LINGUISTICS, COMMUNICATION SCIENCE 2019
Historical linguistics is a growing field, and so is the notion of the role of cultural aspects as involved in language diversity. However, a collective work on the current stand within this field is lacking, in particular for little researched areas such as the Amazon.

Computational methods, as well as new technologies for geographic mapping and data base management have opened new possibilities for looking at history of language and culture, based on earlier theories. These methods are used as complementary to established methods, such as comparative method, areal method, and relative and absolute chronology.

The current atlas will focus on the following topics:
1. language spread and diversity in relation to ecology, subsistence, and cultural contact,
2. functionality in culture, as expressed in cultural vocabulary,
3. indications of contact by means of borrowings of cultural vocabulary and linguistic typology.

The book will be based on a rich new collection of data (from about 400 languages), which will be available open source via a geographic database. The volume will be of relevance for students and researchers of linguistics, cultural anthropology, human ecology, archaeology, and adjacent disciplines.

Dear Reader,

UNESCO proclaims 2019 the International Year of Indigenous Languages. Mouton continues to contribute to the documentation of indigenous languages worldwide with the publication of grammars and linguistic analyses of, among others, languages of Africa (Bangime), Asia (Lisu), the Americas (Takatao, Mixe-Zoquean, Mayan), Australia (Murrinhpatha) and the Pacific (Koromu, Belep, Qaet and the Greater Awoya languages). If you are looking for smart visualizations of complex linguistic patterns, The Mouton Atlas of Languages and Cultures with its polygons and network diagrams provides unique answers for both ancient and modern languages. Our offerings also include the timely HSK handbook on Language Contact – with familiar comprehensiveness in scope – and the handbook of the Languages and Linguistics of Mexico and Northern Central America – which addresses the persisting need for area coverage. Sinitic languages and their diversity take center stage in our new book series Sinitic Languages of China. Our attractive collection of readers on Semantics and on Cognitive Linguistics treats key concepts in both domains.

Happy browsing!

LANGUAGE AND SPACE
An International Handbook of Linguistic Variation

Joachim Herrgen, Jürgen Erich Schmidt (Eds.)

VOLUME 4: DEUTSCH
Sprache und Raum – Ein Internationales Handbuch der Sprachvariation

This handbook aims at a state-of-the-art overview of both earlier and recent research on older, newer and emerging non-standard varieties (dialects, register texts, sociolinguistic, substandard varieties) of German. The discussion concerns the theoretical embedding, potential interdisciplinary connections and the methodology of the studies at issue. It presents general concepts and approaches in the broad domain of German variation linguistics.

VISUAL PROSODY
The Graphematic Foot in English and German

Written words are traditionally seen as a linear sequence of letters. This book presents a non-linear graphematic approach which supplements linearity with a hierarchical structure. This hierarchy of structural units comprises letter features, elements, graphemes, syllables, feet and words. The approach is backed by structural and experimental evidence and analyses within the OT-framework. The focus lies on the unit foot and on English and German.

OUR BEST HANDBOOKS IN LINGUISTICS

The Handbooks from De Gruyter Mouton cover the full range of modern linguistics sciences. All publications are concisely written, and carefully selected to ensure the highest scientific standards and latest insights from internationally respected scientists and editors. This unique collection of linguistics handbooks offers all the information needed by students, lecturers and interested academics and gives a breadth of inspiration for future research.

COMPARATIVE HANDBOOKS OF LINGUISTICS
The Comparative Handbooks of Linguistics (CHL) collects specific studies enabling a cross-linguistic approach, with the empirical studies on various languages structured uniformly to make comparison easier. A typical volume examines a grammatical feature or construction across languages, offers a survey of that feature through in-depth analyses within the same theoretical framework, and formulates cross-linguistic generalizations.

HANDBOOKS OF JAPANESE LANGUAGE AND LINGUISTICS
The Handbooks of Japanese Language and Linguistics (HJLL) surpass all currently available reference works on Japanese in both their scope and depth, and provide a comprehensive survey of nearly the entire field of Japanese linguistics for the general academic community as well as for specialists in the fields of Japanese and linguistics.

