

1. I have begun to learn karate.
2. We chose to stay indoors.
3. Earline never had drunk buttermilk before.
4. We did our homework after dinner.
5. Anna and Dee have almost broken the school record for the fifty-yard dash.
6. The wind has blown fiercely for three days.
7. Last Saturday, Isaac brought me a tape of reggae music.
8. The water pipes in the laundry room have frozen again.

Exercise 3 Identifying the Correct Forms of Irregular Verbs

Choose the correct verb form in parentheses in each of the following sentences.

EXAMPLE

1. The children have finally (broke, broken) the piñata.
   1. broken

1. We had just (began, begun) our project when I got sick.
2. The Ruiz family (drove, driven) across the country.
3. Has anyone (brung, brought) extra batteries for the radio?
4. I have finally (chose, chosen) a book to borrow.
5. Last week the lake (froze, frozen) hard enough for skating.
6. My brother and I have (gave, given) away all our comic books to the children’s hospital.
7. It is amazing that no one has ever (fell, fallen) off that old ladder.
8. Everyone (went, gone) back to the classroom to watch the videotape of the spelling bee.
9. David’s aunt (came, come) here to attend his bar mitzvah.
10. Have you (ate, eaten) at the new Philippine restaurant?
11. They should not have (drank, drunk) so much ice water after playing tennis.
12. After our guests had (ate, eaten), we all toured the city.
13. We have (came, come) to expect great things from you.
14. By the time Jason arrived, Gina had already (went, gone).
15. When they left, Uncle Enrique (gave, given) them some Cuban bread.
16. Their team (chose, chosen) another topic for the debate.
17. Oh, yes, Chris and I have (knew, known) each other since kindergarten.
18. He (did, done) the experiment that very afternoon.
19. Lenny had never (drove, driven) a tractor before that day.
20. We must have (blew, blown) up a hundred balloons for my little brother’s birthday party.
Exercise 4  Identifying the Correct Forms of Irregular Verbs

Choose the correct verb form in parentheses in each of the following sentences.

EXAMPLE  1. Jameel has already (drank, drunk) a large glass of orange juice, but he is still thirsty.
   1. drunk

1. The wool sweater (felt, feeleed) scratchy, so I did not buy it.
2. Ramón (got, gotten) a part in the school play.
3. The new houseplant has already (grew, grown) several inches since we bought it.
4. Leslie (become, became) my best friend back in first grade.
5. I (holded, held) on to the dog’s leash tightly.
6. Our neighbors have (buyed, bought) a new doghouse for their German shepherd.
7. Kani has (kept, keeped) a log of his study time.
8. Yesterday we finally (finded, found) a copy of Pat Mora’s latest book.
9. In last night’s ballgame, Heather (hit, hitted) another home run.
10. Have you ever (hear, heard) traditional Japanese music?

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>More Common Irregular Verbs</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Base Form</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>lead</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>leave</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>lose</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>pay</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>put</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>read</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>ride</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>ring</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>run</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>say</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
More Common Irregular Verbs

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Base Form</th>
<th>Present Participle</th>
<th>Past</th>
<th>Past Participle</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>see</td>
<td>[is] seeing</td>
<td>saw</td>
<td>[have] seen</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>send</td>
<td>[is] sending</td>
<td>sent</td>
<td>[have] sent</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>shrink</td>
<td>[is] shrinking</td>
<td>shrank or shrunk</td>
<td>[have] shrunk</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>sing</td>
<td>[is] singing</td>
<td>sang</td>
<td>[have] sung</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>sink</td>
<td>[is] sinking</td>
<td>sank or sunk</td>
<td>[have] sunk</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>speak</td>
<td>[is] speaking</td>
<td>spoke</td>
<td>[have] spoken</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>stand</td>
<td>[is] standing</td>
<td>stood</td>
<td>[have] stood</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>steal</td>
<td>[is] stealing</td>
<td>stole</td>
<td>[have] stolen</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>swim</td>
<td>[is] swimming</td>
<td>swam</td>
<td>[have] swum</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>take</td>
<td>[is] taking</td>
<td>took</td>
<td>[have] taken</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>teach</td>
<td>[is] teaching</td>
<td>taught</td>
<td>[have] taught</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>tell</td>
<td>[is] telling</td>
<td>told</td>
<td>[have] told</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>throw</td>
<td>[is] throwing</td>
<td>threw</td>
<td>[have] thrown</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>wear</td>
<td>[is] wearing</td>
<td>wore</td>
<td>[have] worn</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>write</td>
<td>[is] writing</td>
<td>wrote</td>
<td>[have] written</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Oral Practice 3 Using Irregular Verbs

Read the following sentences aloud, stressing the italicized verbs.

1. Despite the blinding snowstorm, the Saint Bernard had led the rescue party to the stranded hikers.
2. The school bell rang five minutes late every afternoon this week.
3. When she visited New York City, Julia saw the Ellis Island Immigration Museum.
4. How many sixth-graders would you guess have ridden on this school bus?
5. What is the longest distance you have swum?
6. George ran to the corner to see the antique fire engine.
7. Gloria Estefan sang on the awards show.
8. Have you ever written haiku?
Identifying the Correct Forms of Irregular Verbs

Choose the correct verb form in parentheses in each of the following sentences.

EXAMPLE

1. Ms. Toyama (took, taken) her new kitten to the veterinarian.

   1. took

1. Who (ran, run) faster, Jesse or Cindy?
2. That cute little puppy has (stole, stolen) a biscuit.
3. The Boys Choir of Harlem has never (sang, sung) more beautifully.
4. Jimmy’s toy sailboat had (sank, sunk) to the bottom of the lake.
5. Have you (thrown, threwed) yesterday’s paper into the recycling bin?
6. Maria had (wore, worn) her new spring outfit to the party.
7. Until yesterday, no one had ever (swam, swum) across Crystal Lake.
8. Before she followed the white rabbit through the tiny door, Alice had (shrank, shrunk) to a very small size!
9. The students have (written, wrote) a letter to the mayor.
10. I have never (spoke, spoken) to a large audience before.
11. An open convertible (lead, led) the ticker tape parade.
12. Vulcan’s hammer (rang, rung) as he worked metal for the Roman gods.
13. Why had the dog (took, taken) the portable phone outside?
14. We (saw, seen) a whole stack of petri dishes in the back of the lab closet.
15. Not only have I never (rode, ridden) a roller coaster, but I probably never will.
16. Have you (spoke, spoken) to your parents about taking those tuba lessons?
17. The children simply (sang, sung) “The Bear Went over the Mountain” until the baby sitter read them another story.
18. Why have all those people (swam, swum) across the English Channel?
19. The detective always (wore, worn) a porkpie hat.
20. The clever fox (threw, throw) the dog off the trail.
Exercise 6  Identifying the Correct Forms of Irregular Verbs

Choose the correct verb form in parentheses in each of the following sentences.

EXAMPLE 1. Uncle Alberto (led, leaded) the parade.

1. led

1. Justin (put, putted) the soy sauce on the table.
2. Have Grandma and Grandpa (left, leaved) already?
3. The family (said, sayed) grace and then ate dinner.
4. The senator (stood, stooded) up and waved to the crowd.
5. Has Leta (read, readed) the story “Miss Awful” yet?
6. After school Angela (taught, taught) me the new dance.
7. Each Christmas, Aunt Arlene has (sent, sended) me a classic children’s book.
8. Mom (paid, payed) for the groceries, and we went home.
10. Lucas has (lost, losted) his Mariah Carey CD.

Review A  Proofreading for Errors in Irregular Verbs

Most of the following sentences contain an incorrect verb form. Identify each error, and write the correct form of the verb. If a sentence is already correct, write C.

EXAMPLE 1. Many stories have been wrote about the American athlete Jesse Owens.

1. wrote—written

1. Owens broke several sports records during his career.
2. At the Olympic games of 1936, he winned four gold medals.
3. A photographer took this picture of one of Owens’s victories.
4. Owens’s career begun in an unusual way.
5. As a little boy, Owens had been very sick, and later he run to strengthen his lungs.
6. In high school, the other boys on the track team done their practicing after school, but Owens had to work.
7. Owens’s coach encouraged him to practice an hour before school and brung him breakfast every morning.
8. The coach knowed Owens’s parents couldn’t afford to send their son to college.
9. The coach seen that something had to be done, and he helped Owens’s father find a job.
10. Later, Owens went to Ohio State University, where he became a track star.

Review B  Writing the Past and Past Participle Forms of Irregular Verbs

For each of the following sentences, write the correct past or past participle form of the italicized verb.

EXAMPLE 1. take Gloria has ____ the last envelope.
   1. taken

1. read Has everyone ____ the assignment for today?
2. burst Suddenly, the door ____ open.
3. drive We have ____ on Oklahoma’s Indian Nation Turnpike.
4. find Have you ____ your socks yet?
5. speak Who ____ at this year’s Hispanic Heritage awards ceremony?
6. grow Patricia has ____ two inches in one year.
7. hear One of the hikers had ____ the distant growl of a bear.
8. give Mrs. Matsuo ____ me a copy of the book Origami: Japanese Paper-Folding.
9. freeze The water in the birdbath has ____ again.
10. choose Which play have they ____ to perform?
11. wear The Highland School Band has always ____ Scottish kilts.
12. know Noriko ____ the way to Lynn’s house.
13. teach Ms. Brook has ____ all of us how to work together.
14. send My sweater was too small, so I ____ it to my cousin.
15. ring Who ____ the doorbell a moment ago?
16. hold The puppy ____ up its injured paw.
17. hit  David ____ a ball past third base in the ninth inning.
18. leave  Have you ____ your towel at the pool?
19. see  We had never ____ a koala before.
20. buy  Jerome ____ the decorations for the party.

Review C  Proofreading for Incorrect Verb Forms

Read each of the following sentences. If the form of a verb is wrong, write the correct past or past participle form. If the sentence is already correct, write C.

EXAMPLE  1. Dr. Seuss knowed how to please readers of all ages.
  1. knew

1. Have you ever saw the wacky characters shown here?
2. The imagination of Dr. Seuss brought both of them to life.
3. You may have bursted out laughing at the Cat in the Hat, Horton the elephant, or the Grinch.
4. In one story, the mean Grinch stole Christmas.
5. In another, a bird gived Horton an egg to hatch.
6. The Lorax spoke out in support of the trees and the environment.
7. The Cat in the Hat has always wore his striped hat.
8. During his lifetime, Dr. Seuss must have wrote about fifty books with unusual characters.
9. Many children have began reading with his books.
10. Dr. Seuss choosed "The Lorax" as his own favorite book.
Tense

16d. The tense of a verb indicates the time of the action or the state of being that is expressed by the verb.

The six tenses are present, past, future, present perfect, past perfect, and future perfect. These tenses are formed from the principal parts of verbs. Each of these six tenses has its own uses. The following time line shows the relationships between tenses.

Listing all the forms of a verb is called conjugating the verb.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Conjugation of the Verb Wear</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Present Tense</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Singular</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>I wear</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>you wear</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>he, she, or it wears</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Past Tense</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Singular</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>I wore</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>you wore</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>he, she, or it wore</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Copyright © by Holt, Rinehart and Winston. All rights reserved.
Progressive Forms

Each of the six tenses also has a form called the progressive form. The progressive form expresses continuing action or state of being. It is made up of the appropriate tense of the verb be plus the present participle of a verb. The progressive is not a separate tense. It is just a different form that each tense can take.

Conjugation of the Verb Wear

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Tense</th>
<th>Singular</th>
<th>Plural</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Future Tense</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Singular</td>
<td>I will (shall) wear</td>
<td>we will (shall) wear</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>you will (shall) wear</td>
<td>you will (shall) wear</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>he, she, or it will (shall) wear</td>
<td>they will (shall) wear</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Present Perfect Tense</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Singular</td>
<td>I have worn</td>
<td>we have worn</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>you have worn</td>
<td>you have worn</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>he, she, or it has worn</td>
<td>they have worn</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Past Perfect Tense</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Singular</td>
<td>I had worn</td>
<td>we had worn</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>you had worn</td>
<td>you had worn</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>he, she, or it had worn</td>
<td>they had worn</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Future Perfect Tense</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Singular</td>
<td>I will (shall) have worn</td>
<td>we will (shall) have worn</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>you will (shall) have worn</td>
<td>you will (shall) have worn</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>he, she, or it will (shall) have worn</td>
<td>they will (shall) have worn</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

STYLE TIP

Traditionally, the helping verb shall was used only in certain situations. Now, however, shall can be used almost any time that you would use will.
The Verb Be

The verb be is the most irregular of all the irregular verbs in English. Note the many different forms of be in the following conjugation.

Present Progressive

- am, are, is wearing

Past Progressive

- was, were wearing

Future Progressive

- will (shall) be wearing

Present Perfect Progressive

- has, have been wearing

Past Perfect Progressive

- had been wearing

Future Perfect Progressive

- will (shall) have been wearing

---

Conjugation of the Verb *Be

Present Tense

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Singular</th>
<th>Plural</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>I am</td>
<td>we are</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>you are</td>
<td>you are</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>he, she, or it is</td>
<td>they are</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Present Progressive: am, are, is being

Past Tense

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Singular</th>
<th>Plural</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>I was</td>
<td>we were</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>you were</td>
<td>you were</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>he, she, or it was</td>
<td>they were</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Past Progressive: was, were being

Future Tense

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Singular</th>
<th>Plural</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>I will (shall) be</td>
<td>we will (shall) be</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>you will (shall) be</td>
<td>you will (shall) be</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>he, she, or it will (shall) be</td>
<td>they will (shall) be</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

---

HELP

The present and past progressive forms of be are the most common. The other progressive forms of be are hardly ever used.

EXAMPLES

- will (shall) be being

  - [future progressive]

- has, have been being

  - [present perfect progressive]
Conjugation of the Verb Be

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Tense</th>
<th>Singular</th>
<th>Plural</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Present Perfect Tense</td>
<td>I have been</td>
<td>we have been</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>you have been</td>
<td>you have been</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>he, she, or it has been</td>
<td>they have been</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Past Perfect Tense</td>
<td>I had been</td>
<td>we had been</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>you had been</td>
<td>you had been</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>he, she, or it had been</td>
<td>they had been</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Future Perfect Tense</td>
<td>I will (shall) have been</td>
<td>we will (shall) have been</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>you will (shall) have been</td>
<td>you will (shall) have been</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>he, she, or it will (shall) have been</td>
<td>they will (shall) have been</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Exercise 7 Identifying Tenses

Identify the verb’s tense in each of the following sentences.

EXAMPLE

1. A trolley noisily rolled down the track.

   1. past

1. Oh, no! Who fed this to the paper shredder?
2. Yes, Mom actually drinks that green stuff from the juicer.
3. Benjamin has left Des Moines.
4. Had you heard Andrés Segovia’s music before then?
5. A mosaic of colorful tiles will decorate the entryway.
6. By my twenty-first birthday, I will have qualified for my pilot’s license.
7. The committee will notify you of its decision.
8. Will you have saved enough money by then?
9. Evidently, I had thought of every possibility but one.
10. They are using the new modem now.
Consistency of Tense

16e. Do not change needlessly from one tense to another.

To write about events that take place at about the same time, use verbs in the same tense. To write about events that occur at different times, use verbs in different tenses.

INCONSISTENT  The cat jumped onto the counter and steals the sandwich. [The events happen at about the same time, but jumped is in the past tense, and steals is in the present tense.]

CONSISTENT  The cat jumped onto the counter and stole the sandwich. [Both verbs are in the past tense.]

CONSISTENT  The cat jumps onto the counter and steals the sandwich. [Both verbs are in the present tense.]

Exercise 8  Revising a Paragraph for Consistency of Tense

Read the following paragraph, and decide whether to rewrite it in the present or the past tense. Then, rewrite all of the sentences, changing the verb forms to correct any needless shifts in tense.

EXAMPLE  [1] Since our school has a computer network, we “chatted” with students from other schools.

   1. Since our school has a computer network, we “chat” with students from other schools.

   or

Since our school had a computer network, we “chatted” with students from other schools.

[1] We trade essays with other English classes. [2] They read and commented on our essays, and we read and comment on theirs. [3] We also share reports with other classes in the school. [4] In Spanish I, we are writing letters to students in Argentina. [5] We practiced our Spanish. [6] They wrote back to us in English. [7] The computer classes sent a newsletter to all the other classes every week. [8] Every student has e-mail. [9] Students send messages to each other and to teachers. [10] E-mail made it easy to ask questions about assignments.
Six Confusing Verbs

Sit and Set

The verb sit means “to be seated” or “to rest.” Sit seldom takes a direct object. The verb set means “to put (something) in a place.” Set usually takes a direct object. Notice that set has the same form for the base form, past, and past participle.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Base Form</th>
<th>Present Participle</th>
<th>Past</th>
<th>Past Participle</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>sit</td>
<td>[is] sitting</td>
<td>sat</td>
<td>[have] sat</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>set</td>
<td>[is] setting</td>
<td>set</td>
<td>[have] set</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

EXAMPLES

- I will sit in the easy chair. [no direct object]
- I will set the cushion in the easy chair. [I will set what? Cushion is the direct object.]

The worker has sat there. [no direct object]
The workers have set their equipment there. [The workers have set what? Equipment is the direct object.]

Oral Practice 4 Using the Forms of Sit and Set Correctly

Read the following sentences aloud, stressing each italicized verb.

1. Before she left, Josie had set two loaves of French bread on the table.
2. The clown sat on the broken chair.
3. They are sitting down to rest awhile.
4. Has she set her bracelet on the night stand?
5. The Clarks’ car has sat in the driveway for a week.
6. My little brother sits still for only a few seconds at a time.
7. The teacher is setting the best projects in the display case in the hall.
8. The librarian set the book about Michael Jordan on the large table.

Reference Note

For more about direct objects, see page 405.

TIPS & TRICKS

If you do not know whether to use sit or set in a sentence, try substituting put. If the sentence makes sense with put, use set. If not, use sit.

EXAMPLE

Jill (set, sat) the CDs on the shelf.

TEST

Jill put the CDs on the shelf. [The sentence makes sense with put.]

ANSWER

Jill set the CDs on the shelf.
Exercise 9  Writing the Forms of Sit and Set

Write the correct form of sit or set to complete each of the following sentences.

EXAMPLE

1. The girls ____ on the porch swing yesterday.
   1. sat

1. At the party yesterday, we ____ the birthday presents on the coffee table.
2. Then we ____ on the floor to play a game.
3. Alana had been ____ next to Rosa.
4. The Jiménez twins never ____ together, even though it was their birthday.
5. Mrs. Jiménez ____ a large cake on the table.
6. Mr. Jiménez had already ____ party hats and favors around the table.
7. He also ____ out the plates.
8. One of the twins ____ on a hat by mistake.
9. At every party we always ____ quietly while the birthday person makes a wish.
10. Yesterday, we ____ still twice as long for the Jiménez twins!

Rise and Raise

The verb rise means “to go up” or “to get up.” Rise does not take a direct object. The verb raise means “to lift (something) up” or “to cause (something) to rise.” Raise usually takes a direct object.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Base Form</th>
<th>Present Participle</th>
<th>Past</th>
<th>Past Participle</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>rise</td>
<td>[is] rising</td>
<td>rose</td>
<td>[have] risen</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>raise</td>
<td>[is] raising</td>
<td>raised</td>
<td>[have] raised</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

EXAMPLES

The winner is rising to receive his medal. [no direct object]
The winner is raising her arms in triumph. [The winner is raising what? Arms is the direct object.]
Taxes rose quickly. [no direct object]
Congress raised taxes. [Congress raised what? Taxes is the direct object.]
Using the Forms of Rise and Raise Correctly

Read the following sentences aloud, stressing each italicized verb.

1. The audience had risen from their seats to applaud Bonnie Raitt.
2. They raised the curtains for the play to start.
3. Dark smoke rose from the fire.
4. They always rise early on Saturday mornings.
5. The wind had raised the Chinese dragon kite high above the trees.
6. They are raising the banners.
7. The huge crane can raise the steel beams off the ground.
8. The temperature was rising quickly.

Writing the Forms of Rise and Raise

To complete each of the following sentences, supply the correct form of rise or raise.

EXAMPLE 1. We will _____ a banner.
   1. raise

1. Before the game the color guards _____ the flag.
2. The fans were _____ for the national anthem.
3. The pitcher _____ his arm to throw the ball.
4. The baseball seemed to _____ above the batter’s head.
5. Someone in front of me was _____ a sign that blocked my view.
6. I have _____ my voice to cheer a hundred times during one game.
7. When the sun had _____ too high, the players couldn’t see the high fly balls.
8. Whenever someone hits a home run, the fans _____ their mitts to catch the baseball.
9. Yesterday, everyone _____ when Marcus Jackson hit a home run.
10. As soon as the ninth inning was over, we _____ to leave.
Lie and Lay

The verb lie generally means “to recline,” “to be in a place,” or “to remain lying down.” Lie does not take a direct object. The verb lay generally means “to put (something) down” or “to place (something).” Lay usually takes a direct object.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Base Form</th>
<th>Present Participle</th>
<th>Past</th>
<th>Past Participle</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>lie</td>
<td>[is] lying</td>
<td>lay</td>
<td>[have] lain</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>lay</td>
<td>[is] laying</td>
<td>laid</td>
<td>[have] laid</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

EXAMPLES

The beam is lying near the edge. [no direct object]

The workers are laying the beams near the edge. [The workers are laying what? Beams is the direct object.]

The newspaper lay on the kitchen table. [no direct object]

Sara laid the newspaper on the kitchen table.

[Sara laid what? Newspaper is the direct object.]

The beach blanket has lain under the umbrella. [no direct object]

They have laid the beach blanket under the umbrella. [They have laid what? Blanket is the direct object.]

Oral Practice 6 Using the Forms of Lie and Lay Correctly

Read the following sentences aloud, stressing each italicized verb.

1. The corrected test paper lay on the desk.
2. My teddy bear lies on my bed all day.
3. Before the sale, the clerk laid samples on the counter.
4. Have those toys lain outside too long?
5. The Inuit hunter was laying his harpoon on the ice.
6. Last night, I was lying on the sofa reading a book when the phone rang.
7. I think the hero has laid a trap for the villain.
8. Lay the baby gently in the crib.
Exercise 11 Writing the Forms of Lie and Lay

To complete each of the following sentences, write the correct form of lie or lay.

EXAMPLE 1. Children often ____ toys in the wrong places.
   1. lay

1. The remote control for the television is ____ under the rocking chair.
2. How long has it ____ there?
3. My brother Ramón probably ____ it there last night.
4. He was ____ on the floor, watching television.
5. Julia, my younger sister, is always ____ her toys in front of the television set.
6. She has ____ little parts from her board games all over the house.
7. Whenever Mom and Dad find one of these parts, they usually ____ it on the bookcase.
8. Yesterday, Dad ____ down on some hard plastic pieces on the sofa.
9. Now those broken bits of plastic ____ at the bottom of the wastebasket.
10. Today, Julia has ____ every single toy safely in the toy chest in her room.

Review D Identifying the Correct Forms of Sit and Set, Rise and Raise, and Lie and Lay

Choose the correct verb from the pair in parentheses in each of the following sentences.

EXAMPLE 1. Dad (sat, set) the scrapbook from our visit to the Hopi reservation on the table and opened it to the picture shown on the next page.
   1. set

1. Do you know what kind of doll is (lying, laying) in this Hopi girl’s arms?
2. Someone had (lain, laid) down a kachina doll, and this girl picked it up.
3. A Hopi artist probably had (sat, set) for hours working on this one doll.
4. At the reservation, everyone \( (\text{sat, set}) \) quietly during the Hopi Snake Dance.

5. One dancer had \( (\text{risen, raised}) \) a snake above his head for the crowd to see.

6. The growing corn \( (\text{rises, raises}) \) high in the Hopi country of Arizona.

7. Hot and very tired, I \( (\text{lay, laid}) \) on a bench at the Hopi trading post.

8. In a moment, Dad had \( (\text{rose, raised}) \) his camera to take a picture of me there.

9. When we entered the pueblo, a Hopi woman \( (\text{rose, raised}) \) from her chair to greet us.

10. Smiling, the woman \( (\text{sat, set}) \) a beautiful coiled basket on the counter.

Review E  Proofreading for Correct Verb Forms

Identify the incorrect verb form in each of the following sentences. Then, write the correct form.

Example

1. Lately, everyone in our neighborhood has did more to keep physically fit.

   1. \( \text{did—done} \)
1. No one is setting down anymore—except on stationary bicycles.
2. My mom has rode 150 miles so far.
3. In addition, I have never knew so many aerobic dancers.
4. Yesterday afternoon, I swum twelve laps in the pool.
5. Last month, a famous exercise instructor choosed our neighborhood for her new fitness center.
6. Many people seen her interviews on local talk shows.
7. All of a sudden, adults and children have began going to the center.
8. Each person is suppose to use different kinds of equipment.
9. Last night, I rose a fifty-pound weight.
10. So far, no one has broke a leg on the cross-country ski machine.
11. Mom had went to several gyms over the years.
12. After my workout, I just laid on the floor, out of breath.
13. She and I have took several classes at that gym.
14. I must have ran a thousand miles on that treadmill.
15. We never worn fancy outfits, only sweat pants and T-shirts.
16. I had chose an hour soaking in the whirlpool as my first exercise plan.
17. However, I seen the dancers and heard the music.
18. Now I have knowed many of the dancers for a long time.
19. My energy level has raised, and I’m happier.
20. Don’t sit those free weights down; keep at it!

Review F Using the Correct Forms of Verbs

Write the correct past or past participle form of the verb in parentheses in each of the following sentences.

EXAMPLE  1. I have (grow) tired of this TV program.
   1. grown

1. Grant (feel) proud and happy after winning the chess tournament.
2. Over the years, I have (keep) all the postcards from my grandparents.
3. Mother has (lose) the sash for her kimono.
4. The room quickly (become) crowded with curious fans.
5. Mr. Shaw (tell) us to read about the life of Harriet Jacobs.
6. Have you (make) the hat for your costume yet?
7. All night the faithful Irish setter (stand) watch over the homestead.
8. Has Yoshi ever (ride) a horse before?
9. Have you ever (hear) the story of Pocahontas?
10. Juanita (say) the biscuits would be ready soon.
11. As the sun set, the temperature (begin) to drop.
12. A squirrel had (eat) all the seed we put out for the birds.
13. Has Darius (run) ten laps yet?
14. All the band members (wear) the same color socks on Friday.
15. At halftime, our team (lead) by two goals.
16. The secret agent had easily (break) the code and deciphered the message.
17. A whippoorwill (sing), crickets chirped, and a breeze rustled the leaves.
18. While I washed the dishes, Diane (take) the trash out.
19. A baby raccoon had (fall) from the tree into the soft pile of pine needles.
20. Have you (give) Dad his Father’s Day present?
A. Using Correct Forms of Irregular Verbs

For each of the following sentences, write the correct past or past participle form of the verb in parentheses.

1. We had (ride) in the car for several hours.
2. Six inches of snow had (fall) the night before.
3. I never (know) snow was so beautiful.
4. The wind had (blow) some of it into high drifts.
5. As we (go) past them, they looked like white hills.
6. My brother Ernest had (bring) some comics to read.
7. I (lie) back and looked at the scenery.
8. Unfortunately, the car heater had (break).
9. We all (wear) our heavy coats and mittens.
10. However, my ears almost (freeze).
11. My favorite wool cap had (shrink) to a tiny size in the dryer.
12. During the long ride home, we (sing) some songs.
13. At noon, we (eat) lunch at a roadside cafeteria.
14. The clerk (rise) and asked if we would like some hot chocolate.
15. I (drink) two cups of hot cocoa.
16. Mom and I (run) around the parking lot to wake up.
17. After lunch, Ernie (begin) to feel sleepy.
18. I had never (sit) so long in a car before.
19. All warmed up, Ernie (sink) into a deep sleep.
20. We had (come) a long way.

B. Writing the Past and Past Participle Forms of Irregular Verbs

For each of the following sentences, write the correct past or past participle form of the verb in parentheses.

21. Have you (hear) the good news about Barbara?
22. The lower branches of the tree (break) in the storm.
23. Our current mayor has (lead) three successful administrations.
24. The train was crowded, so we stood in the aisle and (hold) on to the luggage rack.
25. The tired dog (lie) down as soon as it arrived home.
26. As far as I know, they haven’t (see) that movie.
27. She has always (set) the table herself, but tonight she has no time.
28. “So far, children,” said Ms. Espinosa, “that robin has (fly) all the way from Minnesota on its way to the Gulf Coast for the winter.”
29. She (wear) her blue parka to the parade.
30. “Time to get up, everyone!” said Mom from the base of the stairs. “The sun has already (rise)”

C. Proofreading for Correct Verb Forms
For each of the following sentences, identify the incorrect verb form. Then, write the correct form.

31. When Dad was a boy in Iowa, he keeped bees.
32. Before I laid down to sleep, I had packed everything I would need for today’s trip.
33. Has Everett sit out the food for the picnic?
34. Nobody in our family had ever went to college before Mom did.
35. I have never rode on a camel, but I’d like to someday.
36. Yesterday’s class begun with a speed drill.
37. She felt triumphant because she had never hitted a fly ball before.
38. The unit stood at attention as Corporal Martinez rose the flag.
39. The builder lay the plans on the table.
40. Both Leyla and Hussain brung some delicious falafel to the anniversary party.
Writing Application

Using Verbs in a Description

Forms and Tenses of Verbs  Many scientists and writers make predictions about the future. They base their predictions on past and present trends. Write a paragraph or two describing how one everyday item such as a car, a house, a home appliance, or a school might be different one hundred years from now. In your description, be sure to use the correct forms and tenses of verbs.

Prewriting  Choose a topic that interests you, such as video games or skyscrapers. Based on what you already know about the topic, make some predictions about the future. Write down as many details as you can.

Writing  Begin your draft by telling what time period your predictions concern. Then, use your notes to write a clear, vivid description of something in that future time.

Revising  Have a classmate read your composition. How does it sound? Do your predictions sound possible? Add, cut, or revise details to make your description clear and believable.

Publishing  Read your paragraph carefully to check for errors in grammar, spelling, and punctuation. Take special care with the forms of verbs. Use a dictionary to check the forms of any irregular verbs you are not sure about. You may want to present your final draft to the class as a multimedia computer presentation, an illustrated bulletin board, or a three-dimensional mobile.
Using Pronouns Correctly

Subject and Object Forms

Revising Incorrect Pronoun Forms in Sentences

Most of the following sentences contain an incorrect pronoun form. If a pronoun is used incorrectly, write the incorrect form of the pronoun and give the correct form. If a sentence is already correct, write C.

EXAMPLE

1. The police officer complimented us and they on knowing the rules of bicycle safety.
   1. they—them

1. The members of our bicycle club are Everett, Coral, Jackie, and me.
2. Us four call our club the Ramblers, named after a bicycle that was popular in the early 1900s.
3. Mrs. Wheeler gave an old three-speed bike to we four.
4. Whom explained the special bicycle safety course?
5. Our cousins gave Coral and I their old ten-speed bikes.
6. Each of we Ramblers rides after school.
7. Sometimes we ride with the members of the Derailers, a racing club.
8. On Saturday mornings, we and them meet at the school.
9. Who told us about the bike trail along the river?
10. Everett warned we three about being careful because sometimes the Derailers are reckless.
11. He saw other riders and they at an intersection.
12. A car almost ran over two of them!
13. When the Ramblers ride with the Derailers, it is us who obey all the safety rules.
14. Everett, Coral, Jackie, and I entered a safety contest.
15. Other clubs and us competed for a tandem bike.
16. Everett and her taught Jackie how to ride it and shift gears.
17. One by one, us contestants went through the course.
18. Of all of us riders, the most careless were the Derailers.
19. Jackie and me were nervous as the judges were deciding.
20. Finally, the judges announced that the winners of the contest were us Ramblers.

The Forms of Personal Pronouns

The form of a personal pronoun shows how it can be used in a sentence. Pronouns used as subjects and predicate nominatives are in the subject form.

EXAMPLES

He and I went to the post office. [subject]

The winner of the marathon is she. [predicate nominative]

Pronouns used as direct objects and indirect objects of verbs and as objects of prepositions are in the object form.

EXAMPLES

Mr. García helped him and me with yesterday’s homework. [direct objects]

The clerk gave us the package. [indirect object]

When is Theo going to give the flowers to her? [object of a preposition]

Possessive forms (my, mine, your, yours, his, her, hers, its, their, theirs, our, ours) are used to show ownership or possession.

EXAMPLES

My sister had to turn the box on its end to get it through the door.

A mother bear is very protective of her cubs.
Notice that the pronouns you and it are the same in the subject form and object form.

NOTE Some authorities prefer to call possessive forms such as our, your, and their possessive adjectives. Follow your teacher’s instructions regarding possessive forms.

Exercise 1  Identifying Pronouns

Identify each of the following pronouns as a subject form, an object form, or a possessive form. If the pronoun can be used as either the subject form or the object form, write subject or object.

EXAMPLE

1. they
   1. subject form

1. him  3. it  5. our  7. you  9. he
2. me  4. we  6. them  8. their  10. your

Exercise 2  Identifying Pronouns in Sentences

For each of the following sentences, identify the pronoun in italics as a subject form, an object form, or a possessive form.

EXAMPLE

1. Ever since he could remember, Edward Bannister had wanted to be an artist.
   1. subject form
1. He had to work hard to reach his goal.
2. Although Bannister was born in Canada, many consider him an American artist.
3. Bannister’s parents died when he was young.
4. The little money they had was left to their son.
5. The young Bannister couldn’t afford paper, so he drew on barn doors and fences.
7. She was from Rhode Island, where her people, the Narragansett, lived.
8. In 1876, a Philadelphia artistic society recognized Bannister by awarding him a gold medal for the painting shown here.
9. Bannister treasured his prize and regarded it as a great honor.
10. What do you think of the painting?

The Subject Form

Pronoun as Subject

The subject tells whom or what the sentence is about.

17a. Use the subject form for a pronoun that is the subject of a verb.
To test whether a pronoun is used correctly in a compound subject, try each form of the pronoun separately.

Example

(She, Her) and (I, me) practiced hard. [She practiced or Her practiced? I practiced or me practiced?]

Answer

She and I practiced hard.

---

Examples

I walked to school. [I is the subject of the verb walked.]

Did they get to the theater on time? [They is the subject of the verb Did get.]

Dan said that he and she live on the Tigua reservation near El Paso, Texas. [He and she are the compound subject of the verb live.]

---

Oral Practice 1 Using Pronouns as Subjects

Read the following sentences aloud, stressing the italicized pronouns.

1. She and Ahmed solve crossword puzzles.
2. Are they very hard puzzles to solve?
3. Dad and I finished putting together a jigsaw puzzle last night.
4. We worked for three hours!
5. Finally, you and he found the missing pieces.
6. He and I liked the completed picture of flamenco dancers.
7. They are from Spain.
8. We agreed that we would like to see them dance.

---

Exercise 3 Identifying Correct Pronoun Forms

Choose the correct form of the pronoun in parentheses in each of the following sentences.

Example

1. Brad and (me, I) wrote a skit based on the myth about Pygmalion.
   1. I

1. (Him, He) and I thought the myth was funny.
2. (We, Us) asked Angela to play a part in the skit.
3. Neither (she, her) nor Doreen wanted to play a statue that came to life.
4. Finally Brad and (me, I) convinced Doreen that it would be a funny version of the myth.
5. (Him, He) and I flipped a coin to see who would play the part of Pygmalion.
6. The next day (we, us) were ready to perform.
7. Doreen and (me, I) began giggling when Brad pretended to be the beautiful statue.
8. In the skit, when Pygmalion returned from the festival of Venus, (him, he) and the statue were supposed to hug.
9. Instead of hugging, (they, them) laughed too hard to say the lines correctly.
10. Doreen, Brad, and (I, me) finally took a bow, and the class applauded.