HANDBOOKS OF COMMUNICATION SCIENCE
Written with a forward-looking perspective, the Handbooks of Communication Science (HOCOS) are a comprehensive summary of the field in the early decades of the 21st century. With the aim of integrating knowledge of communication structures, processes and techniques, the series is dedicated to cultural and epistemological diversity, covering work originating from around the globe.

HANDBOOKS OF PRAGMATICS
The Handbooks of Pragmatics (HOPS) series is a new landmark in supplying a widespread, but concise overview of the entire field. The series takes a broad view of pragmatics as the study of intentional human interaction in social and cultural contexts such as speech act and discourse theories.

HANDBOOKS OF LINGUISTICS AND COMMUNICATION SCIENCE
In addition to general linguistics, the Handbooks of Linguistics and Communication Science (HILK) covers those areas which have developed in recent years from the increasing body of research into the manifold forms of communicative action and interaction.

WORLD OF LINGUISTICS
The World of Linguistics (WOL) handbooks examine an up-to-date scheme of linguistic work on the world’s languages in Africa, Europe, North and Central America, South America, Central and Northern Asia, South Asia, East and Southeast Asia, Western Asia, Australia, and the Pacific Islands.

INTONATION IN AFRICAN TONE LANGUAGES

NOW IN PAPERBACK

This volume brings together two under-investigated areas of intonation typology. While tone languages make up to 70 percent of the world's languages, only few have been explored for intonation. And even though one third of the world’s languages are spoken in Africa, and most sub-Saharan languages are tone languages, recent collections on tone and intonation typology have almost entirely ignored African languages. This book aims to fill this gap.

CURRENT APPROACHES TO SYNTAX

A Comparative Handbook

In this handbook thirteen current approaches to syntactic description are presented (Part I) along with six studies on their meta-theoretical underpinning (Part II). The goal is to facilitate a systematic comparison among the approaches. All accounts address the same issues and are structured uniformly for an item-by-item survey across the frameworks. The volume is of interest for grammarians, philosophers of science, and cognitive scientists.

This book develops a theory of the morpheme in the framework of Distributed Morphology. Particular emphasis is devoted to the way in which functional morphemes receive their phonological form post-syntactically, through the operation of Vocabulary Insertion. In addition to looking closely at syncretism, the primary motivation for Vocabulary Insertion, the book examines allomorphy, blocking, and other key topics in the theory of the morpheme.

This volume deals with atypical demonstrative expressions from a broad empirical and theoretical perspective. It discusses various grammatical properties of such demonstratives that have not received adequate attention in the literature so far. By providing fresh insights and discussing new facets, it contributes to a better understanding of their syntactic multifunctionality, semantic feature specifications and pragmatic functions.

The book discusses whether the participles in passive and perfect constructions in German and Romance are syntactico-semantically identical or just accidentally homophonous. Based on synchronic data and some diachronic considerations, it is argued that past participles contain both diathetic as well as aspeckical properties. This allows them to alternate between passive and perfect on the basis of their event structure and syntactic environment.

This volume presents cutting-edge research on the question of how we parse, interpret and understand language in more complex discourse settings. The challenge is to find empirical evidence on how information structure and semantic processing are related. Comprehensible answers are provided by showing how syntax, phonology, semantics and pragmatics interact and how they influence semantic processing and interpretation.

Sam Featherston, Robin Hönnig, Sophie von Wietersheim and Susanne Winkler, University of Tübingen, Germany.

Collection, English, 3rd quarter 2019
The series Sinitic Languages of China: Typological Descriptions specializes in the description of the grammar of Sinitic languages, including well-known examples such as Cantonese, Hokkien, Shanghainese and Hakka, lesser-known ones such as Hunanese Xiang or the Jiu languages of Shanxi, without overlooking the national language known as Pǔtōnghuà in China – or Standard Mandarin in the West.