Pronoun as Predicate Nominative

A predicate nominative completes the meaning of a linking verb and identifies or refers to the subject of the sentence.

17b. Use the subject form for a pronoun that is a predicate nominative.

A pronoun used as a predicate nominative usually follows a form of the verb be (such as am, are, is, was, were, be, been, or being).

EXAMPLES

- The next singer is she. [She completes the meaning of the linking verb is and identifies the subject singer.]
- The first two speakers might be he and I. [He and I complete the meaning of the linking verb might be and identify the subject speakers.]
- Was the winner really she? [She completes the meaning of the linking verb Was and identifies the subject winner.]

Oral Practice 2 Using Pronouns as Predicate Nominatives

Read the following sentences aloud, stressing the italicized pronouns.

1. The stars of that movie were he and she.
2. The actors from Australia must be they.
3. Of course, the mountain man is he.
4. Was the actress really she, Jeremy?
5. The director could have been he.
6. The villains are he and they.
7. The movie’s biggest fans may be you and I.
8. The next ones to rent the film will be we, I think.
Exercise 4  Identifying Pronouns Used as Predicate Nominatives

Choose the correct form of the pronoun in parentheses in each of the following sentences.

EXAMPLE 1. The man behind the curtain is \((him, he)\).

1. he

1. The winners are you and \((me, I)\).
2. It might have been \((he, him)\).
3. The cooks for the traditional Vietnamese meal were \((them, they)\).
4. Could it have been \((we, us)\)?
5. Every year the speaker has been \((her, she)\).
6. That was Carl and \((they, them)\) in the swimming pool.
7. The volleyball fans in our family are Dad and \((she, her)\).
8. First on the Black History Month program will be \((us, we)\).
9. Was that \((he, him)\) at the door?
10. Last year, the class treasurer was \((he, him)\).

Exercise 5  Writing Sentences with Pronouns Used as Predicate Nominatives

Supply pronouns to complete the following sentences correctly. Use a variety of pronouns, but do not use *you* or *it*.

EXAMPLE 1. The man in the silliest costume was ____.

1. he

1. The person in the gorilla suit must be ____.
2. The next contestants will be ____ and ____.
3. The winners should have been ____.
4. Can that singer be ____? Samuel?
5. The one sitting in the back row was ____.
6. The first ones in line were my friends and ____.
7. “Excellent interpreters of Shakespeare’s characters were ____ and ____,” said Mr. Simmons.
8. Are the next entrants on stage ____?
9. The leader of that dragon team is probably ____.
10. Finalists in the contest will be Ted, Lisa, or ____.
Review A Identifying Correct Pronoun Forms

Choose the correct form of the pronoun in parentheses in each of the following sentences.

EXAMPLE

1. Last summer Carl, Felicia, and (us, we) went to San Antonio, Texas.
   1. we

1. Carl and (she, her) took these photographs.
2. Early one morning (him, he) and (she, her) visited the Alamo.
3. That could be (him, he) in the crowd outside the Alamo.
4. Felicia and (I, me) listened to a mariachi band on the Riverwalk.
5. Of course, the musicians in the picture at right are (they, them).
6. Don’t (they, them) look as though they’re having a good time?
7. Carl and (I, me) enjoyed visiting the Spanish Governor’s Palace in the afternoon.
8. Felicia, Carl, and (us, we) particularly liked the palace.
9. In fact, the first guests there that morning were (us, we).
10. Maybe you and (they, them) will get a chance to visit San Antonio someday.

The Object Form

Pronoun as Direct Object

A direct object completes the meaning of an action verb and tells who or what receives the action of the verb.
17c. Use the object form for a pronoun that is the direct object of a verb.

EXAMPLES

The teacher thanked me for cleaning the chalkboard.
*Teacher is the subject of the verb thanked. The teacher thanked whom? The direct object is me.*

The answer surprised us.
*Answer is the subject of the verb surprised. The answer surprised whom? The direct object is us.*

Have you told him about the change in plans?
*You is the subject of the verb Have told. You have told whom? The direct object is him.*

Fred saw them and me last night.
*Fred is the subject of the verb saw. Fred saw whom? The compound direct object is them and me.*

Oral Practice 3 Using Pronouns as Direct Objects

Read the following sentences aloud, stressing the italicized pronouns.

1. Kathy found them and me by the fountain.
2. Mr. Winters took us to the rodeo.
3. Did you see her and him at the Cajun restaurant?
4. Tyrone frightened us with his rubber spider.
5. Ellis invited Luis, Jared, and me to his party.
6. The mayor met them at Howard University.
7. Uncle Ken thanked her for the gift.
8. The fans cheered Anthony and her.

Exercise 6 Identifying Pronouns Used as Direct Objects

Choose the correct form of the pronoun in parentheses in each of the following sentences.

EXAMPLE

1. Marcus met Howard and (I, me) at the game.
   1. me

1. Mrs. Freeman invited Leroy and (I, me) to a Kwanzaa party.
2. The spectators watched (we, us) and (they, them).
3. The shoes don’t fit (her, she) or (I, me).
4. Sean called Marco and (he, him) on the telephone.
5. Our new neighbors asked (we, us) for directions to the synagogue.
6. They hired Tía and (us, we) to rake their yard.
7. The puppy followed Louis and (he, him) all the way home.
8. Last week, friends from Panama visited (us, we).
9. Odessa thanked (her, she) and (me, I) for helping.
10. The usher showed Greg and (them, they) to their seats.

Pronoun as Indirect Object

An indirect object may come between an action verb and a direct object. An indirect object tells to whom or to what or for whom or for what something is done.

17d. Use the object form for a pronoun that is the indirect object of a verb.

EXAMPLES

Scott handed me a note. [Scott handed what? Note is the direct object. To whom did he hand a note? The indirect object is me.]

Coretta baked them some muffins. [Coretta baked what? Muffins is the direct object. For whom did Coretta bake muffins? The indirect object is them.]

Elizabeth sent him and me some oranges from Florida. [Elizabeth sent what? Oranges is the direct object. To whom did Elizabeth send oranges? The compound indirect object is him and me.]

Oral Practice 4  Using Pronouns as Indirect Objects

Read the following sentences aloud, stressing the italicized pronouns.

1. Mr. Krebs showed Bill and them the rock collection.
2. Paco told me the answer to the riddle.
3. Mr. Thibaut gives us lacrosse lessons.
4. We bought her and him a present.
5. The artists drew us and them some pictures.
6. The server brought me a bagel with cream cheese.
7. A pen pal in Hawaii sent her some shells.
8. My uncle Shannon told us a funny story about leprechauns.
Exercise 7  Identifying Pronouns Used as Indirect Objects

Choose the correct form of the pronoun in parentheses in each of the following sentences.

EXAMPLE  1. At the start of class, Mr. Chou assigned (we, us) new seats.

1. \textit{us}

1. The store clerk gave (they, them) a discount.
2. For lunch, Anthony fixed (he, him) and (she, her) bean burritos with salsa.
3. Would you please show (her, she) and (me, I) that Navajo dream catcher?
4. Those green apples gave both Christopher and (he, him) stomachaches.
5. The waiter brought (us, we) some ice water.
6. Why don’t you sing (she, her) a lullaby?
7. Have they made (we, us) the costumes for the play?
8. An usher handed (me, I) a program of the recital.
9. The Red Cross volunteers showed (we, us) and (they, them) a movie about first aid.
10. Please send (me, I) your new address.

Review B  Revising Incorrect Pronoun Forms in Paragraphs

In most of the sentences in the following paragraphs, at least one pronoun has been used incorrectly. Identify each incorrect pronoun, and give the correct form. If all of the pronouns in a sentence are already correct, write C.

1. \textit{I—me}

[1] At the Museum of Natural History, Luisa and me wanted to see the American Indian exhibit. [2] The museum guide showed she and I the displays of Hopi pottery and baskets. [3] Both she and I were especially interested in the kachina dolls. [4] After half an hour, Ms. Fisher found us.
Then Luisa, her, and I joined the rest of the group. Another guide had been giving Ms. Fisher and they information about the Masai people in Africa. Them and us decided to see the exhibit about ancient Egypt next.

A group of little children passed Ms. Fisher and we on the stairway as we were going to the exhibit. The ones who reached the exhibit first were them. Jeff, the jokester, said that they wanted to find their “mummies.” Ms. Fisher and us laughed at the terrible pun. She gave him a pat on the back. We asked her not to encourage him. The museum guide led the children and we to the back of the room. There, he showed us and they a model of a pyramid. Then Ms. Fisher and him explained how the Egyptians prepared mummies. Was it her who asked about King Tutankhamen? Of course, Luisa and me recognized this golden mask right away. As we were leaving, the guide gave the children and we some booklets about King Tut and other famous ancient Egyptians. He handed Luisa and I booklets about the builders of the pyramids.

Pronoun as Object of a Preposition

The object of a preposition is a noun or a pronoun that follows a preposition. Together, the preposition, its object, and any modifiers of that object make a prepositional phrase.

17e. Use the object form for a pronoun that is the object of a preposition.

EXAMPLES above me beside us with them for him toward you next to her

Oral Practice 5 Using Pronouns as Objects of Prepositions

Read the sentences on the following page aloud, stressing the italicized pronouns.
1. The lemonade stand was built by Chuck and me.
2. The younger children rode in front of us.
3. Just between you and me, that game wasn’t much fun.
4. Everyone has gone except the Taylors and them.
5. Give the message to him or her.
6. Why don’t you sit here beside me, Ben?
7. Were those pictures of Amish families taken by him?
8. Donna went to the Cinco de Mayo parade with them.

Exercise 8 Identifying Pronouns Used as Objects of Prepositions

Choose the correct form of the pronoun in parentheses in each of the following sentences.

EXAMPLE

1. Someone else should have sent an invitation to (they, them).

   Answer

   They should have sent an invitation to them.

---

1. In the first round, Michael Chang played against (he, him).
2. Did you sit with Martha or (her, she) at the game?
3. Peggy sent homemade birthday cards to Josh, you, and (them, they).
4. There is a bee flying around (he, him) and you.
5. If you have a complaint, tell it to Mr. Ramis or (she, her).
6. Ms. Young divided the projects among (us, we).
7. This secret is strictly between you and (me, I).
8. Can you believe the weather balloon dropped right in front of (we, us)?
9. Please don’t ride the Alaskan ferry without Jim and (me, I).
10. One of the clowns threw confetti at us and (they, them).

Special Pronoun Problems

Who and Whom

The pronoun who has two different forms. Who is the subject form. Whom is the object form.

When you are choosing between who and whom in a question, follow these steps:
STEP 1 Rephrase the question as a statement.
STEP 2 Identify how the pronoun is used in the statement—as a subject, a predicate nominative, a direct object, an indirect object, or an object of a preposition.
STEP 3 Determine whether the subject form or the object form is correct according to the rules of standard English.
STEP 4 Select the correct form—who or whom.

EXAMPLE (Who, Whom) rang the bell?
STEP 1 The statement is (Who, Whom) rang the bell.
STEP 2 The pronoun is the subject of the verb rang.
STEP 3 As the subject, the pronoun should be in the subject form.
STEP 4 The subject form is who.
ANSWER Who rang the bell?

EXAMPLE (Who, Whom) does Lindsay see?
STEP 1 The statement is Lindsay does see (who, whom).
STEP 2 The pronoun is the direct object of the verb does see.
STEP 3 A direct object should be in the object form.
STEP 4 The object form is whom.
ANSWER Whom does Lindsay see?

EXAMPLE To (who, whom) did Jo give the gift?
STEP 1 The statement is Jo did give the gift to (who, whom).
STEP 2 The pronoun is the object of the preposition to.
STEP 3 The object of a preposition should be in the object form.
STEP 4 The object form is whom.
ANSWER To whom did Jo give the gift?

Oral Practice 6 Using Pronouns Correctly in Sentences

Read the following sentences aloud, stressing the italicized pronouns.

1. Who owns the sailboat over there?
2. To whom did you throw the ball?
3. Whom did Miguel marry?
4. Who was the stranger with the ten-gallon hat?
5. For whom did you knit that sweater?
6. Who is the author of that book about Jackie Robinson?
7. Whom did Josh choose as his subject?
8. By whom was this work painted?

Pronouns with Appositives

Sometimes a pronoun is followed directly by a noun that identifies the pronoun. Such a noun is called an appositive. To help you choose which pronoun to use before an appositive, omit the appositive and try each form of the pronoun separately.

EXAMPLE
(We, Us) Girl Scouts swam laps. [Girl Scouts is the appositive identifying the pronoun. We swam laps or Us swam laps?]

ANSWER
We Girl Scouts swam laps.

EXAMPLE
The director gave an award to (we, us) actors. [Actors is the appositive identifying the pronoun. The director gave an award to we or The director gave an award to us?]

ANSWER
The director gave an award to us actors.

Exercise 9  Identifying the Correct Forms of Pronouns in Sentences

Choose the correct form of the pronoun in parentheses in each of the following sentences.

EXAMPLE
1. (Who, Whom) can do the most jumping jacks?
   1. Who

1. (We, Us) baseball players always warm up before practice.
2. (Who, Whom) knows how to stretch properly?
3. Coach Anderson has special exercises for (we, us) pitchers.
4. To (who, whom) did the coach assign thirty sit-ups?
5. (Who, Whom) do you favor for tomorrow’s game?
6. Would you teach (we, us) girls that new batting stance?
7. Please take (we, us) fans with you to the next game.
8. The ones with the new gloves and jerseys should have been (we, us) fielders.
9. (Who, Whom) should start the lineup?
10. With (who, whom) do you practice after school?

Review C  Revising Incorrect Pronoun Forms in Sentences

Identify each incorrect pronoun in the following sentences. Then, write the correct pronoun. If a sentence is already correct, write C.

EXAMPLE

1. At first Karen and me thought that Lucy was imagining things.
   1. me—I

1. Lucy told Karen and I that creatures from outer space had just landed.
2. She was certain it was them at the park.
3. Whom would believe such a ridiculous story?
4. Us girls laughed and laughed.
5. Lucy looked at we two with tears in her eyes.
6. Karen and I agreed to go to the park to look around.
7. Lucy walked between Karen and me, showing the way.
8. In the park she and us hid behind some tall bushes.
9. Suddenly a strong wind almost blew we three down.
10. A green light shone on Karen and I, and a red one shone on Lucy.
11. Whom could it be?
12. One of the creatures spoke to us girls.
13. Very slowly, Karen, Lucy, and me stepped out from behind the bushes.
14. “You almost scared they and me silly!” shouted a creature, pointing at the others.
15. Neither Karen nor her could speak, and I could make only a squeaking noise.
16. Then the man inside the costume explained to we three girls that a movie company was filming in the park.
17. They and we could have been in an accident.
18. The fireworks hidden in the bushes might have hurt one of we girls.
19. Lucy told the director and he about being afraid of the space creatures in the park.

20. If you see the movie, the short purple creatures under the spaceship are us three girls.

Review D Replacing Nouns with Pronouns

Revise each of the following sentences, substituting pronouns for the words in italics.

EXAMPLE

1. The bird hopped lightly into the bird’s nest.
   - 1. The bird hopped lightly into its nest.

1. David, I have already asked David several times to clean your room.
2. The raccoon reached into the water, caught a fish, and ate the fish.
3. Anne and Paula should be here in a few minutes.
4. Sandra will be reading my report to the class tomorrow.
5. Don’t forget to return Reginald’s book to Reginald.
6. As soon as Willis finishes dinner, Willis must leave for play practice.
7. Diane, did you turn in Diane’s permission slip yet?
8. Mario and I have decided to do Mario’s and my project as a musical skit.
9. In his locker, Felipe has a photograph of WNBA star Sheryl Swoopes with Felipe.
10. The dogs came running in as soon as they knew the dogs’ food dish was filled.
Chapter Review

A. Identifying Correct Pronoun Forms

For each of the following sentences, write the correct form of the pronoun in parentheses.

1. Could that be (she, her) at the bus stop?
2. The guest speakers were Dr. Lucia Sanchez and (he, him).
3. Are you and (they, them) going to the basketball game?
4. You and (I, me) have been friends for a long time.
5. Sometimes, even our parents cannot tell (we, us) apart.
6. (We, Us) players surprised the coach with a victory party.
7. (Who, Whom) is bringing the holiday turkey?
8. Laura lent my sister and (I, me) a new CD.
9. Mr. Lee will divide the money between you and (I, me).
10. To (who, whom) is the envelope addressed?
11. Please keep this information between you and (she, her).
12. Did Maria or (she, her) call Grandmother Lopez?
13. Mom and (they, them) have gone shopping.
14. Can you show Charlie and (she, her) how to fish?
15. Danny and (I, me) are practicing woodcraft for camp.
16. Why didn’t you tell me about (he, him)?
17. Eldon and (we, us) were tired of playing checkers.
18. Mom and Dad promised Keith and (they, them) a puppy.
19. Was (he, him) the only one in the theater?
20. Would you lend your notes to (we, us)?

B. Identifying Pronouns Used as Predicate Nominatives

For each of the following sentences, write the correct form of the pronoun in parentheses.

21. The bus driver was (he, him).
22. That was Mr. San Miguel and (they, them) at the stadium last night.
23. The most devoted animal-lovers I know are Melanie and (her, she).
24. The junior racquetball champion last year was (her, she).
25. Once or twice a month the lifeguard at the local pool is (he, him).
26. Was that (they, them) in the parking lot?
27. Second on the program at the concert was (he, him).
28. It could have been (her, she), but I doubt it.
29. The devoted Rangers fans in our class are Gregorio and (he, him).
30. The visitors from Taiwan must be (they, them).

C. Identifying the Correct Forms of Pronouns Used as Subjects, Direct Objects, Indirect Objects, and Objects of Prepositions

For each of the following sentences, choose the correct form of the pronoun in parentheses and tell whether it is used as a subject, a direct object, an indirect object, or an object of a preposition.

31. The one who cheered loudest was the girl behind (I, me).
32. Did Isabel travel to Santa Fe with John and (her, she)?
33. (We, Us) baseball fans welcomed the decision not to move the team.
34. Peter called (her, she) and (I, me) last night.
35. (We, Us) cousins had a yard sale.
36. Tomas and José gave (we, us) their addresses in Mexico.
37. Her grandmother in Oregon sent (her, she) some apples.
38. On the hike, Christie and Maggie walked ahead of (I, me).
39. The teacher scolded us and (he, him) for being late.
40. I bought (they, them) an anniversary present.
Writing Application

Using Correct Pronoun Forms in Writing

Using Pronouns  Health Awareness Week is coming up soon. Your class has been chosen to perform a skit on a health-related topic for the rest of the school. Your teacher has asked each class member to write down an idea for an entertaining, informative skit. Write a paragraph or two describing a skit that your class could perform. Be sure to use correct pronoun forms in your description.

Prewriting  First, you will need to decide on a topic for the skit. Think about the health concerns of people your age. For example, you might plan a skit about the dangers of smoking or the importance of regular dental check-ups. After you choose a topic, brainstorm some ideas for a simple, entertaining skit. Be sure to list any props or costumes your class will need.

Writing  Use your notes to help you write your draft. First, tell what the skit is about and why it is appropriate for Health Awareness Week. Then, explain what happens in the skit from beginning to end. Be sure to tell in a general way what each character does and says. Describe the props and costumes that your class can make or bring from home.

Revising  Ask a classmate to read your paragraph. Is the information given in the skit correct? Does the skit sound entertaining? Is it clear which character does and says what? If not, revise your paragraph. Add details that will make the skit more fun and interesting.

Publishing  Check your sentences to be sure you have used pronouns correctly and clearly. Read through your description carefully to check for errors in grammar, spelling, and punctuation. Use this chapter to help you check for errors in pronoun forms.

Your class may want to hold a contest for the best skit idea. Using the best idea, work together to develop the skit in more detail. Then, with your teacher’s permission, give a performance of the skit for other classes.
CHAPTER 18
Using Modifiers Correctly
Comparison and Placement

Diagnostic Preview

Correcting Errors in the Form, Use, and Placement of Modifiers

Most of the following sentences contain an error in the use of modifiers or negative words. If a sentence has an error, rewrite the sentence correctly. If a sentence is already correct, write C.

EXAMPLE

1. The weather looks more worse today.
   1. The weather looks worse today.

1. Of the students in class, Odelle writes better.
2. Can you type fastest on a computer or on a typewriter?
3. Juan seemed very happy that we had visited him.
4. No one knew nothing about the tornado.
5. The vegetables were eaten by rabbits that we had planted.
6. Throughout history, many people have written regular in their diaries.
7. The people who moved in next door are the most friendliest neighbors who have ever lived there.
8. The bread smelled wonderfully.
9. Did that armadillo make it across the road with a limp?
10. Wynton Marsalis plays the trumpet good.
11. If you don’t feel well today, you shouldn’t go out.
12. We read a story written by Mark Twain yesterday.
13. Mai is one of the most persistent people I know.
14. I felt sadly at the end of Old Yeller.
15. The boy ordered a sandwich that was hungry.
16. The team usually wins the game that has the better defense.
17. Tanya is the youngest of my brothers and sisters.
18. It doesn’t make no difference to Brian.
19. I’m not sure which I like best, CDs or tapes.
20. Arthurine’s piano playing sounds very nicely to me.
21. The storm came up so sudden that it surprised us.
22. The house looks differently to me.
23. Lena and Ivan are twins, and Lena is the oldest one.
24. We couldn’t hardly believe the news!
25. Miyoko looks well in her new school uniform.

What Is a Modifier?

A modifier is a word, a phrase, or a clause that makes the meaning of a word or word group more specific. The two kinds of modifiers are adjectives and adverbs.

One-Word Modifiers

Adjectives

18a. Adjectives make the meanings of nouns and pronouns more specific.

EXAMPLES

- That one is my favorite. [The adjective That tells which one.]

- Does Stephen know the secret combination? [The adjective secret tells what kind of combination.]

- Estéban has saved more money than I have. [The adjective more tells how much money.]

- Four horses grazed peacefully at the foot of the hill. [The adjective Four tells how many horses.]
Adverbs

18b. Adverbs make the meanings of verbs, adjectives, and other adverbs more specific.

EXAMPLES
- The car backfired loudly. [The adverb loudly makes the meaning of the verb backfired more specific.]
- The painting is quite old. [The adverb quite makes the meaning of the adjective old more specific.]
- The bear traveled surprisingly quickly. [The adverb surprisingly makes the meaning of the adverb quickly more specific.]

Phrases Used as Modifiers

Like one-word modifiers, phrases can also be used as adjectives and adverbs.

EXAMPLES
- The cat with the short tail is my favorite. [The prepositional phrase with the short tail acts as an adjective that modifies the noun cat.]
- Mr. Rodriguez planted the new bushes along the fence. [The prepositional phrase along the fence acts as an adverb that modifies the verb planted.]

Clauses Used as Modifiers

Like words and phrases, clauses can also be used as modifiers.

EXAMPLES
- Spaghetti is the food that I like best. [The adjective clause that I like best modifies the noun food.]
- Before Mario went downstairs, he washed his face and hands. [The adverb clause Before Mario went downstairs modifies the verb washed.]

Exercise 1 Identifying Modifiers as Adjectives or Adverbs

Tell whether the italicized word or word group in each of the following sentences is used as an adjective or an adverb. Then, identify the word that it modifies.

EXAMPLE
1. Ms. Olivarez is the woman on the left.
   1. adjective—woman
1. The squirrel darted quickly up the tree trunk and hid among the leaves.
2. Wang Wei was a talented painter of landscapes.
3. Gabriela can ski faster than I can.
4. Is this poem the one that you wrote?
5. The man who has curly hair is my Uncle Thaddeus.
6. Soon you will need to put the bread in the oven.
7. Before the performance the actors practiced their lines and gestures.
8. Mountain biking is the sport that I enjoy most.
9. Tasmania is an island off the coast of Australia.
10. Because the weather was hot, we sat with our feet in the stream.

Comparison of Adjectives and Adverbs

When adjectives and adverbs are used in comparisons, they take different forms. The specific form they take depends upon how many things are being compared. The different forms of comparison are called degrees of comparison.

18c. The three degrees of comparison of modifiers are the positive, the comparative, and the superlative.

(1) The positive degree is used when only one thing is being modified and no comparison is being made.

EXAMPLES

Felita is a good book.

Shawn runs quickly.

The horse jumped gracefully.

(2) The comparative degree is used when two things are being compared.

EXAMPLES

In my opinion, Nilda is a better book than Felita.

Juanita runs more quickly than Shawn.

Which of the two horses jumped more gracefully?

TIPS & TRICKS

Here is a way to remember which form of a modifier to use. When comparing two things, use –er (the two-letter ending). When comparing three or more things, use –est (the three-letter ending).
(3) The superlative degree is used when three or more things are being compared.

EXAMPLES
Nilda is one of the best books I’ve read.
Which member of the team runs most quickly?

Regular Comparison

Most one-syllable modifiers form the comparative degree by adding –er and the superlative degree by adding –est.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Positive</th>
<th>Comparative</th>
<th>Superlative</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>near</td>
<td>nearer</td>
<td>nearest</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>sad</td>
<td>sadder</td>
<td>saddest</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>cute</td>
<td>cuter</td>
<td>cutest</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>bright</td>
<td>brighter</td>
<td>brightest</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Two-syllable modifiers can form the comparative degree by adding –er or by using more. They can form the superlative degree by adding –est or by using most.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Positive</th>
<th>Comparative</th>
<th>Superlative</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>fancy</td>
<td>fancier</td>
<td>fanciest</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>lonely</td>
<td>lonelier</td>
<td>loneliest</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>cheerful</td>
<td>more cheerful</td>
<td>most cheerful</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>quickly</td>
<td>more quickly</td>
<td>most quickly</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

NOTE
When you add –er or –est to some modifiers, you may also need to change the spelling of the base word.

EXAMPLES
sad    sadder     saddest
[cThe final d is doubled.]
cute  cuter     cutest
[cThe final e is dropped.]
fancy fancier     fanciest
[cThe final y is changed to i.]
Modifiers that have three or more syllables form the comparative degree by using more and the superlative degree by using most.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Positive</th>
<th>Comparative</th>
<th>Superlative</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>difficult</td>
<td>more difficult</td>
<td>most difficult</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>interesting</td>
<td>more interesting</td>
<td>most interesting</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>skillfully</td>
<td>more skillfully</td>
<td>most skillfully</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Decreasing Comparison

To show a decrease in the qualities they express, modifiers form the comparative degree by using less and the superlative degree by using least.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Positive</th>
<th>Comparative</th>
<th>Superlative</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>clean</td>
<td>less clean</td>
<td>least clean</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>humorous</td>
<td>less humorous</td>
<td>least humorous</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>carefully</td>
<td>less carefully</td>
<td>least carefully</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Exercise 2

Writing Comparative and Superlative Forms

Give the comparative forms and the superlative forms for each of the following modifiers.

EXAMPLES

1. calm

   1. calmer, calmest; less calm, least calm

   2. happy

   2. happier, happiest; less happy, least happy

1. nervous
2. great
3. hot
4. funny
5. noisy
6. easily
7. poor
8. young
9. swiftly
10. intelligent
11. politely
12. efficient
13. old
14. thoughtfully
15. sweet
16. angrily
17. ancient
18. neatly
19. lovely
20. long
Exercise 3 Using Comparative and Superlative Forms Correctly in Sentences

Give the correct form of the italicized modifier for each blank in the following sentences.

EXAMPLE 1. large As the illustration below shows, the moon appears ____ during the full-moon phase.

1. largest

1. near The moon is the earth’s ____ neighbor in space.
2. close At its ____ point to the earth, the moon is 221,456 miles away.
3. bright Seen from the earth, the full moon is ____ than the new moon.
4. small The moon appears ____ during the crescent phase than at other times.
5. difficult It is ____ to see the new moon than the crescent moon.
6. common The word crescent is ____ than the word gibbous, which means “partly rounded.”
7. frequently We notice the moon ____ when it is full than when it is new.
8. big Do you know why the moon appears ____ on some nights than on others?
9. quickly The changes in the moon’s appearance take place because the moon travels ____ around the earth than the earth travels around the sun.
10. slowly The moons of some other planets move ____ than our moon.

Copyright © by Holt, Rinehart and Winston. All rights reserved.
Irregular Comparison

Some modifiers do not form their comparative and superlative degrees by using the regular methods.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Positive</th>
<th>Comparative</th>
<th>Superlative</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>good</td>
<td>better</td>
<td>best</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>well</td>
<td>better</td>
<td>best</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>bad</td>
<td>worse</td>
<td>worst</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>many</td>
<td>more</td>
<td>most</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>much</td>
<td>more</td>
<td>most</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

NOTE You do not need to add –er/–est, more/most, or less/least to an irregular comparison. For example, worse, all by itself, is the comparative form of bad. Worser and more worse are nonstandard forms.

Exercise 4 Using Irregular Comparative and Superlative Forms

Give the correct form of the italicized modifier for each blank in the following sentences.

EXAMPLE 1. many Let’s see which of the two teams can wash ____ cars.

1. more

1. bad This is the ____ cold I have ever had.
2. much We have ____ homework now than we had last year.
3. well Derrick feels ____ today than he did last night.
4. good This peach has a ____ flavor than that one.
5. well Of all the instruments he can play, Shen Li plays the banjo ____.
6. much Catherine ate ____ enchilada casserole on Monday than she had eaten on Sunday.
7. many Of all the volunteers, Doreen has collected the ____ donations for the animal shelter.
8. bad Our team played the ____ game in history.
9. good The judges will now award the prize for the ____ essay.

COMPUTER TIP

A computer can help you find and correct problems with modifiers. A spellchecker will highlight nonstandard forms such as worser, bestest, and gracefuller.

However, the computer cannot tell you that you have used the superlative form where you should have used the comparative. You will have to look carefully for such errors when you proofread your writing.
10. many I have ___ baseball cards than John does.
11. good Who is the ___ Japanese chef in town?
12. much Of all the ranchers, she knows the ___ about lambs and sheep.
13. bad Wow! That was the ___ storm I have ever seen.
14. well I think that another variety of blackberry might grow ___ than these do.
15. many Who got the ___ signatures for the petition?
16. well In my opinion, out of all the artists in the world, these Chinese masters paint landscapes ___.
17. bad Traffic is always ___ at this time of day than at any other time.
18. many This year, ___ people attended the ceremony at the reservation than last year.
19. good Of the book, the movie, and the play, which was ___?
20. much Of these two containers, which holds ___ juice?

Special Problems in Using Modifiers

18d. The modifiers good and well have different uses.

(1) Use good to modify a noun or a pronoun.

EXAMPLES The farmers had a good crop this year. [The adjective good modifies the noun crop.]

The book was better than the movie. [The adjective better modifies the noun book.]

Of all the players, she is the best one. [The adjective best modifies the pronoun one.]

Good should not be used to modify a verb.

NONSTANDARD N. Scott Momaday writes good.

STANDARD N. Scott Momaday writes well.

(2) Use well to modify a verb.

EXAMPLES The day started well. [The adverb well modifies the verb started.]
The team played better in the second half. [The adverb better modifies the verb played.]

Tina Thompson played best in the final game. [The adverb best modifies the verb played.]

Well can also mean “in good health.” When well has this meaning, it acts as an adjective.

EXAMPLE Does Sherry feel well today? [The adjective well modifies the noun Sherry.]

18e. Use adjectives, not adverbs, after linking verbs.

Linking verbs, such as look, feel, seem, and become, are often followed by predicate adjectives. These adjectives describe, or modify, the subject.

EXAMPLES
Mayor Rodríguez should feel confident [not confidently] about this election. [The predicate adjective confident modifies the subject Mayor Rodríguez.]

Did Chris seem sad [not sadly] to you? [The predicate adjective sad modifies the subject Chris.]

Exercise 5
Choosing Correct Modifiers After Linking Verbs and Action Verbs

Choose the correct modifier of the two in parentheses in each of the following sentences.

EXAMPLE
1. Ellen said that Murray’s matzo ball soup tasted (delicious, deliciously).
   1. delicious

1. The band became (nervous, nervously) before the show.
2. You may get a higher score if you remain (calm, calmly) while taking the test.
3. We (eager, eagerly) tasted the potato pancakes.
4. Cheryl sews (good, well), so she made all the puppets for the show.
5. The mariachi band appeared (sudden, suddenly) at our table.
6. Ooh, these wild strawberries taste (good, well).
7. The plums tasted (sour, sourly).
8. Mr. Duncan was looking (close, closely) at my essay.
9. Those trophies certainly look (good, well) up there, Piper.
10. The bicyclist looked (cautious, cautiously) both ways before crossing the street.
11. Adobe, dried mud brick, stands up (good, well) under the hot Southwestern sun.
12. Peg looked at her broken skate (anxious, anxiously).
13. Don’t you think vanilla smells as (good, well) as or better than those expensive perfumes?
14. Akira Kurosawa was (good, well) at making Shakespeare’s plays into movies.
15. Sylvia certainly looked (pretty, prettily) in her new outfit.
16. Even for beginners, green beans grow (good, well), and quickly, too.
17. We didn’t know that you could vault so (good, well).
18. Erica was (happy, happily) to help us.
19. Oh, you are too (good, well) at chess for me.
20. Some tropical fish don’t get along very (good, well) with each other.

18f. Avoid using double comparisons.

A double comparison is the use of both –er and more (or less) or both –est and most (or least) to form a single comparison. When you make a comparison, use only one of these forms, not both.

NONSTANDARD That was Salma Hayek’s most scariest role.
STANDARD That was Salma Hayek’s scariest role.

NONSTANDARD The kitten is less livelier than the puppy.
STANDARD The kitten is less lively than the puppy.

NOTE Remember that irregular comparisons do not use –er/–est, more/most or less/least. Adding these to an irregular modifier is a double comparison.

NONSTANDARD more better
STANDARD better

NONSTANDARD worstest
STANDARD worst
Exercise 6  Revising Double Comparisons

Each of the following sentences contains a double comparison. Identify the double comparison, and then write the correct form of each comparison.

EXAMPLE
1. Are you feeling more better now?
   1. more better—better

1. That must be the bestest song you’ve written yet!
2. Hit the ball less harder next time.
3. Dates are one of the most popularest foods in Africa and Asia.
4. Nicki, this was the most liveliest party ever.
5. The ancient Chinese made paper more earlier than any other people.
6. Yikes, this computer game is the most hardest one I’ve played.
7. The least jolliest of the characters was Jo.
8. Sure, I think Spanish is more easier to learn than English.
9. Please do visit us more oftener.
10. Maybe Friday will arrive more sooner this week.

Review A  Writing Comparative and Superlative Forms in Sentences

For each blank in the following sentences, give the correct form of comparison of the italicized word.

EXAMPLE  1. noisy  This is the ___ class in school.
   1. noisiest

1. bad  Yesterday was the ___ day of my entire life.
2. good  Tomorrow should be ___ than today was.
3. old  The ___ American Indian tepee in the world can be seen at the Smithsonian Institution.
4. soon  Your party ended ___ than I had hoped.
5. funny  That is the ___ joke I’ve ever heard.
6. rapidly  Which can run ____, the cheetah or the lion?
7. beautifully  This piñata is ___ decorated than the other one.
8. well  I did well on the first half of the test, but I did ___ on the second half.
9. joyfully Of all the songbirds in our yard, the mockingbirds sing ____.
10. strange This is the ____ book I have ever read!

Review B Proofreading a Paragraph for Correct Forms of Modifiers

Most of the sentences in the following paragraph have errors in English usage. If a sentence contains an error, identify the error and then write the correct usage. If a sentence is already correct, write C.

EXAMPLE  [1] You may not recognize the man in the picture on the left, but you probably know his more famous characters.

1. more famous—most famous

[1] This man, Alexandre Dumas, wrote two of the most popularest books in history—The Three Musketeers and The Count of Monte Cristo. [2] Born in France, Dumas was poor but had a good education. [3] As a young playwright, he rose quick to fame. [4] In person, Dumas always seemed cheerfully. [5] Like their author, his historical novels are colorful and full of adventure. [6] Their fame grew rapid, and the public demanded more of them. [7] In response to this demand, Dumas hired many assistants, who probably wrote most of his later books than he did. [8] Dumas’s son, who was also named Alexandre, was a writer, too, and he became famously with the publication of Camille. [9] At that time, the younger Dumas was often thought of as a more better writer than his father. [10] Today, however, the friendship of the three musketeers remains aliver than ever in film, print, and even comic books.

Double Negatives

Negative words are a common part of everyday speaking and writing. These words include the modifiers no, not, never, and hardly. Notice how negative words change the meaning of the following sentences.

POSITIVE We can count in Spanish.
NEGATIVE We cannot count in Spanish.

POSITIVE They ride their bikes on the highway.
NEGATIVE They never ride their bikes on the highway.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Common Negative Words</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>barely</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>hardly</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>neither</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

18g. Avoid using double negatives.

A double negative is the use of two or more negative words to express one negative idea.

NONSTANDARD Sheila did not tell no one her idea. [The negative words are not and no one.]

STANDARD Sheila did not tell anyone her idea.

STANDARD Sheila told no one her idea.

NONSTANDARD Rodney hardly said nothing. [The negative words are hardly and nothing.]

STANDARD Rodney hardly said anything.

STANDARD Rodney said almost nothing.

Some fiction writers use double negatives in dialogue. This technique can help make certain characters sound more realistic. However, in your formal speaking and writing, you should avoid using double negatives.
Exercise 7  Revising Sentences to Correct Double Negatives

Revise each of the following sentences to eliminate the double negative.

EXAMPLE

1. Those books don’t have no pictures.
   1. Those books don’t have any pictures.
      or
      Those books have no pictures.

1. The Plains Indians did not waste no part of a bear, deer, or buffalo.
3. Movie and TV stars from Hollywood never visit nowhere near our town.
4. Until last summer, I didn’t know nothing about Braille music notation.
5. By Thanksgiving, the store didn’t have none of the silver jewelry left.
6. I’m so excited that I can’t hardly sit still.
7. No one brought nothing to eat on the hike.
8. Strangely enough, Frieda hasn’t never tasted our delicious Cuban bread.
9. There isn’t no more pudding in the bowl.
10. Our dog never fights with neither one of our cats.

Review C  Proofreading Sentences for Correct Use of Modifiers

Most of the following sentences contain errors in the use of modifiers. If a sentence is incorrect, write it correctly. If a sentence is already correct, write C.

EXAMPLE

1. Haven’t you never made a paper airplane or a paper hat?
   1. Haven’t you ever made a paper airplane or a paper hat?
      or
      Have you never made a paper airplane or a paper hat?
1. Making Japanese origami figures is much more easier than I thought it would be.
2. Origami, the ancient Japanese art of paper folding, wasn’t hardly known in the United States before the 1960s.
3. Now, many people know how to fold the most cleverest traditional origami animals.
4. In true origami, artists do not never cut or paste the paper.
5. A beginner doesn’t need nothing but a sheet of paper to create an origami figure.
6. With a bit of patience, anyone can make a folded-paper figure rather quick.
7. Even kindergartners can do a good job making the simple sailboat shown in the diagram.
8. Other origami figures require more greater time and patience than this sailboat.
9. Today, there probably isn’t no one better at origami than Akira Yoshizawa.
10. Even the most difficult figure is not too hard for him, and he has invented many beautiful new figures.

Placement of Modifiers

18h. Place modifying words, phrases, and clauses as close as possible to the words they modify.

Notice how the meaning of the following sentences changes when the position of the phrase from Brazil changes.

- The singer from Brazil gave a radio interview for her fans. [The phrase modifies singer.]
- The singer gave a radio interview for her fans from Brazil. [The phrase modifies fans.]
- From Brazil, the singer gave a radio interview for her fans. [The phrase modifies gave.]

A modifier that seems to modify the wrong word in a sentence is called a misplaced modifier.
Adjectives and Adverbs

The placement of an adjective or adverb may affect the meaning of a sentence. Avoid placing an adjective or adverb so that it appears to modify a word that you didn’t mean it to modify.

EXAMPLES

Jackie borrowed some camping equipment only for the weekend. [She borrowed the equipment for the weekend, not for any other time.]

Only Jackie borrowed some camping equipment for the weekend. [Jackie—and no one else—borrowed some equipment.]

Jackie borrowed only some camping equipment for the weekend. [She borrowed some camping equipment but nothing else.]

Nearly all of the skaters fell. [Most of the skaters fell.]

All of the skaters nearly fell. [All of the skaters came close to falling but did not fall.]

Today Randall said he would help me build a birdhouse. [Randall made the statement today.]

Randall said he would help me build a birdhouse today. [Randall will help with the birdhouse today.]

Prepositional Phrases

A prepositional phrase includes a preposition, the object of the preposition, and any modifiers of that object.

A prepositional phrase used as an adjective generally should be placed directly after the word it modifies.

MISPLACED Ms. Ruiz got a sweater for her dog with a snowflake pattern.

CLEAR Ms. Ruiz got a sweater with a snowflake pattern for her dog.

MISPLACED This book describes Nat Turner’s struggle for freedom by Judith Berry Griffin.

CLEAR This book by Judith Berry Griffin describes Nat Turner’s struggle for freedom.
A prepositional phrase used as an adverb should be placed near the word it modifies.

Correcting Misplaced Prepositional Phrases

Find any misplaced prepositional phrases in each of the following sentences. Then, revise the sentence, placing the phrase near the word it modifies. If a sentence is already correct, write C.

EXAMPLE

I read about the car thieves who were caught in this morning’s paper.

CLEAR

I read about the car thieves who were caught.

1. Michael went outside to trim the hedges with Bruce.

2. I saw the ants marching through my magnifying glass.

In this morning’s paper, I read about the car thieves who were caught.

1. I read in this morning’s paper about the car thieves who were caught.

Exercise 8

Placement of Modifiers

Some sentences in Exercise 8 may be corrected in more than one way. You need to give just one revision for each.
3. Angelo borrowed a radio from Kim with a weather band.
4. That man bought the rare photograph of Geronimo with the cellular telephone.
5. The robin sat carefully on the eggs in its nest.
6. The frog seemed to be staring at the moon in the pond.
7. We could see the wheat growing from our back windows.
8. The sound designer told us about recording a herd of gnus in class today.
9. Many people watched the televised ballgame in Fred’s living room.
10. I found the collection of records your father bought in the attic.

Adjective Clauses

An adjective clause modifies a noun or a pronoun. Most adjective clauses begin with a relative pronoun—that, which, who, whom, or whose.

Like adjective phrases, adjective clauses should generally be placed directly after the words they modify.

MISPLACED Mrs. Chu gives the sculptures to her friends that she carves. [Does Mrs. Chu carve her friends?]

CLEAR Mrs. Chu gives the sculptures that she carves to her friends.

MISPLACED The students met with a tutor who needed help in math. [Did the tutor need help in math?]

CLEAR The students who needed help in math met with a tutor.

Exercise 9  Correcting Misplaced Adjective Clauses

Find any misplaced adjective clauses in each of the following sentences. Then, revise the sentence, placing the clause near the word it modifies. If a sentence is already correct, write C.

EXAMPLE 1. The students wanted to work on a project at the school that they had designed themselves.
   1. The students at the school wanted to work on a project that they had designed themselves.
1. The girl is from my class that won the spelling bee.
2. The blue jay moved carefully through the snow with small hops, which had begun to melt.
3. I hardly recognized my uncle Ken when he came for a visit, whose beard had turned white.
4. Kwanzaa, which was first celebrated in 1966, is an African American holiday developed by Maulana Karenga.
5. The expression “that’s the ticket,” which means “that’s the correct thing,” comes from a mispronunciation of the French word étiquette.
6. My oldest brother just graduated from college, who lives in Rhode Island.
7. Jason’s favorite shirt already has another stain on it, which was just washed.
8. That team played in front of a sellout crowd, which was having its best season ever.
9. “The Rum Tum Tugger,” is a poem about a cat, which we studied in class.
10. We like to watch the many butterflies in the fields on the weekends, that are behind our house.

Review D Proofreading a Paragraph for Correct Placement of Modifiers

Most of the following sentences have misplaced modifying words, phrases, or clauses. If the sentence contains an error, revise the sentence by placing the modifier in the correct place. If the sentence is already correct, write C.

EXAMPLE

[1] Sometimes the person can be a hero who seems least likely.

1. Sometimes the person who seems least likely can be a hero.

[1] J.R.R. Tolkien’s The Hobbit is a wonderful story that has a very complicated adventure about a simple person. [2] Hobbits are very small, quiet people, and most of the world had never heard of them until a few of them began to have adventures. [3] The hero of the story, Bilbo Baggins, is not a typical hero, who likes nothing more than chatting with his neighbors, sleeping, and eating. [4] Bilbo’s quiet life is interrupted when the wizard Gandalf chooses him to help a band of dwarves from a dragon recover their treasure. [5] Bilbo saves the dwarves several times on their way to their old home under the Lonely Mountain, despite being small and shy. [6] Bilbo also finds a magical ring along the way that can make him invisible. [7] Bilbo gets the dwarves out of trouble with the ring and the wizard Gandalf. [8] When they finally reach the mountain, Bilbo tricks the dragon Smaug into revealing a spot in his armor that is weak. [9] The dragon is very angry and attacks a nearby town, but an archer kills Smaug, who has been told about the weak spot. [10] Bilbo goes back to his quiet life, but in The Lord of the Rings his nephew Frodo inherits the ring and saves the world.
A. Identifying the Correct Forms of Modifiers

Choose the correct form of the modifier in parentheses in each of the following sentences.

1. Cool water tastes (good, well) on a hot day.
2. The wind howled (fierce, fiercely) last night.
3. Which twin is (taller, tallest), Marcus or Jim?
4. Forever Friends is the (best, bestest) book I’ve read this year.
5. Sergio has always played (good, well) during an important match.
6. The roses in the vase smelled (sweet, sweetly).
7. They could view the eclipse (more clear, more clearly) than we could.
8. Which of these two winter coats is the (best, better) value?
9. Of all the days in the week, Friday goes by (more, most) slowly for me.
10. Ernesto felt (good, well) about volunteering to help collect money for the homeless.
11. Is this the (darkest, darker) copy of the three?
12. The (faster, fastest) runner is the captain of the track team.
13. Mr. Chen told them to be (better, more better) prepared tomorrow.
14. Joni’s way of solving the math puzzle was much (more easier, easier) than Ken’s.
15. We felt (sleepy, sleepily) after lunch.

B. Correcting Double Negatives

Most of the following sentences contain errors in the use of negative words. If the sentence is incorrect, write it correctly. If the sentence is already correct, write C.

16. None of us knows nothing about astronomy.
17. Wendell can hardly wait to see Serge Lainé in concert.
19. Last night we couldn’t see no stars through the telescope.
20. Whenever I want fresh strawberries, there are never none in the house.

C. Writing Comparative and Superlative Forms

Write the comparative and superlative forms for each of the following modifiers.

21. difficult
22. new
23. quickly
24. cold
25. fantastic
26. good
27. light
28. short
29. clearly
30. noisy

D. Correcting Misplaced Phrases and Clauses

Find any misplaced phrases and clauses in each of the following sentences. Then, revise each incorrect sentence, placing the phrase or clause near the word it modifies.

31. I heard about the bad weather on the radio.
32. The man drove the sports car with the beard.
33. Arthur borrowed a mountain bike from his friend with eighteen speeds.
34. Uncle Mark and Aunt Jennifer were watching the meteor shower in the backyard.
35. We saw the fog rising from our car.
36. I gave a bracelet to my friend that was made of silver.
37. Mom saw a museum exhibit of ancient pottery made in the American Southwest on Tuesday.
38. Una read about the latest political developments in the newspaper.
39. The mayor said she would lead the St. Patrick’s Day parade at her press conference.
40. The woman won the CD player who had on the red hat.
Writing Application
Using Negative Words in Description

Negative Words  Everyone has a bad day now and then. Yesterday, it was your turn. You were late for school because your alarm clock did not go off. From then on, things just got worse. Write a letter to a friend giving a funny description of your unlucky day. Make sure that you use negative words correctly.

Prewriting  Write down some notes about a real or imaginary bad day in your life. List at least five things that went wrong during the day. The events can be big or small. Tell how you felt when one thing after another went wrong.

Writing  In your letter, explain the events of your day in the order they happened. Describe each event in detail. Also describe your reactions to the events. You may want to exaggerate some details for a humorous effect.

Revising  Ask a friend to read your letter. Have you described the events clearly? Do your descriptions give a vivid, humorous picture of your day? If not, add or revise details.

Publishing  Be sure that your letter follows the correct form for a personal letter. Proofread your letter carefully for errors in grammar, spelling and punctuation. Read through each sentence one more time to check that negative words are used correctly. With your teacher’s permission, you and your classmates may wish to present your descriptions in class and vote on who survived the worst day.

Reference Note
For information on writing a personal letter, see “Writing” in the Quick Reference Handbook.
Diagnostic Preview

Correcting Errors in Usage

Each of the following sentences contains an error in the use of formal, standard English. Rewrite each sentence correctly.

EXAMPLE

1. I knew all the answers accept the last one.
   1. I knew all the answers except the last one.

1. If you’re going to the library, would you please bring these books there for me?
2. The water tasted kind of salty.
3. Has Jamila finished the assignment all ready?
4. Leon went to the doctor because he didn’t feel good.
5. They should of asked for directions.
6. We found nothing but a old shoe.
7. Bao will try and fix her bike today.
8. The tuna looked all right but smelled badly.
9. Albert can’t hardly wait to read that biography of the Olympic star Jesse Owens.
10. Why is this mitt more expensive then that one?
11. He knocked a bowl of plantains off of the table.
12. In rural Vietnam, children often take care of there family’s water buffalo.
13. After school we use to have band practice.
14. Tanya made less mistakes after she had started practicing.
15. Do you know who’s pencil this is?
16. Mr. Abeyto assigned me to this here seat.
17. A glitch is when a mistake is made by a computer.
18. Did Ann say how come she won’t attend the meeting?
19. The food was shared between the families of the village.
20. At one time, Bessie Coleman was the only black woman pilot anywhere in the world.

About the Glossary

This chapter contains an alphabetical list, or glossary, of common problems in English usage. You will notice that some examples in this glossary are labeled nonstandard, standard, formal, or informal.

The label nonstandard identifies usage that is acceptable only in the most casual speaking situations and in writing that attempts to re-create casual speech. Standard English is language that is grammatically correct and appropriate in formal and informal situations. Formal identifies standard usage that is appropriate in serious speaking and writing situations (such as in speeches and in writing for school). The label informal indicates standard usage common in conversation and in everyday writing such as personal letters. When doing the exercises in this chapter, be sure to use only standard English.

The following are examples of formal and informal English.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Formal</th>
<th>Informal</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>angry</td>
<td>steamed</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>unpleasant</td>
<td>yucky</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>agreeable</td>
<td>cool</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>very impressive</td>
<td>totally awesome</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>accelerate</td>
<td>step on it</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Reference Note

For a list of words often confused, see page 625. Use the index at the back of the book to find discussions of other usage problems.
a, an Use a before words beginning with a consonant sound; use an before words beginning with a vowel sound. Keep in mind that the sound, not the actual letter, that a word begins with tells you whether a or an should be used.

EXAMPLES The airplane was parked in a hangar.

She lives on a one-way street. A is used because one begins with a consonant sound.

My father works in an office.

They arrived an hour early. An is used because hour begins with a vowel sound.

accept, except Accept is a verb; it means “to receive.” Except may be used as either a verb or a preposition. When it is used as a verb, except means “to leave out.” As a preposition, except means “excluding” or “but.”

EXAMPLES The winners of the spelling bee proudly accepted their awards. [verb]

Because Josh had a sprained ankle, he was excepted from gym class. [verb]

All the food except the won-ton soup was ready. [preposition]

ain’t Avoid using this word in speaking and writing; it is nonstandard English.

all right All right can be used as an adjective that means “satisfactory” or “unhurt.” As an adverb, all right means “well enough.” All right should be written as two words.

EXAMPLES This tie looks all right with that blue shirt. [adjective]

The baby squirrel had fallen out of its nest, but it was all right. [adjective]

Lorenzo and I did all right on the pop quiz. [adverb]
a lot  A lot should be written as two words.

EXAMPLE  I can make a lot of my mom’s recipes.

already, all ready  Already means “previously.” All ready means “completely prepared” or “in readiness.”

EXAMPLES  We looked for Jay, but he had already left.

I had studied for two hours on Sunday night and was all ready for the test on Monday.

among  See between, among.

anyways, anywheres, everywheres, nowheres, somewheres  These words should have no final s.

EXAMPLE  They looked everywhere [not everywheres] for the missing puzzle piece.

at  Do not use at after where.

NONSTANDARD  Where is the Chinese kite exhibit at?

STANDARD  Where is the Chinese kite exhibit?

bad, badly  Bad is an adjective. It modifies nouns and pronouns. Badly is an adverb. It modifies verbs, adjectives, and adverbs.

EXAMPLES  The milk smelled bad. [The predicate adjective bad modifies milk.]

Before I took lessons, I played the piano badly. [The adverb badly modifies the verb played.]

between, among  Use between when you are referring to two things at a time even when they are part of a group consisting of more than two.

EXAMPLES  Kim got in line between Lee and Rene.

Be sure to weed between all ten rows of carrots. [Although there are ten rows of carrots, the weeding is done between any two of them.]

Use among when you are referring to a group rather than to separate individuals.

EXAMPLE  The four winners divided the prize among themselves.
Exercise 1  Identifying Correct Usage

For each of the following sentences, choose the word or word group in parentheses that is correct according to the rules of formal, standard usage.

EXAMPLE  1. The picture on this page is titled After Supper, West Chester, but the scene could be almost (anywhere, anywhere).
   1. anywhere

1. This colorful work was painted by (a, an) artist named Horace Pippin, who lived from 1888 to 1946.
2. By the time Pippin was in elementary school, he was (already, all ready) a talented artist.
3. In fact, he had won a drawing contest and had eagerly (accepted, excepted) the prize, a box of crayons and a set of watercolor paints.
4. In World War I, Pippin was once caught (among, between) U.S. troops and the enemy.
5. During this battle (somewheres, somewhere) in France, Pippin’s right arm—the arm he used when painting—was seriously wounded.
6. For a long time, Pippin felt quite (bad, badly) about his disability, but he was determined to paint again.
7. After Pippin recovered, he tried (alot, a lot) of new ways to paint; the most successful was to hold up his right hand with his left arm.
8. It (ain’t, is not) surprising that one of his first paintings after the war portrayed a battle scene.
9. When Pippin painted After Supper, West Chester, in 1935, he was remembering the small town in Pennsylvania (where he was born, where he was born at).
10. I think that the painter of this peaceful scene must have felt (all right, alright) about his work and about himself.
Bring, Take
Bring means “to come carrying something.”
Take means “to go carrying something.” Think of bring as related to come (to) and take as related to go (from).

EXAMPLES
Make sure that you bring your book when you come to my house.
Always remember to take your coat when you go outside during the winter.

Could of
Do not write of with the helping verb could.
Write could have. Also avoid ought to of, should of, would of, might of, and must of.

EXAMPLES
Yvetta wished she could have [not could of] gone to the movie Saturday night.
We should have [not should of] asked your mom for permission to go to the park.

Don’t, Doesn’t
See page 433.

Everywheres
See anyways, etc.

Except, Accept
See accept, except.

Fewer, Less
Fewer is used with plural words. Less is used with singular words. Fewer tells “how many”; less tells “how much.”

EXAMPLES
This road has fewer stoplights than any of the other roads in the county.
This road has less traffic than any of the other roads in the county.

Good, Well
Good is an adjective. Do not use good to modify a verb; use well, which can be used as an adverb.

NONSTANDARD
Heather sings good.

STANDARD
Heather sings well.

Although it is usually an adverb, well is also used as an adjective to mean “healthy.”

EXAMPLE
Keiko went home from school today because she didn’t feel well.
NOTE  Feel good and feel well mean different things. Feel good means “to feel happy or pleased.” Feel well means “to feel healthy.”

EXAMPLES  I feel good when I’m with my friends.

Rashid had a cold, and he still doesn’t feel well.

had of  See of.

had ought, hadn’t ought  The verb ought should not be used with had.

NONSTANDARD  They had ought to be more careful.

STANDARD  They ought to be more careful.

NONSTANDARD  You hadn’t ought to have said that.

STANDARD  You oughtn’t to have said that.

or  You shouldn’t have said that.

hardly, scarcely  Hardly and scarcely are negative words. They should not be used with other negative words to express a single negative idea.

EXAMPLES  Pedro can [not can’t] hardly wait for the fiesta.

The sun has [not hasn’t] scarcely shone today.

hisself, theirself, theirselves  These words are nonstandard English. Use himself and themselves.

EXAMPLES  Mr. Ogata said he would do the work hisself [not hisself], I believe.

They congratulated theirselves [not theirselves] on their victory.

how come  In informal English, how come is often used instead of why. In formal English, why is preferred.

INFORMAL  How come she can leave early?

FORMAL  Why can she leave early?
Exercise 2  Identifying Correct Usage

For each of the following sentences, choose the word or word group in parentheses that is correct according to the rules of formal, standard usage.

EXAMPLE  1. There might be (fewer, less) accidents if people were more alert around small children.

   1. fewer

1. Everyone knows that children are not always as careful as they (ought, had ought) to be.
2. However, young children (can hardly, can’t hardly) be blamed for being curious and adventurous.
3. Just a few days ago, I was involved in a scary situation that (could of, could have) led to a serious accident.
4. After I (brought, took) my little brother Gerald home from a walk, I called my friend Susan.
5. Gerald quickly wandered off by (hisself, himself).
6. I don’t know (how come, why) he always disappears when I’m on the phone.
7. I found Gerald climbing onto the stove, and in (fewer, less) than a second, I lifted him down.
8. I told him that he (could have, could of) been burned.
9. He said he would be (good, well) from then on.
10. Although the experience was frightening, it turned out (good, well).

Review A  Proofreading a Paragraph for Correct Usage

Each of the sentences in the following paragraph has at least one error in the use of standard, formal English. Identify each error. Then, write the correct usage.

EXAMPLE  [1] The game of soccer has proved to be more popular than the king of England hisself.

   1. hisself—himself

   [1] Derby, England, may have been the town where soccer was first played at. [2] Sometime around the third century A.D., an early version of the game was played among two towns.
Anywheres from fifty to several hundred people played in a match. Back then, soccer had less rules than it does today and the participants probably didn’t behave very good. By the fifteenth century, the government had all ready outlawed the sport. The king said that young people had ought to be training theirselves in archery instead of playing soccer. According to the king, archery practice was alright because bows and arrows could be used against a enemy. However, many people didn’t hardly obey the king’s rule, and soccer continued to grow in popularity. Perhaps later kings felt badly about outlawing soccer. Eventually the government had to except that soccer had become the most popular sport in England.

its, it’s
Its is the possessive form of the personal pronoun it. Its is used to show ownership. It’s is a contraction of it is or it has.

EXAMPLES The raccoon washed its face in the shallows of the stream. [possessive pronoun]

My grandparents have a dog; it’s a collie. [contraction of it is]

It’s been sunny and warm all day. [contraction of It has] kind of, sort of

In informal English, kind of and sort of are often used to mean “somewhat” or “rather.” In formal English, however, it is better to use somewhat or rather.

INFORMAL That story is kind of funny.

FORMAL That story is rather funny.

learn, teach
Learn means “to gain knowledge.” Teach means “to instruct” or “to show how.”

EXAMPLES The students from Vietnam are learning English.

Ms. Sanita is teaching them.

less  See fewer, less.

lie, lay  See page 466.

might of, must of  See could of.
nowheres  See anyways, etc.

of  Do not use of with prepositions such as inside, off, and outside.

EXAMPLES  Mrs. Cardona stood outside [not outside of] the office.

The child stepped off [not off of] the porch.

We heard a noise inside [not inside of] the engine.

Of is also unnecessary with had.

EXAMPLE  If we had [not had of] known you were hungry, we would have brought some food.

ought to of  See could of.

rise, raise  See page 464.

should of  See could of.

sit, set  See page 463.

somewheres  See anyways, etc.

sort of  See kind of, sort of.

suppose to, supposed to  Do not leave the d off supposed when you write supposed to.

EXAMPLE  They were supposed to [not suppose to] join us at the gate.

take, bring  See bring, take.

than, then  Than is a conjunction used in making comparisons. Then is an adverb meaning “next” or “after that.”

EXAMPLES  This cheese is tastier than that one.

First the phone rang, and then someone knocked on the door.

that there  See this here, that there.

their, there, they’re  Their is the possessive form of they. It is used to show ownership. There is used to mean “at that place” or to begin a sentence. They’re is a contraction of they are.
EXAMPLES  The children played happily with their toys. [Their tells whose toys.]

We are going over there very soon. [There tells where we are going.]

There are twelve members in our club. [There begins the sentence but does not add to the sentence’s meaning.]

They’re going to have a Juneteenth picnic. [They’re is a contraction of They are.]

theirself, theirselves  See hisself, etc.

them  Them should not be used as an adjective. Use the, these, or those.

EXAMPLE  How much are those [not them] baseball cards?

Exercise 3  Identifying Correct Usage

For each of the following sentences, choose the word or word group in parentheses that is correct according to the rules of formal, standard English.

EXAMPLE  1. For years, scientists have studied Mayan writing on temples and (inside of, inside) caves.

1. inside

1. Some scientists are (learning, teaching) themselves how to understand this writing.

2. The Ancient Mayas didn’t use an alphabet to write (there, their, they’re) language.

3. Instead, they drew symbols like (them, these) small pictures shown at left.

4. As you can see, the sign for jaguar looked (somewhat, sort of) like a jaguar.

5. At times, it could be difficult to tell what a picture was (suppose, supposed) to represent.

6. (Its, It’s) meaning was made clear by the use of another small symbol.

7. (There, Their, They’re) is an example of this technique in the illustration in the middle.
8. When a scarf symbol was added to the symbol for man, (then, than) the picture meant “lord.”
9. Mayan writing contained other symbols that stood for syllables rather (then, than) entire words.
10. (Its, It’s) clear we still have a great deal to learn about this beautiful, ancient language.

Review B  Identifying Correct Usage

Choose the correct word or words in parentheses in each of the following sentences.

EXAMPLE 1. Our club will (accept, except) anyone interested in computers.
   1. accept

1. Well, I (should of, should have) seen that coming.
2. Few chiefs were more powerful (than, then) Sitting Bull.
3. Maybe this dog can’t find (its, it’s) way home.
4. You didn’t do too (bad, badly) in that last race.
5. David sings pretty (good, well), doesn’t he?
6. Thanks, you’ve been (a lot, alot) of help!
7. We (had ought, ought) to plant our garden next week.
8. That book has (all ready, already) been checked out.
9. The lenses were dirty, but (their, there, they’re) clean now.
10. Would you (learn, teach) us how to use those castanets?

this here, that there  Do not use here and there after this and that.

EXAMPLE Do you want (this [not this here] book or that [not that there] one?

try and  In informal English, (try and) is often used for (try to). In formal English, the correct form is (try to).

INFORMAL  Pat will (try and) explain the problem.
   FORMAL  Pat will (try to) explain the problem.

use to, used to  Do not leave the d off (used) when you write (used to).

EXAMPLE Dr. Chang (used to [not use to]) live next door to us.
way, ways Use way, not ways, when referring to a distance.

EXAMPLE We traveled a long way [not ways] today.

well See good, well.

when, where Do not use when or where incorrectly to begin a definition.

NONSTANDARD A phrase is when a group of words is used as a part of speech.

STANDARD A phrase is a group of words that is used as a part of speech.

Do not use where for that.

EXAMPLE I read that [not where] the concert has been canceled.

whose, who’s Whose is the possessive form of who. It shows ownership. Who’s is a contraction of who is or who has.

EXAMPLES Whose dog is that? [possessive pronoun]

Who’s [Who is] the bravest person you know?

He’s the only one who’s [who has] turned in a report.

would of See could of.

your, you’re Your is the possessive form of you. You’re is the contraction of you are.

EXAMPLES Do you have your watch with you? [possessive pronoun]

You’re late today. [contraction of you are]

---

Identifying Correct Usage

For each of the following sentences, choose the word or word group in parentheses that is correct according to the rules of formal, standard English.

EXAMPLE 1. Take a map on (your, you’re) next camping trip.

   1. your

1. A trail map is (when a map shows, a map that shows) trails, campsites, and geographical features for a given area.
2. For a safe camping trip, a map like (this here, this) one can be very important.

3. Hikers who are not (used to, use to) an area often easily lose their way.

4. Every year, rangers report (where, that) some campers were lost for a day or more.

5. If you don’t want to get lost, (try and, try to) get a good trail map.

6. In fact, every hiker in your group (who’s, whose) able to read a map should have one.

7. With the map, you can choose a (good, well) location for your campsite.
8. When you begin your hike, mark where (your, you’re) campsite is on the map.
9. If you go quite a (way, ways) from your campsite, note your path on the map, too.
10. As (your, you’re) walking, your trail map can help you figure out exactly where you are.

Proofreading a Paragraph for Correct Usage

Most of the sentences in the following paragraph contain errors in the use of formal, standard English. If a sentence is incorrect, rewrite it correctly. If a sentence is already correct, write C.

EXAMPLES

1. Do you know someone who can teach you how to dance the Texas Two-Step?
   1. Do you know someone who can teach you how to dance the Texas Two-Step?

2. Well, you’re in for a real treat!
   2. Well, you’re in for a real treat!

[1] Country music lovers enjoy the two-step because it’s fun to dance. [2] If you don’t know anyone who can teach you the two-step, you can use this here diagram to learn the basic steps. [3] Grab your partner and get ready. [4] First, listen closely to them musicians. [5] Try and catch the rhythm of the music with a small double shuffle step. [6] Remember, men, your always starting with the left foot; women, you do just the opposite. [7] The man steps to the left, touches his left shoe with his right one, and then steps to the right and does the same thing. [8] Then, he takes two kind of quick steps forward followed by two slow shuffle steps. [9] Some dancers add variety to there steps by doing a sidestep or a turn. [10] Now you’ve come a long ways toward learning the Texas Two-Step!
Chapter Review

A. Revising Sentences by Correcting Errors in Usage

In each of the following sets of sentences, choose the letter of the sentence that contains an error. Then, write the sentence correctly, using formal, standard English.

1. a. Everyone was at the meeting except Diego.
   b. Does you’re dog bite?
   c. Andy waited outside the dentist’s office.

2. a. The landfill smelled badly.
   b. No one knew whose knapsack that was.
   c. We could hardly wait for the rain to stop.

3. a. Mr. Catalano says that spiders ain’t insects.
   b. I feel rather tired today.
   c. Do you accept personal checks?

4. a. Nina can run faster than he can.
   b. Anna would have finished, but she was interrupted.
   c. Be sure to bring a extra pencil with you.

5. a. The cow and its calf stood in the meadow.
   b. Less students signed up for tutoring this month.
   c. What is the difference between these brands of basketball shoes?

6. a. We did as we were told.
   b. Everyone was already to go.
   c. I used to enjoy playing tennis.

7. a. Penny, bring this book when you go home.
   b. Ms. Michaelson told us that our plan was all right.
   c. Julie said that it’s already time to go.

8. a. The team had fewer fouls in the last game.
   b. They looked everywhere for him.
   c. Do you know where he is at?
9. a. Water-skiing is more fun than I thought.
    b. We hiked a long way before we pitched camp.
    c. Try and get to the meeting on time, please.

10. a. Their team has never beaten your team.
    b. A pop fly is when a ball is batted high into the infield.
    c. I finished my homework; then I called Duane.

B. Revising Sentences by Correcting Errors in Usage

Each of the following sentences contains an error in the use of formal, standard English. Rewrite each sentence correctly.

11. They could have come if the plane had of been on time.
12. That ain’t an expensive hotel.
13. We talked quietly between the three of us.
14. That parade was the noisiest I’ve ever heard anywheres.
15. This here beach is beautiful!
16. When the semi-trailer drove past the house, the picture fell off of Aunt Edna’s wall.
17. I should of taken my camera inside the cave.
18. Its one of the nicest beaches near Port Aransas.
19. I wasn’t hardly scared on the cable car.
20. You hadn’t ought to miss the national park.
21. After spending most of the weekend in the library, I was already for the exam.
22. Earlier in the race, I could of caught up with her.
23. “I’m doing good. How are you doing?”
24. Every major country in Western Europe accept Switzerland and Norway belongs to the European Union.
25. Mom and Dad treated theirselves to dinner at a fine restaurant on their anniversary.
26. It hasn’t hardly rained all month in west Texas.
27. The birds flew toward there nests.
28. Boston is a long ways from San Francisco.
29. When I was a baby, I use to eat dog biscuits.
Writing Application
Using Formal English in a Letter

Formal, Standard Usage You are an after-school helper at a day-care center. The teachers at the center plan to take the children on a field trip. One of the teachers has asked you to write a letter to send to the children’s parents. The letter should tell where the children will visit and describe some of the things they will do there. The letter should also list any special items the children need to take with them.

Prewriting First, decide where the children will go on their field trip. They might go to a library, a park, a museum, or a fire station. Then, list the kinds of activities in which the children might participate. Note how the children will travel—for example, by bus or car. Also, note any special clothing or other things they might need for the field trip. List all the details you can imagine.

Writing Begin your draft with a polite greeting to the parents. Then, clearly explain why the children are going on the field trip. Invite the parents to call the day-care center with any questions they might have. In your letter, avoid using any informal or non-standard expressions.

Revising Read over your work carefully, and then ask a friend to read your letter. Does your reader understand the information in the letter? Does the letter follow the guidelines for a proper business letter? Revise any information that is unclear.

Publishing Check your letter for correct spelling, punctuation, and grammar. With your teacher’s permission, you may want to discuss the planned field trip with the rest of the class. Post your letter on a class bulletin board or Web page.

Reference Note For more about writing business letters, see “Writing” in the Quick Reference Handbook.
Diagnostic Preview

Correcting Sentences by Capitalizing Words

For each of the following sentences, correctly write each word that should be capitalized but is not. If a sentence is already correct, write C.

EXAMPLE

1. our guest speaker will be mayor Masella.
   1. Our, Mayor

1. Today i learned the song “simple gifts” from my friend.
2. “Hansel and Gretel” is a well-known fairy tale.
3. The kane county fall carnival will be held on saturday, october 19.
4. I believe that the recent trip to japan was organized by dr. alexander.
5. Let’s ask the club treasurer, ms. lee.
6. Have you met professor martínez, rondelle?
7. Luis valdez filmed the shepherd’s tale, a traditional mexican play, for tv.
8. The greek god of war was ares.
9. My mother wrote to senator smith about the base closing.
10. members of congress often debate issues.
12. Have you seen any of Mary Cassatt’s paintings?
13. I didn’t know that there are mummies in the American Museum of Natural History.
14. A Venezuelan exchange student will be living with our family for eight months.
15. The graduation ceremony was held at Newberry College.
16. When is the Jewish holiday Yom Kippur this year?
17. Grandma asked me what I want for my birthday.
18. Monique said, “That movie is about World War II.”
19. Next spring Uncle William is going to take me on a hiking trip to Mount Elbert.
20. Darnell took a rafting trip on the Colorado River.