The primary goal of this series is to promote scientific knowledge of Chinese languages and their typological characteristics through the publication of high calibre linguistic research, based on empirical fieldwork, close analysis of the data and solid theoretical interpretations. The grammatical descriptions, written in a functionalist framework, will be illustrated by linguistic examples presented in a ‘value-added’ four-line format that includes romanization, glossing, the idiomatic English translation, and also the Chinese characters to cater to historical and comparative interests as well as our sinophone readers.

The specific objective is to reveal the great structural diversity found in Sinitic languages and to dispel many recurrent linguistic myths about Chinese. The authors involved in this series are all highly trained fieldwork linguists with a background in both typology and Chinese linguistics.

The series thus aims to reach an international readership for the first time, given that most literature available on Chinese languages, up until now, has been predominantly written in (Standard Written) Chinese.

GRAMMATICALIZATION SCENARIOS. AREAL PATTERNS AND CROSS-LINGUISTIC VARIATION.
A comparative Handbook
This volume intends to fill the gap in the grammaticalization studies setting as its goal the systematic description of grammaticalization processes in genealogically and structurally diverse languages. To address the problem of the limitations of the secondary sources for grammaticalization studies, the editors rely on sketches of grammaticalization phenomena from experts in individual languages guided by a typological questionnaire.

COMPLEMENTIZER SEMANTICS IN EUROPEAN LANGUAGES
NOW IN PAPERBACK
This book presents the first comparative study of complementizer semantics in European languages. The focus is on semantics, but related issues such as the syntax, morphology and diachrony of complementizers, and their omission and combination are also discussed. The book contains contributions from experts of individual languages and language families. Both formal and functional approaches are represented, and more than 40 languages are covered.

Consequences for the Phrase Structure
This book is an in-depth study of information structure within semantic, syntactic and prosodic domains. The semantic classification of focus and topic phrases provides implications for compositionality and positional restrictions. Drawing on experimental studies with novel data, prosodic and syntactic analyses offer new perspectives for the Minimalist Program specifically for movement operations, functional categories and phase theory.

SPATIAL EXPRESSION IN CAAC

An Oceanic Language Spoken in the North of New Caledonia

Based on firsthand data, this book explores three domains of spatial expression – location, motion and orientation – in Caac, an under-researched language spoken in New Caledonia. It offers a formal categorization of the linguistic resources relevant to the expression of space in a vectorial framework, and investigates the relations between deixis and Frames of Reference in Caac with a focus on the use of directionals in static contexts.

MURRINHPATHA WORDS

Morphology and Phonology

This book combines the traditions of grammatical description and variationism to analyse the morphology of the Murrinhpatha verb. It explores the rigid patterns of verbal word formation (“grammatical rules”) and those which show substantial variation between lexical items or between speech tokens (“variables”). The integration of grammatical description and quantitative variationist analysis provides insight into the language as a dynamic system.

NON-PROTOTYPICAL REDUPLICATION

This volume presents a selection of articles which aim to explore the boundaries of the grammatical phenomenon known as reduplication. By looking into cases that go beyond the scope of prototypical reduplication we gain a deeper understanding of reduplicative processes. The authors discuss various phenomena such as echo word constructions, ideophones and triplications, which challenge the formal and functional criteria for reduplication proper.

GRAMMATICAL GENDER IN MALTESE

Native speakers avail themselves of a number of criteria and systems for gender assignment in their language. But how do they put these strategies to work and how do they deploy their knowledge of nominal gender in relation to other grammatical categories in speech and writing? This work investigates how grammatical gender functions in Maltese and how native speakers of this language classify nouns by assigning to them a particular gender.

LANGUAGES AND LINGUISTICS OF MEXICO AND NORTHERN CENTRAL AMERICA

A Comprehensive Guide

The handbook provides a thorough survey of the languages pertaining to the Mesocentric culture region, including a wealth of new research on synchronic structures and historical linguistics of lesser known languages, also including sign languages. The volume moreover features overviews of recent research on topics such as language acquisition and the expression of spatial orientation across languages of the region.

Baltic languages have only marginally featured in the discourse of theoretical linguistics and linguistic typology. The book aims to reconnect Baltic linguistics and the current agenda of the theoretical and typological study of language. The book is intended for a broad linguistic audience, including typologists and theoretical linguists.

Information structure and the organization of oral texts have been rarely studied crosslinguistically. This book contains studies of the grammatical organization of information in languages from different areas (e.g. Amazonian, Finno-Ugric, South-Asian) from a variety of theoretical angles. It will be a valuable resource for researchers investigating the interaction of morphosyntax and discourse in familiar and less familiar languages.

A GRAMMAR OF KAKATAIBO

This is the first comprehensive grammar of Kakataibo (a Panoan language spoken in Peru). It is based upon 7 years of study of the language and a corpus of more than 40 hours of recordings. Considering that there is no such a thing as a theoretically-neutral grammatical description, this grammar dialogues with ideas and theoretical proposals within the functional-typological approach to language.

A GRAMMAR OF BANGIME

Spoken only in a cul-de-sac valley in Dogon country in east-central Mali, Bangime is the most enigmatic language isolate in the whole of interior West Africa. It is apparently a Basque-like survival of a formerly widespread language family, now boxed into this small valley by the expansion of Niger-Congo languages (Dogon, Bozo, Mande) on all sides. This book brings out the full glory of its grammar, especially its 3-level tone system.

A GRAMMAR OF BELEP

This reference grammar provides a full grammatical description of the previously-undocumented Austronesian language variety known as Belep. Belep is spoken by approximately 1600 people in New Caledonia, primarily in the Belep Isles. This book is the first full-length English-language description of a Northern New Caledonian language. It fills a gap and provides an important addition to the literature on these languages.

A GRAMMAR OF QAQET

This grammar is a description of Qaqet, a non-Austronesian language spoken in the interior of East New Britain Province, Papua New Guinea. It belongs to the small Baining language family, and it is included among the geographically defined East Papuan languages. Based on a large corpus of elicited and natural data, the grammar gives a detailed account of the structure of the language, placing it into a language family and areal perspective.

A GRAMMAR OF FA D’AMBÔ

Fa d’Ambô (‘Speech of Annobón’) is a Portuguese-related creole language spoken by an estimated 5,000 people on the west-African islands of Annobón and Bioko (Equatorial Guinea) and in the Diaspora (e.g. Spain). The language is historically related to the three creoles spoken on São Tomé and Príncipe (Angolar, Lung’Ie, and Santome). A grammar of Fa d’Ambô provides an in-depth description of the language accompanied by glossed texts and audio files.

CLASSIFICATION FROM ANTIQUITY
TO MODERN TIMES
Sources, Methods, and Theories from an Interdisciplinary Perspective

The volume presents phenomena of classification and categorisation in ancient and modern cultures and provides an overview of how cultural practices and cognitive systems interact when individuals or larger groups conceptually organize their world. Scientists of antiquity studies, anthropologists, linguists etc. will find methods to reconstruct early concepts of men and nature from a synchronic and diachronic comparative perspective.

THE MORPHOSYNTACTIC OF ALBANIAN AND
AROMANIAN VARIETIES
Case, Agreement, Complementation

This book deals with Albanian, including the dialects spoken in Southern Italy, and with the Aromanian spoken in Southern Albania. These languages are set in the context of current generative research on syntax, morphology, language variation and contact – yielding insights into key morphosyntactic notions of case, agreement, complementation, and into phenomena such as Differential Object Marking, the Person Case Constraint, linkage and control.

This volume contains innovative papers that target the linguistic status of the notion of topic at the interface between grammar and discourse while making recent research on Information Structure accessible. The purpose of the volume is to document the universal properties of topics. At the same time it also shows the range of discourse-semantic and grammatical variation within this phenomenon in different European languages.

The key topics discussed in this book illustrate the breadth of cognitive linguistic research and include semantic typology, space, fictive motion, argument structure constructions, and prototype effects in grammar. New themes such as individual differences, emergence, and default non-salient interpretations also receive coverage.
This volume explores various aspects of “Applied Construction Grammar” through a collection of studies that apply Construction Grammar (CxG) and CxG-inspired approaches to issues in L2 acquisition and teaching. Relying on empirical data and covering a range of constructions and languages, the chapters show how the cross-fertilization of CxG and L2 acquisition/teaching can lead to new theoretical insights and improved pedagogical practices.