Using Capital Letters

20a. Capitalize the first word in every sentence.

Example

My sister has soccer practice after school. Then she has to do her homework.

The first word of a directly quoted sentence should begin with a capital letter, whether or not the quotation comes at the beginning of your sentence.

Example

Reiko asked, “Have you finished your report?”

Traditionally, the first word of every line of poetry begins with a capital letter.

Example

Let the rain kiss you.
Let the rain beat upon your head with silver liquid drops.
Let the rain sing you a lullaby.
The rain makes still pools on the sidewalk.
The rain makes running pools in the gutter.
The rain plays a little sleep-song on our roof at night—
And I love the rain.

Langston Hughes, “April Rain Song”

Note

Some poets do not follow this style. When you quote from a poem, use capital letters exactly as the poet uses them.
20b. Capitalize the first word in both the salutation and the closing of a letter.

SALUTATIONS
- Dear Service Manager:
- Dear Adam,
- My dear Brenda,

CLOSINGS
- Sincerely,
- Yours truly,
- Very truly yours,

20c. Capitalize the pronoun I.

EXAMPLE When I returned home, I walked the dog.

Exercise 1 Proofreading Sentences for Correct Capitalization

If a sentence has one or more errors in capitalization, correctly write each word that should be capitalized. If a sentence is already correct, write C.

EXAMPLE
1. What time should I call?
   1. I

1. My library report on Edwin Arlington Robinson is due at the end of next month.
2. My sister memorized the limerick that begins, “a tutor who tooted a flute.”
3. Aren’t you glad that tomorrow is a holiday?
4. Elizabeth said, “we need to buy some more shampoo.”
5. My grandparents let me watch television only after I have finished all my chores.
6. I used “yours truly” to close my letter.
7. How many yen did you spend during your vacation in Japan, Alexander?
8. “Everything I need to make the spaghetti sauce is right here,” Nanna said.
9. Two groups that I like will perform in concert next month in the park.
10. Greg said, “tomorrow is a holiday, so there will be no mail delivery.”
20d. Capitalize proper nouns.

A proper noun names a particular person, place, thing, or idea. Proper nouns are capitalized. A common noun names a kind or type of person, place, thing, or idea. A common noun generally is not capitalized unless it begins a sentence or is part of a title.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Proper Nouns</th>
<th>Common Nouns</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Fairview School</td>
<td>middle school</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>November</td>
<td>month</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Toni Morrison</td>
<td>writer</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Red Sox</td>
<td>team</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Kenya</td>
<td>country</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Queen Elizabeth</td>
<td>queen</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Motorola</td>
<td>company</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

NOTE As you may already have noticed, some proper nouns consist of more than one word. In these names, short words such as prepositions (those of fewer than five letters) and articles (a, an, and the) are not capitalized.

EXAMPLES Isle of Wight, Attila the Hun

(1) Capitalize the names of persons and animals.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Persons</th>
<th></th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Kazue Sawai</td>
<td>Harriet Tubman</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Golda Meir</td>
<td>Eric the Red</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Heitor Villa-Lobos</td>
<td>W. C. Handy</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Animals</th>
<th></th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Lassie</td>
<td>Rover</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Shamu</td>
<td>Socks</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

STYLETIP Some names consist of more than one part. The different parts may begin with capital letters only or with a combination of capital and lowercase letters. If you are not sure about the spelling of a name, ask the person with that name, or check a reference source.

EXAMPLES
- du Maurier, DuPont,
- van Gogh, Van Buren,
- La Verne, de la Tour
(2) Capitalize geographical names.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Type of Name</th>
<th>Examples</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Continents</td>
<td>Asia</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Australia</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Countries</td>
<td>Denmark</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Burkina Faso</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Cities, Towns</td>
<td>Minneapolis</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Havana</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>States</td>
<td>Maryland</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>West Virginia</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Islands</td>
<td>Hawaiian Islands</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Leyte</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bodies of Water</td>
<td>Yangtze River</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Hudson Bay</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Streets, Highways</td>
<td>Front Street</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Fifth Avenue</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

COMPUTER TIP

You may be able to use your spellchecker to help you correctly capitalize people’s names, geographical names, and other proper nouns. Each time you use a proper noun in your writing, make sure you have spelled and capitalized it correctly. Then, add the name to your computer’s dictionary or spellchecker.

NOTE In a hyphenated street number, the second part of the number is not capitalized.

EXAMPLE Forty-ninth Street

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Type of Name</th>
<th>Examples</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Parks</td>
<td>San Antonio Missions</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mountains</td>
<td>Adirondacks</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Pine Mountain</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Forests</td>
<td>Sherwood Forest</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sections of the Country</td>
<td>the South</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Corn Belt</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
NOTE  Words such as east, west, northeast, or southwest are not capitalized when the words indicate a direction.

EXAMPLES  Turn east when you reach the river. [direction]

Mae goes to college in the East. [section of the country]

Exercise 2  Writing Proper Nouns

For each common noun given below, write two proper nouns that name the same kind of person or thing. Be sure to use capital letters correctly.

EXAMPLE  1. lake

1. Lake Louise, Lake Ontario

1. river  6. singer  11. dog  16. explorer
2. street  7. island  12. politician  17. mountain
3. actor  8. state  13. city  18. lake
5. friend  10. ocean  15. painter  20. athlete

Exercise 3  Proofreading for the Correct Use of Capital Letters

If a sentence has an error in capitalization, correctly write the word that should be capitalized. If the sentence is already correct, write C.

EXAMPLE  1. Huge rigs pump oil from beneath the North sea.

1. Sea

1. María Ayala and eileen Barnes are going to Chicago.
2. Our neighbor Ken Oshige recently moved to canada.
3. Midway island is in the Pacific Ocean.
4. We could see Mount Hood from the airplane window.
5. After you turn off the highway, head north for three miles.
6. During the sixteenth century, explorers from Spain brought horses to the west.
7. Several of us went camping near the guadalupe River.
8. My closest friend just moved to Ohio with shadow, her cat.
9. Hawaii Volcanoes National park is in Hawaii.
10. The bookstore is located on Maple street in New Orleans.
(3) Capitalize the names of organizations, teams, institutions, and government bodies.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Type of Name</th>
<th>Examples</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>
| Organizations         | Math Club
Oakdale Chamber of Commerce
Boy Scouts |
| Teams                 | New York Mets
Los Angeles Lakers
Riverside Raiders |
| Institutions          | University of Oklahoma
Kennedy Middle School
Mount Sinai Hospital |
| Government Bodies     | League of Arab States
Department of Education
Federal Bureau of Investigation |

STYLETIP
The names of government bodies are generally abbreviated.

EXAMPLES
FBI
IRS

Stylenote
For more information on abbreviations, see pages 548 and 563.

(4) Capitalize the names of special events, holidays, and calendar items.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Type of Name</th>
<th>Examples</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>
| Special Events    | World Series
New York Marathon
Parade of Roses Tulip Festival |
| Holidays          | Thanksgiving
Labor Day
Martin Luther King, Jr., Day |
| Calendar Items    | Sunday
Father’s Day
December
April Fools’ Day |
NOTE Do not capitalize the name of a season unless it is part of a proper name.

EXAMPLES a winter storm the Winter Festival

(5) Capitalize the names of historical events and periods.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Type of Name</th>
<th>Examples</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Historical Events</td>
<td>Boston Tea Party</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Battle of Hastings</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>War of 1812</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Historical Periods</td>
<td>Bronze Age</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Reformation</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Great Depression</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Renaissance</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Exercise 4 Correcting Errors in the Use of Capital Letters

For the following sentences, identify each word that should be capitalized but is not. Then, write the word or words correctly.

EXAMPLE 1. Hart middle school is having a book fair.
1. Middle School

1. Would you like to go to the movies this Friday?
2. I think that the special Olympics will be held in our town this year.
3. What plans have you made for Easter?
4. My sister and I were born at Memorial Hospital.
5. The Rotary club donated equipment for our school’s gym.
6. Did dinosaurs live during the Stone Age?
7. My favorite baseball team is the Atlanta Braves.
8. I always look forward to the first day of Springfest.
9. The United States Congress is made up of the Senate and the House of Representatives.
10. Did you see any fireworks on the Fourth of July?
11. Donna’s youngest sister is going to join the Girl Scouts next Wednesday.
12. Our family has a wonderful time at the Alaska Renaissance Festival each year.
13. The Grand hotel used to have Roman and Egyptian statues in its lobby.
14. Dave teaches at either the university of Florida or the university of Miami.
15. Why would you like to have lived during the middle ages?
16. If you like baseball games, you will enjoy watching the Texas rangers play.
17. Mrs. Nelson’s class prepared the library display about civil rights day.
18. For fifteen years, spring carnival has been our school’s main fund-raiser.
19. During the French revolution, people demanded their freedom and rights.
20. We’ll be visiting my cousin’s high school in May.

(6) Capitalize the names of nationalities, races, and peoples.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Type of Name</th>
<th>Examples</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Nationalities,</td>
<td>Mexican</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Races, and Peoples</td>
<td>Swiss</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Micronesian</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Caucasian</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Cherokee</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Bantu</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

(7) Capitalize the names of businesses and the brand names of business products.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Type of Name</th>
<th>Examples</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Businesses</td>
<td>J. and J. Construction, Inc.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Uptown Shoe Store</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Grommet Manufacturing Company</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Business Products</td>
<td>Goodyear Aquatred</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Nikon Pronea</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Ford Ranger</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

NOTE: Names of types of products are not capitalized.

EXAMPLES: Goodyear tires, Nikon camera, Ford truck
(8) Capitalize the names of ships, trains, aircraft, and spacecraft.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Type of Name</th>
<th>Examples</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Ships</td>
<td>Santa Maria</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Monitor</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Trains</td>
<td>Coast Starlight</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>City of Miami</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Aircraft</td>
<td>Air Force One</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Spirit of St. Louis</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Spacecraft</td>
<td>Columbia</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Lunar Prospector</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

(9) Capitalize the names of buildings and other structures.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Type of Name</th>
<th>Examples</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Buildings</td>
<td>Flatiron Building</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Gallier Hall</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>World Trade Center</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Other Structures</td>
<td>Hoover Dam</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Astrodome</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Golden Gate Bridge</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

(10) Capitalize the names of monuments, memorials, and awards.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Examples</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Statue of Liberty</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Lincoln Memorial</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Pulitzer Prize</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

(11) Capitalize the names of religions and their followers, holy days and celebrations, sacred writings, and specific deities.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Type of Name</th>
<th>Examples</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Religions and Followers</td>
<td>Buddhism</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Taoism</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Christian</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Jew</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Holy Days and Celebrations</td>
<td>Purim</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Christmas</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Ramadan</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Ash Wednesday</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sacred Writings</td>
<td>Dead Sea Scrolls</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Bible</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Koran</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Talmud</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Specific Deities</td>
<td>Allah</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>God</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Vishnu</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Jehovah</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Reference Note

For information on using italics (underlining) for the names of vehicles, see page 589.

Computer Tip

A computer’s spellchecker or style checker might spot some capitalization errors for you.

However, you cannot rely on these programs to find all your mistakes. Since many words are capitalized in some situations but not in others, the computer cannot find every error. Also, the computer might mistakenly highlight a word that is already correct.

Always proofread your writing carefully to make sure you have used capital letters correctly.
The words god and goddess are not capitalized when they refer to deities of ancient mythology. However, the names of specific mythological gods and goddesses are capitalized.

EXAMPLE The Roman god of the sea was Neptune.

(12) Capitalize the names of planets, stars, constellations, and other heavenly bodies.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Mars</th>
<th>Pluto</th>
<th>North Star</th>
<th>Betelgeuse</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Milky Way</td>
<td>Big Dipper</td>
<td>Ursa Minor</td>
<td>Sirius</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

The word earth is not capitalized unless it is used along with the names of other heavenly bodies that are capitalized. The words sun and moon generally are not capitalized.

EXAMPLES China is home to one fourth of the people on earth.

How far is Saturn from Earth?

The sun rose at 7:09 this morning.

Exercise 5 Correcting Sentences by Using Capital Letters Correctly

For each of the following sentences, correctly write the word or words that should be capitalized.

EXAMPLE 1. We went to the leesburg library to learn more about african american history.

1. Leesburg Library, African American

1. The methodist quoted a verse from the bible.
2. Bob has a chevrolet truck.
3. On a clear night you can see venus from earth.
4. My teacher took a cruise on the song of Norway.
5. Meet me in front of the Woolworth building.
6. Pilar received the Junior Achievement award.
7. Otis made a detailed scale model of the spacecraft nozomi.
8. Elena wrote a poem about the Greek god zeus.
9. Some navajo make beautiful silver jewelry.
10. Who were the first europeans to settle in Mexico?
Correcting Sentences by Capitalizing Proper Nouns

For each of the following sentences, correctly write the word or words that should be capitalized.

EXAMPLE

1. In the late nineteenth century, Henry Morton Stanley explored an area of Africa occupied by ancestors of the Bambuti.

1. Henry Morton Stanley, Africa, Bambuti

1. The Bambuti people live in the Ituri Forest, which is located in the northeast area of the Democratic Republic of the Congo.

2. This forest is located almost exactly in the middle of the continent of Africa.

3. It lies north of Mungbere, as shown in the boxed area on the map to the right.

4. The Bambuti people, also known as Twides, aka, or efe, have lived there for many thousands of years.

5. The earliest record of people like the Bambuti is found in the notes of explorers from Egypt about 2500 B.C.

6. Other early reports of these people are found on colorful tiles in Italy and in the records of explorers from Portugal.
7. Stanley met some of the bambuti people, but he didn’t write much about them.
8. In the 1920s, Paul Schebesta went to Africa to learn more about the Bambuti people.
9. He learned that the bambuti are very different from the bantu and from other neighbors.
10. In fact, the bambuti were probably the first people in the rain forest that stretches across central Africa from the Atlantic Ocean on the western coast to the eastern grasslands.

20e. Do not capitalize the names of school subjects, except course names followed by a numeral and the names of language classes.

Examples
- social studies
- science
- health
- art
- Woodworking II
- Consumer Education I
- Spanish
- English

20f. Capitalize proper adjectives.

A proper adjective is formed from a proper noun. Proper adjectives are usually capitalized.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Proper Noun</th>
<th>Proper Adjective</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Mexico</td>
<td>Mexican carvings</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>King Arthur</td>
<td>Arthurian legend</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Judaism</td>
<td>Judaic laws</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mars</td>
<td>Martian landscape</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

20g. Most abbreviations are capitalized.

Capitalize abbreviations that come before and after personal names.

Examples
- Mr., Ms., Mrs., Dr., Gen., M.D., RN, Jr., Sr.

Capitalize abbreviations of the names of organizations, businesses, and government bodies.

Examples
- Inc., Co., Corp., FBI, UN, NAACP, FDA

In addresses, capitalize abbreviations such as those for roads, rooms, and post office boxes.

Examples
- Ave., Dr., Rd., St., Apt., Rm., P.O. Box
Abbreviations of geographical names are capitalized.

EXAMPLES  N.Y.C.  St. Louis  N. America  Okla.

NOTE  A two-letter state abbreviation without periods is used when the abbreviation is followed by a ZIP Code. Each letter of the abbreviation is capitalized.

EXAMPLES  Austin, TX 78704-6364

New Orleans, LA 70131-5140

Some abbreviations, especially those for measurements, are not capitalized.

EXAMPLES  etc., e.g., vol., chap., in., yd, lb, cc, ml, mm

Exercise 6  Correcting Errors in Capitalization

For each of the following sentences, correctly write each word or abbreviation that should be capitalized.

EXAMPLE  1. I went with mrs. McCain to visit mr. Brennan in the retirement home.

   1. Mrs., Mr.

1. The address was p.o. box 32, Green Bay, Wi 54305.
2. The new student had just moved to our town from st. Petersburg, Florida.
3. Will gen. Scott Quinn be speaking tonight?
4. Mr. Lloyd Mitchell, jr., has been appointed president of Sprockets and Widgets, inc.
5. The next speaker for Career Day will be Chet Patterson, rn, who works at the local hospital.
7. The Fbi, the Fda, and the Un have decided to cooperate on the investigation.
8. Are you taking art II or spanish?
9. Many scottish people have celtic, scandinavian, and irish ancestors.
10. The Chisholm Trail, which stretched over one thousand miles from San Antonio, tex., to Abilene, kans., was used by cowboys to drive cattle north.
Review B  Proofreading a Letter for Correct Capitalization

Read the following letter. For each numbered word group, identify any words or abbreviations that are not capitalized correctly. Rewrite the words or abbreviations with correct capitalization. If a sentence is already correct, write C.

EXAMPLE  [1] 1066 south Norman st.
1. South, St.

March 14, 2001

Mr. Leonard Thornton
1234 Windswept Dr.
[1] Lancaster, Pa 17601

[2] dear Mr. Thornton:

[3] I think that the easiest thing you could do to help make Lancaster better is to make it safer to ride bicycles here.

[4] My friend James almost got hit by a car on his way to Memorial middle school. [5] As a member of our city’s Transportation advisory Board, you can do a lot to encourage cyclists to wear helmets.

[6] Also, in Earth Science I class, we have learned that if more people used bicycles instead of cars, the air would be cleaner. [7] One company that I know of, Universal Solutions, inc., rewards people who ride bicycles to work. [8] Many cities, such as Boulder, Colorado, are building bicycle lanes. [9] Maybe you could help with programs like these. Thank you for your attention to this matter.

[10] yours truly,

Tate Washington
20h. Capitalize titles.

(1) Capitalize a person’s title when the title comes before the person’s name.

EXAMPLES

Judge O’Connor
Principal Walsh
Mrs. Santos
Doctor Ellis
Senator Topping
President Truman

(2) Titles used alone or following a person’s name generally are not capitalized.

EXAMPLES

Judy Klein, our club president, led the meeting.
The secretary gave a speech to Congress.

However, a title used alone in direct address usually is capitalized.

EXAMPLES

Can the cast come off today, Doctor?
Good morning, Ma’am [or ma’am].

(3) Capitalize a word showing a family relationship when the word is used before or in place of a person’s name.

EXAMPLES

Are Uncle Carlos and Aunt Rosa here yet?
Either Mom or Dad will drive us to the show.

Do not capitalize a word showing a family relationship when the word follows a possessive noun or pronoun.

EXAMPLE

My cousin Dena and her niece Leotie made stew.

Exercise 7 Correcting Sentences by Capitalizing Words

For each of the following sentences, correctly write the word or words that should be capitalized. If a sentence is already correct, write C.

EXAMPLE

1. Thank you, aunt Shirley, for the pretty sweater.
   1. Aunt

1. He says that judge Johnson is very strict.
2. Reuben’s mother, Mrs. Santos, owns the new restaurant.
3. Will your uncle be at the party?
4. Well, doctor Sakamoto, do I need braces?
5. Did the secretary of state attend the meeting?
6. Is cousin Josie going to Israel?
7. Please accept my apologies, senator.
8. On Saturday, aunt Latisha will arrive from Savannah.
9. Does professor Jones teach American history?
10. I learned to swim at grandpa Brown’s cottage on the lake last summer.

Review C Using Capital Letters Correctly in Sentences

For each of the following sentences, correctly write the word or words that should be capitalized.

EXAMPLE

1. The Civil war is sometimes called the war between the states.
   1. War, War Between the States

1. There is a fountain in the middle of lake Eola.
2. dr. jones teaches at York high school.
3. Some of these folk songs are mexican.
4. the atlantic borders the states from maine to florida.
5. Someday i would like to bicycle through europe.
6. all of my friends came to the party.
7. Have you visited the Washington monument?
8. Our history class wrote letters to the secretary-general of the united nations.
9. There’s a long detour on highway 50 just east of brooksville, dad.
10. Our first fall camping trip will be in october.

(4) Capitalize the first and last words and all important words in titles and subtitles.

Unimportant words in a title include:

- articles (a, an, the)
- coordinating conjunctions (and, but, for, nor, or, so, yet)
- prepositions of fewer than five letters (such as by, for, into, on, with)
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Type of Name</th>
<th>Examples</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Books</td>
<td>The Horse and His Boy</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Dust Tracks on a Road</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Magazines</td>
<td>Sports Illustrated for Kids</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Essence Reader's Digest</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Newspapers</td>
<td>Detroit Free Press</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Tulsa Tribune</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>The Fresno Bee</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>The Denver Post</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Poems</td>
<td>“The City Is So Big”</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>“The Sneetches”</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>“For a Poet”</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>“Steam Shovel”</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Short Stories</td>
<td>“The Day the Sun Came Out”</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>“The Six Rows of Pompons”</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Plays</td>
<td>Once on This Island</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>A Chorus Line</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Comic Strips</td>
<td>Peanuts</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Rose Is Rose</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Movies</td>
<td>Babe: Pig in the City</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>A Bug’s Life</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>The King and I</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Television Programs</td>
<td>Touched by an Angel</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Sister, Sister</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Star Trek: Deep Space Nine</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Videos</td>
<td>The Lion King II: Simba’s Pride</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Basic Sign Language</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Video Games</td>
<td>Mario Kart 64</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Escape Velocity</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Compact Discs</td>
<td>Bringing Down the Horse</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Mi Tierra</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Ray of Light</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Audiotapes</td>
<td>Tiger Woods: The Makings of a Champion</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>My Family Tree: A Recorded History</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Works of Art</td>
<td>Delfina and Dimas</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Forever Free</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Musical Works</td>
<td>“Oh, What a Beautiful Morning”</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Peter and the Wolf</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>“Angel of Mine”</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Reference Note

For guidelines on using italics (underlining) and quotation marks with titles, see pages 588 and 595.
An article (a, an, or the) before a title is not capitalized unless it is the first word of the official title.

EXAMPLES

- Do you read the Sacramento Bee?
- Grandmother showed Nehal and me an article in The Workbasket.
- My mother reads The Wall Street Journal.

Coordinating conjunctions and prepositions that begin a title or subtitle are capitalized.

EXAMPLES

- I have read Through the Looking Glass three times.
- Marcia said that But I’ll Be Back Again was very interesting.

Exercise 8 Writing Titles for Imaginary Works

Create a title for each item described below. Be sure each title is capitalized correctly.

EXAMPLE

1. a video about training pet birds

   1. How to Be Your Bird’s Best Friend

1. a movie about an American Indian detective who solves a murder mystery
2. a magazine for people interested in video games about fly-fishing in Montana
3. a book about choosing the best breed of dog as a pet for your family
4. a song about saving the rain forests
5. a painting about life in a modern suburb somewhere in the United States
6. a poem about a new baby brother or sister coming home for the first time
7. a play about a student’s first day at a new school in a South American country
8. a television show about the humorous people who visit the local library
9. a short story about students who go on a field trip to an animal park and get stuck there overnight
10. a newspaper published by the athletics department
Correctly Capitalizing Titles

Correct any incorrect capital or lowercase letters in titles in the following sentences. If a sentence is already correct, write C.

EXAMPLE 1. Mom gave me an article called “the importance of fitness.”
   1. “The Importance of Fitness”

1. “Heart And Soul” is the only piano duet we can play.
2. Do you read National geographic World?
3. My little sister loves the Cat in the Hat.
5. We enjoy watching reruns of The Cosby show.
6. My mother likes to work the crossword puzzle in the New York times.
7. The children look forward to receiving their copies of Ranger rick each month.
8. Tony’s short story “a few words about Aunt Frederica’s dog Smitty and all his friends” certainly has the longest title of any story written by a member of the class.
9. “A Poem About A Poem” is the title of Mary Elizabeth’s funny poem.
10. Whitney Houston’s music is a special feature of the movie the preacher’s wife.

Proofreading a Paragraph to Correct Errors in Capitalization

Proofread the following paragraph, correcting any errors in the use of capital and lowercase letters.

EXAMPLE [1] what a huge Ship the titanic was!
   1. What, ship, Titanic

   [1] This magnificent ocean liner sank on april 15, 1912.
   [2] For more than seventy years, the Titanic lay untouched in the icy waters of the atlantic ocean. [3] Then, on September 1, 1985, Dr. Robert Ballard of the woods hole oceanographic institution and his crew found the ship. [4] To view the Ocean floor, the scientists used the remote-controlled vehicle Argo, shown on the next page. [5] once they discovered the ship, they attached a special underwater sled to Argo. [6] The sled, with its lights and camera, provided Dr. Ballard with more than twenty thousand photographs of the Titanic. [7] In 1986, Dr. Ballard and his Team returned to explore the wreck of the British ocean liner once more. [8] Using a minisubmarine, the team was able to explore the sunken ship. [9] After years of wondering about the Titanic, underwater explorers finally found the Wreck and uncovered the truth about its fate. [10] In his book The discovery of the Titanic, Dr. Ballard tells about his underwater adventures.
A. Proofreading Sentences for Correct Capitalization

For each of the following sentences, correctly write the word or words that contain an error in capitalization.

1. Sean’s dog, Ransom, is a German shepherd.
2. Our Spring vacation begins on March 26.
3. Write to me at 439 Walnut street.
4. Mira asked, “Do you know why the Titanic sank?”
6. As soon as I finish my English homework, I’ll call you.
7. She would like to go to College someday.
8. We watched a scene from Romeo And Juliet.
9. Eric’s orthodontist is Dr. McCambridge.
10. On Saturday my aunt is taking us to Jones Beach.
11. Dad used the General Electric waffle iron to make breakfast.
12. Have you seen my copy of Newsweek?
13. The Peace Corps volunteers helped build a bridge.
14. The capital of Peru is Lima.
15. The French Revolution changed European society.
16. The spacecraft Sputnik 2 carried a dog named Laika.
17. Tom’s brother is a Roman Catholic priest.
18. Although I live in Biloxi now, I’m from the north.
19. I answered, “the Gulf of Mexico, I think.”
20. Are you taking Spanish or Art this year?

B. Correcting Sentences by Using Capital Letters Correctly

For the following sentences, correctly write each word that contains an incorrect capital or lowercase letter.

21. Malaysia is in the Southeastern part of Asia.
22. Its largest ethnic groups are Malay, Chinese, and Indian.
23. The capital and largest city is Kuala Lumpur.
24. Much of the world’s Rubber comes from Malaysia.
25. Other Major products are Tin and Palm Oil.
26. Most inhabitants of Malaysia are Muslims.
27. Malaysia is a constitutional monarchy headed by a King.
28. The Prime Minister is the Leader of the Government.
29. Many Malays wear the Sarong, a kind of skirt.
30. The Encyclopedia called World Book can give you more information about Malaysia.

C. Correcting Errors in Capitalization

For the following sentences and word groups, correctly write each word and each abbreviation that should be capitalized.

31. Todd’s new address is 1240 Mud Road, Setauket, Ny 11733–2851.
32. The exchange student is from San Remo, Italy.
33. My parents’ favorite television movie is Lonesome Dove.
34. We went with Mrs. Rigatti to see the floats in the San Gennaro Festival.
35. It was a surprise to learn that Uncle Elwood had been in the CIA all those years.
36. Isn’t your aunt Etta here?
37. Mont Blanc, the highest peak in the Alps, was first climbed in 1786.
38. We sent a petition to Mayor Moore.
39. Millie enjoyed reading Anne of Green Gables so much that she rented the movie.
40. Yours sincerely, Beth Tewes
Writing Application
Using Capital Letters in an Essay

Proper Nouns  Your social studies teacher has asked you to write about a vacation you would like to take to a historical place. Write an essay telling where you would like to go and why you would like to go there. In your essay, use at least five proper nouns.

Prewriting  First, brainstorm a list of historical places that interest you. Which of these places would you most like to visit? Write down notes about what you would do during your visit.

Writing  Begin your rough draft by stating where you would like to go and why. Explain what historical event or events happened at that place. Then, tell what particular areas or landmarks you would visit. Be sure to use at least five proper nouns naming places, events, and people.

Revising  Ask a friend to read your draft and tell you if any parts seem unclear or uninteresting. Then, revise anything that is confusing or boring.

Publishing  Use an encyclopedia or other reference source to check the spelling of any proper nouns you have included. Proofread your essay carefully for any other errors in grammar, spelling, capitalization, and punctuation. Put your essay on poster board, along with pictures or drawings of the place you wrote about in your essay. With your teacher’s permission, display your poster in the classroom.
Using Periods, Question Marks, Exclamation Points, Commas, Semicolons, and Colons Correctly

The following sentences lack necessary periods, question marks, exclamation points, commas, semicolons, and colons. Write the letter, word, or words that should be followed by a punctuation mark. Then, add the correct punctuation mark after each word. For numerals, write the entire numeral and insert the correct punctuation mark.

EXAMPLE

1. Mr. Cotton my next-door neighbor asked me to pick up his mail while he is away

   1. Cotton, neighbor, away.

1. The mangos and papayas and avocados will make a good fruit salad
2. Before the slide presentation began Ms Jee gave a short clear history of Korea
3. Ray Charles a popular singer and musician became blind at the age of seven
4. I’ve taken classes in photography ceramics and weaving
5. When will dinner be ready
6. Here comes a tornado
7. Cheryl will take gymnastics Eddie will take piano lessons
8. Ted mowed the lawn cleaned the garage and painted the shed
9. Would 6 30 P.M be too early
10. This Zuni ring was made in Santa Fe N Mex
11. I finished the letter but I haven’t proofread it yet
12. Dear Senator Hutchison
13. We will learn about the federal court system then we will visit the county courthouse.
14. Sara Eric and Manuel can speak both Spanish and English.
15. Hurry, get me some ice
16. Yes I did clean my room
17. When you go cross-country skiing, bring the following items skis boots poles and ski wax
18. Shall we leave at 9 00 A.M.
19. Mr Pak when is the Chinese New Year
20. The Scouts’ annual dinner will be held February 19 2001.

End Marks

An end mark is a punctuation mark placed at the end of a sentence. Periods, question marks, and exclamation points are end marks. Periods are also used after some abbreviations.

21a. Use a period at the end of a statement (a declarative sentence).

EXAMPLES French is the official language of Haiti, but many people there speak Haitian Creole.

I will write to you soon.

21b. Use a question mark at the end of a question (an interrogative sentence).

EXAMPLES Have you heard Gloria Estefan’s new song?

Where should I meet you?

21c. Use an exclamation point at the end of an exclamation (an exclamatory sentence).

EXAMPLES What a cute puppy that is!

This egg drop soup is delicious!

Reference Note

For more information about classifying sentences by purpose, see page 316.

HELP

Periods (decimal points) are also used to separate dollars from cents and whole numbers from fractions.

EXAMPLES
$6.57 [six dollars and fifty-seven cents]
2.7 [two and seven tenths]

In some countries a comma is used instead of a period in such cases.
21d. Use either a period or an exclamation point at the end of a request or a command (an imperative sentence).

Use a period after an imperative sentence that makes a request or a mild command. Use an exclamation point after a strong command.

EXAMPLES

Please sit down. [a request]

Sit down. [a mild command]

Sit down right now! [a strong command]

---

Exercise 1 Correcting Sentences by Adding End Marks

Write the last word of each sentence, and add a period, a question mark, or an exclamation point.

EXAMPLE

1. What time is it
   1. it?

1. When does the bus come
2. What a great game that was
3. Did you bring your lunch today
4. Hyo was born in Korea
5. I don’t understand the assignment
6. Who can identify the subject of this sentence
7. Pardon me, sir
8. Imagine me at the White House
9. Get the iguana back into your room right now
10. The legend for this map is in the lower right-hand corner

---

Exercise 2 Correcting a Paragraph by Adding Capital Letters and End Marks

Decide where the sentences in the following paragraph begin and end. Rewrite each sentence, providing the needed capital letters and end marks.

EXAMPLE

what an ancient art weaving is

What an ancient art weaving is!

have you ever been to Hawaii the first Europeans who landed there found chiefs dressed in beautiful feather cloaks feathers for cloaks like the one shown here came from thousands of birds different-colored feathers were arranged in royal designs the feathers were then attached to a base of woven fibers cloaks were worn in battle and for ceremonies most of the islanders did not wear such fine garments colorful prints are worn by all kinds of people on the islands every Friday is Aloha Friday on that day many people wear Hawaiian prints and live flowers

21e. Many abbreviations are followed by periods.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Types of Abbreviations</th>
<th>Examples</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>
| Personal Names         | I. M. Pei
Vicki L. Ruiz
J. C. Watts
M. F. K. Fisher |
| Titles Used with Names| Mr.
Mrs.
Ms.
Jr.
Dr.
Sr.
Ph.D.
D.D.S. |
| Organizations          | Assn.
Co.
Corp.
Inc. |

NOTE Abbreviations for government agencies and some widely used abbreviations are written without periods. Each letter of such abbreviations (which are called _acronyms_) is capitalized.

EXAMPLES
CIA (_Central Intelligence Agency_)
NOS (_National Ocean Service_)
PC (_personal computer_)
RFD (_Rural Free Delivery_)
TV (_television_)

When writing the initials of someone’s name, place a space between two initials (as in _I. M. Pei_). Do not place a space between three initials (as in _M. F. K. Fisher_).

Reference Note
For more on using capital letters for abbreviations, see page 548.
A two-letter state abbreviation without periods is used only when it is followed by a ZIP Code. Both letters of the abbreviation are capitalized. No mark of punctuation is used between the abbreviation and the ZIP Code.

EXAMPLES
- Washington, DC 20013
- San Juan, PR 00904

Abbreviations for units of measure are usually written without periods and are not capitalized.

EXAMPLES
- cc, kg, ml, m, ft, lb, qt

However, you should use a period with the abbreviation in. (for inch) to prevent confusing it with the word in.

When an abbreviation that has a period ends a sentence, another period is not needed. However, a question mark or an exclamation point is used in such situations if it is needed.

EXAMPLES
- The game lasted until 8:30 P.M.
- Did it start at 5:00 P.M.?

Review A  Correcting Sentences by Adding Punctuation

Write the following sentences, adding periods, question marks, and exclamation points where they are needed.

EXAMPLE

1. Some caterpillars become butterflies

1. Some caterpillars become butterflies.

1. Will Mr Highwater be teaching the science course
2. Just after 3:00 PM., the sun came out
3. The letter from Ms E J Hunter was dated Fri, Nov 12
4. How heavy the traffic was on First Avenue
5. Do your measuring cups say ml or oz
6. Address comments to 7890 E Kyle Dr, Oswego, New York.
7. By 300 B.C., Chinese cooks already had a philosophy of five tastes
8. The city of St Petersburg is situated on a peninsula
9. Apply at the loading dock at H J Movers, Inc
10. On TV tonight, Dr Melba West will explain nutrition.

Review B Using Punctuation Correctly

For each of the following sentences, write the word or words that should be followed by a period, question mark, or exclamation point. Add the proper punctuation after each word.

EXAMPLE

1. My neighbor Mr Nhuong showed me this picture of people celebrating the Vietnamese holiday Tet

1. Mr., Tet.

1. Unlike New Year’s Day, which is always on Jan 1, Tet can fall on any day in late
January or early February
2. Moreover, Tet isn’t just one single day; the celebration lasts a whole week
3. Wouldn’t you like a week-long holiday
4. Even here at 8420 Beaconcrest Ave, the Nhuong family still enjoy their traditions
5. According to Mr. Nhuong, the name of the first person to visit a house can bring good or bad luck to the family
6. Since my nickname is Lucky, the Nhuongs asked me to be their first visitor and to arrive by 7:00 AM
7. I tried hard not to be late
8. One of the Nhuongs’ relatives flew in from Santa Barbara, Calif, later that morning
9. Mrs Nhuong prepared a huge breakfast, and we all sat down to enjoy it
10. What a great meal that was Commas

End marks are used to separate complete thoughts. Commas, however, are generally used to separate words or groups of words within a complete thought. If you fail to use necessary commas, you may confuse your reader.

CONFUSING  The members of the team are Jo Ann Jerry Lee Darrin Marcia and Jeanne. [How many members?]

CLEAR  The members of the team are Jo Ann, Jerry Lee, Darrin, Marcia, and Jeanne. [five members]

Items in a Series

21 f. Use commas to separate items in a series.

A series is three or more items written one after the other. The items may be single words or word groups.

Words in a Series

Sugar cane, bananas, and citrus fruits are grown in Jamaica.
[nouns]

Yesterday I dusted, vacuumed, and mopped.
[verbs]

The day was wet, cold, and windy.
[adjectives]

Word Groups in a Series

At the beach we swam, built sand castles, and played volleyball.
[predicates]

I searched for the lost contact lens in the sink, on the counter, and on the floor.
[prepositional phrases]

Please punch the time card when you arrive, when you take lunch, and when you leave.
[clauses]

When all the items in a series are joined by and, or, or nor, do not use commas to separate them.

EXAMPLES  I've seen snakes and lizards and toads in our yard.

Shall we go bowling or rent a movie or listen to CDs?
Proofreading Sentences for the Correct Use of Commas

Most of the following sentences need commas. If a sentence needs commas, write the word before each missing comma; then, add the comma. If a sentence is already correct, write C.

EXAMPLE

   1. DeGale, Jackson,

1. I finished my dinner brushed my teeth combed my hair and ran out the door.
2. The nurse checked the patient’s pulse took his temperature and gave him a glass of water.
3. For lunch we had milk tuna sandwiches and pears.
4. Cora Jack and Tomás all entered the contest.
5. Marcus plays golf and football and volleyball.
6. The U.S. Marine Corps is prepared for battle on land on the sea and in the air.
7. For her birthday on September 27, my sister wants a dog and a cat and a hamster and a bird.
8. Jan told Raul where she had been, where she was, and where she was going.
9. This project is fun easy fast and inexpensive.
10. Balloons were floating in the living room the kitchen the bedrooms and the dining room.

21g. Use commas to separate two or more adjectives that come before a noun.

EXAMPLES

Pita is a round, flat bread of the Middle East.

James Earl Jones certainly has a deep, strong, commanding voice.

Do not place a comma between an adjective and the noun immediately following it.

INCORRECT Alexandra and I found an old, rusty, bicycle in the vacant lot down the street.

CORRECT Alexandra and I found an old, rusty bicycle in the vacant lot down the street.

Reference Note

For more information about semicolons, see page 577.
Sometimes the last adjective in a series is thought of as part of the noun. In that case, do not use a comma before the last adjective.

EXAMPLES

The tall pine tree [not tall, pine tree] swayed.

Kimchi is a spicy Korean dish [not spicy, Korean dish] made with pickled cabbage.

Exercise 4

Proofreading Sentences for the Correct Use of Commas

For each of the following sentences, write the word that should be followed by a comma; then, add the comma. If a sentence is already correct, write C.

EXAMPLE 1. Mrs. Hirata taught us several beautiful old Japanese folk songs.

1. beautiful,

1. His calm wrinkled face told a story.

2. François Toussaint L’Ouverture was a brilliant patriotic Haitian leader.

3. The huge lively wriggling kingfish dropped from the hook.

4. There’s a sleek shiny bicycle in the store window.

5. The sound of the soft steady rain put me to sleep.

6. We read Chief Black Hawk’s moving farewell speech.

7. I washed my hands in the cold clear spring water.

8. May I please have some of that spicy delicious soup?

9. The old diary had ragged yellowed pages.

10. The crowded dining room is filled with people celebrating my parents’ anniversary.

Compound Sentences

21h. Use a comma before and, but, for, nor, or, so, or yet when it joins independent clauses in a compound sentence.

EXAMPLES

Theo will bring the potato salad, and Sarah will bring the apple juice.

Congress passed the bill, but I believe the president vetoed it.

I went to bed early, for I had a big day ahead of me.
Do not confuse a compound sentence with a simple sentence containing a compound verb. No comma is needed between the parts of a compound verb.

COMPOUND SENTENCE We ran relay races first, and then we ate lunch.

SIMPLE SENTENCE We ran the relay races first and then ate lunch. [The sentence contains a compound verb.]

However, a compound verb made up of three or more verbs generally does require commas.

EXAMPLE We ran the relay races, ate lunch, and then prepared for the individual races.

Exercise 5 Correcting Compound Sentences by Adding Commas

Some of the following sentences are compound and need to have commas added. If a sentence needs a comma, write the word or numeral before the missing comma; then, add the comma. If a sentence is already correct, write C.

EXAMPLE 1. The storm brought heavy rain but a tornado did the most damage.

1. rain,

1. At the Native American Heritage Festival, Mary Johns wove baskets from sweet grass and Alice Billie made rings from beads.

2. The sailboat was almost hidden by the fog yet we could see part of the mast.

3. German Silva of Mexico was the fastest male runner in the 1994 and 1995 New York City Marathons and Tegla Loroupe of Kenya was the female winner in both races.

4. Would you like to play checkers or shall we go to the lake instead?

5. I called my friends and told them the news.

6. Jim practiced the piano piece all month for he wanted to do well at the recital.
7. Many people are used to celebrating New Year’s Day on January 1 but the Chinese New Year begins between January 21 and February 19.
8. The lake contains fish and is home to several alligators.
9. The old oak tree shaded the house but the shade kept the grass from growing.
10. I wanted to buy a camera so I mowed yards in the neighborhood to earn extra money.

Interrupters

21i. Use commas to set off an expression that interrupts a sentence.

Two commas are used to set off an interrupting expression—one before and one after the expression.

EXAMPLES My favorite gospel singers, BeBe and CeCe Winans, were on TV last night.

As you leave, Jesse, please close the door quietly.

Sometimes an “interrupter” comes at the beginning or the end of the sentence. In such cases, only one comma is needed.

EXAMPLES Yes, I’ll call back later.

How did you do in karate class today, Kami?

(1) Use commas to set off appositives and appositive phrases that are not necessary to the meaning of a sentence.

An appositive is a noun or a pronoun that identifies or describes another noun or pronoun beside it. An appositive phrase is an appositive with its modifiers.

EXAMPLES A gymnast, Mrs. Shaw, will coach us. [The appositive Mrs. Shaw identifies the gymnast.]

This book is about geology, the science of the earth and its rocks. [The science of the earth and its rocks is an appositive phrase that identifies geology.]

Do not use commas when an appositive is necessary to the meaning of a sentence.
EXAMPLES

My cousin Roberto lives in Puerto Rico. [I have more than one cousin and am using his name to identify which cousin I mean.]

The character Alice is based on Alice Liddell. [Alice is one of several characters; the appositive tells which character is meant.]

Exercise 6  Punctuating Appositives

Most of the following sentences contain at least one error in the punctuation of appositives and appositive phrases. Write each word that should be followed by a comma, and add the comma. If a sentence is already correct, write C.

EXAMPLE 1. Two cold drinks lemonade and punch were available to the guests.

1. Two cold drinks, lemonade and punch, were available to the guests.

1. The park a beautiful place for a party was lit by streetlights and had a bandstand.

2. Our hosts Mr. and Mrs. Worthington greeted us at the entrance.

3. Some of the men were wearing boaters straw hats popular at the time.

4. My friend Eliza Wolcott sat in the shade at our table.

5. Do you see an empty table a quiet place for conversation?

6. Somehow a puppy the pet of one of the guests got onto the dance floor.

7. Edward Finch, the best dancer has his choice of partners.

8. Music mostly waltzes filled the air.

9. A young woman in a striped dress a new bride, is remembering her wedding.

10. Listen to laughter and lively conversation, the sounds of happy people.
(2) Use commas to set off words used in direct address.

EXAMPLES

Ms. Jacobs, please explain the assignment.

Do you know who Santa Anna was, Beth?

You’re right, Inés, to say he was a Mexican general.

In the sentences above, the words Ms. Jacobs, Beth, and Inés are nouns of direct address. They identify the person or persons spoken to or addressed.

Exercise 7 Correcting Sentences by Adding Commas

For each of the following sentences, write each word that should be followed by a comma; then, add the comma.

EXAMPLE

1. Are you sure you left your book in the room James?
   1. room,

1. Michi will you read the haiku you wrote?
2. Carla please bring me the newspaper when you finish with it.
3. Did you bring the tickets Jorge?
4. After all the work we’ve done Ann it would be a shame to turn it in late.
5. If you mow the lawn Kelly I’ll rake the clippings.
6. Please Mom can you drive me to rehearsal?
7. Mr. Ferguson you have a telephone call.
8. You are dismissed class.
9. How long have you worked here David?
10. The problem my friends is simply lack of effort.

Introductory Words, Phrases, and Clauses

21j. Use a comma after certain introductory elements.

(1) Use a comma after yes, no, or any mild exclamation such as well or why at the beginning of a sentence.

EXAMPLES

Yes, you may use my pencil.

Why, it’s Arthur!

Well, I think you should apologize.
(2) Use a comma after two or more introductory prepositional phrases.

EXAMPLE  In the valley at the base of the hill, a herd of buffalo grazes.

Also, use a comma after a single long introductory prepositional phrase.

EXAMPLE  On the winter morning when Kenan discovered the strange visitor, the rosebush burst into bloom.

Use a comma after a single short introductory prepositional phrase when the comma is necessary to make the sentence clear.

CONFUSING  In the evening sunlight faded in the western sky.

CLEAR  In the evening, sunlight faded in the western sky. [The comma is needed so that the reader does not read “evening sunlight.”]

(3) Use a comma after an introductory adverb clause.

EXAMPLE  After the show is over, we will go out to eat.

NOTE  An adverb clause that comes at the end of a sentence usually is not preceded by a comma.

EXAMPLE  We will go out to eat after the show is over.

Exercise 8 Using Commas with Introductory Elements
If a comma is needed in a sentence, write the word before the missing comma and add the comma. If a sentence is already punctuated correctly, write C.

EXAMPLE  1. After he left we noticed that his hat was on the table.
   1. left,

1. Before eating the birds were singing noisily.
2. On the table in the kitchen dinner was getting cold.
3. Although he trained hard for a month, Juan could not break his own record.
4. Yes that is a cardinal.
5. On her way to school in the morning Roseanne was thinking about her project.
6. When I have time on the weekends I like to hook rugs.
7. Well you had better make up your mind soon.
8. With the decorations in the living room in place Julie was ready for her mother’s birthday party.
9. In the corner of the room a night light showed the way to the door.
10. Because the snow cover was so thin the deer had no trouble finding food.

Conventional Uses

21k. Use commas in certain conventional situations.

(1) Use commas to separate items in dates and addresses.

EXAMPLES

Bill Cosby was born on July 12, 1937, in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

Saturday, May 10, will be the day of the soccer playoff.

My aunt has lived at 41 Jefferson Street, Northfield, Minnesota, since 1998.

Notice that a comma separates the last item in a date or in an address from the words that follow it. However, a comma does not separate a month from a day (July 12) or a house number from a street name (41 Jefferson Street).

NOTE No punctuation is used between the state abbreviation and the ZIP Code.

EXAMPLE Cerritos, CA 90701

(2) Use a comma after the salutation of a personal letter and after the closing of any letter.

EXAMPLES

Dear Grandma and Grandpa, Love,

Dear Tyrone, Sincerely,

Exercise 9 Using Commas Correctly in Conventional Situations

Write the following items and sentences, inserting or deleting commas as needed.
EXAMPLE 1. Friday February 11 is the first day of the fair.
   1. Friday, February 11, is the first day of the fair.

1. Yours truly
2. Shirley Chisholm was born on November 30 1924, in New York City.
3. The first female principal chief of the Cherokee Nation is Wilma Mankiller, who was born near Rocky Mountain Oklahoma.
4. Write to me at 327, Adams Way Darrouzett TX 79024.
5. The Harvest Carnival is on Friday October 29 2001.
6. Dear Uncle Sig
7. Address orders to Pretty Good Camping Supplies P.O. Box 528 Southborough, MA, 01772.
9. Friday July 5 2002 will be my grandparents’ golden wedding anniversary.
10. The main office in Santa Barbara California has a new fax number.

Unnecessary Commas

211. Do not use unnecessary commas.

Too much punctuation can be just as confusing as not enough punctuation, especially where the use of commas is concerned.

CONFUSING My friend, Jessica, said she would feed my cat and my dog while I’m away, but now, she tells me, she will be too busy.

CLEAR My friend Jessica said she would feed my cat and my dog while I’m away, but now she tells me she will be too busy.

Have a reason for every comma or other mark of punctuation that you use. When there is no rule requiring punctuation and when the meaning of the sentence is clear without one, do not insert any punctuation mark.
Dear Tom,

[10] Yours truly

Sal
Semicolons

A semicolon is part period and part comma. Like a period, it can separate complete thoughts. Like a comma, it can separate items within a sentence.

21m. Use a semicolon between parts of a compound sentence if they are not joined by and, but, for, nor, or, so, or yet.

EXAMPLES Todd’s report is about Arizona; mine is about Utah.

The rain clouds are moving in quickly; let’s head home.

NOTE Use a semicolon to join independent clauses only if the ideas in the independent clauses are closely related. Otherwise, use a period to make two separate sentences.

EXAMPLES Do not touch that tree frog; it may be poisonous. [The two ideas are closely related.]

Do not touch that tree frog; everyone stay together. [The two ideas are not closely related.]

Exercise 10 Proofreading Sentences for the Correct Use of Semicolons

Most of the following sentences have commas where there should be semicolons. If a sentence needs a semicolon, write the words before and after the missing semicolon; then, insert the semicolon. If a sentence is already correct, write C.

EXAMPLE 1. Mary Vaux Walcott treasured her box of watercolor paints, she took it with her everywhere she went.

1. paints; she

1. As a young girl, she visited the Canadian Rockies each year, there she began to paint wildflowers.

2. She loved mountain climbing, she often crossed rugged areas to find new wildflowers.

3. She painted her flowers from life, for she did not like to rely on pencil sketches.

4. You can see five of her paintings on the next page, aren’t they beautiful?
5. Painting A shows a western red lily, such lilies wither quickly when picked.
6. Painting B is of a bottle gentian, a fall flower, it grows in bogs and swamps.
7. American wisteria is a climbing plant, and you can see in Painting C that it has many showy flowers.
8. Painting D shows blossoms of the American waterlily opening in early morning, their aroma draws insects.
9. Painting E is of Carolina jessamine, it spreads its fragrant flowers through treetops.
10. Mary Vaux Walcott is known as “the Audubon of North American wildflowers,” for she painted more than seven hundred species.
Colons

A colon usually signals that more information follows.

21n. Use a colon before a list of items, especially after expressions such as the following and as follows.

EXAMPLES  These are the winners of the poetry contest: Carmen Santiago, Justin Douglass, and Steven Yellowfeather.

Pack the following items for your overnight trip: a toothbrush, toothpaste, and your hairbrush.

The order of the colors seen through a prism is as follows: red, orange, yellow, green, blue, indigo, and violet.

NOTE  Do not use a colon between a preposition and its object or between a verb and its object. Either omit the colon or reword the sentence.

INCORRECT  My report includes: a table of contents, three chapters, illustrations, and a list of sources.

CORRECT  My report includes a table of contents, three chapters, illustrations, and a list of sources.

CORRECT  My report includes the following parts: a table of contents, three chapters, illustrations, and a list of sources.

Colons may also be used to introduce long, formal statements and quotations.

EXAMPLE  Mark Twain had a very definite opinion on happiness: “The best way to cheer yourself is to try to cheer somebody else up.”

21o. Use a colon between the hour and the minute when you write the time.

EXAMPLES  8:55 A.M.  9:15 P.M.  6:22 this morning

21p. Use a colon after the salutation of a business letter.

EXAMPLES  Dear Sir or Madam: Dear Mrs. Jordan:

Dear Sales Manager: To Whom It May Concern:

NOTE  Colons
Exercise 11 Using Colons Correctly

Most of the following items contain an error in the use of colons. Rewrite each incorrect sentence to correct the error. If a sentence is already correct, write C.

EXAMPLE
1. Bring the following items to class your notebook, a pencil, and your textbook.
   1. Bring the following items to class: your notebook, a pencil, and your textbook.

1. We visited the following cities Bayamón, Ponce, and San Juan.
2. A good baby sitter should have the following qualities: promptness, reliability, an interest in children, and common sense.
3. To stay healthy, you should not smoke or chew tobacco.
4. Add these items to your shopping list: tissues, toothpaste, and shampoo.
5. A good friend should be: loving, loyal, and honest.
6. The first bell rings at 8:10 A.M., and the second bell rings twenty minutes later.
7. Your homework includes: your spelling worksheet, one chapter of reading, and a rough draft of your English composition for Monday.
8. The recipe for Brunswick stew called for these ingredients: lamb, carrots, potatoes, and onions.
9. Every time we see her, Grandmother likes to remind us of her favorite Ben Franklin saying: “Whatever is begun in anger ends in shame.”
10. Dear Sir or Madam

Review D Proofreading a Letter for the Correct Use of Punctuation

Proofread the following letter for errors in punctuation. Then, rewrite the letter, adding the necessary periods, question marks, commas, semicolons, and colons.

EXAMPLE
[1] 1200 E Halifax Avenue
1. 1200 E. Halifax Avenue
January 11 2001

Superintendent of Schools
Baltimore City Board of Education
200 E. North Avenue
Baltimore, MD 21202

Dear Superintendent

Would your students be interested in visiting an African American wax museum? The only one of its kind is right here in Baltimore. The Great Blacks in Wax Museum features life-size wax models of famous African Americans. These wax images include leaders in education, civil rights and science. The museum displays statues of the following people: Rosa Parks, Phillis Wheatley, Crispus Attucks, Carter G. Woodson, Dred Scott, Harriet Tubman, Booker T. Washington, Frederick Douglass, and many others.

Our company offers students and teachers discount tours of the museum during Black History Month. Discount tours of other historic attractions are also available then.

For more information, please call me between 8:30 A.M. and 5:30 P.M.

Yours truly,

Jane Lee Harper
President
Uhuru Guided Tours
Using End Marks, Commas, Semicolons, and Colons Correctly

Each of the following items contains at least one error in the use of end marks, commas, semicolons, or colons. Rewrite the items, adding or changing punctuation to correct each error.

EXAMPLE

1. Mrs. Hunter how long will the leaves remain that color.

   1. Mrs. Hunter, how long will the leaves remain that color?

1. Liechtenstein a country not quite as large as Washington, D.C. is one of the smallest countries in Europe

2. The students gathered signatures on a petition and a spokesperson presented their argument for better sidewalks.

3. That must be the biggest fish in the whole lake?

4. Did you find out which president created the Peace Corps in 1961.

5. Dear Sir

6. No I haven’t seen that new movie but I’ve heard it’s absolutely terrific.

7. Fort Sumter; the site of the first shots fired in the Civil War; is located in Charleston South Carolina.

8. After the sparrows finished in the birdbath they flew up to the feeder!

9. A long white shiny limousine pulled into the parking lot, after that came a bus and a police officer on a motorcycle.

10. Before you may read your mystery novel you must finish your homework clean your room and walk the dog.
A. Using Punctuation Correctly

Periods, question marks, exclamation points, commas, semicolons, and colons are missing in the following items. Write the word or numeral before each missing punctuation mark, and add the correct mark.

1. Floraplease pass the pepper
2. Did Fred once work for Interactive Corp
3. We are learning about meteorology the study of weather
4. The shirts come in the following four colors blue green brown and red
5. Yasunari Kawabata won the 1968 Nobel Prize in literature he was the first Japanese writer to win the prize
6. Watch out
7. I wish I could go to camp this summer but I have to stay home because I caught chickenpox.
8. Dear Mom and Dad
9. I taught Zachary how to swim
10. While Dr Sanchez is on jury duty Dr Kelley is seeing his patients
11. My youngest sister was born on April 12 1997
12. She is a bright lively child
13. His address is 2330 River Rd Sterling VA 22170-2322
14. The Mandan and Hidatsa peoples in North Dakota harvested wild rice and they traded it for buffalo hides and dried meat
15. Have you ever been to Austin Texas
16. Well Eric my favorite actor is Denzel Washington
17. Tom Brokaw a national newscaster was born in South Dakota
18. I get up at 6 00 A.M. on school days
19. Yes a taco is a fried filled tortilla
20. The meeting will be held Sunday February 23 at 2 00 P.M.
B. Using Punctuation Correctly

Periods, question marks, exclamation points, commas, semicolons, and colons are missing in the following items. Write the word or numeral before each missing punctuation mark, and add the correct mark.

21. Wow Thanks for the new bike Grandpa.
22. What a friendly obedient dog you have
23. Dawn finished her report read the paper cooked dinner and set the table.
24. Can you tell me his address or should I ask someone else
25. Write to 637 West Elk Ave, Washington DC 20015-2602.
26. Our mechanic could not find anything wrong with the water pump the problem must be somewhere else.
27. Answer the following questions
   (1) Was Lincoln a successful leader
   (2) Could the Civil War have ended sooner
   (3) How important was the naval blockade
28. One of our troop leaders Ms. Wells is teaching us photography.
29. We’ll need some minnows worms aren’t good bait in salt water.
30. Ned the oldest in my family has many responsibilities.
31. Aren’t you going to Glasgow Scotland this summer
32. She hid the lantern the keys two maps and the gold.
33. Before June 1 1998 I had never heard of Christine then she was on the front page of every paper.
34. Get those filthy muddy cowboy boots of yours out of this house now
35. Chiles rellenos are very spicy you’ll like them.
36. Go to the cave build a fire and wait for Sabrina.
37. No Teresa there was no TV in those days.
38. Color this one yellow Mr Papastratos won’t mind.
39. Let’s finish this we’ll see about starting something new tomorrow.
40. Dear Mr President
Writing Application
Using End Marks in a Screenplay

Kinds of Sentences  You are a scriptwriter for a popular TV show. You are writing a scene in which one of the characters wins one million dollars in a sweepstakes. Write down the character’s response to the good news. Use a variety of end marks to help express the character’s feelings.

Prewriting  First, you will need to make up a character or use one from a TV show you have seen. How would that person feel if he or she won a million dollars? Write down some notes on how you think your character would react.

Writing  Using your prewriting notes, write a draft of what your character will say. Make your draft at least one paragraph long. Use end punctuation to help express the character’s emotions.

Revising  Read your character’s response aloud. Does it sound realistic? Check to make sure you have used a variety of end marks to express your character’s feelings.

Publishing  Check your writing for any errors in grammar, spelling, and punctuation. In small groups, exchange papers with another student. Take turns reading the papers to the group as if you each were one of the characters. Use the punctuation as a guide to what the character is feeling and to how you should read the response.
CHAPTER 22

Punctuation
Underlining (Italics), Quotation Marks, Apostrophes, Hyphens

Diagnostic Preview

A. Proofreading Sentences for the Correct Use of Underlining (Italics) and Quotation Marks

Each of the following sentences contains at least one error in the use of underlining (italics) or quotation marks. Rewrite each sentence correctly.

EXAMPLE

1. The recent movie of Shakespeare’s “Hamlet” is true to the original play.

   1. The recent movie of Shakespeare’s Hamlet is true to the original play.

1. “The next short story we will be reading is called All Summer in a Day,” Mr. Willis told us.
2. My younger brother learned how to play the song Yesterday on the piano.
3. Isn’t your favorite poem The Unicorn?
4. “Wasn’t that a song? asked Carrie.”
5. I think a folk singer wrote it, answered Tony.
6. Juanita said that “she would hum a bit of it.”
7. Brad commented, “I think my parents have a copy of it”.
8. “Can you bring it to class”? Elena asked.
11. “I think, said Theo, that you’re right.”
12. “Into the Woods” is a musical comedy in which characters from several different fairy tales meet in the same forest.
15. Melba built a model of the Merrimack for extra credit in social studies.

B. Proofreading Sentences for the Correct Use of Apostrophes and Hyphens

Each of the following sentences contains at least one error in the use of apostrophes or hyphens. Rewrite each sentence correctly.

EXAMPLE 1. We havent finished dinner yet.

1. We haven’t finished dinner yet.

16. My teachers house is being painted.
17. Each classroom has thirty four desks.
18. This recipe I’m trying calls for fresh greens, potatoes, carrots, and onions.
19. The assembly then featured a speech by the new president elect of the student council.
20. Whos going to sample this dish?
21. Dont forget the soy sauce.
22. The three chefs recipes were prepared by the chefs themselves on television.
23. Jiro’s last name has two ls.
24. Have you tried those new fat free potato chips?
25. In the quiet early evening, we could hear the flapping of the geeses wings.
Underlining (Italics)

Italics are printed letters that lean to the right—like this. When you handwrite or type, you show that a word should be italicized by underlining it. If your writing were printed, the typesetter would set the underlined words in italics. For example, if you wrote

```
Zora Neale Hurston wrote Mules and Men.
```

the sentence would be printed like this:

```
Zora Neale Hurston wrote Mules and Men.
```

22a. Use underlining (italics) for titles and subtitles of books, plays, periodicals, films, television series, works of art, and long musical works.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Type of Name</th>
<th>Examples</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>
| Books        | Number the Stars
To Kill a Mockingbird
&Tibet: Through the Red Box
| Plays        | Song of Sheba
Romeo and Juliet
&Life with Father
| Periodicals  | Sioux City Journal
The Dallas Morning News
&Highlights for Children
| Films        | Babe: Pig in the City
The Wizard of Oz
&Oliver & Company
| Television Series | Under the Umbrella Tree
Fun with Watercolors
&Reading Rainbow

TIPS & TRICKS

Generally, use italics for titles of works that stand alone, such as books, CDs, and television series. Use quotation marks for titles of works that are usually part of a larger work, such as short stories, songs, and episodes of a television series.

Reference Note

For examples of titles that require quotation marks instead of italics, see page 595.
An article (a, an, or the) before the title of a magazine or a newspaper is not italicized or capitalized when it is part of a sentence rather than part of the title.

EXAMPLES

I deliver the Evening Independent. [The is part of the sentence, not part of the title.]

Is that the latest issue of The New Yorker? [The is part of the magazine’s title.]

22b. Use underlining (italics) for names of trains, ships, aircraft, and spacecraft.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Type of Name</th>
<th>Examples</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Trains</td>
<td>Stourbridge Lion</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Best Friend of Charleston</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>The City of New Orleans</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ships</td>
<td>Lusitania</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Flying Cloud</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>USS Lexington</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Aircraft</td>
<td>Solar Challenger</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Hindenburg</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Spirit of St. Louis</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Spacecraft</td>
<td>Landsat-7</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Discovery</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Enterprise</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
Exercise 1  Using Underlining (Italics) Correctly

For each of the following sentences, write each word or item that should be printed in italics and underline it.

EXAMPLE

1. We saw Rodin’s famous statue The Thinker.

   1. The Thinker

1. The magazine Popular Science reports news about science.

2. Have you ever seen the movie The Shaggy Dog?

3. My favorite painting is Morning of Red Bird by Romare Bearden.

4. The Wright brothers built their first airplane, the Flyer, in 1903.

5. We read the play You’re a Good Man, Charlie Brown.

6. On his famous voyage in 1492, Christopher Columbus acted as captain of the ship named the Santa Maria.

7. Which newspaper do you read, the Chicago Sun-Times or the Chicago Tribune?

8. My sister watches Sesame Street every day.

9. Aboard Vostok 1, Yuri A. Gagarin orbited Earth.

10. The book Stuart Little is by E. B. White.

Quotation Marks

22c. Use quotation marks to enclose a direct quotation—a person’s exact words.

Be sure to place quotation marks both before and after a person’s exact words.

EXAMPLES

Our team leader says, “I try to practice every day.”

“Let’s go home,” Jeanne suggested.

Do not use quotation marks for an indirect quotation—a rewording of a direct quotation.

DIRECT QUOTATION

Juan said, “The bus is late.” [Juan’s exact words]

INDIRECT QUOTATION

Juan said that the bus was late. [not Juan’s exact words]
DIRECT QUOTATION  Juan asked, “Is the bus late?” [Juan’s exact words]

INDIRECT QUOTATION  Juan asked whether the bus was late. [not Juan’s exact words]

22d. A directly quoted sentence begins with a capital letter.
EXAMPLES  Mrs. Talbott said, “Please get a pencil.”
Kristina asked, “Is it my turn?”

22e. When an expression identifying the speaker interrupts a quoted sentence, the second part of the quotation begins with a lowercase letter.
EXAMPLE  “Will you take care of my lawn and my pets,” asked Mr. Franklin, “while I’m on vacation next month?”

When the second part of a divided quotation is a new sentence, it begins with a capital letter.
EXAMPLE  “Yes, we will,” I said. “We can use the extra money.”

22f. A direct quotation can be set off from the rest of the sentence by a comma, a question mark, or an exclamation point, but not by a period.
(1) If a quotation comes at the beginning of a sentence, a comma, question mark, or exclamation point usually follows it.
EXAMPLES  “Dogs make better pets than cats do,” said Frank.
“I have you ever had a cat?” Donna asked.
“No, and I never will!” he replied.

(2) If a quotation comes at the end of a sentence, a comma usually comes before it.
EXAMPLE  Maria asked, “What makes you say that?”

(3) If a quoted sentence is divided, a comma usually follows the first part and comes before the second part.
EXAMPLE  “Oh,” Donna commented, “he’s probably just saying that because he’s never had a cat.”
22g. A period or a comma should be placed inside the closing quotation marks.

EXAMPLE  “I can’t wait to see Shirley Caesar’s new video,” James said. “It’s supposed to come out next week.”

22h. A question mark or an exclamation point should be placed inside closing quotation marks when the quotation itself is a question or an exclamation. Otherwise, it should be placed outside.

EXAMPLES  “What time will you be home from work, Mom?” asked Michael. [The quotation is a question.]

Who said, “All the world’s a stage”? [The sentence, not the quotation, is a question.]

“What?!” yelled the crossing guard. [The quotation is an exclamation.]

What a surprise to hear Susana say, “We’re moving back to Puerto Rico in June”! [The sentence, not the quotation, is an exclamation.]

Exercise 2  Punctuating and Capitalizing Quotations

Rewrite the following sentences, using commas, end marks, quotation marks, and capital letters where they are needed. If a sentence is already correct, write C.

EXAMPLE  1. We’re going tubing next Saturday said Carlos.

1. “We’re going tubing next Saturday,” said Carlos.

1. May I go with you I asked.
2. We’d like to go, too added Barbara and Tranh.
3. Barbara asked who will bring tubes for everyone
4. Jim said I’ll bring them
5. I offered to bring sandwiches and lemonade.
6. My dad will drive said Carlos he has a van.
7. Tranh told us that the river is fed by a glacier.
8. That means said Barbara that the water will be cold.
9. It should feel good I pointed out if Saturday is as hot as today is.
10. Carlos told all of us to meet him at his house at 8:30 A.M.
Exercise 3  Punctuating and Capitalizing Quotations

Rewrite each of the following sentences correctly, using punctuation and capitalization as needed.

EXAMPLE  1. Clementine Hunter was born in 1887 said María and she died in 1988.
   1. “Clementine Hunter was born in 1887,” said María, “and she died in 1988.”

1. Staci said here is a photograph of this self-taught American artist.
2. Clementine Hunter was born in Natchitoches, Louisiana Staci remarked.
3. She started working on a plantation when she was only fourteen María added.
4. When she was fifty-three years old said Staci Hunter decided to do what she loved most—paint.
5. Staci continued she began painting on almost any surface that would hold the paint!
6. Her early pieces were painted on brown paper bags and cardboard boxes María remarked and then on canvas, wood, and paper.
7. Hunter used bright colors Mike explained to paint everyday scenes like this one, called Wash Day.
8. It may surprise you to learn added Mike that her paintings sold for as little as twenty-five cents fifty years ago!
9. María asked Mike didn’t you say that her paintings are now worth thousands of dollars?
10. Moreover Staci concluded Clementine Hunter’s paintings have been exhibited throughout the United States.

Clementine Hunter. Wash Day. The collection of Thomas N. Whitehead, courtesy of the Association for the Preservation of Historical Natchitoches, Louisiana, Melrose Plantation.
Exercise 4  Revising Indirect Quotations to Create Direct Quotations

Revise each of the following sentences to change the indirect quotation to a direct quotation. Be sure to use capital letters and punctuation marks where they are needed.

EXAMPLE

1. I asked the cashier for change for a dollar.
   1. “May I please have change for a dollar?” I asked the cashier.

1. The cashier replied that she was not allowed to make change unless a purchase was made.
2. I said that I needed a new pen.
3. The cashier told me that it cost seventy-nine cents.
4. I said that I would give her $1.79.
5. She told me she could give me change for a dollar.
6. The cashier asked how I wanted the change.
7. I said that three quarters, two dimes, and a nickel would be good.
8. She replied that she did not have any more dimes in her cash register.
9. Then I said that I would gladly take four quarters.
10. She said that was okay but asked why I wanted change.

22i. When you write dialogue (conversation), begin a new paragraph every time the speaker changes.

EXAMPLE

In Khanabad, Mulla Nasrudin was sitting in a tea house when a stranger walked in and sat down beside him.

   The newcomer said:
   “Why is that man over there sobbing his heart out?”
   “Because I have just arrived from his hometown and told him that all his winter camel fodder was lost in a fire.”
   “It is terrible to be a bearer of such tidings,” said the stranger.
   “It is also interesting to be the man who will shortly tell him the good news,” said Nasrudin. “You see, his camels have died of a plague, so he will not need the fodder after all.”

Idries Shah, “Camel Fodder”
22j. When a quotation consists of several sentences, put quotation marks only at the beginning and the end of the whole quotation.

EXAMPLE  “Will Bao help with the play? Zachary has offered to make costumes,” Aaron said.

22k. Use single quotation marks to enclose a quotation within a quotation.

EXAMPLE  “Mrs. Engle distinctly said, “Your book reports are due Thursday,” Krista told me.

22l. Use quotation marks to enclose the titles of short works such as short stories, poems, newspaper or magazine articles, songs, episodes of television series, and chapters and other parts of books.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Type Of Name</th>
<th>Examples</th>
</tr>
</thead>
</table>
| Short Stories                 | “The Stone”
                                  | “All Summer in a Day”                         |
| Poems                         | “Jetliner”
                                  | “Song of the Sky Loom”                       |
| Articles                      | “Celebrating Our Heritage”
                                  | “The Giants of Easter Island”                 |
| Songs                         | “Georgia on My Mind”
                                  | “America the Beautiful”                      |
| Episodes of Television Series | “Kali the Lion”
                                  | “The Trouble with Tribbles”                  |
| Chapters and Other Parts of Books | “Energy from the Stars”          |
                                  | “I Go to Sea”                              |

NOTE  Titles that appear in quotation marks are set in single quotation marks when they appear within a quotation.

EXAMPLE  Kris said, “Our class learned “America the Beautiful” today.”

TIPS & TRICKS

In general, the title of a work that can stand alone (for instance, a novel, a TV series, a collection of poems) is in italics. The title of a work that is usually part of a collection or series (for instance, a chapter of a book, an episode of a television series, a poem) is in quotation marks.

Reference Note

For examples of titles that require italics instead of quotation marks, see page 588.
Exercise 5  Punctuating Quotations and Titles

Rewrite the following sentences, adding single and double quotation marks where they are needed.