The book examines the different techniques used to achieve humor in interaction in two contemporary American television-series (House M.D. and The Big Bang Theory). Through different writing techniques, we observe the elements that are used in the process of humorous meaning construction, focusing mainly on the gestural triggers used to create humorous effects.

TASTES WE LIVE BY
The Linguistic Conceptualization of Taste in English

The book investigates the language of Taste in English. It takes a double perspective on the problem: on the one hand, the author analyzes the linguistic terms of English that speakers recognize as describing Taste and their semantic relationship. On the other hand, Bagli examines the metaphorical meanings of Taste terms and proposes motivations for their polysemy rooted in our embodied minds.

DIMENSIONS OF DIFFUSION AND DIVERSITY
Variation is the linguistic norm. It is the universal trait that has never been embarrassed by counterexamples. As language does not exist in vacuum, this volume takes an innovative perspective to examine the issue by highlighting three variation-related dimensions, linguistic, cognitive, and contextual, through which a more profound understanding of the human mind and a well-rounded appreciation of the human society could be hopefully attained.

CONCEPTUAL BLENDING IN EARLY CHRISTIAN DISCOURSE

A Cognitive Linguistic Analysis of Pastoral Metaphors in Patristic Literature

The monograph addresses the role of conceptual blending in creating novel meanings in religious systems by exploring pastoral metaphors as meaning generators in early Christian discourse through a lens of Conceptual Blending Theory. It shows that such metaphors allowed early Christian authors to conceptualize and convey a great number of social, moral and theological ideas, thus becoming indispensable building blocks of a new religious system.

COGNITIVE HISTORY
Studies in a Historical Methodology

Cognitive history concerns how humans in the past used their cognitive abilities in order to understand the world around them. The objective of this introduction is to analyze the theoretical basis for a cognitive approach to history, discuss the fundamental concepts of cognitive history that can provide new insights into how people in history perceived their world as a result of an interaction between mind and its environment.

THE COMPARATIVE DICTIONARY OF TIBETAN DIALECTS

VOLUME 2:
COMPARATIVE DICTIONARY OF TIBETAN DIALECTS
(CDTD)
Vol. 2: Verbs

This dictionary serves as a basis for historical-comparative research on Tibetan. Conceptualized empirically and etymologically, it builds on extensive data from the Tibetan dialects and establishes the relationship to Written Tibetan. It reflects historical sound change and semantic change in all of linguistic Tibet. Based on historical sound change and geographical distribution, the work applies a new classification of the Tibetan dialects.

THE HUAYUAN-ZHUANG EAST ORACLE BONE INSCRIPTIONS

A Study and Complete Translation

The Huayuanzhuang East oracle bone inscriptions form a corpus of more than 2500 individual divination accounts, which were engraved on turtle shells and bovine scapulae in the late Shang dynasty (c. 1200 B.C.). The book offers the first complete English annotation of these fascinating epigraphic texts and introduces the reader to key aspects of daily life in early Chinese civilization.

TRANSLATION AS SCHOLARSHIP

Language, Writing, and Bilingual Education in Ancient Babylonia

For ancient cuneiform scribes, translation was a means of demonstrating their aptitude with the main focus of their discipline, the cuneiform writing system, resulting in translation practices that are foreign to typical Western concepts of translation. This project explores the social worlds which cultivated translation practices in ancient Babylonia—the field of scholarship.

Library of Sinology features both original studies from eminent Sinologists and promising young scholars as well as edited volumes emerging from high-quality symposia. The scope of the series includes language, literature, and history, ranging from philological research to cultural history. While exclusively focused on Classical Chinese Studies, the series covers a broad and innovative methodological spectrum across all periods, regions, and cultures.

This series is unique because of its diversity and interdisciplinary perspectives. Sinology is itself not an independent discipline, and it is now widely acknowledged that the study of Chinese requires expertise across a number of disciplines and methodologies. Interdisciplinary approaches are therefore critical when re-evaluating Chinese culture and its place in global society of the 21st century.