EXAMPLE

1. I just finished the chapter The Circulatory System in our health book, Dell told me.

1. Diane is learning the song This Little Rose for her recital.
2. Angelo, can we meet after school tomorrow? We need to practice our presentation, Sam said.
3. I’m sure I heard the announcer say, Schools are closed because of the storm, I said.
4. I can pronounce all the words in Lewis Carroll’s poem Jabberwocky, Nina told Lou.
5. Ted said, My dad will pick us up on Saturday at 7:30 A.M. After the race, he is taking us to Lucy Chang’s for lunch. Do you like Chinese food?
6. The weather should be nice tomorrow. Let’s plan on hiking in the woods, Eric said.
7. Mrs. Banister said, The Fun They Had is a good short story, don’t you think?
8. Have you read The Toaster? Sue May asked. It’s the funniest poem I know.
9. One article in the newspaper this morning is titled Black Scientists Make History.
10. Strong’s new song is Be True, Not Blue, and it’s great! Marcie said.

Review A  Punctuating Paragraphs in a Dialogue

Rewrite the following paragraphs, using capital letters as well as quotation marks and other marks of punctuation where they are needed.

EXAMPLE

1. What are you writing my grandfather asked.
   1. “What are you writing?” my grandfather asked.

   [1] Grandpa I said I’m writing a report about your hero, Octaviano Larrazolo. Can you tell me how he helped Mexican Americans?
Grandpa got out his scrapbook. Octaviano did many things for our people he began. In 1912, New Mexico became a state. Octaviano and other Hispanic leaders wanted to be sure that Mexican Americans could hold political office. They wanted to make certain that they would always be allowed to vote. When New Mexico’s new constitution was written, Octaviano and the other leaders fought for these rights.

How did Mr. Larrazolo know how to protect the rights of people? I said.

Grandpa replied he had studied law. His knowledge of the law helped him understand the constitution. It also helped him later when he became interested in politics.

When did Mr. Larrazolo become involved in politics I asked.

In 1916, he campaigned for Ezequiel Cabeza de Baca for governor said Grandpa. De Baca was elected, but he died a month later. Another election was held, and Larrazolo became New Mexico’s governor.

I asked what are some things that Mr. Larrazolo felt strongly about?

He answered Octaviano believed that public schools should teach children about Mexican American culture. He also was in favor of both English and Spanish being spoken in schools. Here is a picture of him with his daughters.

What else should I know about Octaviano Larrazolo? I asked Grandpa.

Octaviano was elected to the United States Senate in 1928 Grandpa said. He continued to work hard for the rights of Hispanic Americans until he died. If you want to read more about him, I have a copy of an article, Octaviano Larrazolo: New Mexico’s Greatest Governor, here in my scrapbook.
Apostrophes

Possessive Case

The possessive case of a noun or a pronoun shows ownership or possession.

EXAMPLES
- Heidi’s comb
- no one’s fault
- his jacket
- two weeks’ vacation
- our dog
- my stepbrother

22m. To form the possessive case of a singular noun, add an apostrophe and an s.

EXAMPLES
- a student’s grant
- Tanaka’s store
- the child’s toy
- Tess’s painting

NOTE
A proper noun ending in –s may take only an apostrophe to form the possessive case if adding –’s would make the name awkward to say.

EXAMPLES
- the Netherlands’ climate
- Ms. Andrews’ class

Exercise 6 Using Apostrophes for Singular Possessives

For each of the following sentences, identify the word that needs an apostrophe. Then, correctly write the word.

EXAMPLE
1. Kenyans celebrate 1963 as the year of their country’s independence.
   1. country’s

1. Soon that young nations athletes were setting records in international sports.
2. Leading Kenyas world-class distance runners was Kipchoge Keino, shown on the next page.
3. Keino increased his endurance by running many miles in his homelands mountains.
4. In 1965, he burst into his sports top ranks by setting world records for both the 3,000-meter and the 5,000-meter races.
5. Training in the mountains helped Keino win a gold medal at Mexico City's 1968 Olympics.
6. His record in that year's 1,500-meter race stood until 1984.
7. In fact, the Kenyan team's runners took home a total of eight medals in 1968.
8. In the 1972 Olympics, Keino's performance won him a second gold medal, this time for the 3,000-meter steeplechase.
9. A silver medal in the 1,500-meter race marked his career's remarkable completion.
10. His victories won Keino the world's praise and set new standards for all runners.

22n. To form the possessive case of a plural noun that does not end in s, add an apostrophe and an s.

EXAMPLES  geese's feathers  men's clothing children's books  feet's bones

22o. To form the possessive case of a plural noun ending in s, add only the apostrophe.

EXAMPLES  boxes' lids  ten minutes' time beetles' shells  the Ozawa's address

NOTE  In general, you should not use an apostrophe to form the plural of a noun.

INCORRECT  Two boy's left their books here.
CORRECT   Two boys left their books here.

Exercise 7  Writing Plural Possessives

For each of the following sentences, identify the word that needs an apostrophe. Then, correctly write the word.

EXAMPLE

1. Wild creatures' survival depends on their ability to adapt.
2. "creatures'

1. Animals' ways of dealing with cold are fascinating.
2. At night, chickadees' feathers are fluffed over the soft down next to their skin.
3. In addition, the birds' breathing rates and heartbeats slow, and their body temperatures fall, saving energy.
4. Deer's winter coats, made of hollow hairs filled with air, keep body heat from escaping.
5. Soft undercoats of fine hair are many animals' thermal underwear.
6. In the picture on the left, you can see how squirrels' tails, flattened against their backs and necks, keep them warm when they leave their nests.

7. The picture on the right shows how red foxes' tails are used as muffs curled around their heads while they sleep.
8. On grouse's toes are comblike structures that make walking in snow easier.
9. In cold weather, fur grows on the bottom of snowshoe hare's feet for protection.
10. Some wild creatures' survival during freezing temperatures and snow depends on traits like these.

Review B  Writing Possessives

Rewrite each of the following expressions by using the possessive case. Be sure to add apostrophes where they are needed.

EXAMPLE
1. the speeches of the politicians
   1. the politicians’ speeches

1. the books of the children
2. the prize of the winner
3. the bed of the kittens
4. the home of my friend
5. the streets of the city
6. the fish of the teacher
7. the cars of the women
8. the dens of the foxes
9. the fables of Aesop
10. the medal of Rowan
11. the hiding place of the mice
12. the idea of the boss
13. the plans of the builders
14. the diet of moose
15. the climate of the Cook Islands
16. the lawnmower of the Barkers
17. the shoes of the girls
18. the elephants of the zoo
19. the roads of the cities
20. the computer of the company
21. the desks of the students
22. the driveway of the neighbor
23. the tail of the dog
24. the stories of Mark Twain
25. the history of Texas

22p. Do not use an apostrophe with possessive personal pronouns.

EXAMPLES Is this pencil yours or mine?

Our apartment is smaller than theirs.

Her enchiladas are spicier than his.

22q. To form the possessive case of many indefinite pronouns, add an apostrophe and an s.

EXAMPLES either’s topic everyone’s favorite somebody’s notebook

Reference Note
For more information about possessive personal pronouns, see page 475. For more information about indefinite pronouns, see page 332.
Rewrite each of the following expressions by using the possessive case. Be sure to add apostrophes where they are needed.

EXAMPLE
1. the speeches of everybody
   1. everybody's speeches

1. the wishes of everyone
2. the fault of him
3. the answer of no one
4. the album of someone
5. the guess of me
6. the job of neither
7. the color of something
8. the deal of anyone
9. the sweaters of them
10. the notebook of you

Contractions

22r. Use an apostrophe to show where letters, numerals, or words have been left out in a contraction.

A contraction is a shortened form of a word, a numeral, or a group of words. The apostrophe in a contraction shows where letters, numerals, or words have been left out.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Common Contractions</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>I am .................. I'm</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1999 .................. '99</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>let us ................ let's</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>of the clock .......... o'clock</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>movie is ........... movie's</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>he would ............ he'd</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

The word not can be shortened to n’t and added to a verb. The spelling of the verb usually does not change.
Do not confuse contractions with possessive pronouns.

Contraction Examples

EXAMPLES

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Contraction</th>
<th>Possession</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>isn’t</td>
<td>its</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>aren’t</td>
<td>its</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>doesn’t</td>
<td>whose</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>don’t</td>
<td>whose</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>wasn’t</td>
<td>whose</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>weren’t</td>
<td>whose</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Exceptions

- will not . . . . will not
- can’t

Exercise 9 Using Apostrophes in Contractions

For the following sentences, write the word or numeral that requires an apostrophe and insert the apostrophe. If a sentence is already correct, write C.

EXAMPLE

1. Well be leaving soon.
   1. We’ll

1. Youve been a big help.
2. Youd better hurry up.
3. Whose umbrella is this?
4. Were having a fund-raiser for the homeless.
5. I cant find my skateboard.
6. He promised hed wear his seat belt.
7. Lets get tickets to see the concert.
8. It's time to leave for the party.
9. Its wings are painted blue.
10. I'll wash the car tomorrow morning.
11. Daniel asked the decoration committee who's going to be in charge.
12. Isn't this the book we need?
13. Remember to give your dog fresh water.
14. Stephanie said she'll bring a cardboard box from home.
15. This is a picture of my parents in '99, the year before my half-brother was born.
16. If that hummingbird returns to the feeder, I'm going to take a picture.
17. Theirs will be the last band to perform.
18. The cold weather doesn't bother Jeremy much.
19. We should be back to school by three o'clock.
20. Have you found out yet if you're on the team?

Exercise 10  Writing Contractions

For each of the following sentences, write the contraction of the italicized word or words.

EXAMPLE

1. We will see a performance of the puppet theater when we visit the Japan America Theatre in Los Angeles.

   1. We'll

   1. Have not you always wondered what goes on backstage at a puppet show?
2. Here is an illustration that takes you behind the scenes at a seventeenth-century puppet theater in Japan.
3. The audience cannot see all the backstage action because of the curtain.
4. The men who are handling the puppets in the picture are very highly trained.
5. They do not speak the characters’ lines, though.
6. It is the man sitting on the right on the platform who narrates the play.
7. As you can see, he is accompanied by a musician.
8. On the right are more puppets; they have been hung there for future use.
9. In the box at the top, that is the Japanese word that means “puppet.”
10. As you will notice, the Japanese system of writing is very different from ours.

Plurals

22s. Use an apostrophe and an s to form the plurals of letters, numerals, and symbols, and of words referred to as words.

EXAMPLES I think the word Mississippi has four i’s, four s’s, and two p’s.

Your 1’s and 7’s look alike.

You wrote +s instead of x’s in these math problems.

Try not to use so many you know’s when you talk.

Exercise 11 Forming Plurals by Using Apostrophes

Correctly form the plural of each of the following items.

EXAMPLE 1. 9
   1. 9’s

2. t 7. A 12. % 17. 3 22. *
3. @ 8. .com 13. at 18. + 23. uh oh
5. 6 10. thou 15. and 20. of 25. /
Hyphens

22t. Use a hyphen to divide a word at the end of a line.

When you divide a word at the end of a line, remember the following rules:

(1) Divide a word only between syllables.

INCORRECT Uncle Payat, Aunt Nina, and Ayita will journey eighty miles to join us.

CORRECT Uncle Payat, Aunt Nina, and Ayita will journey eighty miles to join us.

(2) Do not divide a one-syllable word.

INCORRECT They are bringing a salad, ham, and rye bread.

CORRECT They are bringing a salad, ham, and rye bread.

(3) Do not divide a word so that one letter stands alone.

INCORRECT Is that your family’s brand-new car parked across the street?

CORRECT Is that your family’s brand-new car parked across the street?

22u. Use a hyphen with compound numbers from twenty-one to ninety-nine.

EXAMPLE Until 1959, the United States had only forty-eight stars in its flag.

22v. Hyphenate a compound adjective when it comes before the noun it modifies.

EXAMPLES an activity that is well planned a well-planned activity

a flavor that is long lasting

a long-lasting flavor

Some compound adjectives are always hyphenated, whether they come before or after the nouns they modify.
EXAMPLES

a brand-new bicycle a bicycle that is brand-new an up-to-date encyclopedia

an encyclopedia that is up-to-date

22w. Use a hyphen with the prefixes all–, ex–, great–, self–, and with the suffixes –elect and –free.

EXAMPLES

all-purpose
self-confidence

ex-students
governor-elect

great-grandfather
sugar-free

Exercise 12 Using Hyphens Correctly

Write each of the following words. Add hyphens to show where the word may be divided at the end of a line or where they are needed in a compound number or word. If a word should not be hyphenated, write do not hyphenate.

EXAMPLES

1. tomorrow
   1. to-mor-row

2. thirty nine
   2. thirty-nine

3. theme
   3. do not hyphenate

1. loose
2. twenty nine
3. temporary
4. self esteem
5. children
6. elect
7. principal
8. decorate
9. president elect
10. through
11. immediately
12. eighty three
13. seize
14. broomstick
15. great aunt
16. piano
17. preferred
18. grammar
19. lint free
20. among
Review C Using Apostrophes and Hyphens Correctly

Correctly write the word or letter that needs an apostrophe or a hyphen in each of the following sentences.

EXAMPLE

1. Where's my history book?
   1. Where's

2. Do you know where the atlases and the two dictionaries are?

3. There are two rs in tomorrow.

4. The tiger cubs aren't on view yet.

5. Is that one of Bessie Smith's songs?

6. Someone's gold bracelet is on the counter in the bathroom.

7. Forty nine students signed the get-well card.

8. Is that salad dressing fat free?

9. Who's going to the fair this weekend?

10. It's almost time to leave.
A. Using Underlining (Italics), Quotation Marks, Apostrophes, and Hyphens

Each of the following sentences contains at least one error in the use of underlining (italics), quotation marks, apostrophes, or hyphens. Write each sentence correctly.

1. While taking a bath, I like to sing This Land Is Your Land.
2. Washington's largest city is named for Chief Seattle.
3. Chapter two is called The Siamese Cat.
5. “I remember making a barometer in the fourth grade. “I had to start over twice before it would work,” I said.
6. “Deva, will you please show me how to make a weather vane”? asked Todd.
7. “It took me only forty five minutes to make a sundial,” Carlos remarked.
8. We built a model airplane, but it crashed on it's test flight.
9. All student's projects are due next Friday.
10. Raymond read a fascinating article called The Standing Stones of Wales and Brittany.
11. When in Corpus Christi, try to visit the USS “Lexington.”
13. Next time, please be prompt, Joe, said Ms. Lomazzi as I walked through the door ten minutes late.
14. The children's bikes were in the driveway.
15. “Everyones project must be in on time,” Mrs. Tolliver said.
16. “Bill's exact words,” said Sean, “were I'll be back at noon.”
17. In his English class, my brother Julio is reading the Dylan Thomas poem Fern Hill.
18. Do you know the magazine “Highlights for Children”?
19. Please don’t use so many likes when you speak.
20. Isn’t twenty questions the average length for an exercise of this kind?
B. Revising Indirect Quotations to Create Direct Quotations

Revise each of the following sentences by changing the indirect quotation to a direct quotation. Be sure to use capital letters and punctuation marks where they are needed.

21. Our teacher warned us that we could not take any breaks during the exam.
22. Lisa said that she would call me at eight o’clock.
23. Mom told us not to be late.
24. The police officer asked us to wait behind the fence.
25. I asked the museum guard where the Mona Lisa was.
26. Taylor said that two hours should be long enough.
27. Stephanie replied that she would be in the city for five days.
28. Dr. Grizzard reminded us to take our vitamins every day.
29. Wendy asked her father if he would drive her to the library.
30. Giulio exclaimed happily that he had never been so surprised in his life.

C. Punctuating a Dialogue

Rewrite the following dialogue, using quotation marks and other marks of punctuation where they are needed. Remember to begin a new paragraph every time the speaker changes.

[31] Oh, Travis, said Lucy, when are you leaving? [32] I told you, Lucy, replied Travis. I’m planning to leave soon. At around ten o’clock. [33] Oh, said Lucy. Listen, Trav, I’m afraid I won’t be able to come with you after all. Something has come up. [34] Well, Grandma will certainly be disappointed, remarked Travis. She’s been looking forward to seeing her two grandkids on her birthday. [35] Yes, but that’s just it, said Lucy. I haven’t bought anything for her birthday yet. I just haven’t had the time. [36] Well, guess what, Sis. I took care of that yesterday. Travis went over to the desk and took something out of the drawer. [37] Your present to Grandma is this framed photograph of me. [38] You’re kidding, said Lucy. [39] And continued Travis, my present to her is this framed photograph of you. What do you think? [40] I think you’re crazy, but we can discuss that on the way there. Let’s go!
Writing Application
Using Apostrophes in a Letter

Contractions and Possessives  You have been so busy at summer camp that you have not had time to write to your best friend. Write your friend a letter telling about your first week at camp. Be sure to use apostrophes correctly to make your meaning clear.

Prewriting  If you have never been to a summer camp, ask a friend or relative who has been to one to tell you about it. Write down some notes on your activities at summer camp. Use your experience or your imagination to describe activities such as sports, crafts, and hiking trips. Also, make some notes about the camp itself.

Writing  Include specific details about the natural setting and special or daily activities at the camp. Tell your friend what you have enjoyed most. Try to give your friend a clear, vivid picture of your first week.

Revising  Ask a friend or a family member to read your letter. Can he or she imagine the activities you have described? If not, revise your letter to make it clearer and more descriptive.

Publishing  Be sure you have used the correct form for personal letters. As you proofread your letter, take extra care with apostrophes. Check your use of contractions and pronouns like its, it’s, your, you’re, their, and they’re. Also, look for any other errors in grammar, spelling, and punctuation. Exchange letters with a classmate, and see how your camp experiences, real or imagined, are similar and how they are different.

Reference Note
For information about writing a personal letter, see “Writing” in the Quick Reference Handbook.
A. Proofreading Sentences for Correct Spelling

Correctly write the word that is misspelled in each of the following sentences.

EXAMPLE

1. The dog is diging in the flower garden again.
   1. digging

1. The children are happyest when swimming in the pool on a hot afternoon.
2. The porch chaires look newer than the tables.
3. Our nieghbor was born in Texas, I believe.
4. The Tolbys bought blueberrys for the party.
5. Uncle Steven is driveing through seven foreign countries on his trip.
6. Is the weather in Arizona ever changable?
7. Five womans auditioned for the leading role in the Broadway production.
8. Have you heard the tunful Peter, Paul, and Mary songs of the sixties?
9. Matthew and Kim bravly rescued the baby raccoon from the muddy ditch.
10. Would you kindly dig up the potatos and let them dry in the cellar?
B. Proofreading Sentences to Correct Spelling Errors

Choose the correct word or words from the choices in parentheses in each of the following sentences.

EXAMPLE

1. Please give (you’re, your) book orders to me today.
   1. your

11. Angela is taking five (courses, coarses) this semester.
12. Nora said she was (already, all ready) for the banquet.
13. “Please pass me a (peace, piece) of bread,” Gary said.
14. The (altar, alter) at the Spanish mission is marble.
15. The (plain, plane) to Ontario is ahead of schedule.
16. People often (loose, lose) pennies in stores and on streets.
17. We saw the (principal, principle) pass by twice.
18. Whose (stationery, stationary) has initials at the top?
19. (There, Their) shop sells shirts, dresses, and scarves.
20. “You’d better get these (breaks, brakes) fixed right away,” the mechanic said.

Good Spelling Habits

The following techniques can help you spell words correctly.

1. To learn the spelling of a word, pronounce it, study it, and write it. Pronounce words carefully. Mistakes in speaking can cause mistakes in spelling. For instance, if you say ad•je•tive instead of ad•jec•tive, you will be more likely to spell the word incorrectly.
   - First, make sure that you know how to pronounce the word correctly, and then practice saying it.
   - Second, study the word. Notice any parts that might be hard to remember.
   - Third, write the word from memory. Check your spelling.
   - If you misspelled the word, repeat the three steps of this process until you can spell the word correctly.

2. Use a dictionary. If you are not absolutely sure about the spelling of a word, look it up in a dictionary. Do not guess about the correct spelling.

---

Copyright © by Holt, Rinehart and Winston. All rights reserved.
3. Spell by syllables. A syllable is a word part that can be pronounced as one uninterrupted sound.

EXAMPLES
- ear•ly [two syllables]
- av•er•age [three syllables]

Instead of trying to learn how to pronounce and spell a whole word, break it into its syllables whenever possible. It is easier to learn a few letters at a time than to learn all of them at once.

4. Keep a spelling notebook. Divide each page into four columns:

COLUMN 1 Correctly spell any word you have misspelled. (Never enter a misspelled word.)

COLUMN 2 Write the word again, dividing it into syllables and indicating which syllables are accented or stressed. (You will probably need to use a dictionary.)

COLUMN 3 Write the word once more, circling the spot that gives you trouble.

COLUMN 4 Write down any comments that might help you remember the correct spelling.

Here is an example of how you might make entries for two words that are often misspelled.

5. Proofread for careless spelling errors. Re-read your writing carefully, and correct any mistakes and unclear letters. For example, make sure that your ı’s are dotted, your ı’s are crossed, and your g’s do not look like q’s.
Spelling Rules

ie and ei

23a. Write ie when the sound is long e, except after c.

EXAMPLES chief, believe, brief, receive, ceiling

EXCEPTIONS either, neither, protein, seize

Write ei when the sound is not long e, especially when the sound is long a.

EXAMPLES neighbor, weigh, reindeer, height, foreign

EXCEPTIONS friend, fierce, ancient, mischief

Exercise 1 Writing Words with ie and ei

Complete the following letter by adding ie or ei to each numbered word.

EXAMPLE I wrote Aunt Hannah a [1] br___f thank-you note.

1. brief

December 12, 2001

Dear Aunt Hannah,

So far, I like living here in Vermont, but I can’t quite [8] bel____ve how different everything is from life in California. Thank you again for your gift.

Your loving [9] n____ce,

Mai

P.S. If only we had some [10] r____ndeer to pull us!
Prefixes and Suffixes

Prefixes

A prefix is a letter or a group of letters added to the beginning of a word to create a new word that has a different meaning.

23b. When adding a prefix to a word, do not change the spelling of the word itself.

EXAMPLES
- dis + satisfy = dissatisfy
- mis + lead = mislead
- un + done = undone
- pre + view = preview
- a + typical = atypical

Exercise 2  Spelling Words with Prefixes

Combine each of the following prefixes and words to create a new word.

EXAMPLE
1. mis + place
   1. misplace

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Prefixes</th>
<th>Words</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>un–</td>
<td>able</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>mis–</td>
<td>do</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>dis–</td>
<td>judge</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>pre–</td>
<td>place</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>over–</td>
<td>cover</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>re–</td>
<td>trust</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>pay</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>informed</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Exercise 3  Spelling Words with Prefixes

Create ten different words by combining the prefixes given below with the words listed beside them. (You may use a prefix or word more than once.) Check each of your new words in a dictionary. Then, use each word in a sentence.

EXAMPLE
1. repay—I’ll repay you when I get my allowance.
Suffixes

A suffix is a letter or a group of letters added at the end of a word to create a new word that has a different meaning.

23c. When adding the suffix –ness or –ly to a word, do not change the spelling of the word itself.

EXAMPLES
- kind + ness = kindness
- tough + ness = toughness
- sincere + ly = sincerely
- slow + ly = slowly

EXCEPTIONS
For most words that end in y, change the y to i before adding –ly or –ness.
- happy + ly = happily
- friendly + ness = friendliness

23d. Drop the final silent e before adding a suffix that begins with a vowel.

Vowels are the letters a, e, i, o, u, and sometimes y. All other letters of the alphabet are consonants.

EXAMPLES
- cause + ing = causing
- reverse + ible = reversible
- strange + er = stranger
- adore + able = adorable
EXCEPTIONS Keep the silent e in words ending in ce and ge before adding a suffix beginning with a or o. manage + able = manageable courage + ous = courageous notice + able = noticeable

23e. Keep the final silent e before adding a suffix that begins with a consonant.

EXAMPLES hope + less = hopeless place + ment = placement

EXCEPTIONS argue + ment = argument
ture + ly = truely

Exercise 4 Spelling Words with Suffixes
Combine each of the following words and suffixes to create a new word.

EXAMPLE 1. sudden + ness
1. suddenness

1. active + ity 6. silly + ness
2. sure + ly 7. suspense + ful
3. state + ment 8. little + est
4. locate + ion 9. decorate + ed
5. courage + ous 10. trace + able

23f. For words that end in a consonant plus y, change the y to i before adding a suffix.

EXAMPLES cry + ed = cried  lonely + est = loneliness pretty + er = prettier  lazy + ness = laziness

EXCEPTION Keep the y if the suffix begins with an i. carry + ing = carrying

NOTE Keep the y if the word ends in a vowel plus y.

EXAMPLES stay + ed = stayed  key + ed = keyed

EXCEPTIONS day + ly = daily  pay + ed = paid
23g. Double the final consonant before adding –ing, –ed, –er, or –est to a one-syllable word that ends in a single vowel followed by a single consonant.

EXAMPLES
- beg + ing = begging
- sad + er = sadder
- chat + ed = chatted
- big + est = biggest

When a one-syllable word ends in two vowels followed by a single consonant, do not double the consonant before adding –ing, –ed, –er, or –est.

EXAMPLES
- sleep + ing = sleeping
- cool + er = cooler
- treat + ed = treated
- fair + est = fairest

Exercise 5 Spelling Words with Suffixes

Combine each of the following words and suffixes to create a new word.

EXAMPLE
1. creep + er
   1. creeper

1. say + ing
2. slim + er
3. squeak + ing
4. rainy + est
5. steady + ness
6. beat + ing
7. rely + ing
8. easy + ly
9. chop + ed
10. play + ed

Review A Proofreading Sentences for Correct Spelling

Most of the following sentences contain a misspelled word. Write each misspelled word correctly. If a sentence is already correct, write C.

EXAMPLE
1. My grandma often says, “Let sleeping dogs lie.”
   1. sleeping

1. It’s unusual weather for this time of year.
3. With Sacagawea’s help, the explorers Lewis and Clark mapped out the Northwest.
4. Now that Bao Duc is on the team, our hitting has improved.
5. Serita and I can easily make enough rice for the class.
6. We visited my grandmother in the Dominican Republic during the rainyest month of the year.
7. Please restate the question.
8. My sister has the loveliest voice I’ve ever heard.
9. Former astronaut Sally Ride earned recognition for her courage and steadyness.
10. The temperature has dropped at least ten degrees.

Review B  Proofreading a Paragraph for Correct Spelling

For each sentence in the following paragraph, correctly write the word or words that are misspelled. If a sentence is already correct, write C.

EXAMPLE
[1] My cousin Chris was very couragous after she was baddly hurt in a car accident.

1. courageous; badly

[1] After the accident, Chris found that she truely needed other people. [2] Her friends, family, and nieghbors gladly helped her. [3] However, Chris liked the idea of geting along on her own as much as she could, so she was disatisfied. [4] Fortunatly, she was able to join an exciting program called Helping Hands. [5] This program provides monkeys like this one as friends and helpers for people with disabilities. [6] Chris said that the baby monkeys are raised in loveing foster homes for four years and then they go to Boston to recieve special training. [7] There, they learn how to do tasks on command, such as opening and closeing doors, turning lights on and off, and puting tapes into a VCR or tape player. [8] Chris has been happily working with her own monkey, Aldo, for six months now. [9] Aldo retreives anything that Chris has droped, works the TV remote control, and even scratches Chris's back when it itches! [10] Chris is always jokeing, “Pretty soon Aldo will be writting my book reports for me!”
Forming the Plurals of Nouns

23h. Follow these rules for spelling the plurals of nouns:

(1) To form the plurals of most nouns, add s.

SINGULAR  snack  oven  Juliet  breeze  umbrella
PLURAL  snacks  ovens  Juliet's  breezes  umbrellas

NOTE Make sure that you do not confuse the plural form of a noun with its possessive form. In general, you should not use an apostrophe to form the plural of a word.

INCORRECT  The boy’s stayed after school for choir practice.
CORRECT  The boys stayed after school for choir practice.  [plural]
CORRECT  The boys' choir has practice today.  [possessive]

(2) Form the plurals of nouns ending in s, x, z, ch, or sh by adding es.

SINGULAR  glass  fox  buzz  itch  bush  Jones
PLURAL  glasses  foxes  buzzes  itches  bushes  Joneses

Exercise 6  Spelling the Plurals of Nouns

Spell the plural form of each of the following nouns.

EXAMPLES  1. scratch
          1. scratches
          2. ax
          2. axes

1. night
2. dish
3. address
4. lens
5. box
6. branch
7. loss
8. peach
9. waltz
10. Smith
11. complex
12. faucet
13. cobra
14. doctor
15. ditch
16. Sanchez
17. tax
18. glue
19. occurrence
20. radish
(3) Form the plurals of nouns that end in a consonant plus y by changing the y to i and adding es.

SINGULAR  country  mummy  berry
PLURAL    countries  mummies  berries

EXCEPTION  With proper nouns, just add s.
            the Shelbys  the Mabrys  the O’Gradys

(4) Form the plurals of nouns that end in a vowel plus y by adding s.

SINGULAR  boy  turkey  holiday  Riley
PLURAL    boys  turkeys  holidays  Rileys

(5) Form the plurals of nouns that end in a vowel plus o by adding s.

SINGULAR  rodeo  patio  kangaroo  Romeo
PLURAL    rodeos  patios  kangaroos  Romeos

(6) Form the plurals of nouns that end in a consonant plus o by adding es.

SINGULAR  tomato  echo  veto  torpedo
PLURAL    tomatoes  echoes  vetoes  torpedoes

EXCEPTIONS  auto—autos  Latino—Latinos  Soto—Sotos

Exercise 7 Spelling the Plurals of Nouns

Spell the plural form of each of the following nouns.

EXAMPLE  1. story
              1. stories

1. toy  11. journey
2. apology  12. stereo
3. valley  13. county
4. try  14. hero
5. piano  15. delay
6. potato  16. scenario
7. emergency  17. agony
8. chimney  18. solo
9. radio  19. O’Malley
10. video  20. zoo
(7) The plurals of a few nouns are formed in irregular ways.

SINGULAR  woman  mouse  foot  man  child
PLURAL    women  mice  feet  men  children

(8) Some nouns are the same in the singular and the plural.

SINGULAR AND PLURAL  fowl  sheep  spacecraft  Sioux

(9) Form the plurals of numerals, letters, symbols, and words referred to as words by adding an apostrophe and s.

SINGULAR  1990  A  +  and
PLURAL    1990’s  A’s  +’s  and’s

Exercise 8  Spelling the Singular and Plural Forms of Nouns

Spell the singular form and the plural form of each italicized word in the following sentences.

EXAMPLES  1. We use strong line to fish for salmon.
   1. salmon—singular; salmon—plural
   2. Field mice invaded the food supplies in the tent.
   2. mouse—singular; mice—plural

1. Our guide, Robert Tallchief, a Sioux, knows all about the animals called llamas.
2. Robert and his father use llamas like the ones shown below to carry equipment people need for hiking and for catching fish.
3. The trips are very popular with both men and women.

STYLe TIP

When it refers to the computer device, the word mouse can form a plural in two ways: mouses or mice. Someday one form may be the preferred style. For now, either is correct.

STYLe TIP

In your reading, you may notice that some writers do not use apostrophes to form the plurals of numerals, letters, symbols, and words referred to as words. For example:

Her great-grandparents moved here from Italy sometime in the 1940s.

However, using an apostrophe in such cases is not wrong and is sometimes necessary for clarity. Therefore, it is usually best to use the apostrophe.

HELP

If you do not know the plural form of a word, look up the word in a dictionary.
4. Children especially are fascinated and amused by the sure-footed llamas.
5. However, the llama has one very disagreeable habit—if upset, it bares its teeth and spits.
6. The Tallchiefs’ llama trips have attracted tourists from all over the world, including many Japanese.
7. One highlight of these trips is viewing moose in their natural habitat.
8. Deer thrive in this area of the Northwest.
9. In addition, families of mountain sheep clamber up the steep cliffs.
10. Most people who go on the llama trips take many pictures of the wild geese.

Review C Proofreading Sentences for Correct Spelling

For each of the following sentences, correctly write the word or words that are misspelled. If a sentence is already correct, write C.

EXAMPLE

1. Aunt Dorothy’s old-time sayings are echos of her childhood.
   1. echoes

1. Aunt Dorothy Kelly talks mostly in expressions from the 1930’s and earlyer.
2. If we get into mischeif, she exclaims, “You little monkies!”
3. When my brother’s run through the house, she shakes her head and mutters, “Boys will be boys.”
4. Every time she can’t find her eyeglasses, Aunt Dorothy says, “I’ve beaten the bushes, looking for them.”
5. Aunt Dorothy believes that there are only two things in life that are certain: death and taxs.
6. We’ve heard her say “There’s no use crying over spilled milk” and “Wishs won’t wash dishs” about a thousand times apiece.
7. When we want something because our friends have it, Aunt Dorothy says we’re trying to keep up with the Jones’.
8. Sometimes we get tired of hearing these little bits of folk wisdom, especially when Aunt Dorothy and all the little Kellies come over to visit for the holidays.
9. However, Aunt Dorothy is so sweet that we just smile and listen to her proverbs and storys.
10. Sometimes she says something really worthwhile, like “There are only two things that money can’t buy—true love and home-grown tomatos.”

Words Often Confused

People often confuse the words in each of the following groups. Some of these words are homonyms. They are pronounced the same, but they have different meanings and spellings. Other words in this section have the same or similar spellings, but have different meanings.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>already</th>
<th>[adverb] at an earlier time</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>The show has already begun.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>all ready</th>
<th>[adjective] all prepared; completely prepared</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>The floats are all ready for the fiesta.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>altar</th>
<th>[noun] a table or stand used for religious ceremonies</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>My uncle Chee wove the cloth for the altar.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>alter</th>
<th>[verb] to change</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>A flood can alter a riverbed.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>altogether</th>
<th>[adverb] entirely</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>I’m altogether lost.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>all together</th>
<th>[adjective] in the same place; [adverb] at the same time or place</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Is everyone all together?</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Let’s sit all together at the movie.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>brake</th>
<th>[noun] a device to stop a machine</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>The front brake on my bike squeaks.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>break</th>
<th>[verb] to fracture; to shatter; [noun] a fracture; an interruption; a rest</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Try not to break your promises.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>Let’s take a five-minute break.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Reference Note

In the Glossary of Usage in Chapter 19, you can find many other words that are often confused or misused. You can also look them up in a dictionary.
Choosing Between Words Often Confused

For each of the following sentences, choose the correct word or words from the pair in parentheses.

EXAMPLE

1. Can the artist (altar, alter) the design?
   1. alter

1. Did you help (brake, break) the piñata, Felipe?
2. Who arranged the flowers on the (altar, alter)?
3. I’ve (all ready, already) seen that movie.
4. My mom was (all together, altogether) pleased with my report card.
5. Don’t forget to set the emergency (brake, break) when you park on a hill.
6. Our family will be (all together, altogether) at Thanksgiving this year.
7. “Will you (altar, alter) this sundress for me, Mom?” Angie asked.
8. You were (all together, altogether) right about the show times for the movie.
9. The Great Circus Parade is (already, all ready) to begin.
10. Unfortunately, handblown glass figurines (break, brake) very easily.

TIPS & TRICKS

Here’s a way to remember the difference between capital and capitol. There’s a dome on the capitol.

| capital   | [noun] a city; the location of a government
| Havana is the capital of Cuba. |
| capitol   | [noun] a building; statehouse
| Our state capitol is made of granite. |
| choose    | [verb, rhymes with shoes] to select
| Did you choose the movie for today? |
| chose     | [verb, past tense of choose, rhymes with shows]
| Who chose the movie yesterday? |
| cloths    | [noun] pieces of cloth
| My aunt brought these kente cloths home from Ghana. |
| clothes   | [noun] wearing apparel
| Bob irons his own clothes. |
Choosing Between Words Often Confused

For each of the following sentences, choose the correct word from the pair of words in parentheses.

EXAMPLE

1. The sand on the beach is (coarse, course).

   1. coarse

---

1. The Mojave (Desert, Dessert) is located in California.
2. Juan packed lightweight (clothes, cloths) to wear on his trip.
3. The sailor set a (coarse, course) for the port of Pago Pago.
4. When was the (capital, capitol) built, and how long has the state legislature been meeting there?
5. For (desert, dessert) we had pears and cheese.
6. Each team must (choose, chose) a captain.
7. The polishing (cloths, clothes) are by the wax on the shelf.
8. “Of (coarse, course) you may go!” Mr. Vance said.
9. The (capital, capitol) is the second-largest city in the state.
10. The cooking (coarse, course) lasted six weeks last summer.
Proofreading Sentences for Words Often Confused

For each of the following sentences, correctly write the word that is misused.

EXAMPLE

1. The students are already for the Fall Festival.

   1. all ready

1. Throughout history, most societies and cultures, from the hot desert regions to the cold northern regions, have celebrated the harvest.

2. The Jewish celebration of Sukkot marks the time when the harvest was gathered and the people were already for winter.

3. The most important tradition of Sukkot called for the family to live altogether in a temporary shelter called a sukkah.

4. Today, of course, many Jews still celebrate Sukkot but simply eat a meal outdoors under a shelter like the one pictured below.

5. Native Americans believed that without the help of the gods, there would be a brake in their good fortune.

6. During their planting ceremonies, most Native Americans, like the ones at left, dressed in special cloths.

7. To thank their harvest gods, the Chinese and Japanese placed wheat on alters.

8. Today, the Japanese do not altar this tradition much.

9. In most Japanese cities, including the capitol, the people hold parades to thank the ocean for the food it provides.

10. Many families in the United States celebrate Thanksgiving by sharing a meal, often with pumpkin pie for desert.
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Word</th>
<th>Definition</th>
<th>Example</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>hear</td>
<td>[verb] to receive sounds through the ears</td>
<td>When did you hear the news?</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>here</td>
<td>[adverb] in this place</td>
<td>The mail is here.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>its</td>
<td>[possessive form of it] belonging to it</td>
<td>You should not judge a book by its cover.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>it's</td>
<td>[contraction of it is or it has]</td>
<td>It's your turn, Theresa. It's been a long day.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>lead</td>
<td>[verb, rhymes with need] to go first; to be a leader</td>
<td>Will you lead the singing, Rachel?</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>led</td>
<td>[verb, past tense of lead, rhymes with red] went first; guided</td>
<td>The dog led its master to safety.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>lead</td>
<td>[noun, rhymes with red] a heavy metal; graphite used in pencils</td>
<td>Lead is no longer used in household paints. Use a pencil with a softer lead if you want to draw dark, heavy lines.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>loose</td>
<td>[adjective, rhymes with goose] not tight</td>
<td>A loose wheel on a bike is dangerous.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>lose</td>
<td>[verb, rhymes with shoes] to suffer loss</td>
<td>That sudden, loud noise made me lose my place.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Exercise 11 Choosing Between Words Often Confused

For each of the following sentences, choose the correct word from the pair of words in parentheses.

EXAMPLE 1. Rabbi Epstein (lead, led) our group during our tour of Israel.

1. led

1. We could (hear, here) the patter of the rain on the (lead, led) roof from a block away.
2. A kimono is a (loose, lose) Japanese garment with short, wide sleeves and a sash.
3. Mom said that (its, it's) your turn to wash the dishes.
4. (Hear, Here) is a good article about Black History Month.
5. I hope the team doesn’t (loose, lose) its opening game.
6. Who will (lead, led) the team to victory tomorrow?
7. “Wait (hear, here) while I open the door,” Peter ordered.
8. The weights were as heavy as (led, lead).
9. (Its, It’s) taken too long to respond to your letter.
10. The (lead, led) in this mechanical pencil is almost gone.

TIPS & TRICKS

Here’s a way to remember the difference between peace and piece. You eat a piece of pie.

TIPS & TRICKS

To remember the spelling of principal, use this sentence: The principal is your pal.

---

passed

[verb, past tense of pass] went by
We passed you on the way to school.

past

[noun] time that has gone by; [preposition] beyond; [adjective] ended
You can learn much from the past.
The band marched past the school.
The past week was a busy one.

peace

[noun] quiet, order, and security
People all over the world long for peace.

piece

[noun] a part of something
I had a delicious piece of spinach pie at the Greek festival.

plain

[adjective] simple; common; [noun] a flat area of land
Raul’s directions were plain and clear.
The coastal plain was flat and barren.

plane

[noun] a flat surface; a tool; an airplane
A rectangle is a four-sided plane with four right angles.
Wood shavings curled from the plane to the workshop floor.
The plane flew nonstop to Atlanta.

principal

[noun] the head of a school; [adjective] chief, main
The vice principal is at the high school.
The committee’s principal task is preserving the park.

principle

[noun] a rule of conduct; a basic truth
Freedom of speech is one of the principles of democracy.
Exercise 12  Choosing Between Words Often Confused

For each of the following sentences, choose the correct word from the pair of words in parentheses.

EXAMPLE  1. The (passed, past) president served two terms, not three.

   1. past

1. The Old Order Amish wear (plain, plane) clothes.
2. Many Americans believe that the golden rule is a good (principal, principle) by which to live.
3. Mark likes the (piece, peace) and quiet of the country.
4. One (piece, peace) of the puzzle was missing.
5. Komako used a (plain, plane) to smooth the rough edge of the door.
6. We flew in an enormous Singapore Airlines (plain, plane) to Frankfurt, Germany.
7. By studying the (passed, past), we understand the present.
8. She was (principal, principle) of the school for years.
9. Gail Devers quickly (passed, past) the other runners.
10. The trees are just (passed, past) their lovely fall colors.

Review E  Proofreading a Paragraph to Correct Errors in Words Often Confused

For the sentences in the following paragraph, correctly write each incorrect word.

EXAMPLE  [1] Often, people don’t know how precious something is until they loose it.

1. lose

[1] Several months ago, my aunt had what we all thought was a plane old cold. [2] In the passed, her doctor had told her there was no cure for a cold, so my aunt didn’t even seek treatment. [3] No one knew that she had an ear infection that would led to a hearing loss in one ear. [4] Very soon, my aunt realized that she was hearing only peaces of conversations and could no longer hear out of her left ear. [5] When she went to the doctor, he explained that an infection had caused her to loose hearing in that ear. [6] The doctor gave her a chart showing the principle types of hearing aids. [7] He suggested the in-the-canal hearing aid because its barely noticeable when in place. [8] It’s small size really surprised me. [9] The doctor told my aunt that, of course, new advances in hearing technology are being made every day now. [10] Some people who could not hear at all before can now be helped.

TIPS & TRICKS

Here is an easy way to remember the difference between stationary and stationery. You write a letter on stationery.

| stationary     | [adjective] in a fixed position
The desks are stationary, but the chairs can be moved. |
|--------------------|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| stationery     | [noun] writing paper
Sarah designs her own stationery. |
| their          | [possessive form of they] belonging to them
Their pitcher struck out six players. |
| there          | [adverb] at or to that place; [also used to begin a sentence]
I’ll see you there.
There are more than two million books in the Harold Washington Library in Chicago. |
| they’re         | [contraction of they are]
They’re right behind you. |
| threw          | [verb, past tense of throw] tossed
Zack threw the ball to me. |
| through        | [preposition] in one side and out the other
Let’s walk through the park. |
Choosing Between Words Often Confused

For each of the following sentences, choose the correct word from the choices in parentheses.

EXAMPLE
1. (Their, They’re, There) goes the space shuttle!
   1. There

1. The 100-yard dash will begin over (their, there, they’re) by the fence.
2. In a flash, the girls (threw, through) everything into (their, there, they’re) lockers and ran onto the field.
3. The planet earth was once thought to be (stationary, stationery) in space.
4. (Threw, Through) the door bounded a large dog.
5. Are you sure (their, there, they’re) not coming?
6. “Who (through, threw) the pass that led to the touchdown?” Jill asked.
7. I think that the red envelopes do not go with the pink (stationery, stationary) at all.
8. (They’re, Their) planning to see a Will Smith movie sometime this weekend.
9. We drove (threw, through) Kansas and Oklahoma on the way to Texas.
10. (Their, There) is a Cajun band playing in the park this afternoon until 4:00.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>to</th>
<th>preposition</th>
<th>in the direction of; toward</th>
<th>We drove to Carson City.</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>too</td>
<td>adverb</td>
<td>also; more than enough</td>
<td>Am I invited, too?</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>two</td>
<td>adjective or noun</td>
<td>one plus one</td>
<td>Ms. Red Cloud’s last name is two separate words.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>weak</td>
<td>adjective</td>
<td>feeble; not strong</td>
<td>People with weak ankles have difficulty ice-skating.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>week</td>
<td>noun</td>
<td>seven days</td>
<td>The club meets once a week.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

(continued)
Choosing Between Words Often Confused

For each of the following sentences, choose the correct word from the choices in parentheses.

EXAMPLE

1. I wonder (who’s, whose) won the election.
   1. who’s

1. (Who’s, Whose) story did you like best?
2. Walking (to, too) the grocery store, he began to feel (weak, week).
3. Does (your, you’re) dad work for the newspaper, (to, too, two)?
4. It took me a (weak, week) to complete my project for history class.
5. If (your, you’re) not making that noise, (who’s, whose) making it?
7. Always fasten (you’re, your) seat belt when (you’re, your) riding in a vehicle.
8. They asked (who’s, whose) painting was chosen (to, too) be entered in the contest.
9. (Too, Two) of the foreign exchange students are from southern India.
10. “See you next (weak, week)!” the ballet teacher said to the students cheerfully.

---

Exercise 14 Choosing Between Words Often Confused

For each of the following sentences, choose the correct word from the choices in parentheses.

EXAMPLE

1. I wonder (who’s, whose) won the election.
   1. who’s

1. (Who’s, Whose) story did you like best?
2. Walking (to, too) the grocery store, he began to feel (weak, week).
3. Does (your, you’re) dad work for the newspaper, (to, too, two)?
4. It took me a (weak, week) to complete my project for history class.
5. If (your, you’re) not making that noise, (who’s, whose) making it?
7. Always fasten (you’re, your) seat belt when (you’re, your) riding in a vehicle.
8. They asked (who’s, whose) painting was chosen (to, too) be entered in the contest.
9. (Too, Two) of the foreign exchange students are from southern India.
10. “See you next (weak, week)!” the ballet teacher said to the students cheerfully.
Choosing Between Words Often Confused

For each of the following sentences, choose the correct word or words from the choices in parentheses.

EXAMPLE

1. Don’t (loose, lose) your house key.

   1. lose

2. Oh, Rebecca, which of these (to, too, two) boxes of (stationary, stationery) do you like better?

3. The Israelis and the Palestinians met in Madrid, the (capital, capitol) of Spain, for the (peace, piece) talks.

4. (Principal, Principle) Wong raised his hand for silence, and the students waited to (hear, here) what he would say.

5. These curtains will likely be hard to (altar, alter) because the fabric is so (coarse, course).

6. (Its, It’s) (all together, altogether) too easy to confuse similar words.

7. Ruth vowed to (lead, led) the life of an exile rather than to (desert, dessert) Naomi.

8. Can that (plain, plane) (brake, break) the sound barrier?

9. (Your, You’re) next chore is to dust; the dust (clothes, cloths) are on the counter.

10. The two friends (passed, past) the time pleasantly reading (there, their, they’re) books.

Proofreading a Paragraph to Correct Spelling Errors and Errors in Words Often Confused

For each sentence in the following paragraph, correctly write each misspelled or misused word. If a sentence is already correct, write C.

EXAMPLE

[1] Its time to test you’re knowledge of South American history.

   1. It’s; your

   [1] Starting about A.D. 1200, people known as the Incas began too take over the western portion of South America.

   [2] Look at the map on the next page, and you’ll see that thier territory included mountains, seacoasts, river valleys, and desserts. [3] The capital of the Incan empire was Cuzco.
[4] The Incas created an impressive road system that connected Cuzco with the rest of their empire. [5] These hard-working people also built storehouses and developed large irrigation projects. [6] To help them manage their huge empire, they used a device called a quipu as their principle method of keeping records. [7] The quipu (shown below) is a series of knotted, colored cords. [8] With it, the Incas recorded such information as the number of people living in an area, the movements of the planets, and the amount of goods in storage. [9] The Incan civilization lasted until the Spanish arrived in the mid-1500s. [10] In only a short time, Spanish conquistadors were able to defeat the Incas and break up their empire.
A. Proofreading Sentences for Correct Spelling

For each of the following sentences, correctly write the word that is misspelled.

1. The company’s cheif accountant wrote the schedule.
2. Mr. Santander gave a breif speech before the ceremony.
3. Breatheing hard, we finally reached the summit.
4. Chickens and gooses are common fowl.
5. We changed the subject to avoid having an arguement.
6. How many Is did you use in your letter to Irene?
7. Mom and Dad have no tolerance for lazyness.
8. Spain and Portugal are two countrys I have always wanted to visit.
9. The new store on the corner will sell computer disks, computers, and stereoes.
10. My grandmother’s recipe calls for half a clove of garlic and two garden tomatos.
11. Three small active childs came running out of the house.
12. We cut several large branchs off the pine tree.
13. After she ran through the patch of stinging nettles, Alice had itchs up and down her legs.
14. We were surprised to see two pianoes on the stage instead of only one.
15. I am very interested in the history of anceint Egypt.
16. “The last thing we want,” said the new sales manager, “is a disatisfied customer.”
17. The first thing you notice in San Miguel is the friendlyness of the people.
18. That dinosaur skeleton must have been the bigest thing in the whole museum.
19. Aunt Rina has lost weight; she looks much slimer than she has in a long time.
20. Strawberrys are my favorite fruit.
B. Choosing Between Words Often Confused

For each of the following sentences, choose from each pair in parentheses the word that will make the sentence correct.

21. Nothing would persuade him to (altar, alter) his plans.
22. Berlin is the (capitol, capital) of Germany.
23. Sometimes the wisest (course, coarse) of action is to do nothing.
24. Samantha tried on the new (cloths, clothes) she received on her birthday.
25. For (desert, dessert) we had red grapes, strawberries, frozen yogurt, and melon.
26. The vast (planes, plains) of Patagonia stretch from the mountains to the ocean.
27. “Your cousins are over (their, there),” said Mr. Octavius. “I think this is (there, their) luggage.”
28. In all the confusion, it was difficult to tell (whose, who’s) things belonged to whom.
29. We were somewhat surprised when an overloaded pickup truck (past, passed) us going uphill.
30. On their way (too, to) the train station, they were held up in the (stationary, stationery) traffic.

C. Proofreading a Paragraph to Correct Spelling Errors

For each sentence in the following paragraph, correctly write the word or words that are misspelled. If a sentence is already correct, write C.

[31] Dublin, the capitol of Ireland, has a beautiful locateion between the sea and the mountains. [32] The city has a rich and interesting passed. [33] The Viking’s established Dublin in the mid-800’s, though a small settlement had existed previously on the site. [34] Norman soldiers from England captured Dublin in 1170 and built St. Patrick’s Cathedral and Dublin Castle their. [35] The castle remained the center of British rule in Ireland throughout the next 700 years. [36] War and piece came and went. [37] By the 1700’s, Dublin was growing fast. [38] It’s cultural life flourished, and manufacturing and trade increased.
Unfortunatly, between 1916 and 1922, much property was destroyed during the war of independence and a civil war. Today, Dublin is growing and prosperous and is faceing the challenges common to most modern big citys.

Writing Application

Using Correct Spelling in a Personal Letter

Following Spelling Rules  You are writing a letter to congratulate your cousin Mary, who has been awarded first prize in a spelling bee. Write a paragraph expressing your congratulations and saying how important you think it is to use correct spelling. In your paragraph, use at least five words often confused.

Prewriting  Jot down a list of reasons correct spelling is important. You might mention making a good impression and making communication easier. Also, compose sentences about how difficult it must be to remember correct spelling in front of an audience and how impressed you are that Mary managed to do so.

Writing  Begin your rough draft by stating how hard it is to spell correctly in English and how important it is to continue developing that skill. Then, congratulate Mary on her award and say that her success will inspire you to continue working hard at learning correct spelling.

Revising  Have a friend or classmate read your draft. Have you clearly stated the importance of correct spelling? Is your pleasure at your cousin’s success clearly described?

Publishing  Make sure you have not used any homonyms incorrectly. Then, proofread your letter for any errors in grammar, punctuation, and spelling. You and your classmates may wish to post your letters on a class bulletin board or Web page.
Spelling Words

- contact
- contract
- advance
- depth
- comment
- summit
- sketch
- nonsense
- splendid
- ethnic
- liquid
- impulse
- globe
- grove
- slope
- slice
- roast
- spike
- choke
- praise
- squeeze
- breathe
- gross
- thigh
- shout
- youth
- amount
- pounds
- mountain
- thousands
- proof
- crawled
- account
- launched
- rumors
- saucer
- turtle
- nightmare
- burnt
- curb
- purse
- declare

- scarce
- inserts
- sparkling
- source
- nervous
- warrant
- enough
- though
- straight
- rough
- courage
- eighth
- system
- although
- sleigh
- boulder
- biscuit
- dough
- freight
- foreign
- receive
- receiver
- belief
- relief
- weighed
- reins
- fierce
- heights
- thieves
- achieve
- grandfather
- fairy tales
- bedtime
- cupboard
- upright
- teenager
- thunderstorm
- barefoot
- middle-class
- middle-aged
- bodyguard
- so-called

- grown
- groan
- guest
- guessed
- creek
- creak
- weather
- whether
- sore
- soar
- stake
- steak
- angle
- angel
- costume
- custom
- affect
- effect
- adopt
- adapt
- device
- devise
- decent
- descent
- varied
- centuries
- colonies
- applies
- occupied
- identified
- enemies
- activities
- denied
- allied
- industries
- qualified
- beaten
- musical
- rotten
- German
- Indian
- Roman

- explorer
- stretcher
- critical
- criminal
- political
- original
- escape
- gotten
- velvet
- engine
- insist
- admire
- index
- intense
- further
- frantic
- convince
- instinct
- agent
- evil
- local
- eager
- famous
- fiber
- razor
- vital
- rival
- basis
- cheetah
- scenic
- speaking
- spelling
- wondered
- bragged
- healed
- scrubbed
- answered
- threatened
- admitted
- committed
- referring
- preferred
• insurance
• conference
• ambulance
• absence
• instance
• audience
• allowance
• intelligence
• assurance
• appearance
• obedience
• presence

• activity
• ability
• argument
• personality
• electricity
• championship
• community
• majority
• responsibility
• curiosity
• necessity
• authority

• approach
• accuse
• applause
• affection
• accompany
• assign
• appreciate
• accurate
• association
• apparent
• accustomed
• assistance

• continued
• commander
• commit
• constitution
• confusing
• commence

• commotion
• commercial
• communicate
• communities
• communication
• committee

• elephant
• confident
• instant
• element
• servant
• excellent
• opponent
• permanent
• assistant
• innocent
• significant
• sufficient

• talent
• novel
• treason
• comic
• profit
• token
• weapon
• gopher
• pleasant
• siren
• frigid
• spiral

• habit
• display
• clever
• gather
• empty
• chaos
• suspense
• Saturn
• oval
• orphan
• fatal
• crystal

• media
• fungi
• bacteria
• stimulus
• stimuli
• larvae
• radius
• nucleus
• nuclei
• species
• salmon
• hippopotamus

• curious
• tremendous
• enormous
• obvious
• delicious
• mysterious
• executive
• creative
• fabulous
• legislative
• negative
• sensitive

• unpredictable
• disagreement
• renewal
• unemployment
• unexpectedly
• unfortunately
• unusually
• reproduction
• reconstruction
• disagreeable
• unsuccessful
• uncomfortable

• wonderfully
• thoughtfully
• relationship
• respectively
• naturally
• nervously

• gracefully
• actively
• joyfully
• beautifully
• successfully
• accidentally

• illegal
• impolite
• impossible
• invisible
• irregular
• inexpensive
• impure
• inability
• impatient
• indigestion
• indefinite
• incredible

• descriptive
• description
• prescribed
• inspector
• spectacle
• spectacular
• scribbled
• inscription
• subscription
• spectrum
• spectators
• transcripts

• erupt
• abrupt
• bankrupt
• inject
• disrupting
• disruption
• eject
• reject
• rejected
• rupture
• corrupt
• interrupt
Key Language Skills Review

This chapter reviews key skills and concepts that pose special problems for writers.

- Sentence Fragments and Run-on Sentences
- Subject-Verb Agreement
- Pronoun-Antecedent Agreement
- Verb Forms
- Pronoun Forms
- Comparison and Placement of Modifiers
- Double Negatives
- Standard Usage
- Capitalization
- Punctuation—Commas, End Marks, Semicolons, Colons, Quotation Marks, and Apostrophes
- Spelling

Most of the exercises in this chapter follow the same format as the exercises found throughout the grammar, usage, and mechanics sections of this book. You will notice, however, that two sets of review exercises are presented in standardized test formats. These exercises are designed to provide you with practice not only in solving usage and mechanics problems but also in dealing with these kinds of problems on standardized tests.

Exercise 1 Identifying Sentences and Sentence Fragments

Identify each of the following word groups as a sentence or a sentence fragment. If a word group is a sentence, rewrite it correctly, using a capital letter at the beginning and adding an end mark.

EXAMPLES

1. the squirrel hopped across the branch
   1. sentence—The squirrel hopped across the branch.

2. Jeremy's collection of comic books
   2. sentence fragment

3. near the door of the classroom
4. all members of the safety patrol
5. sumo wrestling is popular in Japan
6. please pass me the fruit salad
7. will become a member of Junior Achievement
8. after school Sonya repaired her backpack
9. what an active puppy that is
10. lived in British Columbia for many years
11. do you like the sound of ocean waves
12. on the top shelf of the refrigerator
13. ate goat cheese every day in Norway
14. that’s a fantastic idea
15. because rap music is still popular
16. not everyone wants to play the game
17. a tree was placed on top of the completed building
18. when the armadillos enter another state
19. stopped traffic for half an hour
20. John the plumber around noon
21. please return the books by tomorrow afternoon
22. plugged in the computer and nothing happened

Reference Note

For information on sentences and sentence fragments, see page 302.
Exercise 2 Revising Sentence Fragments

Some of the following word groups are sentence fragments. First, identify the fragments. Then, make each fragment a complete sentence by adding (1) a subject, (2) a verb, or (3) both. You may need to change the punctuation and capitalization, too. If the word group is already a complete sentence, write S.

EXAMPLE

1. Finished reading an exciting book by Jean Craighead George.

   1. I finished reading an exciting book by Jean Craighead George.

2. Titled The Case of the Missing Cutthroats.
4. In the book, a girl named Spinner goes fishing.
5. During the trip, she catches a giant cutthroat trout.
6. Thought cutthroat trout had died out where she was fishing in the Snake River.
7. Both she and her family are surprised by her catch.
8. Puzzled by the presence of a cutthroat trout.
9. What has happened to the cutthroat trout?
10. Spinner and her cousin Al on an adventure.
11. Hope to find clues that will help them solve the mystery.

Exercise 3 Identifying and Revising Run-on Sentences

Decide which of the following word groups are run-on sentences. Then, revise each run-on sentence by (1) making two separate sentences or (2) using a comma and a coordinating conjunction. You may have to change the punctuation and capitalization, too. If the word group is already a complete sentence, write S.

EXAMPLE

1. Both girls enjoy playing soccer one is usually the goalie.

   1. Both girls enjoy playing soccer, and one is usually the goalie.

   or

   Both girls enjoy playing soccer. One is usually the goalie.
1. Puffins are shorebirds, they have brightly colored beaks and ducklike bodies.
2. Cement is a fine powder it is mixed with sand, water, and small rocks to make concrete.
3. Alicia collects birth dates, she has recorded the birthdays of all her friends and of her favorite movie stars.
4. We may go to the Zuni arts and crafts fair on Saturday we may wait until next weekend.
5. The band placed first in regional competitions, it did not win at the state contests.
6. I plan to go to the Florida Keys someday, I want to skin-dive for seashells.
7. Kerry is having a party tomorrow night, we are planning to go.
8. The school board could vote to remodel the old cafeteria, or they may decide to build a new one.
9. My brother would like to live on a space station someday I would, too.
10. These rocks are too heavy for me to lift, I asked Christy to help me move them.

Exercise 4 Identifying and Revising Run-on Sentences

Identify which of the following word groups are run-on sentences. Then, revise each run-on sentence by (1) making two separate sentences or (2) using a comma and a coordinating conjunction. You may have to change the punctuation and capitalization, too. If the word group is already a complete sentence, write S.

EXAMPLE

1. The Navajo woman allowed the children to try on jewelry, it was made out of silver and beautiful turquoise.

   1. The Navajo woman allowed the children to try on jewelry. It was made out of silver and beautiful turquoise.

1. Sheila liked a ring with one stone in the middle it didn’t fit her fingers.
2. She found another ring with three small stones, it was a perfect fit for her.
3. Aaron picked out a turquoise watchband, and he also found a ring with blue stones and fire agates.
4. The watchband had little pieces of turquoise in the shape of a star he really wanted to buy it.
5. Both Maria and Francine spied a necklace a rough chunk of turquoise was hung from a silver chain.
6. Thad may spend his allowance on a turquoise ring he may save up his money for a watchband.
7. Several children had never seen turquoise before, they wanted to know if the stones were real.
8. The saleswoman’s arms were covered with bracelets everyone noticed her.
9. Ruben put six bracelets on his arms, and then he couldn’t get all of them off.
10. The group wanted to see more turquoise jewelry the woman had sold many pieces earlier in the day.

Exercise 5 Correcting Run-on Sentences and Sentence Fragments

Decide which of the following word groups are run-on sentences and which are sentence fragments. Then, revise each word group to make one or more complete sentences. Remember to use correct capitalization and punctuation. If a word group is already a complete sentence, write S.

EXAMPLES

1. Do you like brightly colored art you should see Faith Ringgold’s paintings.
   1. Do you like brightly colored art? You should see Faith Ringgold’s paintings.

2. Uses color boldly and imaginatively.
   2. Ringgold uses color boldly and imaginatively.

1. Ringgold was born in Harlem in 1930 at a young age, she knew she wanted to be an artist.
2. Today her artwork in museums around the world.
4. Her creativity led her to invent a whole new art form she decided to call it the “story quilt.”
5. Story quilts blend storytelling with painting.
7. Much of her work represents her African American roots.
8. Ringgold’s painting Tar Beach is based on her childhood experiences she completed the work in 1988.
9. Shows a playground on the roof of an apartment building.
10. Behind the rooftop lies the George Washington Bridge, a bridge whose string of lights reminded Ringgold of a diamond necklace.

Exercise 6  Choosing Verbs That Agree in Number with Their Subjects

For each of the following sentences, choose the form of the verb in parentheses that agrees with the subject.

EXAMPLE
1. Everyone except my twin sisters (want, wants) to go to the powwow.
   1. wants

1. Here (come, comes) the marching bands in the parade!
2. Several of my friends (has, have) trail bikes.
3. I (don’t, doesn’t) like to swim when the water is cold.
4. Neither the guinea pigs nor the hamster (is, are) awake yet.
5. (Has, Have) Mr. Baldwin and Sherry been talking long?
6. One of the scientists (was, were) Isaac Newton.
7. Thunderstorms usually (don’t, doesn’t) bother me.
8. (Is, Are) the Chinese cookbooks still on sale?
9. All of the movie (was, were) filmed in Vietnam.
10. The boy in the red shoes (run, runs) fast.

Exercise 7  Proofreading Sentences for Correct Subject-Verb Agreement

Most of the following sentences contain a verb that does not agree in number with its subject. If a verb form is incorrect, write the correct form. If a sentence is already correct, write C.

EXAMPLE
1. A carved slice of potato make a good stamp.
   1. makes

1. Images from this type of stamp are called potato prints.
2. Both my cousins and my younger brother Michael creates potato prints.
3. It don’t cost much to make these prints.
4. A firm potato, a knife, paint, a paintbrush, and paper is the necessary supplies.
5. My friend James find unique shapes and patterns in his mother’s old magazines.
6. He then carves these designs on the flat surfaces of cut potatoes.
7. Next, each carved design on the potato slices are coated with paint.
8. Pieces of fabric or a sheet of paper offer a good surface for stamping.
9. Each of my cousins like to make greeting cards with stamped designs.
10. Other uses for a potato stamp includes making writing paper and wrapping paper.

Exercise 8 Choosing Pronouns That Agree with Their Antecedents

For each of the following sentences, choose the pronoun in parentheses that agrees with its antecedent.

EXAMPLE 1. The engineers showed (his, their) plans for the new bridge.
   1. their

1. J. W. and I hope to have (our, their) skits ready in time for the talent show.
2. Two boys and one girl have received honors, and all of (her, their) parents are very proud.
3. During the last serve, with the crowd watching, Danny’s tennis racket flew out of (his, our) hand.
4. We treated (ourselves, themselves) to Chinese noodles and stir-fried vegetables for supper.
5. The table is made of oak and is quite solid, but one of (his, its) legs is broken.
6. The members of the Asian Students Club asked to have (its, their) picture taken with the school mascot.
7. Neither Jack nor Charles wants to have (his, their) hair cut by Lisa.
8. Arlene asked Samuel to go on the picnic, but (he, she) hasn’t given an answer yet.
9. The squirrels and the rabbits play in the yard; (they, it) seem to have a lot of fun.
10. Each of the girls will receive (their, her) own directions.

Exercise 9 Proofreading for Pronoun-Antecedent Agreement

Most of the following sentences contain a pronoun that does not agree with its antecedent. If a sentence is incorrect, write the correct pronoun. If a sentence is already correct, write C.

EXAMPLES
1. The asteroids will not hit Earth, but it will come close.
   1. they

2. Each of the boys thought that their independent project was the best one.
   2. his

1. Dad wrote out the check to the painters although he had not finished the painting job for him.
2. Tom Sawyer tricked his friends into doing his work, but they enjoyed it.
3. Jesse Owens, Willie Mays, and Joe Louis were sports stars in their day, and many people still remember him.
4. Have you ever noticed how the bears at the zoo really enjoy sunning itself?
5. Several of the men in our town plan to donate his time to Habitat for Humanity.
6. Each of the girls wanted to read their report first.
7. Did Randy or Tomás finish cleaning their desk first?
8. Our grandparents gave us a surprise party when we came home from camp.
9. Either José or Andrew will arrive early so that they can help us finish the posters.
10. Each of the cats was chasing their toys.
Using the Principal Parts of Regular Verbs

Give the form of the italicized verb that will correctly complete each of the following sentences.

EXAMPLE 1. roll The dog ____ on its back for us to pet it.
   1. rolled
   or rolls

1. climb Yesterday the cat ____ the tree.
   1. climbed

2. joke I can never tell when Bob is ____.
   2. joked

3. shop My friend and I once ____ all day at a mall in Bloomington, Minnesota.
   3. shopped

4. fill Have the fans ____ the auditorium yet?
   4. filled

5. enter Too many cars are ____ the parking lot.
   5. entered

6. watch The class is ____ a film about the ancient Incan culture in Peru.
   6. watching

7. call Who ____ my name a few seconds ago?
   7. called

8. measure My mother has ____ the space for the new bookcase.
   8. measured

9. load Two men ____ our furniture into the truck.
   9. loaded

10. jump A deer has ____ over the fence.
   10. jumped

11. laugh We ____ for a long time over Ira’s joke.
   11. laughed

12. fix Steven is ____ the computer.
   12. fixing

13. wash Cora’s brother has ____ his new car at least a dozen times.
   13. washed

14. play Have you ____ the soundtrack from that movie for Isaac yet?
   14. played

15. walk Mother and I ____ three miles on the county road yesterday morning.
   15. walked

16. talk The young boys are ____ about starting their own soccer team.
   16. talking

17. hammer The carpenter ____ the nails into the crossbeam in almost no time at all.
   17. hammered

18. observe Benjamin’s family is ____ Yom Kippur in the traditional way.
   18. observing

19. help Regular exercise has ____ many people to stay physically fit.
   19. helped

20. dress Are you ____ up for the banquet tonight?
   20. dressing

HELP

Some sentences in Exercise 10 may have more than one correct answer. You need to give only one answer for each sentence.

Reference Note

For information on regular verb forms, see page 446.
Exercise 11 Using Irregular Verbs

For each italicized verb, give the past or the past participle form that will correctly complete the sentence.

EXAMPLE

1. drink
   The guests ____ all of the raspberry tea.
   1. drank

1. blow
   The wind has ____ the kite out of the tree!
2. shrink
   The boy in the movie had ____ to the size of a squirrel.
3. steal
   “I’ve never ____ anything in my life,” Abe declared in his defense.
4. drive
   Pat and Justin ____ go-carts at the park.
5. freeze
   The water in the birdbath has ____.
6. sink
   The toy boat has ____ in the sudsy bath water.
7. throw
   Each athlete has ____ the javelin twice.
8. sing
   The choir ____ at the celebration last night.
9. swim
   Have you ever ____ in warm mineral water?
10. burst
    The balloon ____ when the cat clawed it.
11. teach
    Mrs. Randall has ____ at Rosenwald Middle School for years.
12. give
    Last year I ____ part of my allowance to the United Way.
13. run
    Our car is old and unattractive, but it has ____ well for many years.
14. eat
    Sharon baked two small potatoes and ____ both of them.
15. fly
    “That hawk has ____ over the yard twice,” Justin said.
16. write
    Many people have ____ about the Mexican myth of Quetzalcoatl.
17. begin
    It has ____ to snow, but the flakes are very small and dry.
18. come
    “Who ____ to Dad’s surprise birthday party?” Miriam asked.
19. speak
    Lin and Jeff have ____ about their tickets to everyone in class.
20. do
    It’s a good feeling to know that you have ____ your best.
Exercise 12  Proofreading for Errors in Irregular Verbs

Most of the following sentences contain incorrect verb forms. Identify each error, and write the correct form of the verb. If the sentence is already correct, write C.

EXAMPLE  1. We have went to the African art exhibit two weekends in a row.
   1. went—gone

1. Sarah done well at yesterday’s track meet.
2. My stepfather brung me a stuffed animal when I was in the hospital.
3. Nickelodeon movie theaters begun to be quite popular in the United States around 1905.
4. Manuel’s grandfather come to the United States forty years ago.
5. We seen the Rio Grande when we drove through the state of New Mexico.
6. Chris knew that a basement was a good place to take shelter during a tornado.
7. Judy taked a few minutes to decide what to say.
8. Maria’s team chose the oak tree in her front yard as home base.
9. The poison ivy in the woods gived me a rash.
10. Dr. Seuss wrote the poem “The Sneetches.”
11. The blue pitcher that my godparents buyed for me in Denmark is on the table in the living room.
12. Do you remember what running records Carl Lewis breaked?
13. The girls on the front porch have drank their lemonade too quickly.
14. My shirt and pants tore on the barbed wire as I climbed through the fence.
15. Jina’s mother and stepfather have went to the same church for thirty-five years.
16. A raccoon felled from the roof of our house, but it was not injured.
17. In a very generous mood, Marsha lended her favorite scarf to Natalie.
18. The family made the giant scarecrow to scare away the grackles from their backyard garden.
19. The young artist drew a lovely picture of the waves and rocks on the Oregon coast.
20. Gwen caught the ball even though Craig threw it fast and high.