The editorial board of Library of Sinology seeks rigorous, first-class scholarship that examines newly available sources and integrates interdisciplinary perspectives. The series therefore will not only be of interest to the scholars and researchers in the relevant disciplines and areas of focus; it will also attract the well-informed general reader, as well as university students, who wish to attain broader perspectives on the study of Chinese cultures.

The publication of the series was generously supported by the HKBU Jao Tsung-I Academy of Sinology – Amway Development Fund.

LANGUAGE CONTACT
An International Handbook

VOLUME 1

The handbook offers a comprehensive overview of current trends and topics in research on language contact. Written by leading experts in the field, the 64 encyclopaedic chapters of the first volume deal with linguistic, individual and societal aspects of language contact from a theoretical point of view. They also address methodological issues and focus on interactions of contact linguistics with neighbouring disciplines.

NEW TESTAMENT LEXICOGRAPHY
Introduction – Theory – Method
Transl. by Andrew Bowden

This text presents the method of semantic analysis and the methodology employed for constructing the entries in Diccionario Griego-Espanol del Nuevo Testamento. For the first time, modern semantics and linguistics have been systematically incorporated for composing this dictionary’s entries. Six fascicles have already been published so that the analysis of the vocabulary of the New Testament now extends to the letter delta.

JEWISH TRANSLATION - TRANSLATING JEWISHNESS

The interdisciplinary volume explores translation as a central Jewish cultural practice. Starting with the early translations of the Torah, the book engages with the role of translation in the life in the Diaspora and the project of Jewish state-building. The essays in this collection trace the story of how translation nourished Jewish culture, cast bridges to the Christian or Muslim world, and defined the boundary between the self and the Other.

A Study of Japanese English as a Lingua Franca Users

This book addresses the issues of English as a Lingua Franca (ELF) speaker’s identity construction and its link to pragmatic language use through ELF communication. Based on qualitative interpretive research, the author shows how ELF speakers construct identities grounded in their lived and localized experiences in ELF communication, and how expression of identity is reflected through their choices of pragmatic language use in ELF.

ENGLISH IN COMPUTER-MEDIATED COMMUNICATION
Variation, Representation, and Change

NOW IN PAPERBACK

This book addresses the nature of English use within contexts of computer-mediated communication (CMC). CMC includes technologies through which not only is language transmitted, but cultures are formed, ideologies are shaped, power is contested, and sociolinguistic boundaries are crossed and blurred. The volume therefore examines the English language in particular in CMC – what it looks like, what it accomplishes, and what it means to speakers.

SOUTHERN ENGLISH VARIETIES THEN AND NOW

Most of the world’s Extraterritorial Englishes stem historically from southern English dialects – Southern England having been the most densely-habited part of the country. However, the dialects of Southern England remain under-studied. The papers in this volume consider both diachronic and synchronic aspects of the dialects of Norfolk, Suffolk, Essex, Kent, Sussex, Dorset, Somerset, Devon, Cornwall, Gloucestershire and the Isles of Scilly.

SUBORDINATION IN ENGLISH
Synchronic and Diachronic Perspectives

This book provides a collection of articles on subordination in various native and non-native varieties of English framed from both a synchronic and a diachronic perspective. It focuses on the continuum that links subordinated and coordinated structures in a fluid way, and sheds light on the whole system’s dynamic essence by discussing a large number of explanatory principles at work in shaping it.

CHARLES S. PEIRCE. SEMIOTIC WRITINGS

The book is a selection of hitherto unpublished writings of Charles S. Peirce. They cover twenty years (1894–1913) of the author’s life, and are essential to understand Peirce’s views about signs, their classification, and the relations between semiotics and logical inquiry. In the introduction, the editor places these writings in their context and discusses ways in which they reveal clues to the evolution of Peirce’s logico-semiotic thought.

CHINESE SEMIOTICS IN THE PRE-IMPERIAL AGE

This book is a systematic inquiry into the development of semiotic thought in Pre-Imperial China. It is in this period that Confucius, Mencius, Laozi, Zhuangzi, as well as other distinguished scholars, emerged. Among the Hundred Schools, Mohism and the School of Names helped to lay the foundation for the study of semiotics in ancient China.

MULTIMODALITY
Towards a New Discipline

Multimodality is one of the most influential semiotic theories for analyzing media artefacts, and it enjoys growing global popularity. However, its conceptual anchoring as well as its empirical applications often remain disparate. This book explores the potential for multimodality's disciplinary unification, which would allow the field to move ahead and achieve a more mature status of reflection, mutual support, and interaction.

CRISIS COMMUNICATION

Finn Frandsen, Winni Johansen (Eds.)

This handbook provides an up-to-date introduction to the discipline of crisis communication. It introduces the reader to the most important models and theories in crisis communication. The handbook differs from previous handbooks in several ways: it focuses on crises in the private and the public sector; it includes the managerial and organizational context; it introduces new areas such as internal crisis communication and crisis consulting.

MEANING-MAKING AND POLITICAL CAMPAIGN ADVERTISING
A Cognitive-Linguistic and Film-Analytical Perspective on Audiovisual Figurativity

Current research on multimodal and audiovisual metaphor has paid little attention to the media character of audiovisual images. Here is where the book develops an alternative position. Exploring the role of metaphor and metonymy in German and Polish campaign commercials, it provides insight into the dynamic nature and embodied affective grounds of audiovisual figurativity. It thereby challenges the dichotomy of political message and media effect.

CINEMATIC METAPHOR
Experience – Affectivity – Temporality
In collab. with Sarah Greifenstein, Dorothea Horst, Thomas Scherer, Christina Schmitt

The book offers a new theory for cinematic metaphor as performative action grounded in the dynamics of viewers’ embodied intersubjective experiences with film. Metaphor in audiovisual media shares this basic setting with metaphor in multimodal interaction. The theory is illustrated with a rich variety of case studies from a broad range of media formats and face-to-face interaction including Hollywood movies, TV news, and dance lessons.

CINEMATIC METAPHOR IN PERSPECTIVE
Reflections on a Transdisciplinary Framework

Over past decades, metaphor has become a fascinating topic for a broad range of disciplines. This collection of essays reflects on the transdisciplinary approach formulated in “Cinematic Metaphor: Experience – Affectivity – Temporality”. It is an outcome of collaboration and intense discussions across disciplinary boundaries. Leading scholars explore cinematic metaphor including linguistics, media studies, media history, philosophy, psychology.

JOURNAL OF LATIN LINGUISTICS

The Journal of Latin Linguistics (formerly known as Papers on Grammar) is the only journal devoted entirely to Latin in both synchronic and diachronic perspective. All linguistic phases of Latin – Archaic, Classical, Vulgar, Medieval, Renaissance, Modern – are treated. The journal fills a conspicuous gap in the scientific literature and is arguably the most important journal for Latin linguistics.

THEORETICAL LINGUISTICS
An Open Peer Review Journal

Theoretical Linguistics is an open peer review journal. Each issue contains one long target article about a topic of general linguistic interest, together with several shorter reactions, comments and reflections on it. With this format, the journal aims to stimulate discussion in linguistics and adjacent fields of study, in particular across schools of different theoretical orientations.

YEARBOOK OF PHRASEOLOGY

DOUBLE-BLIND PEER REVIEW

As the organ of the Europhras, this international yearbook is dedicated to research in phraseology, a linguistic subfield concerned with the study of word combinations of varying extent and type, and different degrees of fixedness. Their study is of interest to many other subdisciplines of linguistics, throwing light on the make-up and modes of creation of complex building blocks of language, as well as on the way in which language functions.

YEARBOOK OF THE GERMAN COGNITIVE LINGUISTICS ASSOCIATION

The Yearbook of the German Cognitive Linguistics Association documents the exchange of ideas in the Cognitive Linguistics research community and related fields, not just in Germany but all over the world. It brings together researchers from a variety of theoretical and methodological frameworks, whose work is informed by a broad view of language both as an integral part of human cognition and as a set of socially situated communicative practices.