Exercise 13 Using the Past and Past Participle Forms of Verbs

For the italicized verb in each of the following sentences, give the past or past participle form that will correctly complete the sentence.

EXAMPLE

1. establish Robert D. Ballard, a marine geologist, established the JASON Foundation for Education.

1. established

1. create JASON, an underwater robot, was created for scientific research.
2. build JASON was built to dive much deeper than humans can dive.
3. sink More than 1,600 years ago, the Roman ship Isis sank in the Mediterranean Sea.
4. know Ballard knew that students would want to share in the exploration of the wrecked ship.
5. make A network of satellites made it possible for many students to see JASON explore the wreck.
6. see Some 250,000 schoolchildren saw JASON on giant video screens.
7. ask While JASON searched the ship, students asked questions of Ballard and his team.
8. take Ballard has taken students on some amazing electronic field trips by televising himself working with JASON.
9. give He has given much of his time and energy to involving students in scientific discoveries.
10. write Ballard has written about finding the Isis and about the 1985 discovery of the Titanic, which sank in 1912.
Exercise 14 Choosing Correct Pronoun Forms

Choose the correct form of the pronoun in parentheses in each of the following sentences.

EXAMPLE

1. The catcher gave (she, her) the signal.
   1. her

1. The winners may be you and (her, she).
2. Gregory asked (her, she) to the dance.
3. The ending of the movie really amazed Andrew and (us, we)!
4. Should Emily and (they, them) make the spaghetti?
5. The bus driver gave (he, him) a warning.
6. The competition is really between Mario and (I, me).
7. Who bought (her, she) that opal necklace?
8. The best player on our team is (him, he).
9. The next step for Michael and (them, they) is to check with the principal.
10. My cousin and (me, I) are learning to do origami in our class at the community center.
11. You and (I, me) can work together on a report about American Indians of the Southwest.
12. The physical education teacher designed a special exercise program for (her, she).
13. The ones who asked to see our pictures from the Miami zoo are (they, them).
14. (Us, We) always enjoy the plays at the children's theater, especially when they are performed outdoors.
15. (He, Him) plays the guitar quite well and has performed in a band.
16. Ms. Ruel asked Kei and (I, me) to recite the French nursery rhyme.
17. “I’d like to go to the movies with (they, them),” Thi said after meeting Carmela and Tony.
18. Aunt Edna is buying new backpacks for Carl and (I, me).
19. Last week (them, they) began taking tennis lessons after school.
20. Will you or (I, me) be the first one with the correct answer?
Exercise 15  Proofreading for Correct Pronoun Forms

Most of the following sentences contain a pronoun that has been used incorrectly. Identify each incorrect pronoun. Then, write the correct form. If a sentence is already correct, write C.

EXAMPLE

1. Cassie sat between Melissa and I at the concert.
   1. I—me

1. Who did you meet at the skating rink last night?
2. You and them are the only ones who are going on the hike.
3. My pen pal in Vietnam will soon receive another letter from me.
4. Just between you and I, the other book was much easier to understand.
5. One of the actors in that play was her.
6. The pencils, paints, and colored paper belong to Kimiko and he.
7. Matthew has invited you and I to his party next weekend.
8. Either her or I will make a poster for Black History Month.
9. Who is the fastest runner on the baseball team?
10. They and us went swimming in Lake Travis.

Exercise 16  Choosing Correct Regular and Irregular Modifiers

Choose the correct form of the adjective or adverb in parentheses in each of the following sentences.

EXAMPLE

1. The stars tonight look (more bright, brighter) than usual.
   1. brighter

1. This puzzle book is (dificulter, more difficult) than the other one.
2. Kevin is the (taller, tallest) of the four Sutherland brothers.
3. The (most exciting, excitingest) day of our trip to Indonesia was still to come.
4. I like drawing, but I like painting (best, better).
5. If you blend strawberries, bananas, and yogurt really (good, well), you’ll have a great drink.
6. Felicia had the (worst, worse) case of chickenpox of anyone in the sixth grade.
7. My brothers and I were taught how to wash, iron, and mend clothes, and we are (gladder, glad) that we were.

8. Rachel can’t decide which of the two wallpaper patterns would look (prettier, prettiest) in her room.

9. Our schoolyard has been (cleanest, cleaner) since the Ecology Club asked people not to litter.

10. I am going to practice American Sign Language until I sign (good, well) enough to communicate easily.

Exercise 17 Correcting Errors in the Use of Modifiers

Rewrite each of the following sentences, correcting any errors in the use or placement of modifiers.

EXAMPLE

1. Do you like Western boots or hiking boots most?
   1. most—more

1. Ernest runs very good, but William can run even better.
2. Katherine is the more curious of the four Matsuo children.
3. Which flavor of frozen yogurt do you think would be worser, cheddar or carrot?
4. Tell me, did you do gooder on this week’s spelling test than on last week’s?
5. Annie brings homegrown tomatoes to her friends that she picks from her garden.
6. The astronaut met with children who had commanded a mission aboard the space shuttle.
7. Gloria became more worriedly as the storm grew worse.
8. Of the Amazon, Nile, and Mississippi rivers, the Nile is the longer.
9. We rented that scary movie at the video store from which the filmmakers spun off a television series.
10. Have you ever read Fahrenheit 451, the novel about book burning by Ray Bradbury?
11. After carefully rehearsing several times, Toni felt confidently about giving her speech.
12. Vincente made a cover for his textbook with his initials on it.
13. Janelle found a recipe for broiling catfish in a cookbook.
14. If you look close at the painting, you can see how tiny the brush strokes are.
15. We looked through the old photo album in the kitchen that we had just found in the attic.
16. It was a large crop, and it grew good, too.
17. Icarus foolish flew nearer to the sun than he should have.
18. In different parts of the world, we have read about unusual customs.
19. Aunt Dee and Uncle Mike enjoyed the CD of the symphony in their living room.
20. We found the sheet music for songs your mother used to sing in the piano bench.

Exercise 18 Correcting Double Comparisons and Double Negatives

Revise each of the following sentences to correct the double comparison or double negative.

EXAMPLE

1. Grandma thought learning to swim would be more harder than it was.
   1. Grandma thought learning to swim would be harder than it was.

1. My sister gave me her soccer ball because she never plays soccer no more.
2. You can get a more clearer idea of what the trail is like by looking at this map.
3. We couldn’t hardly believe our eyes when we saw what was under the rock!
4. You shouldn’t stand nowhere around a tall tree during a thunderstorm.
5. Keisha’s uncle Anthony just adopted the most strangest pet I’ve ever seen.
6. My little sister can’t scarcely reach the doorknob without standing on tiptoe.
7. I’m not going to put off practicing my bongo drums no more.
8. That was the most worst movie we’ve ever seen.

Reference Note

For information on double comparisons and double negatives, see pages 504 and 507.
9. Didn’t neither of the books have the information you needed?
10. I’ve read that potbellied pigs learn more faster than dogs do.

Exercise 19 Identifying Correct Usage

For each of the following sentences, choose the word or word group in parentheses that is correct according to the rules of formal, standard English.

EXAMPLE

1. My aunt Claire was working in Athens, Greece, (then, than).

   1. then

1. Everyone from the volleyball team is here (accept, except) Roseanne.
2. Steve said he thought the new batting lineup looked (alright, all right).
3. The two friends felt (bad, badly) after arguing.
4. The children helped (themselves, theirselves) to the curry.
5. Do you know (whose, who’s) sunglasses these are?
6. The boys will (try to, try and) finish painting today.
7. Be sure to (bring, take) your lunch when you go to the park.
8. The ten students in the art class divided all of the construction paper and markers (between, among) themselves.
9. (Who’s, Whose) going to show them how to dance?
10. Heat lightning occurs too far from people for them to hear (its, it’s) accompanying thunder.

Exercise 20 Correcting Errors in Usage

Each of the following sentences contains an error in the use of formal, standard English. Identify each error, and then write the correct usage.

EXAMPLE

1. Them fish are called sea horses.

   1. Them—Those

1. Where are sea horses found at?
2. Sea horses are found in tropical and temperate waters—not anywheres that is very cold.
3. Baby sea horses often use they’re curved tails to hold on to each other.
4. That there sea horse used its tail to grasp some seaweed.
5. Don’t you think that it’s head looks amazingly like a tiny horse’s head?
6. The little fin on a sea horse’s back moves so fast that you can’t hardly see it.
7. Several students asked the teacher how come the eyes of a sea horse work independently of each other.
8. My stepsisters and I used to look for sea horses when we lived near the coast in California.
9. The teacher reminded us to bring home a parental approval form for the field trip to the city aquarium.
10. When you’re at the aquarium, remember to stop by the sea horse exhibit.

Exercise 21 Proofreading Sentences for Correct Usage

Each of the following sentences contains an error in English usage. Identify each error. Then, write the correct usage.

EXAMPLE 1. Do you all ready know about the Pantanal?
   1. all ready—already

1. The Pantanal is the largest wetland anywheres on earth.
2. To get an idea of it’s size, imagine an area about the size of Arkansas.
3. Most of the Pantanal is located inside of Brazil.
4. The area contains a enormous wealth of wildlife.
5. Our science teacher is learning us about the jaguar, the giant anteater, and other animals that live there.
6. The Pantanal may be more important for wading birds such as storks then any other place in South America.
7. In addition, alot of other birds, such as toucans and macaws, live there.
8. The Pantanal has swamps that sometimes have absorbed heavy rains that otherwise might of flooded nearby areas.
9. However, the Pantanal ain’t all swamps; it also contains forests.
10. Although the Pantanal is a long ways from where I live, I hope to have a chance to explore it someday.
Grammar and Usage Test: Section 1

DIRECTIONS  In each of the following sentences, a word group is underlined. Using the rules of formal, standard English, choose the answer that most clearly expresses the meaning of the sentence. If there is no error, choose A. Indicate your response by shading in the appropriate oval on your answer sheet.

EXAMPLE  1. The fish smelled badly, so we didn’t buy any.
   (A) smelled badly  (B) smells badly  (C) smelled bad  (D) smelling bad

ANSWER  1. A  B  C  D

1. Roz and I caught fireflies in a jar.
   (A) I caught  (B) me caught  (C) I caught  (D) me caught

2. Fun hiking in the wilderness preserve.
   (A) Fun hiking in the wilderness preserve.
   (B) While having fun hiking in the wilderness preserve.
   (C) Hiking in the wilderness preserve was fun.
   (D) Have had fun hiking in the wilderness preserve.

3. The election resulted in a runoff between he and I.
   (A) he and I  (B) him and me  (C) him and I  (D) he and me

4. In bowling, a strike is when a bowler knocks down all ten pins on the first throw in a frame.
   (A) is when  (B) occurs when  (C) is where  (D) is because
5. Have you heard of Lawrence and Lorne Blair, two brothers who traveled in Indonesia for ten years?
   (A) Blair, two brothers who traveled in Indonesia for ten years?
   (B) Blair? Two brothers who traveled in Indonesia for ten years.
   (C) Blair, two brothers whom traveled in Indonesia for ten years?
   (D) Blair and two brothers who traveled in Indonesia for ten years?

6. Is this here drill bit the right size?
   (A) Is this here
   (B) Is that there
   (C) Is this here kind of
   (D) Is this

7. Here your car keys.
   (A) Here your car keys.
   (B) Here are your car keys.
   (C) Here’s you’re car keys.
   (D) Here is your car keys.

8. The dog barked the baby awoke.
   (A) The dog barked the baby awoke.
   (B) The dog barked, the baby awoke.
   (C) The dog barked, and the baby awoke.
   (D) The dog barking and the baby awoke.

9. I shouldn’t of waited to start my essay.
   (A) shouldn’t of
   (B) shouldn’t have
   (C) ought not to of
   (D) oughtn’t not to have

10. Mrs. Levine asked how come Darnell and he aren’t ready to leave yet.
    (A) how come Darnell and he aren’t
    (B) how come Darnell and him aren’t
    (C) why Darnell and he isn’t
    (D) why Darnell and he aren’t
Grammar and Usage Test: Section 2

DIRECTIONS   Read the paragraph below. For each of the numbered blanks, select the word or word group that best completes the sentence. Indicate your response by shading in the appropriate oval on your answer sheet.

EXAMPLE   Two species of elephant (1) today: the African elephant and the Asian elephant.

1. (A) does exist
   (B) exists
   (C) have been existing
   (D) exist

ANSWER   1. A B C D

Each of these species has (1) own unique features; for example, the African elephant has (2) ears and tusks than the Asian elephant does. Although different in some ways, both species of elephant (3) strong, intelligent, and social. Both have poor sight and are colorblind but can smell and hear quite (4). Elephants can detect the scent of (5) human who is over a mile away. (6) hearing is so good that they can communicate over distances of more than two miles, using sounds (7) any that humans can hear. Unfortunately, human population growth, farming, industry, and illegal hunting (8) a decline in the elephant population. For instance, poachers have killed thousands of African elephants for their ivory tusks; in fact, from 1979 to the early 1990s, the number of elephants in Africa (9) from 1,300,000 to fewer than 600,000. (10) protect elephants, the trade of ivory was outlawed worldwide in 1989.

1. (A) it
   (B) its’
   (C) it’s
   (D) its

3. (A) they are
   (B) are
   (C) are being
   (D) is

2. (A) larger
   (B) more larger
   (C) the more larger
   (D) the most largest

4. (A) well
   (B) good
   (C) better
   (D) best
5. (A) a
   (B) an
   (C) the
   (D) this

6. (A) They’re
   (B) There
   (C) Their
   (D) They

7. (A) more lower than
   (B) lower than
   (C) more low then
   (D) lower then

8. (A) will have caused
   (B) causes
   (C) are causing
   (D) is cause

9. (A) shrinks
   (B) shrank
   (C) shrinked
   (D) is shrinking

10. (A) 2
    (B) Too
    (C) Two
    (D) To
Exercise 22  Correcting Errors in Capitalization

Each of the following word groups contains at least one error in capitalization. Correct the errors either by changing capital letters to lowercase letters or by changing lowercase letters to capital letters.

EXAMPLE
1. abilene, texas
   1. Abilene, Texas

1. the smoky mountains
2. rutherford B. hayes
3. Alice In Wonderland
4. university of kansas
5. labor day
6. near lake Placid
7. it’s already tuesday!
8. english or Art II
9. washington monument
10. marta Hinojosa, m.d.
11. neptune and other planets
12. second day of hanukkah
13. my Uncle Jack
14. an airplane called spirit of st. louis
15. a river running South
16. Bryce canyon national park
17. 912 valentine st.
18. president Cleveland
19. “i’m home!”
20. newbery medal

Exercise 23  Correcting Errors in Capitalization

Correct the capitalization errors in the following sentences either by changing capital letters to lowercase letters or by changing lowercase letters to capital letters.

EXAMPLE
1. i went to see a play last saturday.
   1. I went to see a play last Saturday.

1. Our drama teacher, ms. soto, took us to see it.
2. the new play was first performed by the south Texas performance company.
3. This theater group’s founder and director is the translator, playwright, and theater scholar Joe Rosenberg.
4. He has established an exchange program for theater students from the United States, Mexico, and South America.
5. In addition, Mr. Rosenberg has written a full-length play titled Saturday Stranger, which was published in Germany.
6. Mr. Rosenberg has also edited a book called Japlauso! Hispanic Children’s Theater.
7. The book includes plays by Héctor Santiago, Roy Conboy, and Lisa Loomer, among others.
8. The plays are printed in both English and Spanish.
9. These plays draw on Hispanic literary traditions native to such places as Mexico, Puerto Rico, and Cuba.
10. Next month the Southwest Middle School drama club plans to perform one of the plays from this book.

Exercise 24 Using Periods, Question Marks, and Exclamation Points Correctly

For each of the following sentences, write each letter or word that should be followed by a period, question mark, or exclamation point, and add the proper punctuation.

EXAMPLE

1. Senator Jackson, can you meet with our class at 8:15 A.M.?

1. A.M.?

1. Please follow me
2. Will you please help me carry my books
3. Where in the downtown library is the new display of Peruvian pottery
4. Watch out for that car
5. Dr. Williamson taught me to fly a model helicopter
6. Anthony asked Rose whether her favorite cartoonist is Charles M. Schulz
7. One fossil recently discovered in these mountains dates back to 3 million B.C.
8. What a surprise that was
9. Have you ever brought your skateboard to school
10. The letter addressed to 4613 Sleepy Hollow Blvd, Kingston, NY 12401, must be for Mrs. C. R. Smith
Exercise 25 Proofreading Sentences for the Correct Use of Commas

Each of the following sentences is missing at least one comma. Write the word or numeral that should be followed by a comma, and add the comma.

EXAMPLE

1. Oh I hope we win the track meet when we go to Salina Kansas next week.
   1. Oh, Salina, Kansas,

1. Sheila ran laps on Monday Tuesday and Wednesday.
2. On February 20 1999 my family had a reunion in San Juan Puerto Rico.
3. Yes that is the dog they adopted from the animal shelter.
4. Because my father is going to teach me to play the guitar soon he is showing me how to tune one now.
5. No I have never read The Hobbit.
6. Scissors pins tacks and other sharp items should be kept out of the reach of young children.
7. Athena the Greek goddess of crafts wisdom and war is often shown with an owl on her shoulder.
8. Douglas never leaves shopping carts in parking spaces set aside for people who have disabilities and neither should anyone else.
9. My aunt and I bought nails lumber and paint for the birdhouses we plan to build.
10. Professor Chang will you explain the differences between these two kinds of cells?

Exercise 26 Using Semicolons and Colons Correctly

The following sentences lack necessary colons and semicolons. Write the words or numerals that come before and after the needed punctuation, and insert the proper punctuation.

EXAMPLE

1. My grandmother is coming to visit we will meet her at the airport.
   1. visit; we

1. We picked subjects for our reports I chose sea turtles.
2. Our school day used to start at 8 15 now it starts at 8 00.
3. The following items will be needed for the new playground swings, slides, and picnic tables.
4. The rain just ended maybe we will get a chance to see a double rainbow.
5. We can save water in these ways turning off the faucet while brushing our teeth, pouring only as much as we plan to drink, and taking showers instead of baths.
6. At the farmers’ market, shoppers were discussing the recent election they were discussing the weather, too.
7. “Dear Sir or Madam” is one proper way to begin a business letter, but not the only way.
8. Plains Indians include the following peoples Comanche, Osage, Pawnee, Crow, and Blackfeet.
9. At 6 30 A.M. my alarm went off I couldn’t believe it was time to get up.
10. My wish list is as follows a mountain bike, good grades, and a happy home.

Exercise 27 Punctuating and Capitalizing Quotations

Revise the following numbered items, using quotation marks, other marks of punctuation, and capital letters where needed. If a sentence is already correct, write C.

EXAMPLE

1. I admire Marian Wright Edelman said Paul she has worked hard for children’s rights.

1. In 1973, Edelman founded the Children’s Defense Fund, a nonprofit organization that has helped many people said Mr. Knepp.
2. Paul commented that just the other day he had read an article titled Edelman: The Children’s Defender.
3. Justin said I’d like to work to protect children’s rights, too, one day.
4. Edelman was born in 1939 Paul told us she grew up in Bennettsville, South Carolina.
5. Mr. Knepp said that Marian Wright Edelman is one of our country’s greatest civic leaders.
6. Please tell me more about Edelman’s career as a lawyer, Ashley said.

7. She graduated from Yale Law School in 1963 he said And soon became the first African American woman licensed to practice law in Mississippi.

8. Mr. Knepp added Edelman has handled many civil rights cases and has always made community service a priority.

9. did Edelman say that she had been taught as a child to make service a central part of her life? Justin asked.

---

Exercise 28 Punctuating Dialogue

Revise the following dialogue, adding quotation marks and other marks of punctuation and replacing lowercase letters with capital letters where necessary. Remember to begin a new paragraph each time the speaker changes.

EXAMPLE

[1] The legend of Greyfriars Bobby is so moving, Jennifer exclaimed, that I'll never forget it.

1. "The legend of Greyfriars Bobby is so moving,” Jennifer exclaimed, “that I’ll never forget it.”

[1] Bobby was a special dog, Jennifer said, and extremely loyal to his master. [2] Tony asked, “can you believe that Bobby actually lived by his master’s grave for fourteen years?”

[8] “Bobby slept during the day, Tony recalled because, before his master died, they had worked together at night.”

[9] Jennifer said, “yes, his master, old Jock, guarded cattle that were sold at the market.” [10] Tony said, In Edinburgh there is a statue of Greyfriars Bobby on top of a drinking fountain for dogs.
Exercise 29  Using Apostrophes Correctly

Rewrite the following word groups, inserting an apostrophe wherever one is needed.

EXAMPLE

1. the womens class
   1. the women’s class

1. if theyve gone
2. no ones fault
3. that statues condition
4. so lets try
5. since youre going home
6. that giants castle
7. theirs weren’t faded
8. the Rockies highest peak
9. when there isn’t time
10. these books authors
11. Arkansas governor
12. if everybodys there
13. made all As in school
14. one pueblos history
15. the five camels saddles
16. born in 84
17. and theres the dog
18. the sheeps wool
19. when youll find out
20. two os in the word igloo
21. arent able to
22. the one whos late
23. when Im tired
24. around 10 oclock
25. those two books pages

Exercise 30  Correcting Spelling Errors

Most of the following words are misspelled. If a word is not spelled correctly, write the correct spelling. If a word is already spelled correctly, write C.

EXAMPLE

1. mispeak
   1. misspeak

1. percieve
2. disolve
3. gladest
4. charging
5. comedies
6. sillyness
7. taxes
8. tryed
9. potatos
10. traceing
11. classes
12. sleigh
13. matchs
14. videoes
15. funnyer
16. toyes
17. schoolling
18. wieght
19. loosness
20. Gomezs
21. managable
22. unatural
23. ladys
24. runing
25. finaly
Exercise 31 Choosing Between Words Often Confused

For each of the following sentences, choose the word or word group in parentheses that will make the sentence correct.

EXAMPLE 1. Matthew suggested that I (altar, alter) the first paragraph of my story.

1. alter

1. Have you (all ready, already) finished your latest painting?
2. (Your, You’re) pets need good food, clean water, warm shelter, and loving attention.
3. Be careful not to (lose, loose) any of those puzzle pieces, or we’ll have to buy a new puzzle.
4. Chuckwallas are harmless lizards that may grow to be two feet long and live in rocky (desserts, deserts) in the United States and Mexico.
5. Manuel dreamed of finding a sunken ship and (it’s, its) treasure chest.
6. The school (threw, through) away tons of paper and cardboard before the recycling program was started.
7. (Whose, Who’s) planning to bring food and drinks to the fiesta tomorrow?
8. We drove (passed, past) the park, across the bridge, and around the lake to the dock.
9. Marcie’s enthusiasm for playing in the marching band was (plain, plane) to see.
10. The guide (lead, led) the scouts through the museum.
11. Former President Jimmy Carter has been greatly involved in efforts to bring (piece, peace) to various countries all over the world.
12. In less than one (weak, week), Sandra’s mother will begin her new job as editor-in-chief of the newspaper’s new Washington bureau.
13. (There, Their) are many kinds of trees in our neighborhood, and they provide plenty of shade.
14. The gravel in the driveway is (coarse, course), but it still feels good on my bare feet.
15. The flagpole itself was (stationary, stationery), but the flag flapped in the breeze.
16. “The lamp may (brake, break) if you try to carry it on its side and with one hand,” Dad cautioned.
17. What is the (capital, capitol) of Puerto Rico?
18. Mr. Edgars is a good man whose (principles, principals) include honesty and fairness.
19. When we sit outside on the porch, we can’t (hear, here) the phone ring.
20. We read (threw, through) Gary Soto’s book of poetry and picked out some poems to memorize.

Exercise 32  Proofreading Sentences for Errors in Spelling and Words Often Confused

For each of the following sentences, identify and correct any error in spelling or usage.

EXAMPLE
1. The Iroquois people’s name for themseifs means “we longhouse builders.”
   1. themseifs—themselves

1. In our American history coarse, we learned that the Iroquois constructed large dwellings called longhouses.
2. Years ago, nearly all Iroquois lived in forests and built they’re longhouses out of logs and strips of bark.
3. Several individual familys lived in each of these longhouses.
4. When a couple marryed, the husband would move into the longhouse of his wife’s extended family, called a clan.
5. Each family had it’s own separate area with a sleeping platform that was raised about a foot above the ground.
6. They kept the longhouse neat by storing many of their belongings on shelfs above their sleeping platforms.
7. Fires were made in hearths in a central corridor, and smoke rose threw holes cut in the longhouse roof.
8. When it rained or snowed, slideing panels were used to close the holes.
9. The bigest longhouses measured more than two hundred feet in length.
10. Such large longhouses could shelter 10 or more individual families at a time.
Exercise 33 Proofreading a Paragraph for Errors in Mechanics

For the sentences in the following paragraph, correct each error in mechanics. If a sentence is already correct, write C.

EXAMPLES

1. Have you ever seen the movie the Wizard of Oz?
   1. The Wizard of Oz
   2. You may not know that it's based on a book.
   2. it's

   [1] The book was written by L. Frank Baum. [2] He was born on May 15, 1856 in the state of New York. [3] When he was a teenager he was interested in the theater and his father a wealthy oilman gave him several theaters to manage. [4] In 1881 he wrote The maid of Arran, a successful play. [5] For many years he worked at several jobs, including storekeeper, newspaper reporter, and traveling salesman. [6] In 1900 he published a children's book called The Wonderful Wizard of Oz, which was a bestseller for two years in a row. [7] Baum adapted the book into a successful play, and he even made several silent movies about Oz. [8] Baum died in Hollywood, California in 1919 and twenty years later the famous film starring Judy Garland as Dorothy was made in the same city. [9] During the making of the film, the actor who played the wizard discovered that L. Frank Baum's name was sewn into the lining of the wizard's coat. [10] According to Baum's wife, it really was Baum's old coat the movie studio's wardrobe department had bought it at a secondhand clothing shop.

Exercise 34 Proofreading a Business Letter for Correct Grammar, Usage, and Mechanics

Correct the errors in grammar, usage, and mechanics in the numbered items in the following letter.

EXAMPLE

[1] 254 Thirty second street
   1. 254 Thirty-second Street
Ms. Susan Loroupe

Syracuse daily times
598 Seventh Avenue
Syracuse, NY 13208

Dear Ms Loroupe

Thank you for taking time during you’re busy workday to show the Van Buren Middle School Journalism Club around the Newspaper’s offices.

Us club members are glad to have had the chance to see how newspaper articles are wrote and printed. Especially enjoyed seeing the presses—even more then talking with the design artists and editors! We were surprised that the presses were so loud and we were impressed by how quick and efficient everyone worked. Please thank the artists, to, for showing us how they use computer’s to arrange the art and photos on the pages.

Sincerely,

Carlos Lopez

journalism club Secretary

Van Buren middle school

Reference Note

For information on writing business letters, see “Writing” in the Quick Reference Handbook.
Mechanics Test: Section 1

DIRECTIONS Each numbered item below contains an underlined word or word group. Choose the answer that shows the correct capitalization, punctuation, and spelling of the underlined part. If there is no error, choose answer D (Correct as is). Indicate your response by shading in the appropriate oval on your answer sheet.

EXAMPLE

1. Quincy, MA 02158
   (A) Quincy, Mass. 02158
   (B) Quincy MA, 02158
   (C) Quincy, M.A. 02158
   (D) Correct as is

ANSWER

1. A B C D

147 Hickory Lane
Quincy, MA 02158
May 11 2001
The Hobby Shop
2013 forty-First Street
Los Angeles, CA 90924

Dear Mr. Shaw

While I was visiting my aunt Laura, who’s house is near your store, she bought a model airplane from you. Two of my freinds have already tried to help me get the plane to fly, but we haven’t been able to. Putting the plane together was not difficult; the problem is that the engine will not start. Also, I found no stickers in the box when I opened it and the box says that there should be stickers for the plane’s wings. I have enclosed the engine and my aunt’s receipt. I hope that you are able to send me stickers and a new engine soon.

Sincerely,

Timothy Martin

Copyright © by Holt, Rinehart and Winston. All rights reserved.
Mechanics Test: Section 2

DIRECTIONS Each of the following sentences contains an underlined word or word group. Choose the answer that shows the correct capitalization, punctuation, and spelling of the underlined part. If there is no error, choose answer D (Correct as is). Indicate your response by shading in the appropriate oval on your answer sheet.

EXAMPLE 1. Today the school librarian Mr. Woods will show us a film.
   (A) librarian, Mr. Woods
   (B) librarian, Mr. Woods,
   (C) librarian Mr. Woods,
   (D) Correct as is

ANSWER  1. A  B  C  D

1. (A) May, 11 2001
   (B) May 11, 2001
   (C) May, 11, 2001
   (D) Correct as is

2. (A) 2013 Forty First Street
   (B) 2013 Forty-first street
   (C) 2013 Forty-first Street
   (D) Correct as is

3. (A) Dear Mr. Shaw,
   (B) Dear Mr. Shaw:
   (C) Dear Mr. Shaw:
   (D) Correct as is

4. (A) my aunt Laura, whose
   (B) my Aunt Laura, whose
   (C) my Aunt Laura, who’s
   (D) Correct as is

5. (A) Two of my friends
   (B) To of my friends
   (C) Too of my friends
   (D) Correct as is

6. (A) all ready tried
   (B) already tried
   (C) all ready tried
   (D) Correct as is

7. (A) Puting the plane
   (B) Putting the plain
   (C) putting the plain
   (D) Correct as is

8. (A) it and the box says that their
   (B) it, and the box says that their
   (C) it, and the box says that there
   (D) Correct as is

9. (A) aunt’s receipt
   (B) Aunt’s receipt
   (C) aunts’ receipt
   (D) Correct as is

10. (A) your
    (B) you’re
    (C) your’
    (D) Correct as is
1. I wonder what the capital of Spain is?
   (A) capital of Spain is.
   (B) capitol of Spain is.
   (C) capitol of Spain is?
   (D) Correct as is

2. The mouses’ nest may be in the garage.
   (A) mouses
   (B) mices
   (C) mice’s
   (D) Correct as is

3. “What did you see at the park?” asked my grandfather.
   (A) see at the park”? asked my grandfather.
   (B) see at the park,” asked my grandfather?
   (C) see at the park? asked my grandfather.”
   (D) Correct as is

4. Felix, you’ve been a naughty kitten this passed week!
   (A) passed weak
   (B) past weak
   (C) past week
   (D) Correct as is

5. Aisha exclaimed, “see how much these crystals have grown!”
   (A) exclaimed, “See
   (B) exclaimed! “See
   (C) exclaimed “see
   (D) Correct as is

6. The Olympic team waved at the crowd, the audience cheered.
   (A) crowd; the audience
   (B) crowd: the audience
   (C) crowd, and the audience
   (D) Correct as is
7. The Kalahari Desert is in southern Africa.
   (A) Kalahari Desert
   (B) kalahari desert
   (C) Kalahari desert
   (D) Correct as is

8. “It’s snowing,” observed Mrs. Daniels.
   (A) “It’s snowwing,”
   (B) “It’s snowing,”
   (C) Its snowing,
   (D) Correct as is

9. The Red Cross is asking for blankets, sheets, and pillows.
   (A) for; blankets,
   (B) for, blankets,
   (C) for blankets,
   (D) Correct as is

10. Robert Frost’s poem The Road Not Taken is famous.
    (A) poem The Road Not Taken
    (B) poem “The Road Not Taken”
    (C) poem “the Road not Taken”
    (D) Correct as is
ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

For permission to reprint copyrighted material, grateful acknowledgment is made to the following sources:

Jim Haskins: From "You're Under Arrest" from Rosa Parks: My Story by Rosa Parks with Jim Haskins. Copyright © 1992 by Rosa Parks.

Tyler Duckworth: From “Let’s Clean Up the Planet for Future Generations” by Tyler Duckworth from Time for Kids Archive, February 1, 1997. Copyright © 1997 by Tyler Duckworth.

Farrar, Straus and Giroux, LLC.: From Tuck Everlasting by Natalie Babbitt. Copyright © 1975 by Natalie Babbitt.

Girl Zone: From “Volunteering—It’s So Easy, a Kid Can Do It” by Liv Learner from Girl Zone, Online. Copyright © 1998 by Girl Zone. Available at http://www.girlzone.com/html/care_project.html.

Alfred A. Knopf, Inc.: “April Rain Song” from Collected Poems by Langston Hughes. Copyright © 1994 by the Estate of Langston Hughes.

The Octagon Press, Ltd., London: “Camel fodder” from The Subtleties of the Inimitable Mulla Nasrudin by Idries Shah. Copyright © 1983 by The Octagon Press, Ltd.

Mary Roach: From “Meteorite Hunters” by Mary Roach from Muse, vol. 3, no. 6, July/August 1999. Copyright © 1999 by Mary Roach.

Weekly Reader Corporation: “Foul Shot” by Edwin A. Hoey from Read ®. Copyright © 1962 and renewed © 1989 by Weekly Reader Corporation. All rights reserved.

SOURCES CITED:

Screen shot for “Grizzly fate” from FirstSearch database. FirstSearch and WorldCat are registered trademarks of OCLC Online Computer Library Center, Incorporated. OCLC Online Computer Library Center, Inc. Available online at http://firstsearch.oclc.org/next=NEXTCMD%...recs=1:/fsrec9.tx1%22%3Asessionid=658964.
ILLUSTRATION CREDITS

TABLE OF CONTENTS: Page viii (tl), Melinda Levine; (bl), Tom Voss/Vicki Prentice Associates Inc. NYC; ix (cl), Christin Ranger; x (cl), Susan Sanford; xi (cl), Susan Tolonen/Wilson-Zumbo; xii (tl), Tim Spransy/Wilson-Zumbo; xiii (cl), Fred Lynch; xiv (tl), John Ceballos/Carol Guenzi Agents.

INTRODUCTION: Page 2 (all), Melinda Levine.

CHAPTER 1: Page 16 (all), Tom Voss/Vicki Prentice Associates Inc. NYC.

CHAPTER 2: Page 48 (all), Christin Ranger.

CHAPTER 3: Page 84 (all), Susan Sanford; 90 (b), Leslie Kell; 91 (bl), 101 (cl), HRW; 113 (cl), Leslie Kell.

CHAPTER 4: Page 118 (all), Susan Tolonen/Wilson-Zumbo.

CHAPTER 5: Page 152 (all), Tim Spransy/Wilson-Zumbo.

CHAPTER 6: Page 186 (all), Fred Lynch; 189 (cl), Ortelius Design; 199 (bl), Leslie Kell; 221 (tr), HRW; (br), Ortelius Design.

CHAPTER 7: Page 226 (all), John Ceballos/Carol Guenzi Agents; 254 (c), HRW.

CHAPTER 12: Page 363 (c), HRW; 367 (b), Linda Kelen.

CHAPTER 13: Page 376 (c), Rich Lo; 380 (c), Rondi Collette.

CHAPTER 15: Page 424 (c), Ortelius Design.

CHAPTER 16: Page 468 (tc), Chris Ellison.

CHAPTER 18: Page 500 (br), 509 (tr), Rondi Collette.

CHAPTER 19: Page 528 (bl), Tom Gianni; 531 (c), Ortelius Design; 532 (bl), Leslie Kell.

CHAPTER 20: Page 547 (cr), Ortelius Design.

CHAPTER 22: Page 604 (bc), Rondi Collette.

CHAPTER 23: Page 636 (br), Ortelius Design.

QRH: Page 688 (br), Precision Graphics; 689 (b), HRW; 701 (tl), Leslie Kell.